It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. I'm going to see if I can find one on the app. I love it. You and I, I, you know, we're at the bus stop. I really felt like we were at the bus stop having this conversation. I hope you did, too, and you could really get into it. I think it makes it a little easier to just say these sentences using these different parts of connected speech. So, we just practice four different dialogues, different sentences, even though we reviewed several phrases over and over, and I think that's a good thing. Of course, you notice reductions like gonna were pretty common. We use that all the time. As well as me talking to you about a phrase like get out of, get out of, and using those flap T's and linking that together as well as go to the that's one of my favorites.

Go to the gym, go to the mall, go to the restaurant, go to the store. people sound the way they do. I really do think even if this is not one of your goals, this will help with your listening comprehension because this is the way that you are going to hear people speak, including uh myself included. But I enjoyed practicing with you if you actually spoke to me and I wasn't just talking to myself. Let me know in the comments, write speaking so that I know that you are practicing your speaking skills, which is what this lesson is all about. And if you enjoyed this lesson, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time.

American Culture Quiz (ONLY 3% CAN PASS THIS TEST)

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson this is uh i've been looking forward to this lesson for a while because we are going to talk well a little bit about american culture so i have a quiz uh for you about american culture this is an interactive lesson so i hope that you participate write your answers in the chat or even if you're watching later write your answers in the comments now i i am from the united states the quiz of course i do not represent everything about uh american culture some of this is going to be through my own perspective but i feel that uh people from the united states would would do quite well with this and i think many of you because we have people in our community from all over the world that are familiar with u.s culture because of movies or songs or tv shows um and and just just knowing about it and reading about it so this is a little bit of test many of you maybe have traveled there and i know many people um that watch these video lessons actually live in the us so it'll be a little bit interesting to get your take and to hear your answers with uh these uh questions so i i do want to say uh quick hello um

ah vicky gustav uh glad you're glad to see you good glad you made it um hello lolly sleepwalker angela yashar good to see you and i i'm gonna get through some more shout outs as we go through this um and the first thing that i want to say real quickly quick little announcement is that i am getting ready to start uh well i'm going to start an uh speaking course in january in case you're interested the the course is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly speak naturally we talk about a variety of topics trying to build speaking confidence we do different speaking activities so the the course includes uh eight weekly lessons with me so you get to speak directly with me if you would like more information about this i'm gonna throw it you can check out the link down in the description i'm also going to throw something in the chat right here and last thing i just reminded me um because it is 2022 is around the corner you can use the code speak 22 to get 22 off so if you're interested in the course maybe you want to improve your speaking fluency in 2022 check that out link is in the description so let's go ahead and begin with the first question that i have for you and that is this one right here okay so we're going to start out uh i i think this is some of these my hair's all all messed up some i think are going to be much easier than the others when is thanksgiving in the united states okay and i think if you if you really follow my video lessons i just did one very recently about thanksgiving and talked specifically about this like when is it and it is not like there are several many countries celebrate thanksgiving it's at a different time but in the united states when when do we celebrate thanksgiving let me know um in the chat in the comments uh hi bemini how are you good to see you again uh i got some well answered wait mustafa jan eight january no no no no no not january yuri not in october um i thought people no lolli not the 28th of november not for don't think about this year just in general what is kind of like the rule in general jen you're close you're close like the the the last thursday of november you're getting close uh zodiac yes it is the correct answer um yes in november yes the it is in november specifically and this is what i mentioned in the united states it's going to be on the fourth thursday of november so somebody had mentioned like the last thursday in general it typically is the last thursday depending on how the the year is it quite possibly um i'm trying to think i guess you could have uh no you wouldn't be able to have five thursdays so then you could say maybe last thursday in general the fourth the fourth thursday in november um is when thanksgiving is celebrated so i saw like a couple different months out there uh january is that okay let's let's move on see how well we do this next one this is a little more pop culture right here who is considered the queen of pop okay and maybe maybe i don't know it's because of my my age um what do you think so for those of you you're sure you're familiar with michael jackson the king of pop who is considered the queen of pop who do you think any any guesses it is i'll go ahead and tell you it is another musician another singer who is also um you know not not from today but a while back um the queen of pop yeah all right excellent uh stacy ashar virginia michelle leonardo rita all right excellent if you guys got that right just hit that like button alright hit that like button share the lesson help us spread the word getting a lot of good answers in here so madonna is the queen of pop and i don't know who

uh if she gave herself that title i really don't know but michael jackson is considered the king of pop uh madonna is the queen of pop the next question we're just gonna keep rolling through these this is uh maybe if you've been to the u.s perhaps you've been to the city in which city can you visit both the coca-cola museum and the birth home of martin luther king jr so you have a little bit of um well a little bit of history in there with uh mlk as well as some corporate american corporate trivia with coca-cola so what do you think hi takayam good to see you um mustafa asks what's pop pop is just a genre of music when you talk about like pop music so what what city what do you think you said georgia you're getting close but what city georgia's the state um wow you guys uh some of you rock this out pretty quickly maybe you've been there maybe to the coca-cola museum or the mlk so the correct answer is the city of atlanta now atlanta's the city atlanta is the capital of georgia georgia is the state some of you had were writing georgia but atlanta is the capital of georgia it is where you will find the birthplace of martin luther king jr as well as coca-cola coca-cola's headquartered in atlanta and they have this coca-cola museum and you can drink a bunch of coca-cola all right some people put alabama you're close you're in the south the next question all right so i i tried my best to kind of mix it up between some history and pop culture um just some travel stuff so we'll we'll see uh we'll see what you think again this is just i made this quiz so it's really through my perspective but people on the west coast especially in california and this is true what i've learned about people in california they are crazy about this fast food chain there is a particular fast food chain that people are crazy about they think it's the best one oh this one's the best it's so much better than all the others so not saying like it's the best restaurant but in thinking of like your your fast food options people think this one is by far the best and i say it's the west coast because this chain is mostly on the west coast you're not really gonna i don't know if they have any on the east coast so this is a very this is a good one if you've traveled to california or on the west coast maybe you've talked to other americans and they mention this fast food and i keep talking right now a little bit of rambling because i have not seen the correct answer just yet it's not mcdonald's it's not taco bell it's not burger king it's not a food truck uh that's good on alex yes alex you must have been to uh california because it is correct the correct answer is in and out uh in and out burger it's a chain that i don't know maybe i don't know if it started in california i think it might have because there are many of them in california but they're all they're along the west uh the west coast it is still a private company so it is not a public company like mcdonald's which is maybe another reason why it's a little uh it's a little smaller but you find them mostly on the west coast and people who live out there they think like oh it's the best fast food in the world that some people don't even consider it fast food i would disagree with that but um just in case if you're ever in california go yeah check out in and out burger you can see for yourself this video is not sponsored by in-n-out burger all right so just a just a heads up though um the next question that i have for you okay a little bit of a little bit of civics for you going uh talking about the government right now so let me know what you think again just write your answers in the chat in the comments um and tell me the answer to this question uh in government how many u.s senators are there what do you think how many senators are there so the the legislative branch you have you know congress and the senate so i'm not talking about congress people we're talking about the senators the senators all right so this is a i think this is a government question that i thought was it's a good one i don't think it's probably too difficult uh if you follow us politics then um it's a question that i think you could you could definitely get so i do see the correct answers in there and i'll let people know i'm kind of just giving people a little time to answer so yes uh locomotive virginia john uh anawat stacy uh the correct answer sleepwalker great job gloria the correct answer is 100. so there are two senators per state uh the congress people there are hundreds and hundreds of i think there's almost like there's over 400 congress people and there are congress people in each state depending on the population so a populated state with like california will have more representatives in congress than a state with a smaller population but as for senators they both get the same whether it's california or montana they have the same number of senators and there are a lot of people out there that that don't like this setup and they don't think it's very fair but there are two per state all right excellent um got more answers yes vicky gustav um perfect all right angela nice next question um i i think this one again is a little easier uh because this is probably a character that many of you are familiar with even being outside living outside the united states so this character their famous catchphrase is what's up doc okay which character am i talking about i'm sure many of you know this this is a character who's been around for a very very long time so which character's catchphrase is what's up doc okay let me know if you're if you feel like you're learning something new about uh about american culture you can let me know go ahead hit that like button uh it tells me that okay you're learning some new things so this character yeah okay starting to see some correct answers the famous characters catch phrase what's up doc we're talking about uh it is it is a rabbit all right bugs money so this is an older this is an old cartoon like when i was growing up i think it's a kind of a famous character i don't know if kids really watch bugs bunny nowadays or how popular it is but definitely a long time ago and i think this was a i feel like this was maybe a cartoon that did get exported and you might would see this in other countries as well and say what's up doc what's up doc that is bugs bunnies catchphrase

the next question is right here okay so what do you think and you guys i rocked that one that was good uh stacey mustafa lolly great job excellent uh good aware i'm glad yes i'm glad you're learning some new things so who was the famous host of the american television show jeopardy so jeopardy a very popular game show in the united states there was a host of jeopardy for many many years i believe he was the host well i'm kind of giving it away a little bit i just told you it's a guy he was the host for i think around 28 years do you know the name of this person and this is a game show that you maybe they would show it in other countries as well i'm not really sure but it was a very popular one in the united states and i want to know if you can think of the host of jeopardy who who was the host of jeopardy the very famous host of jeopardy i i thought this one would be a little more difficult and i will be impressed if uh if any of you get this correct uh maybe you saw it uh it is not jennifer aniston no she is not the the host of jeopardy uh merv griffin no he's not him ario you

i you don't know that's okay uh that's okay i'll tell you in just a moment um and yes angela comes through with the correct question same with uh stacy so we're talking about alex trebek um i say well was he was is no longer the host alex trebek sadly passed away in 2020 um as he was still the host at that point i think i think he was on there for about 28 years but it's like when people would think of jeopardy alex trebek is somebody that that they would think of because he hosted it uh for so long alex trebek is the answer that we were looking for the next one and actually trebek um he was actually he was canadian-american i think he had he had dual citizenship so he was canadian-american okay this one um not a little bit pop culture but also a little political um i don't know if you know who lin manuel miranda is but if not then maybe this will be a more difficult question so lin-manuel miranda created a famous musical about which well-known american politician so even if you're you know not into politics you could still get this um get this correct because this musical was very very famous and well known i mean i think it still is famous and the the original cast is not doing it anymore but i think even then like this is like going back four five six uh years so this is still in the grand scheme of things this is still fairly recent okay so lin-manuel can't talk this is what happens toward the end of the year lin-manuel miranda created the famous musical about which well-known american politician and the other thing i would add he is kind of this is somebody who is a founding father this is somebody who was never president um i don't i think they were really the first u.s. treasurer they didn't really hold they were not a senator they didn't really hold uh political office but they were one of the founding fathers uh we did get one correct answer in there

um yashar yashar excellent um yes vicky gustav excellent two corrector three correct answers lolli stacy four there the the correct answers are rolling in now excellent so yes the the correct answer is alexander hamilton the the musical is just called hamilton and it is about the life of alexander hamilton who is one of the founding fathers um of the the united states and that's kind of the the musical logos right there and they do a lot of like raps it's very cool i would sing it for you but i'm such a terrible singer i'm not even gonna i'm not even gonna bother you with that so the next question are you ready so that one you guys did pretty well on that this one's also going to be more difficult because it's just more specific to the united states and you would really probably would need to really watch a lot of movies and tv shows perhaps to come across it um or just live there and you might know the answer to this so which university has the motto roll tide roll tide so that that is the university's motto and this is something that i think is a little different about the united states um as opposed to like other countries that i've lived in university not not university like like that's so important but people do identify with their university and it is a it's a topic of conversation like oh where did you go what university did you attend so it is something that i think in the united states people will maybe talk about a little more and they know about other universities mainly through sports and this is another reason why you may have heard about this one because of the sports team and wow you guys excellent uh jardel angela fly yeshar lolli um the correct answer yes busta we're talking about the university of alabama so university of alabama is the alabama crimson tide and their their motto is just saying roll tide roll tide wow you guys got that one good excellent so here's uh this one may be a little tricky i'll go ahead and tell you that even if you think like oh i definitely know the answer to this it will be a little tricky i got tripped up by this um and i well there's a reason for that but i'll tell you in just a second i need to get some water so in the u.s. you can buy alcohol at 21. how old do you have to be to buy cigarettes what do you think just a number throw it in the chat throw it in the comments what do you think so really there's probably just a few different numbers that i imagine you you would choose from or probably just two different numbers that you might choose from so we're getting a variety of responses in the u.s you can vote at 18. how old do you have to be to drive a car all right what do you think you can vote at 18 how old does someone have to be to drive okay so again this is each country can be a little different on some of these between buying alcohol or cigarettes or driving and voting and the city is 42 wow 42 to buy cigarettes wow that's that's interesting they're really really trying to stop the sale so this one i think most of you yeah you guys got this one all right and i feel like this is something that i just through a lot of movies tv show pop pop culture that other people might see outside of the us then you would come across that yes you in in the you uh in the u.s 16 and i think in general maybe some states it's can be a little different like people do like learners permits that could be like 15 in which case you can drive but there needs to be somebody else in the car that has a license so this may vary state by state but in general i think for the most part 16 and i personally feel like maybe that kid looks too young to be driving it is a very young driving age i think compared to a lot of other countries um this one also i think probably a little bit easier i tried to word it in a way that might be a little more challenging but the fourth okay i'm talking about a day the fourth is an important day in which month okay so which month would uh the fourth be a significant day and i'm sure if you know the answer you probably even know why it is an important day so like i i was i wanted to ask this question and i was thinking how could i ask it in a way that might be a little more challenging for people but just how quickly all of you are responding uh it makes me think yes it was pretty easy so we're talking about the 4th of july which is independence day in the united states so when you think of you know july july 4th is a very well-known popular holiday in the u.s um the next one oh this is a fun one uh i'm i'm very curious to see if you guys know this one what is the name of the following snack i'm gonna show you a picture of it and i just want you to tell me the name so what is the name of this snack right here okay and i i don't know i don't know if this is anything that's distinctly american per se i think these snacks um are are common in the us uh but well i'll explain a little bit afterward and i i you could say i said snack even though maybe people would think of it as like a dessert possibly but i think probably a snack would be a better category to put this in and they're delicious they're absolutely delicious it's been years and years and years since i have had one of these but what would you call these snacks all right so i'll give you a moment and then i'll tell you how it's made it's not they're not it's not a very complex food so some of you yes angela mustafa um mariana those uh you can probably tell in the picture those are rice rice krispies is a cereal so i put the picture of the cereal up there rice krispies and maybe they have a few different names i think commonly people would just call them rice krispies treats and what it is it's rice krispies with basically butter and marshmallows it's kind of just fused together rice krispies butter and marshmallows you put it in a pan and you can make uh you heat it up and you get rice krispies treats and they are they are delicious they are quite yummy and typically if you were to buy like the cereal like on the back you might find like a recipe for making it um so it's it's kind of well known all right so this is a the next one people um i think he thinks they're awful no oh rice krispie treats i miss them i really wanna i maybe i try it today and i might not uh it might be a little nostalgic but i and i wouldn't enjoy it as much but oh it was a delicious part of my childhood um what do you think people may watch this sporting event specifically to see the commercials all right i think i watch it for the sport but trying to kind of give it as a this is a quiz um people will watch this sporting event there are people that watch it mainly for the commercials they're interested in watching the commercials which may sound i think a little strange because most of the time nobody likes watching advertisements or wants to see um advertisements even though in this case we're surrounded by them it's kind of unavoidable and you guys answered uh answered that pretty quickly except there's one little typo and it made me wonder if somebody uh somebody put super bowl the the first one and then other people started writing super bowl um but adriana yes that's correct it's not the super ball um you're close if you just if it's a if it's a word you hear and you haven't actually seen the spelling i could understand where you're coming from but not super ball um adriana yes uh stacy gian talking about the the super bowl so b-o-w-l uh two words it's the super bowl the super bowl is the championship for american football again i know uh the rest of the world football in the united states they say soccer but american football probably the most popular sport in the country um and the championship is the super bowl and the reason why i think some people when i said many people will watch it for the commercials is because it's such a big event that advertisers they do new commercials just for the super bowl so when you when the super bowl goes to commercials they're typically all new commercials that nobody's ever seen before and it's kind of become a thing about like oh which one is the best which one's the funniest and it's another part of uh another part of this so the the next one is more i just curious to see what your opinion is there's really no right or wrong answer what what what do you think as far as how you you think of american culture um like i said this is a subjective question what do you think how would you complete that sentence americans love what what what would you say like i said there's there's no wrong answer for this one i just wanted to to kind of see uh what you think how how would you complete uh this this sentence right here uh americans love uh mustafa people okay sure yeah it's good love people uh fast food yeah all right that makes sense we talked about in and out before it's donuts okay i like donuts yeah william freedom aria americans love japan sure i also like japan americans love america yeah i i definitely uh i definitely could see that one uh mariana hamburgers virginia americans love their flag yeah you do find the american flag out there a lot uh americans love gustav work and money yes i definitely see that as well uh traveling pizza burgers pizza again so a lot of uh food things coming out i feel like many countries probably would kind of have an association with food uh cecilia baseball okay flag americans mustafa americans love egypt sure uh felix happy hour yeah i i like happy hour as well it's always good to get that discount on uh on some drinks uh all right so wow that was uh that was great i that was the quiz again like i said this is not representative representative of all american culture i i put it together so it was really just through my perspective but i think it's more of a it's a fun little quiz because i'm from the u.s and it's also

it is it's not directly related to language learning pretty much everything we do on this channel is all about you know practicing helping you practice and improve your english skills so this one i i from time to time i like doing these cultural lessons i think they can uh be a little helpful give you a little insight especially if some of you are living in the u.s or maybe you're planning to to travel there soon so thank you guys so much for for joining me on this saturday um i hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend again if you are interested in joining my speaking course in 2022 you can check out the link down below in the description right there it'll take you to this page uh where you can enroll if you're interested in signing up so check that out link is down in the description and you can use the code speak22 to get 22

off so thank you so much for being here um quick little goodbyes sleepwalker alex uh mira ezra manuel um angela michelle leonardo sarah fly to cayo good to see you yuri vikki gustav good to see you glad you're here yashar nice to see you again manuel uh john angela lolly so have a wonderful rest of the weekend and i'm sure that i will see you guys soon for another lesson so long

American English Pronunciation for Intermediate to Advanced Learners

hello welcome to today's lesson my name is wes in case this is your first time here the channel is interactive english and the channel's all about trying to help you practice and improve your your grammar your pronunciation vocabulary just anything related to learning english and today i have it's a pronunciation lesson and we're going to be doing it's a little bit of a pronunciation quiz but really i'm going to talk about um quite a few different parts of pronunciation and i know i've titled it uh and it's an american pronunciation lesson for intermediate to advanced learners i am from the united states i would say that i have more of a standard american accent i've lived all over the u.s and some of the things that i'm going to talk to you today about in this lesson are really related to well would be more my accent um

the way i pronounce different words and phrases and i will get into that in just a little bit and i do think the the things that we're going to be going over would be more for intermediate to advanced learners even though i think even beginner learners would be able to follow along and kind of understand the different ideas because i'm not going to be talking about any real advanced vocabulary or anything like that so i do want to give uh a couple shout outs to those of you who are with me great to see so many familiar names hello uh lolly good to be back sleepwalker leo hiwa uh ten critica oleg how are you moon roy uh great to see you guys thank you so much for joining me i will give some more shout outs as i go through the lesson i know i've had a little bit i think it's been a little bit of a live stream uh hiatus for a little bit so it's good to be back and i just want to begin with the way we're going to do this is i'm going to walk

you through some different questions and to give you a chance to participate uh i'll ask you guys to answer the questions let's see what you already know and then i'll tell you the answer and talk a little bit about it so let's begin with our first uh the first question that i have for you related to pronunciation is what is the most common sound in english and i've given you you if you're with me right now you could just type in a b c or d the symbols that i'm giving you right here this is the international phonetic alphabet the ipa some of you may be familiar with the ipa others of you may not be that's okay don't worry about it if you're not sure um what it is the ipa i said it right there it's an alphabet developed in the 19th century to accurately represent the pronunciation of languages so it's not just used in english but i think if you are perhaps you're using an online english dictionary and you look up a word and you see the pronunciation of that word they may give you these symbols and that is the international phonetic alphabet the ipa so many of you let me just go ahead and tell you yes uh excellent lolly oleg yasmin sleepwalker let's learn uh and practice english um gosh neil all right takayo good to see you hello uh angela samuel hello the correct answer is b and i'll go through and say i meant to say these sounds for you but i think if i said the sound it would make it a little too easy so a that is a the symbol for a ch sound b that is the schwa sound that is the answer that's the most common sound and it sounds more like an uh um c even though it's an i it's more of a long e sound e like in uh sheep and

d is just the consonant s sound like s snake and of course b that is the most common sound in english and that leads me to this right here it is the schwa sound this is definitely a sound that you should become familiar with because you are going to find the schwa sound in so many different words and what the schwa is it is an unstressed vowel sound so i've given you two examples right here just random words that i chose um banana and i right here if you're looking at the ipa those symbols you can see that it's like an upside down e that is the schwa so in the word banana three syllables the schwa is in the first and the second syllable so you see it twice that sound twice in there banana or even the word we talked about the international phonetic alphabet alphabet all right that second syllable has that schwa sound you see that upside down e and the reason i said that if you don't know the symbols that's okay this is definitely a symbol that i think it's useful to know because when you if you look up a word you want to know the meaning often these online dictionaries will give you the pronunciation and they'll they'll show you the ipa it's useful to know the other thing i would say that's related to like i like the english accent i think all english accents but in particular in the united states is that i think people will use the schwa and reduce words all the time for example if you just want to one way to kind of just improve your fluency sound a little more natural think of the word to i'm going um i'm going to the mall all right it's a simple sentence and instead of pronouncing it

want to say quickly speaking of uh speaking naturally i wanted to let you know if you guys if you are interested in practicing your speaking uh i have enrollment is now open for my speaking course which is called speak up you the classes are going to begin uh the first week of may so you have until may 2nd to sign up here's just a little information about it the whole of course is really to help you speak confidently build your confidence speak clearly speak naturally it's a 10 week course enrollments open classes are 60 minutes along you get you'll speak with me as well as other classmates and we do the lessons through zoom that's the platform it's free to use uh the price some of you i know have asked about that it's uh 179 you can use the voucher code speak 10 to get a 10 discount and that is for the 10 lessons one lesson a week there are also weekly pronunciation video lessons to help you work on some things like like the schwa sound there's a lesson about the schwa and we practice that classes are available monday wednesdays and fridays all right so i will put a link right down here in the chat in case you want to check that out you have until may 2nd to sign up if you would like to speak with me um and really work on your speaking skills right there boom okay so i'll come back to this and and remind you at the end but i want to continue um with our pronunciation lesson and i think it ties in because i we do work on pronunciation in the speak up course that's something that uh we try to work on this question okay how many syllables does this word have the word is humanitarian and this is really kind of going back to the basics of pronunciation this would probably be a question more for i think beginner intermediates because a syllable is talking about one unit of sound and it's important to be able to look at a word and if you can break down the word into syllables then that's just going to help you pronounce the word correctly so this is really focusing on more individual words when we're talking about syllables so the word humanitarian how many syllables do you think uh do you think this word has what do you guys think and then of course uh i will let you know and then i want to tell you there's something else i want to tell you about this so we have some people says six mary says five olex six tessie five um dev three so again you really would need one way to kind of determine how many syllables a word has i do like the the chin rule you put your hand below there you say the word and however many times your chin would touch your hand that's like one syllable me six syllables the word humanitarian has six syllables uh i think some of you got that excellent uh good job the one thing i wanted to show you about this because i just showed you the ipa the international phonetic alphabet this is the phonetic spelling and either one it's it's the same thing you're trying to basically show the pronunciation to someone the difference is phonetic spelling it's a way of spelling the words exactly like they sound and when i do pronunciation lessons sometimes i'll do both often i use phonetic spelling because i think like i said not some of you may not be familiar with the ipa symbols but i think when you look at the phonetic spelling you kind of get the idea because many of you are familiar with the english alphabet and pronouncing the different letters a and the b makes the ba sound and you can look at that and kind of sound it out human humanitarian six syllables and the stress is on that four syllable that tear humanitarian humanitarian so hopefully that's a good little tip if you want to know just do the the chin test and however many times your chin touches your hand that is one syllable all right let's look at the next one and this is this is something that's definitely more related to my accent my pronunciation from the united states which of these words am i pronouncing with the flap t and if you don't know what the flap t is i will tell you don't worry about it um but just to see if some of you know which of these words am i pronouncing with the flap t i'll say the words a time b mountain c water or d pronunciation and the reason why i ask this question is because the flap t is really it is something that is the very common in the american accent um and i say this all the time uh and i'll show you some other words so excellent uh good job oleg cesar um hiwa leo uh mary black uh tessie nice uh the correct answer is c water so just i'll show you the next i'll talk a little bit about that but just to um talk about these other ones like t time that would be like the true t sound time mountain that is more of a stop t because it's like you're getting ready to say the t and then you're stopping right before mount mountain it's like your tongue is getting ready to hit the top of your mouth and say that t but then you stop mountain water that is the flap t sound i'll talk about that in just a second in pronunciation that that t sound that ti gets blended together and you get the sh sound pronunciation but water is a word that i would say with the flap t and what this is it really sounds more like a soft d sound and in general not always it comes between two vowels so i gave you some examples like italy all right between two vowels again when i say the word listen for that d sound italy or metal metal it has like a d the other words uh they're not between two vowels but sometimes you also hear it this is when when the t is followed by i believe it's like a dark l and words like little little again you hear that flap t or when an r comes before the t 40 40. and you're not really hearing a t sound it's more like that softy the one thing that again to when you talk about speaking naturally and this also happens not just within a word learn more about accents and pronunciation i think many people like to watch tv shows movies so if anything it's good for your comprehension it's good to know so the flap t it is something that's very common in the united states which is where i am from so yes this is something that's very specific to uh like my my english accent the next question uh that i have for you i think uh you guys probably would get this which of these words has a silent letter and talk about uh pronouncing silent letters or actually these are letters that you should not be saying which of these has a sign letter i'm talking about a consonant too typically when when you think about silent letters you're overwhelmingly referring to consonants you could have there is like a silent e at the end of some words that's also very common um but what about these words right here uh has a silent letter i'll uh i'll say the words um i thought maybe that'd make it a little too easy if i said the words but a hippopotamus b dictionary c television or d rendezvous and all of you excellent uh jayanika adriana gokan uh who is here oleg lali perfect um rendezvous takayo angela great job rendezvous is the word with the silent letter i think before i did a lesson on advanced words with silent letters this was one of them and i chose this word because it has a silent z you don't really find many words that have a silent z um but this again i think this is a borrowed word from french so you do not hear that z sound uh when somebody says rendezvous right here i've given you both the phonetic spelling as well as the ipa so that you can see the difference and again i think it's it's definitely in my opinion easy for everyone to kind of look at the phonetic spelling and try to sound it out especially if you're not familiar with some of those symbols in the ipa this is a very useful um this is something very useful to know and i've done video lessons about this in the past talking about the past tense of regular verbs which are going to end with ed so the past tense of help is well i don't want to pronounce it for you not yet because i don't want to give the answer away the ed is pronounced with uh which sound is it pronounced that ed the past tense i'm talking about help it's a regular verb is it that e.d going to be pronounced with a t sound or d or an id and i've told you this is very useful because i think there are many regular verbs often times you're having a conversation you're talking about something in the past and you would use uh this so we gotta get a little bit more of a mix in here yes excellent uh hola oleg israel uh sleepwalker helene to cayo lolly silvio augusto junior welcome good to see you good to see so many members and patrons awesome leo mary the answer is t and the answer is a that which is that t helped helped and i this is the the kind of the rule if you want to follow so the ed and hel well helped is pronounced with a t so in general there's three rules that you can follow pronounce the t if the final consonant sound is voiceless which means that there's no you wouldn't feel a vibration in your vocal cords so help ends with the it's a voiceless sound helped helped like watched watched watched i watched uh a netflix movie last night true story i watched the movie i saw it was the gentleman um number two pronounce it as d a d if the final consonant sound is voiced like in played the y sound you should feel that vibration in your vocal chords played and you pronounce it as id as a separate syllable if the final consonant sound is t or d waited blended and then you hear that the reason why i said this is useful is because i think this is when learners will make just small mistakes because when you're having a conversation you're you're just going to speak and that's what you should do you're not really going to be thinking about well wait i'm getting ready to say this regular verb in the past tense is it a t or a d or an id this is where i think it's just useful to get exposure to the language it's useful to understand that there are rules that you can actually follow and the more you listen to the language and then actually speak and say the words correctly then you're just going to be able to do it naturally and effortlessly whenever you want to uh people gave some more examples right there excellent helene needed that's another good one with the ed um osmelli wanted to be honest that's where i feel like i hear people make the most mistakes is that they're adding an id to a word where it should just be like a t or a d sound and they're adding that extra syllable i think that's often when i would hear somebody make a mistake you still understand what people are talking about but it is something that uh you can i could easily hear so something to keep in mind uh then the next question i like to talk about minimal pairs which is one reason which is why i've given you this question which set of words is a minimal pair all right is it right light a is it b profession obsession or is it c 8 8 which one of these is a minimal pair i don't necessarily know if you've if you've been in an english classroom this is something you've probably heard of when we do the speak up course in a lot of the speaking videos that i mentioned the weekly speaking lesson the pronunciation video lessons i'll talk about minimal pairs and it's very it's a great way to practice your pronunciation but also great for your listening to really make sure you're able to identify sounds and i hope i'm not giving it away wow okay so most of you actually uh have gotten this incorrect all right so that's good i told you it's not something you may have heard of before maybe you're just guessing but yes um andrea you got it uh who else said a a is the correct answer um andrea somebody else takayo excellent i think you know takayo uh has been in the speak up course so i told you that's something that that we talk about in speak up um the answer is a right and light that is the minimal pair profession obsession that's those are just really rhyming words because they end in the the same final sound eight and eight that's a homonym uh so i'm sure you may have be familiar with homonyms these are words that that sound the same they have a different meaning eight and eight the they sound the same different spelling different meaning that is a homonym a is a minimal pair and what a minimal pair is it's words that are pronounced the same except for one sound and that sound could come at the beginning of a word like uh right light it could come in the middle of a word and then that the r and the l that's the minimal pair and i said that people would practice this so for example when i i used to teach english in korea and many of the korean students would have some difficulty with the r and the l sound and this would be a good way to practice we'd practice with words we'd practice with sentences also really to make sure that they can identify if i were saying the word right with the r or light with the l sheep ship that's another minimal pair the difference between the e and the e or fan van the f and the v think sync another minimal pair coffee copy again that's at the middle of the word so the only difference is that one sound and it could also be at the end of the word bus buzz that s z minimal pair and i told you i i think this is very useful for really practicing if you are able to identify a sound that you have trouble with and you know oh like i have trouble with the the th sound and then you can practice that in relation with some other minimal pairs because there are minimal pairs for so many different um sounds out there and it's a good way to practice for your speaking but also very useful for your comprehension as well um you asked do you speak karel um [Music] that's i speak very little korean my korean is very basic i used to speak i would say maybe a long time ago i was more of an intermediate speaker but now it's been so long because i taught in korea gosh that was uh about oh wow about over 10 years ago 12 years ago wow um so this is a minimal pair this is very useful for practicing your pronunciation again something that we do in the the speak up course this is another well we'll again we'll walk into this which syllable is stressed talking about syllable stress now in the following word i've highlighted the word for you it's a simple sentence you can just say it to yourself right now if you want to and then you can listen to me but it's a two-syllable word of course those are the only choices i've given you is the first syllable stressed or the second syllable he's going to present at the conference he's going to present at the conference which uh which of those syllables is stressed and then i'm gonna well i told you we'll kind of walk into this uh slowly so which syllable is stressed it's a two-syllable word is it the first syllable or the second syllable he's going to present at the conference and excellent um so yes uh andre john julio ten kritika hadil takayo the answer is b it's the second syllable he's going to present at the conference i've given you i've bolded the the stressed syllable the second syllable he's going to present at the conference he's going to present at the conference and it doesn't have to be as like a super strong stress the reason why i'm giving you because now my next question is which syllable is stressed in this word right here all right it's the same word but are we going to stress the same syllable the second one or are we going to stress the first syllable it's a simple sentence practice saying it out loud think about the word she got a lot of presents for her birthday she got a lot of presents for her birthday what do you guys think the first syllable the second syllable um i think probably basically because i've kind of been walking through this question i'm guessing most of you can probably just tell what uh what the answer should be even if you're a little unsure the answer is a it is the first syllable um the first syllable is stressed she um she got a lot of presents for her birthday and i kind of wanted to go lead you into this pronunciation rule that in general if you have a two-syllable word that's both a noun and a verb there are many words like that um in general you're going to stress the first syllable with nouns and the second syllable with the verbs so i have given you like the noun present the verb to present so see if you can listen for them as i say these words the noun object an object the verb to object to object and then the last one the noun conduct conduct like somebody's behavior or the verb to conduct to conduct so hopefully as i said those words you can you can listen for it and tell a difference because pronunciation it's not it's not always just about speaking and saying these words correctly but also your listening skills as well so that you're able to identify the words that people are saying and like i mentioned before with uh talking about the schwa and people like in the us will overwhelmingly say and they use they say to with the schwa sound i'm going to the doctor i'm going to the mall it's very useful for your listening comprehension so that you understand oh this is exactly what the that person is talking about uh all right so i hope i hope that you found uh this useful again i kind of just chose a few different things to talk to you guys to share with you today um about pronunciation if you want to improve your pronunciation again you can check out uh check out the speak up course it's getting ready to start next next week alright the first week of the first week of may you have until may 2nd to sign up it's all about getting you more and more speaking practice we talk about a variety of topics we do different speaking activities there is a link in the description it's all about helping you speak confidently clearly naturally enrollments open these are it's a 10-week course and it's for intermediate to advanced speakers that's what i've been saying intermediate to advanced speakers if you're interested and would like more information just go check out that link i'll go ahead and throw it in the chat one more time just for good measure um but i appreciate you guys being here with me uh oh yeah don't remember if you want to you can use that voucher code speak 10 get a 10 discount uh thank you guys sir for being uh here with me i hope that you learned something new especially maybe about um my accent from the united states the way i tend to pronounce things with that flap t sound and uh i just want to give some last shout outs leonardo sleepwalker julia cesar oleg kiwa leo andrea nyan uh yasin ricardo thank you guys so much for being here um tonya sorry if i couldn't get shout outs to everyone and try to get as many as i can while going through these lessons lolly good to see you again uh takayo juliana francisco dori if you're late you can watch the video on replay i will do another lesson next saturday so i will be back then uh i may do a little bit of a q a so i will make an announcement um about that shortly hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will see you next time so long

LESSON 207 OF 749

American Idioms & Expressions | English Quiz Lesson

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English and if this is your first time here I just want to say welcome please write to me in the comments tell me your name tell me where you're from because I love hearing from you especially new people who are new to our channel because what the what this channel is all about is just helping you trying to practice and improve your English skills and these lessons in particular these live lessons it's a great way to practice your English skills because if you are with me right now in the chat of course I want you to participate in today's lesson I want you to write your answers in the chat and even if you're watching this later I want you guys to participate I want you to again this interactive English I want you to write your answers in the comments try to use it like it's a like it's a piece of paper and participate so today today's lesson we're talking about idioms and expressions but specifically we're talking about idioms and expressions that are more commonly used in the United States because I am from the United States so these are idioms and expressions that you might hear me use or other people that are from the US I tried to choose more the idioms and expressions that I thought were very common that are more universal and that even if you are not from the United States or you're not that you're not traveling to the United States you could still use these and other people could put them into context and they would understand what you're saying so I want to give a quick shout out to some people who are joining me today hello Ann hi how are you great to see you again

Angela Lally Abdul Rahman Hong sleepwalker Heidi Hong Danny welcome aw do you wanna thank you guys for joining me today so as we go through this again I want to see if you can try to guess the different idioms and expressions and of course I will tell you the answer and then I will tell you what they mean as well and before you guess I'll try to give you some hints to help you along so the first one is kind of like it's like a game of hangman I don't know if you've played hangman before but I will give you some of the letters and I want you to see if you can tell me what the idiom or expression is and I'll give you some hints so let's just do the first one as an example so here we go now I've given you some of the this this is two words alright one of the words is up top well it's up top one the second word is down here and the the little lines those are letters that are missing all right so what two words is this this is something it's an expression that somebody would tell someone after you say oh thank you are thank you for doing this I really appreciate it thank you so much and somebody might respond with this phrase instead of saying you're welcome they'll just say this it's very casual it's very informal yes exactly you guys got it you're rocking it out already no worries great job Aidan Lally you want a sleepwalker yes it it's an informal way of saying you're welcome or no problem you just say you know no worries don't worry about it no worries I like using this one so this is why I put this one as the very first one for today's lesson I say this quite often and I'll just say you know just in friendly informal way yeah no worries don't worry about it the next one this is more difficult and this is actually from I think a previous lesson that we did so if you are a super fan and you have watched many of our lessons then maybe you'll remember this one so it's three words and the situation that that somebody would use this in is I'll just tell you what the meaning is you would say this when you do not want to tell the truth because you're afraid that you will incriminate yourself so this is a phrase and expression that somebody would use if they are in a courtroom and the the lawyer is asking them questions and you're like well I don't want to tell the truth because I'll admit that I'm also guilty so they would say this I want to mmm what what do you think this is a very this is a very American expression because it again it has to do with laws and yes excellent great job Luka Amer perfect you would plead the fifth so again in that context if somebody is in a courtroom and the lawyers asking questions and you say you refuse to answer the questions because you don't want to incriminate yourself then you say I plead the fifth you could use this in other situations as well outside if for example like just kind of joking with your friends and your friends like hey where were you laughing where were you last night I want you to tell me where you were and you're like uh you were doing you were you were somewhere where you shouldn't be and like it I plead the fifth I don't want to say I don't want to tell you all right the next one now this is well just looking at it I will be very impressed if if you get this answer but as soon as I tell you the hint I think you'll know what it means it's three words you will mmm-hmm so this is three words in case you don't know write your answer in the chat this is something that you would say to someone when you want to wish them good luck all right now all of a sudden I think it's become much easier instead of telling somebody good luck you're gonna say this instead it's very I think it's a very common expression you will hear this watching TV shows or movies it's it's a very common expression and instead of saying good luck you are going to tell somebody what all right what do you guys think write your answer in the chat in the comments again even if you're watching this later I want you participate in these lessons excellent perfect

Luca Wang Dominic you wanna yes break a leg you would tell somebody to break a leg when they are getting ready to do some type of performance all right not so much like a sports competition but more of a performance if it's like a play theater some kind of musical performance and you could sell somebody break a leg the next one that I have for you is this one again if you're just joining us just to let you know we are talking about common and useful American idioms and expressions and I'm just giving you I'm kind of quizzing you on these so this one is talking about if you you learn about some event and it's going to alter your plans so you learn about something and they're like oh okay this this is a mmm we have to do something different what would you say again this is from I believe this may be from a previous lesson that we did and you'd say this is a mmm some event and it's going to change your opinion or change the way that you're doing things in that case you would say it is a game changer if something is a game changer again it's an event that shifts the way of doing something so you learn some type of new information and you say well now that I know this this is a game changer we need to change our ways we need to do things differently all right so let's do a couple more all right this one has its three words this is an idiom that is talking about a person's primary income their primary source of money it's three words and instead of saying like you're trying to say well this is my primary source of income you would say it is my what so for example I could say that well teaching English teaching all of you guys running this YouTube channel we are in the process of creating this school so I could say this is my what all right excellent yes sir isha natasha i closed bread and cheese closed isaiah bread and butter if something is your your bread and butter it is your primary source of income and usually you would say this about your job and you'd say well you know I am a I'm a taxi driver it's my bread and butter or I am a teacher it's my bread and butter so again it's talking about your primary source of income now this one I thought we'd end on a little bit of an easier one so this is just one word okay what do you think oh hello sue right excellent great to see you bread and butter last one your source of income this one is talking about if somebody's just I almost gave away the answer alright so if you are having a sleep and it's during the day you say that you are taking a what we often use it with that verb take somebody will take a what alright you have a sleep in the middle of the day the middle of the day you would take a this what do you think it is so I hope I hope that you guys said a catnap somebody takes a catnap it is a short little sleep during the day it means the same thing as a nap actually I would say a catnap is possibly even shorter than a regular nap so a catnap might just be like 5 minutes or 10 minutes or 15 minutes but really it's kind of the same thing as a nap and you would say it is a catnap all right so now we're going to change it up so those I did a little bit more like hangman where I just took out some letters now I'm going to give you a picture and the picture is actually the idiom or expression that I want you to try and guess alright so let's just do the first one so you know exactly what I'm talking about and if you're just joining us again we're we're practicing different idioms and expressions that are very common in the US so look at this first one what do you guys think this picture this picture represents an English idiom and this one is it's very easy all right I'm gonna it's so easy I think all of you should know this one this is so easy and that is actually your hint me telling you that this is so easy what idiom or expression does this picture show what do you guys think I hope yes excellent the answer is a piece of cake that is a picture of somebody holding up a piece of cake which is a way of saying that something is very easy and you would just say something is a piece of cake that question I think that question was a piece of cake so excellent great job Ladon Angela said to try to get in some some different names thank you sir I really appreciate that all right the next one that I have for you is this what what expression do you think that is what what what idiom it is a picture of what what do you see this some of you if you follow our our Facebook page I actually posted this a few days ago I posted this picture and asked this same question what do you think it's a picture of somebody and you see you see those two horses there what do you think it is so this is an idiom where somebody would say they're telling somebody to wait all right they're trying send me hey slow down wait you need to stop excellent yes Christian sure in just one minute perfect you would tell somebody to hold your horses so if you're telling somebody to hold their horses it's I would say it's a little impolite instead of saying like hey just wait a moment please wait if you're a little more stressed you tell somebody look hold your horses just wait hold your horses you're telling them to stop what they're doing to wait a moment to hold hold your horses all right so the next picture that I have for you is this one right here this I think is a little more challenging because well you see it's a picture of well it's a picture of a cake and think about what that person is doing on top of the cake so I'll tell you what the idiom or expression means and hopefully that will maybe that'll help you understand the the the phrase that I'm looking for so what it means is that you are referring to something that makes something else better that it makes it even better and you say this is the mm what so if you have some situation where wow things are good but something happens it makes it even better and you say wow this is just the what clothes I see somebody like he had sherry YES on the cake you would say the cherry on top which would be another expression but yes Angela Vicki close Aden yes the icing on the cake if you're talking about the icing on the cake you're talking about something that makes another thing even better and the hint they were trying to give you as that person is ice skating so if you think about that picture you have cake which is great everybody loves cake but then if we put icing on top of the cake which is that frosting that vanilla I sing it makes it even better so in that case that's where it comes from the icing on the cake so for example maybe I say that I get a promotion at work I think wow this is a great day and then later on the in the day I discover that I win the lottery and you say that is just the icing on the cake it makes the day even better the next picture all right mm-hmm this one I think this one might be a little bit more challenging so think about what this person is doing they are playing basketball it looks like and what are they doing if they're playing basketball they are what are they doing what's that that verb that you would use and of course you can see the fan is in the air so what does a fan it gives a what now the meaning of this this phrase is to have a casual conversation if you are having a casual or informal conversation with someone you could say we are just hmm what do you think and this is the idiom or expression you're having a casual conversation and you are just doing this so think about it now I know somebody people are thinking like throwing alright not throwing think of what you would do with a basketball you would shoot you would shoot the ball but in this case you're shooting what not the fan but what are you shooting the the idiom or expression is to shoot the breeze this is we did this in a lesson a long time ago I think over two years ago so think about it a fan it gives off like air wind a breeze to make people cooler to shoot the breeze is a way of saying that you are just having an informal or casual conversation so maybe you would ask somebody like oh you saw this person yesterday what were you guys doing you know we were just shooting the breeze we were just having a casual conversation we're not really talking about anything we're just shooting the breeze the next one that was a little more challenging all right is I think maybe this one might be a little easier to figure out even if you don't know what it means think about what this picture is the the expression or the idiom is really it's just like the picture what do you think it is all right write your answer in the chat write your answer in the comments participate in the lesson what do you think it's a picture of a person's what and it is where alright those those two things and what this expression means is it's talking about somebody who is being unrealistic they're not being realistic they're saying these kind of crazy things that maybe are not going to become true and you'd say this person has their what yes excellent gertrudis Natasha perfect you would say they have their head in the clouds so that is a picture of somebody's head it's in the clouds and if you describe somebody in this way you like oh you got your head in the clouds it means that they are not being realistic they're saying something that is probably not going to come true and say you know they just they got their head in the clouds they're not they're not really saying things that reflect reality you got your head in the clouds I think you know sometimes all of us we we say things and somebody could say you know oh you got your head in the clouds you're not being realistic think about what's true so the next one this is this is another difficult one I'm gonna try and help you through this I'm gonna walk you through this so the first thing I would say is look at that chair alright think about the chair that you see there alright that is part of this expression now what happened to the person who was in that chair are now on the floor now what the picture represents is possibly you see those two doctors there and the person who's on the floor maybe they're a bit crazy and that is what this idiom or expression means it means that somebody is kind of going crazy they're saying things that are ridiculous or crazy and you would say that somebody is what what do you think all right again I said start with that chair what kind of chair is it just to give you a hint it is a rocking chair it's a rocking chair you know that kind that goes it rocks back and forth and if somebody you wouldn't say they they fall off the chair but they fall off their rocker to to to fall off your rocker or you could say that somebody is off their rocker and what it means is you're describing this person as you know that being a little crazy they're going crazy and you could say that wow this person they're off their rocker they're crazy or you could say somebody fell off their rocker they've kind of gone crazy to be off your rocker so off your rocker is just a an informal way of saying that somebody has kind of gone crazy gone a bit mad alright so now we're gonna do some more I got some more for you and gonna make this I don't know if it's more challenging but what I've done is I've given you a sentence a situation and I want you to try to complete the sentence using one of these idioms okay or expressions so let's do the first one and this one I actually did a lesson a while ago talking about when you're very busy that's a hint for you different ways to say that you're really busy right now so in this situation somebody might say you know I can't help you right now I've got a lot on my mmm so how would you complete that sentence how would you complete the expression because if you say that you you got a lot on your hmm it just means you're very busy right now and I think this is a very well I think it's a common expression that somebody might use I use it from time to time instead of saying well I'm very busy I'd say I got a lot on my what all right excellent wow you guys rock that one yes Mary Syd Angeles or Hayden excellent perfect yes you got a lot on your plate so if somebody has a lot on your plate or a lot on their plate it just means that they're very busy all right to have a lot on your plate I've got a lot on my plate right now so now you know what we're doing the next one that I have for you is this so somebody could say I've done my part the mm is in your mmm I'll wait for your answer so think about that situation somebody they've done their part they've finished they need to wait for the other person to do something so they say the mmm is in your I've done my part the mmm is in your mmm I'll wait for your answer all right you need to do something now the mmm is in your mmm all right I'm gonna stop saying that so what do you think this is it's more of a sport idiom and think about tennis okay the tennis would be the sport where this this comes from and yes actually excellent Ladon Chris Lally Vicki perfect you would say the ball is in your court so some situation happens and you are waiting for the other person to react you're waiting for the other person to make a decision you are waiting for this person to make the next move and you would say the ball is in your court now it's your turn to act the ball is in your excellent let's look at the next one this is true this is true for me and I think it may be a little easier I've taken out the entire expression and I'd say I like to eat a little chocolate at night before I go to sleep before I go to bed I do it's my guilty pleasure I do eat a little chocolate and I could say it's because I have a what alright how would you complete that that sentence I like to eat a little chocolate at night before I go to sleep and I'd say it's because I have a what what do you think if somebody likes to eat well like me they like to have a little chocolate you could say that they have a hey what what do you guys think excellent yes Galina just one minute Kevin yes you would have a sweet tooth and if you have a sweet tooth it's not only talking about chocolate it could be talking about any kind of food that is sweet and you'd say this person they have a sweet tooth I don't think I'm alone I imagine many of you out there you also have a sweet tooth some of you maybe not the next one think about this situation before I loan you any money you need to create a business plan you need to get all your hmm na hmm I'm gonna I'll give you some hints because this one may be a little more challenging so the situation is somebody wants to borrow money and I say well wait before I loan you any money I want to see a business plan you need to create a business plan you need to get prepared you need to get ready you need to get organized you need to get all your mmm in a so this is an expression that means just that you're telling somebody to get organized to get prepared and you would tell that person you need to get all your mmm in a mmm and if you need another additional hint think about an animal right there isn't talking about an animal in this idiom or expression yes I say one correct answer sorry I have no idea how to pronounce your name I apologize but the correct answer is you need to get all your ducks in a row so if you tell somebody to get their ducks in a row it means like I said to be prepared or be organized for something that's going to happen so you need to think about it this when you when you see ducks walking if you see a family of ducks you usually they're walking in a straight line they're walking in a row and they look they look very organized and that's where it comes from you'd say you need to get your ducks in a row so if you're telling somebody you need to get organized this you could say this and you could say this instead get your ducks in a row the next one all right in March of 2017 my wife and I got mmm in New York City now this is an expression that you can use it means the same thing as well this you can see the ring on my finger the answer is not married we did get married but instead of saying we got married my wife and I got married we could say this instead what is another more informal expression that you can use that you can use instead of saying I got married or we got married in March of 2017 my wife and I got mmm in New York City now you could say married sure but what it what else can you use this is an informal this is an informal expression for married all right what do you think well you would say not you you could say tie the knot that does mean marriage but think about this sentence in particular you wouldn't say we get tied the knot you would say we tied the knot in New

it out if you guys ever visit New York City so then I could say this one I'd love to meet you for lunch but I can't this weekend I'll have to take uh what what do you think Oh Thank You Isaiah hey I appreciate that that congratulations so what do you think I'd love to meet you for lunch but I can't this weekend I'll have to take a what so you're telling someone that you can't do this all right you want to but you can't do it so you're going to have to take a mmm how would you complete that sentence and it again what it means is that you're basically saying that yeah you're gonna have to do it another time you'll do this some other time I don't know when but you'll have to do it later in the future ah Sorrell thank you I appreciate it yes I tried to find tried to find a cute photo of us in New York so what do you guys think you can't do something this weekend I love to meet for lunch I can't do it this weekend I'll have to take a what yes you wanna louisa sleepwalker you would take a raincheck to take a raincheck it's it's all so polite I think if I think it's used especially if you don't really want to do something maybe you want to be polite and you refuse an offer you say look let's just let's take a rain check and the reason why I say it kind of it makes me think the person doesn't want to do it is because when you take a rain check quite often you're not planning the exact time you will do it again you'll just say let's do it in the future you know we'll take a rain check it's not like you're saying oh we'll do it next weekend or we'll do it tomorrow if you take a rain check I think often you are not going to make a specific plan now that doesn't mean that it won't happen I think you could say you know let's take a rain check and then in the future you actually do you meet this other person but I think this is a polite way to say okay let's not do it now I gotta take a rain check all right so I hope I hope that you learn some new idioms and expressions today once this lesson gets post I will put all of them down in the description if you would like to review the the idioms and expressions that we've gone over today so that that hopefully again you can learn them listen for these if you're watching a TV show or movie and I still would encourage you try to practice them you may make mistakes that's perfectly okay but again just practice that's the best way to learn if if you find yourself in a situation where you can tell somebody look I can't do it right now let's let's take a rain check or maybe you want to maybe you're just having a conversation with somebody and you're just shooting the breeze or if you're being a little rude maybe you tell somebody hey you know just just wait a moment hold your horses okay so I hope you found this useful again if you guys like what we do love you guys what their I am you can connect with us support and sponsor our channel you get a youtube membership our or connect with us on patreon there are links to those in the description down below I do see some members and patrons who are with us today in this live lesson like Sree Aiden Vicki thank you guys for being here thank thank all of you guys for joining me for these lessons I really appreciate it it's also I hope that it is a great way for you guys to practice your skills because you guys are writing in the chat as we're doing this and you're practicing your writing skills and I think that's always great so we're just gonna give some quick shout outs Thank You dagestan Angela dubs Gertrudis you wanna marry app lolli Darwin Alex thank you guys so much I said Louisa sleepwalker I hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you guys next time so long Ayden Sorrell Vicki bye-bye

American Slang vs. Informal Vocab vs. Formal Vocab | English Class #Shorts

class today we're going to learn how to say things in a formal way an informal way and using slang if you have not eaten for a long time you would say that you are formal famished okay informal what do you think hungry and slang hangry isn't that just hungry and angry combined and why do you have sunglasses on we're inside okay no never mind what adjective would you use to describe a person who is immature formal infantile that's a good one and informal childish well done and slang little okay slang that's enough now what would you say if you want to say goodbye to someone formal good day to you sir or good day to you Ma'am wow that that is formal and how about you informal see you later slang what would you say bye Felicia isn't that from the movie Friday

Americans Try to Guess British Idioms

- Today we are going to challenge each other with some British idioms. Today's lesson is going to be a very difficult lesson for us because we have some different British idioms that we are going to ask each other and see if we can figure out what they mean, and I'm pretty sure I'm gonna do bad. - Yeah, me too. We're gonna try to do our best to guess them. - Alright, so do you wanna ask me one of yours first? - Yes. It's a kerfuffle. - A kerfuffle. - A kerfuffle. - I would say that's, isn't that kind of like a commotion or like a kind of a fight or a dispute about something, that they're a kerfuffle?

- I thought you said you were gonna be bad at this. - I think I've heard of kerfuffle. - Oh, yeah you're right. - (laughs) Yes. - Yeah it is. - It's like I'm British. - It's a really good word though, kerfuffle, I really like it. - A kerfuffle? What does it say? - It says, a skirmish or fight caused by different views. - Okay, yeah. Nailed it. (laughs) Alright, your first one is maybe you'll get it if you work through it. All mouth and no trousers. If you're saying somebody's oh, you know, he's all mouth and no trousers. - Is this similar to like if somebody's bark is louder than their bite, something like that?

- Kind of, like yeah. - So does it mean-- - It's similar. - Somebody's like, just all talk, but they're not really? (chuckles) - Yeah, no that's exactly what it says, all talk, no action. Are you all mouth no trousers? - Oh yeah, like I think many times like I'll say things, but. Okay, I like this one. Knees up. - Knees up. Can you give me a sentence? - This party is knees up. (laughs) - Knees up? Is it, it's really cool, it's great, it's happenin'? It's knees up? - Yeah, kind of. - This lesson is knees up? - Yeah, I hope we're using that the right way, it just says adjective for liveliness.

Like, dancing, like your knees are up when you're dancing, maybe. - I guess that makes sense, yeah. Okay, your next one, blinding. - Like if something's very bright or something? (chuckles) What's a sentence? - Okay, the Prime Minister gave a blinding inauguration speech. - So this could either be very good or very bad I feel. - I mean, or you could say like, I'm trying to think of something more recent. The royal wedding was blinding? - Yeah, it's not making it any easier. Well I'm guessing it means like amazing or something really cool? - Maybe I'm using it wrong. - Excellence, it says. - Oh. An adjective for excellence. - Interactive english is a blinding channel.

- We're very modest today. We're so blinding. - We're so blinding. - We're so freakin' blinding. - This one I really like. I gotta say, I think British idioms are better than American idioms. - The ones we've done thus far, yes. - Yes. Okay, so one is to know your onions or to know one's onions. - To know your onions? I'd just say, is it like to know your stuff, to be informed and you're aware of what's goin' on? Like, hey, you know, this guy doesn't know his onions. - Yep. - Really? - That's exactly what it is. - Alright, well that was pretty easy based on the context. - But how much better is to know your onions than to know your stuff? - That is much better. - It's so much better. - Yeah. Okay, the next one I think you'll get the next one 'cause this is, this is a little bit a review, for you, alright? And it is-- - Oh gosh.

- Chuffed. - (laughs) I remember this one - Chuffed. 'cause we did this one with Allie. - Yeah. - But do I remember the meaning is the question. - We did another idiom challenge with Allie, from Papa Teach Me, long time ago, we'll link it. - He said chuffed to bits. - I think the idiom he gave, chuffed to bits, yeah. - I think it means, like like excited or happy or delighted? - Yeah. - Oh okay, thank god. - Yeah. - I was like is my memory that bad? (laughs) - No, yeah to be very pleased about something. - Okay. - The sentence was, I just, it's like, Reginald was chuffed about the football match and I just thought like-- - Very British and simple.

- Reginald, yeah, is such a, seems like such a stereotypical British name. - Reginald. - Reginald was chuffed. - This one I think you should know because I've heard it around, at least I know it. - Okay. - But I still really like it. - I might surprise you and be very wrong. - Lets hope so 'cause it's funnier that way. It's miffed. - Miffed? - Miffed. - If you're miffed, you're a little upset, pissed off about something, you know you're miffed. - Yeah, you're right. I'm sorry I'm laughing, I'm laughing because, because the example is, he got all miffed about the football match. - Sure people in the UK get miffed.

- Reginald, stop getting-- - About the football match. Miffed about the football match. - I imagine people were very miffed at the last World Cup. They were not chuffed at all. - Reginald is miffed. - People were not chuffed. Reginald especially, super miffed. - Okay, we need to stop with this name okay. - This, go away. - How can you see? It's so small. - Yeah, well I don't want you to see, 'cause you're trying-- - Well I can't. To cheat here. - I am-- - You're trying to cheat. Okay, corker. - What? - Corker. - Like, like does he have to something he would like put a cork in it or something?

- No. - Oh, a corker. - Corker, I, this I don't think you'll get it, do you, would you like a sentence? - Yes. - You're probably still not gonna get it, but it's a good sentence. - What is it? - Great job, Jim. You're a real corker. Maybe you will get it. - Like a good person or a good sport or something good? - Yeah, I mean, kinda, it's, this says-- - Good lad? - Unless, unless this source is wrong. Someone or something that is outstanding, a stand out. Yeah, that Reginald, he's a real corker. There's like a Reginald watching this right now, like, screw you guys. - I'm sorry, we're not picking on you. - Sorry, you know. - We actually do like the name, it's really-- - I am somebody who should not be making fun of anybody's name.

- I mean, to be fair-- - Yeah. - Me neither, because nobody's heard of my name. - So we're with you, Reginald. - We understand. - We know (chuckles). - Names are hard. Numpty. - A numpty? - Yes, it's an adjective. - Okay. - I think. - Well let me take a guess and then you give me a sentence. A numpty, I'd say somebody who is lazy, kind of like a bum, sloth, they're not working hard, they're a numpty. - You are-- - Stupid numpties. - You are kind of wrong, but also kind of, I mean you're right on the connotation of the word. - Why wouldn't, okay, alright. It's not a good word. - Not a numpty, it's an adjective, so-- - Oh, if somebody's a numpty?

Okay, so-- - Well no-- - Can you give me a sentence? - That's somebody's a numpty, somebody's-- - Somebody's numpty. - We're still struggling with the concept of adjectives today. - Numpty. - You and your numpty friend should apologize. - You and your stupid-- - That is such a good one. - You and your stupid friend should apologize? - Yeah. - Is it? - Yeah. (laughs) - We're gonna bring some of these idioms back to America and start saying, hey numpty, what are you doin'? Numpty friend, that numpty shirt. (laughs) This is another, this is a good one. I like this one too. British idioms are much better. - They're much better. - Doofer. - A doofer? - A doofer. - Is it like a doofus? - D-O-O-F-E-R, doofer.

- Like a doofus? - No. - Can you? - I'll give you the saying, it's to say like, you know, what is that doofer? - What? That made it harder. - What is that doofer? - Is it a thing? A doofer is a thing? - Kind of, but there's a little more to it. What do you call that doofer over there? - Thing? (laughs) - Or could be a thing. - Thingy? - It says, it's an unnamed object, so if you don't-- - Oh, so like a thing? - Yeah, a thing, like if you don't know the name of something, like, oh, what's, what's that doofer? Thingamajig, whatchamacallit. I think a lot of people in the US would say a thingamajig, or a thingy. Whatchamacallit, I think of the, the candy bar. How's it go Whatchamacallit - What is that? - It's the song that was like the old commercial.

Ahh ahh Thingamabob, gobbledygook Whatsitsface Whatchamacallit - You don't know your onions, apparently. - Apparently about Whatchamacallits. Okay, oh I think you know this one. Odds and sods. - No, I'm like, odds and sods, can I have a sentence? - Okay, You lot got first picks and left with nothing but odds and sods. - That you like, odds and sods, like empty handed? I got all a bunch of of rubbish. - See, that's why I think this particular sentence wasn't the best. - Did you wanna give me another sentence? - Like at the flea market, you, you, you could find a bunch of odds and sods. - Doofer? Is it a doofer? - Unnamed. - It's an unnamed thing. It's just a bunch of, like a bunch of knickknacks? - Yeah, miscellaneous things. - Okay. - But what I didn't want it to think, it's like it's not something that's not valuable, it's just like, yeah, miscellaneous things. - Okay. Another good one, I thought, an earwig.

- What? - An earwig. - Earwig? - Yeah an earwig. - An earwig. - I think it's a verb. Earwig. - To earwig? - Earwig. If, do you want a sentence? - Yes. - I think you'll, you might be able to get it based on the context. Don't earwig on my personal phone calls. - Oh, is it like to eavesdrop? - Don't earwig. Yeah, it says to eavesdrop. I don't know, it's like, like kind of like wiggling your ear, like kind of like an earwig or something instead of like a wig you put on your head. - That's how I imagined it. - That's what I first thought of when I heard it.

- A little wig for your ear. Okay, the next one from me is spawny. - Spawny. Somebody who thin and lanky and gangly, like they're spawny. - No. - Spawny, I don't know, can you give me a sentence? - It's an adjective. That was a spawny outcome for you. - Okay, a positive, great, unexpected? - That's a good connotation-- - That's, that was-- - It's the right kind of connotation. - You know, that was a spawny outcome, that was surprising? - Getting closer. - Should I keep guessing? I don't know. - Lucky. It means lucky. - Oh, okay. Maybe you'll get this one. Well I don't wanna give you a hint.

Eating irons. - What? - Do you want me to give you a hint before I give you the sentence? - Yeah. - Eating irons, it's basically exactly what it sounds like. - No it can't be. Eating iron? - Eating irons. - I don't know, eating spinach? - Eating irons, like no. - Spinach is iron. - Somebody would ask or something like, don't we have any clean eating irons? - Oh, is it like utensils? - Uh huh, yeah, cutlery, eating utensils. - I wonder how common this one is. - Eating irons. - I just assume somebody is eating iron, so that's why I was like, what? Like is it vitamin deficiency thing?

The fuzz. - I have no idea. - Really? - Yeah, how would I know the fuzz? - Because there was a movie called Hot Fuzz. - Oh, I haven't seen it. - Don't let the fuzz catch you. There's any problem, call the fuzz. - The police? - Yeah. - Oh. - You've never heard that? I think that's been used, I've heard that quite a bit. - I mean I may have heard it. - In like movies and shows, like people thought the fuzz, the cops. - Now I'll know. - Now you know your onions. - Mmhm. Wag, wag off. - Okay, I'm gonna say to wag off is to like, just gonna go out there and say it, talk back to somebody, to talk a lot?

- No. - Talk trash? - No. (laughs) Maybe it is connected, but it means something else. - To wag off. Wag off? Like get outta here? Go away? - No. I'll give an example, I had nothing to do, but wag off at work. - Just do nothing of importance? I don't know, you're bored, you wag off, you screw around, you don't do much? - Kind of. - Wag off? What are you doing? - To waste time. - What are you doing? - It kind of means to waste time. - To waste time? Okay, I kinda got that. To waste time. Wag off. Georgie, you waggin' off? - Oh, always. - You just wag off all day.

The next one, honk. It's a verb, honk. It's not a car. - Oh, I was like, that's easy, that's a real word. I have no idea, what, what, I mean, can you like give me some kind of hint? - I can give you an example sentence. This is good. - Reginald. - Reginald coughed so hard, he honked all over the pub. - Ew. Does it mean to throw up? Ew. - Uh huh, to vomit. - Ew ew ew. - I'm gonna check where we got these, 'cause we got these off of, like a site, just to challenge each other. - Wait, sorry. The cat honked. She drooled. - I wonder if, yeah, I wonder if the person who kind of wrote that like, blog post.

- If their name is Reginald. - With all of these, it was Reginald. - You should know this one, I believe because I've heard it before, but this one goes, warts and all. - Just, you're not feeling good about your appearance, like warts and all, or like just-- - You don't know this? I've heard it in the US too, I thought. - I've never heard of warts and all. Sentence? - Alright, I'll keep the cat, warts and all. - Like you'll keep, you'll, for something for better or for worse? Like, you'll keep it with all the defects and problems that something might have, warts and all? I've never heard warts and all. - Really? - No. I think you'll get it, I think people have said it in the US before.

An idiot box, (giggles) or the idiot box. - I don't think I've heard it, but it's good, it sounds good. - Most homes have an idiot box. - Oh, like a panic room? No. - What? Why would that be an idiot box? - Well you're acting like I'm supposed to know, is that, am I the idiot box? - Alright, no. I think I'll spend the night in front of the idiot box. - Oh, a TV. - Uh huh, yeah. - Oh. - It's the idiot box. So if you learn some new idioms, just like we did, we want you to do two things: please hit that like button down below, also, write to us in the comments and tell us which one was your favorite or if you know of some other British idioms, we'd love to hear em', because yeah, we think they're just better than the American idioms.

- They're way funnier. - Thank you guys so much for watching and we'll see you next time. - Bye.

LESSON 210 OF 749

Answering ALL Your Questions about English | Q&A w/ Interactive English

hello everyone my name is wes this is interactive english and this channel in case this happens to be your first time joining uh me is just it's all about trying to help you practice and improve your english and today it's going to be a bit more interactive because what i want to do is i want to take some of your questions that you may have if it's related to vocabulary or pronunciation uh grammar anything and of course i will try to do my very best to give you the answer and and help you out the only thing i will say is teaching is it is a humbling experience because you do get many questions and the more questions that i get the more i realize that i just don't know um and there's so many things about the english language um that i'm still learning each and every day which is also something that i enjoy about it that i'm continuously learning new things so i just want to give a quick little hello to some of the some of you who are with me right now uh sleepwalker angela takaya hello teresa great to see you again um who else we have be happy lolly excellent um thank you guys uh claudia i appreciate you guys um being here uh let's see let's all right uh okay so what i want to do and before i i jump into taking your questions um right now what what i want to do is start with uh some questions that are from some of our members uh some patrons some members i asked if they had any questions and i'm going to answer a couple of those first and then i'll get to questions that are basically from the broader group and i'll try to answer as many as i can and give this very precise short precise and pithy responses pithy means kind of quick uh hello dorcas hello valerie great to see you so the first question um the first question that i had was from lolly who asked this um he's talking about learning english uh by myself on the internet with different teachers because there are many different teachers on youtube and you hear a lot of different accents the american accent british canadian and just asking if it's a good idea um especially if you're learning english to travel and i say that is an excellent idea i am a big advocate for when you get exposure to the english language to try to get as much exposure as possible but to get exposure to different varieties as well um whether it's uh american english like my accent i'm from the united states and i think i kind of have a bit of a standard u.s accent or i think it's great to listen to british english as well canada australia and i would even go a step further i think it's very useful to if you can listen to other accents from people uh that are may not be native english speakers that speak english as a second language so i think it would be great to hear people um speaking english from france and people would speak it as a second language or china or um people who live in india the the india the indian english accent i think all of that is very useful and the reason why i say that's helpful is and i know people they may not get exposure to those um english accents as a second language and but i think it's useful because especially if you're talking about traveling and you want to go somewhere else so if somebody is from france and they're traveling to thailand chances are that they will be communicating in english so you are going to be communicating with somebody in english who may have a slight accent depending on the country that they're from so i think it's very useful to get exposure to those accents as well because it's just going to improve your comprehension the more the different the more variety you can get i think the more it's going to help your overall comprehension that is just uh that is just my view i've heard somebody said that the uh oh if the the audio it's a weird echo okay let me see if uh let me see if i can change that right now um hold on one moment [Music] settings sometimes they change some of these settings midway and i have to see if i can kind of go through and switch some of them around so this is default disable disable disabled um okay let me let me see i don't know if that makes it any better you guys can tell me in the chat if it's the same or if it's different um and and let me know because i definitely don't want to go through the entire lesson with this this weird echo typically i have the same setup and that's what i try to follow each and every time so i did change i did disable like one of the microphones so hopefully that may have been the

the cause of the problem just let me know let me know in the chat um you guys there it's better now awesome excellent so uh hello oh hi maggie good to see you um audio great to see so many familiar faces so i hope that helps and and kind of like again this is just my opinion that it's always good to get exposure to as many different english accents as you can as many different english varieties not only are you going to learn it's going to improve your comprehension but many people might use different words as well so it's also a great way to build and expand your vocabulary so that is a great question lali and i hope that helps definitely keep trying to get listen to a lot of different people that's i know that was a very long answer to that question and i told you that i would keep it simple uh i lied sorry the next question uh was from vicki and vicki asked we were wondering uh if we know if i know of any sites for intermediate learners to practice their grammar or listening skills so this is another i think it's a great question because i think this is something that a lot of people will may be wondering and there are so many different sites out there and resources that you might find on the internet but i understand that people would want to find resources specific to their level if you are a beginner learner or intermediate or advanced and that can be a little challenging because you might find different websites that have quizzes or they talk about vocabulary or grammar but it may not be structured uh by level so i did want to share a couple of sites with you that that i thought are useful that can help and sites that do have things based on level and i will leave these sites i will leave links down in the description below so let's go over here the first one that well not here i'm not here yet this one okay is it's breaking news english and this i think for for those of you who are english instructors english teachers you may be familiar with this site right here i used to use it sometimes when i was in the classroom breaking news english gives they're just these short little articles about current events and things that are happening in the world the reason why i'm bringing this up is because many of these articles they have levels down here i don't know if you can see it says level 0 1 2 and 3. and level 0 would be the the beginner level so if i were to click on this article pigs are intelligent pigs are intelligent enough to play video games this would take me to the article written in its most simple form this is the easiest level so just look at that first sentence it says pigs may be more oh no this is the level three uh i wanted to go to the level zero to show you that first and then i was gonna go to the level three so let's go to level zero here it is so you can see it's already shorter and it says pigs are intelligent and can play video games it's a simple sentence it's straightforward i think many of you uh would understand that if you read this and you think okay i i understand this this is too easy then you could go back and make it a little more challenging um and i'll just skip ahead to level three where that first sentence now it's changed to pigs maybe more intelligent than we thought so it's a similar idea but it's it's a little more difficult the language that they're using uh is a little more challenging than just saying pigs are intelligent so i think breaking news english is a good site if you well for reading and it also says where is it down here it said um it says for reading and listening i can't find if there was like a listening audio file attached to this so that you can just listen to the article you may be able to do that i actually haven't used breaking news english in some time but it is a site that i think is useful if you're looking to understand okay what what level should i be trying to do the next site um i think the british council gives a lot of uh different information this is just vocabulary and as you can see it talks about pre-pre beginner to pre-intermediate vocabulary intermediate to upper intermediate so in that case it does separate the vocabulary based on level i think that might be useful for some of you who are trying to build your vocabulary and then another site which i will use from time to time and check out is english club english club has a lot uh you can see right here showing grammar lessons vocabulary lessons pronunciation listening uh lessons speaking a little bit of everything this i don't believe may have it if i go into listening it may not have it by level i think they just have a lot on here which i think is helpful and useful if you want to give it a try there's just so much on here i just wanted to share this one with you as a resource in general so those are some sites that i would recommend if we're we're talking about uh trying to find what level is appropriate breaking news english uh british council and english club again i will link those uh down in the description i have one more question from a member and then i'm gonna open it up uh to everybody i know some of you guys uh are asking questions already and i will come back and try to answer as many as i can the last one uh was from takaya who asked i cannot tell the difference between particularly and especially and this again is a great question i know it can be a little confusing because many of these words have more than one meaning and i think one of the one thing that can be confusing is that sometimes the meaning is the same and the words can be used interchangeably but for another meaning it really can't be used interchangeably so the reason i say that and i'm going to show you this because uh showing you how the word is defined using cambridge so let's go back over to the website and look at the meaning for okay especially so the first one that they list right here is that especially means let me scroll down for you a little bit it means very much more than usual or more than like other people or things then if we look at particularly it's an adverb in this case particularly is also an adverb and again you see what it means especially more than usual in that case especially and particularly are these are adverbs that have the same meaning more than usual and i'll give you an example so i could say and this is true uh we've been in we live in budapest hungary right now i could say that this winter has been uh particularly warm it's been a particularly warm winter season and in that case i'm saying well it's it's warmer than usual i could also use especially and it means the same thing i could say um this has been an especially warm winter so i can use those interchangeably a particularly warm winter or an especially warm winter either one is fine they mean the same thing it's more than usual and i i think i feel like i probably just in my opinion use especially more than particularly that's just me but one reason i think especially is often used also to talk about down here um it's used to emphasize like one important thing you're really emphasizing one over uh the other so it's like if i were to give you a sentence that saying that everyone needs to study for the exam but especially this person needs to study i'm emphasizing and saying well highlighting picking out that one person especially this one thing or one person so i think especially is often used with that meaning where you're highlighting that one important thing um and again that's how i think some of these words can be a little confusing is because they have different meanings and you can see when you look on the like cambridge or any site and it's going to give like the probably like the main meaning up top the most common one and then as you scroll down you see all these other meanings and ways that the word can be used so those were some of the questions from some our patrons our members appreciate guys um being a part of our community i will also go ahead and just say if you guys links are down in the description if you want to join the family be a sponsor uh they have some cool rewards for members patrons links are down below so let me now open it up to uh just in general some questions if you guys want to write to me in the chat in the comments um i'm just going to go through uh maddie asked teacher to use the holo app no i haven't i've i know those guys um who have put together that app i've talked to them and we've been in communication it's something that i've thought about trying out my biggest challenge right now is just time trying to find the time to do all these things try out new platforms find other ways to communicate with people but it is something that i've considered but i haven't uh i haven't been on hollow and actually teaching maggie asks i always get stuck when i write i was concerned about my grammar and sentence structure when i write i think that i think that's normal and common to worry about those mistakes two things i would say i think writing is good it is a reflective skill and i say it's reflective is because when you're writing of course you can stop you can go back you can look at it you can try to find your mistakes and correct your mistakes so i think it's useful if you use it as a reflective process i know sometimes people would just write something send it away um and then that that's that's it it depends on how much of a hurry you are in i think if you're looking to improve your language skills i think it's so useful to go back reread review try to find your mistakes correct them um it's gonna help you even when you when it comes time to speak the second thing i would say is that i think if grammar is something that you are especially worried about or particularly worried about more than other things then what i would say is that i think reading is a great way to complement that and the reason i would say reading is a great way to complement your writing because i think all of the language skills are connected in different ways when you're reading you are actually you're seeing the correct grammar structure being used you're seeing how vocabulary words are used in context and even though you're not you may not actively be looking for that you're still learning passively so it's a great way for passive learning and i think your brain takes that information in so you read and you see how the grammar is used correctly the next time you're writing i think you're more likely to start using that same grammar correctly and and then you know hopefully you're not worrying too much about uh mistakes i know that's something that's so much it's easier said than done like oh don't worry about mistakes um but again it's always something that i try to encourage people not to get like too hung up on like oh this is a mistake um mari oh remember excellent thank you

marty awesome welcome aboard uh lorenna i love your classes my first time live session from venezuela welcome rorina great to hear from you um cindy actually i'm actually nine years old and your help with english yes uh if you have a question uh cindy you can write it my arsenal sure um i'm gonna keep going on uh vitali what's up wes give you props thank you vitaly give you props as well uh maria teresa hello how are you how and to improve listening skills um with movies and natural speakings it's really hard for me to understand um yeah so what i would say and i think i did like a lesson a while back i'm gonna give an example with reading um when it comes to language learning i think i've talked about it before this concept of i plus one and what this is is um stephen krashen very well known in like linguistics and language learning came up with this uh his his idea that the the most beneficial way to improve is to take whatever your level is that's your input level that's the i and then you're gonna go one step beyond that like i plus one and i'll give you an example with reading if you are maybe an intermediate learner and you're reading something that is way too difficult then that's not going to really help you that much you're not going to understand what you're reading you're going to have to keep running to a dictionary so if you're going way beyond then it's just too challenging and the best thing that you can do is just to read like at your level or slightly beyond and i would say the same for listening because that was your question and i think the challenge for listening is that when you're talking about a movie or tv show you're already at an advanced level of listening because you're going to be listening to um if i don't know if it's a tv show from the united states you're just going to be listening to native speakers from the u.s just having a conversation talking about some topic or whatever the the tv show is about but as far as listening is concerned that is uh an advanced level um and i think that's what's challenging when it comes to improving your listening and i'm saying well try to listen slightly beyond your level it's harder to find resources that you can do that with because you need to take some things and try to be able to slow down the speech and i know that's not always possible youtube videos i think they allow i speak pretty i think slow in general so i think many of you probably can understand what i'm saying i've heard many of you tell me that i understand everything you say but then when i'm watching a movie it's it's a different ball game it's a lot more challenging and i think you can find some ways that

that you can slow down the speech so that you are listening at your level and just a little beyond that you could do that i believe with like audio books um youtube videos you can slow down some videos i think to like 75 and i think that's a great way to really practice your listening comprehension if you're able to kind of find that spot where you're listening at your level or slightly beyond and get more practice doing that and then when you go to like a movie or tv show i think it's going to make it that much easier i'd also say like in this case subtitles can also help i know subtitles would also be a bit more of a reading exercise but at the same time as you're reading the words and phrases you're listening to the pronunciation um it you're gonna kind of you will understand more because that's when you're going to catch on to some of those other parts of pronunciation when it comes to connected speech like linking words and phrases or assimilation and you'll be able to put that together so i would say try to listen at your level

i know again that's easier said than done or and also um you know practice using subtitles from time to time and it i think it just takes a while listening is my most difficult skill i i don't know why but i know everybody has different challenges but for me when i was learning spanish it's still the my most challenging it's it's i think it's the most challenging it's the skill that i have the least amount of confidence in i'll let you i'll tell you that uh let's see i'm gonna keep going um i hope that helps uh marie teresa let's see sleeper ass is there any difference between vanish and disappear uh specific cases for each of these words so vanish and disappear no i think you could use them um interchangeably for the most part i'm trying to think of an instance or some situation in which you wouldn't i think it's more common to use disappear when i think of vanished i think it's typically used in a context of like i don't know like a scary story with ghosts or something and it just vanished or um a situation like a magic show something like that and the magician would make something vanish but in all those cases you could also use disappear in general i think it's just more common to say something disappeared when you can no longer see it i just think it's more common to use that if i'll come back if i think of something sleepwalker i'll i'll circle back to that one but i can't think of anything right now in which a situation in which you would only use one of those and not the others um let's see like so we let me know if there's any grammar structure error of the sentence below um let's see i can see any time during i'll read the sentence as i would say it and then you could look at this during the time of the pandemic um kids are experiencing widespread mental health distress on the impact of socialization on the impact of social isolation on mental and emotional well-being sure that looks good um yeah that that that works um just the the article the the pandemic um let me see i got lost a little bit um let's see so yes they're synonyms we're talking about disappear and vanish claudia asks uh i'm confused with gotta wanna gonna uh i used to want to so gotta wanna gonna those we were just talking i was just talking about connected speech those are reductions they're very common reductions instead of saying um going to many people are going to uh reduce that and just say gonna especially when you're following it with a base verb i'm gonna go i'm gonna watch i'm gonna play i'm gonna travel and the same with want to something you want to do you want to do and that that's again i think when you're if you're using subtitles and you see that and then you're connecting the pronunciation with those words you take all of that information in and i think it makes it a little easier if you want to start speaking and using those reductions and and practicing like that um i hope that kind of answered your question your ans answers your question uh angelos to to trash talk or trash talking which one is more correct um try to think uh because that's an informal if you guys don't know what to what it means to uh to talk trash either one it means the same it'd really just be uh i guess the part of speech he likes to because again in that to talk trash then you're using it as a verb somebody is talking trash and when somebody's talking trash it means they're kind of if you haven't heard this informal expression before it means they're saying mean and rude things to you mostly to kind of cause a distraction and make you like unfocused and i think this happens a lot in sports during a competition you're playing against some other team and people are are talking trash um he well he's he's trash talking trying to say no because that's trash talk no it's the same it's also a verb they're really the same i don't think there's one is more correct than the other i couldn't say uh i'm trying to think which one i would use probably more i think i would say talking trash more just me if i were in a situation and i'm going to use this uh this verb off the top of my head i would probably just use talking trash um but you could say trash talking same thing there are also synonyms uh let's see we have uh asandra asks are you american yes i am i'm from the united states but i don't live in the united states right now i live in uh budapest hungary mafias i can't distinguish tenses can you give me a tip if you're talking about distinguishing between the verb tenses yeah i think that would just be making sure you learn the different verb tenses how they're formed how they're constructed when to use them i did an old lesson a live lesson it's almost an hour talking about the 12 verb tenses that uh maybe you could probably uh maybe you'd find that useful if i can track it down i'll throw a link in the description but i go through all of the different verb tenses and show you how they're formed talk about how they're used and just trying to give as much information about those verb tenses as possible so let me i think i can track it down real quick and just throw a link in the chat if you wanted to go uh check that out after this lesson and wait a second where did it go i don't think it was that old from that long ago all right so the 12 verb tenses it was a long lesson too um tried to it took a lot longer than i thought but i think it was very useful as far as live lessons are concerns it's probably one of the more popular lessons that uh i've done so yes here it is uh i'll write it in the trap 12 verb tenses boom

there's a link if you guys want to check that out a little later so that's what i would recommend that's the short answer to that um let's see how to use i'm skipping around sorry guys how to use bummer correctly you'd say something is a bummer in this case it's a noun so a bummer is something that's like uh well it's just saying that something is not good you're referring to some situation as not good a little sad a little depressing yeah it's a bummer people might also say a downer as a synonym it's the same thing something's a downer or something's a bummer um when when this audio my audio at the beginning was kind of screwed up that was a bummer and then i was able to fix it so i was happy about that let's see why we use have and had together ten critique i don't know if you can give me an example um of what you mean like we're using have um and had together i are you saying like i have had to do something in that case you're talking about the the past perfect so when you're uh or no no you're talking about the present perfect where you're using have is the helping verb and then have is also the main verb but because you're going to use the past participle you have that construction right there have had all right i have had to to do something so that that's really the reason why is when you have have as the main verb you're going to use the present perfect which means has the helping verb plus the past participle have had and i know that can be a little confusing especially because i think there are many languages that don't really have the the perfect tense let's see i'm kind of uh moving around sorry um lolly asked what do you do when you reach a plateau in language learning ooh interesting question that i would say

gosh i don't think i have like an excellent answer for that because i think it's different for for each person whereas i know people you know as a learner i always want to believe that you can continuously like improve your skills and i think that's true but i do think that you know it could be possible that somebody would plateau as far as maybe that it may not improve that much more you might learn new words you might learn new phrases but then at the same time you might forget some things um because you haven't used it in a while and in that case you might not feel like your skills are necessarily getting better if you get to a point where you're learning new things but maybe you feel like oh you've forgotten a word or two here or maybe um about how to use a verb tense correctly again mostly

it happens because you haven't used this uh in some time like they say if you have don't use things you don't if you don't use it you lose it that's a phrase um so i i don't i think when you hit that point if you're saying that you have plateaued and you think that okay you're satisfied with where your skills are at you're happy with your english proficiency then i think the goal would be to kind of make sure that you can stay at that level and continuously practice from time to time so that you remain at the level that you hope to that you hope to keep that you hope to maintain if you feel like well i've plateaued and i want to get more then of course i would say like try to keep striving to improve keep keep working at it to to get better and improve your language skills and then hopefully over time

it'll happen and that you can move up incrementally i know that when people do become more proficient they become more advanced learners you don't end up seeing progress like you did when you first started learning a language and in that case it does sometimes feel like oh i'm not improving i'm not getting much better um so yeah hopefully i don't know hopefully that helps i don't know if that answered your question uh let's see somebody asked i lost a motivation to learn english what would you recommend i talked about uh recommendation gosh in a video a long time ago about intrinsic motivation and extrinsic motivation i think intrinsic motivation um which is kind of like your personal reasons for learning the language like what what do you hope to achieve that i think is more useful when it comes to trying to get the motivation to continue learning to set aside some time to study vocabulary or watch video lessons like this if you can really use your intrinsic motivation and think about okay why am i doing this um the one of the very first questions uh i answered was lali talking about listening to different english accents for the purposes of travel so travel would be like an intrinsic motivation that you want to visit other places you know that if you travel there you're going to need to communicate in english and therefore you want to practice and improve your language skills so that would be an example of an intrinsic motivation or maybe i don't it could be anything like work if you want to if you think it's going to help you get a better job that could be an intrinsic motivation so if you're able to kind of think about that like what are the reasons why you personally feel like you should um continue improving your english and then just try to start using that as your motivation okay if it's for work let me let me put some time aside for myself so that will aside for for learning english and dedicate more uh time put more effort into it and then hopefully you can just make it a routine so that you're you're constantly doing that uh but yeah that's i think motivation is something that's challenging i think we all go through it from time to time especially if we've been studying uh over a longer period of time i know it's tough to kind of maintain that uh motivation uh hilda asked when did when did you buy can i use bought or buy with did do we use did with past tense um yeah so if you're talking about did you're again that is your helping verb and that is going to be um the pe you're talking about the past like so yeah when did you buy something you would not use uh bought in that case uh bought is just the simple past so it asks like oh when did you buy a new car um or when did you buy uh this phone so i'm asking about when this action happened in the past you would say when did uh somebody buy you'd use buy uh let's see oh you're welcome lolly excellent uh who what else do we have mansour a good question i think um is is shadowing i can kind of combine it with the question before that emma the chopstick says i speak en i speak an american accent but i feel like i don't sound native following up with mansour's question is shadowing a useful way to improve speaking so i would say yes i think it is and this if for those of you who are unfamiliar with what shadowing is it's when you are repeating some sentences or a phrase but you're doing you're saying it in the exact same way which is a little different than listen and repeat because if i say uh listen and repeat after me today is a beautiful day you might just repeat those words but you're gonna say it maybe however you want to when you're shadowing you really need to say it in the exact same way so if i i mentioned reduced speech earlier like gonna if i say i'm gonna take a trip and i tell you to repeat you might say i'm going to take a trip but shadowing you're not going to say i'm going to you would need to use gonna you're going to say it in the exact same way and you're also really trying to capture intonation and emphasis so it's not just the way you pronounce the words but it's really capturing the emotion as well and i think it can be a fun way to practice i know that i've tried to do this in class with some videos i would show learners a video of somebody kind of yelling something or somebody who's very angry and then try to get people to say it the exact same way you're capturing that emotion and i think that you know emotion is a big part of language um and i i think it's very useful so connecting on what uh the other person asked about trying to sound more like a native speaker i think shadowing is a good way to do that because if you are shadowing and you hear the way somebody's saying a sentence you are supposed to try to say it in the exact same way that that other person would say it if that is a somebody who's a native speaker then it's just going to help you try to sound more like uh more like that person in which you might be using you're reducing your words you're linking words together um using assimilation and all of these are different parts of connected speech which i think are very useful for not just pronunciation but really you're just overall fluency so i think shadowing can be very useful it's just finding kind of the some of the sentences and phrases that you want to practice with and i think there are some sites out there i'm not too familiar with any right off of it right off the top of my head but i would stick with kind of simple sentences things that are common that people might ask more often than other questions or just answers people might give

if they're talking about whatever the weather or something like that and and really just fine tune some of those common uh phrases let's see so yeah check that out shadowing um for those of you who may not be too familiar with it let's see um nano asks can you explain how to make your writing make writing more clearly like kind of improve your writing i think i had mentioned earlier when uh maggie had asked a question um about i and i connected it to reading i think again reading is a great complement to writing you're seeing the grammar you're seeing how the grammar is structured you're able to even see small things like i talk a lot about um like i've mentioned prepositions before prepositions those small little function words i think is learners often make simple mistakes with prepositions not only in writing but also with speaking but when you're reading you're seeing those prepositions being used used correctly and i think over time the more you see that the more exposure you get to that then you will just start using it correctly the next time you're writing or speaking and that's why i say when it comes to prepositions if you're not sure do what feels right because when i when i say do what feels right it's almost like i'm trying to ask you try to to kind of really look think deep inside of what you've maybe seen before and you've just forgot about but you just have that feeling that maybe oh this is right so yeah i'd say definitely reading really connected to writing to help make it better and just keep practicing and always review make it a reflective practice try to find your mistakes correct your mistakes and if you can keep a journal about that and really identify where you're having the most trouble that's even better uh let's see mattel do you have a podcast on spotify no i don't i've thought about doing this i haven't again i think my biggest challenge right now is just finding time to set things up um and do all these different things i've thought about it it's on the list i just haven't done it yet um pedro's do you actually understand the lyrics on every song you hear absolutely not i think there are many songs where i have no idea what the person is talking about so i before um maria theresa asked a question about how to improve listening for like tv show and movies so music is it's great to get some listening exposure it's difficult to practice because i think when we're talking about uh singing people will really they they blend words and phrases together they're they're singing these words and phrases and they don't always sound like they would in just natural conversation so it's good to get like just some passive practice listening to music is always enjoyable so i think it's a good thing but uh as far as if you don't understand something that you hear in a song definitely don't worry about it um i think i again i have problems uh with that all the time depending on what the song is and what uh and what they're talking about but yeah there's some things that i'm like wait what what are they talking about um how could we eventually remember difficult vocabulary and even use it so the first thing again is just trying to get to learn the word and then try to implement some spaced repetition where if you learn a new word hopefully you have some kind of method or that you use for new vocabulary you write it in a word document you post it put it on a piece of it post it put it around your home hopefully you do something with it so that later on maybe a week later you can try to review it again and then even a month after that hopefully you'll come across that word again the more times you come across something the more likely you are to remember it this is why i would do some of those reading those and i'm going to do one next week

it's those reading vocabulary lessons where i'll take a topic and i'll find like maybe four or five articles about the same topic and i'll look for words that i think are useful you know to that topic and what happens and what we see over time is that a lot of these articles use the same words so you get that repetition and if you end up reading an article about a topic that you find interesting cars travel fashion whatever it is then i would encourage you to read more about that same topic you're going to come across similar vocabulary and again as you get that exposure again and again and again you're more likely to remember it uh let's see um all right i know i know it's it's getting a little late uh this has gone on i i will do some more lessons like this in the future i'm sorry if uh i haven't been able to get to your question today what i want you to do please write to me in the chat if you have not the chat write me write a question in the comment section and i try to answer as many as i can if i can't answer the question it's very helpful because that gives me ideas for future lessons that i might take your question and then make a video out of it later on because i think okay this is uh this is a great question it's something that i think many other learners may have problems with or perhaps they may be confused with this thing so whatever your question is please write me questions in the comments if anything to help give me more ideas for future video lessons which will ultimately hopefully help all of you so thank you guys so much uh for joining me today i appreciate you guys being here uh give a few more shout outs um boomi um thank you guys for joining me all day ahmed uh fingers crossed fingers crossed means like you're you're hoping for the best you're you know uh wishing wishing for luck fingers crossed uh thank you guys hope you enjoy the rest of your week or the upcoming week and next week i i am going to try to do like one of those reading vocabulary lessons in case you were wondering what i was talking about it's a great way to build your vocabulary as well as learn about a new topic so i don't know what topic i'm gonna do next week but that will be uh the next lesson uh great to see you sleepwalker uh lucky luke takayo thank you thanks for being here luisa um mahdi thank you you are awesome thanks for joining the family uh our newest member again if you if you guys want to want to join the family links are down in the description below to sponsor or support what uh what we do here at interactive english it really goes a long way um amnesty mavia tim uh sleepwalker uh batul mare teresa great to see you again i hope to see you again in the future um but all right i'm gonna end it wrap it up so long uh and i will see you guys soon

LESSON 211 OF 749

Are You Making These Common GRAMMAR MISTAKES?

Let's talk about some confusing grammar and I promise you will learn something new. And if you enjoy learning new things and improving your skills, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And today I would like to clear up some confusion specifically when it comes to different grammar concepts and as well as some certain grammatical phrases. Now, if you would like to get the lesson notes right next to me, you can click on the link down below in the description. Join our email community and you will then have these notes in order to review. If you're already a part of our community, don't worry. I've emailed them to you.

you can check your inbox. So, let's go ahead and jump into it. This is a quiz lesson. I want you to participate. Write your answers in the chat in the comments. I didn't wake up this early. So, this is going to be multiple choice perhaps make it a little easier and then I'm going to go into why this is the correct answer. Talk about some of the slight nuances between these different phrases and the grammatical concept. So, I didn't wake up this early. Are you going to say a used to or b used to? They both sound the same. Used to and used to. This is it's a little bit of a trick question because we're talking about the verb used to, which can be either a or b. But in this case the correct answer is a used to I didn't used to wake up uh I didn't used to wake up this early. Okay. I didn't used to do it. Now let's let me give you a little more detail between used to as a verb and used to the adjective. Now used to as the verb often it's going to be used in the past because of the meaning. It is an ed verb in the past. So, it's going to be spelled us d used to because it means that you are referring to something that existed or repeatedly happened in the past but does not exist anymore. Look at these sentences right down here. I used to wake up early. Okay? I used to do this thing in the past. So often you're going to use this verb in the past. In this case, because I'm talking about the negative and the conjugation is with did. That is my past. I did not used to wake up this early. And in this case, I'm just using the base verb. The other thing I want to point out which makes this very confusing grammatically is that used to us d can also be used as an adjective. And that means that it refers to something that you're maybe not familiar with or accustomed to, like I'm used to running in hot weather or I'm not used to running in hot weather.

Either way, whether it's the affirmative or the negative, when you're using it as an adjective, you're going to spell it us d. So, something to keep in mind when talking, especially when talking about that verb used to. Here's the next one. Your voice is soothing. Can you read this story? Are you going to say, "Can you read this story to me or can you read this story for me?" This to me and for me, these are phrases that I think are often confused and I completely understand why they're confusing. So, think about this specific situation. Your voice is soothing. Can you read this story? What do you think? A to me or B for me.

The key here is I think somebody's saying like can you your voice is soothing. So that's a compliment. They like listening and hearing someone else's voice. So in this context I would say wow your voice is soothing. can you read this story to me? And A would be the correct answer. Now, let's get into the weeds and talk a little bit about to me versus for me. Now, this is a quick uh example. Again, if you want these notes, check out that link down below in the description. Some of these may overlap one another. Let me let's go through them one at a time because I think this is important to me. We use this to emphasize how something is perceived like that's news to me. You can also use this to express an opinion.

To me, your plan is not going to work. In this case, you could also think of the uh expression it seems to me your plan is not going to work. Movement bring it to me and something that impacts you personally. That's how I'm labeling it. If it can happen to you, it can happen to me. for me when this is something that is done for your benefit can you do the homework for me and this is why I think if you're asking somebody can you read the book for me I don't know if I would use it in the context like oh it's for your benefit and that's why I tried to give you that hint of somebody thinking well your voice is soothing please read the story to me something you could also use for me to satisfy your needs it's really helpful in order for me to get ahead. All right, it's going to help me and then affects you personally. This is too spicy for me. Now, let me give you some examples as to when they you could use either one. And these are some subtle differences, some slight nuances. So, I'm comparing your perceived opinion versus how something affects you. And that's the key word. So if you say this problem is diff this problem sounds difficult to me I don't know how to solve it again your opinion it sounds difficult to me you could also say this problem is too difficult for me I can't solve it again for me is really referring to you as an individual and not really your opinion well it sounds difficult to me how about this one this is important to me you must help you could tell somebody look this is important for me you must help when using for me the emphasis really like on the individual like I really need this all right it's important for me and then finally down below this is something I hear a lot of people that they take my course and we talk about vocabulary and somebody says well this vocabulary is new to me versus this vocabulary is new for me again both of them are correct it really just depends on what you're you're trying to say in this case I think it's more common to use to me this is new to me to give you an example when it comes to usage of to me and for me let's just take that phrase and we can use engram viewer to compare the frequency it's new to me versus it's new for me as you can see it's more common for somebody to say look it's new to me something is new to me but once again this is an instance when I think people can commonly confuse these two and a lot of times they are interchangeable. It's not like there's one wrong answer. It really just depends on what you're trying to say. How about this one? I started learning English m an early age.

Are you going to complete this sentence with a since or be from? I started learning English m an early age. since or from. Once again, when I'm working with people and coaching them, uh, when it comes to their English, this is something that I I hear people make a slight mistake. So, in this case, what I would say is you're going to use be from. I started learning English from an early age. I think I think most of you you guys rock that one. I'll throw out some some shout outs to Kaio. Good job. Good to see you. Uh Joanne, Ava, Mr. Bianca. Perfect. Uh so let's talk about why the difference between since and from. So we're going to use from to refer to like the starting point of an event, an action or journey. you know, something is going to continue versus since, in which case we're talking really about a specific point in time. Look at these examples.

If someone were to say, "The doctor will be here from 10:00 a.m. tomorrow." So, starting at this point onward from 10:00 a.m. versus the doctor has been here since 10:00 a.m. In that case, I'm using the present perfect to refer to this point in the past. Or down below, the exhibition runs from March to May. It's running from this month to this month. All right, that is the action, the journey if you will, versus the exhibition has been running since March, that point in time. Again, I think these words are sometimes confused and when people are having a conversation, a discussion, and then they just end up using the wrong one. The next question I have for you is, we decided to go out m the rain. Now, I'm giving you three different choices. A in spite of, B despite, or C. Both are correct. What do you think?

We decided to go out m the rain. How would you best complete that sentence with what do you think? Well, I I guess I don't want to give it away. Technically, every answer is correct in this case because well, the real answer would be C. Both are correct. You could say we decided to go out in spite of the rain or we decided to go out despite the rain. But if you said A or B, technically you are also correct. You can use that to complete this sentence. The difference between these I I pulled this from Cambridge. I thought they gave a really uh a really concise explanation and I provided some example sentence down below. In spite of and despite are prepositional expressions. In spite of and despite have a similar meaning to although or even though. They expressed a contrast between two things. They are both more common in writing than speaking. Despite is a little more formal than in spite of. And we usually use in spite of and despite with a noun.

So again, I could say they arrived to the airport late despite leaving in plenty of time. And I'm following it with that gerand. They arrived to the airport late in spite of leaving in plenty of time. Both of those work in this example. Here is your next question. She's m New York City. She'll be back tomorrow. talking about the difference between been to and gone to. Just looking at those, you know that we're, you know, in this case, I'm referring to the present perfect based on the the conjugation. Those are past participles. She's m New York City. She'll be back tomorrow. What do you think? A been to or B gone to? The key here is the the second sentence when I give you that extra information that she'll be back tomorrow because out of context just with that first sentence, it really could be either one. We don't know. But the fact that I'm saying that she'll be back tomorrow means that the correct answer is B. Gone to. She's gone to New York City. She'll be back tomorrow. Excellent. Uh, Julia TJ Leaf. Uh, mett. Perfect. All right. I love it. Love all these answers. Just keep them coming. Keep practicing. So, what's the difference between been to and gone to you? You're going to use been to to describe a completed visit. Something that it's happened. It's over. I have already been to the store and now I'm back. It's complete. We have been to India twice in the last year. All right. You went there. you came back. When talking about travel, I think it's very common for somebody to use been to because you're having a conversation and you say, "Oh, yeah. I've I've been to New York City or I've been to Argentina or I've I've been to Italy." And at that moment, you're not there.

You've you've already come back. It's complete. Versus gone to, you're describing a visit that you have not returned from yet. And that is the key part when it comes to gone to. In our example sentence, I said in this case, she'll be back tomorrow. She's not there yet. She's still in New York. Therefore, you would say gone to. Or again, think of these other examples. He's gone to the toilet. He'll be back soon. He's still there. Or you just missed her. She's already gone to bed. So, she's gone to bed. Has not come back yet. In those situations, you're going to use gone to. I think it's very common saying, "Oh, yeah, somebody's gone to the toilet or they've gone to bed." Hopefully, again, that really clears up any confusion, especially if you were thinking that the answer was been to. How about uh with these prepositions? Always a little tricky. Did you watch my new lesson m YouTube?

Are you going to complete this with in, on, at? These are very common prepositions. We use them all the time every day when speaking. I think I would it would be challenging to have a conversation and not use in, honor, at. Did you watch my lesson? My new lesson YouTube technically this is my new lesson, but there was one last week if you want to go check that out. So, we're talking about YouTube and when we're refer referring to YouTube TV, in that case, you're going to use on. Did you watch my new lesson on YouTube? Great job, Serg Angela. Um, Gopal, perfect.

Let's look at I'm I'm not going to go through all of this which again if you want to have this information you can you can uh download the get these lesson notes and join the community. I'm I'm just let's just look at the first one of each one. So generally speaking in with enclosed with an enclosed space. So you're you're really surrounded on all sides like it's used to talk about uh locations within a larger area. If I told you I live in the city, in the city. The city would be that surrounding area and I'm enclosed in the city. I would say I live in the city. If we're moving to on, we're talking about a surfaced uh attached to or touching something. The these are really with uh you know, I realize like preposition of place um refers to a position of any surface. the cup is on the table and you use it with all those other ones down at the very bottom on with media that you are watching something on TV or in this case you watch my new video on YouTube. So at the very bottom you see on with media and then at generally speaking you're talking about a point a specific location or a position used to refer to a position or location. Um, if I said I work at the library, right? That is the location where I work in, on, at. There are so again, these are general rules that you can follow as to when you should use these different prepositions. What do you think? There is a bear in our neighborhood. Right? We're using in because the neighborhood that is the enclosed area. There's a bear in our neighborhood. M sometimes rummages through our garbage can. If you're unfamiliar with the verb to rummage, it's a fun verb to use. It means to look through something typically like carelessly without much thought and you are rumaging through it. What do you think? A that, B, which or C who? And wow. All right. upcom I am incredibly grateful for that super chat. Awesome. You you made my day. You helped make all of this possible. That is that is in amazing. So we're we're talking about relative clauses that which who there again it can be tricky because technically there is more than one answer. However, I am going to go ahead and tell you that the answer is that and let let me explain because I know many I can see that many people put which in there or you're answering which. I I would say there is a bear in our neighborhood that sometimes rummages through our garbage cans. Now, which is okay if you use which. I will say that I think it's more common in British English than especially in the US and I'm from the United States. The way that you you would often come across with these relative clauses is the general use right here. That when referring to people, animals, or things. All right? In this case, we're uh referring to the bear, which when referring to animals or things, and who referring to people. So, because we're talking about an animal, you're not really going to use who. That is often preferred when we're talking about a restrictive clause. This means that the information is needed and often you're going to use that or who I say it's preferred. If we go back to our sentence, there is a bear in our neighborhood. All right, that kind of sets it up that rummage that sometimes rummages through our garbage can in order to for me to express the full idea. We need that information because I want to express that the bear does this and maybe is causing problems that rummages through our garbage can. If we're talking about non-restrictive clauses, information that is not needed, and typically it's going to come between those commas, you'll use which or who. These are general rules. Again, if we're talking about a little more formal, which I think British English is compared to the US, I I would say that uh which is also correct. That is preferred especially in the US. And I would almost say that even in British English, I think a lot of people would still say that in this context, but you would you would hear people use which as well. I know that a lot of people, especially those that I teach, have more of a background in British English, which is why a lot of people think of of that or which in this case. But again, good information to know. These are just slight nuances when it comes to those relative clauses. What do you think about this question at the store? We need to pick up some fruit. Uh, now I'm putting them in the U parenthesis. M, apples, bananas, and watermelon. Am I going to use eg or iie. Eie. This is more I mean, this is more writing because if I'm uh having a conversation, I'm not really going to say eg or iie. So this is specifically when it comes to writing. But again, these are commonly confused. Egie, E. So in this in this context, what do you think? At the store, we need to pick up some fruit. M apples, bananas, or watermelon, which one would you use? Excellent. Uh Liam Marak, Angela, um Ti, we're talking about eg. So, eg in this con context we're really just giving uh examples because it means for example. It stands for exemplia.

These are again I think really from Latin. It means for example. So if I were having a conversation that is what I would use. I wouldn't say eg. I'd say for example apples, bananas and watermelon. For here's another example. I love eating exotic fruits. If I were writing, eg a durian, passion fruit, hornmelon, guava, and jackf fruit. These are all would be considered exotic fruits. I've had most of them, not all of them. I'm not a big fan of a durian. Has a very powerful smell. Whereas down below, I is an abbreviation for it est. So, the fact that they came up with something like I'm going to mess this word up. This is actually a real word.

Hippopotamus sequoia phobia. Okay, I really botched that. I.e. the fear of words shows that psychiatrists do have a sense of humor. So there is an actual phobia of fear of long words. And when people were coming up with this name, they just jokingly gave it this ridiculously long name. I kind of again showing that they have a sense of humor. This is an actual word. It's not one that you're going to use in conversation. You might just say you have a fear of long words. To follow up on this joke, I I thought I'd show you this little uh comic. I'm afraid of spiders. That's called arachnophobia. That's true in case you didn't know that. What are you afraid of? And the person says long words. And he says, oh, that's called hippomstrasa squid. I Yeah, I'm not even going to try to pronounce it. And then the other person because they're afraid of long words is like, "Oh, make it stop. Please uh help." So again, that is more for writing when thinking about those uh abbreviations. Eg versus I. How about this next question? All applicants submit their resumes by the first of the month. Again, this is a slight nuance. Are you going to complete this sentence with must or have to? I you I don't I don't want to get into it. Uh obviously I will get into it and talk about the slight differences, but think about the situation. Which one do you think is more appropriate? And I'm going to say more appropriate because technically there's not a wrong answer. It's just in this context, which one would be a better choice? All applicants submit their resumes by the first of the month.

Excellent. Alvatina Tayo uh Atus Atusa, sorry. Well, glad you like. Nice. That's a good example of that word must. So, let if you said have to, you you could hear people use that. Again, I don't want to say it's it's incorrect. It's not. I think in this context, which would be a little more formal, if a company is saying this, they're probably going to use the word must. So, let's talk about some of the slight differences between must and have to. We're going to use must when uh something is required. You must report to training camp by the end of the week. It's really like an obligation. You could use must to express a conclusion or deduction. If I told you like, "Wow, you must be thirsty after that intense workout." Or finally, a strong recommendation. You must go see the movie. Now, have to if you want to express necessity, something that you have to do throughout the day. It's very casual conversation.

I have to make a dentist appointment. That is something I have to do. It's just a necessity. Or a past obligation. She had to wait in line for over an hour. If I'm talking about a future obligation, I'll still use have to in the future. I will have to excuse you or you will have to excuse his poor behavior. And finally, when making another recommendation, you have to go see the movie. really strong recommendation, you must do this thing, you must go see the movie. So again, these are some slight differences in this context because I'm really talking about something that's more required and that's why I would say that if a company were saying this, they'd say all applicants must submit their resumes by the first of the month.

If you and I are having a conversation, in which case it's a little more casual and I'm just telling you this information, then I might use have to and say, "Yeah, you know, they said that all applicants have to submit their resumes by the first of the month." So, just something to keep in mind when it comes to that formality and what you're trying to express. We are going where no man has gone before. This is a well it's a TV quote that I stole and perhaps some of you may recognize it. We are going where no man has gone before. A to go boldly versus or or B to boldly go. How would you complete this statement? Again, if you're really into uh you know older TV shows or this specific TV series, then you probably have heard this before. and you know the answer now. Oh, wow. A lot

But that is exactly what we're talking about, split infinitives. I took this first part from Marian Webster. That's why I put their little logo there. A split infinitive is an English phrase in which an adverb or other word is placed between to and a verb, as in to really start or to finally start. If you really dig into the research, technically there's not anything grammatically wrong with split infinitives. Even though I think in the context of a classroom, many instructors would be, "Oh, yeah, you shouldn't split infinitives." So once again, the thing that I like to clarify is preferred or what is correct or how many people would use it. So preferred, I decided, she decided to quit her job immediately. You see, we're putting that adverb at the end. I think that's very common. However, in just casual conversation, colloquial, it's you still could hear somebody say, "She decided to immediately quit her job." I almost think when you split the infinitive, it's adding a little emphasis because you're really highlighting immediately. She decided to immediately quit her job. It's still correct. Or the preferred, "The doctor told me to check my blood pressure regularly, but also correct. The doctor told me to regularly check my blood pressure. I'm splitting those infinitives. Something to keep in mind. Did you catch fish today? How would you complete that question? Did you catch some fish today? Or did you catch any fish today? What do you think? A some versus B any. these words. Again, I think when you're looking at it, you're probably going to be able to think about it, pick out the correct answer. However, I notice when I'm in the middle of a conversation, somebody's talking and then they end up just using the wrong word. They'll use any instead of using some or they'll use some when they should use any. So, in this case, excellent tal aa da uh mama, perfect. We're talking about be any. Did you catch any fish today? Let's dig in to some of those nuances. In general, you're going to use some when making affirmative statements. I gave you I'm giving you a couple right there. I have some extra pizza. We have some questions.

In general, you're going to use any when making negative statements or asking questions such as the one that we just looked at. Did you catch any fish today? or a negative statement, I don't want any pizza. Or somebody asking, oh, are there any questions? And then somebody responding, yes, we have some questions. Of course, with English, there are always exceptions. And this is what makes it very confusing. exception would be like you're offering something. Instead of using any, you're going to use some. Would you like some tea? Would you like some coffee? I'm asking a question, but in this case, I'm going to use some. And then there are just some common phrases, useful phrases like that some plus a noun. You're trying to say that something is impressive. That some pig. This is a famous statement from the the book um uh Charlotte uh what is it? Yeah, Charlotte's Web. Um and then and then some is another expression that you may hear. They paid us $1,000 and then some referring to extra things. some exceptions with any when with conjunctions like if or whether it's an affirmative statement but you would use any. Please tell me if you have any questions. So again, are there any questions? But if you use a statement, we have some questions or do you h or I'm making a statement. Please tell me if you have any questions. And then again, this useful phrase, I think there was another one. I didn't really have room, but uh by any means necessary. We must win. By any means necessary, that you're going to do everything you possibly can in order to win. By any means necessary.

What do you think? Which question is grammatically correct? I don't. Well, we'll see. A, who do you believe? B, whom do you believe? Which one is grammatically correct? And notice I'm emphasizing grammatically when I say that. So, that is a bit of a hint. Grammatically correct. Who do you believe or whom do you believe? The fact that I'm probably emphasizing it tells you uh which answer would I'm going for in this case the well somebody put both I guess yeah that that would work grammatically correct that because I'm saying like grammatically correct not just which one is correct you would say be whom whom do you believe why is this well you're going to use who referring to the subject of a sentence For example, who who would you like um or who would like something to drink? If I can just take who a a quick little thing to say if you're trying to figure out which one to use who or whom. If I replace it with a subject like he, she, he would like something to drink. She would like something to drink. That tells me, okay, the subject I should use who or my dog uh who is very friendly. Again, this is a non-restrictive clause. Uh, my dog um who is very friendly plays with children. He is very friendly. She is very friendly. I'm going to use who. Whom refers to the object of a verb or preposition. To whom is the letter addressed? It does it does sound very formal, a little Shakespearean, but once again, if I replace it with an object, the the letter is addressed to him. The letter is addressed to her. I'm gonna use whom. My dog whom children like to pet is very friendly. Children like to pet him. Children like to pet her. We use whom now overwhelmingly when somebody is just having a conversation, people are going to use who. I would say it's even becoming more common in writing. And it's one of those things that you'd have that argument. Not that it's like wrong or right, but is it acceptable or unacceptable to point this out or to give you an example because when we go to engram viewer, this is actually taken from written English, not even spoken English. And we compare these two. Who do you believe versus whom do you believe? You're more likely going to come across who do you believe? And I think especially if you're having a conversation, you're going to hear people say, "Who do you believe?" instead of, "Whom do you believe?" Whom sounds a little more formal. It even sounds a little more old-fashioned. But again, I would say it's still something that would be more common in British English than American English, even though I feel like in the UK you're going to hear a lot of people say, "Who do you believe?" So, I know I I just went through a lot.

These are 12 different grammatical phrases or even grammatical concepts that I want you to keep in mind. If you want to get these notes, please join our community. You can access them and download them. If you're already a part of the community, check your inbox. I've sent them to you. And of course, now is the moment of truth. I don't want you to go away just yet. I want to know how you did on the quiz. So, I'm going to put this question in there. How did you do on the quiz? And I'll give you a few choices. I rocked it and that would be like maybe 100%. Or I did well would be 75% let's say. And well, maybe I'll give you four choices.

Okay. would just be 50%. And I learned a lot of new things with all these lessons. I always just hope that you um learn something new. That is always my goal. And for that, I'd say 25% or less. Let me start the poll. Let me know how you did. I'm always interested to kind of gauge and see where everyone's at. But even if you got all of them right as we dug in to some of those slight nuances, again, my my hope is that you always learn something new. And once again, I want to give a huge shout out to Gabam uh Gabcam for uh that that very generous super chat. Love it.

Um going to go ahead and heart it right there. But let me know what what you think. Let's see what some of the the results are. It seems that for the most part you you guys did pretty well and you knew most of these. If you enjoyed this lesson or you enjoy some of these grammar quizzes, please hit that like button. That tells me that I should do more lessons like this in the future because they're helpful because they're helping you fine-tune your English skills and improving your overall English fluency. a few of well quite a few of you rocked it. I'm uh I don't want to say I'm surprised. I think uh many of you are very proficient in English. So uh but I'm I'm glad to see that for the most part people did well.

You learned something new or you did okay. So, thank you so much for joining me, being with me

LESSON 212 OF 749

As Soon As You Learn Adverb Clauses, Your English Will Instantly Improve!

I'm going to teach you everything that you need to know about adverb clauses. And if you are someone who enjoys improving your grammar skills, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. So, right now, we're going to talk about one of the coolest parts of grammar, adverb clauses. And I really mean that. I say that they're cool because they help you add more details whenever speaking or writing, allowing you to describe how, where, when, or why something happens. So, these adverb clauses, they're good to keep in your back pocket to be able to use at a moment's notice. So, let's break this down step by step. What are adverb clauses? First things first, let's define an adverb clause. This is a group of words that functions like an adverb in a sentence, which means they modify verbs, adjectives, or even other adverbs and give extra information about things like time, reason, condition, or place. But an adverb clause is different than a regular adverb because it has both a subject and a verb. However, an adverb clause is a dependent clause. You need a main clause as well, which means an adverb clause on its own is not a full sentence. I went home because it was raining. Because it was raining, this is our adverb clause. It is not a complete sentence. We need the independent clause. I went home. Now, at the beginning of our adverb clause, we have a subordinating conjunction because. Subordinating conjunctions are words that connect independent and dependent clauses. So, the word because, this is our subordinating conjunction.

And this adverb clause in particular, because it was raining, gives us information and tells us why. And this leads me into the next thing that I want to talk about, the functions of adverb clauses. Let's explore what adverb clauses do. They answer questions like when, why, where, and how. And I want to break this down into six different categories. And we will begin with time. Adverb clauses of time tell us when something happens. They often begin with certain words, those subordinating conjunctions like when, before, after, while, until, as soon as, or by the time. As soon as I get to work, I check my email. This tells us when I'm checking my email or I will call you when I get home. I brushed my teeth before I went to bed. By the time I arrived at the restaurant, everyone had finished eating. These dependent clauses tell us when something happens. And I want you to keep in mind that the subordinating conjunction by the time.

This tells us that the main verb in our independent clause is either the future perfect or the past perfect. By the time I left, they'd rebuilt so much of it. I came as soon as I got word. Evan's mom used to read this to him every night before he went to bed. I know it's a lot to take in right now, but this is when people make small mistakes, especially when writing. So, let's turn our attention to condition. Adverb clauses of condition show us the condition under which something happens. You can go out if you finish your homework. That is the condition for going out. Or I could say, "I usually sleep with the window open unless it's really cold outside." Or, "Provided that I eat a big breakfast, I can skip lunch."

My unpopularity is going to follow me to college, unless you help." She seemed like the best candidate, provided we weren't thinking about her in that moment. So, condition, simple enough. Let's talk about reason. Adverb clauses of reason explain why something happens. And these usually begin with because, since, or as. She studied hard because she wanted to pass the test. So passing the test is the reason why she was studying. Or they canceled the marathon since it was raining. Or I didn't go to the party as I was feeling tired. You got your job because you're hot. Today we are going to team up for sales calls. Andy, since this was your idea, you get to pick first. In these examples, you can really use these subordinating conjunctions interchangeably, but of course, because is by far the most commonly used word. Now, let's continue with purpose, which is a little similar to reason, and sometimes they're lumped together. However, there is a slight difference. So adverb clauses of purpose explain the reason for taking a specific action and often they begin with so that in case in order to or in order that he woke up early so that he would not be late for work or I'm going to write myself a note in case I forget. She studied hard in order to pass the exam or I could say she studied hard in order that she passed the exam. I made you children feel small, confused about your own powers so that I could control you. In case of emergency, please contact Amy Farah Fowler. Just know that in order to and in order that they really have the same meaning, but the sentence structure is slightly different. In order to, you're going to follow that with a base verb and in order that you'll follow that with a subject. Now, in order that it is more formal and maybe you would end up using it more in academic writing and to be honest in spoken English it does sound a little awkward to my ears but that's maybe just me. Anyway, just something to keep in mind. Moving right along.

Contrast. Adverb clauses of contrast show how two actions, ideas, or situations are different and they often begin with although, though, even though, or whereas. Although it was raining, we went for a walk. This introduces a contrast between the rain and going for a walk. I enjoyed the movie, though the ending was a bit predictable. Or I could say, even though we didn't win the competition, we tried our best. I prefer reading novels, whereas my friend prefers watching movies. No, John, you've got enough on your plate. Oh, whereas I have nothing but free time. I remember it as if it were yesterday. Although it was only a few hours ago. Don't worry. Even though we just met you, we think you're right and he's wrong. Because we're talking about grammar, I want you to know that although, though, and even though are really interchangeable, maybe you will use even though if you just want to add some more emphasis. And now that brings us to place. Adverb clauses of place talk about where something happens. And they typically begin with where or wherever. This is the house where I live. Talking about where this happens or wherever you go, that's where you are. It's very philosophical but true. Because wherever you go, Robert's Roth will follow you. You know, when I used to get really sad in the place where I used to live, I would smile and jump up and down and say, "I'm not really here." So, now that we've covered all these different functions, answering where, when, why, and how, let's talk about the position of an adverb clause in a sentence. You should know that adverb clauses are pretty flexible. You can put them at the beginning, in the middle, or at the end of a sentence. But there is a small catch because there is a difference when it comes to writing. If an adverb clause starts a sentence, don't forget to use a comma. When the rain stopped, comma, we went outside. If an adverb clause comes at the end of a sentence, you do not need a comma. We went outside when the rain stopped. To be honest, most of the time adverb clauses are going to come at the beginning or the end of a sentence, but sometimes you can stick them in the middle, especially if you want to add some more details. We went outside when the rain stopped to play. In this case, we're using the adverb clause as a nonrestrictive clause, which means that it can be omitted. We're just adding some more information. Just be mindful that simple mistakes are often made when writing when it comes to the placement of commas. So, the three main takeaways when it comes to adverb clauses, they modify verbs, adjectives, or even other adverbs. They answer questions like when, why, where, and how. And they can also be used and placed at the beginning, middle, or end of a sentence.

I know I just gave you a lot of information about adverb clauses, and I'm sure that you were familiar with some of it already, but still, I hope that you learned something new. And if you did learn something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time.

Ask me ANYTHING about learning English | Q&A w/ Wes

all right hello everyone i think that that we are live so first off i just want to say welcome to this this special lesson i say it's a special lesson because i'm as you can probably tell for people who have watched my videos before i'm not at home right now but i'm this is going to be a q a lesson i want to answer some of your questions any questions that you have related to learning english and the first thing i want to say because this is a bit of a new setup please let me know if everything is working okay if the audio is okay i apologize because i'm not using the same camera that i usually use so that i think it may look a little more grainy and the audio might not be as good as it usually is but that again is because uh because i'm traveling but please say hello to me uh in the chat or even if you're watching this later write to me in the comments i love hearing from new people but i also enjoy hearing from those that have seen from time and time again so i want to give a quick shout out uh say hello to some of you some very familiar faces hello lali gatrudus vicky and gustav um takayao udit sleepwalker glad you guys can join me um everything's okay excellent perfect thank you thank you guys for letting me know so the first question i'm gonna jump right into it um i will i'm gonna take some like member questions i'll go through those first and then i'll try to get through as many as i possibly can and i'll try to go through them quickly the one thing i would ask if you have some questions try to try to make your questions as precise as possible as specific as possible because when they're very broad it's a lot it's a lot more time consuming to try and answer and i want to try to get through as many as possible the first question that i want to answer is actually um vicky gustav gustav had written to me in when i posted that i'm going to do a live lesson and the first question that he asked was about the word advice and wondering about if there is a plural form for this noun and it's a great question because i think it can be very confusing because you have other words like suggestion that has somewhat of a similar meaning and that is it is countable so there is a difference in that advice is considered it's it's an abstract noun because it's not something that you can really picture in your mind and it's a mass noun so it is a non-count noun and when you have a non-count noun you are not going to use it in the plural form so you you cannot say that you would say there are i gave him three pieces of advice and the first thing i would say about this if you're talking about a piece of advice that would be a quantifier and you're typically going to use quantifiers with non-count nouns like a piece of advice or like somebody might say like a a slice of pizza a glass of water and you use those quantifiers with those non-count nouns but the the to go back to what i was saying before above advice and suggestion suggestion is account an accountable noun and you could say i have three suggestions for you and you add that s at the end there is no real relationship i think between those those two words even though they have somewhat of a similar meaning when you learn them it's just a matter of like just learning that vocabulary that okay advice i know the meaning of this it is a non-count noun i'm not going to you there is no plural form suggestion it is a count noun and i can use it in a plural form so it's not i i know it's not probably the best explanation besides just saying that yes advice is non-count suggestion is a count noun but it's just having to learn that and i think over time you'll get a little more familiar with it so um somebody along those lines because this is kind of related to that sing kong asks how do you pronounce um advice and advise so advice the noun uh that c is gonna sound like an s advice advise that's the verb to advise someone and in this case that s is gonna have more of a z sound that voiced z advise i advise you guys to well write me some questions in the chat i advise you to watch some of the other video lessons because i think it'll uh it'll help you so that's related to that so that's why i kind of wanted to to go through that let me go back a little bit to the beginning um uh phil son faraxan has i want to ask how to learn english by watching movies and what i do when i watch movies so i think watching movies or listening to music tv those are great ways to passively learn the language and what i mean by it's uh you're learning passively is that you're not really doing anything you're just watching it but i think to make it more meaningful if you could try to turn it into some active exercise which means that you really have to focus and that you have to do something at the end so if you want to like to give you an example like watching a movie to make it an active exercise is watch a movie and then once it's done write like a short summary what is the movie about and then you're trying to remember what the movie's about you're trying to think of the vocabulary that you would use to to write this summary to so that somebody else would understand what this movie is about and in doing that you're making it

um if you wanted to finish the sentence maybe i could give you a bit more clarity as to what but in that case i think it really depends on the context of the situation but probably you might be able to use them um interchangeably let's see tatiana's how to get advanced inc level of english i'm intermediate and very frustrated yes um i think that this is a common um challenge that i think many learners go through is that and i think it's normal when you start out learning a language it's normal to feel like you're making a lot of progress because it's new because there's so much that you can learn new words for you to learn and then as your skills start to improve i think it really starts to level out perhaps even go down a little where you feel like you're not learning as much and then it goes up kind of slowly the more uh the more advanced your language skills become so i i think if one thing if you're frustrated i think it's good to try to kind of find your motivation again to find ways to get motivated so you can continue learning whether it's trying to stay motivated because you're going to go traveling or you're trying to stay motivated because you're you're getting ready to take some classes so if you can find that motivation to keep it going but yeah i think um i i think it's normal that as your skills really start to improve it is going to level out a little bit um let's see let's go back um it's because i want to get some members lolly ass i always confuse effective and efficient could you give me some examples please so i to me i think if something is very effective i would say it's very useful it's very meaningful so i could say that talking about building vocabulary and people might talk about the method of chunking and i know i'm going off tangent chunking is when you're you're building your vocabulary but you're really learning phrases instead of focusing on a word you're learning um phrases now i could say that well if you use chunking to build your vocabulary it's very effective and i when i say it's effective i mean it would be meaningful and that it's really going to help you to help you improve when i think of the word efficient i think it's more so not about it's meaningful and important but efficient i always think that time is related to that that it's a faster way to do something and you could say well that that is very efficient you're getting the job done and you're really doing it in the the quickest way possible so i think in terms of like uh i think business is a situation a context in which you might hear people use the word efficient like we need to do things efficiently we need to get the job done so that it's done correctly but we need to do it in the shortest amount of time possible so that's one distinction that i'd make between effective and efficient in terms of effective being really meaningful and important and really helpful in what you're doing efficient would be really also time is related to that and you're doing it in the quickest way possible um khan asks what's the difference between jail prison and penitentiary they're really just i really think they're really just synonyms uh i don't know if i guess you could say prison to me is um like really kind of the the building like the institution of prison where people would spend longer periods of time there jail i think just refers to if somebody's in prison they're also in jail but jail refers to the action of being i think you are contained so often times at um a police station a police station may have a jail where they can detain somebody and they keep them there and maybe they are behind some bars but it's not prison prison would be where somebody would permanently be for a longer period of time and i think penitentiary penitentiary unless i might be incorrect but i feel like that's more of a synonym for a prison um vicious ass what is the best way to improve my writing i i think with anything and like the four main skills is just to practice um first off like to try to write as much as you can emails um summaries like i mentioned you could take watching a movie make it an active exercise the other thing that i would mention with writing which i come back to a lot reading reading really helps i think those the same way like listening and speaking i think really complement each other as language skills reading and writing they also complement each other when you're reading you are actually seeing the correct grammar structure being used you might be identifying new vocabulary and you're getting to you get a feel for how they're using that word in context so i think reading is also very important that's going to help you improve your writing skills in the long run even with little things like prepositions because i know prepositions are mistakes simple mistakes that people might make they use the wrong preposition but when you're reading you really you get to see that um let's see i want to go back to sorry i'm kind of going back uh vicky gustav um oh god excited with those german movies uh yes that could be challenging if it's uh from another country um let's see i'm kind of gonna go back through um sorry i know i'm getting a lot um joe brown asks this is a question i think a lot of people have um could you be fluent in english without moving to an english-speaking country to the us or the uk absolutely um i think nowadays i think of course if you live somewhere for many people i'll include myself i think it's mentally it might feel easier to learn the language because you're there and you have that motivation as soon as you walk out the door you know that you need to speak that language which is a great motivation to continue like okay i need to practice i need to read i need to listen and you're really more motivated to continue learning i think though when you live in another country one of the value the one of the great values which i think was more relevant a long time ago was the amount of exposure you can get because you go somewhere you're listening to the language you have to speak it you're getting a lot of exposure to the language but nowadays with like right now you guys we could we could not do this 30 years ago but right now you guys are watching me from somewhere else in the world you're listening to me speak english you're writing to me in the chat those are using two language skills right there it's easy to get a lot of exposure to the language without having to go live in the us or live in the uk the real question would be then be um like somebody else had asked before about them and i i said motivation talking about moving from intermediate to advanced is having that motivation so if you are disciplined and motivated then you could take time surround yourself with the language as much as possible even from like your your own country and you're constantly listening to english reading in english the only other challenge that might be a little more difficult could be the the speaking part of it and maybe you're having trouble trying to find somebody to practice speaking um with but that would be the only other suggestion which actually could be a good segue i did want to tell you guys that there is still one week left if you would like to get a little more speaking practice you could still enroll in my speaking course which is called speak up it's all about helping you speak confidently clearly naturally enrollment is open enrollment is going to close i think on august 9th there's a link in the description i'll throw a link in the chat here as well um i thought it'd be a good segue somebody was talking about like to get more speaking practice it is an online class you can also use the code let me write this code speak 10 to get a 10 percent discount all right if you have any questions also email me interactive info at interactiveenglishvideos.com um but we do classes once a week for an hour long you're speaking with me and your other classmates there are weekly lesson previews pronunciation video lessons there's also a lot included i'll mention this a little bit later on but i thought it was a good segue into talking about that we're talking about practicing your speaking skills let's see we have some other questions gosh we're getting a lot sorry if i can't go through these as quickly as i would like simple guys said we should create an english niche for ourselves to improve our english skills yeah like i i don't know if your suggestion would be like an english niche like finding something a topic something you are as far as motivation is concerned to help continue your learning and do that i know that i i'm a big proponent of like um finding a topic focusing in on that which is again what we do in the speaking course we're just doing one topic a week learning some vocabulary related about it related to it talking about that topic and i do the same with some of those other video lessons i don't know for those of you who have followed the channel for a while and i haven't done them recently and i need to do another one because i always attach it to like some fundraising event but i would do like reading and we would i would choose a topic could be about education and we'd look at different articles related to education and i would just pick out words and highlight words and vocabulary and the idea that as we go through those articles typically we find the same words like that you again and again and again within like different articles about the same topic and that's a great way to build your vocabulary which is i know a long way a long explanation getting back to like finding like your niche um let's see uh scar this clarissa s is the is there a word called thrice or three times like twice um i think the short answer yes but it's not used i would tell you to use um uh just say three times thrice i think it's old english i feel like people might use it nowadays to kind of be funny or charming um but it's i think it's more old english and it's not something you're really gonna hear i would just say stick with three times you're not going to confuse people that way um so he says uh i'm on deep course i usually make more mistakes in writing how could i improve that what i would do when i would teach writing and i know it can be a little more challenging on your own would be to to kind of take keep a writing journal and it's like a journal of mistakes and what i would suggest is um you'd write a paragraph about a topic and then go back through your writing and try to self-correct and what i mean by that is instead of just reading and looking for all the different mistakes take one thing at a time like spelling and go through just look for spelling mistakes nothing else and see if you can find any and then go back to the beginning and then look for um well maybe like capitalization and punctuation and did you make any mistakes did you remember to capitalize all the the first letter of the first word of each new sentence go back look for mistakes with articles a and and the did you use them correctly and see if you can self-correct and find those mistakes and then make a chart and write how many mistakes you have for each one and then do the same thing for um british english american english i i don't think it really matters both are accepted both are okay i i'm not sure if you're having i don't think one there's nothing that's incorrect about it i i don't know if it would cause some kind of confusion um or somebody might notice that if you say especially in the same sentence if you i'm trying to think um okay i just recently had a lesson talking about that and i'll just give you an example with the word i i would say in the u.s advertisement in british english you would say advertisement same with in the us people would say tomatoes in the uk tomato so if you said something like i just saw an advertisement for tomatoes then maybe that might cause somebody to to kind of think about that for a second it's not wrong um if you're using if you're pronouncing them in the same sentence um but i would not say it's not incorrect or anything but somebody might notice it or or pick up on that and that it's a little unique um but i really don't think i would i don't want to to say that you you kind of need to choose one or the other and that's what you need to go for i think it's good to learn and understand that there are different pronunciations but among different varieties i'll give you an example it's very interesting because i'm traveling right now with my family and in that same lesson i talked about um aluminum in the u.s and aluminium in the rest of the world pretty much english-speaking world and we're in italy right now and they had asked they said um to my parents if they would like um an aluminium uh aluminium box to take it away to take some food to go my parents were very confused by this and i had to explain to him that um you know they thought it might have been uh you know the the italian english accent and i was saying no no no this is aluminium it's it's the same word it's just in british english um but i thought that was interesting because i had just done a lesson about that recently uh let's see here's an answer uh again um oh yeah you say if you start learning american english should you only keep learning american english no i don't think so i i think i personally i think it's great to get exposure to as many different english varieties as possible and i would even include like english as a second language i think it's good to learn like there you know there is a um a french english accent i think it's good for for other learners in other countries to kind of understand that to know to get exposure to that um i i just that's just my opinion but i think it's good uh sorry if i mispronounced names i'd have a deeper voice when speaking more confidently like you i really uh i really don't know i didn't know if you think i have a deep voice maybe um but uh possibly i feel like maybe people do relate the the tone or intonation as a confidence thing possibly a deeper voice maybe you would just need to speak more from your chest uh but i don't know if that's really necessary for for building your confidence i think if you're looking about uh talking about building your confidence when speaking i i think just it goes back to building your vocabulary having discussions and conversations before having getting that practice because when you have practice if you're talking about something like um i don't know even like climate change and that's a that can be a more specific topic but when you have that discussion with somebody else maybe a month passes by and you have another discussion another conversation about climate change you've already practiced it once before even though it's a different conversation you had that practice before and you're going to feel a little more confident when it comes to expressing your thoughts and opinions and ideas and that's where i say like i do think speaking practice it is important especially when it's related to confidence let's see not ask what is the difference between cut down and cut back so those are both phrasal verbs to cut down um i would say i would typically think people might often use it as a three-word phrasal verb like i i for me i need to cut down on chocolate and my my chocolate intake i think i eat too much i need to cut down on it like reduce the amount and that says like cut back i would say i need to cut back on yeah i think cut back has a similar meaning you would say like i need to cut back on this you need to reduce them out i also think like yeah to lessen would be to lessen something so i think in that context even the one i just gave you now that i'm thinking about it off the top of my head i could use them it has the same meaning i need to cut down on chocolate i need to cut back on chocolate same meaning like you need to consume less of it you need to reduce the amount so in that case you could use them interchangeably i can't think of any reason thing off the top of my head um that would be okay this is a completely two different context um if i do think of one um i'll i'll come back to this um annie asks can you give us a lesson about funny phrases in english i don't understand when i'm watching english sitcom so maybe i'll think about that as funny i'm not sure what phrases somebody might consider funny i did a lesson before about some strange idioms and i think that could count as like um funny phrases because they are a bit unusual for example like the idiom and i think most of the time probably you might be referring to idioms like somebody saying hold your horses and if you tell somebody hold your horses it just means to like you know wait a moment give me a moment hold your horses somebody's being impatient you tell them to hold your horses um all right let's go back i'm going to move back a little bit um and see if you guys oh gosh maybe i'm getting a little behind in the questions all right so sleep rs what's the difference between like not real versus not realistic so real and realistic i mean they are both um they're both adjectives but i would say that again so i think more if you're talking about realistic it's used in that sense about whether or not something is practical or not um let's see trying to think uh oh ola alej says would you do you can entirely make an entire video about academic writing how to do introduction development conclusions yeah i i thought about that i did um a lesson before um about academic writing and it proved to be pretty popular and i think a lot of people enjoyed it and it made me realize okay i should probably go back to that talk a little bit more about writing if let's see if you guys are looking for this um improve your academic writing if you haven't seen it i'll link it right there um somebody else was asking about like those funny phrases and i said i did like strange and weird idioms um i'll throw that in the chat as well so i think these could be considered some funny phrases let's see um what else do we have kind of moving backwards uh mike says instead i feel like you have a very clear voice um well thank you i appreciate it i'm glad i'm glad that again the lessons uh if you understand my uh my pronunciation the way i explain things that makes me well makes me feel happy first of all because yes i hope that the lessons are easy to follow and understand um as like a lot of the explanations um cristina says hi it's great to to be here great to have you here um out of the blue you've turned up on my screen it's the first live class well welcome christina i like the i like that expression too out of the blue uh if you're not familiar for those of you if you're not familiar with that phrase if something happens like out of the blue it's just like all of a sudden or suddenly um and it was like all of a sudden and it's also something that wasn't expected and it's like i just showed up out of the blue that it was not expected and then i'm here um so yanika asks what is the best way to learn idioms i i think again idioms are probably

it's going to be something you're probably going to hear more in conversation because i think the issue with idioms is not so much learning the meaning but then like you mentioned to use them naturally and use them speaking because i think sometimes you learn the meaning but that does not mean that you can just substitute it and then use it just like that other like maybe like another word if you say something is similar so i think that's the that can be the real challenge about trying to use them in context and i think the best way to get used to that would just be more listening i think if you could find uh i did a lesson a while back talking about books um and one of the books that uh i mentioned was speak english like uh and speak english like an american that was the title of the book but the book was all about american idioms and the way they taught idioms was all in dialogue so they were kind of giving you that in writing that dialogue you could see how they're using the idiom in context and i thought that was very helpful for for trying to teach somebody idioms because you're actually able to see it in writing i think that really helps so i think again more practice we do do that i do do that do do in the speaking course we talk about some idioms and that's kind of one thing we practice using them in conversation in discussion and trying to get that speaking practice uh let's see um let's see what do we use expression what ripple effects felipe asks what is the like ripple effects so if you're talking about the the ripple effects it's another similarity i mean like kind of like the the side effects so you have like your cause and effect and like your the the main effect the ripple effects would be like what are some of the other things that happened because of this thing and you would say well it kind of just continued and then you have those ripple effects uh trying to think of a another context or example so it's like the the the continuing of like results based on some action and it has these ripple effects so maybe you do something and it affects somebody else but maybe it continues affecting other people and you could say those are some of the ripple effects

let's see what else do we have uh i think are we still in milan yes i actually currently am still in milan at this very moment but we will be we will be leaving shortly which is sad it's not going to be a very long vacation um emanuela is such a flirt what is the opposite of flirt in this sentence um so if you say somebody is a flirt they're again it means they're flirtatious they're attracted to somebody they're trying to make some suggestions romantically to show that they're they like this person um i don't know like uh what would be the opposite if you say somebody is a flirt i would just think of like saying somebody's cold because if somebody's a flirt i think that's like they're friendly but they're overly friendly and maybe in like a little bit of romantic way but if somebody's cold yeah it means they're unfriendly and there's maybe nothing romantic about it um that would just be the word that that comes to my mind um let's see what else i'm gonna use how to use when all is said and done so i think this is a good example i had mentioned chunking before about learning a phrase when all is said and done you could think about that phrase and it has the same most the time you're going to use this to start a statement or a sentence and when all said and done it's basically means the same thing well when everything is finished or when everything is in order when all is said and done then we're going to do this so it's really just a phrase that um means like kind of starting out well when when we're finished doing things when everything's finished then we're going to move on to the next thing so maybe you might use it at work

it's really helped them especially if they're having to write in a more like professional setting situation and they don't want to make mistakes but i've even noticed on like emails like gmail when you're doing it it'll make some notations of some grammar mistakes and i've always thought that was decent as well so yeah i think it can be good for practicing writing something and then seeing what mistakes uh come up so i think yeah i i would recommend you know any any of those apps i don't know if it's something like you'd have to pay for or not so um just keep that in mind let's see i do i know it is getting a little a little late and i kind of did want to circle back again and just mention to you guys if you do want to practice your speaking if you want to get more speaking practice and work on you know developing your speaking fluency i'm getting ready to start the next course of speak up there's still one week left if you'd like to enroll um there's the little well my little ad for it right there i need to change that picture i've used it quite a bit but that is what the course is all about each week we talk about a different topic we're going to focus in on discussion about one topic we do a lot of different speaking activities we're going to build your vocabulary because we look at vocabulary that's related to the topic trying to use some of the words and phrases idioms use them in context correctly that's what it's all about so there's it's a weekly lesson each week this one is eight weeks long for more information please check out uh the speak up course page it's down below in the description i'll also link it right here in the chat and if you want to sign up you can use there's a voucher code which is speak 10 to get a 10 percent discount alright so check that out if you have um if you have any questions i'll write down questions email me at info at interactive english videos dot that is the email i spelled at because i don't know if it'll let me write the actual email in this chat i'm not sure so um check that out if you would like to join um i personally would like to join myself but i honestly don't have any credit cards for drawing yeah it is you would need to make an online payment so if you don't have any credit cards i know somebody else had the same issue as well and they contacted me and i can accept the payment through paypal as well if you have access to that but it would be an online payment yes um but otherwise i know you guys asked a lot of questions sorry if i did not get to some of your questions i'm going to do this again in the future i'll try to answer as many as possible what i would suggest is that please write the questions in the comments because that always it gives me ideas for future video lessons and i'll try to if it's if i can write a quick comment and answer the question i'll try to do that as well so if i didn't get to your question please write it down in the comments but i really appreciate um well felipe if you guys have any questions about the course you can write them now what subjects can we chat in the course so the the the topics are predetermined like they think the first week the topic we're talking about food another week um the next week we're talking about being descriptive using the vocabulary that you already know and building vocabulary that's kind of what the topic there's another like a guided speaking practice we do talking about relationships work is one of the topic so some of the topics are a little broad but again i think that's okay because these are topics that come up in everyday conversation and we will focus in on vocabulary um takayo great to see you takayah takayo is a student at uh speak up thank you thank you sleepwalker give some shout outs rosa linda thank you guys for joining me joe brown maggie um great to see you if you feel like your writing is stagnant again just keep keep practicing try to find some active writing activities i know that can be a little challenging it'd be like you're giving yourself homework but i think it can help if you kind of want to jump start things and get things going um let's see all right so thank you uh rahel good to see you guys hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will i'll see you next week i'll be back for another lesson kareem loli um all right i'm going to get going and i will see you next time

Athletic Words about Sports & the Olympics that You Need to Know

all right hello what is up guys welcome to another awesome lesson because today I have a lesson for you that is very relevant to what's happening now because we're going to talk about the Olympics the Winter Olympics in Korea have been going on for about two weeks now and I believe they end tomorrow so what I wanted to do was talk to you about some important words that we use when we're discussing the Olympics that we always use when the Olympics come up every two years so please please please in the comments let me know let me know where you're joining us from we love it when you guys participate and get involved in these lessons so in the comments write your name and tell me where you're from because when we're talking about the Olympics it's something it's an event that includes so many countries from all over the world people from all over the world just like you so please write to us in the comments let me know your name and where you're from now today we are going to talk about Olympic vocabulary and not just vocabulary that is for the Winter Olympics but any Olympics vocabulary that words that you would hear if we're talking about the Summer Olympics the Winter Olympics and and this is good to know because every two years the Olympics come up and many of us watch it and it's good to be able to have conversation we hear these words when we're listening to the TV we read about these words when we're reading articles online about the Olympics so these are some very useful vocabulary words that you can use now for the rest of your life because you will always hear these you always hear these words especially every two years when the Olympics come around so again please in the comments let me know where you're joining us from if I don't see everybody

I'm sorry Michael Billy draw Marco thanks for joining us glad to have you guys with us today so today I'm gonna give you these words I'm gonna tell you the part of speech I'm gonna give you the pronunciation of the word as well as the meaning and and then we'll talk about it a little bit more and I might have some questions for you guys as well that I want you to write the answers and practice using these words in the comments so let's just jump right into it the first word that I want to talk to you about is this one right here and that is anthem so this is a noun it's two syllables and the stress is on that first syllable and thumb anthem and an anthem is is just a song but it's a song that is identified by a group or nation mostly especially when we're talking about the Olympics you always hear something as the national anthem each country would have a national anthem it is your country's song and you hear the national anthem at sporting events definitely like the Olympics you might hear them in school when you went to school they might play the national anthem so please in the chat in the comments let me know what is your country's national anthem tell us the name it's always great to learn about other countries and other places for example in the United States which is where I am from the national anthem is called the star-spangled banner' I am NOT going to sing it for you because I am a horrible singer but that is the name of our national anthem in the United States the star-spangled banner and you hear this especially at sporting events if you go to baseball or basketball games they always play the national anthem before it begins and I tried to find as many different flags down there to represent the different countries I apologize if your flag is not on there that was the best image I could find that that showed a lot of different countries on there so again an anthem is it is the uplifting song and I want you to tell me what is your country's national anthem the next word that I have for you and these words are just in alphabetical order they're not in order of importance the next word is this one amateur which I just realize em comes before n so this word is not in alphabetical order but an amateur is a person who does an activity for pleasure and not as a professional this is a noun because we're talking about a person it's three syllables and the stress again is on that first syllable and that second syllable has that schwa sound that I am sure amateur the other thing I will say about the pronunciation of this word is most Americans would say it like this most Americans like me would say sure they don't pronounce that T in there and mature some I think maybe more in British English you might hear the the T amateur that is also another pronunciation for this word both are acceptable so again an amateur is somebody who does an activity for pleasure and not as a professional so for example in the winter skiing is always a popular activity and you might say these people are skiing for fun and they are just amateurs now the one thing I would say about this is that when I think of the word amateur I think about somebody who is trying to become a professional

the people in the Olympics they are all professionals they are not amateurs but amateurs are usually they're still very talented at an activity and I think they're they're trying to become professionals so it's not like I have never been surfing before and it's not like I would surf for one time and then say oh yeah yeah I'm an amateur no I I would be horrible it's because I've never done it but so an amateur is somebody who's not a professional they just do it for fun but I also think maybe they're trying they would like to become a professional maybe one day in the future now when we're talking about sports this next word is very popular it's very common and it's something that happens in the Olympics and it's often discussed and that is if somebody is banned so it can be used as either a verb the Olympics the Olympic Committee banned the athletes it could also be used as an adjective to say that someone is banned and this means that they are prohibited or they the people forbid this person to take place in the competition they cannot participate in the competition they cannot be a part of the competition because they have been banned now the reason that somebody might become banned from an activity is because they were doping and this is again a little more controversial when we talk about sports in general as well as the Olympics so doping is a noun two syllables that stress is on the first syllable doping and it became very popular in the news because of that guy down there who is Lance Armstrong who was caught doping and then it really got a lot of attention and this is something that also happens in the Olympics as well and it is using drugs to increase performance and that's why a lot of these games like the Olympics they will test people they will give them drug tests because they want to make sure that they are not doping and that they are not using drugs so that they can perform better and they can do better at their athletic competition so if somebody is doping they shouldn't because then they might get banned from the sport so you don't want to be banned so people shouldn't be doping another word when a very common word that I think we all many of us know when you think about the Olympics is this one right here and it is a medal now it's a noun it's two syllables metal and a metal is like that picture right down there it's a reward it is a piece of metal given to honor a person action or event now when I was putting this together I thought it would be useful to talk about the pronunciation because the word metal meed al it sounds very similar in American English to metal M et al so a metal is a piece of metal and you might be listening to me and being like wait wait what are you what are you talking about they sound you're saying the same word and yes they they would be homonyms because in American English this is definitely in American English when the T sound is in the middle of a two syllable word they might call it though they would call it the flap T and that flap T sound is more like a D sound so M et al the T sound is in the middle and it sounds like metal in American English another example would be water wate are again if I say it because I'm from the United States and I speak with an American accent I would just say water it sounds like that D sound so that is a little bit of a pronunciation a little bit of a pronunciation explanation for you between these but a metal again is something that people win and the people that we in metals during the Olympics our participants and a participant it is a person and it's a noun and it is four syllables participant and the stress is going to be on that second syllable participant participant if you guys want if you're at home I think it always helps when I say the words repeat after me all right it's a good way to imitate the accent and practice your pronunciation participant and a participant as you can see right here is a person that takes place in something so the people that are the athletes that are taking part in the Olympics they are participants so it's it's for any athletic competition so these people right here they are running a marathon and they are all participants because they are taking place they are taking part of this race they are participants now my question for you is have you been a participant in some event or athletic competition or an activity I think most of us have been participants so I want to hear from you guys so in the comments let me know what what are some what what have you been a participant in what have you done and you're like okay yeah I'm participating I want to participate in this activity or in this sport now when we're talking about the Olympics another word that you may you probably see this at the Olympics but maybe you're like I did not know what this was and it is this word right here which is a podium and a podium it is a noun and it's three syllables the stress is on that first syllable po podium podium podium and this is a platform for people to receive their met and this happens at the end of the Olympic competitions they would have a podium and the people that finished first second and third will get up on the podium like this little picture down there so now that when I was putting this lesson together I was thinking about have I ever been on a podium and the answer to that I can say unfortunately is no I have never stood on a podium and I think this is definitely something that you see in the Olympics because they would have a podium but when you're just doing other competitions especially team sports sometimes many times they won't just have a podium they'll give out medals or they'll have some ceremony but there might not be a podium but yeah I've never I've done many athletic competitions but I've never been on one I've never done one with a podium where somebody was up on a podium another Olympic word another great Olympic word that I have for you is this one right here preliminaries and it is a noun it's a longer word it has five syllables preliminary preliminary preliminary the stresses on that second syllable but it's not that it's not a very strong emphasis preliminary and this is a contest to determine the finalists of a competition so if you guys have been watching the Olympics I don't have you been watching the Olympics I've been I've been watching it a little bit but not a lot I've been getting updates about it but you have different competitions and you don't just have one competition you'd have one competition and these are the preliminaries and the winners of those races or competitions they go on to the next one and they keep doing that until they have the final competition and that is when they determine who gets first second or third place so the events that lead up to the final one we would say those are the preliminaries you would also could use it as an adjective if you're talking about the preliminary round so for example like in the World Cup they have the preliminary rounds and then you have the tournament so again it could be used as an adjective to describe like around preliminary round but most of the time we could refer to it as the preliminaries and it's a noun and these are the competitions now with each Olympics you have all of those athletes country athletes from all over the world and we could say that those athletes are representatives representatives it is a noun and this is a person who represents a country a person who represents the the country and the Olympic competition it has five syllables and the stress is on that third syllable that Zen that s has it more of a Z sound representative representative representative and again every every time the Olympics is held the athletes are representatives of that country now I think it's also important when we're talking about representatives you in the Olympics the athletes are representatives of the country but you could have a representative of just about anything somebody who represents something else so you could have a representative for a company you could have a representative for a school so it's somebody that represents this business this group and in the case of the Olympics it is the people the athletes that represent the the countries in competition another word that I have for you another Olympic word which is also relevant to many many sports that people would play or they would watch would be spectator and a spectator is a person so it's a noun it has three syllables and the stress is on the first syllable spec teh - spectator and these are people that watch these athletic competitions so if you have ever gone to a basketball game or you went to a soccer match a football match any type of athletic competition if you were watching then you were a spectator of that competition so for example the people that are watching they are spectators they are not participants in the competition they are watching and they are spectators so I want to know tell me in the comments what what sport do you like to watch you can tell me use it in a sentence I am a spectator of what which sport what's what's your favorite sport what are some sports that you guys like to watch I am a spectator of for me I'm a spectator of football I'm also a spectator of basketball I enjoy watching basketball some of you guys sharing with us hello if you guys are joining us we're talking about Olympic vocabulary so hello Patricia Michael Amano Ciro James great to have you guys so a spectator again is a person that watches an athletic competition another word when we talk about sports and athletics would be sponsor so this is a noun two syllables and the stress is on the first syllable sponsor and a sponsor many times after the Olympics these athletes can they're very well known they can become famous and then a company will sponsor the athlete they will say hey we will be your sponsor we are going to pay you money to promote our products so I tried to give that find the picture down there of maybe this this this this woman down there she is a athlete in the Olympics and she wins a medal and then coca-cola asked her say hey we want to be your sponsor we will be your sponsor we will pay you to drink coke and this is something that I think you see a lot after the Olympics Winter Olympics and Summer Olympics right afterwards you see some of these athletes in commercials you see them promoting different products because they have a sponsor for that product another great great word when we're talking about the Olympics and sports and competition is sportsmanship and this is a noun that's three syllables the stress is on the first syllable sportsmanship sportsmanship and whenever you play a sport that you would hope that everybody has there is always sportsmanship that there is fairness there is honesty when you are having these different competitions sportsmanship and a lot of times people will show their sportsmanship by shaking hands after the competition because it was a good competition and you know it was fair and somebody wins somebody loses but it's always good to show sportsmanship another great word when we talk about the Olympics is standings now when you think of standings this is something that is relevant to all pretty much all sports because it is the ranking of teams or individuals in a order in the order of ability or achievement so basically the standings tell us at this moment at this time who is first second third fourth fifth those are the standings and as the competition goes on maybe the standings will change but when you talk about the list of teams or individuals when they put them in order those those are standings you would say oh what are the standings so I have a question for you and I don't know how much you have been watching these Winter Olympics but I want you to tell me which country is leading the Winter Olympics if you look at the standings right now which country has the most medals in the Olympics I want you to write that in the write that in the comments I want to see how how much how much you guys have been paying attention to these Olympics another Olympic word that you would hear at the beginning of the Olympics is this one right here and that is a torch so before the Olympics they always light the Olympic flame and that's basically what starts the Olympics the Winter Olympics as well as the Summer Olympics and they have this relay race where people are carrying the torch and they get there and then they light the Olympic flame and the Olympics begins so a torch is just a simply put it's right there it's a large flame on a stick so when you're talking about a torch you're talking in the Olympics you're talking about a stick with a with a flame on top of it now a torch can also be used to talk about like a flashlight some people might refer to a flashlight as a torch that is also a torch but when we're talking about Olympic vocabulary this is what people would refer to when they're talking about a torch another word is this is a good word when again talking about the Olympics or any kind of sports is venue it is a noun it's two syllables and the stress is on the first syllable then you Venu Venu and this is the place where an event is held now when we're talking about a venue you could be you could say something like oh you know well what's the venue for the Winter Olympics well the venue is South Korea maybe you're referring to a country I think most the time people are referring to a more specific place because they're talking about an actual event that is happening so they're talking about a certain competition they may say well where is the venue and the venue might be in a stadium you're going to have the competition in a stadium this is the venue or maybe the venue is on a field and you are going to have the competition on a field and this is the venue but a venue is just again it is the place where the event is held so I am going to review those words with you guys one more time quickly for those of you who are just joining us or joining us a little later yes yes I see your comment yes you guys are right about those standings Norway is leading right now they have the most they have the most medals in the Olympic competition right now so let's review these words quickly and these are words that you hear with the Olympics whether you're talking about the Winter Olympics or the Summer Olympics and they they're also very relevant to sports in general so we talked about this word right here and anthem I asked you guys about your country's national anthem which is the song the uplifting song of a country if we if somebody is does a sport for an activity for pleasure or maybe they want to become professional in the future future we would say that they are amateurs they are amateur athletes and if somebody is prohibited from participating in a sport or activity you would be banned that person is banned they to prohibit or forbid somebody from participating and maybe they were banned I told you because they were doing what do you remember they were doping maybe so if somebody's doping and they're using drugs to enhance their performance then they might get banned from participating in the activity and when we think of the Olympics very common thing we just talked about were medals that you win medals for your country and these are pieces of metal usually you'd have either gold or silver or bronze and they're given to somebody to honor their participation for winning an event or a competition the people that take part in something in these competitions they are participants and I asked you guys if you have ever been a participant of an activity last year I did a marathon and I was a participant we also have a podium which in the Olympics is a platform where people can get their medals podiums and the competitions that lead to the final competition those are preliminaries they are their contest to determine the finalists of a competition I told you that athletes in the Olympics they are representatives of their country they represent their country but again representative you could have a representative of a government a representative of accompanying a representative of school there are many types of representatives the people that watch the sport competitions they are spectators and I had asked you guys about which sport are you a spectator of I am a spectator of basketball and American football and who

many of you might be like what American football but yes I am a spectator I like watching those competitions and also the people that are the best athletes in the world they usually have a sponsor some company pays this person to promote their products so the most famous athletes in the world LeBron James Cristiano Ronaldo they all have a sponsor they have companies paying them a lot of money to promote their products so this is something that we see all the time in in in our countries no matter which country you're in because most countries have certain sports that they play and they have athletes that are really good and they have a sponsor and when we're playing these sports we should always be fair and we should have good sportsmanship and after the competition has ended doesn't matter if you won it doesn't matter if you lost you should show good sportsmanship and usually congratulate the other person shake hands and then you know just try to try to just move on with your life I don't know but have good sportsmanship I had asked you about who is who has the most medals in this Olympics and most of you all of you said Norway does because in the standings right now it is the ranking of teams but in this case with a ranking of countries in the order of their achievement in the order of who has won the most medals and right now yes Norway is winning the Winter Olympics they have the most medals they are number one in the standings at the beginning of Olympics they light the Olympic flame using a torch which is a flame on a stick and then I told you that depending on the event it has a venue it is a place where an event is held so if you're talking about sports the venue might be a stadium the venue might be a field the venue might be a gym but you you could also use this talking about any any event so for example like a concert if there's going to be a music performance somewhere you might ask somebody be like huh where's the venue where is this event taking place and then somebody could tell you the you where is the venue so I hope that you learn some new words today again these are great words when you're talking about sports and the Olympics especially the Olympics doesn't matter if it's the Summer Olympics or the Winter Olympics you can always use these words and I thank you thank you thank you guys so much for joining me today thank you Rosa James Franco Khalid jr. thank you guys for being here please please please if you enjoyed this lesson like and share it and I want to hear from you guys all as always you know write to us in the comments I want to know which is your favorite Olympics do you like the Summer Olympics or do you like the Winter Olympics and why which do you prefer or maybe you don't like the Olympics that's okay to write to us in the comments let us know we love hearing from you guys and as always try to join our social media classes right down there we are active on all of those sites it's a great way to practice and improve your English skills so thank you

Avoid Saying "I disagree." | Use these phrases to build your vocabulary

hey how's it going you know I'm doing pretty well how are you not bad you know it's a beautiful day out I'm thinking about going for a walk it's always good to get outside right I disagree okay you know not an outdoors person I understand but what are you going to do for lunch I'm thinking Pizza everyone loves pizza I disagree huh how about uh music music is good yeah but I I Just Disagree look I I understand understand that you don't like any of those things but you should try to add a little flavor to your vocabulary and learn different ways to disagree with someone I disagree oh my God okay I am going to help you so let's learn some common and useful ways to disagree with someone and these are phrases that you can use in everyday conversation but I think the one thing that we can all agree on is that you should subscribe to the channel turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so one thing that you can say when you want to disagree is I beg to differ and this is a polite way to disagree so let's say that you don't know someone you don't want to seem too aggressive and say oh no I I disagree with you so this is a great phrase that you can use I beg to differ you were a colossal ass hat oh no I beg to differ oh the three of us I was by far the most supportive I got to be honest with you there's nothing here too spectacular oh I beg the diffa my father took great pride in his appearance he doesn't buy happiness I beg to differ who bring me the Wall Street Journal to fight to the death now

I have had people ask me if it's okay to say I beg to disagree and it's just not as common used we can check out engram viewer which allows us to see how frequently different words and phrases are used and as you can see it's much more common to just say I beg to differ now if you were to tell me that improving your speaking skills is not that important I would say I beg to differ I think it's very important that you practice and improve your speaking skills and if that's the way you feel you should check out my speaking course click on the link down Below in the description the course is all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally each week there is a different speaking topic you will learn vocabulary related to that topic we warm up each lesson with pronunciation or connected speech we do a variety of engaging speaking activities and I'll teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases so check out that link down below if you'd like to sign up or learn more about the course and I just hope to speak to you soon let's continue with more useful ways to say I disagree and another polite and more friendly way to tell someone this is just to say I don't see it that way or that's not the way I see it you are letting this person know that you disagree and just see things differently again it's polite it's not rude and you can say this to anyone so I I always tell you that you should hit the like button and I hope that you agree and go ahead and do that but let's say that you disagree you can tell me that's not the way I see it and I would say that's okay I'm still going to help you build your vocabulary and give you some more examples using these phrases which makes you the biggest liar of History see it that way but I hear the chatter people saying there's something wrong with us not the way I see it grow me up why because everybody else is that's not the way I see it you could also say I have a different perspective or I have a different point of view in this case perspective and point of view they're really synonyms you're talking about the way that you view something this is another way to politely tell someone that you disagree and have a different opinion and personally I think these are great phrases if you're having a debate or a discussion with a friend a colleague a family member because you're you want to respect someone else's opinion while at the same time Express disagreement let's think of a topic so I can give you some examples uh like climate change if one person says we need to have many more regulations to address climate change a person might say well I have a different point of view or if someone says well we can't have too many regulations because it's going to hurt economic growth and another person responds well I have a different perspective so these are great phrases to use in that context to express disagreement now on the flip side if someone you know makes a comment like this pizza is the best you're not really going to use one of these phrases you're not really going to say well I have a different perspective it's going to sound out of place in that context so think about using these phrases with more meaningful discussions when you're talking about the way you view some topic the second sons are foreign soldiers brought here by a foreign Queen to destroy our city and our history I understand I have a different perspective of course you like him cuz he was the good guy me I got a different perspective I think I'm making a jumpsuit okay I have a different point of view I represent someone who's been living a regular everyday mom life and I have looked at this thing like 100 different ways from my point of view from their point of view 98 others and no bottom line I'm in the wrong then we have with all due respect this is a very polite and formal way to disagree with someone and often you would use this when disagreeing with a person of authority and if you watch law shows I'm sure that you have heard this phrase the judge is a person of authority and if someone disagrees with the judge they may say you with all due respect we ask you to enforce the subpoena with all due respect your honor Chloe Decker is not on trial uh all due respect your honor but the witness is not just one small element of the state's case but you could also use this in business if you want to disagree with your boss or even with family members in-laws you disagree you want to be a little more polite maybe a little more formal you could say with all due respect and then tell them what it is that you disagree with he's in position for the drop pull him out now all due respect my team specializes in these situations with all due respect since you don't speak for all of us we should put it to a vote and then see where we stand Sir with all due respect the first thing that you taught me when you came to the 99 is that we're a team I see your point but that's a good point but where I see where you're coming from but and notice how I'm emphasizing the word but because there are different ways that you can introduce this phrase and really you're acknowledging what someone says and then using the word but to express disagreement it's polite it's not too confrontational and you don't have to say but I disagree you can say but and then give your counter argument so maybe you tell me that you don't think it's very important to learn the different phrases I might say I understand where you're coming from but learning these different phrases will help you improve your speaking fluency by allowing you to be more accurate in certain situations I see your point but I I kind of value the sleeping pill that's a good point but no you're getting Dr no like I can't go I'm super hung over right now you could also say I don't think that's quite right this is a great way to disagree with someone because you think what they're saying is wrong or incorrect however it's not necessarily rude so here are some incorrect things that someone might say and you can respond with this phrase I think the Earth is flat I don't think that's quite right or

American English and British English are exactly the same I don't think that's quite right and then this is what I look like when I take my shirt off and you could say with all due respect I don't think that's quite right and you are absolutely right that this is not what my stomach looks like honey we invented lacrosse I don't think that's right every single snowflake is exactly alike I don't think that's right no it's true just like fingerprints NBC News has the problem Oh I don't think that's right and then if you want to get a little more aggressive you could say I'd say the exact opposite or it's the exact opposite so now we're starting to get a little more confrontational because not only are you telling someone that you disagree you're saying the opposite is true and this is a common collocation with the word opposite the exact opposite so in this case you are certainly letting someone know that you disagree don't think I'm hot enough to go out with a guy like Glenn no no I'm saying exactly the opposite it's a malfunction a bug it's exactly to the opposite don't escalate rules are meant to be broken it's the exact opposite of what they're meant for put animal on my picturing a horse o the exact opposite actually what was the opposite of a horse seahorse I completely disagree so this again is a little more confrontational because we're just taking our original phrase and we're emphasizing our disagreement using an adverb and there are some common adverb verb collocations you can tell someone I absolutely disagree or I totally disagree or I strongly disagree or I vehemently disagree and vehemently is a great adverb that just means in a strong and emotional way now there are many others but these are some common collocations whenever you want to emphasize just how much you disagree everything is a fight I completely disagree you had it popping tonight I totally disagree I didn't know what Anna was trying to say with this look I completely disagree she said vehemently that's a big word so I have to believe her now for a little review and if you think that review is not important well I beg to differ because this is what's going to really help you build your vocabulary and perhaps you believe that you're not going to remember all of these different phrases and in that case with all due respect I see your point but using two in a row but the more you get exposure to these phrases the more you practice using them and come back and watch this lesson again you're going to make these phrases a part of your active memory because you don't just learn vocabulary one time and then you're done it's the exact opposite you need to review new words and phrases multiple times in order to make it stick now I would recommend that you continue building your vocabulary by watching another video Lesson and if you are not going to do that well I vehemently disagree okay I'm just kidding you can do whatever you want but in all seriousness I hope you enjoyed the lesson and learned something new and if you did please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Avoid Saying ...UM...ER...UH #interactiveenglish #shorts

guys I think it's important that you try to avoid using some of those nasty filler words like uh um now these utterances are natural when you're having a conversation but you don't want to use them too much and maybe try to minimize their use so instead of using those Crush words and try to buy yourself a little more time to come up with that word or sentence you could say how can I say this or just tell someone directly I need a moment to think about this or you could even just go ahead and introduce your thought by saying and what I was going to say is and then if you just can't think of that word or phrase you could tell someone I'm drawing a blank or you could say oh it's it's on the tip of my tongue and if you completely forgot whatever it is that you were talking about just let them know yeah I I just lost my train of thought and what was it that I was teaching you

Awesome Listening & Speaking Practice | Transportation

Hi there and welcome! Today we're going to do your favorite speaking practice: describing nouns Today's topic is transportation and this is a listening and speaking activity. These nouns are at a beginner-high beginner level. However, we encourage learners of all ages to participate because it's a great way opportunity to listen, speak, and to practice your fluency. In this activity, Wes will describe six different nouns to you. Each of these nouns is on the topic of transportation. You have ten seconds to say the answer. Please speak up, and say the answer out loud. Don't be shy, this is how you improve your speaking! Before we begin, let's see an example: Wes will describe a word to me, and I will guess the answer. Here's the word: Are you ready? Ready! This is a very popular form of transportation. A lot of people have this, they use it to drive, You see these on the road. Ioana, you have one: It's a 2001 Toyota Camry.

I think you're describing a car! Good job, you got it! Ok, so now that you know how the activity works, let's begin. Wes will choose a noun and describe it to you. You will try to guess that noun. Remember to speak up and say your answers loud and proud. After we finish all six words, I will go over the answers with you. Ready? Let's get the clock going! This is transportation that people use to fly. When you go to the airport, you get on one of these, There are many people that travel, you fly through the air. This is a type of car used for public transportation. They're very popular in cities. These cars are usually yellow and they'll take you wherever you want to go - for a price.

If you're in a building and you don't want to take the stairs, you might use this to go to the second, or third, or fourth floor You get on with other people, you push the button To get to this transportation you get down under the ground It's an underground train. And it picks people up and then it takes people to different parts of the city. This is something you can go very fast in, it only has two wheels It's kind of like a bicycle but much, much faster. It makes a sound like vroom, vroom, vroom. It's like a motorized bicycle. It's called a _____. This is something you see in a city or a town. It's a very very big vehicle.

You go to a certain stop, and you wait, and you get on it and you can take it to different places People get on and off... So how did it go? I hope you were able to give an answer for all of those. If you would like to do the activity again before I tell you the answers, you can stop the video and go back to the beginning of the activity. Before I reveal the answers to you, I will replay some of the key words that Wes used to describe those nouns. So here are the answers: you go to the airport, you get on one of these When you go to the airport, you see a lot of planes. Plane is the answer.

They're very popular in cities, these cars are usually yellow A yellow car used for transportation is a taxi. You might use this to go to the second, or third, or fourth floor The answer is elevator. You go down under the ground, it's an underground train. An underground train is a subway or metro. That's the answer. It's like a motorized bicycle. The answer is a motorcycle. It's a very very big vehicle, and you get on it, and you can take it to different places. The answer we're looking for is a bus. great job everyone! Now, it's your turn. I'll show you two nouns and you will need to describe them to Wes.

Wes will then try to guess the words you are describing. Make sure to speak out loud and try to use complete sentences. Be creative, and try to describe the words using the vocabulary that you already know. Ready? Here's your first word: You're describing a train. Ready for the second word? Here it is: Are you describing a boat? Great work! We hope you enjoyed this activity! Let us know what you think. Please give us your feedback in the comments below. See you next time!

BEACH or BITCH? | How to Pronounce These Words Correctly

today I'm gonna teach you how to correctly pronounce these two words right here Beach and [___] that's coming up hey man what's up good to see you I haven't seen you know what I'd give you a hug but you know the whole social distancing thing right you know yeah I want to be careful I don't know where you've been so what do you been up to well honestly I've mostly been at the [___] wait are you are you talking about the beach yeah I've just been laying out on the [___] and you know what I'm thinking about laying out on a different [___] tomorrow yeah that's not really social distancing if you're around many different people no I just want to get some Sun that's the only reason I go to the [___] okay you're talking about the beach yeah man that's what I said the [___] no no that long e sound yeah beach beach beach [___] [___] [___] [___] the [___] okay try smiling when you say a beach whoa yeah what the hell is wrong with you you try smiling you son of a beach that's it you you just said it but then you you still said the wrong word I'm done with you okay yeah nice talking to you too have fun at the beach hey everyone my name is Wes this is Interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I have a pronunciation lesson for you because I'm going to teach you how to correctly pronounce these two words now you're probably thinking why did you choose these two words why are Beach and [___] so important well the first reason is that this is a minimal pair and if you don't know what a minimal pair is this is when you have two words and the only thing different about their pronunciation is just one single sound so in this case the difference is that long e sound that e and the short I sound that and there are many other different minimal pairs with that long e and short I sound so it's good to practice that it's going to help your listening comprehension and it will also help you improve your speaking skills the reason I chose these two words specifically is because I have had learners tell me that they try to avoid use the word Beach because they're worried that it's going to sound like [___] and these two words are very different the beach is a place that you will go and you will visit there's lots of sand the ocean and you would maybe go relax at the beach the word [___] it is also a noun it is a derogatory term it's it's something just mean and nasty that you would say to someone else when well you just don't want to be nice to them and you would call them this name and yeah people could get very offended by this word so I understand why you would not want to confuse these two words but at the same time I really don't think you should try to avoid saying certain words especially words that I think are pretty common like the word Beach because people use this quite often if they're maybe they're planning a vacation and they're going to the beach or they're talking about their weekend plans and they're gonna go to the beach with their friends so this is not a word that you should try to avoid because you're worried about mispronouncing it so that's why today I want to practice this I want to make sure that you are able to listen for the difference in these sounds and be able to identify them and then practice actually speaking and saying different words and sentences so that you can build up a little more confidence and the next time you are having a conversation about your weekend plans you are just going to say that hey you know you're going to the beach you're gonna have a great time at the beach and you are not ashamed to say that you are going to the beach first let's begin with the long e sound and I want to tell you how you make this sound and how you form this in your mouth and I'm gonna tell you well there's five I have different little tips for you to keep in mind in order to make this sound and pronounce it correctly the first thing that you need to know is that your mouth is going to be slightly open your teeth are not going to touch but your mouth will be slightly open the tip of your tongue is going to be just behind your bottom teeth and the middle of your tongue think of it like the body of your tongue is going to be arched up close to the roof of your mouth now when you're making a vowel sound this sound the long e your tongue is actually going to be at the highest position for a vowel sound and whenever whatever vowel sound you're making this sound is when your tongue will be at the highest position and now you are going to drop your jaw you're going to drop your jaw just like you're going to smile so all I want you to do right now is just smile and often people smile when they're having their picture taken and in English it's very common to tell people to say cheese so I want you to pretend lower alright I'm gonna take your picture right now and I just want you to say cheese cheese that is the long e sound that we're making right now when you think of that long e think of it you are you are actively trying to to smile you are having to do something you're having to smile and you could say cheese you could also say P anything it doesn't really matter as long as it ends with that long e sound then you are going to create that smile and and your mouth is going to form that position say say cheese like like I'm taking a picture cheese cheese cheese she is she jeez I did it let's go celebrate let's go to the [____] we'll keep at it we'll keep at it now when you're making that short I sound at first I just want you to relax alright relax your mouth a little bit relax your jaw relax your lips just take a deep breath and relax the position of your tongue in the mouth it's going to be this just about the same as that long e sound and that's why I think these two sounds can be confusing because the tip of your tongue will also be behind your bottom teeth the tongue is also going to be arched up toward the roof of your mouth but not as high as that long e sound so your tongue is going to have a very similar position but the key word here is just relaxed and the reason I say that is because this is an unstressed vowel sound so let's practice with a few words that have that short I sound I'm just going to say the word and I want you to repeat after me ready gift mix six big all of those words have that short I sound and I hope that just listening to me say these different words that you can hear the difference between the long e and the short I sound so let's practice the long e and short I with several different words and sentences and again I want you to repeat after me say this out loud that is going to help you practice your speaking skills and improve your pronunciation we're going to start with the long e and then go into that short I sound and the reason that we're doing this is because I think it will be easier for you to listen to and identify the difference between these two sounds it's also going to be easier for you when you are making these sounds to go from that active smile to just that relaxing short I sound that active long e sound with a smile and then relaxing into the short I sound are you ready we're going to begin with this minimal pair right here sheep and ship first let's let's practice saying together sheep that long e sound you can smile sheep and that relaxed short I ship ship right now I just want you to try to identify each sound so I'm going to say one of these words and I want you to point to the word that you hear and then I'll tell you the answer are you ready sheep sheep ship sheep okay I hope that was pretty easy now let's make it a little more challenging with a sentence and this time we're going to use the minimal pair piece piss so the sentence we're going to use is I'm taking a piece and I'm taking a piss all right these these sentences have very different meanings so you would not want to confuse these I'm taking a piece think of it like you're excited you're happy you're smiling that you're getting something and then when you're you're taking a piss I think most of the time people like to relax when they pee so I think this sentence also it makes a lot of sense if you're saying oh you know you're relaxed I'm taking a piss okay so let's practice these a little bit together I want you to repeat after me and again if it helps you can smile for that long e I'm taking a piece I'm taking a piece and now relax with that short I sound I'm taking a piss I'm taking a piss okay again I'm going to say one of these sentences I just want you to point to it and then I'll show you the answer are you ready I'm taking a piss all right I'm taking a piece I'm taking a piss all right that last one I was trying to confuse you a little bit by smiling when I said this I I guess somebody might be very happy that they're taking a piss especially if they've had to go for a while but again I hope you were able to identify the sound that I was whether it was the long e or the short I sound I need to take a piece o a piece of chocolate sure I got this Milka I'll sure know I need to take a piece I'm offering you a toilet that's what I need I need to take a piece oh I see you you need to take a piss oh okay toilets over there now let's go back to the original words from this lesson Beach and [____] and we're going to practice these and we're going to move into this slowly with several different minimal pairs and again we're gonna practice I want you to say these sentences out loud and actually practice your pronunciation let's begin with these two words right here beat and bit I chose these two because they begin with that B that bus sound B and bit when we practice these I'm going to say some sentences and I again I want you to say them out loud and repeat after me to practice your pronunciation but also keep in mind think about that long e sound that smile remember that if that helps you and that short I sound just relax so a beat like the the the plant the food that people can eat and you could say I just want a little beat I just want a little beat or somebody might be talking about how much of something they want I just want a little bit I just want a little bit now let's look at these two words right here each and H I chose these because they end with that that CH that chew sound each that smile and itch relax so here are the sentences repeat after sentences and again I want you to repeat after me and if it helps you think about that smile when you say that long e sound are you ready just repeat after me let's go lay out on the beach let's go lay out on the beach for our next vacation we're going to the beach for our next vacation we're going to the beach I could also say mm-hmm isn't that a beautiful beach isn't that a beautiful beach it's thinking if you confuse that sentence right there yeah it means something very different and the last one let's say ah this is something that I like to do if I'm at the beach and I'd say well I saw the sunset from the beach I saw the sunset from the beach excellent you guys did amazing and if you were practicing your speaking skills and practicing your pronunciation let me know right the word speaking in comments that way I know that you were actually participating in the lesson because that's that's what I want I want you guys to interact with these lessons well because this is interactive English right so if you enjoy this lesson and you feel a little more confident that you can go out and have a conversation about the beach and not worry about mispronouncing it and the other person getting a little confused about what you're saying then hit that like button down below thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time

BEAUTIFUL IDIOMS & EXPRESSIONS ABOUT ART

We are in Paris! The city of lights or the city of arts and culture. So today we're going to talk to you about some idioms and expressions that are related to art. And culture. That's coming up. It is a gorgeous day out. Perfect day to see all the sights of Paris. That is the Louvre. One of the most famous museums in the world. Check out this view. Right here. We're at the Eiffel Tower. Or kind of. It's right there. So since we are in Paris, which is a city very well known for its art and culture we're going to talk to you about some expressions and idioms that have words related to art in them.

Of course. The first expression I want to talk to you about is to paint yourself into a corner. And when somebody paints themselves into a corner, that just means that they are put into a situation where there is no or there are very few good outcomes. And they are painted into a corner. It's not a good place to be. So there's a famous saying that goes a picture is worth a thousand words. And what this means is that you can have a complex idea that can be expressed in just one single picture. Better expressed in fact than a description. So there's so much more that a picture says than words can say.

A picture's worth a thousand words. Another expression is to paint the town red. And when you go out and you paint the town red that just means that you are going out and you are partying and you are celebrating in a very lively way. As an example, you would say "You know, let's go out tonight. Let's paint the town red." Another expression is to see the big picture or to look at the big picture. And this just means to see the situation as a whole. Because sometimes it's very important to instead of like looking in little details, to look at the situation as a whole. And that means to look at the bigger picture or to see the bigger picture.

Or the big picture. So we're just chilling on a bench. As you can see behind us...oh, where did it go? It's the other way. I can't show you. There we go. It's the Eiffel Tower. So we're going to...we're going to share our favorite things about Paris right now. What is your favorite thing about Paris? The food. Hands down. That was going to be mine. Everything. All the food is just like the ingredients are simple, high-quality, and just well put together. I like the croissants or here the croissants. Why is your nose so red? Because we were out in the sun all day yesterday. Somebody got sunburned. What's your favorite site? I like Versailles. The gardens. I thought they were really, really impressive.

Wes tell me your favorite French word? French word? I've been saying "Merci." Merci. Okay. I've been using that. Okay, what about... It's my only word. Favorite French word? Amour. What? Amour. I don't know how to pronounce it. Favorite English channel. Interactive English. Obviously. Alright. Let's keep moving. Another expression that I say quite often is...you just say, "What's wrong with this picture?" And when you're asking somebody what's wrong with this picture, it means that you're asking this person or a group of people to identify what is wrong with this situation. And seeing if they can identify it. So you're kind of asking them in a sarcastic way. What's wrong with this picture?

So this is an expression that's also a question. And it goes "Do I have to paint you a picture?" And it's not...it's kind of like when you're trying to explain something to somebody, and they just don't get it at all. This is kind of asking like, "What else can I do to make you understand this?" You're trying to make it more clear for them. You're a little bit frustrated that they don't get it. And you're just asking them "Do I have to paint you a picture?" So you're just kind of trying to see like... I've tried all these ways to explain it. What else can I do to make you understand this?

Another idiom is saying that something is like watching the paint dry. This is a simile because we're comparing two things. And you're saying that something is like watching the paint dry. So you're talking about something that is very boring. It's dull. It's tedious. And it takes a long time. So therefore, it's like watching the paint dry. So another expression is to paint a ___ picture. And why I made that mmm sound because you can change the adjective. So something can paint a terrible picture. It can paint a bleak picture. It can paint a rosy picture. And what this means is to describe something in a certain way. And many times it's used in a negative way.

So when you... if something paints a terrible picture, it means that things appear to be pretty bad. Hope you guys enjoyed learning these expressions. And getting a glimpse of our trip to Paris. So now we want to hear from you guys. In the comments...what are we going to? We're going to ask you...we have a question for you that we wanted to hear the answer to. And our question is "Have you ever been to Paris?" And if yes, "What did you think about it?" What was your favorite thing?

And if you haven't been, we'd like to know if you'd like to go. Thank you guys so much for watching, and we'll see you next time.

Bye.

BECOME FLUENT IN 2020 | 7 Things You Need to Do

Let's talk about how you can improve your English in 2020 that's coming up. Hey everyone, my name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And a new year is upon us. It is 2020 so if you're thinking, you know, this year I would really like to improve my English skills. I want to tell you seven different ways that will help you do just that. So I want you to think about this as like a checklist, seven different things that I want you to do to help you improve your English. So I do, I want you to go through these seven things one at a time.

Just check them off as you go through them. And this is going to help you improve your English. So number one, the very first thing that I want you to do this year is to identify a mistake. And it can be any type of mistake. It could be a grammar mistake, it could be a pronunciation mistake. I just want you to identify one mistake and truly focus on fixing it.

Now you may be thinking, well, how am I supposed to identify one of my mistakes? Well, if you're thinking about pronunciation, listening is a great way to do that because you might be listening to a TV show, a song or anything and you'll hear it and you think, well, okay, that's not exactly the way that I'm saying this word, or I'm saying this phrase, and you can find something that you might be pronouncing incorrectly or grammar. For example, reading is a great way to do that because you are reading how the grammar is used correctly and you might see something that you have not really been doing and you'll be able to identify one of your mistakes that way. Now, I don't just want you to identify the mistake and think, Oh, okay, I've been making this mistake. I now know what I should do, and then you forget about it. That's not what I want you to do.

Once you have identified your mistake, I want you to wait one week and then go back and revisit it and try to learn it again, practice using it again, and then I want you to wait another month and then go back to it again. Learn it, practice it. And the reason I want you to do this is because that is the best way to correct it up here and truly correct the mistakes. So once you've identified it, then go back a week later, practice it, and then go back a month later and practice it again because that is going to help you the most and you really just need to identify one mistake.

If you can identify more and get into the habit of doing that, then that's perfect. But for right now, let's just stick with one. The first thing I want you to do, identify a mistake and then really focus on correcting it. The next thing that I want you to do, number two, is to commit to reading. Truly commit to reading. And when I say that I'm talking about a book. Often I tell learners all the time, you should try to read a little bit each day and you can do something very easy like reading something online. However, what I want you to do is to commit to reading a book, make a larger reading, and truly improve your skills, and I know some of you may be thinking, well that's, that's going to be easy to do, but this can actually be quite challenging.

The reason that that many people don't end up reading books is because, well, maybe they don't find time for it. Everybody has a busy life and they say, well, there's this book, it's 500 pages long, when am I ever going to finish it? But that's what I want you to do. I want you to find a book, especially a longer book, and try to commit to reading it and you don't have to read it within one month. That's why I want you to start earlier in the year because even if you just read a few pages each day. Give yourself more time to read. But that is going to make it a habit throughout the entire year. Now, if you're trying to figure out, well, what kind of books should I read?

I have two suggestions for you. First read something you're interested in because that's going to help you continue reading throughout the year. If you're not interested in it, you're going to get bored and you're going to, you're just going to stop reading and that's not what we want. Number two, if you're worried that you might not understand everything that you're reading, perhaps you're worried that you won't understand all of the vocabulary in the book. In that case, I would suggest that you read something that you are already familiar with. For example, maybe you have seen the movie Harry Potter, but you haven't read the book. We'll start reading the book and even if you don't understand everything that you're reading, well, you've seen the movie.

You are already a little familiar with the story so that way if you come across words and phrases that you don't know, you can still follow along because you already have an idea as to what the story is about. So this year, 2020 commit to reading. I want you to choose one book, commit to reading it, cover to cover, try to choose something a little longer and then spend a little time each day just reading that book. Give yourself plenty of time so that you can finish the book this year.

Number three, I want you to complete an active learning exercise. So if you don't know what I mean when I say active learning, many times people may not have somebody to practice their English with. Perhaps they're not taking lessons. So they'll do things like listen to music or read books or watch TV shows. Those are all examples of passive learning in which you are just listening or reading and you actually don't have to do anything afterwards. Now, if you're completing an active learning exercise, then you are either listening or reading or speaking and you actually have to do something. You have to respond in some way. So I want you to find some type of active learning exercise that you can complete and it can be anything. So maybe you want to practice your grammar, the present, perfect tense, go online, do a search.

You will find all sorts of online exercises using that grammar or you could also do a listening comprehension exercise where you will listen to something and then you have to answer questions. You can even participate in our online lessons. We do interactive quizzes all the time in which you watch the video and I ask you to write your answers in the comments and to actually participate in the lesson. That is an active learning exercise and that's what I want you to do. Many of you may already be doing these and that's great. If you are, then I want you to choose something else, choose something different and add one active learning activity in 2020 the next

The next thing that I want you to do, number four, is to add one more form of exposure to the language specifically add one more form of listening exposure. So when it comes to listening, I think many of us think of, well watching a TV show or a movie or listening to music that is very common. Maybe you can add listening to a podcast. Maybe you can add listening to an audio book. Maybe you can add listening to more YouTube videos. So think about the variety of things that you do when you're listening and try to add one more thing to that list, whether it's a podcast or an audio book, and get one more form of listening exposure.

Number five is that I want you to add a little bit more time to your learning and try to make it a routine. So during the day we're, we're all pretty busy, but throughout the day there, there are these tiny little moments that we have. See if you can take that time and actually practice learning English. Perhaps you'll listen to something like we just talked about a podcast and audio book, but I want you to think about your day, think about your schedule and try to find a little bit more time to get some more English and then make that a routine. Start a new routine. So you could do this during your commute, during a walk, outside your lunch break, or even cooking at home.

Find one of those moments. Find that time, even if it is just a very short amount of time. Use it to practice your English skills and this is a great way to improve in 2020 number six is start a diary. I think writing is an underestimated language skill because when you're writing you are using a variety of other skills. You're trying to think of new vocabulary. You're trying to use the correct grammar structure. So this is great practice, which will help improve your overall fluency. So take a notebook, start a diary, and you can write about anything you want. You can write about events in your life, you can write about your goals, things that you wish to accomplish, you can write about how you feel.

Try to write as much as you can, but it doesn't have to be a lot. Even if you just write a few sentences, every bit helps. So start writing a diary. That is something I really hope that you can do in 2020. Number seven, and this is my favorite one, is that I want you to have a conversation. I want you to speak to me. And the way that you are going to do that because so many of you out there say, well, I want to practice speaking, but I don't have anybody to talk to. And I understand. So what I would like you to do is I would like you to record a video introducing yourself. I want you to record a video talking about well where you live.

Tell me about your family. Tell me about your job. Do you do, tell me about your goals, things that you want to accomplish. Send me a link to the video in the comments of this lesson so that I can watch it and I will write you a comment so that you know that I got your message. I know some of you may be shy. Perhaps you don't want to talk in front of a video camera. That's okay. If that's the case, record yourself like it's a podcast. Put it online, send me a link to that audio and I will still listen to it. I just want to hear from you and know that you are practicing your speaking skills. So these are the seven things that I want you to do.

This is your checklist and go through them one at a time and just check them off in 2020 because this is going to help you improve your English fluency. If you enjoy this lesson, please hit that like button and as always, thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time.

BINOMIAL PAIRS QUIZ | Useful & Important Phrases

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is wes the channel is interactive english and in case this happens to be your first time here please say hello in the comments in the chat i just love hearing from you guys tell me where you're from but the channel is all about just trying to help you improve your english skills and today i have well it's a vocabulary lesson we're going to be talking about some very common and useful phrases that i think you hear in just everyday english and we're going to be doing a little bit of a quiz that's what i've turned this into so that you can participate this is after all interactive english so i want you guys you can write your answer in the comments in the chat and as we go through this i'll try to give some shout outs as you as well so today's topic we're going to be talking about binomial pairs that's what we're going to be focused on what i will do is i will link up here um some a playlist to some lessons that i've already done on binomial pairs all of the phrases that we're going to look at from today's quiz are taken from some of those lessons right now i think i've done three different lessons on binomial pairs so you can check those out it's good to kind of practice reinforce what you've already learned and that's really what this is all about hopefully maybe you've seen those lessons and this is a good refresher to see how much you remember and if some of these are new if this is the first time that you're going to be practicing and learning some of these phrases that's also great the more exposure you get the better that you're just going to build your vocabulary learn new phrases and improve your skills so i think it's important the first thing that we talk about if we're talking about binomial pairs is just understanding what what is a binomial pair we're talking about an expression that contains two words that are joined by a conjunction and the conjunction is usually and or or those are the two conjunctions that are often going to combine the two words that is not always the case but most of the time it is and or or that's going to connect these two words and that is what we call a binomial pair and i'm i know that when we go through this and you see some of the phrases i'm pretty sure you're going to recognize some of them and be like oh okay yes i've heard of this phrase before i've i've i've seen it you maybe you know it as well then that's great um but these like i said these are kind of common phrases that you can use in in everyday conversation so let's begin with this we're going to start a little easier it's going to start well i think it's going to be a little easier and then it'll get more and more difficult as we go through it so the first part uh that i have is just a multiple choice so here is the binomial pair loud and clear so you see those two words loud clear it's joined by the conjunction and and we get the phrase loud and clear what do you think it means write your write your answers in the chat if you're watching this later write your answers in the comments it's good use it like it's a piece of paper and if you want to if you want to practice even a little more write a sentence using this uh this binomial pair and if i see a sentence that i like i i will read that uh out loud if you want to practice a little more so loud and clear is it a easily understandable b too noisy or c able to know what will happen overwhelmingly all right you guys are rocking this uh excellent um lolly gotrudas great to see some members takayo good job also some some speak up students juliana perfect so rose said yes it's a piece of cake excellent yes this one i think is a little easy this first part is going to be a little easier um the answer is a it means that something is clear and easily understandable so this is a little bit of an introduction to binomial pairs giving you the multiple choice and i i think just to give you some context for this it would be like i'm giving you some instructions telling you what we're going to do oh we're doing a quiz the first part is binomial pairs and this is what we're going to do do you understand you could just say loud and clear that tells me yes i understand what you're saying loud and clear or maybe people would um ask if you if you can hear somebody like oh can you hear me do you understand what i'm saying and you could respond loud and clear so i'll also try to give you some examples as to how you may use some of these phrases the next binomial pair give or take so here again we have those two words give take they're going to be combined using that conjunction or and we get the phrase give or take all right what do you think uh the answers getting some good sentences uh um from me like abdul rasheed your lessons are loud and clear excellent um i understand you loud and clear thank you lolly those are great examples for loud and clear so give or take is it does it mean a undetermined

b usually c approximately and i as i was doing this i felt like ah this is going to be too easy because i think giving you the meaning uh it was actually hard to try to think of other answers to include that might be a little tricky so everyone yes was overwhelmingly saying the correct answer um the answer is c all right if you're talking about give or take it means approximately so in this case you're you're going to be talking about like typically a number or an amount and if you're trying to say approximately you would say give or take plus or minus some unknown amount often i think people are going to maybe use this at the end of a sentence and i might say um how many uh like how many people live in your city or live in your town you might well maybe you know a hundred thousand give or take so when you when you put give or take at the end of it it's telling the other person that oh you're you're kind of you're just approximating you're you're guessing as to how much so again we're talking about an amount uh or some number and if you say that and then follow it with give or take then we know okay you're just saying approximately that's just kind of a close guess the next binomial pair not all of these are going to be multiple choice as well um all or nothing right again we got two words connected by that conjunction or what do you think uh it means um hadia-san has a good sentence i live five kilometers away from the subway give or take um yeah all right excellent that works that you're it's approximately five kilometers um what do you think all or nothing a do completely be leave unfinished or c non-negotiable and i think often to again give you a little context for this because um maybe it's not the full meaning that i'm giving you i will show it to you it's when you're kind of talking about something people will most use most often use it as just the sentence like it's all or nothing all right it's all or nothing and typically you're talking to somebody about something that you might well you're you're maybe planning to do and you say well we're either it's it's all or nothing why they're going to do all of it or we're not going to do any of it so in that case all right the answer would really be a all right you're talking about doing something completely um so i i know i thought maybe some of you put c like maybe thrown off like non-negotiable i guess again depending on the context maybe that would work i told you i had some trouble trying to think of some other uh possible answers that might be a little tricky but the most important thing is that you understand the meaning of it you're either doing something completely or not at all and then you would say like oh it's all or nothing why they're going to do all of it or none of it and people could say it's all or nothing so again this is the most important part a or c i guess again in a context you could say maybe non-negotiable it's all or nothing um the next one and this is the last multiple choice that i have for you um ins and outs what does that this mean and are we talking about the detailed facts of something are we talking about an ever-changing situation or just saying something from a different point of view if you haven't noticed i think before i pinned a comment in the chat from yesterday and well maybe i don't want to give it away but you guys can see it right there i said i'm going to teach you the ins and outs of these different binomial pairs and i think that kind of is a bit of a hint it kind of gives it away i think this is a binomial pair you may often use with the verb like teach or learn something teach learn or know you know the ins and outs of something or you're going to learn the ins and outs or i'm going to teach you the ins and outs which all of you most of you said a yes we're talking about the the detailed or complicated facts of some situation or something and you know the ins and outs um so yeah i hope i want to teach you the ins and outs of these binomial pairs i want to teach you the details the complicated facts the different ways that you can use them or that you may hear them being used um so this is the first part uh which i think you guys did pretty well it was multiple choice now i want to switch it on you and what i'm doing is for the next part i'm going to give you a sentence with part of the binomial pair and i want you to complete it complete the binomial pair with the unknown word so let's look at the first one and again you could write the word in the chat or the comments and then i'll i'll tell you what the meaning is and probably you might you could probably guess what the meaning is based on the context so here is the first sentence right here the team didn't cheat they won the match fair and so this is a binomial pair what word would you use to complete this sentence what do you think doing this quiz lesson complete this sentence with a the binomial pair and then i'm going to tell you the binomial pair and i will also give you the meaning just as a review reminder of what it is uh great job excellent uh sleepwalker anastasia zanat lali the the binomial pair is fair and square so if you say that something is fair and square it means that it is done honestly according to the rules and often i think that you would talk about you might use it in the context of winning and you would say that oh we won fair and square that there was no cheating that you won honestly you won fair and square i think that is a common sentence that people might use this binomial pair with if you're saying that well we won fair and square or it was fair and square the match was fair and square it was done honestly then there's uh the next phrase excellent great job awesome gertrudis uh vicky awesome uh yeah lolli grave a great example i beat you fair and square i won fair and square excellent great example this one there's no uh there's no real damage to the furniture just imagine there's some furniture and i'm telling you there's no real damage to the furniture there's just a little um and tear so maybe this is also pretty easy since i'm kind of giving you giving you part of the binomial pair so there's no um and tear this is another expression that i think is yeah i think it's pretty useful especially depending on the context if you're talking about well especially in this situation uh excellent uh gertrudis lolly uh mary dennis wear and tear that is the binomial pair wear and tear refers to damage or depreciation resulting from ordinary use the situation in which i think this would be commonly used is if you perhaps rent an apartment and you're signing some type of agreement and typically in the contract it would say like you know you cannot break or destroy the property but normal wear and tear is acceptable because this is talking about just ordinary use and over time things kind of well maybe they don't get damaged but they depreciate and you could say that's just normal wear and tear or if you're going to sell a car and somebody asks you oh is there anything wrong with the car and you say no there's just normal wear and tear just normal depreciation from use over time normal wear and tear great job on that one here's the next one that i have for you it was dangerous driving back home in that storm i'm just glad we're back home safe and what expression what binomial pair am i talking about in this so you know the situation it was dangerous some dangerous situation uh about there was some storm outside and i could say i'm just glad we're back home safe and what do you what do you think so i think and i told you uh these expressions are very common so i think you probably have heard of them before and perhaps maybe i hope to be jogging your memory a little bit or or you've just seen these previous lessons about binomial pairs and you just remember the information because you guys are awesome so excellent um lolli gettrudis uh saya ambil the the binomial pair is safe and sound so really instead of saying safe because it kind of means the same thing you're safe from danger or and free from any kind of injury or harm and you would just kind of just use the expression safe and sound and i don't know why i tend to think people associate home as being safe and sound and that's why i used it in that example saying well we're back home safe and sound or i just want to know that you made it back safe and sound i think i hope that all of you guys right now are safe and sound uh we have of course this the pandemic that's going on and i hope that all of you are safe and sound that is a way that i could use this so one more i have one more um i have more questions but one more like this where i want you to complete the binomial pair and here is the next one i hope that all of you have been improving your english by leaps and what what word would can finish that one um leaps and all right what do you think uh and this is true i i think i mentioned this in the last video lesson that uh uh i've talked to you about i hope that you all improve your english by leaps and what all right um okay so excellent all right you guys did a great job doing a great job on this one too mary flavio uh sohana sleepwalker gettrudis the the binomial pair is leaps and bounds and i'm going to throw by before that and what this means is just very uh very quickly i think i'm gonna add to that instead of just saying uh like quickly because leaps and bounds does not also it doesn't just have to mean quickly it could just mean like to a great degree

so if i say like i hope you're improving your english by leaps and bounds i'm saying like to a great degree basically saying that i hope you're improving your english a lot so it doesn't always just have to be about speed like very quickly but by leaps and bounds like quick but by a great degree as well i think i should have added that in there which is why i'm telling you now so yes they're not we're improving by leaps and bounds i'm happy to hear that remember uh to include buy so that's why i put it here typically i'd say that that you could also just think of this as part of the binomial pair by leaps and bounds all right now what i want to do and we'll see i think this part is going to be more difficult but who knows you guys have been rocking this quiz so far uh what i'm going to do is i'm going to give you the meaning i'm not going to tell you the binomial pair i want you to tell me the phrase tell me the phrase that that matches this meaning because now you're familiar with what a binomial pair is you understand it two words connected that are often connected by and or or so hopefully that uh that makes it easier so the first one we're talking about the advantages and disadvantages of something what that is the meaning that is the meaning of which binomial pair what phrase has this meaning and this is one that i feel like i've i don't know i tend to use a lot especially in the the speak up class that i have we talk about different topics and maybe i present a situation and i would use this uh this binomial pair uh quite often so i think this one is one that well i feel like i say like you probably see it a lot i know i see it a lot because i just told you i use it quite often and yes excellent uh lolli maria uh gertrudis jacqueline takayo kim pros and cons so if you're referring to the pros and cons the advantages would be the pros the disadvantages would be the cons and i told you as a teacher i think if we're if i'm trying to present a situation and especially for discussion and have other people share their thoughts and opinions i would ask like what do you think what here's the situation what are some of the pros and cons and then we would talk about these advantages and disadvantages the pros and cons the next one is maybe i don't know if this would be easy or difficult but the the meaning is when you are at a point you reach a point that you will not tolerate the situation anymore and you might get angry and lose your patience and you would say that you are okay you are and that well here's the meaning you're just you can't tolerate anymore and you would use this binomial pair and to give you in case uh i feel like one person would get it and then everybody's oh yes i was i was gonna say to give you a little hint this binomial pair is often followed by the preposition of so you are um of something and excellent the the answer is sick and tired all right great job lali katrudas sid saya hadi when you're sick and tired of something because i told you you're you're often going to follow it with of when you're sick and tired of something it's like when you're you're like i said you're at that point you can't tolerate it anymore um i'm sick and tired of my boss telling us to work late i'm sick and tired of it so i think you could probably always think of things at work that you are sick and tired of um so this is this is a good phrase because i think there are many things that apply to this where you're just like i can't take it anymore um juliana full to the head uh yeah so uh uh natalia says fed up with yeah it's very similar to that that phrasal word if you're fed up with something you're at that point i can't take it anymore you're sick and tired of it the next one i'll give you a little hint for this one as well if you can't think of it um we're talking about a small amount at a time and gradual what would you say um a small amount at a time something that's gradual and you would say and i'll give you a moment to think about it before i give you that hint and then we'll see again i think you guys could probably uh get this think of a situation uh if i instead of saying like well you i'm improving you're improving your english gradually or you're improving a small amount at a time what would you say all right okay uh excellent uh on got the one yeah they're actually now that you guys throw some in there uh there are some other ones that you could use the one that uh yes lolli not the the one that i'm thinking of and then i'll address some of the others that you had mentioned little by little the hint that i was gonna give you which i now realize i forgot was going to say that this binomial pair uses by so we're not using and or or that's not always the case with some binomial pairs there will be other words so we're connecting little by little we're talking about one like just gradually it's it's slowly um improving and you could say little by little let me some of you put um a few others let me address some of that slow and steady slow and steady is another binomial pair and i think that one would also uh that fits that context if you're talking about gradually you could say slow and steady there's a famous expression when you think of the the tortoise and the hare that story slow and steady wins the race that you keep moving forward uh slow and steady another one that people had talked about was step by step i think that one could also apply as well that you're doing something step by step i think step by step to me means more like one at a time that you're focusing you're doing one thing before moving on to the next thing so in a way um you could it has somewhat of a similar meaning but if i think of like the situation the example that i gave you like you're improving little by little you could i think step by step um you could use that but at the same time i think step by step mostly think is like more instructions kind of that you know what you need to be doing we're doing it step by step um i think of like um some situation in which maybe you need to kind of follow one order and you're just doing it one at a time you're doing it step by step um or like even in a relationship people might say like um how are things going in your relationship and you say yeah we're taking it step by step we're just moving along one thing at a time step by step uh then there's this one right here i'm i'm hoping i'm hoping one will be a little more difficult for you guys these are we're talking about instructions and warnings about what you should and should not do in a particular situation i say situation or time i forgot to put that word in there that little that bottom part right there that's a slight typo uh so we're talking instructions and warnings about what you should and should not do in a particular time in a particular situation or time what uh what binomial pair has this meaning okay so you guys got that um all right yes great job lali namrata anpan flavio dipan uh dipanjan oh mary thank you uh thank you so much for the super chat awesome i jumped in awesome i really appreciate that uh the answer we're talking about do's and don'ts okay so do's and don'ts if you're telling somebody okay instructions this is what you should do this is what you shouldn't do you would describe this these are the do's and don'ts and i think you would often hear people use like the do's and don'ts perhaps like at um some situation at work or or even in a classroom like i might be telling new students about well these are the rules of the classroom like these you know the do's and the don'ts so in some context some situation where you're trying to tell somebody about the things they should do or the things they should not do you're basically giving that person the do's and don'ts you're providing them with the do's and don'ts which is very important a very useful uh binomial pair um one that i think is could be used in a variety of situations so i hope that again this was review from some of those previous lessons i will uh link that up here if you'd like to go through and actually watch those lessons as well as learn more binomial pairs i suggest that you go guys go check that out but you guys did overwhelmingly uh incredible today i'm very impressed round of applause great job uh but i appreciate you joining me i hope that maybe you learned some new expressions these are rather informal expressions that you could use in just casual english also want to mention if you guys like what we do want to show us some love you can sponsor support our channel there are links in the description down below if you'd like to become a member or a patron uh so many i've seen some members in here today lolly gettrudis patrons like takayo um or uh even with those super chats like mary mary docma big shout out to you thank you so much uh i really appreciate it all of it kind of helps uh keep this going uh also saw vicky in here today another member uh really appreciate your guys love and support so i again this is good practice these quizzes it's also a good way for it to be a little more interactive that i can talk to you guys a little bit say your names if you're giving the correct answer sorry if i if i couldn't get to everyone um kind of scrolls through quickly but i hope that you all enjoy um the rest of your weekend thank you guys so much for joining me and i hope that you all have a wonderful week thanks uh good to see you uh just give some quick more shout outs uh hello nuria zanat thank you lolly good to see you as always shwana glad you enjoyed the lesson hi esther gatrudes juliana another speak up student excellent thanks for joining us juliana uh sleepwalker kim abu namrata hope uh thank you guys and

BORROW vs LEND | Confusing English Words

Can you please borrow me some money? I just need to lend a little money. I'm so confused. Today, we're going to talk about two words that are commonly confused. These are the words "borrow" and "lend." Now I want you to be honest with yourself. If you have confused these two words before, I want you to go ahead and "like" our video because we're going to help you understand what these words mean so you won't confuse them again.

Let's start with the word "borrow." This means to take or accept something usually for a short period of time and then you give it back. So "borrow" means "to take." This is important. I want you to do the action with me. I promise it will help you remember. Borrow. Borrow. You should also say the word while doing the action. I don't care if you're on a bus, you're at home, you're at school... Just do the action. Borrow. Borrow. Okay, I think that's good. You should know this now. When you borrow, you take. When I borrow, I take. When she borrows, she takes.

Now, let's look at the word "lend." Lend is pretty much the opposite. To lend something is to give something. Usually for a short period of time and then you get it back. So when you "lend," you "give." Once again, I want you to do the action with me. This is to help you remember the meaning. Lend. Lend. Borrow. Ah-ha. I tried to trick you just then. Did you get it?

Now that we know the meaning of "borrow" and "lend," let's see some examples. This is a common question you might hear when somebody is asking somebody else for money. And if you really want to lend us money, you can send it here. Next example. In this situation, I am borrowing. I am taking the book. So in this example I am taking the book. Borrow. I think you're ready for the practice. Let's do it! For this part, it's going to be easy. I'm just going to say the word, and I want you to do the action. Ioana is going to help you out, and she is going to do the actions with you.

We can do this. Are you ready? Yep! Lend. Good. Borrow. Nice. Borrow - Lend Lend - Borrow - Lend Lend - Borrow - Lend - Lend Lend - Borrow - Lend - Borrow - Borrow - Lend - Borrow. Just kidding! Okay. Let's make it a little more challenging. For this next part, I am going to say a sentence with a word missing. The missing word is either "borrow" or "lend." Listen carefully. And then point to the word you think is correct. Hey...hey, how's it going? Look...I'm going to get right to the point. I was wondering if I could _____ your car. What do you mean you didn't hear me? I was wondering if I could _____ your car.

I hope you pointed to the word "borrow." because in this sentence I want to take the car. Borrow is the answer. Here's another. You know, we're just a couple of poor English teachers. I'd really appreciate it if you could _____ us some money. Just _____ us a little money. Seriously! _____ us some money! You should have pointed to the word "lend." because I was asking you to "lend" us some money, or give us some money. But you really don't have to lend us some money, just subscribe to our channel. Guys, all I've got to say is great job! Just...that's it. Remember to "like" and share!

BRITISH and AMERICAN Idioms to Improve Your English

Here we clap! Do I? Welcome! Today we have a very special lesson for you today because we have a special guest. This is Aly from Papa Teach Me. So we recommend you check out his channel. We will leave a link in the description below. So today we're going to ask Aly if he knows some American idioms that we put together for him. He has to guess them. And then we're going to try to guess his. I have some British idioms. Maybe she knows them. Maybe they don't. Who knows!

Let's find out! Okay. So... "Shoot the Breeze"! Shoot the Breeze! Oh...um. Ah...it's like when we're talking, but it's nothing. We're not talking about anything serious. Right? We're just shooting the breeze. Yeah! That's right. Is that right? Awesome! Feel like shooting the breeze? Okay. How about "Take a Rain Check"? Oh, I know this one. Um...okay, no I don't know it fully. So if we make plans, and I'm like I'll take a rain check. That means I don't want to meet with you, but it's like a polite way to say, "Let's do it later." or "Not today." That's right! Does that just basically mean I don't really want to do it, but that's... It means like "Let's do it next time." Oh...piggyback. No, you know what. I'll talk a rain check this time.

Okay. The next one is "On the John." On the toilet. That's right! And pooping? Yeah! But if I'm on...and the John is the... ..toilet? Toilet. Yeah. Right. If I'm on the john, I'm pooping. Yes. And who doesn't like pooping. If anything is guaranteed to constipate an introvert for six months, is talking on the john. No, but it is to "Flip a Bitch." Flip a bitch? Yep. To flip a bitch? Yep. To ac?...to flip? ...a bitch...a girl? Ah...nope. What does it mean to flip a bitch? This is the first one. Okay, so to flip a bitch means to do a U-turn. When you drive...to turn around and do a U-turn. So like how would you say it? You know. I made a wrong turn and I had to flip a bitch.

I'm going to start using that one. That's brilliant. I'll turn the car around. I'll flip a bitch, and I'll go pork somebody right now. So the first British one is "Chin Wag." Oh my gosh. Chin wag? Chin wag. Can you use it in a sentence? My mom and her friends were sitting in the living room having a chin wag. Chit chat. Kind of. It's a chit chat. Oh..great! Literally your chin is wagging. Wow! Okay. That's awesome. But it's kind of... Is it like gossiping? Or just like... Kind of gossiping. Hello and welcome to celebrity chin wag. Okay. The next word is "Skive." What does it mean to skive? Man this is good.

I don't know why I keep thinking of sky diving. So like you're skiving...two together, so you sky divie? Probably not. You want a sentence? Yes. Okay. I don't want to go to work today. I think I'm going to skive. Ooo...like skip? Skip work. Skip work or skip school. Okay. So like ditch? Like ditch. Well that'll teach you to stop skiving on the cleaning then A word that could get lost in translation is the word "Thick." If I said to you, "Oh that guy is really thick." Oh I think I know this one. Is it like "stupid" or "he doesn't get it"? Yeah. Yeah. He's really thick. I like this one. So stupid. Sometimes you can be really thick.

So do you want to go first? Okay. Yeah. Yeah. "Jonesing." Jonesing? Jonesing. So now I need a...I need a... You want a sentence? I want a sentence. This morning I woke up, and I was really jonesing for some coffee. Oh! So it's like "crave." Like I really want something. Exactly. I'm jonesing for a coffee, which is usually true. So if you're really jonesing for that chocolate, it's probably just because your brain remembers that it feels good to eat it. Um...okay. The next one is "A Hail Mary." A hail mary? Yeah, hail mary. So...so like a religious thing? Or a... Nah... I've never heard of this. What does it mean? It's from...they use it in American football.

So a hail mary would be like at the... you know time is running out. It's at the end of the game. They have to throw the ball very far and try and score. So chances of them scoring are very slim, so it's a hail mary. It's the first quarter of the big game and you want to toss up a hail mary. Another one... "Put up Your Dukes." Oh, I know this one. Queensberry rules.

Let's fight! Right? Yeah, yeah, yeah. Put up your dukes. From like... Put up your dukes! Okay. The other one that we had for you..."John Hancock." He's a political guy, wasn't he? It does come from the Declaration of Independence. Oh, is this where you ask someone for their John Hancock? So you're asking for their... Their signature. Yeah. Exactly. Can I have your John Hancock on this please? Mr. Callahan, I need your John Hancock on these reports. Good job! Nice. Wow. That's impressive. But see... He's good at this! Okay. So a British idiom for you is to "Get a Bollocking." Get a bollocking? Like to get your butt kicked. Like really get a beating.

You're excited. You're happy to do something. Exactly. I'm very very happy. I'm chuffed. It's to be really pleased. To be really pleased about, to be thrilled by something. I'm chuffed to bits. The next one is a "Cock up." A cock up? Cock up? Like a...like a screw up? Exactly. It's the same. Yeah...screw up! It's a noun, so we just say "It's a cock up." Or as a verb, "You cocked up." Don't cock it up. Okay. And this one "Bugger All." Bugger all? Could you use it in a sentence? Can I borrow some money? Sorry, I've got bugger all on me. I have nothing. Nothing. I've heard that one. What did you do today?

Bugger all! He's British already. And pray that there's intelligent life somewhere up in space because there's bugger all down here on earth. Thanks for watching! We hope that you guys learned some of these new idioms so the next time you are talking with somebody from America or Britain try to see if you can use some of these. Or if you're traveling there...even better. We'll see you next time!

BUSINESS ENGLISH | Quiz for Working Professionals

Welcome to today's lesson. Thank you so much for joining me. This channel, Interactive English, it's all about trying to help you improve your English skills. And today, this is I it's a quiz lesson. And we're going to be talking about business English, which is something that I I have some other lessons, but I haven't done really a quiz lesson on business English just yet. So, that's what we're going to be focusing on in this lesson. So, I'm I'm really excited about it. And just because we're talking about business English, I know people would think, well, it's a lot more formal and there are some things we're going to talk about because it is a more it's an environment in which people would be more professional. However, that being said, I do have some some phrases for you that are a little more casual, a little more informal, which you would also more likely hear in a type of work setting. So, I want to say hello to some of you who are with me. Hello, lovely. Good to see you as always. Uh, CT, Cindy, Mary, um, Chris, uh, Chris Kenny, uh, Harat. Thank you guys. I'll be able to give some more shoutouts as we go through the lesson because, um, because this is a quiz lesson, I want you guys to interact. I want you to write your answers in the chat. Even if you're watching this later, write your answers in the comment. And even again, if you're watching this later, please write to me in the comments. Tell me your name. Tell me where you're from. I just love hearing from you and I always I always try to reply to as many comments as I possibly can. So again, this is an interactive quiz. I want you guys to participate. That is the best way to continue to practice and improve your skills. I also want to say I am going to I'm going to try to do more live lessons for uh like they're probably they're going to be more member only live lessons lessons. Keep a keep an eye out for that. I'll make some posts like Q&As's. So, that's something I want to try to do for the the member community, which I'll I'll come back to a little bit later on. Let's just go ahead and start. Here's the first question that I have for you um related to business. So, here's at work, your boss asks you to go the extra mile. And the the simple question is, well, what does this mean? So, we're talking about the phrase to go the extra mile. What what would they mean if you're in this situation at work and your boss says, "You know, I think really uh we need you to just go the extra mile." All right.

I' I'd really like you to go the extra mile. All right? [laughter] And he's saying that he or she is telling you this and what what would you think? All right. What what are they possibly talking about when they tell you to go the extra mile? All right. So the answer. All right. Excellent. Uh just random English. Uh uh Jane. Perfect. I I'll I'll tell you what the the meaning that I got from well my meaning plus like some of the English online dictionaries. Um excellent. Perfect. Abraham Lai. So they're talking about wasam. Yeah. They're really referring it's an idiom. So I told you this is a more probably informal phrase but you would use it at work or a situation in which somebody needs to do more work more work than is required of them. So many of you said like to work harder do extra work that's that's perfect. If somebody's asking you to go the extra mile. So again this is an idiom that you're more likely to hear or use when you're you're talking about work. Maybe they you're telling somebody you you're going to go the extra mile or maybe they ask you to go the extra mile. Exactly. Excellent. Uh Jose Vicky Gustaf. Perfect. The the next question um that I have for you is this one. And this is more I I I don't know. I I think many people are familiar with this uh this quote that you see here, but I think it is very fairly well known in the United States. It may be a little more common there. But if this the situation is before ending the meeting, your manager reminds everyone the customer is always what.

All right. What what word or you could maybe a phrase. Uh it's a word or a phrase. I'm not going to tell you, but what word would complete this right here? Um the customer is excellent. The customer is always right. Um, perfect. Uh, wasam Angela Lai, the customer is always God. on. Yes. I thought some people might joke around say the customer is always wrong. Uh, lady, the customer is always the king. So, this is a a motto or slogan that I I'll just read this down here. It's basically saying that you should prioritize customer service, customer satisfaction. It's something that was popularized um o over a hundred years ago by certain people um certain entrepreneurs that worked in retail um Selfridge, Womaker, Marshall Field. Those were actually the names of some pretty uh well-known department stores. I don't think they're you find as many today. I don't know if they're still operating nowadays. People think of like Macy's or J C Penney. Um, Um all right what do you what do you guys think? what uh what word would best complete this uh this sentence and one of the the keys there is um bankruptcy. All right, bankruptcy is a noun and it's a collocation with that. All right, Sam. Perfect. Um, so let me let me uh put a finer point on this for you because a lot of getting some different answers here. Abraham, excellent. The what I was looking for is declaring banks bankruptcy to declare bankruptcy. So there are some phrases that I think some of you were trying to to get connect with. So let I'm going to like I said, I'll put a finer point on it. So to declare bankruptcy, this is a collocation. These words are used together and bankruptcy is just a process in which maybe a person um cannot pay off their debts and they would declare bankruptcy. You could also say um like Gustav you said excellent. You can file for bankruptcy. That is another phrase that you can use to declare bankruptcy. To file for bankruptcy some of you use the word going. In that case, if you're talking about the situation because bankruptcy, it's a process and you could say that the company is going through bankruptcy. So again, there are different ways that you can talk about this depending on the situation. In this question right here, I think that the most the most acceptable answers would be like declaring bankruptcy or filing for bankruptcy. But once you start like that process, then you could say, well, the company is going through bankruptcy. So, I hope that makes it a little uh easier to to understand. I put declare up there. It's another it's a very common verb that you might hear people use when talking about uh bankruptcy. Um Rod just joined us. Hello, Rod. Uh good to see you. Li asked like go to bankrupt. You would say that you could say that a business is going bankrupt and in that case like going bankrupt would be that well they're losing money and they're probably getting close to declaring bankruptcy or filing for bankruptcy. Um either one. So I hope that helps. But again, this is something this is a good these are good phrases when talking about business because this is something I know with the the pandemic, the economic crisis um has been happening all over the world. Let's look at the next question. Um and I think this one um I I was I think you guys probably know this one, but I sometimes I feel like when I say that then that's when people maybe they don't know the answer. So just as an example, you arrive for your first day of work and you are told to go to HR. So what does HR stand for? If this is an acronym, um, and I think this would really apply to larger businesses or companies. Um, and you might hear people talking about HR. And in this situation, I think it is uh applicable. Your first day of work and they say, "Yep, first thing you need to do, go do go see HR. Go to HR." Um, excellent. Uh, Jane Hottie, Learn English UK, Shayes. Um, Hina, it is an acronym. Um, human resources. All right. HR stands for human resources. And again, this would be like if uh a company has different departments, human resources would be one of those departments.

They're in charge of um finding, screening, recruiting, d job training, um administering employee benefits. They would do a lot of different things, which is why typically there would be a number of people who would work in human resources. And some of you maybe that might be your job. If somebody says, "What do you do for a living?" You could maybe say, "I work in human resources." And then they know, okay, these are some of your responsibilities. Uh the next question, are you ready? Here we go. And this one, I'm I'm curious to see what what you all have to say. Um there there's no right or wrong answer. I guess I'm going to tell you what when I would teach business English, I'm going to I'm going to tell you the answer that I would would tell somebody and then I've also I think if you look online, then you're also going to find the similar information of what you should do in this situation. If you're you're having a job interview, there are some common questions that people ask like um where do you see yourself in five years? What are some of your strengths?

position? And then another question somebody could ask is, "What is one of your greatest weaknesses?" All right. What What do you think you should say in this situation? You're in an interview and somebody asks, "Well, what do you think is one of your greatest weaknesses?" Or, "What is, you know, one of your weaknesses?" Maybe not um a tough one uh or maybe not the the greatest one. So, I know that uh [laughter] wait I think a lot of you are giving like the actual answer. That's that's fine. But I I guess what I'm trying to think of like how how should you answer this? Like what is uh what would be the best way to answer this so that you don't look bad?

Because if you're talking about a weakness, typically a weakness is something that is it's not positive. It's not not good. like some of you had mentioned like uh Shia said easily distractive uh Changi overthinking um Shan eye contact um and Alaz lack of patience um who says that there's a right way in Germany uh so yeah I I think that the the consensus and I'll say consensus which means that many people would agree that what well like what I would tell people is that um you should be honest You should be humble, which many of you I think you were listing like actual weaknesses, but instead of just like telling a weakness and then leaving it at that, you always you want to try to like end it in a positive way. So, what I would always tell um learners to do if we're practicing job interviews is like I said, be honest, be humble, talk about a real um like weakness that that you may Give an honest answer, but then again, I would recommend then talk about, well, what are you doing to improve? How are you trying to make it so that this is no longer a weakness? [snorts] Okay, I know that was a kind of a longer question. So, uh this next one is much shorter. Which signature? If you're writing a letter or an email, um at the end there is a closing. You could say signature or closing. Um not sure why I use signature in this case. I'd probably say closing. signature makes me think of the you're writing your name. Either way, what which closing do you think is the most formal at the end of an email? You're going to use one of these right here, but you want to be professional. You would like to stay make it a little more formal. Maybe it's somebody that you you don't really know very well. Which one do you think is probably the the best one that would be formal in the context of business? Okay. So, uh remember I think it's interesting uh getting some different answers. Um let's see. Okay. So the answer and I'll tell you that again to keep it more formal when I say when I say formal in this case formal would apply to something professional but somebody you either know or you don't know. So in that case I think overwhelmingly it's very common to just use regards or best regards. Regards best regards it it you can't go wrong with it. It's formal. It's professional. If somebody maybe you you're writing to another person at a company and you don't really know them, this would be the professional closing. The other ones I would say that like um just to go back uh this one that they say again um I took this off of a I forgot to put the source down there. It says the ideal ending for conveying a business letter conveys thanks and respect without eccentricity or an overly familiar tone.

That those are not my words. um comes from I forget where I should have uh I meant to site the source. Now I want to go back because many of you were putting uh something else down. Uh best wishes again that's really not in the in business. Um that probably context is not going to apply. Best wishes makes me think like you know somebody's getting ready to to do something or some event and you're wishing them well. Um again regards very standard throughout business. Take it easy. That's informal, something you would probably more likely say in spoken English. I've never really seen that um written as like a closing or a signature. Yours faithfully, it to me that makes me think that there is more of a personal relationship between these people. And in business, like I said, you may not always have a familiar or personal relationship with somebody.

So, yours faithfully is kind of like uh it's a little over the top. And when I say over the top, it's like kind of like too much of like if somebody wrote that to me, I'd be like, "Wait a second. I don't I don't really know this person." Like that's that's a little interesting that they they chose that. Um so, I would say again, regards formal. You can use it whether you know somebody well or you don't know somebody um at all and just say regards. Um so, I thought it was interesting. people were were choosing different ones for that. Uh the next one that I have for you uh is your your boss asks why your team is falling behind schedule. You say not everyone is pulling their weight.

What does this mean? Again, here's a phrase. It is a little informal. Not everyone's pulling their weight. What What is that talking about? Um, while you guys think about that, I need to get the cable to charge this before the whole thing my computer just dies. So, let me know what do you think this phrase is talking about right here. I'm back. Okay. So again, I mentioned that not all of these when you think of business, most people tend to think of statements or phrases that are more formal, professional, but there are many of them that I think are casual in just spoken English such as this one. All right. Your boss asks why the team is falling behind and you say, "Well, not everyone is pulling their weight." What does it mean to when when you say not everyone is pulling their weight? Okay.

Um I'm curious. So, uh I'm trying to think. Not good. Angela. All right. Uh talking about not ever. Uh Abdu Wahed. Okay. Shidan. Yeah. Uh all right. So, let me let me show you what uh [clears throat and cough] what I have for you. And I think some of you are you're on the right track. So if you were to tell this um talk about your team and you say this to pull one's weight it it's an idiom and it basically means that well to do one's fair share of work and often times I think you may hear people use it in a couple of different ways to say that well not everyone is pulling their weight and you would use it with the negative to to basically imply that well the people you're working with they're not doing their fair share of work. Um, as Gustaf said, yes, some people are lazy. Uh, they're not pulling their weight. You So, you might you would use it with a negative and say, well, they're not pulling their weight. Or you may hear people use it as like more of a command or a statement and tell somebody, look, you need to start pulling your weight. You you need to start pulling your weight and start doing your fair share of work. So those are two different context in which you may hear somebody use this phrase. So again, it's it's related to business. We're talking about work um to pull someone's weight. Then let's let's continue on this same uh on this same track. And we could say, well, because some people on the team are not pulling their weight, your boss says, well, you're going to need to pick up the slack. What does this mean? So, it's kind of a two-part conversation. Your boss says, "What what's happening?" You say, "Well, you know, not everyone's pulling their weight." And then your boss says, "Okay, well, then you're going to need to pick up the slack." [snorts] It's not something that you you want to hear in this situation, but again, this is a phrase that um you you could use. It's talking about work. It's related to work. You're going to need to pick up the slack. So, close. I think again, uh remember to if you're not pulling your weight, it means you're not doing your fair share of work. Um, and you're in this in this situation, you're saying that the other people on the team are lazy. They're not doing their fair share of work. So, in that case, the boss says you're going to need to pick up the slack. All right. Um, I haven't seen I think some of you are kind of close um on the right track, but this again is another informal uh phrase. If you say that you need to pick up the slack, it's again it's another idiom. Um like Angela, excellent. You said like work harder. It basically means that you need to improve the situation by doing the work in this case doing the work that somebody else has not done or has not completed. So in that case you're do when when you pick up the slack you're doing somebody else's work. They haven't done it. they have not finished. You're going to do extra work to make the situation better or to make it correct or right. So, you're going to pick up the slack. All right? So, again, it's a good phrase to use, I think, in at work. I'm sure if all of you if you think of your job, think about whether or not this has happened to you that you got extra work, you had to go the extra mile because somebody else was uh they were not pulling their weight and then you had to do the work and you had to pick up the slack. So, if you can relate some of these phrases to your own experience and try to put it in that context, um I think it's going to help you better remember the meaning as well as understand like how it's used. So, um to pull one's weight, not do your fair share of work. To pick up the slack is when you actually need to do somebody else's work. All right. So, then I have this one right here. [laughter] This is Ca. What does it mean? It's uh it is very informal. It's something that I I think mostly is used in a business context. It's not something it's obviously it's an acronym, but it's not an acronym that you're going to hear um all the time. But what do you what do you think it stands for? Those those three letters right there, C YA. And again, it is like I said, it's related to work. I want to see how uh maybe creative and imaginative um you some of these uh some of these phrases are some of the what do you what do you think? All right.

Any any guesses for cya? Uh marketing, call your assistant. No, it's not that. Um, it's a lot more informal. Jane, copy your attachment. No, [laughter] I told you it's very informal. It's not something you're you're probably going to hear or use, but again, you you might come across it in a work context. So, let me just go ahead and tell you because if I don't see too many answers, maybe people don't even have many [crying] guesses. Um, so C YA. Yes, Abraham. Excellent. All right. It stands for cover your ass. So in that case, what we're talking about in the business context is like you're there's a difficult situation. You're trying to protect yourself. And in that case, you're like c ya, you need to cover your ass. You need to make sure that you are protected. So for example, maybe again think about the team. not everybody is pulling their weight and you have to pick up the slack. Perhaps your boss says, "Look, somebody somebody's going to get fired because the team is not being the team it's not successful. You know, there's problems." So then you would say, "Okay, you know, CA, you need to cover your ass and make sure that it's not you that's getting fired because somebody else was not they you had to pick up the slack. somebody else was not pulling their weight. So, it's kind of like you need to make sure you're protected in some situation. It's very it is specific, but like I said, it is usually like a work-related situation where you're trying to protect yourself because obviously, as you all know, at work, it's not like everybody is friends and everything's so joyous and amazing. There is politics involved with work.

You need to protect yourself sometimes. and they may say c ya cover your ass. All right. Um, so maybe maybe that one is a new new one for you. Uh, I I hope that you guys I hope you learn some new expressions from this. Um, is it r Oh yeah. Is it rude to say that? No. I I would say it's mostly said in more of an informative way. So, if you're talking to somebody who's in that situation and you're trying to tell them like, you know, yeah, you should protect yourself, like, you know, CA, um, you know, just letting them know that, yeah, it's a difficult situation. You should protect yourself. You should cover your ass. Um, so yeah, I don't think it's really like rude. Um, again, I think anything in business, whether it's rude or not, it would really depend on maybe who who you're talking to as well. um if it's somebody that you should try to be a little more formal with, a little more respectful. But again, it's an acronym that you may come across uh in business.

So, I hope you learned some new uh phrases. Again, um I am going to try, as I mentioned at the beginning, try to do some more just member only uh live streams. Um and I'm going to try to do a Q&A next week, which I'll put that up. Um, Fixie said, "My my my boss says cover your assets." Yeah, that that that that also works. Um, I haven't heard it used as cover your assets, but again, it it means the same thing. It also would apply with that cya. Maybe your boss is trying to not be uh like use that that word. So, they're talking about assets. But again, it's the same same idea.

the rest of your weekend. I hope you can go out maybe use some of these phrases at work and try to apply them. Some of them, I said they're very casual, but I think they're very useful when talking about work, like picking up the slack, going the extra mile, pulling one's weight. Um, very useful. So, thank you uh Lai, Angela, Vicki, Gustav, uh Rod, um Farat, Esther, Neckla, um Miwe, uh Aiti, just round of English, Jane, Eduardo, um Abraham, Manuel, Sharon. Just trying to get in some last minute shout outs um as much as I can. So, thank you guys. Enjoy uh the rest of your weekend and um I will see you guys next time. Thank you Mary for hitting that like button.

Become Fluent in English | You MUST do these 3 things...

In today's lesson, I want to talk to you about three important keys to helping you achieve English fluency. That's coming up. [music] Hey everyone, my name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today, I want to talk to you about fluency. Because many of you out there would like to become fluent in English. You constantly want to improve your skills. So, I want to talk to you about three useful keys to help you do that. And the first one that I want to talk to you about is exposure. So, think about this expression. Sometimes people might say, well, too much of a good thing that that's bad.

That's not good. In this case, when it comes to learning English, that is the good thing. So, in my opinion, you can never get enough English. So too much of a good thing that is great. That means that you are getting a lot of exposure and you are surrounding yourself with the language. I like to say that you need to create an English bubble. You need to create a bubble around yourself that is just full of the English language and get as much exposure as you can throughout the day. So that means that you are getting daily reading in English, daily listening in English. You are taking in the English language with your eyes as well as with your ears. And maybe you can even do both at the same time if you are watching a video and reading subtitles.

But remember, don't let exposure to the language stop there. Listening to English or reading in English, it should not stop when the video ends or when the story ends or when the song ends. You need to continuously get exposure to the language and surround yourself with English as much as possible for as long as possible. English when you wake up in the morning and English when you go to bed at night. But in order to do this, you need to think about your environment and you need to make sure that your environment encourages you to continuously learn English. mean by that? Let's say that you are reading a book in English. I think you should keep that book as close to you as possible. That book should stay on your nightstand or maybe your desk. You should always be able to see that book and remind yourself, okay, I need to keep reading. If you put that book in a bookshelf surrounded by hundreds of other books, then you are less likely to pick it up again and continue reading.

So whether you are listening to English or you are reading a book or taking some online classes, you need to make sure that these things are close by and they are easily accessible. So that's what I mean when I say think about your environment. What are you surrounded by? What is close to you? And if you can keep English as close to you as possible, then that is just going to make that bubble stronger. you are going to get more exposure to the language and you are going to get one step closer to achieving English fluency. The next key to English fluency is practice. That's it. It's just you just need to continuously practice but you need to do the right kind of practice. So there is a famous quote which I believe is from a golfer and the quote is practice puts brains in your muscles. And what this means is that well when you are an athlete you are doing a sport and you are practicing and practicing and practicing and your muscles become used to that activity and that repetition and you are able to respond without even thinking. And this is where the idea of muscle memory comes from. I think we could say that the opposite is also true when it comes to learning a language. That the more you practice, it's like your brain is developing muscles to help you understand easily if you are reading or listening as well as respond quickly if you are speaking and having a conversation or even writing. So practice will make your brain strong enough to listen to and understand a native speaker. Practice will make your brain strong enough to write using the correct grammar. And the reason why practice is so useful is because you are consistently using the language that you already know. And what I would tell you to do, and I'll summarize it like this, get a variety of the same review.

Now, you may think, well, that that sounds a little strange because a variety is talking about different things, but you just said the same review. Let me tell you what I mean by that. So, I think that when learners think about review, nobody gets really excited because they think it's just the same thing, the same, the same, the same. And everybody wants to learn new things. I think quite often learners tend to focus too much on learning new things instead of reviewing what they already know. So, what I would do in my classroom with my students is that I would try and give them a variety of the same review.

the same grammar throughout those conversations. They were talking in the past tense. And it's very likely because the topic is animals that they used the same vocabulary, the same words and phrases in each of those conversations. Now, it may not have been exactly the same, but that's what I mean by variety. They were having a variety of conversations about the same topic, that same review, using that same vocabulary, and using that same grammar. Another example would be perhaps you want to learn more about politics and you want to learn some words and phrases that are often used when talking about politics. Well, if that's the case, you can go out and find a newspaper article about the leader of your country and then maybe go find another article about the leader of another country. So, you are reading about two different people, but it's likely that you may find some of the same words and phrases in both of those articles. So, again, you are getting a variety of the same review.

And you can connect this to getting the right exposure to the language because I would always encourage you to read something that you're interested in. The way this is going to be a little different because we're talking about practice is that you need to engage in active learning. And what that means is that when you are engaging in active learning, you actually have to do something. You have to respond in some way, shape, or form. You actually are involved in what you are doing. So for example, if you are reading an article then after you read then perhaps you have to answer some questions to make sure that you understood what it is that you were reading.

Same goes for listening. If you listen to something, if you are doing an active listening exercise, then you will probably have to answer some questions. And there is so much out there for you to get engaged in active learning. Taking a quiz. That is one way to do it. There are many different reading and listening quizzes online. All you have to do is do a search for reading quiz or listening quiz. Adding a topic that you are interested in. So you could say reading quiz politics or listening quiz cars. Now, you may not find a quiz that is specific to English learners, but you can also add that information in there as well and do a search for learn English reading quiz photography and you will find some type of active learning exercise that you can do and complete and that is a great way to get practice.

Now, if you're able to speak and have a conversation with another person, then that is a great way to engage in active learning because you just have to respond to someone immediately. And don't forget about writing. Whether you are writing an email, an essay, a comment, writing comments, when you guys write comments, that is a great way to practice and engage in active learning because quite often you are responding to something that I have asked you to do. So, the more you practice, the faster you will achieve English fluency. It's that simple. The third key to English fluency is mental toughness. And I don't know if you've ever heard somebody say when talking about a sport and they'd say, "It's a mental game." And when somebody says this, they're often referring to a sport that somebody would do by themselves, like golf or tennis or swimming. And even though they they practice, they have that muscle memory. People say it's a mental game because if an athlete if they lose it up here, then that becomes a problem. And you could say the same thing about learning a language. It's a mental game because you are really the one responsible for improving your skills and trying to achieve fluency. It really is up to you because you might you might get a lot of exposure to the language and surround yourself with English and you practice all the time with these active learning exercises. You still need to have mental toughness that key to English fluency because you need to stay focused. You need to stay motivated. You need to stay confident and you need to stay on your toes and just keep moving forward.

That is how you are going to become fluent in English. Let's talk about staying focused and and you need to understand what are your goals. Are you trying to build your vocabulary? Are you trying to improve your pronunciation? Understand that, then that's going to help you focus on what you need to do. It'll help you focus on the kind of exposure that you need to get as well as the kind of practice that you need to get. Because when you're learning a language, I I don't need to tell you this. I know it happens to me. It's very easy to get distracted. And I think quite often learners will they will start learning and then they stop and then they start again and then they stop and then at some point they may stop altogether. So you need to stay focused when you are learning English and not get distracted by all these other things which is going to help you achieve fluency.

and well the thing that you need to understand with that is well why are you learning English? Are you learning it for your job? Are you learning it for school? Are you learning it maybe for for dating and you want to meet somebody who is a native English speaker? Whatever your reason, you need to understand that because that's going to help you stay motivated, get exposure to the language, practice the language, and keep working toward fluency. I also said you need to stay confident because when you are practicing your language skills, I if you make a mistake, you may lose a little bit of confidence and you need you need to overcome that and not worry about making mistakes and just keep moving forward.

Brilliant Business Phrases You Should Know for Work

Hello and welcome to today's lesson. I have a vocabulary lesson for you and specifically I want to help you improve your business vocabulary and I have some I've I'm saying they're brilliant business phrases. Brilliant in the sense that they are useful, they're important, they're and I think they're fairly common. Now, some of these phrases are rather informal. Some of them are idioms, but it really depends on the workplace because I'm from the United States. In the US, work can be pretty casual, the way you speak with your colleagues and even your boss. So, I think a lot of these phrases are very common in the workplace and hopefully some of them are new for you. Now, I've gone ahead and pinned in the chat if you would like to get a copy of the lesson notes. And there's also uh you can also look down in the description.

There is a link that you can use there if you are already a part of our email community. I'm just going to go ahead and send them to you. Now I I want to present this to you as a little bit of a quiz because I would like you to participate in the lesson uh as we go through these different phrases. So, the first question that I have for you is right here. And we're going to start out with just a fill-in-the-blank. So, you see the sentence, and I just want you to think, well, how would you complete this sentence right here? Everyone on the team needs to know what the other person is doing. It's very important that we're all on the M.

So, how do you think that person is going to end this sentence? Let me know down in the comments down in the chat. Um, so what do you what do you think? Everyone on the team needs to know what the other person is doing. It's very important that we're all on the M. All right. So this is actually I think uh an expression that is quite common. So the answer is let me show it to you. Same page. You want to make sure that we're all on the same page. Great job. Uh Valentina Lai um Vinra I I was having some trouble with the chat. I didn't see these messages coming up. But I if you say that you want to make sure you're all on the same page, what this means is that you are just agreeing about something specifically how something should be done. So this is a great phrase that you would use if you're working with another person or even in a on a team and you want to make sure that okay, I know what this person's doing. I know what they're doing. I know when this needs to be finished and we're all on the same page. So, it's really a matter of being able to work efficiently and effectively, and you want to make sure that we're on the same page. All right, the next one that I have for you is right here. So, again, think about the context in which I'm I'm giving you this sentence. I'm going to arrive late. I'll need you to get me to M so I know where we are at in the negotiation. So, there are two blanks there. And once again, this is a pretty common phrase that someone would use in a business and work context. And think about the keyword like even that first sentence. I'm going to arrive late. I'm going to arrive late. I'll need you to get me to so I know where we are at in the negotiation. So they're they're basically telling this to someone else like, "Hey, I'm going to arrive late." So there's information that I'm not going to have and they're asking that person, I I I need you to get me to what would you say? And this is a good uh like I said often used in work business, but just because these I'm I'm saying that they're business phrases, you could use them in other context and situations as well. So the correct answer, yes. Excellent. Vicki Gustaf Satlana, good to see you. Up to speed. To get someone up to speed. So hopefully maybe this is a phrase that's new for some of you. Uh I'm going to arrive late. I'll need you to get me up to speed so I know where we're at in the negotiation. To get someone up to speed means that they have all the latest information about something. So, that was the key in there when I was talking about somebody's arriving late. So, maybe they don't know where things are at in the negotiation and therefore they need that other person to get them up to speed. I need you to get me up to speed so I know where we're at and I know what's going on to get someone up to speed. All right. Then we have right here, we made a major mistake. So, we need to go back to the M. And I think this is a phrase that you've probably have heard of before. So, I think maybe you guys may know this one. We made a major mistake. So, we need to go back to the M. So, think about if you're working on some project and yeah, uh, a major mistake is made, what might you have to do? And one of the key words in this is back. We made a major mistake. So, we need to go back to the what? What do you think? How would you best complete this sentence? The answer is drawing board.

All right. Excellent. Great job. Uh, Julia Safihi. Um, maybe I'm sorry if I mispronounced some names. You want to go back to the drawing board. So, this is just another way of saying we need to to start over again. And of course, it's common that if a mistake is made and you can't continue, you could say, "Yeah, oh, we're gonna we're gonna have to start over. We need to start over." So, once again, this is a way to get a little bit of variety. Uh, if you're in this conversation and you're telling somebody, "Look, we just we need to go back to the the drawing board. We need to go back to the beginning of the process and start it again because it's not working." Now, that doesn't mean every time you make a mistake, you're going to have to go back to the drawing board because you can sometimes just fix that mistake and continue. But when you're going back to the drawing board, you're you're going back to the very beginning and you're basically starting over and you go back to the drawing board.

Then I have this question right here or this is a the statement and I want you again to to uh fill it in. Uh, and this one I think is a little more uh challenging. So, think about the situation. Um, she's not working hard, so someone else will need to pick up the M. There's one word missing at the end of that sentence. Once again, this is an idiom very common in the workplace, in this environment in which you are working with other people. So if I were to say, look, yeah, she's not working hard. So someone else will need to pick up the M. So again, just one word in that blank.

And I think you can kind of piece together what the idiom is to pick up the What do you think? So pick up the pace. No, pick up the pace. That would actually make sense in this context. Like pick up the pace. We need to go faster. We need to work harder. Sure, that that would also work. But the word that I was going for and the idiom, and again, hopefully this is maybe new for some of you, pick up the slack. Someone else will need to pick up the slack. So, if you're not familiar with the meaning of this idiom, what it means if somebody has to pick up the slack, you're trying to improve a situation by doing something, in this case, work that someone else has not done or not completed. So, there are different situations in which you could use this.

So for example, in the situation that I gave you, if somebody's not working hard, then there are there's things that need to get done still, which means if another person has to do those things, then they need to pick up the slack. Now, it's not always because someone's not working hard. There could be other situations as well. Somebody may call in sick. It happens. People get ill, they call in sick. that work. If somebody else has to do it for that day, then they have to pick up the slack. Or maybe somebody goes on holiday, they take a vacation. Well, while they're away, another person, a colleague, a team member may have to pick up the slack.

So, if somebody's picking up the slack, they're just doing the work that needs to to be done so that you don't get behind and that everything is done, it's completed, and you pick up the slack. But again, this is a a great phrase to use when you're talking about working with other people. The next one, it's kind of office. So, I I gave you an example in which somebody's not working hard and then somebody else has to pick up the slack. In this case, um, well, I don't want to give it away. She's been working hard all night and burning the what. So, in this case, we're talking about she's working really hard or she's been working really hard all night and burning the what. I I don't know if you can see those blanks. There are two blanks right there. So, there are two words missing in the phrase to complete this sentence.

She's been working hard all night and burning the And a I I guess a hint would be the word burning because you hear these words often used together. It's part of the phrase burning the Yes. midnight oil. So great job uh Lai Mina. Uh excellent Julia. If somebody's burning the midnight oil, what that means is they're just working late and into the night. So you might say this to your colleague if you're they're still at the office, it's really late at night and you can say, "Wow, you're you know, you're burning the midnight oil. You're working late into the night." The other thing I would say about this phrase is that you would often hear it in the continuous tense and someone is burning the midnight oil. They're talking about an action that is in progress at that moment. Somebody is working. It's really late. They're burning the midnight oil.

So, just something to keep in mind grammatically that you would often find this in the continuous tense. All right, we're going to switch gears because that's something I like to do with these with these quiz lessons. So, before I gave you a sentence and a blank and I asked you to complete the phrase. Now, I am just going to give you a picture. I'm going to give you a picture that is a hint as to what business phrase I'm talking about and I want you to guess that business phrase. So, the first one, it'll make a little more sense uh when I show you this this picture right here. And I'll tell you what she's saying, which is also a part of a hint. But what phrase does this picture right here represent? And you can see like looks like she's getting ready to run and she's saying, "I don't need to, but I'm going to go one more mile." All right. I don't need to, but I'm going to go one more mile. What do you think? And I would say that this is a phrase that's pretty common. It's an idiom. It's used frequently when talking about work. And I would also say that it's probably more commonly used in the United States that this is an idiom that's more closely associated with American English but also very common. All right. So the picture and especially what she said the key word there is mile is to go the extra mile. Give some shout outs.

Great job, uh, Lai, Mina, Rose, Vivien. To go the extra mile means you're going to make more, uh, more effort than is expected of you. And I've given you an example sentence down here.

The boss always appreciates it when our team goes the extra mile. You do more than expected, you're going to go the extra mile. And the reason why I said it's more of an American idiom, we're talking about distance to go a mile. uh in most of the world uses uh kilometers in that case, but in the US we talk about miles and you're going to go the extra mile. So once again, this is a very common idiom that you would use in an office at work talking about the somebody's doing more than expected and they're going to go the extra mile. Then this one. All right. What do you think?

Hopefully uh you can kind of tell. I'm not giving you any kind of dialogue or anything like that. Just the picture. What phrase is this talking about? So you see this building right there and this this guy holding that axe and think about what what is he doing and where is he at? That would be the hint that I would give you for this picture. What's he doing and where's he at? Well, he's using the axe to cut the corner of the building. So, the phrase that we're talking about is to cut corners. Great job, Rose. Uh, Manuel, perfect. Cut. To cut corners means to do something quickly by doing it in a less thorough way than you should. So, think about there's another phrase that you could use if you're talking about traveling and you're going from point A to point B. In that case, you would say a shortcut. So, if you're talking about distance and going from one place to another, you could say we're going to take a shortcut. If you're talking about work that you need to do and you need to do it quickly and quality is not that important to you or you don't care about the quality, in that case then you could say you're going to cut corners. People will often cut corners when they're trying to save time. But the problem because you're doing it in a less thorough way is that the quality is just not there. So, in the example sentence I gave you down there, we can save some time if we cut a few corners. In general, it's not a good thing, but it is something that happens uh at work if people are working on a project and they may try to save time and cut corners.

The next one, what do you think? Okay, so this one I think is maybe maybe it's going to be a little more challenging. So you can see in the picture two people and the one person is just handing that little note which says responsibility to the other person. What do you think? I think once I give you the answer and show you the phrase, it's possibly one that you've heard of before and you'll be like, "Oh yes, it makes sense with this picture." So this picture is talking about what phrase when it comes to business or again you could use this in other context and situations as well. This is something that um people will do and I'm sure we could probably all relate to it in one way or another. And Jack saves the day with the answer.

Great job to pass the buck. So, when you're passing the buck, and this is where that word responsibility comes into play, you're failing to take responsibility for a problem and you just expect someone else to deal with it. So, instead of you being responsible for a mistake or something that happened, you're trying to have someone else deal with it and you want to pass the buck. So again, if you're at work and a mistake is made, it's not a good thing. Sometimes I'm sure you could think of a colleague that you've had in the past who did not want to own up to the mistake that they made. Maybe they blamed you or someone else and they tried to pass the buck, saying, "Hey, it wasn't my fault. I was doing what I needed to do." And there's just no accountability. Now I said you could use this in other context outside of work and to just give you one point of reference would be thinking about u politics. That's that is a situation in which people always pass the buck and that was the example that I gave you down here. Nowadays it's common for politicians to not accept responsibility and always try to pass the buck. Hey, it's not my fault this happened. I'm not the one who's responsible. It was the person before me or it was this person over here. And they're always trying to pass the buck. So once again, I'd say this one is an expression that's more closely related uh to American English. Buck is an informal word for a dollar trying to pass the buck. Um, then here's this next one. Okay, so let me I'll I'll give you a hint or I'll try to give you some hints even though I think the picture does a good job representing this phrase. So you can see that in the picture there's this giant ball and these two people. What are they what are they trying to do? What do they want to do? What business phrase is this referring to? I'll give you a moment to think about it and then of course I'll I'll tell you the phrase. So the the one word that I want you to keep in mind would be the word ball. All right, these two people, they're pushing this ball and they're trying to get the ball rolling. All right. It's uh it's a little difficult, but uh yes, great job, Rose Julia. To get the ball rolling means to begin or make something happen. And you may hear people use this just as a statement saying, "Hey, let's get the ball rolling. Let's start. Let's make this happen." Or, "We need to get the ball rolling. We need to start this process and begin uh whatever it is that we need to do." So again, if you're in a some situation at work, you're starting a new project or the clock. Great job, Lai. Perfect. Uh Venraj, nice. So, working around the clock, you're just working all day and night without stopping. So my example sentence, we've been working around the clock in order to meet the deadline. And this is something I think we can relate to at when with our job. If there's a deadline and you have to work really hard, you're burning the midnight oil. And if you stay at the office all day, all night, you're working around the clock. The other thing that I would like to point out, the same um like I did before, is that often you're going to hear this phrase being used in the continuous tense. And you may even hear it being used in with as the present perfect continuous. We've been working around the clock. You're explaining to your boss or someone else that you you started in the past, you're still going now, and it's been going on. we've been working around the clock in order to get this done in order to meet the deadline.

So once again, grammatically something to keep in mind that often you may end up using this phrase in the continuous tense. So the the final part of this little quiz that I have for you and this is uh a little more difficult. I tried to start out easy and then get a little more challenging as we go through this. I am just going to give you well the blank actually no I'm going to give you the meaning and I want you to tell me what business phrase is this referring to and I'll I'll give you a little hint as we go through. So the first one and I do think this one's a little more difficult but the meaning of this phrase to work as hard as other people in a group.

So, you're going to use this business phrase specifically when you're working uh in a group, you're on a team, you're working with at least one other person. That is when you're going to use this phrase. But the meaning of it is to work as hard as other people in a group. All right? So, because I I told you it's kind of difficult just getting the meaning, let me give you a hint. All right? So there is the phrase and I'm just blanking out one word in there to m your weight. Which verb are you going to use? Which verb is a part of that phrase to complete it? And the meaning of it is to work as hard as other people in the group.

I hope that the verb that you're thinking of is pull. to pull your weight. And you don't have to say pull your weight. You could uh put another pronoun in there. Pull his weight, to pull her weight. Uh everyone has to pull their weight. And what this means is that you're saying that everybody needs to do their job. They need to do the things that they're responsible for. And everybody, yeah, you just need to work as hard as everyone else in the group in order to get something done. A lot of times you may hear people use this in the negative, saying that someone is not working as hard as others in the group.

And you'd say, "This person, oh, they're not pulling their weight. He's not pulling his weight or she's not pulling her weight." And you're saying that they're not working as hard as everyone else. So, you may often hear this one used in the negative, the example sentence. Uh, I tried to combine it with that other phrase because if if you don't pull your weight, then someone will have to pick up the slack. So, think about the the meaning again of both of those phrases. If someone is not pulling their weight, they're not working as hard as others. Well, now there's some extra work that needs to be done. Somebody's going to have to do that, in which case they're going to have to pick up the slack. All right?

So, think about both of them being used in that context. If you don't pull your weight, then someone's going to have to pick up the slack. Then, uh, how about this one? All right. The meaning is to make sure someone knows what is happening, especially in a situation that is quickly changing. to make sure that someone knows what's happening, especially in a situation that that is constantly changing. What do you think? All right, let me let me know in the chat if you can think of the the meaning of this uh this idiom right here or this phrase. So, to give you a hint again, because I know it can be a little challenging, but uh yeah, so I think you guys got it.

Again, you're you're aware of what's going on and you're telling someone to keep me posted. So, you you could use a word like I saw some people like um like updated. Sure, there there are different words that you could put in there, but I think commonly people are going to use the word posted and use the phrase, hey, look, keep me posted. All right, I want to know what's happening. The situation is changing. Just please keep me posted. So, the sentence that I gave you down there, I want to know what happens during the meeting. Please keep me posted. Just just know that this is different than somebody saying, you know, get me up to speed. If you're getting someone up to speed, it's basically like you're telling them what's happening happened in the past so that they have all the information. Now, keeping someone posted is like keeping someone is you're you're updating them as the situation changes.

You're letting them know what's happening and you're keeping them posted. And a lot of times I think people will use this statement more as a request and somebody would tell you, "Look, keep me posted. Let me know what's going on. Just keep me posted. The next one. All right. Refers to a lot of you guys did good on that. You You got that last one. Good. I'm glad this. How about this one? What do you think? This refers to something that is uncertain often because other matters have to be decided first. So, it's not like you can I don't want to give it away. you can you can't really make a plan.

Okay. And there are a few words missing which are in the air. Up in the air. Great job. Uh Rose, Jack, Lai, Sevier. Perfect. So again, I I gave you an example sentence down there. Also using plans like right now our plans are up in the air. So, basically, when you're telling someone that your plans are up in the air or something's up in the air, you're letting them know that a decision has not been made and that things are uncertain. Uh, it's it's up in the air. And you could use this at work because people talk about trying to make plans or even travel is another time when somebody may use this phrase like, "Hey, what are your travel plans?" Well, you know, right now our our plans are up in the air because I don't know if I have to work or if they're going to let me take vacation. So, right now things are just up in the air. Uh, great phrase.

Good phrase to use. The next one, what do you think? The meaning is ready to work immediately on a new activity. You're ready to work immediately on a new activity. You are going to do what? And perhaps this one may be new for some of you, which is good because again, in all these lessons, my my real goal is that you learn something new. The key word in this, I think, is immediately. You're ready to work immediately on a new activity. You're going to do what? And I'll give you a little bit of a hint right there. There are three missing words. You're going to m running. And the final word of this business phrase is running. And it means that you're you're you're just ready to work immediately and start this new activity.

You're going to running. All right. So, the phrase that I'm talking about is to hit the ground running. And if you say that you're going to hit the ground running or you need to hit the ground running, it means you just need to start immediately and you're going to begin this new activity. It's almost like there's there's no time for real training or orientation. You just need to begin and start immediately, which is the key word there. And you're going to say, we're going to we're going to hit the ground running. So, for example, in this sentence, if you accept this new position, you're going to have to hit the ground running. There's not going to be a lot of time to learn and become familiar with the new position and your responsibilities. You got to start immediately quickly and hit the ground running. So then uh all right so I think maybe maybe some of you knew that one. What do you think about this one? This phrase right here. So the meaning is talking about the investigation or exercise of care that a responsible business or person is normally expected to take before entering into an agreement or contract with another party. So this is well again I don't want to give it away. Just think about the the meaning and I know this is a rather longer meaning. I actually shortened this because I wanted to fit it on one page, but it was much longer. But this is an investigation or the the act of investigating or this exercise of care that a business or person is expected to take. This is something that they should do before entering into an agreement or contract with another party perhaps like before um buying a company or before you of course like sign a contract. You should trying to uh I have to stop myself before I give it away make it too easy. Uh see some a correct answer. There is the one of the words. There's two words and the verb that I was going to use is often used with the verb do. You should do your do what? And this is a pretty common phrase now that uh that you're thinking about it. Yes, you guys know it. Excellent. Alejandra uh Hamdi Manuel Bugoski, you're we're talking about due diligence. And as I mentioned, it's often used with the verb do. Someone needs to do their due diligence. And that's referring to that exercise of care to understand what it is that they're getting involved in. Uh, and you should always do your due diligence. So, the example, you should do your due diligence before signing the contract.

Read through it, understand what it's saying, and really do your due diligence. This is a common phrase that I think is used in the business world, doing one's due diligence. So, here again, if you would like to get a copy of these lesson notes, I've pinned the the link in the chat. There's also a link down below in the description. If you are already a part of our email community, I'm going to go ahead and email them to you so you can check your inbox. But these are phrases that I think are fairly common in a a work environment. So, here's a review of all 15 phrases that we talked about today.

And just to to give you a little bit of a quick review and use some of these because I know that when it comes to building your vocabulary, learning new words and phrases, I feel like a lot of you uh are always willing to go the extra mile. You're joining these lessons. you're reviewing the lesson notes and I think that's really going to help you because when you're building vocabulary the you there's no need to cut corners be taking learning a language and building your vocabulary it is a longer process and I I think that as long as you start this process and say look I'm going to try to learn so many words a day I'm going to get the ball rolling and really try to learn a lot of new words and phrases this year, then I I think that's the most important thing. And if you haven't started, then what I would suggest is that you just, you know, you begin and you hit the ground running and just start learning these words and phrases immediately, trying to pra practice using them because like I said, it's a long process building your vocabulary. You may forget some things, but there's no reason to go back to the drawing board. You don't have to go back to the beginning. You can just review and try to remember the word, the meaning, how it's used. And yeah, I think you you you guys know this stuff. I'm trying to think of other words that I can throw in there. Uh other phrases before we wrap things up. Uh but once again, it takes time. There's no it's not something you have to just work around the clock. Uh you take your time. Try to learn a little bit each day. And of course, I would love it if you keep me posted. Let me know down in the comments how things are coming. Are you able to have you been learning new words? Have you been improving your English? Let me know.

Keep me posted down in the comments. I love hearing from you. So, that's the way that we'll we'll wrap this up right now. Uh I hope you guys enjoyed the lesson. I hope you learned something new. And uh as always, yeah, thanks so much for watching and I

Build Academic Vocabulary and Practice: SIGNIFICANT

Hello and welcome to our global classroom. Today we're going to teach you a very very very significant word. The word significant means something that's important. For example, a significant event. a wedding, having a baby, graduation, a promotion at work. These are all significant events. Significant also means fairly large, especially large enough to be noticed. Do you have any more examples? mmmm... yes. Are you going to be bringing your significant other person thing? Are you kidding? That's very significant! But of all these anomalies, the most significant is this I have significant doubts about your... significant shrinkage! We just don't recognize the most significant moments of our lives. But what is significant is I felt the touch of God This could be the most significant conflict.

a goatee... I'm guessing that's significant. Let's see how it's used in a sentence: Significant is an adjective describing the word "event". Here's another example: Now that you know the meaning of the word and how it's used, let's check your pronunciation. The word "significant" has four syllables, and the stress is on the second syllable. I want you to repeat after me. I'll say it, and then you say it. Guys, I can't hear you. You're gonna have to yell! Whoa, calm down. Alright, that's good. You sound just like a native speaker.

Let's expand our vocabulary and look at two other words in the word family. If you want to say the opposite of the word "significant", you just add the prefix "in" in front of it, and then you have "insignificant". Ioana, do you have an example for us? Sports are an insignificant part of life. Whoa, how can you say that? Sports are very significant! Ummm, no. Insignificant. Here're some more examples: a tiny insignificant detail insignificant to you, maybe I'm just a toy... a stupid, little, insignificant toy The ability to destroy a planet is insignificant.

Another word related to significant is the noun "significance". It means something has importance. And often you might hear people use it in the form of a question when they want to know why something is important, and they'll ask: What's the significance? I don't understand the significance What's the significance of this John Chimpo? What's the significance? I don't know! Let's practice what we've learned. We're going to give you three questions, and for the first two questions, we want you to point to the word that correctly completes the sentence. We'll give you a few seconds, and then we'll tell you what the answer is. Here's your first question: The answer is significant.

The birthday is called the quinceanera, and it is a very important day that young girls celebrate. The answer is insignificant because there wasn't much of a change in temperature between yesterday and today. Now, we have one more question for you, but we want you to do two things for us first. Number 1: Please like the video if you think you've learned something today.

Number 2: We want you to practice using the word, so in the comments below, we want you to write a sentence telling us what is significant to you. If you need some time, just pause the video. Did you write your comment? Ok, I trust you. If you did, let's go to the last question. For this last one, we want you to click on the answer that you think is correct. If you get it right, we'll let you know. If it's incorrect, it'll take you back to the beginning of this video and we recommend that you watch this video again. Think about it as extra practice because building your vocabulary is a significant part of learning English.

Ok, here's the final question:

Build Your English Vocabulary PROCESS (Word of the Day)

Welcome, welcome, welcome to our global classroom! Today we have a special lesson for you because I'm going to show you the process that goes into making these videos. And it's a very cool process, which happens to be today's word. Before we begin today's lesson, I'd like to remind you to please subscribe to our channel if you enjoy practicing and improving your English skills. Also, you can join one of our social media classes. We're active on Facebook, Instagram, Twitter and Snapchat. So the word process means So let's start out by looking at a simple process, making a sandwich. You got your bread, your lettuce, your cheese, your ham. And then you put them all together... and you got a sandwich!

We can then use the word in the following sentence: Notice the adjective that I used with the word "process". And there are other adjectives that are commonly used with this word as well: I'm not even wearing a watch... but let me give you an example and show you the different steps in a time consuming process: making these videos. First, we have to write a lesson plan so that we know what we're going to teach.

The next part of the process is filming the video, and we have to set up all of the equipment. the camera the lights the green screen Then we start filming the lesson, just like we're doing right now. It's all part of the process. Finally, we need to edit the video, which helps give the video a nice white background, like this And then we can take out those edges, like this Pretty cool stuff! The process goes on to include creating a description, uploading the video, writing a transcript, and then marketing on social media. There you have it. That is a "behind the scenes" look at our process. Here are some other examples of how the word is used in context.

It's a process, it's a process, it's a process. Actually, she's in the process of... the grieving process begins the contamination process is not complete the unfreezing process The screening process was extremely difficult Quickens the aging process. Is that right? Learning's always a painful process. It's all part of the recruiting process. Now that you know the meaning of the word, let's look at the pronunciation. The word "process" has two syllables, and the stress is on the first syllable. However, it's important to know there is a difference between the British and American pronunciation of this word. - Oh, were we in the process, John? Yes we were! Well, the primary process, or process, as we say this side of the pond, Well, process. We invented words, we'll tell you how they are supposed to sound.

The British, they say process... process and in American English it's process... process Now if we want to expand our vocabulary, we can just look at the word family. If we'd like to use this word as a verb, it's essentially the same: to process. However, it does have a slightly different meaning. processing, processing To process means to... However, it's still going through a series of steps. So for example, we could say: And to give you another example, like when it would be a chemical operation, we could say: It's happening up here. And the result, when you process this information, is that you are learning what this word means. We can also use this word as an adjective: processed. This just means...

And because the process is finished, it's commonly used as an -ed adjective. Mostly, we hear this adjective when talking about processed food. So there is processed cheese, processed cereal, processed snacks. There's a lot of processed food out there. Let's practice what we've learned today. This is going to be a listening comprehension activity. ... because I'm going to say a few sentences, and I want you to: You can either say the letter or the meaning, whichever you like. I'm going to say each sentence twice, and then I'll give you the answer. You ready? Game on! Completing the school project is an ongoing process that will take months. Completing the school project is an ongoing process that will take months.

If you answered a, then you are correct. We're talking about a series of steps taken to reach a particular end; and the key word in this sentence is completing, because we're talking about finishing something. Here's the next one: If you don't know the answer to a multiple choice question, use the process of elimination. If you don't know the answer to a multiple choice question, use the process of elimination. The answer to this one is also a. And this is something that your teachers might tell you: use the process of elimination. So if you know that this is not the answer and that is not the answer, then this must be the answer.

The process of elimination. Here's the next question. In order to stay healthy, you should avoid eating processed foods. In order to stay healthy, you should avoid eating processed foods. The answer is c: artificial or unnatural. Again, you commonly hear this when talking about foods. Here's another one: I was so shocked that I wasn't able to process what was happening. I was so shocked that I wasn't able to process what was happening. Here the answer is b. We are talking about a chemical operation... up here. Hopefully, you got all of those right. Now, for the last bit of practice: I want you to use one of the words that we talked about today and write a sentence in the comments below.

I'd also encourage you to read other people's sentences to see how they're using the word. And finally, please like the video if you feel like you've learned something new. And I suppose you can dislike the video if you feel like you haven't learned anything new and you're still watching this video. So that's it! Thanks for joining today's lesson and we'll see you next time!

CAT'S OUT OF THE BAG | Simple & Easy English Idiom

Today, I'm going to teach you a new idiom with the help of my little furry friend, Georgie here. The idiom is to let the cat out of the bag, and to let the cat out of the bag means to reveal a secret. To reveal a secret. So when you let the cat out of the bag, you tell that secret or you reveal that secret. Gentlemen...cats out of the bag. When the cat is in the bag the secret is inside. Nobody knows about it. But when the cat gets out of the bag, the secret is out. So we can pretend that the cat is the secret. And if the cat gets out then there is no more secret.

Georgey! Georgey! Georgey! Come here baby. Yeah, good job. So when the cat is out of the bag like she is now, it means that the secret is out. Jim! Why didn't you tell me that you had a crush on Pam? Well, the cat's out of the bag.

Alright...alright...alright...so you know the name now. The cat is out of the bag. The cats out of the bag, doctor. No more secrets. For example if somebody tells me a secret and I tell someone else that secret, that means that I've let the cat out of the bag. So don't be that person. Don't let the cat out of the bag Uh. I'm covered in cat hair So let's practice the idiom.

In the comments below tell us about a time when you let the cat out of the bag. Thank you so much for watching. If you like cats and you like idioms, don't forget to give this video a thumbs up. Thank you. We'll see you next time.

CAUSATIVE VERBS - Have, Get, Make, Let, Help | Super Important Grammar

I have a question for you and just tell me which one you think is correct I help my friends make dinner or I help my friends to make dinner so this can be a bit tricky for a couple of reasons the first has to do with the verb help which I will come back to in just a little bit the second reason which is really the main reason is because when you learn verbs and I'm sure you've noticed that when you have the verb followed by an object it's often then followed by the infinitive which is to plus the base verb so consider the following sentences I taught her to swim they asked me to stay we told him to help in each of these sentences we have the verb followed by an object followed by the infinitive something else I could tell you is that I always ask you to subscribe to the channel if you would like to improve your English skills and that way I can become your English teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about helping you reach your fluency goals so in this lesson we're going to talk about positive verbs which are different than the ones I just showed you and it's important to understand how to form sentences with these verbs and use the causative structure so that you don't make simple mistakes because these verbs are very common common and they're very useful so in today's lesson I am going to talk to you about the verbs have get make let and help so what exactly are causative verbs well these are verbs that we use to indicate that someone or something causes something to happen so I'm going to use the word cause a lot so it's also important to understand what this word means and that is just the reason why something is happening let me give you an example and then we'll go into more detail I could tell you my wife made me take out the garbage okay giving you a real life example so basically my wife is causing me to do something which is take out the garbage she is the reason why this is happening so the subject is causing the action now even though she's not doing the action of taking out the garbage she is in control of the situation so the subject may not do the action but controls the situation causing something to happen and notice that I'm not going to follow the object with to I'm not going to say to take now I'm trying to help you understand just the basic idea because the way that someone or something controls a situation and causes something to happen is either by paying asking convincing forcing or permitting someone want to do something right now I want to switch gears and talk to you about the causative structure but I will come back to these ideas throughout the lesson so let's begin with have normally people think of the verb have meaning possession like uh I have a phone but in this case the meaning is different it means causing something to happen either by paying asking or convincing someone but mostly it's by paying and there are two different structures depending on whether the object object is a person or thing so you have someone plus the base verb you have someone do something or you have something plus the past participle you have something done let me walk you through a situation if I give you the sentence my brother painted my house we know what happened but we don't know what caused this to happen now if I said I had my brother paint my house I had someone do something now we know that I caused this to happen I didn't do the action I didn't paint my house my brother did and we can infer that I either asked him or convinced him or or maybe even paid him some money now if I said I had my house painted I had something done and I'm using that past participle again I am the one who caused the house to get painted but we don't know who did the action and in this case the structure is similar to the passive and that's because the focus is not really on well who's doing the action because we don't know the most important thing is the result that the house got painted and in this case we can infer that I paid someone to do this here are some more examples but when you think about these sentences keep in mind that the subject is causing something to happen but not doing the action so with have someone plus the base verb I could say I'll have my friend give us a ride or the teacher had the students learn positive verbs and with have something plus the past participle I could tell you they had their home remodeled or we had the event catered let's now have a look at the verb get which once again has two different structures depending on whether the object is a person or thing so you get someone plus two plus the base verb you get someone to do something or you get something plus the past participle you get something done to be honest it has the same meaning as have in that someone or something is causing something to happen either by asking convincing or paying like Mo mostly pay paying so as causitive verbs have and get may be used interchangeably the the only real difference is that have is a bit more formal than get once again though I have some sentences and we we'll just walk through a situation a mechanic fixed her car I'm just stating a fact and I'm not talking about who caused this to happen but if I say she got a mechanic to fix her car she got someone to do something so now we know that she caused this to happen and we can infer that she paid this person to do this so you could use this form if someone asks did she find someone to fix her car I'm asking if she caused the fixing to happen and then you could respond uh yeah she got a mechanic to fix her car and then if I said she got her car fixed she got something done again we're using the past partis simple and this is similar to the passive we don't know who did the action because that's not important the focus is on the result that the car is fixed and yes we can infer that she paid someone to do this so maybe somebody is asking can she give us a ride I I thought her car was in the shop in this case all that matters is the result that the car is now working so you could say yeah she can give us a ride she got her car fixed here are some more examples with get someone plus two plus the base verb I could say when my daughter gets older I'll get her to do her homework okay that's that's probably not true but an example with get or I could say we got our neighbors to give us a hand and then a couple of examples with get something plus the past participle um he's going to get his haircut this week or she got her nails painted yesterday then the the next three make let and help are a little easier because they share the same structure you have the verb plus the object plus the base verb and and really the object is going to be someone or something now when someone or something makes something happen generally it's by force or or just causing this thing to happen I could say my boss made me work late all right that's force or the Wind made my bike fall over once again for course or the movie made me cry it it just caused this to happen when someone or something lets something happen it's because of permission my boss let me leave work early she let me borrow her car the P lets us enter all of the museums and then we have the verb help which I told you at the beginning of the lesson is a little tricky because with the verb help you're not necessarily causing something to happen you're really assisting someone but still it's considered a positive verb because we use the same structure I could say my wife always helps me do the dishes or the article will help me understand the situation or my experience help me get the promotion now with help I should tell you it is possible to follow the object with two plus the base verb so we can use to help with all of these sentences and the meaning stays the same but because we're adding an additional word which is two most of the time people won't use it because it's just more efficient to say or write fewer words but you don't have to take my word for it you can check out engram viewer and compare these phrases on a graph so that you can visually see which of the phrases is more commonly used and as you can see using help plus the object plus the base verb is more frequently used but let's go back to my original question I help my friends make dinner or I help my friends to make dinner both of them are correct but it's more common for someone to just say I help my friends make dinner now let's test your knowledge with a mini quiz I will give you a moment to think of the answer and then I will tell you the correct answer are you ready here's your first question I M my toilet what do you think so the correct answer is C I had a plumber fix my toilet I had someone do something here's the next one she M her jacket the answer is she let her friend borrow her jacket she let someone do something here's another question the bad weather M are PL land what do you think the answer is the bad weather made us alter our plans it forced us to do this and then there's we M the contract the correct answer is we got a lawyer to look over the contract we got someone to do something let me know how you did down in the comments because I love hearing from you and of course I always try to get you to hit the like button just know I'm never going to make you hit the like button and I'm really just trying to review some of these causitive verbs but if you learn something new please hit that like button I hope you enjoyed the lesson thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time Soo

CHALLENGING RIDDLES IN ENGLISH | Critical Thinking Lesson

So I have a riddle for you. What has two hands but cannot clap? I'll tell you the answer to that in just a moment. So in case you're wondering what has two hands but cannot clap. That is a riddle. And the answer to that riddle is a clock. Because a clock has two hands that move around and tell us the time. But it cannot clap like that. Today, we have a super-fun video. At least, I think it's fun. I think it's fun too Yeah. Because it's an activity that you can do as a teacher. You can do it in the classroom with your students as an icebreaker. But it's also something that stimulates your mind.

It's also a very good listening activity. And a great way to practice your creative thinking skills. To expand your vocabulary and just to improve your speaking. So what we're going to do is ask each other some riddles. So we would like you to play along. And we will ask you the riddles. And we will put them up there so you can see them in writing. And then after a few moments, we will give you the answer. Because we are going to try and guess what each other's riddles are. I am very worried because I think I am very bad at riddles. No, I am too. I'm not very good. We'll see how we do. Are you ready?

Yep. Definitely ready. Do you want to go first or do you want to... We always have this question. Yeah, I'll ask you first okay. Okay, number one. What kind of dog never bites? What kind of dog never bites? So this is the point where you guys try guess as well. Don't Google it. I think I know that one. I would have to say a hot dog You're right. Is that right? Yeah, that's right. And now I'm a little hungry. I have one for you. Actually, now that I...okay, all right. This is a this is a good one. What word in the English language is pronounced poorly even by academic scholars?

So what word in the English language is pronounced poorly even by academic scholars. It doesn't matter if it's an academic scholar. Smartest people in the world. Best students. Best teachers. This word is pronounced poorly. Do you want me to read it again? Oh, no. I know it. I know it. What? Poorly. Yes. Yes. Good job! Well done. Okay, this...do you want an easier one or harder one? You choose. It just...doesn't matter. Okay, I'll give you an easy one. How many months have 28 days? How many months have 28 days? It'd just be one month, which is February. Is that your final answer? So one? Is that your final answer? Yeah. Boom. No. All of them have 28 days.

I thought it was easy. Oh, that's really funny. I love this game. Oh gosh. Alright, so this one...are you ready? Yes. Okay. Okay. How many didn't? What? What? What? Alright, I'll read it again. Wait. Ah, 20 ate chickens. Okay. So I'm guessing 10 didn't. Yeah, you got it. Twenty ate chickens. A little bit of a play on words. Okay, so the score, if anyone is keeping this score, is two to one. Oh gosh. Some of these are a little difficult now that I look at them. That's fine. What do tigers have that no other animals have? What do tigers have that no other animals have? Do you guys know? There's a trick. It's tricky. That's why, you know, I'm trying to think of like...what do Tigers have that no other animals have I don't know. A cereal. Tony the Tiger.

He has his own cereal. Frosted Flakes. Who's Tony the Tiger? Frosted Flakes. What about Cheerios? No, it has nothing to do with cereal or any kind of food product. Should I tell you the answer? Yeah. What is it? Could you guys guess it? What do you think? Do they have...that no other animals have...baby tigers. They have baby tigers. Okay. Alright. Okay. Are you ready? I'm scared. I'm going to think of a hard one now. Yeah. If you have me you want to share me, if you share me then you don't have me. I don't know. If you have me you want to share me, if you share me then you don't have me.

Other than me. That would be my only guess. But I don't...I don't think that's the right answer. Do you want a hint? Well think about what do people have that they really want to share with other people. But they can't. Or they shouldn't. Love. No, you're close. It's something...it's not like something... Patience. It's not something physical that you can give to somebody else. What do you share with other people? You share something. You have it. You want to share it. You shouldn't share it most of the time. Information. What? Is it called information? No, no, no. That's not the answer. It is information that you're sharing. News. No. A secret.

If you have a secret, you want to share a secret. But once you share the secret, it's no longer a secret Fine, I'll give you a harder one too, then. Okay. Maybe it's not hard. Let's see. Let's see. What can you hold in your left hand, but not in your right hand? What can you hold in your left hand, but not in your right hand? Your...I don't know. I'm thinking like...what your...?

Your left palm. But you can't hold that with your right hand? Your left...I guess you could. Your your left fingers. Your left... You can't hold...oh, you can't hold your right hand. There we go! Good job! Had to think about that one. It took a while. Are you guys getting these? Are you guessing them?

Are you guessing them right? Alright you ready for the next one? Yes, yes, I am. What loses its head in the morning and gets it back at night? What? What what loses its head in the morning, but gets it back at night? Loses its head? Do you want a hint? Something about the sun or something. Do you want a hint? Yeah. It's not like a person or an animal. No, I figured it was the sun or something. Where's your head in the morning, and where's your head at night? Oh, a pillow! So as you can see that we had some fun. We both did about the same. Yeah. Some of those were challenging.

Yeah, we didn't do very well, but... But we hope that you can see how these can be useful when you're teaching, when you're learning, when you're trying to challenge your brain. But also practice your English. Yeah, you really have to...you really have to think. It's fun. Now we have a riddle for you. So we will ask you this riddle. If you want to know what the answer is, you can go check out our Facebook page. We will leave a link in the description. So you can check and see if you got the answer right. So your riddle is... Do you know? What is it? If you want to know, go check out our Facebook post.

And you can find out the answer there. Thank you guys so much for watching. We hope you enjoyed our little riddle challenge. And we will see you next time. Bye.

COMMONLY CONFUSED WORDS IN ENGLISH | Prefixes Un- vs Dis- | Build English Vocabulary

today I want to help you build your vocabulary by talking about some commonly confused words that's coming up hi everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today it's more of a vocabulary lesson even though there is a little bit of grammar to it because I want to talk to you about some commonly confused words with the prefixes on and dis now if you don't know what a prefix is it is a group of letters that is added before a base word and it changes the meaning so for example you could have well dress and undress agree disagree when you add those prefixes to the front of those base words it's going to change the meaning so let's start with the meaning of those prefixes un and dis and in general they both pretty much mean not however there are some slight differences un can mean not as in well unlock you know the door is unlocked it's not locked it can also mean the opposite of some action for example undress instead of getting dressed I you know I at night I got undressed and I put on my pajamas dis can also mean not as in disobey you do not obey someone it also can mean a lack of something for example honesty dishonesty this person lacks honesty or it can mean the opposite of some action disappear instead of appearing it's gonna it's gonna be the opposite it's gonna go away it's going to disappear now the reason why I say that that these prefixes can create a bunch of different commonly confused words is because there are some base words in which you can add either on or dis and when you do that you're going to have different meanings so let's begin by talking about our first set of words unqualified and disqualified so let's start with unqualified the base word qualified it's an adjective it may that you have some knowledge some skill some experience in order to do something this person is qualified if they are unqualified then then it's just like putting not in front of it this person does not have the skills the knowledge or the experience to do something they are unqualified I think of like a job position you apply for a job maybe you are qualified or you are unqualified for that position oh man I can't believe you fail oh I'm gonna lose my job just because I'm dangerously unqualified now disqualified this actually comes from the verb to qualify which means that you have if there's a competition that you have met the standards in order to participate or continue to qualify but if you are disqualified you may be disqualified from a competition or from an event which means that you have violated or broken those standards or you maybe have cheated in some way which now it prohibits you from participating in this event and in this case it would be an adjective you could say I was disqualified from the competition I did something wrong so I was disqualified or the team was disqualified because they were caught cheating you pull that crap one more time disqualified so with both of these words unqualified and disqualified they are both adjectives but the the meaning is completely different unqualified you have no skill or experience disqualified you have violated some some rule and you cannot participate in some activity next I want to talk to you about unable vs. disabled now both words have that base word able which means that you have the the skill or knowledge in order to do something if we add the prefix on unable it's also an adjective and it's like we're adding not in front of that that meaning that you are that you do not have the skill or the strength or the opportunity to do do something you are unable to do it Charlotte was a bit freaked out as well unable to sleep and unable to unpack I'm unable to have children disabled means that this this is actually a verb to disable something and when you disable something it means that you are you are ruining it so that it's not able to work that you are destroying something so that it does not work correctly this is actually the opposite of the verb enable so in that case you have another prefix there and able to enable something it means that you are you were doing something to get it working to disable something that you are doing something so that it's not working for example if there maybe there's an alarm and the alarm is broken you want to disable the alarm so that it stops going off please disable the field system in this case there are two different parts of speech you are unable to do something an adjective you can't do it or you want to disable something a verb you want to stop it from working correctly then we have unarmed versus disarmed and the difference between these two is really just the part of speech even though the meaning is a little similar so let's start with that base word again armed now this can be an adjective which you're describing someone who has weapons so if somebody is unarmed then you are it's also an adjective you are describing somebody who does not have weapons I often think you might hear this in a movie or TV show somebody walks out there hands are up and they say I'm unarmed don't shoot I'm unarmed you're unarmed indeed we are sir Tatum may I address you and your deputy but arm can also be a verb to arm someone which means to give them weapons and in that case to disarm means to give up weapons and in our original example unarmed versus disarmed we're talking about the past it is a regular verb armed disarmed the don't last long here gentlemen you will now be disarmed you can try you refuse to obey our laws so unarmed means you don't have weapons it's an adjective disarmed is the past tense verb means that you you are giving up your weapons disarmed now let's look at two words that I think are the commonly confused and that is uninterested versus disinterested so let's begin with interested which is an adjective that means that you that you are showing that you want to learn more about something or or be involved in it uninterested it's also an adjective which means that you that you do not want to learn more about it and I I think it maybe shows that somebody is bored or indifferent along with your station down the planet dr.

unbiased let me give you an example if there is a competition and there's going to be a referee you want to have a disinterested referee somebody who is unbiased and they are going to call the game fairly you want a disinterested referee it can also mean that you you're not really feeling engaged in something for example you could say that somebody says something in a disinterested voice that there they have a disinterested voice they're not really engaged in what's happening it can also mean that you just don't care about the outcome that you are disinterested in somebody's progress that you you don't care about the outcome of this thing you are disinterested only time I have taken one the driver will not stop talking to me no matter how disinterested I say if you just give you yakking away now I think to be perfectly honest one reason why it can be very confusing is that over the years people have used this interchangeably even native speakers but I want you to keep that in mind I'm trying to teach you the traditional meaning of these two words so if somebody is uninterested I want you to think of those two words bored or indifferent if somebody is disinterested then I would describe them as being unbiased or impartial or they just they just don't care about the outcome now I want to talk to you about the difference between unlike versus dislike and the difference between these two words really depends on the part of speech of like so the word like can be a preposition which means that that something is similar to something else for example I could say I am just like my father I am very similar to my father if we're talking about like as a preposition then you want to use the prefix on to to just say not someone or something is unlike something or someone else I could say she is unlike her mother she is not similar to her mother she doesn't react to disappointment very well unlike me if like is a verb which often I think most of the times we use it as a verb it can have two different meanings the most common meaning is that that something is enjoyable I like playing basketball if I want to say the opposite that I don't like playing basketball then I would use the prefix dis I dislike playing basketball so to dislike something means that you do not find it enjoyable I don't think you dislike cop talk I think you dislike cops the other meaning of like as a verb which I think has become more and more popular since since the Internet has come about is it just means to show support or approval for something it oftentimes I would ask you guys I'd say hey please please like our video lessons now if we're talking about using like to show support then you could not show support and you would unlike thing too unlike something means that you are withdrawing your support or approval for this thing so whether you use dislike or unlike when we're talking about a verb it really just depends on the meaning if something is not enjoyable then you dislike something if you are withdrawing your support then you would unlike something then we have ungraceful versus disgraceful let's begin with graceful which is an adjective and if you describe something as graceful it means that it is beautiful or elegant and typically you're talking about the way something moves that the the dancers were very graceful if you want to say that that they are not beautiful typically in the way that they move then you would say that something or someone is ungraceful it is also an adjective the for an example I would say I am I am a nun graceful dancer if you see me dancing you that's probably the word that you would think of like you've ungraceful now if we're talking about disgraceful it is also an adjective but it has a different meaning the reason it has a different meaning is because this is connected to the verb to disgrace which means to bring shame on someone so disgraceful if something is disgraceful then you are describing it as being just shameful that it's something you don't like and you're like wow this is this is just disgraceful I think it is shameful it is disgraceful that's disgraceful you're disgraceful so I hope I was able to clear up a little bit of confusion among these words because depending on the prefix you use it's going to change the meaning completely and because of that I think these words are commonly confused and I'm I want to do a little review with you right now and try to repeat some of these words but having a tough time doing it because they all have this this negative connotation with not so I could say I I hope that you did

COMMON ACRONYMS IN AMERICAN ENGLISH

Hey everyone, happy 2020. Hope you all had a wonderful New Year and we are back. Back for more lessons. And today, this is a great English lesson because this lesson is all about, as you can see from the picture right there, acronyms. I am going to talk to you about over 30 different acronyms that are common in American English. Now, some of these acronyms are universal. They are well known across all English varieties, if you're talking about American English or British English, Australian, Canada, but other acronyms are specific to the United States and as we go through the lesson, I will tell you which acronyms are really just used in the United States because they refer to things happening in the US. So, first I want to tell you that there are a couple of different types of acronyms and that's where I think we should begin because there are two types of acronyms.

One type is an acronym that you say just like it's a word. You say it as though it's one word. The other type of acronym are those in which you say each individual letter. And that's what these acronyms in this lesson that's what this lesson's all about. Acronymism acronyms where you say each individual letter and that is called initialism. So, initialism is when the phrase is abbreviated using the first letter of each word and then you're going to pronounce each letter individually. For example, look at these two acronyms right here, LOL and i d k.

Now, some of these acronyms may be very familiar to you, others may not be. I think this one is l o l, it stands for laugh out loud. And i d k stands for I don't know. These are common acronyms that people use when you are sending a text message or chatting. So, I've divided this lesson up into different categories. We're going to talk about acronyms based on different categories and the first category that I have for you because I use l o l and i d k are acronyms that are all about text acronyms, these text abbreviations. So, I've given you a list of acronyms right here. I will tell you what each one means, but the reason why I'm giving you the list is that I want to see if you can identify some of these acronyms on your own. If you are looking at this list and thinking, "Okay, some of them sound familiar or some of them I know what they mean." Now, when we're talking about text acronyms, like you're on your phone, you're sending a a text message.

Often usually acronyms are capitalized. If you see them in a newspaper, they're going to use capital letters. When we're talking about texting, some people you can use either capital letters or lower case. Texting is very informal, it's very casual, and that's why some people may use lower-case letters. But, for if you're thinking about you're writing a paper, something more formal in business or in school, and you want to use an acronym, you should use capital letters, okay? But, that's why I put both of them up here because we're talking about text acronyms, all right? So, some of them some of you already see, you you know some of these and that's great. So, let's look at these right now. BRB, that just stands for be right back. If somebody text you that, that means they'll be right back. IMHO, in my humble opinion. People often write this before they state their opinion about some topic. You may also see IMO, in which people say in my opinion. Uh NVM is never mind. BTW, by the way. THX, thanks. And B and the letter and the number four is just before. So, I I don't know about you. I am not I'm not a big person when it comes to writing text messages. So, I really don't use these acronyms. There are many many different text acronyms, and this has become I I think so much more popular in the past decade as more and more people are using cell phones and sending text messages, and they want to write faster, and they want to say things as quickly as they can. People tend to use these acronyms a bit more. Now, I will say also when you're writing, this is specific to text messaging.

not avoid using these acronyms in any kind of formal writing. If you are writing a serious email, or if you are in business, these are just for texting, sending text messages. All right? So, these are some common text acronyms. Now, I have a question for you, and I want to see if you can identify some of the different acronyms because, again, this is interactive. I want you guys to write your answers in the chat or in the comments, uh and practice practice your English skills. So, here's an example of a sample text message. I want you to try it try to read it out loud to yourself. Read it to yourself and say the acronym, the full form. Don't just say the letters. See if you can interpret this text and say the full form, all right? So, I want you to read this to yourself right now and see if you can just not only identify those acronyms, but actually you know what they mean. So, here are more acronyms. There are a total I've highlighted them for you.

Just kidding. Don't worry, won't watch the movie without you. Talk to you later." That is how you would say this message in its full form. Again, I think some people, especially I think younger people nowadays, they use acronyms all the time. They use them quite often. Um for me, I don't really use them that much, especially when uh I'm texting. So, the first set that I wanted to talk to you about were text acronyms. Now, I want to look at some information acronyms. These are acronyms that were will give you some more specific information about something. And I think these are pretty common right here. So, looking at these acronyms, again, see if you can identify these acronyms, all right? What do they mean? If you know what they mean, go ahead, write it in the chat, share with us. I will tell you what these acronyms mean, but this is to give a little more specific information. So, the meaning of these four acronyms, all right? F A Q. This is an acronym that I think you will often see if you're, you know, online and you're searching for information on the internet, and you may see on a website it says FAQ, frequently asked questions. If you have a question about something, this is where This is where you want to go. You want to go to this section and see what questions people have. Frequently asked questions. S U V. Sport utility vehicle. We're talking about a car. Now, SUVs, you can see these vehicles all over the world, but again, I think this is somewhat specific uh to America. In the United States, there are so many SUVs. If you are in the US and you're driving on the on the interstate, you will see SUVs everywhere. SUV, SUV, SUV. I was just back in the United States. I was surprised at how many SUVs I saw. But when you're talking about a vehicle, this is a common acronym. They would refer to it as an SUV, a sport utility vehicle. D O A. This is more It's probably not as common, but it's more of a medical term. It stands for dead on arrival. And this is a an acronym that you may hear if you're watching maybe a TV show, like a medical drama, and you might hear D O A. Speaking of medicine, MD. This is another very common acronym that you might find at the end of a person's name, and it just means that they are a medical doctor, all right? MD, medical doctor. This would be found in the title of somebody's name, okay? So, again, let's let's practice a little bit, all right? I want to practice, and I want you to tell me, what does this acronym stand for? So, I've given you the sentence, "For any online business, SEO is so important for success."

What does this acronym stand for? I think you can identify it because the acronym is capitalized, but what do you think it means? And I think often times with acronyms, some of them are so common. Like, I think SEO is very popular. You may hear people talking about it, you may see it if you're reading a newspaper article. I think sometimes people know what it means, but they don't know the meaning of the individual letters. So, try to tell me, what do you think that those individual letters mean? The S, the E, and the O. Do you guys have any idea what that stands for? So, if we're talking about an online business, we're talking about SEO, which is search engine optimization. For any online business, search engine optimization is so important for success that you want to have SEO on your web for your website, so that if somebody's searching for information, your website will get ranked near the top. So, that is SEO, search engine optimization, okay? And this is one I think is more common. You're going to hear this, people just using the acronym SEO, especially if you work online or you work in an online business, people often talk about SEO. Now, the next one I have I want to do a question, okay? So, I'm just going to tell you the question. I want you to listen to the acronym and tell me what you think it means, okay? So, the question that I have for you is if somebody ask you, "Hey, what's your DOB?" All right? I need you to I need you to tell me your DOB. What is that? What's your DOB?

So, again, this is just listening for the acronym and then trying to understand, "Well, what is this person asking me? What are What information are they trying to get? What's your DOB?" Of course, if somebody's asking for your DOB, they are asking for your date of birth. What's your DOB? Now, this one, I think maybe it was a little tricky because I I think often you would see this in writing. Not many people might ask you in speaking DOB, but if you are filling out an application, if you're filling out a document, you may see this DOB and it's asking for your date of birth, DOB, date of birth. Okay, so, we've gone through some some acronyms already. We've gone through some texting acronyms. We've gone through some information acronyms and we're doing this by category. So, if you're joining us If you're joining me today, we're we're building vocabulary and teaching many different common acronyms in the United States. But, first, because it is the new year, I want to give a special thank you, a special shout-out to all of our patrons out there who are helping support Interactive English and really make this possible. I want to give all of our current patrons a shout-out and just a warm thank you to Vicky, Gustav, Aiden, Ann, Chung, Danny, Jerry, Joanne, Pavel, Pipi, Prof, Juhander, Richard, Serge, Sim, Lee, Jandron, Will, Peggy. Thank you guys so much for supporting what we do. If you guys are interested in becoming a patron, there is a link in the description down below. You can check that out. We have some cool rewards.

And so, the first one, CTA, stands for call to action. This is a common business acronym. This is an acronym that I see a lot when talking about YouTube. And they talk about videos and like, oh, you need to do a call to action. You need to tell somebody to do something. For example, often in our video lessons, I would tell you guys like, oh, go ahead, hit the like button. That is a call to action. Me asking you to do something, whether it's hit the like button or write us a comment down below, those are all call to actions that I'm asking you to do something. So, that would be an example. CTA, call to action. MBA, this is Uh another one if you're talking about somebody's education and say this person has an MBA, it stands for a Master of Business Administration, an MBA.

EST This is specific to the United States because it's talking about a time zone. So, you may see this when somebody's referring to a time like the meeting is going to begin at 3:00 p.m. EST. Eastern Standard Time and this is a common time zone because it includes New York City. So, New York City is EST, it is Eastern Standard Time. So, the US has many different time zones. You have EST, Eastern Standard Time, CST, Central Standard Time, uh Mountain Time as well as PST, Pacific Standard Time. So, those are all acronyms that are related to time and there are many, many common There are many acronyms that are related to time all across the world. So, the last one, which is again a great business one. I think many of us like like that that we enjoy this acronym right here because maybe we make a little more money.

OT is talking about overtime, all right? I'm trying to collect some OT or I'm going to work some OT this next week. I'm going to work overtime. All right, are you ready for some questions? Um business acronyms. I want you to write your answer in the chat. All right? Um somebody asked Melissa, is EST only for New EST is for any any place within that time zone. So, all those states, uh New York, Florida, uh Georgia, there are many places that would be in Eastern Standard Time. So, what do you think about this question? I'm supposed to submit my application to HR. All right? You see the acronym HR. What does HR stand for?

This is a very common business acronym when people if you work for a big company and they're talking about HR. All right? What do you think? HR. HR stands for yes, Holly, excellent. If you're talking about HR, you're talking about human resources. Often in a big company, there is a department which is human resources which deals with people hiring people or if you have something, you know, you have a problem with a boss or another employee, you might go talk to people in human resources or they just shorten it and they just call it HR. HR. Um

The next one, again, this is a listening one. So, I'm just going to tell you a question. I want you to tell me what does the acronym acronym mean. So, if I say, you know, "We can't start the meeting without you. What's your ETA?" All right? We can't start the meeting without you. What's your ETA? And I think this is a common question. I use this question quite often if I'm talking to somebody else and I say, "Hey, you know, you know, can you tell me what's your ETA?" Or if I'm writing an email to somebody and I want to to know this information, I might ask, you know, "Hey, what's your ETA?" What do you think it stands for? ETA.

I hope I hope that you wrote or that you know that ETA stands for estimated time of arrival. So, if somebody's asking, you know, for your ETA, they're asking what time will you arrive? What time will you get there? We can't start the meeting without you. What's your ETA? And again, this is one something that, you know, I might ask to a friend if we're meeting out and they're running late, I'd say, "Hey, you know, what's your ETA? When are you going to get here?" The next one, the next set of acronyms are government acronyms. And again, some of these are definitely more specific to the United States because we're talking about the US government. So, looking at these acronyms, I'm sure some of them may be a little familiar to you, others may not be. What do you think they mean? All right?

Um, do you have any idea what these acronyms right here mean? So, I hope the first one is CIA. This stands for the Central Intelligence Agency. If you watch TV, especially some drama shows, action, this is an acronym that you may hear quite often. Somebody works for the CIA. They work for the Central Intelligence Agency. The next one, DNC stands for Democratic National Committee. This is an acronym that I think you will hear more of this next year or this year because in the United States, it is an election year. We're going to uh have a vote for the president, and right now they're going through the Democratic primary. So, this is an acronym that you may hear if or you may see if you're reading a newspaper or if you're watching a TV broadcast, they might talk about a news broadcast. They might say the DNC, the Democratic National Committee.

MIA is more of a military acronym. It stands for missing in action. If somebody is MIA, they are missing in action. It basically means when when soldiers would go off to war, if they could not find the soldier, if they don't know what happened to them, this person, if this person is alive or dead, they would say that the person is MIA. They are missing in action. Nowadays, I think you could use this casually and um just talking about everyday life. If somebody is missing, if they are not there, you could just say, "Hey, this person, they're MIA. I don't know where they are. They're gone. They're missing. They're MIA." POW, this is definitely specific to military and war, prisoner of war. If somebody is a POW, it means they are a prisoner of war. All right, so here's a couple more questions to test your knowledge of these government acronyms. What does it mean if somebody says, "Well, hey, we work for the FBI."

Again, this is a common acronym that if you watch a any kind of action show that has to do with the US government, then this is an acronym that you may hear. FBI, what does it mean? We work for the FBI. I think I think this is another acronym, maybe you you've probably heard it, but perhaps you don't know what the individual letters stand for. So, I hope if you're talking about the FBI that you guys said, "We work for the Federal Bureau of Investigation." FBI stands for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, FBI, another common one. All right, so here is another listening one for you. So, again, talking about the TV dramas, I might say I could say this. I could say, "Ooh, CSI uncovered some new evidence to solve the mystery." CSI uncovered some new evidence to solve the mystery.

What do you think that acronym stands for? And it is actually it was the it's the name of a TV show. So, some of you may have even seen this TV show. CSI uncovered some new evidence to solve the mystery. There are many different shows for CSI. I think you had CSI Las Vegas, CSI New York, CSI Miami. And if you're saying if you're talking about CSI, it just stands for crime scene investigators. Crime scene investigate investigators uncovered some new evidence to solve the mystery. So, CSI crime scene investigators, like I said, there is there are many different TV shows that are CSI. It is about these crime scene investigators going around and trying to solve these mysteries, these murders.

Uh the next one the next set of acronyms. Um let's say I don't know any of these. That's okay. And again, the the whole idea is just to practice more of these acronyms. Try to get more exposure to learn them because these are these are acronyms that you may read about in a newspaper. You may hear people talking about them in conversation or when watching the news. So, this is this is useful information. And I know I know that I'm giving you a lot of acronyms right now, but the idea is I I thought some of them you may be familiar with. Now, these are identifying acronyms right here. Again, some of them are very specific to the United States, which is why I said that this lesson is about common acronyms in the United States. Some of that some may be more easy than others.

So, these are all identifying acronyms. If you don't know what they mean, CDC stands for Center for Disease Control. Again, this is an organization in the United States that would talk about places that are oh, it's it's not safe to travel there because there's an outbreak of this disease. Or they talk about certain illnesses, even diseases that are happening, things that are happening in the United States. And you might hear when they're Anything health-related, you might hear talk people talk about CDC, the Center for Disease Control. NBA, okay? National Basketball Association. Any sport that you're talking, especially those in the United States all of them use acronyms. NBA, National Basketball Association. NFL, National Football Association. PGA, Professional Golf Association. There are so many professional sports and they use these acronyms.

MLA, this is for I'd say students. If you are in school and you're writing an essay and you have to you have to cite your sources. And they say, "Oh, what style should I use? APA or MLA?" That is where this come from. MLA, this is more for really academic If somebody's getting their masters or PhD, they may come across this acronym. Stands for Modern Language Association. Modern Language Association, MLA. And the last one, NAACP National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. This was an organization, again, specific to the United States. It was created in the early 1900s. It's a civil rights organization and that is exactly what they they do exactly what they say they do. It is the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. So, again, this is an acronym that you may read about in a newspaper or you may hear if you're listening to some news broadcast and they talk about the NAACP.

All right, are you ready for another couple of acronyms? If I I give you this one this sentence and say, "Well, he has an AA meeting later this week." What does it mean? AA. If we're talking about AA, what do you think? He has an AA meeting this week. This picture, it's not a very great picture um to represent this meeting, but again, this is an acronym that yeah, again, you may hear if you're watching a TV show or a movie, AA. He has an AA meeting this week. So, if you hear this acronym, AA, it's talking about Alcoholics Anonymous. Yes, somebody has it just came in here. Excellent. He has an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting this week. AA is talking about it's uh it's an organization for people that maybe they have a problem drinking and they're trying to get help. And they would go to these meetings, an AA meeting to get help with their drinking problem so that they can ultimately so that they can quit drinking alcohol altogether. So, AA stands for Alcoholics Anonymous. The next one, all right? The next one is again, it's a listening one. So, what if I told you that okay, when I grow up, I want to be a WWE Superstar. What does that mean? When I grow up, I want to be a WWE Superstar. That is another acronym um I guess you could say it's related to sport. WWE. Maybe you're familiar with it, maybe you're not, but I'd say when I grow up, I want to be a WWE Superstar and that would just mean you want to be World Wrestling Entertainment Superstar. So, this is something that's very popular uh especially in the United States. WWE stands for World Wrestling Entertainment. WWE.

All right. So, again, that was I think in total those were 37 different acronyms that I taught you today. I hope that you are possibly familiar with some of them already. If you're not, um then that's great because I hope you learn some new acronyms. That the goal is not just really that you're going to go out and just use these in general conversation. I think even more important than that is that you are able to comprehend these acronyms if you are reading about them in a newspaper article or you're just listening and you hear these acronyms in listening if you're listening to the news or a podcast. These are common acronyms that that you are going to hear and use. So, please if you learned something new here, here is my call to action, my CTA.

If you learned some new acronyms, please hit that like button down below. I know many of you before had been requesting a lesson on acronyms because well, I think they can be a little confusing and also they are very common. You see these acronyms all the time. So, it's good to go through them and you know, try to understand a little bit more about what they mean. And when you understand the entire acronym and you actually see the words, I think that will help you understand the meaning a bit better. So, please again, hit that like button, share this lesson if you know others who are trying to practice and improve your English. You can always write to us below down in the comments because we love hearing from you and you can check us out on social media. We are active on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and anything else? a I I I you have a wonderful 2020. There is so much going on this year and there is much much more to come and I'll let you know. So, thank you. Dennis, thanks. Antonio, Olivia, Melissa, Aiden, Eloisa, thank you guys for joining me today. I appreciate it. Um Putri, Lolly, Donna, Donnie, Yorback, Donnie Yorback, woo. Sorry if I mispronounced names. Yana, Lusacorn, thank you. Maple strip, Myra, thank you guys. Hope you have a wonderful day and I will see you next time. So long.

COMMON TONGUE TWISTERS | Practice Your English Pronunciation

Today we're talking about tongue twisters! We will twist your tongue. That's coming up! Welcome to today's lesson. It's a pronunciation practice lesson because we're going to do tongue twisters, and show you some different tongue twisters. We're going to practice reading them together, saying them together, and then you can hear us try it to say them, and we'll look kind of silly and foolish. You're supposed to make mistakes. Nobody says these perfectly. This will be a good speaking exercise, also good for listening. And if you'd like more listening practice, you can check out Audible and sign up for a free trial and get yourself an audiobook. So we'll leave a link to audible in the description below, and you can go check that out.

It's a shameless, shameless pitch for Audible. The way we're going to do this is we're going to read one of the tongue twisters to you. You can just listen to it, and then we will show you the tongue twister, read it again, And then we can all read it together. And we want you to practice with us. So you can look silly too. You can also practice these as well at home. It's fun. How much wood could a wood chuck... would a woodchuck chuck? Okay, how much wood would a woodchuck chuck if a woodchuck could chuck wood? So remember, with the W sound, you've got to keep those lips rounded.

How much wood would a woodchuck chuck if a woodchuck could chuck wood. Alright, so let's let's try and say this together, and you guys can say it with us. So now, let's practice saying this quickly. Ready, let's see what you got. Yea, it's hard to remember that part. This is like the only tongue twister that I can do quickly. Other than that, I'm a failure. That's good. I'm done. I said like, 7 times.

The next one that we want to practice with you is She sells seashells by the seashore. So you have the s sound and that "sh" sound. They're both voiceless sounds and your tongue is just right behind your front teeth for that s sound, And "Shh" it's like you're saying, telling somebody to be quiet. The tongue is in the center of your mouth, and the air is kind of flowing right over the top. So let's have a look and I'll say it one more time. So let's let's say it together. Ready? And we want you to say with us. Yes, please. All right, so simple enough. Let's See you say it quickly.

and Ioana would like to go first. Oh Gosh. Ok So hopefully you guys could do the whole "She seashells" stuff that was ...That was difficult for me. We will also leave these tongue twisters in the description if you would like to read them. Ok. numero 3. I'm sorry. This is English. The "w" sound again. I'm exercising my tongue. If two witches were watching two watches, which witch would watch which watch? That makes sense! It does make sense. It's not a sentence you're going to use in every day English. Are you ready to read that together? So we'll say this one together. Ready? Easy! Alright, so now let's let's practice saying this one quickly.

Ladies first! Oh gosh, why is always me first? Yes Well played. So the next one is a very short one, but I think for me, I think it's the most difficult to say. It's only three words, and it is: Unique New York. So it's like saying... you're saying the city. and it's unique. Wait, that's the hardest one for you? It is, yea! Why are you laughing? I think it's the way that your mouth is moving forward So (U) your mouth's coming forward (nique) and then your jaw is dropping backwards and then it's coming forward again (York). It's just... I don't know, I have a tough time saying it. Again, it's just three words: And this one, you're just supposed to really try and say as quickly as you can.

So, ready? You guys can say it with us And then we try to say it as quickly as possible. I completely screw the whole thing up. Different sounds are more difficult for different people. I'm stretching. Are you just warming up your tongue? OK. So this is our fifth one. The sounds to practice here are the "ch" sound and the "sh" sound. And I know some some people really have trouble differentiating between these two sounds. "CH" and "SH". The "ch"- your tongue is gonna touch the top part of your mouth. And then "sh"- that tongue is a little lower. The tongue is in the center and the air just flows out.

So they're different What's the what's the tongue twister? If Stu chews shoes, should Stu chew the shoes he chews? Ah, this is hard for me. It's hard because it switches between the "s" sound, the "sh" sound and the "ch" sound. Ok, so I'm going to read it. Alright, let's try and read it together. Ready? All right. Let's see what you got. I can't do it fast, I can't! That was wrong. Wow, this one is difficult! But we can't say it fast... He shouldn't choose those shoes. He shouldn't chew the shoes, but he could choose the shoes he doesn't chew. My tongue really does hurt! It's a good pronunciation exercise. Yea. We hope that you could say those tongue twisters with us.

And now you can practice them on your own and practice your pronunciation. In the comments, let us know which one do you think is the most difficult to say. Which one was the most challenging for you? I'd be very curious to know what you guys thought and which one you thought was the most difficult. Was it "Unique New York"? like Wes, or Everybody's going to be like: "that was so easy!" So if you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button. We always appreciate when you let us know that you enjoy practicing speaking and practicing your pronunciation. Thank you guys so much for watching, and we will see you next time.

CONFUSING ENGLISH WORDS....EVEN FOR NATIVE-SPEAKERS

what is up guys welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English which is the place you want to be to practice and improve your English skills and we are going to improve our English skills today because I have a vocabulary lesson for you and it's a very useful lesson because we all need to build our vocabulary and make sure that we're using the right words correctly because a lot of times you might get confused about when to use certain words especially words that have a very similar meaning and that's what we're gonna talk to you about today we are going to go over commonly confused words some confusing words in English and I'm gonna tell you the difference between some of these words show you how to use them when to use them give you some examples and then at the end we're gonna test your knowledge and we're gonna do some practice and and you guys are gonna need to answer some questions using the the words that we talked about today so I promise you I'm going to make you a guarantee that watching this lesson you are going to learn something new even if you're a native speaker I bet you will learn something new because these are not only words that are difficult for English learners these are words that can confuse native speakers sometimes I am even guilty of misusing some of these words at one point or another so it's always it's always good practice it's always great so I just want to say hello to what's up Lally Krista how are you I'm Jean thank you guys for joining us if you are watching please say what's up in the comments we love hearing from you guys and and we just want to hear from you so if you're watching this later say what's up to us in the comments Ahmir Anna pay that o me thank you thank you guys for joining us sorry if I miss some Soumya as we go through this lesson I'm gonna ask you guys to write some some sentences and participate in the lesson so again that's useful for those even if you're watching it later you get to see how some of these words are used so let's begin alright the first the first set of confusing words that I have for you right here see watch and look and the reason why these are confusing is because they have a very similar meaning and sometimes they can be used interchangeably and sometimes they cannot so for example let's just talk about I'm gonna talk to you about one at a time so si si means to notice something using your eyes that you see something with your eyes I could say you know I see a TV something that you notice with your eyes so right now in the comments I want you to tell me what do you see besides me look around whatever wherever you are the room that you're in wherever and write that in the comments what do you see I see what so see is to notice something using your eyes watch is when you observe what is happening or being done so it's almost like the something is happening that's continuous and you would say therefore I watch TV because you're watching a show or a movie and it's continuous so that's a little different so you could for example I could say I see a bird but if I do an activity like oh I'm gonna go watch the birds I'm going to go bird-watching and you're actually going to observe the birds for a longer period of time now one time that you can use these the same would be like it as a question if you're asking a question oh did you see the movie you're asking this person if they have watched the movie you could also say did you watch the movie so in that case they may be interchangeable and finally look so look is basically you are directing your eyes in a particular direction often followed by the preposition at you look at something so I could say I'm looking at the TV in this case look at and see have a very similar meaning if you say oh I see a TV I'm looking at the TV and often we talk about look at it's often referred to things that are like right now it's used in the continuous tense quite often you are looking at something or as a command I think of schools and teachers would tell our parents would tell their kids look at me look at me when I'm talking to you so these are great words that we use all the time so it's important to know the difference and just acknowledge that there is a difference in how we use them and a great way to learn them is just again reading and listening and exposing yourself to the language so let's read something that I see a lion ma Wow all right interesting excellent I'm looking at you yes thank you I'm looking at you guys what else do we have I'm looking at your face and excellent I'm looking at your eyes perfect all right so those are some great examples we are watching you right now yes you guys are watching this lesson you're watching what is being done the next set of words borrow and lend these are words that have almost the the opposite meaning but that they can be commonly confused because I think in many languages and some languages you use the same word it's not two different words so one thing we did a lesson on these words which if once with this lesson gets posted we will link it up above I highly recommend you check that lesson out borrow versus lend because we give so many examples about how and when to use it and practice but in short to borrow is to take something all right I am taking so I would say can I borrow some money I am asking to take the money now to say the opposite to lend is to give alright notice my actions take give all right so to lend is to give something and I would say can you lend me some money I'm asking you to give some money so again these are words that that can be commonly confused alright I borrow you would lend alright so again pay close attention and and try I think most people would understand if you confuse these words it's okay but check out that lesson we will link it later on the next set of words this is these are words that I think native speakers even confuse empathy and sympathy and they have different meanings so it's it's good to be aware of what they each mean and also be aware that we often use them as verbs to empathize or to sympathize and you would empathize with someone or sympathize with someone when you empathize with someone empathy it means that you know what another person is experiencing because you have also had the same experience you have been through this so you know what it's like you know what that feeling is like and usually we're talking about this people that are experiencing hardships or problems or having issues it's not a good feeling and you you you have experienced the feelings of another so if somebody says oh like I feel your pain it's like I have had the same experience so I know what what you're going through I know how it feels you can empathize with that person sympathy is different because you may not have had that experience but you you feel for that person you want to show them that you know you you're sad for them or you you feel bad and your heart is with them so you can show sympathy which is more understanding that person is suffering or they're going through a bad experience in that case you might say I'm sorry for I'm sorry that you're in pain so empathize and sympathize very different empathize you've done that you've had the experience sympathize you're just showing that you you understand what this person is going through another great set of words right here imply and infer again these words have completely different meanings and it's again something that I think many native English speakers have trouble with once in a while so to imply is to express something indirectly and this is common I think in the United States because many people tend to be indirect and you can express it indirectly with the words that you use you can also express it indirectly by the tone of your voice and I apologize the example I couldn't think of a better example off the top of my head so if we have that sentence and I use it and I say it in a way like you know it's just another rainy day thinking about my tone and the way I'm saying it you can imply that I'm not happy about rainy days I don't really like them it's kind of like oh no it's raining again if somebody says yeah it's just another rainy day you can imply that they don't like rainy days I'm not saying it directly I'm implying it this is different from to infer to infer something means that you are looking at a situation you see all the evidence around you and because you see these things that you can conclude something from that you can conclude some evidence or reasoning for example it could say you know sticking with our rain theme somebody's oh he's wet it must be raining outside if somebody enters a room and they are soaking wet then you're probably going to think oh okay it's outside you you don't know if it's raining but because of that I can infer that it's raining so again we are going I'm going to quiz you guys on these words so thank you guys for commenting and sharing these sympathy sentences these this is perfect so Samara I sympathize with the poor yes you want to you can feel that your heart goes out for them I have sympathy for your brother exactly could you lend me some money not right now I'm not in a position that right now but great use of the word so again these are commonly confused words let's look at the next part but before we do quick announcement wanted to let you guys know that we are on patreon so please check us out on patreon we have some very cool rewards if you guys want to help support free English education that we are doing here on our channel check out patreon we will leave a link in the description so the next set of words I think again this is not I don't think this is too difficult but this is when this is mostly for writing because these are homonyms who's and whose so if you have who's with the apostrophe WH o apostrophe s that is the contracted form for who is and I could say okay who is going to make coffee who's going to make coffee that sounds exactly the same as whose WH o s e which is the possessive form of who and if I have some coffee or there's some coffee on the table I might say whose coffee is that it's not mine I want to know whose coffee that belongs to which is the possessive form of who so whose and whose it's important to know the difference especially in writing if you're sending a text message or even writing an email one is the contracted form one is showing the possession the next one and this is a this is one that I think native speakers commonly confused eg and ie so these are both Latin roots and what it means is so eg I wrote it exempli gratia I'm probably mispronouncing that but if you say eg it basic it means for example you are saying something and then you're giving examples eg so I said my sentence there I always eat out for lunch ok I always eat out for lunch and then I give some examples maybe I go to fast food or something I just wanted to give examples people know of so I'd say I always eat out for lunch eg for example KFC McDonald's chick-fil-a alright if you are in the United States or if you visit the United States and you're going to eat fast food check out chick-fil-a that's what I would recommend and this video is not sponsored by chick-fil-a by the way so check each e is giving an example so right now in in the comments in the chat give me an example say something that you do and then give some examples eg and then list a few things so remember if you are using eg you're providing a list because you're more more likely you're going to give more than one example so ie which is different it stands for a desk in Latin it means in other words so in this case you're you're mostly making a statement about something and then you would specify what that something is ie and then you would give it the name so for example I ate lunch at that new restaurant I didn't say what restaurant it is but then I will later so I ate I ate lunch at that new restaurant ie in other words good burger that's the name of the restaurant good burger and I use that because we are actually eating good burger tonight and if you ever find yourself in Budapest Hungary and are looking for a burger I'd recommend good burger also not sponsored by good burger but a good place so in that case I mentioned this new restaurant and then in other words you say what the restaurants name is so again eg for example ie means in other words all right so excellent I want of you I want to be rich in other words good life lolly thank you for the example excellent let's look at the next set of words we have resign to resign and to re-sign again one difference between these would be the the syllable stress so resign the stresses on that second syllable resign which means to voluntarily give up a job or position and doing it in a formal way that people know that you are going to stop working and you are resigning you are resigning from your job I resigned from the company last year remember that stress is on that second syllable to re-sign to resign is to sign something again alright I had to resign the documents that that prefix that re I think most of you know redo reread resign it means to do something again so let's look at the next set this is another group of words that I think it's commonly confused not only by English learners but also by native speakers sometimes uninterested uninterested and disinterested so if you are uninterested it means that you are not interested in something alright you're uninterested it's boring you don't care about it say yeah I'm uninterested in their discussion I don't care what they're talking about disinterested means that you are impartial that you are not in favor of this or you are not in favor of that you are neutral you are disinterested about the situation that is happening so if somebody's having a debate and they're having an argument I could say well I'm disinterested in their debate it doesn't mean that I'm not interested it means that I do I don't agree with this or I don't agree with that I'm impartial I'm disinterested one thing I will say is that one reason I think these two words are can be really confusing I noticed that I think nowadays I saw I've seen it in some dictionaries they do give disinterested also a meaning as not having interest because I think it's just it ends up being misused so much so they did that I noticed in some online dictionaries they gave that as a second meaning in which case they would be synonyms but if you really want to know if you want to say that you are not interested stick with uninterested you are uninterested in something disinterested means that you are are impartial so I hope that you guys I hope you guys got all of that because now we are going to practice what we have learned so I'm gonna give you guys some questions and I will list the the words for you and it's just it's just a gap fill because you didn't fill it in with the correct word the only other thing I would tell you is pay pay attention to the grammar see if you can write the whole sentence that's great or just write the correct word which word are you going to use so we just we talked about sixteen different words now so it can be a little challenging let's let's see how you guys do alright so this first one okay I mmm her yesterday at the grocery store okay I mmm her yesterday at the grocery store remember I said pay close attention to the grammar so what first you need to decide okay which of those words are you going to use to complete the sentence and then again you know I told you to pay attention to the grammar how would you say this and if you want to I think a good way to practice no matter where you are say the sentence out loud just go ahead and say it out loud practice your speaking right now so what do you guys think alright I mmm her yesterday at the or excellent Connells attained Paulo I'm said excellent perfect you guys well it's going to get more difficult alright I saw her yesterday at the store alright that you're talking about somebody that you you met with your eyes express mmm because he knows what it's like to go through a breakup all right I think many of you excellent got this remember we're talking about the two words that we're thinking about would be empathy or sympathy and remember I said he knows what it's like to go through a breakup if you've experienced this before if you've experienced this thing you are able to express empathy because you know what this experience is like again you know that that's the difference between empathy and sympathy empathy you have gone through the experience sympathy you are just saying you know your heart is with somebody that you feel sorry next okay this is uh this is like a dialogue alright a and B so the first person would say you I know you owe people a lot of money and then suddenly money is missing from the cash register then be the other person would say are you hmm that I stole the money so again this is a conversation between two people the first person I know you owe people a lot of money and then suddenly money is missing from the cash register all right and then the other person are you hmm that I stole the money what set of words again there's only one answer for these so what do you guys think how would you how would you fill that one in all right if you just join us we are practicing with these confusing words that we just talked about all right then this is a dialogue I know you owe people a lot of money and then suddenly money is missing from the cash register hmm and then the other person are you hmm that I stole the money in this case again and make sure should be using that correct grammar you guys are rocking this excellent perfect we are the correcting it yes are you implying that I stole the money the person is not saying it directly they're just giving a situation all right well wait you owe people money suddenly the some money is gone and then they'd say you know are you implying that I stole the money implying you are not saying something directly and that's different than infer because infer would be using them some situation to come to a conclusion all right so let's look at another one this is a double all right a double one he mmm money from his friends in order to buy tickets to one of the most amazing sporting events in the world mmm the World Cup all right so this is this is a double one write the words in the in the chat or in the comments if you're watching this later what do you guys think he money from his friends in order to buy tickets to one of the most amazing sporting events in the world hmm the World Cup alright so what we have for for this alright we're talking about I think you guys got the the first part alright again we're talking about money alright so you'd have to think is it borrow or lend remember borrow is if you borrow money you're taking it lending would be giving it so in this case he what he borrowed money from his friends in order to buy tickets to one of the most amazing sporting events in the world what is that amazing what is that amazing sporting event in other words the World Cup so in that case borrowed and ie which means in other words remember ie in other words eg is for example and you tend to list these different examples in this case I'm just talking about one sporting event in other words the World Cup alright so what if I I hope again I guaranteed that you guys learn something new so if you did learn something new promise me right now if you guys are with us hit that hit that like button go ahead and hit the like button if you've learned something about these confusing words and these are words that are used a lot so I think it's good that we can practice and and know the difference between these words because that is just

it's just going to help you guys improve your overall English fluency and if you really really want to improve your fluency check out our secret lesson okay once the video is posted it's going to be in the description secret lesson it's so secret we're gonna email it to you and we will also you know it's just a great way for us to connect with you to be able to share other updates events and things that are happening and check it out yeah it's it's gonna be down there so you guys check that out again please like and share this lesson if you guys enjoy learning with us and write us a comment if there are other words that you find confusing write those in the comments and maybe we will do another lesson in the future and use those words we just love hearing from you guys and if you can't think of any words just say what's up say hello we just want to hear from you guys and remember you can check us out here at these other social medias Facebook Twitter Instagram we're always posting stuff to help you guys practice and improve your English skills so thank you thank you thank you let me hit let me hit you guys up with some thank yous here so deep a la alums ear golf on snake venom hello what's up Royal Hawk Jose Long Sunita sorry if I missed names Benny Karen thank you guys for joining us harsh Benny ma ma Li Shu Shu here Meza thank you guys thank you thank you thank you for being a part of our community we are so glad to be able to share these lessons with you guys and we will be back for another lesson in the near future so enjoy the rest of your weekend see you next time

CONFUSING GRAMMAR IN ENGLISH | Advanced Quiz Lesson

If you want to improve your grammar skills, then this lesson is for you because I am going to talk to you about some confusing grammar in English. Hey everyone, my name is Wes. This is Interactive English. And if this is your first time here, I want to hear from you. I want you to write your name in the comments because we always love hearing from new people. And today is all about helping you practice and improve your grammar because this is important. You know grammar is basically talking about the structure of language. We need to use the appropriate grammar to communicate clearly so that we all understand each other.

But the problem with grammar is that there are always exceptions. There are things that may be confusing. And that's what I want to focus on today. I want to talk to you about some of those confusing grammar problems especially that that that English learners have and that may be a little bit of a challenge. That we're going to do this is that I am going to introduce some of these grammar topics, some of these grammar challenges with a question. So this is an interactive lesson where I want all of you to participate in the lesson. If you're in the chat, I want you to write your answers in the chat. And even if you're watching this later, I want you to participate. That is what interactive English is all about. It's about participating in the lessons.

And I want you to use those comment sections as a piece of paper and write your answers there to practice your English skills because that is the best way that that you are going to improve is just practice, practice, and practice. And as we go through these questions, I'm going to teach you some some different grammar that people can find a little confusing. So, let's just go ahead and begin with the first question that I have for you, which is this one right here. They're all multiplechoice. And if you're just joining us, we're talking about just confusing grammar. Grammar that everybody finds just a little confusing. answer. Which word best completes that sentence? Are you going to say a frustrated or b frustrating? I get so when I get the wrong answer. I think many of us I think you can relate to this that we when when we get the wrong answer you know it's not something that makes us happy and somebody might be like oh I get so what what do you think I'll give you just a moment and then I want you and then we'll I'll go over the answer and tell you which one is correct all right excellent I want to give some shoutouts for people that have given the right answer um yes excellent uh Lai Michelle Oh, Fredo. Uh, Mikima. Uh, who else we have? Uh, again, uh, Muhamad. Johnny, oh, Johnny Hernandez. Hi. It's going very fast. Leadon. Um, Angela, the correct answer is A. I get so frustrated when I get the wrong answer. Now, the reason this is confusing grammar. Many times learners may confuse E, D, and G adjectives. So, right down here, I gave you a little bit of an explanation. We use ed adjectives when we describe a feeling or an emotion. When you describe the way you feel about something, I'm frustrated. I'm confused. I'm bored. I'm tired. Those are ed adjectives that describe our feeling. We use ing adjectives when you are describing a person's character, a thing, or a situation. So, for example, you'd say, well, I am excited. That's the way I feel. The movie is exciting. And we use that ing adjective. Now, I think the one the one way this really confuses people is when you're talking about a person's character because oftentimes a student I might hear somebody say and they say, "Well, I'm boring." And they really want to say that they're bored, that they have nothing to do. and nothing is exciting and they say ah I'm bored but if they say I'm boring they are describing their character and they are calling themselves a boring person which is not what people often want to do. So that is the one part that really I think confuses people when you're talking about describing a person's character because if you say he's boring or she's boring then that just means well you probably don't want to spend time with that person. So keep that in mind. All right, eding adjectives. This is something that can confuse people. The next question I have for you is this one. What do you think? Which which best completes the sentence? The phone is ringing. Answer it. All right. I'm giving that that's my blank space. Uh um so what would you say? The phone is ringing. Answer it. Would you say a I'll which is the contraction of I will or B I'm going to I'm going to I am going to which one because we can use either of those to you know talk about something that that will happen in the future. What do you think would best complain? And again I I think some of this can be tricky for you. The phone is ringing.

But when you're talking about a quick decision, something where there's not much time, you're going to use I will. I'll. So, for example, if you think about the situation, the phone rings, it happens suddenly and somebody says, "Okay, I'll get it." Or maybe there is a knock on the door. It was unexpected. It happened suddenly. I'll get the door. I'll answer it. So, in that case, it's more common to use I will instead of I'm going to because when you use going to, it makes me think that there was kind of a plan to do this. Um, or if somebody says, "I'm going to," it makes me think the phone has been ringing for a long, long time. Or if you say, "I'm going to answer it." Maybe you'll answer it 5 minutes from now. It just doesn't make much sense. It's a slight difference. You would say, "I will." All right. So, excellent. That is a slight difference between using will and going to. That's good to know because often I think people just think that they are interchangeable no matter what context. Let's look at this one.

All right. The next question is, I plan to go to school to m u c. And for this one, maybe I think some of these are a little easier right now because they are multiple choice. I'm giving you an option. I plan to go to school to m my education. Is it a farther or b further? Farther or further? Which one best completes that sentence? You're talking about getting an education. I plan to go to school to m u c a t i o n. And excellent. I think we have a lot of great answers. Yes. Uh Mahmud, yours truly. Um Abdul Wahab. Uh Vicki, trying to give different names, say everybody's name. Get as many as I can. Natasha, yes, the answer is B. I plan to go to school to further my education. Now, when you think about the difference between farther and further, think of it this way. All right? Both refer to some kind of distance. We're talking about a distance. Farther refers to a physical distance like maybe you're traveling in a plane or a car. That is a physical difference in which you can use a number to say how far it is. In that case, you would use farther while further refers to a figurative distance. And in this case, you're talking about your education. You are going to go ahead. You are going to become more informed. You're going to get smarter. and you are going to move a distance, but you really don't know how far. There is no number that you're going to be able to assign to that distance. So, it is a figurative distance and you would use further. Now, I will say that further with a u is also sometimes used to refer to physical distances as well. So, for physical distances, you may hear somebody say farther or further, but in this sense, you would want to use further. All right? It is a metaphor, a a figurative distance. The next question, and again, if you guys, if you're just joining us, we are just practicing our grammar skills and learning all these different types of grammar concepts that I think can be very confusing. Now, this none of How would you complete this sentence? All right. None of the bananas m ripe. All right. How what do you think? Is it a is or b are? Which verb to be are you going to use to complete that sentence? None of the bananas m ripe. Are you going to say is ripe or are ripe? What do you think? All right. This question, this is all about subjectverb agreement.

Now, the the question that I the other question that I would have for you, see, again, this is great because I see a lot of different answers. All right? So, yes, I want to give some more shout outs. Uh, this one really tricked you. Um, Han Kung Chong, Hong Kong Chong. Uh, actually, wait, wait. Oh, no. I just wanted to say your name in Korean. I used to live in Korea, but no, that actually that is not the right answer. Um, Ira, yes, Muhammad. Uh, Mostie, this one tricked you guys up. All right, I got you. I got you guys. Excellent. So yes, Maria, perfect. The answer is BR. None of the bananas are ripe. All right. The reason is because you're talking about none. It is an indefinite pronoun. But with this indefinite pronoun, it can be used with either a singular or plural verb. It depends on the noun to which it's to which it refers. So, for example, in this case, you're talking about bananas. None of the bananas. Bananas is a plural noun.

So, this is going to take a plural verb. None of the bananas are ripe. Now, if I gave you a situation in which I say none of the and I say a singular noun, then I would use is. So, keep that in mind. This is an indefinite pronoun in which you can use either a singular or plural verb. It really just depends on the noun. All right, in this case, none of the bananas are ripe. Okay, so good thing to know. Keep that in mind. Um, there are other words, too. For example, um, some is another one. Some is another indefinite pronoun you can use with either a singular or plural verb. Uh, let's look at the next question. All right. So, here we go. I had to throw out my I'm giving three three blanks. Jersey and get another one. I had to throw out my jersey and get another one. I've given you three words here, three different adjectives. I want you to put them in order. So, I gave you blue, basketball, and raggedy. All right. I want you to take those adjectives, put them in order so that the sentence makes uh so that the sentence makes sense. All right, this is all about adjective word order, which is another which is another thing part of grammar that can be a little confusing. Adjective word order.

What do you guys think? All right, so put that in order. Again, if you guys are just joining us, we're talking about uh different gram confusing grammar that is challenging for for many English learners. And like I said, you can see this question which is all about adjective which word order. Put those words in order. Which adjectives would you use? All right, I'll give you you for those answers. So we would say uh Nel three if you want to do the order raggedy blue basketball jersey which would be 312. All right you're talking about I had to throw out my raggedy blue basketball jersey and get another one. Adjective word order can be confusing because right down there I I put it um I put that together. Usually I think you're going to find maybe just two or three adjectives used in a row. I think very rarely you're going to have four or more adjectives come before a noun. But if we're talking about order, this may vary depending on the site you're going to use. But most of this is pretty standard. I think you're going to do opinion, size, shape, condition, age, color, pattern, origin, material, purpose. So in this case, I'm talking about the condition first. Something is raggedy. The condition and then the color, which is blue, and then it's basically the purpose. It is a basketball jersey. That's what it is.

Raggedy blue basketball jersey. So, adjective word order is something that can be a little confusing. Even if you guys get these wrong, I appreciate all of your answers. That is the best way to practice. Just go ahead and answer. Even if you don't know the answer, write it down. Give it a try. If you haven't seen, we have done a lesson on adjective word order before. If you haven't seen it, I highly recommend it. I am going to throw a link to it in the chat. That is what I was trying to open up. There it is. Here it is. this lesson. This is a live lesson we did a while back. Um, which I think is very useful.

where is it about adjective word order? Wait, why? Hold on. Bear with me for one second. Um, I feel like I am able to move faster than the internet and I have to wait. There it is. So, if you're looking for more information about adjective word order, check out that lesson. It is very useful. But again, that that is great. I want you guys to answer and participate. And I I do want to let you know, we love having you guys here. Uh if you want to connect with us, if you want to support what we do here at Interactive English, we always appreciate your support. You can connect with us on Patreon. We are active on Patreon. We have a whole family of patrons that really help make this possible. I will put a link.

There's a link in the description down below. And here is another link in the chat if you want to check out our Patreon page. And we offer some cool different rewards. And again, it's another way for you to join the family, connect with us, uh, and support what we do. If you don't, it's okay. No worries. We're still going to come out and do these lessons each and every week to help you guys practice and improve your skills. So, let's continue with the grammar. All right, let's look at some more confusing grammar. The next one that I have for you is this, which which is grammatically correct. Now, we're getting into a little bit of punctuation. So, we're talking about um a dialogue, something that somebody says. All right, so you have four different sentences to choose from.

Sentence number one. I'll I'll read the sentences, but I can't really explain the the punctuation that they're looking at. I know some people like to listen to our lessons, which is why I don't know if you notice this. I actually try to read everything out loud. So, in case somebody is listening in their car, they'll still be able to follow along because they don't see it. But in this case, uh, sentence number one, she said, "I took the photo." Number two, the photo was taken by me. he said. Number three, I took the photo, he said. Or number four, the photo she said was taken by me. Which one is correct? But for this one, you really need to look at look at those sentences and determine the correct punctuation.

All right, what do you guys think? Um, which uh sentence is correct? And if you guys are just joining us, that's okay. Um, don't worry if you're late. Just jump right in, start answering questions. We are doing a little bit of a interactive quiz on confusing grammar. All right. Now I will tell you there is only one answer for this and have some correct answers. Yes. Uh Marco Mary Jane. Perfect. Um Mikey uh N Mahades. Excellent. So again this is Wow. This is a little tricky. The correct answer is sentence number four. So that is our winner. Sentence number four. So let's go ahead. I kind of I've highlighted sentence number four, but I will go ahead and tell you why each one. So some of you put sentence number one. She said, "I took the photo." The problem is remember if we're talking about what somebody says, you need to use quotes. And when you're using quotes like this, we're talking about two.

All right? There are those two lines around that. In that sentence, I just put the one which means it is not correct. That is the not that is not the correct way to say these quotes. next one, number two, the photo was taken by me. He said this is an example of the passive voice. All right, in that case, you're using the verb to be followed by the past participle. Instead of was taking, it should be was taken. All right, so was taking that is incorrect. Number three, the f the I took the photo, he said. In this one, number three is incorrect because the quotes are around the wrong part of the sentence. You don't want to put the quotes around he said. You want to put the quotes around I took the photo. So, number three is incorrect. And number four, this is an example of a divided quote. It's not something that you you will see this if you're reading. People will take quotes and they will divide it. And the reason it's a divided quote because I said quote the photo he said was taken by me. And again this is written in the passive voice. The photo was taken by me. But I've divided the quote and said he said. So again you would have quotes on the first part the photo and you need that comma there. You need that comma. She said, comma and in quotes was taken by me. All right. So again, this is a little tricky. This was a punctuation question. And I think the best way to be able to learn this and identify this is just to read. The more you read, you will see that that the grammar is written correctly. Reading is such a great way to improve your grammar skills without actually actively practicing your grammar skills. Today, we're really practicing our grammar skills because I want you to answer these questions. But reading is a great way to get exposure to the correct grammar and you guys can just keep practicing, practicing, and practicing. All right, let's look at the next one. So, we for the bus for over 20 minutes. Hopefully, it'll arrive soon. All right.

Now, I want to again I'm going to just tell you which one best completes the sentence. Which one best completes the sentence? We m for the bus for over 20 minutes. Hopefully, it'll arrive soon. Is it a waited, b have waited, or c have been waiting? Which one best co um uh completes the sentence? We m for the bus for over 20 minutes. Hopefully, it'll arrive soon. Write your answer in the chat. And if you're watching this later, write your answers in the comments. Uh because again, it's good. Practice, practice, practice. Practice makes perfect. So, excellent. I think. Wow, everybody was really knocking this one out. Yes. Uh, Kiko, yours truly. Um, Ji, um, Shel Leonardo, Natasha, excellent.

Trinrong, uh, Aziza, sorry if I mispronounced names. Uh, Derry, I'm trying to say as many new names as possible. The answer is C. That is the That is the one that will best complete the sentence. We have been waiting for the bus for over 20 minutes. Hopefully, it'll arrive soon. You use the present perfect continuous to talk about a continuous action started in the past. It has continued to the present and will likely continue into the future. That is the situation in which you would use this verb tense. I think it's sometimes it's confused with the present perfect. And you could say for example, we've waited for the bus for over 20 minutes.

However, I added that last part. Hopefully, it'll arrive soon. Which basically means that you will still be waiting. You are still waiting right now. So, it's talking about something that is happening a an action that is continuous right now. So, that is why the present perfect continuous. That is the correct answer for this question. The next one, are you ready? And this is something that I I feel like learners confuse a lot uh especially in their writing. If I I would see learners write stories or write essays um and or just practice their grammar and they would really confuse this. I wonder where m eat dinner tonight. I wonder will where m eat dinner tonight. Is it a they will or b will they? All right.

Which one completes that sent? There's only one right answer. All right. So would you say I wonder where they will eat dinner tonight? That is A. Or B, I wonder where will they eat dinner tonight. Which one do you think best completes uh this sentence? A or B? Write your answers. Uh and I will give you just a moment and then I will tell you the correct answer. Wow, you guys are actually most of you are really uh you're rocking this one. Excellent. So perfect. Uh Andre, excellent. Um, Ariana, perfect. Uh, Chandima, excellent. Uh, Aman, yes. Uh, the answer is A. They will. I wonder where they will eat dinner tonight. Now, the question that I would have for you if if you answered A and you answered correctly, I would then say why. Why is that the case? Why do we say they will instead of will they? And if you can explain that, then that is great. That means that you have that advanced level of grammar that you can talk about. What this is because the reason that we use they, they will is because this is a noun clause. Where they will eat for dinner, where they will eat dinner tonight, that is a noun clause. And a noun clause. All right. So, if you don't know, it is a dependent clause. It acts as a noun. So, where they will eat dinner tonight, that is my whole noun clause. It acts as a noun. It has a subject which is they. It has a verb which is will. And often these clauses if you want to identify them, they often begin with words such as how, that, what, where, why. There there's many wherever, um, whatever. There's many different words that you can use.

Now, when you're writing this and you're writing the clause, remember a sentence follows the a pattern. It's not a question. This is not a question. So you need to have the subject and then follow it with the verb. They will eat. All right? So you are going to follow it with the verb. Um and not the other way around. I think often times when students might see this they they have where and they think question and then they want to switch the subject and the verb. But not in this case. The same way if said, I wonder where they will eat for dinner tonight, I can follow that with another noun clause and say, I don't know what they will eat for dinner tonight. What they will eat for dinner is another noun clause again. What they will eat. All right, you're going to have subject and then the verb.

Excellent. Let's look at the next one. Yes, somebody said that one, that last one, that was not a question. All right, it's just something that somebody's thinking. They're wondering um what do you think? I suggest that everyone our Saturday lessons which word completes that this is confusing grammar. All right. I've seen this uh this is a mistake that yes many learners tend to make this is a little more advanced uh grammar. So let's look at where is it? So write your answer in the chat. What do you think best completes that sentence? I suggest that everyone in our Saturday lessons. A join, B joins, or C will join. All right.

So I have some good answers. I'm trying to find um if you bear with me, I'm trying to find another video for you, another video lesson to share with you that's going to help you better understand uh the answer if you want more information about these. Uh that is very useful. So let's look. All right, found it. So the correct answer, yes. Um I want to give some shoutouts to Yes. Uh excellent Muhammad Eloisa. Perfect. Um, Kiko, yes. Uh, do we have any others? The correct answer is a. I suggest that everyone join our Saturday lessons. Now, you may be looking at this and be like, "Wait a second. Subjectverb agreement.

Everyone joins." But in this case, I suggest that is talking about the subjunctive mood, a suggestion that somebody has. So in that case, I suggest that everyone join our Saturday live lessons. The subjunctive mood, it refers to a hypothetical situation in which you use the base form of the verb in the noun clause. So right there, we just talked about noun clauses. It's another noun clause. I suggest and then that everyone joins our Saturday lessons. That is our noun clause. It starts with that and then we have our subject everyone and our verb join. But it is the subjunctive. So we're going to say everyone join. All right. There are many verbs out there that when you see that that identify like oh it is the subjunctive um the subjunctive mood. For example, I recommend, I demand, I insist. So those are some other verbs that you would use um with the subjunctive mood. And for more information on that, I suggest you can check out we did another uh lesson in the past about grammar mistakes that even advanced learners often make. And if you'd like to check out that lesson, I'm throwing it right there in the chat. You can check that out a little later. All right. So, let is the subjunctive mood. Let's look at the next one. Okay. So, this one, this is I'm sorry you're looking at this like, oh goodness. I want you to first read this and tell me how many mistakes do you see? How many mistakes? And I'm just going to go ahead and tell you that they are all mistakes with prepositions because I can't you can't do a confusing grammar lesson without talking about prepositions. So, this is a great way to practice this. I've have this little reading for you. I want you to think how many mistakes with prepositions do you see? First, let's identify the mistakes.

That's the first step in this process. So, I'll just go ahead and read it for you. Um, it says, okay, read I'm going to read it as is. A long time ago, I had a terrible flight experience leaving to New York. First, the flight was delayed from 3 hours. Many people complained over waiting was so long. A few hours later, everyone was told the plane was incapable at taking off. I had to wait until the next morning to leave. That was a long time ago. So now I can look back and laugh on it. All right. So if you're just listening to me read it, probably some of it sounds a bit awkward. So there are there's actually quite a few mistakes with the prepositions. So the first thing I want you to do is just look at it. Look at those prepositions and find well how many mistakes do you see? And then we're going to go through and and identify them and talk about well which ones how do we change these? All right. So, this is a longer question all about prepositions. All right. So, all right.

See, uh some some different answers in there. Excellent. Um going to go back. Yes. All right. Let's give I'm going to give some shoutouts for people that have found all of them. Yes. IELTS writing. Nice job. Um who else do we have? Anybody else? Uh no. Gosh, most people say five. Okay, there's more than five. All right, I'll go ahead and tell you. All right, there are in this. All right, there are six mistakes with prepositions. There are six mistakes. I have highlighted those mistakes for you right here. All right, so now you can see the mistakes. Leaving to New York, it's a mistake. Delayed from 3 hours, mistake. Complained over waiting, mistake.

Waiting with so long. Mistake. Incapable at taking off. Mistake. And laugh on it. Mistake. Now what I want you to do is go through. All right. See if you can identify change it which which is the correct preposition you should use. I'm not going to go through each of these individually. Uh try to write them out. So write the preposition and then maybe write New York and then write the next one. So, I will tell you why it was a mistake and the correct pre preposition that you should use, but I want you to go through and think about what should you change those prepositions to. For example, my flight was experience leaving to New York. That is a problem.

All right. The key word there is leaving. All right. You're talking about leaving some someplace. And if you're talking about flying. All right. Uh all right. We see some de. Yes. Say excellent. Uh that's what we're looking for. Um delayed. Yes. All right. Lata. Perfect. Delayed for um Krishna. Excellent. Yes. Uh Han Chong Chong. Uh perfect. Allison. Yes. So those are some great.

Well, you're complaining about waiting for so long. You wait for a period of time. After a few hours, everyone was told the plane was incapable of taking off. You are incapable of doing something. I had to wait until the next morning to leave. That was a long time ago. Now I can look back and laugh about it. I often think you could say um you could laugh at it. I I think that might be acceptable as well, but I think more appropriately like if you're talking about thinking about something in the past, more often people would say, well, they laugh about mistakes in the past. I can look back and laugh about it now um because it's already happened. All right.

So, I hope that you guys did well. If you got all of those correct, then write to me in the chat. Write perfect. Write the word perfect so I know that you knew the answer to all of those because this prepositions, those are tricky little function words that again they are difficult to learn. You just have to practice them like in this exercise right here. Or again, reading, reading, reading, reading really helps you because you are seeing the verbs followed by the correct preposition. And over time, you just start you take that information in. grammar quiz, this little interactive quiz was helpful for you. That is what it's all about in order to practice your skills and actually talk about why the grammar is the way it is. So, if you learned something new, if you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button. Let me know. That is the way that you can let me know that, okay, in the future, we should do more grammar lessons. We should do more grammar quizzes like this because it helps you.

It helps you improve your skills and it helps you understand grammar a bit more. Hit that like button. Let me know. And as always, you guys can write us questions in the comments. We love hearing from you. And be sure to check out our social media. We are active on Twitter, on Instagram, and on Facebook. You can find us there. Um, Lolly says, "Oh, wrong." Oh, no. That's not good. Um, we will definitely we will definitely have more practice like this in the future because it is it's a great way for you guys to participate in these lessons. That is what it's all about. That is a great way to improve your skills. Um, so thank you guys so much for joining me. Thank you, Andre. Uh, Neckla, perfect. Aziza. Um, can we say leaving New York? You could say leaving and take that preposition out. Yes, that would be fine. Um, Swati, Angela, thank you guys. Uh, Lat Tom, perfect. Uh, Andre Rosny, hope you guys I hope you guys enjoy the run rest of your weekend. Have a wonderful day and I will see you guys next time. And so long.

CONFUSING WORDS FOR ENGLISH LEARNERS

hello what's up I hope that you're having a great day whenever you might be watching this I have a super super cool lesson that we are going to do today and that lesson is I want to talk to you about some confusing words for English learners but I'd say that they're not just confusing for English learners it can also be confusing for native speakers the one thing I like about this lesson is that when I was putting it together I was actually learning some new things and that's the great thing about English is you know no matter whether you're a native speaker or a language learner or however long you've been studying English or even teaching English you're always learning new things so I want to talk about a few things that can be a bit confusing for learners so we're gonna go over those today and at the end we are going to practice what we've learned so if you're joining us thanks for joining us say what's up in the chat and let me know where you're joining us from who do you have from India Tomica village from India also autocratic Stan Aman oh hey what's up thank you guys for joining me yes men honey yeah awesome great to have you guys here again a very special lesson we're gonna talk about some things that confuse English learners and I am going to ask for your participation I want you guys to write a lot in the comments comments and also even if you're watching this later write to us in the comments participate we really want to involve you in these lessons so let's begin with talking about well why do some words end up confusing English learners what why are these words confusing to begin with well there are there can be many different reasons for that I've just written down three of them the first one I have is some grammar rules maybe there's just a subtle grammar rule that people tend to confuse and mix up and again this is where you practice practice practice you're always improving and your fluency will then improve so it could be grammar rules the next one that I have are different words with similar meaning so you might have two different words that have different meanings but the meanings are very close to each other they're very similar and because they're so similar people might tend to confuse them now if you have joined us if you are with us right now I want you to write hey what's up Carlos sorry I mispronounce names out of suit from Thailand great to have you here in the chat I want you to write down what are some words what are some English words that confuse you it could be two words or maybe if there's just one word that that confuses you I want you to share with everybody share with us it's a great way to again understand where each other is coming from so write down what are some words that confuse you the last one that I wrote down a common reason why words why some words confused learners is right there homonyms now a broad definition of homonyms are words that either have the same spelling or different spelling that have the same spelling but same pronunciation but they have different meanings they have molted words with multiple meanings or it could be words that have the same pronunciation different spelling multiple meanings but that's a very broad definition of homonyms I I put that little graph down there for you because there are in layers to it and if you really want to get specific and learn the difference between you know a homonym or a Hedren 'm or a hydrograph you can study that a little later but these are reasons why some learner some some words might confuse people all right so we got some good ones Oh excellent excellent you know lay light L say effect effect yes

these are all differences so this is good because I actually I have some of these words today let's begin let the games begin so the first one hmm because we talked about some grammar rules all right so let's look at a little small grammar nuance and this one I don't think is as bad because there is a rule to it a versus and okay a versus and these are both indefinite articles that introduce a noun phrase so when you think of articles people will think of a and or the I'm just talking about the indefinite ones a or an now when we learn these people some people might say like Oh pay attention to the letter the first letter of the word that comes before the article and that's and that that can confuse people because it's not the first letter that determines whether you use a or n it's the first sound so we use a is used with words that start with a consonant sound right there alright a kangaroo a banana a house a university all right now you notice that University starts with the letter U but we use a because of the first sound you you you yeah it almost has that Y sound so we say a university alright so again it's clean heed to pay attention to that first sound for an alright we use that with words that start with a vowel sound okay words that start with a vowel sound like those examples I have an answer an old car all right it comes before it well the adjective old an hour all right again the word starts hour begins with the letter H but you don't have there is no H sound all right our it's also it sounds like oh you are again it has that short o sound so we're like to use you know OMG BTW write it in the chat let me know what is your favorite acronym to use now this is where this is something that I learned today and this is where you get really nitpicky as to what the meaning is and again some of these rules you don't have to follow it strictly it's up to you so let's look at the meaning of these words so an abbreviation is just a shortened form of a word it's an abbreviation an acronym think of an acronym is a type of an abbreviation so it is kind of a subcategory of an abbreviation so for an abbreviation I think some many of us are familiar with like dr. all right it gets shortened to the dr our dr. so-and-so same with st. before like a Cathedral st. James alright you see that s T that becomes an abbreviation now you're probably looking at FBI and lol thinking well wait a second those are acronyms and again this is where it gets nitpicky if you know you refer to him as acronyms I would refer to them as acronyms that's fine I don't think anybody is going to challenge you on it but the difference is is that when you shorten some words and you take that first letter FBI stands for Federal Bureau of Investigation lol laugh out loud when you actually say the letters it's technically an abbreviation alright an acronym is an abbreviation that's formed by the initial letters of words but it's pronounced as one word that's a subtle difference between an abbreviation and an acronym so FBI we actually say the letters so it's an abbreviation lol same thing but an acronym like NASA alright for those of you unfamiliar with NASA it stands for oh goodness national astrological space association it is an organization part of the government of the United States and we just call it NASA all right for space yolo okay that's another texting acronym you only live once but we don't say y Olo alright it's just we say it as one word yolo alright so those are technically speaking those are acronyms when we say it as one word same with nato the the northern Atlantic Treaty Organization a wall which I don't know if you're with that that's kind of a military term it means oh gosh what does it mean absent without official leave it's a military term that somebody basically they didn't get permission they left they went AWOL so those are acronyms when we say them as one word get some good ones in there lol all right favorite is OMG yes we use it Karlos WTF yes that is a very popular and effective acronym to use but again technically those aren't acronyms they would be abbreviations but I don't think anybody is gonna you know again this is not nobody gonna challenge you on it this is something that just just for you guys to know fun facts I learned this new today Otto said rip alright rest in peace all right that would be an acronym people say rip rest in peace so those are her abbreviations and acronyms next somebody had mentioned this before the difference between effect and effect okay so the pronunciation is very similar I'd say the big difference and this goes back to grammar mostly is that effect is going to be a verb and effect is the noun the pronunciation is very similar effect the verb has that schwa at the beginning that a sound effect and effect the noun it's more of a shortened e but it's very slight effect effect often I think I'm guilty of this I'll kind of just pronounce them very much the same mostly with that schwa and instead of effect I might say effect so that's why that's another reason I think it can be confusing is because of the pronunciation but in order to really know the difference and learn the difference realize that affect is a verb and effect with an e that is a noun so again right to me in the chat or the comments even if you're watching this later tell me something what is something that affects your mood I'm using it as a verb there because effect as a verb it means to influence to influence something what is something that affects your mood I want you to write a sentence using effect as the verb okay what's something that affects your mood I gave you an example sentence right there the bad weather affected our travel plans all right it affected our travel plans it influenced those plans now effect the noun it's the meaning is a little similar but it's mostly if you want to get precise it's talking about an impact or a change all right something has an effect all right the the hurricane had a devastating effect on the area all right it had a huge impact or change it had an effect so we got a great good excellent sentence politicians affect my mood in a bad way Laura I completely agree with you yes they definitely affect everybody's mood again hi Barbara said us if you're just joining us we are talking about confusing words in English and I have 10 of them for you and then at the end we're going to practice so if you're just joining us again say what's up in the chat and let's continue oh this is another one speaking of politicians okay this is a topic that's come up a lot lately and it's frustrating to me so these are two words to emigrate and to emigrate and there is a difference between them so they're both verbs in to emigrate is your when you're leaving one country in order to live in another now the difference I think part of a big difference when you think of when you're immigrating to somewhere else it does have a more legal context to it that you have permission for our work or maybe your spouse your husband and wife is from that country and you have all your documents and papers and order and you emigrate to another country and you plan to live there so like for example I have that sentence they emigrated from Brazil to France all right this is a little different than emigrate which is also can be used as a verb as a noun we talk about immigration but it's entering a new country to live there and sometimes when you when people immigrate to a new country they may not be doing it legally they may be going there and living there and working and that we would say they emigrate to so they immigrated to Brazil from France all right the key here when you're talking about the difference between these two is the preposition that follows so you immigrated from somewhere you are leaving this place in going somewhere else you emigrate from somewhere and you immigrate to somewhere so in those sentences like I have they immigrated from Brazil all right they left Brazil and the other one they immigrated to Brazil all right that's where they were going and this is where I think not to get all political it's been a very big topic of conversation immigration I know in Europe and in the United States and I think one thing that gets challenging when you talk about the person which we would refer to somebody as an immigrant whether you emigrated or immigrated you're still often referred to as an immigrant which is just a person who is from another country and they are living in you know this country and it gets muddled and confused and people do a very big disservice to the conversation about what's going on one of them being the president of I'm from who is an absolute but anyway I don't want to turn this into a political discussion let's move on to the next one so next we have these right here okay let's talk about this every day versus every day all right people might think it's the same word and this is where I think it's mostly in writing because when you're speaking I don't think it's as much of an issue but when you're writing people will tend to confuse these two now every day two words is an adverb phrase okay that means how often you do something a lot of times it answers the question how often alright so in the comments in the chat I want you to write okay tell me something what is something that you do every day all right write your answer because again this is good you're practicing writing and I'm asking for the to word every day all right what is something you do every day so for example I could say I exercise every day is it true no I do wish it were true though I I want to exercise every day but unfortunately I do not but it is something it's talking about how often something happens I exercise every day now every day one word that is an adjective and it's talking about something that is it's part of a daily routine so for example my sentence right down there jumping jacks are part of my everyday exercises it's part of my everyday exercises it's an adjective and it's modifying exercises it's talking about which type of exercises now in case you're wondering that picture right there that is not that is not a picture of somebody doing jumping jacks it's just a funny little picture I saw however we did do a video on workout vocabulary where we talk about jumping jacks so if you're not sure what those are I highly suggest you check out that lesson it was a great lesson we had a lot of fun so let's see um everybody some practice all right I practice English lessons every day remember it's two words two words every day I practice I practice learning English every day excellent I do I try to learn English every day perfect alright I study every day so when you're talking about something you do every day two words okay that's what we're using so let's continue again if you're joining us we are talking today about confusing words confusing English words okay the next one this would be another hominem complement and complement okay they sound exactly the same they're spelled differently and they have different meanings so a compliment with an AI all right it can be a noun or a verb but those are just nice words or gestures if I do like okay that you know is gesture good job that's a compliment so right now in the chat because again this is we know that it's always good to be positive on the internet there's so many bad things out there I want you to give everyone a compliment okay some nice words say some nice words about everybody who's joining us today practice using it say a compliment and my compliment to all of you is you guys are awesome all right you're awesome you guys are doing really well you like you're hanging out so it's great that is my compliment to you you're awesome all right that is a compliment those are nice words now complement with an e all right it can also be a noun or a verb but that means that you are adding something to enhance something else you're adding something to make something else better so I'm American yes stereotypically we eat hot dogs so I could say that and this is true I believe spicy mustard really complements the hot dog alright so if I have a hot dog I'm going to use spicy mustard because I think it complements the taste it makes it better alright it improves it enhances something so that is complement within II don't confuse those all right some other examples oh I sing in the shower every day excellent use every day of two words perfect so again in the chat you know throw out a compliment oh you are a great teacher thank you thank you so much that is an excellent compliment I really appreciate that the next two words that can confuse people are these two we have exacerbate and exaggerate so these especially especially exacerbate it's not a I'd say it's commonly used but it's good maybe for a more academic sense and being more precise with your descriptions I always think it's it's good to build your vocabulary so these are two words that can confuse people mostly because well the spelling is a little similar and same with the the pronunciation so we have exacerbate which is a verb and that means to make a situation worse and I just noticed that I misspelled situation so that's fine I'm telling you it's to make a situation worse alright so for example you could say that my sentence they're the rainy weather exacerbated the playing condition so maybe you're playing I don't know football and you're playing on a field the grass is all torn up the field is in bad condition and before you start to play it starts raining so it makes it muddy it makes it worse all right it exhausts where it's it exacerbated the playing conditions it made worse that is very different than exaggerate which is again I noticed another mistake it's a verb it's not a noun okay so just to ignore that right there exaggerate to exaggerate is a verb and it means to stretch the truth all right he always exaggerates when telling stories now I put that fish there because it's it's like a common joke when you're talking about somebody exaggerating something when they go fishing and they say wait a second okay I caught a fish this big when the fish was really that big all right people tend to exaggerate the truth because well a lot of times people find say that it's more interesting all right so another common that you're doing a great job thank you excellent um thank you guys for I cornucopia of knowledge excellent that was a word from a few weeks ago thank you a lotta so yes those are great great compliments we appreciate it very much it's always good to give people compliments and I'll say that is your homework assignment for today when you are done I want you to give somebody a compliment say something they have a nice smile you do a really good job thanks for your help all right give a compliment that's your homework assignment for today so that is the difference between exacerbate and exaggerate let's look at this one this is an easy one I think okay it is easier criminal and thief okay this can be confused though because a lot of times people think they're synonyms and they're not necessarily synonyms alright again think of it as you have a criminal which is a broad word a thief is a type of criminal okay so a criminal is it's a noun it's a person it's somebody who breaks the law alright so in the chat give me what are what are some examples of criminals give me some time of criminals all right whoo what could we say make it more specific so a criminal is just in general somebody who breaks the law for example I'd say the criminal ran from the police we know that they broke the law but we don't know exactly what they did why are they running we don't know now a thief is also a noun because it's a person and it's someone who takes or steal something so if I say the thief ran from the police then I know okay they're running from the police because they stole something all right that is the difference between criminal and thief they are not synonyms all right remember that drug you'd say drug drug dealers yes drug dealers that that is a criminal that is a type of criminal perfect Charles Manson yes he was a criminal perfect good example let's look at the next one okay so this is another one that I think people commonly confuse even you know native speakers they commonly confuse these the difference between farther and further okay so both of them are adverbs but when we are saying when we're talking about farther with an a we're talking about a physical distance a real physical distance that you know we can we can think about whether it's one kilometer or 50 kilometers or a thousand kilometers okay it is a physical distance farther so for example I could say now we live farther away from the airport maybe you moved apartments or you moved homes and you are now farther away from the airport it is a physical distance that is different than further because when you're talking about further technically it's it's to a greater distance or degree but you can also think of it like a figurative distance all right not something that you know you can say how many kilometers it is so for example if this is a common sentence that you might hear when you're talking about something and somebody says well you know it's the furthest thing from my mind all right I'm not thinking about this thing I have a lot of other things I'm thinking about more other priorities and something is the furthest thing from your mind I don't know actually the distance about how far it is it's a figurative way of talking about distance all right it is you know something is further from your mind so example like maybe you could say another example like your skills go maybe you're a talented athlete all right you're a good athlete but you're also a good singer and you could say you know your skills go further than the basketball court all right you know your your skills go further you know they go beyond that it is a figurative distance now one reason why these get confused regularly and this was according to the Cambridge dictionary is that when you're using it as a comparative and superlative so for example for farther you would say farther than or further than it is common to use further for both of them all right that is a common usage for both and that that is one reason I think that it can be very confusing because people will use farther in a comparative sense but they're talking about further alright so maybe they say like oh the road you know many times in a comparative or superlative sense when you are making these comparisons people 10 a lot of times to use further so that's just you know food for thought something that you guys should know the next one we got one more and then we're going to practice all right so so get ready to type in the chat this one somebody had mentioned this at the beginning and this lay versus lie it is confused all the time it doesn't matter whether you are learning English or whether you're a native speaker I am guilty of this as well and you use these interchangeably and I don't think again people nobody's gonna call you out on it really I think everybody's gonna understand what you're trying to say as long as you're you know speaking using it grammatically correct I would actually say sometimes if you use it correct and I'll give you an example in a minute people might do a little like strange like what what what are you talking about because of the way we use it today and how it spoke how it's spoken mostly so lay both of these are verbs lay and lie now lay is a verb and it means to put or place okay so another way to think about this is that it is a transitive verb it's often followed by a it's followed by a direct object okay so you you lay something somewhere all right you lay something somewhere you're putting it in a certain place so for example I gave these examples in the past tense I laid the cup on the table okay I laid the cup on the table I also gave you the conjugation of this so for the verb lay you have lay laying I am laying or laid or laid and laid okay so lay it is the past tense laid would be the past participle all right I have laid the cup on the table okay so that is for lay it is putting or placing something and remember it's used it's Trent its transitive so it's going to be with a direct object now lie okay is to rest or recline all right and the reason it's confusing I think one of the reasons because again I put these sentences in the past tense yesterday I lay in bed all day now you might be looking at that and be like wait wait what the heck all right we're talking about lie here not lay and that is the issue is that the past tense of lie is lay okay so you can see down there the conjugation lie I lie in bed I am lying in bed yesterday I lay in bed and the past participle which I don't think this is where I said if you use it correctly people might be like what I don't think many people use this at all yesterday are not yesterday

are like I have lain in bed alright that is not common at all what is common however when you conjugate this is the other meaning of lie now lie is it's again it's a homonym it has to it has multiple meanings it means to rest or recline or it means to say something that's not true alright so for example we say ah he lied to me somebody lied they say something that's not true all right you guys are using them okay come great yeah I lied yesterday after well again lying is cursed yes alright so what I wanted to show you here when I'm talking about saying something that's not true the conjugation lie I lie to somebody I am lying to somebody I lied in the past tense and I have lied to somebody okay that is the conjugation now what's very common is that for the verb lie to rest or recline they people will use the conjugation for the other meaning alright so you might hear instead of somebody say like yesterday I lay in bed all day you might hear somebody say yesterday I lied in bed all day okay they use that other conjugation and that is you know I don't want to say if it's becoming accepted or not obviously that is debatable but it is something that people end up using and especially when they're talking about the present perfect and they're using that past participle most people will say you know I've lied in bed all day I have lied here all day they don't really use lain okay so that's why I put that other meaning up there and again this is something I just wanted to go over with you as I said people misuse this all the time so you it's good to practice this and to understand and study the differences but if you misuse these then you know don't don't stress out about it okay so it's some examples yes while lying in while lying in bed I laid a book on the pillow okay excellent could a great example sentence all right I don't know why you put a book on a pillow but I guess so you know if somebody says oh yeah I'm lying yes okay perfect all right those are good lying as a curse yes you know lying is bad so these are you know good it's good to know the differences between these now I hope you're ready because I want to practice what we've learned today so I'm gonna give you some questions and I want you to write the answers in the chat all right even if you're watching this later a year from now it doesn't matter practice you know writing with us use the comment section write your answers in the comments okay

you ready so let's practice this is your first question all right it's truly honor to meet you okay this was the first one we went over what are we going to use which article a or n all right it's truly honor to meet you I want you to write your answers in the chat what do you guys think all right we're talking about the difference between a and and okay I'll give you a hint all right remember keep in mind what though the one thing that is important is the first sound that you hear all right it's truly honor to meet you okay what do you guys think a or and alright getting some mixed roll all right in this case honor alright is the key word what's the first sound you hear honor all right there is no H sound we don't you're not hearing haha honor all right honor it's that short o sound so we would say it's truly it's truly an honor to meet you ok it's truly an honor to meet you excellent let's do another one ready let's see if you guys write your answers in the chat or in the comments ok what do you think the exam had a profound on my grade which one are we going to use effect or effect hey it sounds similar I'm trying to having a tough time pronouncing them differently now so the exam had a profound effect or effect on my grade which one are we going to use effect or effect which one do you think okay write your answers in the chat ok so getting some good answers yes we're talking about in this case a noun and the noun that we should use is effect all right the exam had a profound effect on my grade all right excellent good job next one alright give this one a try let's see here we go and I want you to tell me I mean shorten this there we go which one is it Minoo is it a compliment or a compliment again the pronunciation is the same if I were to say you know you're such a beautiful person alright you're such a beautiful person which compliment am i talking about which one I want you to write your answer in the chat again this is a word these two words are confused a lot alright which one am i talking about if I tell you you're such a beautiful person alright and it's true I think you guys are beautiful people and giving some good answers excellent and it's true alright if I tell you you're such a beautiful person that means that is a compliment with the eye alright compliment with an eye because complement with an e means you're adding to something you're trying to enhance it make it better okay here's another one let's see if you can answer this one alright so you can see it alright we from Russia to Jamaica okay not sure there's anybody out there who's actually done this we from Russia to Jamaica or are you going to use emigrated or emigrated which one do you think all right write your answer in the chat or in the comments participate with us okay we from Russia to Jamaica Russia maybe it's very cold so this person wanted nicer weather and they went to Jamaica alright the key here as I was talking about before is keep an eye on that preposition from alright so because we're talking about from we would say we emigrated from Russia to Jamaica alright you emigrate from somewhere you emigrate to somewhere alright that is one little difference between those confusing words alright here's another one okay boom try this one alright if you're not feeling well you should go in bed which one do you think alright lay or lie and again with this one you might hear somebody use either one okay and you know that that's just the way it is people interchange these two a lot I'm not saying it that it's right or wrong that you should but it's just something that happens okay what do you think if you're not feeling well you should go in bed alright so I think one reason that this can be confusing yes all right you guys you guys Rock all right give them some good answers if you're not feeling well you should go lie in bed remember lie is talking about you should go rest you should go recline and relax and you can you can substitute that in if you're not feeling well you should go rest in bed alright lay is to place something remember it's followed it's a transitive verb so it's followed by a direct object okay in is not a direct object

it's a preposition okay so in bed would be a prepositional phrase so you should go lie in bed alright so that is our practice thank you guys so much for joining us today I hope that maybe if you thought some of these words were confusing before maybe they are less confusing now but as always it's good to practice these things and to learn more about it I know I learned a lot in doing this lesson some of the differences between these words so it's always great to learn more thank you guys for joining us remember please if you had a good time like this video and also share it with other people you know trying to practice and improve their skills so again thank you guys so much for joining us lotsa Francisco hanya thank you guys patricia lara glad you guys were here blue thank you guys for joining us again as always you can find us down here join our social media classes Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat YouTube okay I'm done advertising us for right now have a great day and we'll see you next time

CONFUSING WORDS IN ENGLISH (Even for native speakers!)

do you ever get confused by certain English words honestly I do it does it happens to me and I want to teach you the difference between some commonly confused words and I hope that I have now persuaded you to watch this lesson or convinced you persuaded you or convinced you everyone my name is Wes from interactive English videos comm and this channel is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills and today I want to help you build your vocabulary but also improve your overall English fluency because ah we're going to look at specific words that may commonly confused learners or maybe even some native speakers so let's begin with these two words right here achieve and accomplish now these words are similar but they're also slightly different so you could say that you want to achieve your goals or you want to accomplish your goals in this case both really mean that you have success but if you're talking about achieve it makes me think that you were really working hard and you wanted to to really reach this level you wanted to get there you put a lot of time and energy into it and therefore you can be proud of the work that you've done and you have achieved your goals I often talk to you guys about perhaps you want to achieve English fluency you want to work hard you want to to reach that goal achieve English fluency and you could be very proud of that you could also if you do a lot of tests or experiments maybe you achieve positive results or perhaps you want to achieve financial security that later on in life you you hope that you don't have to worry too much about money and you have financial security but you need to work hard to get there to achieve financial security now if we're talking about accomplish and you want to accomplish your goals that's also talking about success but in this case it makes me think that well this this thing is finished it's completed and you can move on to the next thing you have accomplished your goal or something else you might accomplish would be a mission the mission it was a success and it is it's done it's finished mission accomplished or perhaps you want to accomplish things in a period of time this is a way that it's used if for example I could say well I had a lot of work to do this weekend so so I just stayed at home and I accomplished a lot that there were many things that I finished in this period of time I accomplished a lot now I'll continue to use these words as I tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson which is lingo de and lingo de is an online language school where you can study english business english spanish german or french it is a great way to learn a language and taking classes online is an excellent way to achieve english fluency so there are many advantages learning with lingo de they have their own proven curriculum you get to study with a native speaking teacher and these are small group classes with usually three to four students which means you'll have plenty of opportunities to speak plus because you are learning online you don't have to travel you can stay at home where it's a little more comfortable and you can also take classes 24/7 and really organize the lessons around your schedule and the prices are also very affordable as low as 8 euro per group class I also studied with lingo de I took some classes in Spanish and I was able to practice a variety of different things because we discuss different topics and I could build my vocabulary we did a bit of grammar and the teacher really helps with my pronunciation because yes I have some trouble pronouncing different words and it really helped so when I started out I wanted to achieve different learning goals and in the end I was able to accomplish those goals and I am confident that you can accomplish your learning goals as well so if you're interested in taking some classes with lingo des just click on the link in the description and you can use the voucher code interactive 11 to get a 20 euro discount on all monthly subscription packages and finally I have some great news for those who really want to challenge themselves and take their english to the next level entries for the lingo to language sprint have reopened you now have until June 26 to sign up so you can sign up for the language sprint take three months of classes and if you successfully complete it then you may be eligible to get 100 percent cashback I will leave a link down below in the description to another lesson that I did giving a little bit more information about the language sprint so you can check that out so let's get back to our lesson on commonly confused English words and the next set of words that I have for you is borrow and lend so a long time ago about ten years ago I used to teach at a high school in rural Namibia shoutout to engage o senior secondary school miss you guys because you can go check it out google it anyway when when I arrived there and I started teaching and I met many of the students sometimes they would confuse these two words and they might ask me a question like Oh could you please borrow me a pencil instead of saying could you please lend me a pencil now I think an easy way to remember the meaning of these two words is to think of it like this when when you borrow something you take it when you lend something you give it so borrow is take lend is give and I think these words can be confusing because you can use them to say the same thing like I just did could I borrow a pencil is basically the same as could you lend me a pencil it's just when I borrow I take you give you lend so you just got to keep that in mind and if I want to practice using these words again I could say the student borrowed a pencil from me to borrow something from someone you may follow this verb with that preposition

from borrow from or I could say I lent a pencil to the student you can follow that verb with the preposition to you lend something to someone so borrow is to take land is to give then we have the words convince and persuade now these these words they're very similar they can often be used interchangeably because they both mean to to get someone to do something at the very beginning of this lesson I said something like I I hope that I persuaded you to watch this lesson which is very similar to to me saying I hope that I convinced you to watch this lesson there is a slight difference and that slight difference is well well why why did you - why did I get you to do this thing so if I convinced you then it's really talking about the that I got you to firmly believe that something is true that you will watch this lesson you believe you believe it's true that it will help you and I convinced you to watch this lesson or you could perhaps convince someone of another person's innocence you believe that they're innocent it is true you convince them of their innocence or you might a very common way that it's use is that you could convince someone to change their mind because before they thought one way and now they they think what you're saying is true and you convince them to change their mind if we're talking about persuade it means you're you're getting somebody to do something based on reasoning and argument you're you're telling them all these things so that they start thinking okay maybe this person is right you are persuading this person and perhaps I I gave some really great reasons why you should watch this lesson you can build your vocabulary improve your fluency and because of that I persuaded you to watch this lesson or maybe you who want you want to borrow my car you want to borrow it and you try to persuade me to lend you my car I'm gonna throw these other words in here just to review now if you give me a lot of good reasons and and arguments then you could say yes that you persuaded me to lend you my car you persuaded me but I don't think you will persuade me not because I don't want to lend you my car I just don't have a car you can borrow a bike if you want then we have the words among and between and these prepositions can be very confusing but if you're talking about between it refers to things that are separate that are clearly separate from one another usually you're talking about two things but but not always so for example I could say for a dinner I was trying to decide between pizza or pasta or if I want to give you an example with more than two things perhaps I have a secret and I say this secret is between you and me and everyone else watching this video lesson so I listed three different things they were clearly separate you me and everyone else watching this video lesson but I was able to use between because they were clearly separated now if we're talking about among then we're talking about things that are not clearly separated because they're part of a group so for example I think of a statement that maybe you would hear in a TV show or movie somebody would say there is a traitor among us that in this group of people there is a traitor there's one person who's a traitor there is a traitor among us or perhaps I'm teaching a class and and then I have to leave the classroom and I tell the students talk amongst yourselves that you as a group you can turn to each other and and talk amongst yourselves now you may be looking at this and thinking wait what's the difference between among and amongst just the spelling the meaning there is no difference in meaning it's the same thing except I think among is it's more common amongst is a bit older but I think that you may often hear it when you use this statement right here talk amongst yourselves that you you have to leave and you're telling this group of people well just just talk to each other talk amongst yourselves or I could give you another example and say I teach English among other things and that phrase right there among other things means as well as other things that's another common usage of of this preposition among I teach English among other things I'm not going to tell you those things but I do I do teach English among other things then we have the words figuratively and literally now these words well I'll tell you in a little bit why they can be confusing but let's let's first talk about what they mean if you say something figuratively then you are you're using words and phrases in a very imaginative way in order to really like emphasize a feeling and emotion and event you're basically using metaphors it's not real it's not what happened so let me give you an example if I have a difficult day I like to go out for a run and when I go out for a run the stress just washes away does the stress really wash away and just fall off my body no I am speaking figuratively or another example I could say that well some some situation this is going to create a tidal wave of problems is it really a giant wave of problems that's gonna come and hit me no again I'm speaking figuratively but the reason why we do this is to really emphasize something it makes our our conversations or our writing a little more colorful a bit more interesting and I think it really helps you put a picture in your mind so I think it's great if people are speaking and they use figurative language now if we're talking about literally this this refers to something that actually happens this is this is the truth this is what really happened it's realistic it it's the exact speech so for example maybe I'm talking with my friend about someone else and I saw that person yesterday and I said oh you know I literally saw her yesterday I'm then saying that this actually happened another example every lesson I always ask you guys I say oh please go ahead hit the like button so I I could then say every lesson I literally asked you guys to hit the like button this this is what actually happens now the one thing I want you to take notice of is that in those examples that I gave you I used the word literally and people will say this in order to to emphasize what that something actually happened but that's also the reason why these these words are commonly confused is because people will use literally when talking about figurative examples so let me let me tell you what I'm talking about I could say something like oh yeah I saw the movie I literally died of laughter oh if you die of laughter that is speaking figuratively I did not die from laughing but it's a little confusing because I said I literally died of laughing as though it actually happened but it really didn't or perhaps somebody could say he was literally thrown under the bus now to throw someone under the bus that is an idiom that means to betray someone so again we're using literally to talk about something that did not actually happen this person did not actually get thrown under this bus they're talking about being betrayed so in those examples I used literally more as a discourse marker to help organize ideas or express an emotion the same way somebody would use words like or anyway well or like so that is why these two words can be a bit confusing it is because of that people will use the word literally when they talk about something that is figurative so listen for that because that is something you may hear people say from time to time so I hope you are now convinced that this lesson was actually worth your time and that you understand the difference between these different sets of words all right I'm gonna go now I am literally going to end the lesson thank you guys so much for watching and I will see you next time

CONFUSING WORDS IN ENGLISH | Vocabulary Quiz Lesson

Hey everyone, welcome to today's lesson. My name is Wes. This channel is called Interactive English and it's really just all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. We try to do a little bit of everything. And if this is your first time, please write to me in the comments. Tell me your name. Tell me where you're from. Love hearing from new people. And even now, if you're joining me live, you can write your name uh where you're from in the chat. It's also great to see so many familiar faces. Um, today uh because I will give some shoutouts as we go through the lesson. Today is more of a vocabulary lesson because what we're going to talk about uh we're going to talk about confusing words in English. And as you can see, it says it is a quiz lesson.

So, I'm going to give you some different sentences um with some confusing words. And I'm just going to have you choose which word best completes the sentence. So, it's really testing your knowledge on the vocabulary that you may already know, which is great practice. But before we jump in uh and begin, just want to say quick hello Angela. Yes sir. Uh welcome Lai. Great to see you again. Teao, hi, how are you? Um Suana Amit, uh Nun Kushnik, hello from India. Excellent, Maria Teresa. Good to see you again. Excellent. Um, and I keep saying it. Excellent. Excellent. I'm so happy uh to see all of you guys today. So, we're going to go through this and I'll give you an opportunity to practice and tell me which word you think uh best completes the sentence. Of course, I will then tell you what the answer is and talk to you about a little bit about the difference between these words. So this is it's a good way to build your vocabulary but also your overall fluency because these are words that learners may confuse from time to time. To be quite honest, I think uh there are even uh native speakers that confuse these words as well. So let's go ahead and begin with the first question that I have for you. Uh we're talking about these two words borrow and lend. And if you are an avid fan of interactive English, you should recognize many of these words because I've actually done lessons in the past talking about some of these words. I actually did an entire lesson, I think, on borrow and lend uh a long time ago. So, the sentence, he refused to m some money because I didn't pay him back last time. Which of those words would you use to complete that sentence? Uh trying to think about the difference between borrow and lend.

Excellent. Uh yes. Uh Jerry Aayam, uh Amit, Teao, Sarah, uh Lai, great job. Ja, Gahad, the correct answer is lend. So, a quick way just to think about the difference. When you borrow something, you're taking it. When you lend it, you're giving it. And notice those actions I try to associate it with. Borrow, you're taking. Lending, you are giving. So, in this case, we're talking about somebody else refused to give me lend me some money because I didn't pay him back last time. And yes, if uh if you don't pay somebody back, probably that person may not lend you money in the future. That is true. So hopefully that one uh probably was a little easier. I think difference between borrow and lend. Um but great job. So many correct answers. Uh excellent. Uh Gustav, good to see you. Uh good to see you. Welcome. Let's look at the next one. All right. So some of them will be easier, some of them will be a little more difficult. So here we're talking about the phrase every day, two words versus the single word every day. So again, the pronunciation is exactly the same. The only difference is that uh one is the phrase two words every day and then the other one every day. And this is something that I think people will really confuse mostly with writing because the pronunciation's the same if you're saying it, you're speaking. No, you're not going to know whether you're talking about the one with two words or just the one word. So, this is really useful, I think, for your writing. If you're writing an email or even something for work or school, this is something I always say to you guys.

what do you think? Uh which which one would you use to complete the the sentence? Uh awesome. Excellent. So many answers. You guys are boom just on this today. Right. Very quick. Uh yes. Uh Sevde, Yasher, Adriana, um Lai, Angela, Levvenia, we're we're talking uh Gustav. Perfect. We're talking about the phrase every day, two words. Try to study English a little bit each and every day. So to hopefully it makes sense. The phrase every day, two words, it really just means each day. It's something that's going to happen uh every day. Every day is one word. It's an adjective and typically it's going to come before um a noun like um we have to do some everyday chores. All right, those are chores. You have to do every day. But when we put it in front of the noun everyday chores then and use it as an adjective, then we're going to use every day one word.

Most of the time I think people use it, they're talking about the phrase um every day. And notice each and every that is a binomial pair. Those are phrases that um are used informally but they're connected with that conjunction like short and sweet. Um something is wine and dine. Each and every is another binomial pair. In this case, each and every day. So I think hopefully I think you guys rock that one. So maybe that was a little easier. This one I suspect may be a little more difficult because well first off because I think these words are sometime they're used interchangeably. There is a slight difference between them but they you may be used interchangeably. A lot of times I think people will use sympathize. I think that word is more commonly used.

So in the example sentence that I gave you, she couldn't m with my situation because she had never been in my shoes before. Okay, which word best completes that sentence? Sympathize or empathize? And again, I will tell you the the difference between these even though I think um they they are often sometimes used interchangeably. If you're just joining us, we are doing it's kind of a vocabulary quiz with these confusing words. So, she couldn't with my situation because she had never been in my shoes. I tried to kind of give you a hint with that last part, which is an idiom to to be in one's shoes. It's almost like then you're saying that you understand what their situation is like, what their what their life is like. Um, and people might say something like, "Well, try to put yourself in in my shoes." And then they're telling somebody like, "Look, try to understand my situation." So, I wow, you guys really did well. Uh, Musa, Raha, uh, Maria, Teresa, excellent. Um, Angela, Sajad, Diana, uh, Rita, we're talking about the empathize. All right. And that's really the last part of that was the the clue. She couldn't empathize with my situation because she had never been in my shoes. So I told you that I think some people will use them interchangeably. The slight difference is to sympathize. Both of them are verbs. Um you could use them as nouns as well, sympathy and empathy. But to sympathize is you you understand the feelings of another. that you understand like oh they're upset like I feel I feel bad for this person um and you sympathize with them to empathize it's you have experienced this thing so if you're able to empathize um with somebody that you understand because you have gone through the same thing you have gone through the same experience and you can empathize with somebody's situation so in this case I said she couldn't empathize with my situation. She had never been in my shoes that she had never experienced the same thing. So that is a slight difference between uh these two words. But uh Lai, it's okay. Don't worry. I know you got it wrong. It's okay. It happens from time to time. Uh but that's a slight difference. So, it's good to know the subtle differences between some of these two words that you sympathize, you understand the that this person may be struggling, going through a difficult time, empathize. It's when you um you have experienced this same thing. The let's look at this next one. Okay, also maybe this one might be a little more challenging. Uh imply versus infer. In this case again both of them are verbs to imply or to infer. Which one would best complete this sentence right here?

So it says based on the latest statistics we can that the new policy is working. All right. Based on the latest statistics we can that the new policy is working. which uh which of those words again they're commonly confused mostly because uh well they have well they're not really spelled the same but wow you guys you guys are on top of your your game today I I will tell you that maybe maybe I told you because I've talked about all of these confusing words before in previous lessons maybe you guys are just such avid fans that uh you remember all of this information. But yes, excellent. Um Ricardo, Ricardo, Mr. Tomorrow. Um let's see. Uh Gustav Lai, perfect. Angela, uh just try to give some more shout outs. Uh Flybore, the answer is the uh Eku Eco from Japan. Excellent. The answer is infer. So let's let me show you the what they mean uh and try to explain it a little bit. So I'll just read the sentences. Based on this the latest statistics we can infer that the new policy is working. So to imply is to express something in an indirect way. To infer is you're forming an opinion based on evidence or fact. They're very two different meanings. Let me give you an example for imply. So, I don't know if you saw um the lesson I did a couple of weeks ago about innuendos and I talked about some sexual innuendos that people will say things and they are implying or suggesting something else in an indirect way. I gave you an example like uh at work and I say, "Wow, um Kim and Steve are spending a lot of time together. They're spending a lot of time together outside of the office. All right. When you say that, I'm implying that maybe they're having some type of relationship that maybe they're romantically involved. I'm implying that indirectly. To infer is with like you're making an inference. You see something and it's like, oh, you can decide something else. Like if somebody walks in your room and they're just wet, then you could in you could infer what the weather is like. You could infer that, well, it's probably raining outside, which is why this person is wet. Uh so again, two different meanings. In this case, um you're looking at these statistics and like, oh, okay, because of the statistics, we can infer, we can form the opinion that the policy is working.

Uh all right. So, let's look at the next one. Again, if you guys happen to be joining us, we're talking about the the difference between some commonly confused words or some confusing words in English. We have the difference between fun and funny. I think maybe this one might be a little easier in the past. I also did another lesson. Uh maybe I'll include some of those down in the description if you guys would like to review um and check out some of these other video lessons where I talk about them with more examples in greater detail. So fun and funny. We had a really m time at the comedy show. We laughed for hours. All right. Which one?

And I tried to I tried to trick you with this sentence. All right. We had a really m time at the comedy show. We laughed for hours. All right. So, I like I'm trying to trick you with that second part of the sentence. Let me just give some shout outs to uh those of you with the correct answer. Yes. Uh Sid, uh Diana, Lai, excellent. Uh Suana, Angela, Anowit, Levvenia are Wait, no, that was funny. The the correct answer is fun. All right. And I'll tell you why in just a moment. Louise Limey. Um, okay. Maria Teresa. Excellent. Good job. The correct answer I told you is fun. We're talking about a fun time. So if you overwhelmingly if you're talking about some time period and you want to describe it, you say, "Oh, we had a fun time at the concert.

We had a fun time at the party. I I hope you guys are having a fun time uh in this class right now learning this vocabulary. So fun refers to enjoyment. You're having a good time. The reason why I tried to maybe trick you is because we're talking about a comedy show where you're watching some comedian and you're laughing. So funny is an adjective that really refers to either a situation like I said um and it was a funny situation and you're describing it or you could describe a person and say well this person is funny. So if you're talking about a time in general that's not really you're not going to describe that um using the word funny and say oh it was a funny time. uh you would just say that something is funny and that's it. So most of the time you're going to use it as a predicate adjective if I want to be very specific and it's going to follow the verb to be and you'd say a situation is funny or maybe a person is funny. I like to think I am funny but well I have my moments not always. Uh so in that case we're talking about time. You would describe you would describe the time that you had as fun. We had a fun time. Um and that would be the adjective. That would be the correct answer. Um all right. So let's look at the next one. Thank you, Maria Terisa. Thank you. I really appreciate that. Uh an excellent teaser. Yashar. Wait, I said I said your name at the very beginning, I think, uh, in one of the like during the hellos. I'll try to try to get as many as I can. U, Dorcas, yes. Excellent. Fun is the correct answer. Uh, let's see. This one is more difficult. Um I I will explain it and I think probably you'll be able to guess the answer but this is uh these are phrasal verbs and trying to think well what's the difference between burn up and burn down. Okay so the sentence that I gave you is talking about well I had a collection of old books sadly many of them in the fire.

Okay. How which of those phrasal verbs would you use to complete um this sentence? And they're really there's only one correct answer. So, are you going to use burn up or burn down? If you wanted to really get technical because I know you guys are just typing this quickly uh in the chat, this would be remember I had a collection. We're talking about the past. So, something happened in the past. So, if we want to get really technical, um, you would be using burned. It's a regular verb. Burn in the past. Burned up or burned down. Which one do you think, uh, you're going to use? I did, again, I talked about this in a previous lesson. I had a collection of old books. Sadly, many of them in the fire. Uh, excellent, Gustav.

Perfect. Uh, let's give some shout outs. Venry. Uh, Veni. Nice. Lewis. Uh, who else do we have? Benny, good job. Mr. Tomorrow, excellent. Um, Lolly, sorry. Uhuh. Um, the correct answer the correct answer is burn up. And I will I'll explain why. So, both burn up and burn down. Something is being destroyed by fire and it's destroying something. The difference I would say is that if something burns down, it's it's talking about a larger structure. So I think of like uh a house or a bridge or some building, some larger structure that is destroyed by the fire and it would like burn to the ground and it would burn down and possibly collapse. If something burns up, it's also destroyed by the fire. But I would say that it's like something is really consumed by it. Something maybe like a smaller object. So in this case, if there was a house fire and a home was on fire, the things in the home, the home itself would burn down, but the things inside the home might burn up. Like if you have a book, books are made of paper. They would burn up in the fire. Another um situation in which you may hear um burn up. Think about um asteroids entering the earth's atmosph atmosphere. They never make it into the earth. They burn up in the atmosphere is another uh example of when you might say something burns up. So I hope that makes um sense between burn up, burn down, burn down. Think of like a larger structure like a building, a home, a bridge, and like oh it burned down, fell to the ground. um burn up just something like items that you might have. So in this case, we're talking about the home was on fire. The books were inside there. They burned up. I know I'm talking about this a lot right now. Uh so let's just move on to the next one.

All right, it's okay. We got more. There's more left. Um more questions for you. Here is uh the next set of confusing words. the difference between persuade and convince. Again, they're very similar in some instances. You could even say they're interchangeable, but there there there is a slight difference between these two, especially when you think about, well, when in what situation are you going to use them? So, think about this situation right here. Try to put a picture in your mind about what is happening. the lawyer was able to m the jury that the defendant was not guilty. So, we're talking about a situation that is in a courtroom. You have a lawyer, you have a defendant, there's a jury who's going to make a decision and the lawyer was able to m the jury that the defendant was not guilty. I told you.

I'm trying to think in this case. I guess you could use them interchangeably. Again, I will tell you why. I'm going to give you the answer that I am because yes, there is there can be a slight difference. So, yes. Um, excellent. Uh, let me just show you guys. It's it's moving really fast right now through the chat. The correct answer is convince. Okay. So, the reason for that, because I saw some people put persuade, and if you said persuade, I wouldn't say like, oh no, like it's not like if you had mentioned this to me in a conversation, I would not stop and think, hm, that was the wrong word. Persuade is like you're c to cause someone to do something by reason or an argument. So, you're giving them your opinion, you're giving them an argument, and you want them to do something, perhaps take some action. Convince is more about you, you want someone to believe something. You want them to believe something is true. So, in this case, the lawyer was able to convince the jury, the convince these people to believe the defendant was not guilty. So, you're talking about that these the jury now believes that this is true. They believe the defendant is not guilty. Think about it another way. If I wanted to use um persuade and you're trying to get someone to do something, then I might think um you could say the lawyer was able to persuade the jury to um for uh to pres to persuade the jury to vote not guilty. So in that case, it's like you're trying to get them to take some action like their vote, in which case maybe um you would then in that case use persuade. So again, it's a very slight difference. Persuade, it makes me think, you know, you're trying to get somebody to do something, take some sort of action. Uh convince is more so just believing something is true. So let's look at the next one. Again, that's a little more difficult because the meaning persuade and convince, often people might use them uh interchangeably as synonyms. These two words are certainly different. Um well, slight they're they're slightly different. I'll say that. Um this is more it's not just vocabulary, but also more of a grammar question. trying to think about the difference, making sure you know the difference between less and fewer. So, my sentence that I want you guys to complete, there were m people on the metro today than there were yesterday. Which one are you going to use to complete this sentence? Are you going to use less or fewer? And I think you guys are mostly overwhelmingly getting this correct. Excellent. Just some shout outs. Yes, good job. Um, Jari, Gahab, Yasher, uh, Angela, Takaya, Lai, excellent. You got that one correct. The correct answer is fewer. Okay. And this is where I think in spoken English you people will make this mistake I I think quite often and they will confuse these especially when we're talking about an irregular plural noun which is what I used trying to confuse you a little bit but we use less. I told you it was more of a grammar question. We use less. It means not as much for non-count nouns. So we use less for non-count nouns like less water um or less I don't milk we're talk we use fewer for count nouns so people it is a count noun it is an irregular uh plural noun but in that case you would use fewer there were fewer people on the metro today than there were yesterday but I would say that just in spoken in English people um whether they're learners or even native speakers uh they will confuse them and they may say yeah there were less people on the metro today than there were yesterday to be quite honest I do this too I I will confuse these from time to time um and sometime I'll catch myself too and I'll I'll use less and and most of the time when people make a mistake they're using less instead of fewer and that's when people often make the mistake I've done it do and I'll catch myself and I'll realize hm I said less when I should have used fewer but just good it's good to be aware of the next question uh or the next set of words that I have for you the difference between reserve and book these are both uh verbs to reserve to reserve something or to book something and I want you guys to think about well what what is the difference between these two it's it's very subtle. It's very slight, but in the example that I gave you, um, we should go ahead and m a hotel room for this weekend. Okay. What do you think uh would best complete that sentence? We should go ahead and m a hotel room for this weekend. Uh, excellent. All right. Give some quick shout outs here. Uh, yes, Metate. Um, Tom Tom Zang. Nice. Kerasidarees. Uh

You may hear like, "Oh, we need to reserve a hotel room." I think of reserve more often would be used with talking about like a table at a restaurant and you're going to a restaurant. You want to make sure that you have a table because you're with a group of people and you would reserve a table. You're not going to use book because it's not something you're going to pay for uh if you're talking about a restaurant. Um so there is a difference between uh these two reserve and book and I hope that explanation made sense. Then we have these two words which I also very uh similar uh say versus tell. Again, this is another set of words that I did a lesson on a while back, and I will go back through and try to throw those down in the description in case you'd like to uh watch more video lessons, which I hope I hope you like to do. So, I'm going to you a secret. Please do not m anything to anyone. And if you're not sure exactly why, like why you should use which one, just do what what which one feels right. Just your your feeling as to what do you think? Okay, I I feel this is the way uh that this is the correct answer. And in this case, I I want you uh I'm having you use both of them. Um I'm going to m you a secret. Please do not m anything to anyone. All right. Excellent. A lot of lot of answers to this one. Perfect. So, you're using both of them, but you're going to use uh the first one, tell, and then you're going to use say.

So, all of you who wrote tell, say, that is the correct answer. I'm going to tell you a secret. Please do not say anything to anyone. That is uh the correct answer. So, think about it this way. You say something to someone. All right? you say something to someone and you would tell someone something. Uh, so in this case, it fits right in there. The way that I had this sentence, I'm going to tell uh you a secret. I'm going to tell someone something. Tell you a secret. Please do not say anything to anyone. To say something to someone, say anything to anyone. All right, so that is the difference between those two. I think you guys overwhelmingly got that one correct. Great job. Uh I hope that again this is just good practice for you not only to build your vocabulary but to understand some of the slight differences between these words which is just going to help you improve your overall English fluency. Uh just want to I want to thank you guys so many great members. uh saw members today uh Dorcas, Valerie, Gustav, uh Tyel, Lai. Uh always great to see so many members uh participating in these lessons. If you guys want to show us a little bit of love, support our channel. Uh there are links down in the description below for uh YouTube membership, joining me on Patreon. I really appreciate it. Really kind of helps uh help keep all of this going and and the engine running. Uh, I hope again that you guys learned uh some maybe some new words or if they weren't new words that you were able to understand the difference between some of those words because again they are they are commonly confused. Thank you guys so much for joining me. Give a few more quick shoutouts. Olivia, uh, Roxanna, um, to the members and patrons here, uh, Teao, Maria, Teresa, uh, Lai, Dorcas, um, Valerie, thank you guys. Gustav, um, Suana, uh, Hugs for Drugs, thank you for being here. Uh, Limey.

All right, I am going to have to end it there. Hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend. And of course, I will be back for another live lesson in the

COOKING PHRASAL VERBS Build Your Vocabulary

today i want to talk to you about phrasal verbs that are all related to food and cooking because well this is something that we do every day all of us like to eat and i think many of you out there probably like to cook as well so these are very useful phrasal verbs that you will use in everyday english some of these phrasal verbs i will teach you in pairs either because they are very similar in their meaning or they are exact opposites so for example the first phrasal verbs that i want to teach you it is a pair and that is heat up and warm up and they both have a they have a similar meaning and it just means to make something warmer or hotter i would think that to heat something up i would think it's mostly about you're you're heating it up you're making it hotter and to warm it up you are making it warmer the only difference that i think is mostly the speed if i think of heating something up you're making it hotter but doing it uh quickly so for example you might heat something up in the microwave when you're talking about using the microwave i think it's common to say that you're going to heat something up to warm up you are making it warmer but i think there might be a longer period of time there that you are going to warm something up in it it might take several minutes and you might use it when you're cooking something on the stove and you want to warm something up you want to warm up the food so that you can eat it or if you want to do it much quicker then you could just heat it up in the microwave but in general they they have a similar meaning you are just making food hotter or warmer so put it in one of those tupperware containers and i'll heat it up in the microwave when i get home they could warm up to soup if you want the next set of phrasal verbs that i want to teach you turn up and turn down now these two phrasal verbs are exact opposites and we're talking about using the stove and you would turn it up or you might turn it down so to turn something up it just means that you are increasing the amount of heat and to turn something down you are decreasing the amount of heat and again often you are referring to the stove and you want to increase the amount of heat so you're going to turn it up but if it gets too hot then you may need to turn the stove down turn up turn down next is the phrasal verb pass up and this just means to not take advantage of something now this phrasal verb can be used in a variety of contexts for example you might pass up on a new job opportunity you just didn't take it you didn't want it but since we're talking about food and cooking i think it might be used that you are not taking advantage of perhaps a meal maybe you are passing up on dinner with these people because you're too busy or i think somebody might use it in the context they're surprised that you decided not to eat something you're not taking advantage of it and be like wow i can't believe you're passing up on these cookies they taste amazing you should give them a try i can't believe you're passing up on them next is the phrasal verb eat up and this phrasal verb has two different meanings so it can mean to eat all of something that if something was so good you just ate it all up for example i could say well i i ate up all of those cookies they were so delicious you passed up on them i told you not to so i ate all of them up it can also refer to like a command that you're telling somebody to to start eating and you might just say hey you know eat up don't wait for me just go ahead eat up start eating begin eating eat up eat up yup eat up guys there on the table i saw a pair of over easy eggs that honey had left from me i made him up i passed out with a plate on my chest i ate up her snacks and now the basket is empty so speaking of eating the next phrasal verb is pig out and what it means is to eat excessively you're eating a large amount of something and you're you're eating it rather quickly too you just want to eat as much as you can as fast as you can you want to pig out it's not a nice phrasal verb you don't want to tell somebody oh wow you're really pigging out it's not going to make them feel good but it is something that you might use when talking about yourself if you are so hungry perhaps you've been traveling all day and you have not eaten you say oh i just can't i can't wait to have dinner i'm so hungry i'm just going to pig out i'm going to eat as much as i can as fast as i can i just i just want to pick out i say we buy 26 worth of ice cream and just pig out extra large bucket of popcorn half butter half salt normally just be out here picking out then we have chop up now this is a cooking phrasal verb because when you're in the kitchen and you need to cut things up into small pieces you are going to chop them up so if you are maybe somebody's helping you cook and you might ask them and you might tell them hey can you chop up those onions can you chop up some carrots can you cut them into small pieces chop up now let's start chopping up these onions please tell me you're going to start chopping up lettuce and tomatoes you take the egg and the green pepper and chop the green pepper up in big chunks don't even dices big chunks of green peppers and onions next is thaw out and when you thaw something out you are taking something that is frozen and you are setting it out so that it becomes softer over time and then it's ready to use you need to thaw it out so think of things in your freezer maybe you have some chicken in your freezer and you are ready to eat it and you want to cook it you're not going to start cooking a frozen chicken you need to thaw it out so people might take it and move it from the freezer to the refrigerator to let it thaw to let it thaw out or perhaps they just set it out on the counter in the kitchen in room temperature and it thaws out over time to thaw out next is boil over again it's a cooking phrasal verb and when you are heating up some water and it starts to boil if it is boiling too much it might boil over and the water just comes over the side and you'd say wow you know the the water it's boiling over we need to turn down the heat so that it stops boiling so intensely and it doesn't boil over so as you can see when you are explaining something about cooking or eating then it's quite possible you are going to use multiple phrasal verbs to describe what's happening next i have another pair of phrasal verbs for you and that is eat out and eat in so i i like to eat out i'll admit that it's one of my favorite phrasal verbs this is when you eat outside of the home and you're really referring to a restaurant or some place in which you are ordering food and paying for it you are eating out at a restaurant eat in it just means the opposite it means that you are going to eat at home you are going to cook something you are going to stay at home now this phrasal verb i don't think it's as common because well most of the time people like to say that they're going to eat out they like to tell others their plans and say well you know i'm going to this restaurant i'm going to eat out tonight but people don't regularly talk about eating in as much mostly because well it's i think people sometimes think it's uneventful but you could still use it in conversation if somebody says you know what are your plans for dinner tonight you could just say well i'm not gonna go anywhere i'm gonna eat in i'm gonna cook something at home i'm going to eat it and then liz rang about the two of you eating out tonight how come you wanted to eat in tonight so if you're gonna eat in then you might use this next phrasal verb which is whip up and this just means to make some food quickly and i think it really refers to people who are they they have something they have to do they need to eat quickly they don't have a lot of time so they need to whip something up eat it and then leave and and go do whatever it is they need to do to whip up some food how about whipping up some buffalo sausage okay

i'll but whip up some food please wait i'll whip up some chicken wing then we have cut down on and you would cut down on something and when you cut down on you know it could be any food it refers to a food that you need to reduce the amount that you're eating pretty much because it's not good for you so you're telling somebody that you need to cut down on this food for example i would say that you know i should probably cut down on chocolate because i eat it quite often especially at night before i go to bed just because it tastes good chocolate and milk it's my it's my it's my one pleasure and i love to eat it but i should probably cut down on it because every night it's too much it's a little excessive so i need to cut down on it you can also use it when talking about nutrition as well like you want to cut down on the amount of calories that you are taking in during the day you want to cut down on the amount of processed foods any any type of food that you might think is it's not really good for you you want to reduce the amount of it you want to cut down on this food is there anything you want to cut down on brian like the dickens to cut down on my snacking maybe we should cut down on your sweets you're starting to get a little buddha belly then we have the phrasal verb pick at and it refers to an action that somebody's doing and it means that somebody is eating just a very very small amount usually because they're not hungry and it's it's almost like they're kind of just playing with their food a little bit and say oh you know you're picking at your food i think of families maybe the parents would say this to the kids if they're they're not eating and they're just sitting there they might say hey you know stop picking at your food i want you to eat it we didn't whip up this food quickly stop picking at your food i want you to eat up and yes i i will confess i i need to stop picking at my vegetables i need to go ahead and eat them they're good for me then we have water down this is a cooking phrasal verb that refers to adding water to something in order to make it less strong you need to water it down so when you're preparing a meal maybe could be a soup and you think that there is too much of something it's a little too strong you might want to water it down a little so that it's a little less intense and it has a better taste to water something down or you could even use it to describe a meal to describe something the way it tastes and say well you know it tastes it's a little watered down probably you shouldn't say that to the person who prepared the food you always want to be polite but if you're talking to somebody else and you could say yeah you know i i tried this i ate it it was a little watered down maybe it'll be better next time go ahead water it down some more my god man i've watered her down as far as she'll go i cannot water no more then we have washed down and this just means to drink something after you eat mostly because you want to make it easier to swallow you want to wash it down so if somebody is just pigging out and they're eating really fast then they may need to drink some water to wash everything down i need to wash it down it's also used in a situation where you eat something and it just tastes terrible and you try it and you're like oh that's awful i need something to wash it down please give me something to drink i need to wash it down let me slice this swiss cheese then you can wash it down with a cup of swiss miss instant cocoa then we have another pair of phrasal verbs and that is drink to or toast to now for either of these phrasal verbs you would drink to someone or you could drink to something as well as toast to someone or toast to something and in that case you are just wishing health and happiness and success to someone or something so you might drink to your friend who is getting married and you're celebrating this event or you could toast to somebody's happiness because they they just got a new job or maybe they just had a new baby and you want to toast to this person but when you use these phrasal verbs keep in mind that you will need to have some kind of drink in your hand usually it would be a drink that's in a glass and you would toast to someone and wish them happiness or you would drink to something and acknowledge the the success and then everybody around would take a drink for example i want to toast to all of you for building your vocabulary and working really hard to learn these different phrasal verbs and then go out and use them and just keep practicing and practicing and practicing i want to toast to all of you ah yeah it's it's just water yeah let's drink to their happiness huh come there are streets in their memory let's drink to peace i'd like to make a toast to pop i'd like to make a toast to the groom to be adrien pimento we would like to make a toast to you guys to my friends i would like to make a toast to my wife so the next time that you are cooking in the kitchen or you are out at a restaurant try to think about what's going on think about which phrasal verbs you would use to describe certain situations because when you connect it to your experience that's going to help you remember their meaning all this talk about food and cooking makes me a little hungry so i'm gonna head to the kitchen i'm gonna whip something up hopefully it'll taste good if it doesn't not worried about it i'll just wash it down with some water and then i'll go eat out no problem and i hope all of you have a wonderful meal the next time you eat whether it's breakfast lunch or dinner and i will see you next time

COPY MY AMERICAN ACCENT! (How to 100% Improve Your Speaking Fluency)

I'm going to teach you all about the American accent, which is my English accent because I am from the United States. And this is a practice lesson. So, I want you to participate and actually say these words and sentences with me. And if you are someone who wants to improve and develop your speaking fluency, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. So, we're going to do this step by step. And really, we're just going to build on top of things as we go along. And again, I want you to practice. So, let's start with a couple of super common reductions. And these are reductions that you absolutely need to learn because you will hear them all the time and you will also use them all the time. And I'm talking about probably the two most common reductions, going to and wanna.

to when those phrases are followed by a base verb we can reduce them and going to is going to get reduced to going to and want to will get reduced to wanna. Now you may already be familiar with these reductions and you may already be using them as well and that's great. It's all about developing a nice rhythm and flow. So I'm going to give you some sentences and I just want you to repeat after me. Say these reductions out loud but I'm not going to spell the reduction. I really want you to get in the habit even when you're reading and you see going to followed by a verb that you're just going to change it already and in your mind you're going to say going to or w to. Now keep in mind these are reductions. You're not going to emphasize these words. So just repeat after me. We're going to be late.

We're going to be late. Are you going to go? Are you going to go? I'm not going to eat that. I'm not going to eat that. He's going to start a new job. He's going to start a new job. It's going to rain tomorrow. It's going to rain tomorrow. Excellent. Easy enough. And you really just move right through the sentence using these reductions. So, let's practice a few more sentences. this time with the reduction. Wanna. I want to go home. I want to go home. What do you want to do? What do you want to do? I don't want to be late. I don't want to be late. Do you want to play a game?

Do you want to play a game? We just want to relax. We just want to relax. All right. Well done. I trust that you are saying these out loud and practicing your speaking skills because just saying them out loud, even with simple sentences, it's really going to help you get more comfortable so that you can start using them naturally. Now, speaking of reductions, let's continue and talk about some single word reductions. And I'm talking about the words to, for, and so these words are commonly used, but they're not really content words. They're not words that you're going to emphasize. And when they get reduced, the vowel sound can change slightly. So each of these words has two different pronunciations. So like the word, it may sound like the number, but when it's reduced, it may sound much softer. T. And you're really going to hear more of a schwah sound, that unstressed vowel sound. The word for is going to sound like fur. And and we're just going to reduce that. That d is going to go away and it's going to sound like n. I really want to emphasize the idea that these words are unstressed because I want to practice them. And typically when people end up focusing on them, they they emphasize the word and and that is not the case. The whole idea is that these words are unstressed and that is why that vowel sound is going to change. Let's look at this first sentence. But there's something I want to mention before we practice. I'm going to the dentist. Now, this does not mean you're always going to reduce this word.

There may be situations depending on the tone and the conversation that you're having. It may sound like two. Maybe you're not paying attention and I'm trying to emphasize that this is something I'm doing. I'm going to the dentist and you hear to. But quite often you're just going to say this casually without giving it too much thought. And to is going to get reduced and it's going to sound like a softer t. I'm going to the dentist. I want you to say this after me. Let's say it slowly. I'm going to the dentist.

Now, let's say it at a normal speed. I'm going to the dentist. I'm going to the dentist. And then this one slowly. She's planning to travel to France. She's planning to travel to France. She's planning to travel to France. Now, let's practice with some sentences using for, but we're going to reduce it to for. Once again, we'll say it slowly and then at a normal speed. I went for a walk in the park. I went for a walk in the park. I went for a walk in the park. And then this last sentence, I'm going to throw in a reduction. What are you going to do for lunch? What are you going to do for lunch?

What are you going to do for lunch? And finally, let's practice reducing and to n. She's healthy and fit. She's healthy and fit. She's healthy and fit. We're having chicken and rice for dinner. We're having chicken and rice for dinner. We're having chicken and rice for dinner. You're doing great. And I hope that as I was saying those sentences, you can hear the reduction that it's a much softer sound. And I also hope that when you were saying them, you're keeping that in mind that it's a softer sound. It gets reduced. And this is really important. Like I said, it's about developing a nice rhythm and flow. And we're going to talk about that in just a moment. But the next thing that I want to tell you about is something that is a distinct part of the American accent. And I'm talking about the flap T. So the flap T, it really sounds like a soft D. And they say flap because your tongue really is just coming up and and flapping against the top part of your mouth. So there are three times when this occurs, and you should be aware of all three. The first one, which I think is the most common, and that is when the T comes between two vowel sounds. And there are many words that that you would use a flap T. Just repeat after me. water city better. I also want you to keep in mind that when you have a phrase and the t comes at the end of the word, but it's between two vowel sounds, you're also going to pronounce that as a flap t. I want you to repeat these phrases after me. Put up, get over, start out.

You hear those flap t's, you're also going to use a flap t when the t comes before or after a dark l. So once again, repeat these words after me. Little bottle, battle, and finally, you're going to pronounce the t as a flap t when it comes before or after a controlled r. Say these words after me. Daughter. Party. turtle. One way that I love practicing the flap t is with a tongue twister. Betty bought. Now, most of these t's, they come between two vowel sounds. And I want I want you to repeat after me. Let's do this line by line. So, just repeat after me. Betty bought bought some butter, but she said the butter's bitter.

If I put it in my batter, it will make my batter bitter. Again, you're pronouncing all those flap T's. Let's say it one more time. Let's say the whole thing. And I want you to shadow. So, in this case, I want you to say it with me. Try to maintain that same speed and really use that flap T. Are you ready? Betty Bought some butter, but she said the butter's bitter. If I put it in my batter, it will make my batter bitter. So, this is a great way to practice the flap t because there's so many of them and you're just saying that soft d sound. Now, another distinct part of the American accent, which is a sound, and I want you to master it, and that is the American R. So, let's talk about how to pronounce the American R. We'll we'll just call it that. and I'll tell you how to position the tongue in your mouth. So, your tongue is going to be pulled back a little bit and the sides of your tongue are going to be touching the insides of your upper teeth. The tip of your tongue is it's going to be pointed up and it's really going to be fixed in a fixed position. Your your lips are going to be a little rounded. So, this is what it sounds like. It It reminds me of a Frosted Flakes commercial. Tony the Tiger would say the word great, but really emphasizing that R sound. Good. There. Give it a try and really emphasize that sound. Great.

Let's practice with some individual words. And this is really important because it's it's all about fine-tuning your pronunciation because the R sound in other English varieties is it's not always the same. So I want you to say these words after me and I'm going to emphasize that R and I want you to do the same. Are you ready? Red, right? Around car star, and you're really going to pronounce that R, that R sound. The next thing that I want to share with you is incredibly important when talking about rhythm and flow. You've heard me mention this several times already, but you need to keep in mind that English is a stress time language. And this is what's going to help you develop that rhythm and flow in a more natural way of speaking. So what does it mean when we talk about stress timing? It means that the stress syllables or words are said at approximately regular intervals and then the other words or syllables may get reduced in order to fit that pattern and because of this the English language may sound maleifluous which is a great adjective which means something is pleasing or soothing to hear. So because English is a stress time language it can sound a little musical. You could take any sentence and really create a melody. And that's what I want to do right now. And I want to say these sentences with a melody. And I'm I'm going to throw a lot at you right now. So, let's just look at this first one. He's going to go to the gym. Every time I clap, that is the stressed syllable or word. He's gonna go to the gym. Think about what else is going on in the sentence. going to I'm going to reduce that to going to to the gym to it's reduced so that that vowel sound is going to change to the gym.

However, that t it comes between two vowel sounds. So I'm going to pronounce it as a flap t. So to the gym, it's actually going to sound like to the gym. Go tothe. You hear that flap t along with that reduced sound. Go to the Go to the. And you will hear this all the time with the American accent. Go to the gym. Go to the mall. Go to the store. So I told you I'm going to throw a lot at you right now. So think about that melody. He's going to go to the gym. And I want you to say it just like that. So repeat after me. He's gonna go to the gym.

One more time with that melody. He's going to go to the gym. And even if I'm just saying this casually at a normal speed, you can still pick up on that stress timing. He's going to go to the gym. He's going to go to the gym. Let's practice the next sentence. Where do you want us to put this? Again, every time I clap, that's that stress timing. That's the rhythm. Where do you want us to put this? At the end of the sentence, we have that reduced to. To put this to put this. Where do you want us to put this? I want you to repeat after me. Think about that melody. Where do you want us to put this?

One more time. Where do you want us to put this? And now let's just say it at a regular speed, but still using that stress timing. Where do you want us to put this? And now let's practice this last sentence. I'm gonna get an Uber and go home. Again, there's several things going on. We're going to reduce going to to gonna and and to n. I'm gonna get an Uber and go home. I want you to repeat after me. I'm going to get an Uber and go home. I'm going to get an Uber and go home. And now let's say it at more of a normal speed. I'm going to get an Uber and go home.

I would really encourage you to practice this and you can practice on your own. What I would suggest is that you read something out loud and I think it would be more beneficial to read some poetry. Probably even better read a children's book. In that way, you can really create that melody because the way that you read to a child, it's going to be different than just reading any old book or article out loud. And you're trying to create that melody, make it sound a little more like a song, and you're using that stress timing. So this is something that I think is really going to help you to create a more natural rhythm and flow. Let's move on to the next thing which is well also very common and that is linking your words.

And really this is a part of connected speech and Americans will often link words together because it helps make our speech faster and smoother. And when you think about it, uh, many languages use linking. And the first time that you start learning a language, you hear it and it just sounds like one long word. This is really because of linking. So specifically, linking is when you link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word. I want to practice with some simple sentences and we are going to link two or more words together.

Let's look at our first sentence. And the way I would say this is, "Can you give us an update?" And we're going to link several words together. I'm not going to pronounce the words individually. Can you give us an update? When thinking about linking and connected speech, the idea is that you're not pronouncing the individual words, but you're pronouncing them together as a phrase. So, the phrase that we're going to link is give us an update. So, let's say this slowly, and I want you to repeat after me, and I'm gonna emphasize that consonant sound that gets moved over. Give us an update. Say it again. Give us an update.

Now, let's say the question. Repeat after me. Can you give us an update? Can you give us an update? Here's the next one. I'm going to take it away. So, I'm going to reduce going to to gonna take it away. That is the phrase that I'm going to link. And that final T in it, I'm gonna I'm gonna pronounce it as a flap T. Take it away. Repeat after me. Take it away. Take it away.

Now, let's say the sentence. I'm going to take it away. And you can even hear that melody. I'm going to take it away. One more time just for good measure. I'm gonna take it away. Let's try this one. I just got out of the meeting. The phrase that I'm going to link got out of. You hear those flap T's? There are two of them. And then I'm going to link them over with that vowel sound. Got out of. Got out of. I really want you to think about this phrase because we use this quite often. And I think if you're not really familiar with linking, this is a good starting point because we will use this phrase in a variety of contexts.

Get out of, got out of, I get out of bed, you get out of the car, you can get out of trouble. So quite often you can use this phrase and just practice this and say it with a variety of sentences. So let's let's say our sentence right here. I just got out of the meeting. One more time. I just got out of the meeting. Some other common phrases that I want to highlight. And if and will get reduced to N. And then we can link it. And if. But I. But that T I'm going to pronounce it as a flap T. And then when I link it, it's going to sound like but I. And if.

But I. One thing I would encourage you to do is just listen to the way that native speakers are talking and then try to say things in the same way. And I'm going to talk about that in just a little bit. But really try to let your ears do all the work. Don't think about the individual words, but think more about the sounds. I'll make things easier for your mouth. Something else I want you to do is focus on common sound changes. And really I'm talking about assimilation. So sounds may change when two words meet. And assimilation occurs when two sounds really sound more like each other because they're spoken consecutively. And there are some common phrases specifically when asking questions. And you can use assimilation.

Here's another question. Don't you want to get out of the pool? So, don't you? You hear me say don't you? I'm going to reduce want to to wanna. And then there's our linked phrase, get out of. And once again, you can hear that melody. Don't you want to get out of the pool? So, I want you to repeat after me. Don't you want to get out of the pool? One more time. Don't you want to get out of the pool?

Another common sound change is with the D and Y. So when these two sounds assimilate, you get more of a J sound. Think about the phrase did you? When I pronounce this, I'm going to say did you. You can hear that slight J sound. Did you? So we have our question. What did you eat for breakfast? Once again, for let's let's reduce it to for. So repeat after me. What did you eat for breakfast? What did you eat for breakfast? And again, I hope you can hear that stress timing. Here's another question. Where did you go last night? Where did you go last night? So, when it comes to common sound changes, this is a great place to start.

And notice that these were all questions. And quite often you're at talking to somebody and you're asking them a question. Consider that last phrase, did you? So instead of pronouncing the individual words, you could say, "What did you? Where did you? Why did you? How did you?" Now, it's going to allow you to ask a question just more easily and naturally. But that doesn't mean assimilation is always going to occur. You may hear somebody say, "What did you?" But if you want to connect them and and really just move right through the question, what did you, where did you, why did you, how did you, this is a great way to practice.

Something else I want you to work on and practice is American intonation. And really, this is more about tone and the way that you're expressing your thoughts, opinions, and ideas. It's it's just more natural. So, in its simplest terms, let's just talk about statements and yes no questions. So statements really going to have a falling intonation at the end and yes no questions you're going to have a rising intonation. And I think a great way to practice this right now is by changing some statements to questions. So let's have a look at our first one. He's looking for a job. Now this is a statement. So you have that falling intonation at the end. He's looking for a job. I want you to repeat after me.

He's looking for a job. Now, if I change this statement to a question, which is really a yes no question, now I'm going to have a rising intonation at the end. He's looking for a job. Can you hear that? He's looking for a job. I want you to give it a try. He's looking for a job. One more time. He's looking for a job. Here's our next sentence as a statement. Repeat after me. She's 25 years old. She's 25 years old. And now as a question, she's 25 years old. She's 25 years old. And then one more as a statement. Repeat after me. They live in this building. They live in this building.

Now, as a question with a rising intonation, they live in this building. They live in this building. Now, I know when you heard me say these sentences, you could really tell a difference between falling and rising intonation, but I really hope that as you were saying them, you could also feel that difference between rising and falling intonation. I also want you to make your speech more dynamic if possible. Now, now this can be a little more challenging and may even get you outside your comfort zone, but I'm talking about using pauses, emphasis, changing the speed of your speech to make it more dynamic and captivating for the listener. And not all native speakers are able to do this, especially in a pressure situation like you're giving a presentation. But more casually, I think a lot of people are able to do this and really expressing emotions and you can tell if somebody's happy, sad, or frustrated because they're using dynamic speech. And sometimes I will hear second language speakers using a more monotone voice. So this is an ad for Goldfish Crackers, but it's an ad that would play on the radio. And because of that, there's no visual. So, the delivery really matters. And you don't want to say this in just a monotone voice. Keeping an eye on the trans fat in your family's diet. Goldfish crackers have zero grams per serving. The snack that smiles back. Okay, you're you're probably falling asleep right now. It's not very dynamic, but you I want to practice this and say it in a more dynamic way, and I want you to try to say it with me, but you can just listen to the way I'm going to say it right now. Keeping an eye on the trans fat in your family's diet.

Goldfish crackers have zero grams per serving. The snack that smiles back, right? That that sounds a little more lively, more dynamic. So, let's practice this. I would like you to shadow and say it with me in a dynamic way. Are you ready? Keeping an eye on the trans fat in your family's diet. Goldfish crackers have zero grams per serving. The snack that smiles back. All right, good. I hope I hope you felt comfortable doing that. Like I said, maybe it gets you outside of your comfort zone, but developing a more dynamic way of speaking is, I think, incredibly important, especially when you want to convey all of these different emotions. Now, if you really want to practice the American accent, then you need to mimic native speakers.

yeah, feel free to use my video lessons if you want. If you enjoyed this lesson and you learned something new about the American accent, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time. So long.

CORRECTING GRAMMAR MISTAKES (Lesson Notes Included)

Hello and welcome to today's lesson. This time I have a grammar lesson for you in which well many of you have participated in this lesson. So what we're going to be talking about is this right here. We're going to be talking about correcting grammar mistakes. And I there's a variety of grammar that we're going to be going over and discussing in this lesson, but in general, I think all of this will help give you a better understanding as to how the language is structured as well as how it's used. And really, when you're able to improve your knowledge in grammar, it really helps out your writing skills. because I know I hear from many of you out there, you would like to practice and improve your writing, which is in part what this was all about because I asked some of you, many of you to write me a sentence. And I do want to thank uh everyone out there who participated. So, I had made a post on our community page asking for some sentences that I would then go through and and correct in this lesson. I did not get to all of them. So, a couple of days ago, I just I compiled I think like 13 or 14 of them. Um, but I do want to thank everybody who uh wrote a sentence and um messaged me on this thread. I really do appreciate it. And we're going to just try and go through just go through the ones that I have. If I did not get to you, I apologize. And depending if you like this lesson, uh, I'll do more like this in the future and I will correct some of your mistakes.

And you can let me know if you like these types of lessons by hitting that like button. Kind of just gives me a a sense of where things are at and what everybody out there is looking for. So, I will I'll give some shoutouts toward the end. I'm really just going to go through um the sentences that I have and then at the end uh I may give a few shoutouts. But let's start with this right here. So what I've done is I've I've up here you can see I screenshot the the question uh or the inquiry and then I've made my notes down here and I'll talk to you a little bit about what's going on. So um this person John had mentioned difficulty using um verbs like open and gave an example like the door was open or the door was opened. So really this is a difference between passive and active.

So right there the door was opened. The subject which is the door in this case a passive sentence is receiving the action. So then we're going to use the verb to be and then follow it with the past participle. Now in this sentence again you would say the door was opened by someone. We can omit that information. You don't need it or again just uh use it like that. And the one thing I would say about this especially in this context when talking about well somebody opening a door overwhelmingly I think people will use active sentences. There are certain times in which it's appropriate to use a passive sentence, but for the most part, when you're writing a story or you're writing something, you're likely to use a lot more active sentences. So, even in this case, like I said, in this context, typically, you would want to know who is doing the action. And I could say, "John opened the door." So, we have the subject, the verb open, uh, and then the door receiving the action in this case, uh, the object. So that is the active sentence and just a difference between active and passive. The next one that I have for you uh is this one. This was uh interesting and this is a little tricky and I will I I am going to be sharing part of my opinion throughout this lesson. So the question was like, well, which sentence um would be better? Uh, I accompanied my mother to the hospital as a chaperone or I accompanied my mother as a chaperone to the hospital. So I highlighted two different parts of this sentence. So to the hospital, that is a prepositional phrase. As a chaperone, we have that as an adverb phrase talking about well how. And in this case, because with those adverbs, they're well, you can move them around in sentences. They're very useful. You could even put this at the beginning and I could say as a chaperone, I accompanied my mother to the hospital.

Or in this case, um, it was asked like, I accompanied my mother as a chaperone and then to the hospital and using the prepositional phrase at the end. So, grammatically all of them are correct. And this is where I feel like my opinion comes into play because I wrote the sentence like this. And that is how I think that people would overwhelmingly use this. They would use the prepositional phrase first and talk about well where um where were were you going and then follow it with that adverb phrase. So, I accompanied my mother to the hospital as a chaperone. And the reason why I specifically move this one to the end is that phrase as a chapron because when you have those phrases and I gave another example down here like oh I went with him to the dance as a friend when people use that phrase as a friend as a chapron wrong. Instead, try to think of it as like acceptable and unacceptable. And there's just that spectrum in between because there are things that I feel like, well, it would be more acceptable in the United States in American English, but probably would not be viewed as acceptable in British English. British English. Sorry, my pronunciation's off today. But again, it helps, I think, people better understand grammar and kind of leave it a little more open. I think too often people want to think of it as right and wrong. So instead I would say think of it as acceptable or unacceptable. Um and this is another example of that. So Ali asked like me and my friend uh is this sentence correct? So I had changed it around. So my friend and I okay we're talking about the subject of the sentence. So you're going to use a subject pronoun I and not me. My friend and I are working together. This was just uh an example. And then the next sentence, they invited my friend and me. We're now using it as an object. So, you're going to use an object pronoun to the party. So, it really just depends on whether we're talking about a subject pronoun or an object pronoun. Subject pronoun, use I. Object pronoun, use me. In just colloquial English, you may hear somebody in spoken English say like, oh, like, you know, you and me, uh, we need to have a talk. And they may phrase it like that, you and me. But definitely, I would not recommend doing it in writing. Again, f like writing is more formal. So you want in that case to try to follow um the rules that have been established especially when it comes like I said the the more accepted forms. And the other thing I'd want to point out um that some people have asked me when it comes to like listing groups of people and I put that down below as little like uh like a footnote. When you're listing people that includes yourself it's considered polite. In this case, I said more accepted to list yourself last. So that is why I again different people have very strong opinions about this. If you put yourself first or in the middle technically yes it would be grammatically fine but again it's more accepted to list yourself last. My friend and I or they know they invited my friend and me to the party. So, that's something to keep in mind when you're listing people because I know that's something that it it's pretty common when you're writing and you're talking about groups. Then, let's see.

We're going making good time. All right. So, this is another one um giving you uh like going to give you a little bit of my opinion. So, the sentence that um Rosa asked about uh was I recommended that Susie do her homework herself or I recommended Susie to do her homework herself. So, I made that little notation up there, McMillan dictionary, which is where I got some of this information. Um especially like this part. So, they talk about phrases that people used with recommend or recommended. So you would recommend that someone do something or you could say someone is recommended to do something. So in this case, I chose the sentence here that I would this is what I would encourage somebody to write. I recommend that Suzy do her homework by herself. I put that in uh parentheses because in this case it is optional. You do not have to include it.

Uh, it's really up to you. The other thing that I wanted to point out, um, is that this is an example of the subjunctive. Some of you may be looking at this sentence and thinking, well, wait, Suzy, why not Susie does? But in this case, with verbs like recommend, um, suggests, the subjunctive mood, you're you're not going to follow just what that typical grammar rule that you would think when it comes to subjectverb conjugation. So, you would say Suzy do I recommend that Suzie do her homework by herself. Now, moving down here, um, you could say and Suzy is recommended to do her homework by herself. Grammatically, it's correct. But I was saying that in this context, I feel that it's awkward when you're using this form right here, like someone is re like is recommended to do something. I I feel like uh I said it's impersonal because in this context,

I would think of a teacher writing to maybe a parent or somebody, a guardian saying, "Look, I recommend Susie do her homework by herself." Okay. It's more personal writing it that way. This I said it's more impersonal because you're again you're not listing well like who's doing the the action like who's making the recommendation. So I feel like you would find this form in a context that somebody's kind of like giving you instructions like as a command. So let me this is an example that you could think about. Um, if you go to a restaurant and then you go into the bathroom, you might see like a sign that says employees are recommended to wash their hands. Something like that.

So, we don't really need to say who's recommending it. We know it's the restaurant. It's society in general that yes, we go used to we go to the restroom, we go to the toilet, we should wash our hands. But you might see a sign like that in which case they would use this form. And that's why I said it's like a little more impersonal um and kind of just like making that recommendation more as like okay this is something you should probably do. So in this context talking about like homework or like hey I recommend that you do this I I would follow this one to go back to the other example. Um there's a lot to say about this one. I would also say that I think it is accepted to say I recommend Susie to do her homework herself. Now, that may be more accepted um in British English. Uh I would still encourage people to use this sentence right here. To give you another point of reference, uh previously I did a lesson on causative verbs and you have the verb help. So, you could help someone do something, but it's also okay to help someone to do something. For the most part, it's just common to use it without to because something else to think about when it comes to writing is that, and I tell this to many learners, is that it's good to be you want to be concise. You want to be short and clear. You don't want to use too many words, especially if you don't have to. So, in that example, if you don't need to use the word to, then let's just take it out. And I would say the same goes for this. Um, it's you don't need it. Let's just use this sentence right here. I recommend that Susie do her homework by herself. All right. So, this is my recommendation, this sentence. Then, um, we have this one uh question. Cortez asking about today is a holiday. Today is holidays. So this really has to do with whether it's a singular subject or a plural subject. And I tried to um provide some examples here. So you would say today is a holiday. You have a singular subject which is today and then that singular noun a holiday. Now if I were to change this so that the it's a plural subject and I'm talking about Thanksgiving and Christmas. Thanksgiving and Christmas plural subject are holidays. Okay, we'll use that plural noun in this case. And of course, you can see that the verb is going to change as well. You have to conjugate um the the the subject and the verb just have to agree. Today is Thanksgiving and Christmas are. All right, then let's keep moving.

This one. Okay, this is um this was an interesting one. Uh Raj asks, I had started uh playing cricket at the age of five or six or I started playing cricket when I was five or six. So there's a couple of things that I wanted to comment on which I thought was a little um to help clear things up a little. And again, I I gave that point of reference. Some of this information I took from the British Council uh especially those uh the information in red. So uh this first one I just changed this um to the past uh well I started playing cricket when I was around five or six.

So in this case like we're using the past tense to talk about something that happened once in the past. Okay, it happened like this is you know it happened at that point in time. I started playing kind of when I was around five or six. The reason why I added that adverb in there around or about because when you're saying five or six, you're not being specific. So, that was a part of the sentence that was a little awkward. So, I included those adverbs in there to to clear things up a bit. I started playing cricket uh when I was around five or six. This is a sentence that um yeah that you would say to someone if you're just having a conversation.

past perfect. So I I wrote down here that you use the past perfect which is had plus the past participle to talk about a time up to a certain point in the past and that point in the past that is important. Um so in this case you could say I had started playing cricket by the age of five. So when you're saying by the age of five that is my point in time now I I took out that whole five or six and it's like you're saying that this happened all right probably like just before you turned five. So right when you turn five by the age of five you had started playing cricket. So again, you're going to use the past perfect when you're talking about like two points in the past. All right? And one thing happened before this point. So in this case, you you had started playing cricket by the age of five. Okay? So uh again, there's different ways that you can phrase these sentences, but it's important to know like well well why like what is exactly what are you saying um when you're using one verb tense over the other? So this was another um a question that I think a lot of people find a little confusing. So um Vatas like I'm confused about using the ing or the infinitive after like. So the verb like now like is a very common verb. I think it's very useful and hopefully it makes it uh a little easier if you to know that you can use either one. You can say I like playing soccer and I'm following it with the jarn that ing playing or I like to play soccer and then in that case you're following it with the infinitive to play. Now again my personal preference I don't know why I I think I tend to use the jarn more often than I use the infinitive. But both forms are correct. They are both accepted I think across all English varieties. And the other thing that I included down here because there are certain verbs that you want to follow with the jiren. There are certain verbs that you want to follow with the infinitive. And there are also certain verbs like these right here that you can follow it with the garand or the infinitive. So like begin, can't bear, can't stand, continue, hate, like, love, prefer, propose or start. So sometimes the verb um you can follow it with a gerand or infinitive and it may change the meaning. I think with these down here, the meaning is similar and it's not really going to change like uh like like our example right here. I like playing soccer. I like to play soccer.

Both of them uh are okay. The next uh the next one that I have is I I mentioned again about it's important to know the the verb tense that you're using. Sometimes they can be different, but sometimes they they're rather interchangeable and there might just be like a slight nuance um that makes them a little difference different uh as in this example. So Nora asked about the difference between saying like I have lived um somewhere for three years or I have been living somewhere for three years. So I just completed the sentence and said I have lived in Spain for 3 years. Okay, this sentence is in the present perfect talking about something that started in the past um and it has continued to the present or I have been living in Spain for 3 years. again started in the past continued to the present. So I I mentioned that down here that both forms indicate the same thing. The one slight difference and just to add a finer point to this um for for the most part you could use either one and they mean the same thing. But one thing I would say is that if you're using the present perfect, it makes me think that okay, well perhaps this person is going to keep stay there and continue to live there or perhaps they're they're going to go somewhere else. If you're using the present perfect continuous, then I think it's more likely that you're going to stay. So, if I were to give a little more context um with each one, if I said, "Oh, I've lived in Spain for three years, but now I think it's time to to move on." Okay. So, in that case, I'm suggesting that okay, I'm probably going to leave. And in that case, I think it's um you know, it's more appropriate to use the present perfect. or if I were to indicate that I'm not leaving, like, oh, I've been living in Spain for 3 years and I don't think I'm ever going to leave. So again, now I'm telling you that I'm going to stay. And in that case, I think the the present perfect continuous would get my vote as to which one to use. So that's a slight slight difference between these two, but really they both indicate the same thing. Something started in the past, it's continued up until the present. Uh then we have okay a couple of things with this sentence. Um Shenzhen was asking like I used to go for a jogging in the morning and I guess like that was the next part of the sentence. Did you did you used to jog? And the real the key here is talking about used to and I told you down here like used to refers to something in the past that is no longer true. So in this case there was a slight little um uh mistake. I used to go for a jog in the morning. So in this case you want to use the noun a jog for a jog in the morning. If you want to use that garand in that case you would just say I used to go jogging in the morning. Um, so again, you could word the sentence either way, but if you want to keep for a you'd want to follow it with just the noun jog. And then the next part, that question, did you used to jog? So, we're using used to without the ed. And this is really the only exception because of the meaning of this verb that you're you're talking about something um in the past that is no longer true.

overwhelmingly you're going to use it as an ed verb like I used to do this or I used to do that. But when you're asking a question, all right, you have that did that is going to take the past tense which means that you're going to then use the base verb. Did you used to jog? And you do not need that ed in this case. Um, so I think maybe that was part the second part to that question that they were asking about.

Let's look at the next one. Um, I took some of this information from the thesaurus.com. Um, a lot of useful a lot of useful stuff online. Uh, but they asked, uh, my opinion is different than yours. So, my opinion is different from yours. This is using from is more accepted. This is the more accepted form. Um, and especially when we're talking about writing, that is certainly what I would recommend. And I included this little note that says in formal writing, different from is generally preferred over different than. This preference has to do in part with the historical usage of the word than. So I would I would suggest that you use from.

However, um it is true that I think in places like the United States in spoken English, you could hear people say, "Hey, you know, my opinion is different than yours or my opinion is different than his or different than hers." So, in spoken English, I think it is something that you will hear, but again, um when talking about grammar, I it works both ways. It's useful for obviously both speaking and writing, but I think it is helpful to make a distinction between the two, especially in a case like this that if you're writing, I would say, you know, use from when you're having a conversation, I'm a pretty casual person, uh, you know, somebody says different than, I'm not really thinking about it. Uh, I think it's fine. The next one is this sentence right here. And again, this one I think requires a little more explanation, a little more context. So the sentence is, I've got the money.

Thank you. I've never been paid so quickly as this time. So the first thing that stood out to me um when reading this sentence, and perhaps you too, is as this time. So I I know what you mean, what you're trying to say. But in this case, if you're talking about like, you know, comparing to the past, I you could just say before, like I've never been paid so quickly before. In this case, you're basically referring to all the other times in the past that this has happened. And the reason why I put um parentheses around it is because honestly, you really you don't even have to use that if you don't want to. I think that might give the sentence a little more emphasis that wow, I've never been paid so quickly before. But the fact that you're using the the have never to talk about this, well, that tells us just that alone, I have never been paid so quickly. That alone tells us that this has not happened at any time in the past. So before I would say is optional. you can use it or you don't have to use it. Now, to kind of move back up to the first part of the sentence, uh I took out the present perfect there um and just use the past simple. I got pay I got the money. Thank you. And the reason that I did this is because well, the fact that somebody's saying thank you, it makes me think that this is a context in which you're having a conversation with someone else.

You're talking to somebody, they asked you a question, and then you're giving them an answer. So, if that is the situation, well, then this would be the present perfect. If somebody is asking like, hey, uh, you know, do you have the money now? Is it with you? Is it in your pocket? And then you say, yes, I've got the money. All right, I've got the money. I have it on me right now. But because someone's saying thank you, I don't really think that's the context or the situation. Instead, I would infer that somebody is asking like, did you receive the money? Did you get paid? Did you receive the money in the past? It would have happened yes at one point in the past. And that's why I would say it's more appropriate to use the past simple and just say, I got the money.

Thank you. and then follow that with just that, you know, commentary, that extra information saying, "Well, wow, I've never been paid so quickly." And just letting the other person know that before, well, it's never it's never happened. Uh, I got the money. Thank you. I've never been paid so quickly. So hopefully that makes a little uh that makes sense as to how well I was interpreting this situation and the context and why I chose one verb tense over the other. Then we have this right here. Uh a couple of things going on. The sentence from MG uh says, "If I had been if I had been you, I would have um if I had been you, I would have liked to know if he had done it or not." Okay, so they were trying to add that information talking about look, I want to talk about something in the past. It pertains to the past. The first thing if I'm going to be a stickler for grammar and a stickler would be like uh it's an informal word saying somebody who's just really being strict for the rules. remember to capitalize um those pronouns. I it's it's a proper noun. Just remember when you're writing uh make sure you capitalize it. The the next thing I did I don't you know the the phrasing if I had been you that would be um you're using the third conditional. You're trying to use a condition in the third conditional but in this in this context you don't really use it. It sounds awkward. I would use the second conditional which is again it's a hypothetical situation. You're saying and you would say if I were you. If I were you. And that's a very common phrasing. If people are having a conversation and you want to give advice, you want to talk to the other person, you would say, "Oh, if I were you." Um, so because of that, we're going to end up having a mixed conditional. and I made that note there. So, you're going to use the the hypothetical condition, which is the second, if I were you, and then follow that with that imaginary result in the third condition, which is would have plus uh the past participle. I would have liked to know if he had done it or not. And then, yeah, that's the way the sentence would be. If I were you, I would have liked to know if he had done it or not. And sometimes I know people might be thinking um if you're thinking about this like I would have liked to have known and then you're adding that have known in there. In this case, I think it would make the sentence really awkward. Um having all of those have have have and and even now I tried to simplify it down here. I I guess in this case I'm not uh really a big fan of using the word like. Uh and I changed it down here to the microphone's blocking it. Sorry. Right down here. To something that I think would be perhaps more commonly used or commonly said uh if I were you, I would have wanted to know if he had done it or not. And use the verb want instead of like. I think it just, you know, clean cleans things up a little bit. It's a little more concise. And I also think again in my opinion I think this is uh how people would more commonly state this. Um but just keep in mind it's going to be a mixed conditional. You have that hypothetical condition the second conditional with the imaginary result which is the third conditional. And then there's this one. I thought this was just an interesting question. um more of a a religious one saying like why uh say like who who art in heaven. So this would become this would come from the Bible and the the sentence would be like our God who art in heaven.

And the person was asking um Sama was asking whether or not like well why who is like uh a singular pronoun why not conjugate it with arts does like and say arts. The first thing I would say is that this is this is archaic English. All right. You would find it in scriptures, in books like the Bible. So, I don't even know if I would try to think about, you know, subjectverb agreement and conjugating verbs when you're talking about that archaic language. But the one thing I would like to point out if you're talking about who who is singular, um, but art is actually used with singular subjects. And to point to this reference right here, uh, think of thou. Thou is also old language. All right? You're not going to you're not going to hear it nowadays, and I don't think it's really something that you you have to learn.

Um, but you might hear something, especially in like a Shakespeare play, like it it gives it gives the example down there, thou art fair or Romeo, Romeo, where art thou? Something like that. and they're using thou um as like you as a singular subject of the verb, but also you're going to use it with art. So like you singular, you're you're talking to somebody, somebody is present.

Um but art ends up being a singular verb. So hopefully that explanation makes sense, but I wouldn't stress out too much over it again, especially when we're talking about older, more archaic uh forms of English. So, the other thing I want to tell you guys, if you want um to get the lesson notes, these lesson notes, uh I will leave a link down in the description and you can check that out if you're already part of our community, email community.

I'll send those out to you already and put them up for our members, patrons, and yeah, just try to trying to share as much information as possible. So now I do I like I said I kind of went through this um and didn't have as much conversation or engagement with the chat. I apologize for that. But I do want to thank you guys for joining me. I hope this makes sense. If you enjoyed the lesson um you know let me know. Hit that like button and in the future I think this would be uh something this is good to continue. Um, and it really it it keeps me on my toes because there's a fair bit of research that goes into some of this, especially when trying to explain like, well, you know, why would I use this over the other? Um, but, uh, again, thank you. It's good to see you, Vicki and Gustaf. Thanks for being here.

Uh, Lai, always good to see you. Tayo, um, Angela, Araf, Alvaldo, uh, John. Um, let's see. Yak Yakbin, uh, Edvaldo Christian. All right. Maybe that's all right. I haven't seen you in a while. Uh, Elsa and Sores, thank you guys so much. Um, Eloa. So, next time hopefully I'll I can maybe I'll do a quiz lesson. Um, and that way everybody can participate in this type of lesson. I don't think it was as um uh you know, it wouldn't have worked the same way to try and get everybody to throw sentences down there and try to correct them. So, I just wanted to go through this, but help uh also make you a part of it by asking you for those sentences. And again, thank you guys for writing some of those sentences um for everybody to look at because I think often a lot of you know a lot of times we have the same question when it comes to grammar, vocabulary and so many pronunciation and so many other things.

CORRECT YOUR GRAMMAR MISTAKES (Lesson Notes Included)

Hello and welcome to today's lesson. We're going to be talking about correcting your mistakes. And what I've done is a couple of weeks ago I asked the community for some sentences. You all responded and we're going to go through them today and correct some of those mistakes. And of course I want you to participate in the lesson. So with some of these I am going to ask you for well your opinion. What do you think? How would you correct some of these sentences? So, let's look at the first one. This is uh well, the sentence is this is a highly flammable or flammable material. That was really the question. Should we use flammable or flammable? Please be careful. What I've done is I've added a third one down there right here. This is highly nonflammable material.

So, one of these sentences has a different meaning than the other two. And I'm guessing that you probably know that the one that I've added is the sentence that's different. And I wanted to add this just so you know and there's no confusion at all. So, let's look at the meaning of these sentences. So, both flammable and flammable have the same meaning, you're referring to something that catches fire and burns easily. If you want to say that it does not catch fire and burn easily, then you're going to use that prefix non and you're saying something is nonflammable. It's nonflammable material. Now, the question then becomes, well, which one should I use? Really, you could use either one. However, when I go through these lessons or I'm talking in my SpeakUp course, I really try to provide a little nuance and let people know, well, I think this is probably the more common word or phrase that you could use. So, there's a great resource out there, which is what I wanted to share with you. It's called Google Engram Viewer. And what it does is on a graph you can put in words or phrases and then it graphs out which how the frequency that these words are used. Now this is taken from written English talking about blog post academic text like just written English and it plots it on that graph. So in this case, you can see that flammable used to be a lot more common, but over the years, flammable has become a little more commonly used. So even though you could use either one, it's perfectly okay. I would always tell people, well, maybe just go with the one that's more often used. In this case, flammable. This is highly flammable material, but it is not incorrect to say flammable. All right, the next one. I hope all of that makes sense. The next sentence, I have done my workshop for improving my consulting skills. So, I've corrected the first mistake right right at the beginning like that my I'm going to change it to uh and the reason for that is because in this context I imagine that it's not it's not my workshop that I'm running this workshop. I get the feeling that in the sentence they were trying to say they were participating in a workshop. So I changed that pronoun my to a. It's a workshop. And the next part I want you to tell me what you think. How would you change this? Instead of for improving what do you think? I have done a workshop my consulting skills. And there again are a couple of different ways that you could rewrite this sentence depending on what you want to say. But whatever you think, let me know. Let me know. Write your answers in the comments, in the chats. It's interactive English. It's all about participating in these lessons. Now, [snorts] one thing I'll say is when we're talking about a workshop, you may follow it with different prepositions.

And let me show you right here. Um workshop. [sighs] Okay. So if you do a workshop for typically you're going to follow that with someone for a person like I recently did a workshop for new teachers and that is who the workshop is for. [clears throat] Excuse me. uh if you do a workshop on something then that really is talking about well what is the workshop about what's the content I recently did a workshop on web design so the thing that you could put in there the thing that changes this I think is my my consulting skills what would you do I have done a workshop my consulting skills many put uh to improve that works That works. Excellent. Uh, great job, Lai. Um, English and Satav. Yes, you I think you you got it to cool. Perfect. I had actually written again in order to to put that in there. Like I said, there's nothing wrong with saying I've done a workshop to improve my consulting skills. That's perfectly fine. So again, there are there's more than one way to write these sentences and capture that idea. In order to it's the same thing in this case you use that phrase in order to do something you're it expresses the purpose of something and that is what I think this person was trying to express the purpose of this workshop. Great job. Excellent job everyone. Then we have this one uh from uh a a member a beloved member Raphaela. Nice. Excellent. Actually, I've always had a hard time with causative verbs.

Every time uh I've to use them, I roll the dice. Once again, I've gone ahead and just made some minor corrections with some of the punctuation there because in this case, you you don't really need quotation marks around causitive verbs. You can just say, "I've had a hard time with causitive verbs." And the other thing that instead of using a colon, I you'll see on the next slide, but I'm just going to use a full stop or a period. Now, a colon typically is used when you want to emphasize something or maybe you're you're creating a list. It's not generally in writing. It's not something that you're going to see all the time if you're reading something, but also probably use as well. So I think we could just keep it simple, put a full stop in there. In that case, you know that every is going to have a capital E. But what about IV? What do you think? Every time I've to use them, I roll the dice. So, the thing that I wanted to point out with this is when we're talking about contractions, there are times when you can use contractions, which are very common in spoken English, and other times when you cannot.

Generally speaking, I know some people would say, "Look, writing, it's a more formal way of communication. Try to avoid contractions." And that's fair. I end up using them. It just really depends. If I'm writing something, even a message to all of you, I would use contractions because I feel like it's a little more casual. There's not really a need to be very formal. But, excellent. You guys got it. Perfect. Um, uh, Julia, Fabio, nice. So, we we need to Well, just right. I have to and we're not going to contract that. And I've given you the well I guess the the rule that you can follow down below that you can contract have has had when they are an auxiliary verb. So in this case think about the present tense or the perfect tense I'm sorry where it's just an it's a helping verb. So instead of I have gone I've gone. We have bought we've bought. she had uh been she or uh she'd been. So there are different things. If I'm using it as the main verb, like if I say I have a pen and I'm talking about possession, in that case, you're not going to contract it when it's the main verb. But I really appreciate you sharing a sentence with us. Excellent. Uh the next one. Okay. So, there are a few things that I wanted to point out with this. This is a this I think this is a good example. I must be in bed before 9:00 p.m. Okay. Grammatically, there's nothing wrong, but there are a couple things that I would maybe change or make I would suggest that you know consider these changes. So, let's not

let's not go in order. Let's start with before. instead of before, what other word could you use that in this context when let's say you're talking about well going to bed, what other word could you use instead of before? And I think in this situation uh in my opinion, I think it's uh a little more commonly used um than uh than the other. I realized I I think uh okay, it's fine. I'll correct it. I realized I think I made it quite a little typo, but uh I'll I'll I'll I'll let you know. So again, if you're thinking about a time, great job, Lai, Tayo, uh Hana, we're talking about by and the mistake that I made is that I didn't change it. So for example, uh I've I re I redid these slides and I've given you the meaning, but again, I kept before. So that is mistake. This one is I must be in bed by 9:00 p.m. So if we're talking about before, we're talking about in advance, right? sometime before this by I'd say is commonly used in this situation because it's like a deadline that it could be you know 1 minute before 2 minute before but you just want to be in bed by this time you're setting a deadline so in this situation I think it's more common to use by recently I rented a car and I was returning the car the place was going to close at 6:00 p.m. And I talked to the person about, hey, I'm going to bring it back a little late. And they told me just bring it before 6:00 p.m. And in that situation, I think it's perfectly fine. They don't want me showing up at the very, very end because they're getting ready to close. So they said, "Come before 6 p.m. But in this situation, you're talking about getting in bed by." Now, the other word that I highlighted is must. Instead of must, what else could you use? I think it's very common. Again, we're talking about an obligation. There are different modal verbs that you could use. I apologize. I have a little bit of a cough today, so that might not be the last time. Different modal verbs you could use when talking about an obligation, something you must do or something you to do. All right. So, the the phrase that I'm thinking of, it's a little more informal. I know some of you put like need to. I get you could use need to expressing that need. I think more commonly people are just going to say have to. And this one I actually did have by there. So, this is the the sentence that I would go with. I have to be in bed by 9:00 p.m. I have to be in bed by 9:00. It's more informal. The other thing I would say is typically if you're going to use must, like I must do something, one slight difference is that when you're using must, sometimes it's like you're making yourself do this. Oh, I must uh do this. I must buy this. I must do this. And it's like you're telling yourself. If you're using have to, it's like something else is making you do this. So for example, I have to be in bed by 9:00. Why? Because I have to get up early in the morning. So that thing is making me do this. The fact that I have to get up early is making me get up. Or if it's for work, it's making me do something. So you're you you may more often use must when it's something that you're making yourself do. But you're going to use have to when something or someone else is kind of encouraging you or pushing you or making you do something. And generally speaking, if you have a time when you have to be in bed, yeah, there's something else that's causing this, whether it's work or some other personal commitment. So, just something to keep in mind. But again, that original sentence, nothing wrong. Let's look at this one right here. And there was nothing grammatically incorrect. Learning English has always been a satisfying journey. But the bumpy learning experience sometimes stunts my growth. [gasps] I highlighted stunts or I bolded stunts because I want to change this word and I'll again I'll pass it off to you. What word could you use instead of stunts? And then I'll get into the difference as to why maybe why I bolded this word and said, "Okay, let's let's change it." So instead of using stunts, what are some other word?

What's another word or words that you could use? There may be others. There's just one in particular that that I chose. Got to get that water for that cough. [snorts] So, the word that I'm thinking of and I see some other good answers. Um, sometimes what there's still something I would say keep it simple. Keep it very simple. It's a very simple word that I think again you're talking about the bumping experience and somebody you know their skills and abilities are growing [clears throat] but what does it mean are you going to grow very fast maybe not in that case I would use the word nice vija slows [cough] excuse me So, [clears throat] language learning, yes, it's a bumpy experience. There are highs. Where is it? Ah, I made sure my hands in the frame. And there are lows.

In this case, you have that bumpy experience. It's not just a straight shot. There are periods that are possibly going to slow your growth. So, I I think another Yeah. Hinders your growth. That would be that would also work. something hinders um stops is it depends on the person. It could happen and it could completely stop. I feel like in this context uh probably what this person was trying to talk about was just that they are continuing to grow but just not as fast as maybe they would like to. And what I want to point out down here is when talking about like stunts like it is a verb to stunt. It means to prevent someone or something from reaching its full potential. And the reason why I said I would change this is because when it comes to learning a language, you you have that again difficult times and times when you're learning a lot, it's not really something that's going to stop you or prevent you from reaching your full potential. In that case, it's just going to slow you down. And to give you another example sentence with stunts, think of uh I don't know, just any sentence like smoking cigarettes at a young age may stunt your growth. So again, if you do something at a young age, maybe it's unhealthy, it's going to prevent your your you from reaching your full potential as you grow and it's going to stunt your growth. Now, that is a collocation. you will hear to stunt someone's growth or to stunt your growth. [cough and clears throat] So in this case again we're talking about just you know not going as fast but there are other words that you could use besides this. I just thought it would be a good idea to change the word stunts. [gasps] Excuse me. Let me get some more water.

So, for this one, we'll do a little at a time, and I've just underlined the things that I want to change. The weather is nasty because of the typhoon, and me and my son are kind of under the weather, which means the best day [cough and laughter] to veg out. Got to do something about this. So, let's just start with um I I think you can see with some of those underlines, the small ones, there are some punctuation things, but let me let's start with this. Me and my son. What What do you think? What would you change that to? As well as kind of. What? Let's start with those two. Me and my son are kind of under the weather.

And just so you know, under the weather is an idiom that just means that you are sick. Not severely sick, but you're sick. [cough] [clears throat] Again, it's actually sadly it's actually gotten better in the last couple of days. Great job, uh, Manuel Fabio. So, the first thing instead of me and my son, this is going to be um a compound sentence because I told you that one that first little red line, it's missing a comma. So, this is a compound sentence. Compound sentence. You're going to have a subject and a verb. So, as a subject, you're going to say, "My son and I." My son and I. And the reason why [cough] [clears throat] you're going to say that instead of I and my son is that when you're writing grammatically they're both the same.

It's okay. But it is preferred to put yourself last. So if you're listing a group of people, my friend, my father and I, my cat, my dog, my whatever, and I, you're going to put yourself at the end. That is what's preferred in writing. So my son and I, and you could say kind of. Again, what I would say is that when it comes to writing, just avoid some of these reductions. I know what you mean. If you're writing a text message, sure, kind of. it's fine. But as you know, if you're if this is your second language and you're writing something, I would probably just avoid reductions all the at least writing the reduction kind of or I would I would avoid going to want to have to all of those reductions.

means again that comma, I'll just go ahead and tell you we're going to get rid of it. So, I want to change the best and then something else with that last word, which we'll get into. So, we're talking about this typhoon and my son and I are a little under the weather. So, what's the result? Which means we still need uh a subject. And what I would say is in this context, I don't know if it's like the best like the best of all others. I had switched this around to just say like it's a great day to veg out. The problem with the was the spelling. If you're talking about vegging out, it's just an informal phrase which means to relax or take it easy. So, instead of like the best day, um I I would go with something a little more like it's a great day or it's a good day to veg out instead of using that superlative. Um or you could say, "Yes, Sylvia, it's like the the perfect day to to veg out in that case." But instead of using a superlative, I think it's a little too strong in saying like this day when there's a typhoon and you're sick is the best of all others. Um, so again, there's different ways that you could reword that second part of the sentence. Let's look at another one. Keep rolling along. And I've done the same thing with this one. I've just underlined the things that I ended up changing. And we're just going to look at that first part together. So, let let's really just look at that first line. I put So, this I'll read the sentence. I put short-term goal settings in the next few years that distinguish between academic and formal in English sentences. So, let's just look at that first line. I put short-term goal settings in.

What would you change that to? And again, I changed this around just interpreting what I think this person was trying to say. So, somebody had written in there, okay, we're talking about shortterm goals. Yes. When when referring to goals, you wouldn't really say short goals or long goals, you're you need that period of time term shortterm goals, long-term goals. The other thing I would say when you're talking about short-term goals or long-term goals, what verb would you use when talking about those? And it's actually part of the sentence. I just moved it and just changed it to a verb. And I think that's what was a little confusing. Uh, excellent, Julia, Sylvia, English, and Saratov. Yes, we're talking about setting short-term goals. The other thing that I would say, and this again [sighs] there's no definite period. When I think of a short-term goal, I think of maybe I don't know couple of weeks, a month, two months, three months, maybe four months.

But that next part, we're talking about the next few years. So I just changed from shortterm. I'm just going to change this to long-term. And I'm also going to change that preposition into for. So I set a long-term goal for the next few years. The other thing I did was change goals to goal because it seems like in that that second part of the sentence really just talking about one thing. So I set a long-term goal for the next few years. Okay, that's that's the period of time. It's I think a few years is a long time. I don't know if I would consider that a short-term goal. That's just my opinion. The next part uh so I set short-term goals for the next few years.

What what would we do the goal instead of that? Because again I put that comma there. You could tell like okay we're going to change that to which. Okay, it's going to be that clause which and then we're going to need a verb. So, we're going to need to extend this sentence out. And the other thing that I would say, academic and formal are adjectives in this case. So, there needs to be a noun that follows. So, that's why I'm going to kind of shuffle around some of these words. I set a long-term goal for the next few years, which is to distinguish between academic and formal sentences in English. I believe that's maybe what this person was trying to say. But I think there are some things in here that are certainly relevant and I think uh could be very useful when talking about some of these collocations like you're setting long-term goals or you're setting short-term goals and again you would set a goal for a period of time for a few years for a couple of weeks for a few months. So I set a long-term goal for the next few years which is to distinguish between academic and formal sentences in English. Excellent. Then [sighs] I've done the same thing again. I've just uh given you the things that I would change and I'm going to put the question off to you. What do you think? So again, I've those small little lines right there. Those are punctuation. So I have an important exam next Tuesday. Full stop or period. Either one. So, I'll go ahead and tell you that because just generally, I'll read the sentence as is. I have an important exam next Tuesday. I'm kind of nervous, but I truly believe that everything is going to be will because I really did my best.

It's a long sentence. It's a run-on sentence. So, that's why I would put a period or full stop after Tuesday. So, I have an important exam on Tuesday. Full stop. I'm kind of There it is. that that kind of again. So, as I just said before, I would not recommend using these reductions when you're writing. And instead of you could say, "I'm kind of nervous." That's perfectly fine. I think it's a little more informal in that you may hear somebody say in spoken English. I think it's more common to use another phrase instead of kind of. What else could you say? What do you think there? And again, there's another I see I'm a bit nervous.

That works as well. What I had put to make sure I don't get ahead of myself. All right. Is I'm a little nervous, but I'm a bit nervous. I'm a little nervous. You could say somebody says I'm somewhat nervous. Sure. I don't know why I like to use a little when I just mentioned I changed the other kind of to a little under the weather in this I would say I'm a little nervous because this is going to be a compound sentence but I truly believe that instead of everything when you're talking about all individual things in this context you you're going to use that pronoun everything one word just referring to all the things together.

So, I truly believe that everything is going to be Oh gosh, I think uh I didn't move that line over. That red line should be under will. Instead of will, what would you change it to? And then that other part of the sentence again, how would you reward that part of the sentence? And I would ask you to keep in mind the verb tense. So, I I'm rather nervous. That works. I would say instead of everything's going to be well because in this situation, well is an adverb, you probably want to use um an adjective. How is everything going to be? And I think there are two common words when somebody says everything's going to be what what are some words?

What are a couple of words that people would use? I think you hear this in songs quite often when they talk about everything's going to be what. And that that's what I was trying to use. So, I'll tell you that instead of well, I think you could say everything's going to be okay or everything's going to be all right. There are probably other words that you could also use, but I think those are common ones that you would hear when somebody's sitting there telling you or maybe you're telling someone else like don't worry, everything's going to be okay or don't worry, everything's going to be all right. And there are many songs out there, everything is going to be all right that you could find. So everything's going to be all right because so this is where I again I was a little confused. We're talking about the future. I have an important exam next Tuesday. Okay. I'm a little nervous, but I truly believe everything's going to be all right. So, in this case, it said because I did my best. I I guess I was a little confused because now it's talking about the past. So, in this situation, I would still think that you are going to study for the exam. You're going to prepare for the exam between now and Tuesday. So in that case I would still keep it the future uh and say everything is going to be all right because I will do my best or I will try my best and just keep it in the future. But that was the part um that I was confused with uh at the end there as far as those verb tenses go. But I think you guys did a really great job correcting some of these sentences and going through providing your answers.

That's what it's all about. Just kind of getting that practice. If you enjoyed this lesson, uh, hit me, let me know. Hit that like button. I'll continue doing more. So, these are the ways that I interpreted what these people were trying to say and kind of what they were going to express. But, thank you so much uh for joining me. Gopal, excellent. I love seeing some members in here. Vicki Gustav, great to see you guys. Uh Lai, great to see you. Also, people from Speak Up. Sylvia Teao, thank you guys for being here. Uh Sylvia, I'll talk to you real soon. and Falco Julia Konchi just trying to get some last minute shoutouts in here. Manuel, thank you. Hope you guys uh have a wonderful, wonderful day and you will well I will be back before you know it with another lesson.

Can I say "I'M L VING IT"? | Stative verbs in the continuous tense? (Advanced Grammar)

i love this or i'm loving this are these sentences the same are they different is one of them even correct let's find out [Music] hey everyone my name is wes the channel is interactive english which is all about helping you improve your english skills and today i want to focus a little bit on grammar and really talk about how in my opinion the english language is even changing a little bit and well it has to do with those sentences that i showed you at the very beginning i love this and i'm loving this so really this is a difference between the present simple and the present continuous now grammar books are going to tell you that i'm loving this it's just wrong and one thing i'll say quickly about this is that even though you may hear people maybe they say this it's not something that you're really going to see in writing but if somebody were to write it probably they would drop that g add an apostrophe which would make it seem a little more informal but let's go back to why grammar books would say well this is wrong and the reason for that is because love is a stative verb and well you should use the present continuous to talk about a continuous action that's happening right now i'm doing laundry i'm sweeping the floor i am reading a book i'm taking a nap i am eating a banana and you know what i am loving this banana that doesn't sound right where have i heard that before [Music] thanks for the bad grammar lesson mcdonald's and and this has actually been their slogan for over a decade and i think this is the reason why they chose this is because it's bad grammar and it just it just catches people's attention but i think one could argue that over time it's become more and more accepted which is why i say this is an example as to how the english language may be changing a little bit especially in spoken english like i said before it's not really something that you're going to see in writing but let's talk about the grammar because in general you should not use stative verbs in the continuous tense and people may refer to stative verbs as non-action verbs and dynamic verbs as action verbs in this lesson i'm just going to be talking about these verbs as stative verbs because they describe a state which is a condition of something at a particular time so if i am happy then i am in a state of happiness that is my condition and i'm truthfully i'm always in a state of happiness when i'm making video lessons for you guys but let's talk about some of these verbs and do you see the butterfly i'm asking if you notice something using your eyes and and that is the meaning of c it's talking about a state and not an action so i could not use this in the present continuous if i wanted to use the present continuous i could ask you a question like are you watching the butterfly which means you are looking at something over a period of time i'm talking about an action so i can use the present continuous but i hope you're watching me and not the butterfly so let's just get it out of here now there are many different stative verbs and i'm showing them to you right here and i've put them into different categories i'm not going to talk to you about each of these verbs i just wanted to show them to you because again you should not use these stative verbs in the continuous tense but all right and i'm sure you were expecting that there was going to be a but and then i'm going to tell you something different and that is people will use some of these verbs in the continuous tense and they may do this for two reasons first people use some of these verbs in the continuous tense because the verb has more than one meaning and those meanings may be actions which would then make them dynamic so i realize this can be very confusing for english learners but let's go back to the verb c if we're talking about the meaning like it's your perception that you notice something with your eyes then it's a stative verb i can't use it in the continuous tense and i think quite often people would use the verb with this meaning but you could hear somebody ask a question like are you currently seeing anyone and i just asked you a question in the present continuous are you currently seeing anyone and the reason that it's correct is because c it has a different meaning in this case it means dating which is an action so i can use it in the continuous tense now not all of the stative verbs that i showed you have more than one meaning but many of them do when you have something you own it i have a book if you take a mouse to school all right it's not my book actually it's my little girl's book she owns it but right now i have it i possess this book and in that case i'm talking about a state not an action i can't say i'm having this book that just sounds really awkward but have it it actually has different meanings you could use have to talk about something you experience i'm having a bad day or you could use is a good example as to how english is starting to change a little bit especially in spoken english because people are breaking the rules they're using these stated verbs in the continuous tense and you you could say that over time it's becoming more and more accepted but just just know that this is a very informal use of the language some may consider it slang others consider it idioms but there there's really two verbs that come to mind when when talking about people breaking these rules like is one of those verbs little women you liking it huh oh yeah amy just burned joe's manuscript how you liking retirement it's fine just all the rebels they put up i'm not liking it and i hope you are liking this video lesson and what i'm really asking you to do is just go ahead and hit the like button of course love is another stative verb that people may use in the continuous tense when speaking i've already given you that example with the mcdonald's commercial but but here are some more examples i am loving this called the holy spirit or the passion of the christ i'm loving these people i am loving our life i'm in a really dark space people are loving our list of springfield's top 99 afghan restaurants i hired the guy the one time and you know what you were just loving all the work i was doing just remember that this is very informal and really it's it's only used in spoken english i'm not saying that you need to go out and start breaking these rules and using stated verbs in the continuous tense i just want you to be aware of it because i think it can be useful for your comprehension and if you are loving this video lesson remember hit that like button let me know down in the comments just write i'm loving this all right thank you guys

so much for watching and i will see you next time

LESSON 247 OF 749

Can You Say These Words Right? Identical Spelling, Different Sounds!

Can you correctly pronounce these five words right here? Now, you'll notice that all of these words end with o u g h and you would think that they probably have the same pronunciation, but that is not the case and this is why English can be a bit crazy. So, let's start with dough. That o u g h has an o sound. Dough referring to that mixture of flour and water used for baking. Now, this pronunciation is very different than tough. Now, it has an powerful. Are you tough enough to learn to correctly pronounce all of these words? Then there's plow. Plow. You hear that ow sound this time when referring to the large farming equipment. Now, I will say that in places such as the US, you may see people spell this p l o w, but this is also an acceptable form of spelling.

Plow. Next is cough.

[cough] That is a cough and the pronunciation of the o u g h is now off. If someone is coughing, very common word. And then through. This is a preposition and now you hear that ooh sound. Moving in one side and out the other. We are moving through the pronunciation of these five words and I hope this I hope this makes sense and that you can go out and use these words and say them correctly, all of them with that o u g h ending.

Can you become fluent in 3 months? | Natural Conversation + Vocabulary

is it possible to achieve English fluency in three months that's a good question and we are going to talk about that today hey everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today we have a bit of a discussion for you as well as some vocabulary words that I want to teach you before you listen to the discussion and we are going to talk about whether or not it's possible to achieve fluency in just a few months but before I teach you the vocabulary I want to talk to you about a special opportunity that will really help you achieve English fluency and that is the lingo to marathon now the lingo to marathon this is a huge event and not only that this will be your last opportunity to participate in a marathon like this but but I'll get into details of the marathon in just a moment if you don't know about lingo de lingo de is an online language school where you can take classes in English business English German Spanish or French and no matter what you're studying you will learn with qualified native speaking teachers I've even taken some classes in Spanish with lingo de it was a great experience the classes were small and I had a lot of opportunities to speak so let's get back to the marathon when you participate in the marathon you will take classes every day for 90 days and the best part of all is that if you successfully complete the marathon then you will be eligible for a 100% refund and lingo de has some flexibility because you can take either the full marathon or the half marathon and for more information I encourage you to click on the link in the description now it's very important for you to know that this marathon will begin on September 23rd 2019 and you must sign up for the marathon before September 9th so the way it works is that you will pay a 49 euro deposit and this deposit is to secure your spot in the marathon but this 49 euro will be taken off your first month's payment again click on that link in the description to learn more about cost as well as how to qualify for that 100% refund and for all of you at interactive English lingo des is offering a ten euro discount on the deposit so when you click on the link in the description and you sign up for the marathon just use the voucher code seven so if you are absolutely serious about taking your English to the next level and you are willing to study every day for 90 days then this marathon is for you click on the link in the description sign up for the marathon use the voucher code talk seven and put yourself in a position to achieve your fluency goals so now let's talk about the vocabulary that you will find in our conversation the first word I have for you is foundation this word is a noun and what it means is the structure that is below the surface of the ground and supports of building it could also support a house as well so if you lay the foundation you are going to build on top of that when you're learning a language you need to start with a foundation and then you will build on top of that vocabulary grammar and all of that supports your fluency the next word is Plateau and this can either be a verb or a noun and the meaning is pretty much the same it's talking about reaching a state where there is little or no change especially after a period where there is a lot of growth and activity so in language learning you may be learning a lot and you're really growing and developing and you think everything is great and then things might start to Plateau and there's not as much change as before then we have an adjective which is well rounded and if we say that somebody is well rounded it means that they are capable or knowledgeable in many different things they have a variety of skills which makes them well-rounded then we have dramatically this word is an adverb and it just means a large amount a large extent a synonym would be greatly so you could say that somebody's skills are growing dramatically by a large amount next is a phrase and that is at the end of the day and this usually comes at the beginning of a sentence somebody would start it and say at the end of the day and this phrase is something you say before you give the most important fact about a situation so before you reveal the most important information you might start the sentence and say well at the end of the day and then say what's important at the end of the day I hope that all of you learn a lot from our English lessons next is a phrasal verb and that phrasal verb is pay off so if something pays off it just brings you some kind of benefit something is successful there is some value added and you could say that this thing pays off then there's an expression which is no pain no gain and people would say this hard question to answer because so much of it depends on the individual there are certain things that I think if people would need to do to really achieve a high level proficiency in a short period of time and I guess one thing that I would say about fluency fluency means different things for different people like what I consider fluency in a language might be different than what you consider fluency because we've met people and they're like oh I want to become fluent in English and they have a very high proficiency and I'm thinking well like you are fluent in English already but I think if you do want to achieve a high level of fluency there are definitely things that that you can do every single day which will help you achieve those goals good habit and kind of being consistent about your practice because if you're not then you're not it's like you just kind of plateau and you don't a your language isn't going anywhere it kind of stays the same but be like you're not creating a good habit for yourself and you're not setting yourself up to practice and you have to take the time to do you have to be motivated insistency is key you know like oh I saw he's he's full of sayings but it's it's you know it's it's the marathon not a sprint learning a language is a marathon it's not a sprint yeah yeah exactly so what would you suggest then that people what skills should they study every day um it's just a couple of things a one would be like whatever first like what they're more comfortable with maybe because it's more fun and easier to get into like don't if you hate reading like don't start making yourself like I'm gonna read for an hour because it's not gonna go good reading is very important thing you would need you should read every day I think I know but I mean like if you if you haven't done it in a while and you're about to start in your leg breaks you know kind of nervous and like about you know like this is a big challenge so you start a little bit each day you build up to it that's what I mean I would say you definitely needed to be well-rounded so even if you don't like reading then I still think you should try to make that a habit as well as you know speaking every single day writing every single day I mean I was gonna say that no matter what if you study and dedicate your time to learning a language every single day and put in the effort you're going to get whatever level you're at you're going to she's going on a continuum you will dramatically improve

yes that's true which so regardless of whatever you consider yourself fluent and what your the fluency is it's going to you're going to improve your yeah and at the end of the day that's I think that is the key thing that's the most important thing well yeah is that you're you're you put yourself on a path to where you were continuously improving and getting better until again you reach those you know that fluency goal or where you feel comfortable with the language because that's what fluency I think means to me you guys are awesome because because that's important and that just yeah it helps you also get a better attitude which helps it yeah because I was gonna say like to me I think fluency when when people are trying to define it is when you are comfortable with the language or you're comfortable speaking about a variety of topics you can respond quickly you can read a variety of you know books or articles without always running to the dictionary and yeah you can communicate you can listen and understand and follow a conversation follow a TV show to me that's what fluency means and when I reached that point and I feel comfortable that I would consider myself to be fluent and it does pay off it really does like just like with everything else and you know it's worth it what have we work hard for it's worth it's actually I think that was like leading into some other saying I thought you were gonna go into but but yeah I think no no I thought you were heading into some saying or expression but it is possible you know if you put in the the energy the dedication you're practicing all the language skills and then again you're you're putting yourself in a position to where you as a learner are learning as fast as you possibly can yeah don't you agree so I hope you enjoy this this conversation this discussion about fluency and whether or not you can achieve it in a few months which again I think it's possible you put in the work you would be you would be surprised at how much you will improve and study yeah if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button and and write to us in the comments let us know what what are you doing right now to improve your fluency what are your fluency goals what do you need to do to get better and achieve the the level of fluency that you're looking for let us know in the comments and as always thanks for watching and we'll see you next time alright done

Can you correctly pronounce these 3 words? (mischievous, choir, veterinarian)

here are three difficult words to pronounce and I want you to repeat after me here's the first one mischievous sometimes people mispronounce it say it with four syllables it's not mischievous it has three syllables stresses on that first syllable mischievous here's the next word choir so this is where spelling and pronunciation do not match there is no CH sound instead that CH is a k sound choir and then veterinarian so this this one's a mouth fully you're going to pronounce all six of those syllables I'm going to pronounce that t with a flat T because I'm from the U. S so it'll sound like a soft D veterinarian stress is on that third to last syllable veterinarian

LESSON 250 OF 749

Can you solve these RIDDLES?

here are some riddles to test your mental language skills I'll give you five seconds to think of the answer and then I'll tell you you ready what has to be broken before you can use it the answer is an egg an egg has to be broken before you can use it the next one what month of the year has 28 days think about it so I know instinctively you probably want to say February however I said what month has 28 days really all of them have 28 days where does today come before yesterday this sounds a little weird where where would you find today before yesterday and of course you would find that in a dictionary if you got any of those right you can let me know by hitting that like button that tells me that you are awesome

Casual WORK EXPRESSIONS to Sound More Natural & Professional

I'm going to teach you some useful work Expressions that you can use to sound more natural and professional and I'm not talking about very formal Expressions but ones that you can use and are likely to come across in just everyday conversation when at work and I think that it's going to become clear and obvious as to how to use the expression and that you'll be able to put two and two together so let's begin with that expression right there to put two and two together it means to draw an obvious conclusion from what is known or evident so perhaps there's some problem or situation or issue and you were just able to look at the information and come up with a sensible conclusion perhaps I say well how did you know that she was not at home and you tell me Well her car is not in the driveway so I just put two and two together or well how did you know that he was stealing from the company well he was acting a bit strange I put two and two together and maybe you're wondering how I know that you are going to hit the like button this is because I'm I'm teaching you these amazing expressions and I I'm just putting two and two together that you will go ahead and do this and that is a sensible conclusion at least I hope so when pronouncing this phrase and this is very important especially to sound natural often the word and is reduced and it's just going to sound like n put two and two together this happens when people are speaking a little faster it gets reduced and they just say the phrase as one group to put two and two together I want you to listen for it how do you know that Mary is Charlotte's mom CeCe Drake Mary Drake and I just put you together and when he saw me with you he could have put two and two together we were getting kind of close he was around a lot you put two and two together and figured it out now I know that you are someone who would like to build your vocabulary improve your overall English fluency and I I can help with that so let's put two and two together please subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and I I promise if you subscribe and you watch these video lessons you're going to improve and you're definitely going to make some Headway and let's continue with that expression right there to make some Headway it means to make progress towards achieving something so this is a good thing if you are making Headway and it really does have a positive connotation so perhaps your boss ask you hey can you give me an update on the project and you say I'm really making some Headway that's a good thing or if uh your supervisor says hey you know how's the report coming along and you say well unfortunately I I haven't made much Headway in that case it's not so good because you're not making much progress for pronunciation it's pretty simple and straightforward you're just going to say one word right after the other to make Headway see why you're timing to rush the process good now we can make some Headway I'm making Headway with the Republican on the committee yes yes Cooper is making a lot of Headway in the VC world now if you would like to make some Headway when it comes to your pronunciation and speaking skills I know of a great app that can help so let me quickly tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson Elsa speak

this is an amazing app to help you fine-tune your pron pronunciation as well as get some speaking practice and I want to show you a really cool feature when you join Elsa premium because you can have an in-depth conversation using their AI feature as you can see there are different AI conversations but let's create our own roleplay something work related what kind of roleplay scenario would you like to do I want to have a conversation with my supervisor at the office and my supervisor is asking me to give an update on a project that I have been working on hi there how's the project coming along it's going well and I think my team right now we're making some serious Headway that's great to hear can you share some specific progress you've made recently well we have come up with a few different marketing campaigns that I think are very Innovative and we will present them to our client at the end of the month good job on developing Innovative marketing campaigns I'm looking forward to seeing the final presentation to the client thanks I appreciate it I will definitely give you an update at the end of the month once the project is starting to wrap up I got to head to another meeting right now but I appreciate your support role play completed we are Computing your feedback and then after the role play you get a full assessment of your conversation giving you meaningful feedback when it comes to pronunciation vocabulary and grammar so join Elsa premium today by clicking on the link in the description and you can get 50% off a one-year membership if you want to improve your speaking skills this is a great way to make some serious Headway so check out my special link get an Elsa premium membership and take your speaking skills to the next level let's get back to our lesson and continue with the expression in a nutshell this means very briefly or giving only the main point now this is a pretty casual expression you can use it in a variety of contexts but you could also use it at work as well of course if you are in a very formal situation maybe giving a presentation you could use other phrases that have the same meaning in brief in short to sum up but work doesn't always have to be very formal perhaps someone asks you how did you land the new client you could say in a nutshell I just showed them how they can expand their business or maybe someone asked hey what what went wrong and you say in a nutshell everything everything went wrong when pronouncing this phrase there is some linking that may occur this is when we link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word so we can link the final consonant sound in in with the vowel sound in the article uh in it's like we're moving that consonant sound over in a nutshell in a nutshell and you're asking me not to tell your wife in a nutshell I've heard very little about you rich kid new promotion well that's uh that's me in a nutshell then we have the expression to Circle back to something I like this one perhaps because I feel like I use it quite often this means to return to a conversation or discussion at a later time so maybe you're in a situation in which you can't or don't want to answer something and then you could just circle back to it later now I I feel like I use this when I'm teaching a lesson and if someone asks me a question question that's unrelated to the lesson I might say let's just continue and then at the end I'll answer your question and we'll

Circle back to it later now I'll be honest sometimes people may use this expression to procrastinate and just maybe push something off to later and they say okay we we'll Circle back to it later and I have some funny memes to capture that when you realize it's time to Circle back after the holiday break and she does not look happy about this or let me Circle back to you on that and in this case it's like uh this person is saying I have no intention of actually answering your question this is the picture of the White House Press Secretary and whoever has this position they they would use this quite often they don't want to answer the question and they'll say okay let me Circle back to you on that and then me waiting for all those Circle backs I love it for pronunciation again I think this expression is pretty straightforward to

Circle back to something here are some more examples okay this seems like a whole sidebar so we're going to circle back to that let me talk to him I'll Circle back the left engine was lost in the crash due to excessive damage but we can Circle back to that later then we have in light of something this just means because of and there are some common cations with this expression in light of recent events or in light of recent developments now in a work context someone may use this to introduce some type of change and it is a little more formal and perhaps they're using it because something bad happened so I could say in light of recent events employees are asked to take care of their belongings maybe something was stolen or in light of recent developments the CEO decided to step down perhaps there was a scandal for pronunciation there are two things that I want to point out the first is the flap t this is a distinct part of the American accent and yes I am from the US so the final te in light it comes between two vowel sounds so you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T it's going to sound like a soft D and then I can link the flap t with the vow sound in of light of in light of recent events or in light of recent developments just listen for those two things in light of recent events I'd say your position is untenable I'm sorry but in light of recent events I feel more safe with it in my office now B in light of your recent services the school and decided to be lenient next is to put One's best foot forward this means to make a good impression or to try One's best so at work you might use this if you're starting a new job or a new position maybe you're working with new people and you want to make a good impression so you want to put your best foot forward here are some great quotes using this expression putting your best foot forward at least keeps it out of your mouth all right I just I thought this was funny if you put your best foot forward and overcome your fears you will surely attain the heights of success very inspirational I I can certainly see this on some company wall and finally when we put our best foot forward the other one had better be good enough to stand on very philosophical but still true for pronunciation I just want to point out that Aion may occur this is when sounds or syllables get removed now often this may happen with either the t or d sounds when they come between two consonants so the final fin te in best it comes between two consonants so it's going to alide and you're not really going to hear it to put your best foot forward you can listen to these other examples this is our time to soar we need to put our best foot forward so if we're going to be putting our best foot forward should we just be sending our worst employees home I just want to make sure we put our best foot forward only launch once the next expression is definitely one that I can relate to and that is to jump the gun this means to do something too soon or before the appropriate time so the origin of this expression comes from well racing at the start of the race the official starter will fire a gun now if you start running before you hear the gun then you're running too soon you jump the gun like I said we can all relate to this expression and it's certainly one that you can use in a work context I could say yeah I jumped the gun and started working on the project before getting approval to give you a little more context as to how this expression is used here are some news headlines did Seattle jump the gun on World Cup bid wait and see ground transportation operators won't jump the gun over rate rise demands and don't jump the gun we may not need a new law to Shield us from AI harms for pronunciation it's pretty straightforward so let's go ahead and listen to some video examples Paramount is already planning a sequel to The Godfather we job what if one of us gets the job over the other how are we going to handle it aren't we jumping the gun here I mean maybe they'll pick somebody else some people may say that bringing in these contractors this early is jumping the gun a little bit then there's to hit the ground running this means to immediately work hard and successfully at a new activity it's a great work expression it has a positive connotation I could say I was assigned to a project that starts next week and I plan to hit the ground running or I started my new position last month and I really hit the ground running for pronunciation there's more alision remember sounds are getting removed This Time It's the final D in the word ground it comes between two consonants so that D is going to alide to hit the ground running we want to start retraining people ASAP so we can hit the ground running with the new system you hit the ground running you don't look back H thank you the rest of you stop crying and figure out how we're going to hit the ground running in three weeks with new work the next expression is to put something on the back burner this refers to something that is temporarily not being dealt with or considered especially because it's not very urgent or important now this fun expression comes from multiple burners on a stove and if something is on the back burner then it's not the primary focus it's not something that you have to deal with right now you can see that pot right there it is on the back burner now often but not always the something may be it so it's like you're you're talking about some topic and then you want to deal with it later and you say well let's just put it on the back burner at work maybe you want to ask your boss for a raise you've been there for a while you say look it's time and especially if your boss does not want to deal with it at that moment they may say well let's let's put it on the back burner when pronouncing this phrase specifically put it on the back burner you're going to hear me pronounce the final T in put and the final t in it as a flap T because those t's come between two vowel sounds and then we can link the entire phrase put it on say it with me put it on put it on the back burner excellent look it it all comes down to one word you are you ready to put your own dreams on the back burner we will put this on the back burner but underneath I want you to know I am fuming maybe I get involved in a great nonprofit and I just put journalism on the back bur for a little while that's a great idea then there's the Pros outweigh the cons simply put this means there is more good than there is bad now this expression is the combination of the verb outweigh meaning to be greater or more important than something else along with the binomial pair pros and cons referring to the advantages and disadvantages so you might use this when you're evaluating something the advantages and disadvantages and you come to the conclusion and say well the pros outweigh the cons I could say I'm in favor of this new applicant because his Pros outweigh the cons or I think the new work policy will be beneficial to the company because the pros outweigh the cons now you could say the opposite the cons outweigh the pros but I don't think it's as commonly used we can see right here using engram viewer that it's more common to use the Expression the pros outweigh the cons for pronunciation more linking may occur we can link the final consonant sound in Pros with the vowel sound in outweigh the pros outweigh the cons let's weigh the pros and cons together Linda laid out all the pros and they clearly outweigh the cons okay not perfect but the pros outweigh the cons agreed then there's to make up for lost time this means to do something faster or more often to compensate for not having done it quickly or often enough before when it comes to work there may be a variety of reasons as to why you may need to make up for lost time you may need to make up for lost time if you extend your vacation by another day or you may need to make up for lost time if you fall behind schedule and you need to meet a deadline or you may need to make up for a lost time if you tell a lot of people that you will Circle back to them and then you need to actually start circling back for pronunciation two things we can link the final consonant sound in make with the beginning vow sound in up make up and then the word for is often reduced and it's just going to sound like it's a much softer sound to make up for lost time once again I want you to listen for those two things I basically missed out on six years of Hazel growing up just making up for lost time this year she's making up for lost time honey she is talking about everybody else and getting

Amazon sales come up short profit nearly doubles Le Auto slashes Sales Target as deliveries come up short and Fred Meyer workers's paychecks come up short due to software glitch not a good situation for pronunciation we can link the final consonant sound in come with the beginning vowel sound in up come up to come up short we going to sit tight let mcnalty take his best shot and hope like hell he comes up short we've had some bookkeeping problems lately checks coming up short yeah um you know we are trying our best over here but we just keep coming up short so I really think we made some Headway in this lesson and of course if you would like to review you can always Circle back to it later I think that's a good idea now I don't want to jump the gun but if you would like to continue building your vocabulary I recommend that you watch another video Lesson don't tell me that you're going to put it on the back burner I I think you should do it right now the pros definitely outweigh the cons if you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new you can let me know by hitting that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Collective Nouns to Describe People | Vocabulary Lesson

hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english and the channel it's just about trying to help you guys uh practice and improve your english skills when it comes to vocabulary pronunciation grammar a little bit of everything and i really want to really focus on that practice part and i try to make these lessons a little more interactive so that you guys can participate especially in these live lessons when we do these and i know i do i want you guys to participate in today's lesson i want to give a quick uh some quick shout outs uh hey uh putri uh lolly gatruedes um awesome great good it's great to see so many members i'm glad you guys can join me um hey uh rita um erahem uh phuket sorry if i mispronounce names and as we go through this i'll try to try to give some more shout outs as you answer some of the questions that i give you though they're not really questions today's lesson is about building your vocabulary and we're going to be talking about groups of people because if you're talking about people it is a plural noun and if you're referring to specific groups then those groups have names and what i'm talking about what i'm referring to are collective nouns so you will use collective nouns when you're referring to different groups of people so this lesson i really hope it's going to allow you to build your vocabulary so that you can be a little more specific if you want to refer to one of these groups and you want to talk about one of these groups so i have well quite a few for you and what i'm going to do is i'm going to show you a picture and then talk about what the group is and then i want you to think about the name so to give you a very quick example of a collective noun think about um you know like family that is a collective noun you're talking about a specific group of people um but and you could call it a family so there are many many many different collective nouns i've just chosen um just some of them that i thought were maybe a little more common that i thought you should know so probably you're going to be familiar with some of them and that's great it's always good to review and hopefully you will learn some new words as well so let's go into it uh and the first one okay so this one uh as you can see i'm talking about uh musicians okay these guys they they play music and as a group and look at the picture because there's obviously there are different types of musicians what would you call this um if you're talking about this group right here this group of musicians is called it is excellent it is called a band all right excellent uh gertrudis yingo um we're talking about a band of musicians but again there are different types of musicians but if you're talking about a band i think more of people that will perform it's very lively it's very entertaining and i think typically a lot of younger people might do this when they're younger they form a band or they want to play in a band i had lali asked a great question if you're talking about collective nouns you're going to use the singular so even though we're talking about a group of people it's one group so for example like this band right here banned in the band there are many different people but you could have like different bands if you go to a concert you might listen to 10 different bands play uh play music so if you're talking about like one band like a band then you're going to use a singular noun so that is an excellent question if you're talking about the collective noun just using it once then it's singular but you could again you could use these collective nouns in the plural as well because you could be talking about more than one band the bands all right so that was a good question clear that up uh because that is very very important very useful so in this let me give you some context with this picture i tried i couldn't find a better picture but i'm talking about um think of a business and maybe these people are the directors all right so i'll give you it'd be like the um of directors kind of the people at the top of a business or a company they would come together and they would make decisions about who's going to lead the company what direction the company is going to go and if i tell you that these these are directors what would you call that group if you're talking about a company and again i know the picture is probably not the best one at that representative um but the answer that i'm looking for is a board a board of directors excellent uh be happy um phuket so yes if we're talking about um people kind of at the top of an organization that would make decisions about like who's going to run the company and this would be a larger company if you're talking somebody might just mention the board and if they mention the board they're talking about that group of people the board of directors uh so that is a good that's a good um i think collocation as well you might often hear that together the board of directors let's look at the

a group of people and they are singers and again i i would say that um these people are singers and really use that picture because you could have different types of singers what would you say all right we're talking about a group of singers what do you think uh and again i think this is definitely a good picture because in this context in this setting you're talking about this group of singers you're talking about the choir all right a choir of singers and often i think people are just going to use this collective noun somebody might say i sing in a choir all right or i'm part of the choir or i want to join a choir so some of them i told you you might use the entire um phrase like a board of directors i think that's a very common phrase that people would use together in this case you're just more likely just going to use that collective noun and talk about a choir so excellent um keith love uh lolly esther um rose claire gabard jasmine great job let's keep going all right and i put these in alphabetical order too uh not to give you too much of a hint uh all right so this one i think you should know this is a group of students all right i forget about the uh this guy um teaching but think about the group of students what would you call a group of students and i i feel like this uh right now like you guys you are my group of students and i could say you are my of students all right so if we're talking about education we're talking about school i think you guys are familiar with class all right a class of students it's a collective noun you're talking about a specific group a class then we have these guys right here um and if you don't know what the word is in english their job their profession these guys are sailors they're sailors they work on a boat and if you're talking about them sailors as a group you would use this collective noun to talk about the group so think about the person who's typically in charge on a boat is the captain and the captain would have his what he would talk about the group of sailors and that would be his excellent it is his crew all right so if you're talking about a group of sailors it's your crew the people that work work on a boat all right uh the next one okay so the the they're dancers all right and i think more again dancers in this context like uh like theater they travel around and you're talking about a group of dancers what word would you use to talk about this group as a collective noun and i again i tried to use pictures that would be more relevant to what i'm i'm trying to convey that collective noun because again when you have when you talk about some groups you could use more than one so this is a um of dancers okay so this one is a little more challenging i think of like a group of dancers that would go around they would perform you would talk about the company it is a company of dancers so maybe this one was new for some of you a company is a group of dancers let's uh the next one some of you many you said troop i'm curious um maybe i this this one let me give you context for this one and then i'll go back to that so here you just see um this is just a lot of people all right there's a lot of people you would say you would call this group together just a lot of random people it is a what what would you guys say all right what do you think so some of you had asked about a the troop of dancers yes that does work it's a collective noun i think troop though could also refer to singers and like really performers in general but i think if you're specifically focused on a group of dancers you would maybe use a company uh this one you guys rocked it out yes we're talking i was trying to get to a crowd i think you know this uh word if you talk about many people in one area you would say there's a crowd or you could use it as an adjective and you say that a place is crowded all right then we have all right this right here again let me give you some context i'm talking about um this person if i say that he this person this guy right here teaching is an academic all right what would you call a group of academics so think about a university and you would have the academics the the people that are teaching they're giving instruction but as a group they would be referred to as this collective noun so i i want you to think about university okay um specifically about university and hopefully that will give you somewhat of a hint all right this guy right here is an academic and he is part of a what okay and if you guys are just joining us we're talking about collective nouns and building your vocabulary so that you can be more specific when you want to talk about a specific group of people all right so yes i'm talking about a faculty so at university if you're if somebody's referring to the faculty they're talking about the group of instructors and academics who teach uh many of the students there excellent uh language learner ams a few people got that one uh leticia who else yingo perfect so the next one that i have for you again let me give you some context because the picture may not be clear this is all right let's imagine that these guys right here they're a bunch of troublemakers they go around and they maybe they they steal from people they maybe they hurt people and this group of troublemakers might be referred to as what so again i'm trying to give you a little context if the picture doesn't help i want you to imagine that those guys right there bunch of bunch of troublemakers all right they're up to no good maybe they're gonna steal or they're gonna they're gonna do something um bad but you would call this group a what all right what collective noun would you use excellent the answer is a gang all right if you're talking uh and i think this is a very common um word to refer to this and you would just use it alone talking about somebody is part of a gang or they joined a gang and it's a collective noun refers to again people that are part of a group that typically causes problems they're not they're not doing anything good then we have again let me give you some some context this is a group of people all right there are two different groups right here the the red group and the blue group now if i want to talk about the blue group think about them all together but i would say the blue group is the what what would i what what collective noun would specifically refer to the blue group in this situation so you're looking at all of them together but i'd say the blue group those people that is the what word what am i looking for do you have any guesses write it in the chat i always want you guys to participate in these lessons all right so what i was what i'm looking for is the word majority so in this case if you're talking about the collective noun the majority you're talking about the larger number of something and often you are going to um your if you use it alone then basically they know the context that you're talking about but you might follow it with of people the majority of people believe something or the majority of people own something and you're talking about the larger number the majority so if the blue group is the majority then the red group is what it's the opposite the red group would be the minority so the majority and the minority if you want to get into talking about numbers all right which one is more more people are in the majority fewer people are in the minority so then we have okay i think this is i'm not positive you guys can correct me i thought maybe this looks like it could be from the running of running of the bulls in pamplona but if you have this this group and you could say it's a crowd but i want you to think of another word um instead of a crowd if it's almost it's just it's so crowded and people are packed in there they're doing different things and you might use this to refer to a a group of people that maybe you don't want to be in it's very energized very energetic they and what word do you think i'm looking for um so i chose this for a reason because i thought it was like the running of the bulls and when people are doing that they're it's it's a bit crazy and what i would call that is if we're talking about a group of people that's a little crazy it's very chaotic it's very hectic then i would you would refer to it as a mob a mob of people so this is a good word if you want to describe a situation in which it's crowded and it's just chaotic so maybe you go shopping uh and there are so many people there and you could tell somebody oh i went to the mall and there was there was just a mob there it was crazy there were too many people and you could refer to it as a mob a lot of times people would use it in a negative connotation if you're talking about a mob of people because it's a place you don't want to be you don't want to be around a mob of people next is again we're going back to um musicians but i told you there are different types of musicians we've already talked about the first one which was a band and again this is a picture that i think is more specific so think about these musicians right here what collective noun would you guys use to refer to these musicians so i think um some of them very uh specific and i think they're a little easier than the other so hopefully this picture really tells you uh okay

these musicians right here they are part of the orchestra all right excellent uh gertrudis jingo abraham uh gay angela bruna baltek lali you guys you got that one excellent so like i said i think some of these pictures are easier than others and i think this this is a collective noun you're probably familiar with these people who play in like more classical music they would be part of an orchestra all right this one you need some context so let's imagine that this this man and woman right here they are experts they are considered experts and they have come together and they're having a discussion about something so if you have this group this group of experts they come together what would you call the group and they may be experts uh they could be experts in different fields it doesn't really matter they could be experts in the same field but in this situation where they're sitting next to each other they're having this conversation you have a group of experts and you would call this group of experts what what collective noun would you use to describe this group the answer is a panel we're talking about a panel of experts and in this case i think it's quite common to use that phrase and you're referring to the panel of experts or you could say that we're going to listen to a discussion there's going to be a panel of experts on climate change and you would go uh listen to this discussion and then once you're at the discussion and you're looking at these people people may then just say the panel because then you know what they're talking about but often uh i think you would hear panel of experts great job everyone uh great job great job jasmine uh let's look at the next one this one um this one could be challenging and i this is honestly something that i didn't know before i i use it in a different way and i'll explain what i mean so you're talking about a group of police what do you call a group of police or even a group of sheriffs so a sheriff is like a police officer but if it's a group a sheriff a group of police what word would you use and i maybe i it's an older word this is more of a historical word i don't think it's as commonly used today so what i'm talking about um is a posse and like i said i didn't i didn't know this when i was looking up collective nouns that historically if you're talking about uh a group of police or sheriffs it's called a posse all right i like big small pigs yes that is another that is another term uh used for police um but what i wanted to get to is that this word posse i think it is used today as a collective noun to refer to in my mind it's like a group of friends your friends who will they're loyal to you they will help you if you get in problems they they'll fight for you and you could say this is this is your posse this is your group right here and i think it is a little more informal in that use usage when you're talking about somebody's loyal group of friends who are willing to fight for them um it's your posse so this is a word that again i i really never used it to talk about police but i have heard it used in the context of just informally somebody's group of loyal friends they'll fight for them it's your posse um this again let me give you context so that you know what i'm talking about and i think uh hopefully you'll understand this is talking about uh candidates so in the picture it's like they're selecting one of the candidates perhaps this is these are candidates for a job interview they're they're applying for a job but if you're talking about the group of candidates what collective noun would you use to refer to the group what do you think and this is uh this one's definitely a little more uh challenging all right so hopefully this word is new for you if you're talking if you have for some whatever you're doing you have a list of candidates and you're talking about the group as a whole you would call them a slate a slate of candidates so i think that it may not be as commonly used because it's a very specific situation that you're trying to hire people and you have your list and i say yes we have our slate of candidates and we're gonna start the interviews next week but we have our slate of candidates and again i would say in this case you're going to use that entire phrase like a collocation slate of candidates all right so yes as vicky point out pigs is not a friendly name to refer to the police yes uh

the next one uh so a slate of candidates hopefully this this one's uh that might be new for you guys for these people this this should be a little easier these people right here they're employees so think about it that they work for a company the company could do anything but if you're talking about the group of employees it is called what and this is a more common word that you will hear people use in the work environment you're going to hear this tv shows movies what would you call a group of employees excellent yes uh a group of employees i think many of you may know this it's called your staff your staff of employees so no matter what kind of uh business you have company you're going to have your employees and that is your staff now this is a collective noun that people may just say it individually that you don't need to say your staff of employees you can but typically people will just say the staff you need to hire a new staff or um you you there is a shortage of people on your staff your group of employees excellent uh all right here this is a little more cultural for you this is american football all right but no matter what sport uh you may be talking about you're talking about the players okay the group of players is called what all right the collective noun as a group the players are i don't wanna you i think you guys know this word they're part of the what the group of players if you you could be talking about football players soccer players basketball players any sport but the group of players is referred to as the team all right the team of players and again most people will just say the team all right excellent uh give some shout outs um a mitni brando abraham uh gertrudis esther angela so we're talking about the team the team of players then we have this one this one could be a little more challenging and maybe it's also a little more relevant to the united states um because i i would say just to tell you what these people are i try to find a picture i don't know if it's accurate but what i'm going for is they are boy scouts and girl scouts right and maybe you might you may maybe you don't even know what boy scouts and girl scouts are this is talking about a group of a group that younger children will join and what they do boy scouts and girl scouts they may learn new skills they do activities together perhaps camping they might go around and sell things and raise money for a good cause and we're talking about them as a group so boy scouts and girl scouts the group would be called a what you're going to use this collective noun when talking about the group as a whole so they this is a picture i was trying to find a picture of boy scouts and girl scouts but if we're talking about a group of scouts and maybe this was difficult this i'm talking about a troop a troop if you're referring to a group of boy scouts or a group of girl scouts they belong to a troop and that is the collective noun referring to this group okay so i i really hope that some of these some of these collective nouns were new for you here oh let me show you this just to review so this is a review this is all of the ones that we talked about and again i told you that some of them i think you would just use them as just as the collective noun like uh the band or if you're talking about a choir or a team they're very common they're very well known but if you're talking about some of the other ones you might use the entire phrase like i said board of directors that's uh it's common that you would say the board of directors or the slate of candidates and remember uh we had that question before if you're talking about collective nouns all right like the band the board you're going to use it with a singular verb the band is playing tomorrow night the board makes decisions for the companies i'm using it with that singular verb so that is very useful to know a little bit of grammar for you so i hope you learn some new words again it's all about practicing building your vocabulary if you like what we do here at interactive english and you want to show us some love sponsor and support our channel uh we have youtube memberships patreon saws a lot of members today some patrons as well always great to see you guys links are down below in the description again it's all about building your vocabulary this lesson so that you can be a little more specific whenever you want to express your thoughts and opinions and really just be more accurate with what you want to say thank you guys so much for joining me i hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and just to give some quick shout outs here at the end uh lolly jingo uh anna ameni from south korea annyeonghaseyo uh abraham nekla ho ho glad gatrudes thank you guys for joining me i'm glad that some of this was new for you it's always good to practice practice practice practice that's a great way to build your vocabulary have a wonderful weekend i will see you next time so long

Collocations to Emphatically Build Your Vocabulary (B2 + C1 + C2)

In this lesson, I am going to help you emphatically build your vocabulary. And I just trying to emphasize it emphatically, uh, immensely, greatly build your vocabulary. And learning collocations is a an amazing way to do that because these are phrases. These are words that are frequently used together. So, you're not just learning one word and what it means, but you're you learning other words that go along with it. So, not only is this going to help you build your vocabulary, but it's going to help you sound more natural when you're having a conversation because these are the phrases that native speakers often use. And I I'm going to bring that up.

You'll see what I mean as we go through this because you may use some words together that it's not incorrect. It just may not be commonly used. And I I like to point that out in my classes when I'm I'm running the course and tell people, hey, it's a little more common if you use it like this. And if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications so I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. That is what interactive English is all about. And if you would like to get a copy of these lesson notes, you can join my email community. There is a link down below in the description. I will go ahead and throw it down there out there in the chat as well. If you are already a part of my email community, I check your inbox. I've sent them to you already and you will or you will receive them soon. So, just want to get that out of the way and begin with our first question. And because of course this is interactive English, I want you to participate. answer the question, write it in the chat, write it in the comments, and I'll I'll give you a moment to think about it, and then we'll talk about uh the correct answer. So, it's a m chilly outside. And really, the collocation is to say, uh m chilly. We're talking about the weather. What are what what word would you use to complete this sentence? Again, there there's more than one answer. And that that's the the beauty of building your vocabulary because you could use different words that have the same meaning and there are maybe several collocations. I actually have two that I would like to point out. So what do you think? It's uh m chilly outside as we go through. I'll try to give some some shout outs. Great job. Uh fly uh nu uh lolli vija. Perfect. So, I would say it's a little chilly outside or it's a bit chilly outside. In this context, we're talking about the weather and you just want to use one of those words, a little bit uh or a little chilly or a bit chilly. In this case, I have heard what I what I wanted to to talk about. I've heard people say something like it's a little bit chilly outside. In that case, I would say it's a little um redundant. Just choose one. It's a little chilly outside. It's a bit chilly outside. Now, to give you a point of reference when I said sometimes the it's not grammatically incorrect, but one may be more commonly used as than another and that's going to help you sound natural. So, a great resource is to use engram viewer. This is um uh basically mostly taken from written English and it graphs how frequently certain words or phrases are used. So that this allows us to compare the two and I can put that in there. A little chilly, a bit chilly, and it just graphs it for us. And you can see which one is a little more common. If I zoom in, you can see that it's a it's a little more common to say, oh, it's a little chilly outside. But there is nothing wrong with saying it's a bit chilly outside. So this is just a good resource if you have well two different phrases and you're thinking well which one is more often used. You can check engram viewer and I'm going to come back to this throughout the lesson. So the next question that I have and yeah this is uh I I'm sure you know the answer because I ask you this all the time. You probably hear this uh in other videos. People would say yes. I would love it if you m the like button. Which in this case, which verb would you use to complete this sentence? We're talking about uh the like button. What are you going to say? And of course, there there's more than one verb that you could use. And generally speaking, what what I would say to to go ahead and kind of lead you into this is think about uh again you you listen you watch my videos like what what are you going to say? Now when talking about a button

I think it's normal you would press a button. That is a common collocation. Oh just you know just press the button. However, in this context, when talking about social media, YouTube, Facebook, Instagram, whatever it is, and people talk about the like button, generally speaking, they they try to add a little flavor and really emphasize it. So, in that case, what I would say that again, there's more than one answer. I would say you could hit the like button, smash the like button, you can crush the like button, what whatever it is. So I I saw some answers in there as far as people putting press that is a common collocation press the button. However, in this context when talking about YouTube for example right now in my video lessons and you can listen for it.

I always say oh please I'd love it if you just hit that like button and it just helps out the channel and the video. And yes that's true. If you enjoy building your vocabulary please hit that like button. Go ahead and smash that like button. The reason why I don't think I would say press is because it sounds a little passive uh whereas in this case you want to be sound more oh it's more exciting it's more adventurous you want to hit something instead of me just like politely asking you but I could hey please just please just press that like button. I would love it if you press the like button anyway. Either you press it, hit it, smash it, it's it's all good. Um as long as you do one of them that would be perfect.

But hopefully that makes a little more sense as far as walking through those different examples because all of them are correct. The next one, take your time and do not try to mm corners. So, this is actually an idiom and I have a couple of idioms in here because I want to help you build your vocabulary. And in this case, there would be a specific word missing. And I already see so many answers in there. Excellent. Um, Lai, Miranda, Vija, Angela, we're talking about cutting corners. To cut corners, this is you could say it's a collocation. It is an idiom. And I'm going I'm giving you the meaning right there. You're doing something in the quickest way possible, maybe in the cheapest way. And often when you cut corners, it may harm the quality of your work. And that's why I think somebody would say, h, you know, don't don't cut any corners. You want to do quality work. Try not to cut corners.

Good phrase, good idiom to know. Let's keep moving right through these. So here is your next sentence. If I'm talking about agism, agism, you know, judging people based on their age is a m of discrimination. So, we're talking about the noun discrimination. What word would you use in this context? And there's more than one answer. And I'll I'll point out what I mean. It is a m of discrimination. I I would say in general there is a I don't want to say a more a correct answer, but a preferred answer. And I say preferred because it's just more commonly used. And I'm going to kind of keep talking because I haven't seen the answer. Uh so the the answer that we're looking for, excellent, nice.

Um just a random person. You nailed it. uh talking about a form of discrimination. Something is a form of discrimination. To give you some examples, I have some news headlines for you. This is a a a way that I like to present different well vocabulary in this case collocations so you can see how the phrase is used in context. Uh it says the negation of diversity is also a form of discrimination. Hate crime laws are a form of discrimination. And that last one down there talking about well agism, age discrimination, most widespread form of discrimination in Latafia says ministry report. So in all of those examples that those news headlines were using a form of discrimination. Now I saw other words in there like kind or sort. Then that those would work as well. But if we go back and I want to refer to engram viewer in this case. So I'm comparing form of discrimination with a kind of discrimination. And again there's nothing wrong with saying oh this is a kind of discrimination. You will hear this. You can use it in this context. But just using engramer you can see that it's a bit more common. It's more often used to say that something is a form of discrim discrimination and that is why again I don't want to say things are um in this case like oh this is correct this is incorrect both of them are correct but being able to understand and know which one is more commonly used this is what I mean when I say that learning collocations is going to help you speak in a lot more more of a natural way because these are the phrases that that native speakers end up using in talking about well oh this is a form of discrimination.

Here's the next one. And I I wanted to include this because I hear people still make uh this mistake from time to time um in my my speaking course. So, we're talking about sharing an opinion, my point of view, and this is this is me. I'm not being humble or modest at all. Uh, I'm kind of bragging sometimes. Uh, I try to be modest, but just for um for this example, my point of view, this is the best channel to learn and fine-tune my English skills. So I'm I'm pretending that this is something that maybe you believe that you think that that you would be saying. So if this is your opinion, how are you going to introduce this opinion? What word is missing?

And I know that uh these words are commonly confused. I in this case I would say there is a correct answer. So, great job Zoe Tayo uh Lai from from my point of view. This is the best channel to learn and fine-tune my English skills. I hope that you think that uh I don't know for sure. Uh you can hit that like button that would tell me like oh yes uh from your point of view you think is the best to fine-tune your English skills. So there are a variety of ways to introduce your opinion. And what I think gets commonly confused is from my point of view and in my view. So just keep that in mind. If we're talking about point of view, you want to use from from my point of view. You could also say from my perspective.

You know, that's what I'm telling you. I hope that you believe me and are willing to me the benefit of the doubt. This is a in this case I would say it's a fixed expression m benefit of the doubt. There is a missing verb in there. Which verb is going to complete this expression? And I think that probably you may know this because it's pretty common. You watch movies, TV shows, you will hear this phrase. I hope that you believe me and are willing to me the benefit of the doubt. I see. All right. Excellent. As people just jumping on this one. Perfect. Uh Rose, Angela, Tal, Pamela, we're talking about give to give someone the benefit of the doubt. In this case, I hope that you give me the benefit of the doubt, which is to believe what I'm saying, even though you you're not really sure that there may be other people out there who disagree, but if you give me the benefit of the doubt, you you trust what I'm saying, you trust what I'm doing, even though what I'm saying may not be true. So, that is the meaning of to give someone the benefit of the doubt. And often you would use this in a context in which you are skeptical of what someone is telling you and you're not really sure to believe them, but you're like, "Okay, I'll trust you. I'll I'll give you the benefit of the doubt." So, another great expression to learn and know and use. And again, this is that you're going to use it with that verb to give someone the benefit of the doubt.

Here is the next one. In order to be eligible, you need to the following conditions. So let's say that you want to participate in some event or competition, but there are certain conditions and somebody tells you this, well, you know, you would like to take part in this competition. In order to be eligible, you need to m the following conditions. So we have that blank and the collocation is really the verb that you might use with conditions. M the following conditions I will tell you there there is more than one verb that you could use. So in this case I would say there's not a correct answer but I could use a word like preferred.

There may be a preferred answer. And in this case of I'm going to show you uh some comparisons using engram viewer. So we're talking about trying to be eligible. And in this case to when talking about conditions I would say I haven't seen it yet. So there's another verb in there that I haven't seen. I I see people like using meat there. There's nothing wrong with meat. Um, but there's another verb. You could you a fulfill that works. I I would have to put that in there. See how um often it would be used. I'm going to go ahead and tell you. And I think once I tell you, of course, you'll be, "Oh, yes. I I've maybe heard this phrase." So, I would say you need to satisfy the following conditions.

Now, many of you put meet in there to meet the following conditions. That is correct. That is okay. But if we want to compare these two and talking about satisfy the following conditions versus meet the following conditions, both of them are correct. And that's why I said one may be in this case slightly preferred over the other because you can see that it's a little more common to say to satisfy the following conditions.

Now, if I want to change the word conditions and put another word in there, this is how it it's again, I find it fascinating how the language changes. So, closest to me right here, you can I zoomed in on it to satisfy the following conditions versus to meet the following conditions. It's a little more uh you know, it's more commonly used to to use the verb satisfy. If I change the word conditions to criteria, now it it just flips around. In this case, you would use the verb meet. You need to meet the following criteria. So, if we're talking about criteria, I I would definitely recommend that you use the verb meet. Oh, well, I don't meet the criteria or um she participated because she met the criteria. And once again, I would say satisfy is not incorrect. it's just not often used. So in that context, I would definitely go with meet to meet the following criteria. But if we're talking about conditions, you could use satisfy to satisfy the following conditions.

So language, it's going to things get changed all around. Again, one thing I think is great about collocations, you're building your vocabulary. And in this case, because we're talking about the frequency of words used together, there's not like, oh, this is right, this is wrong. Sometimes that may be the case, but often it's just a matter of learning which one is more often used and understanding that and then being able to use that as part of your speaking fluency. Let's go. M a bite to eat. This is a phrase that I think is pretty common and maybe I maybe I think that because I say it quite often talking to a friend, a family member.

Hey, would you like to go I almost said it. Would you like to go a bite to eat? And I see a lot of answers in there. Excellent. Li Tayo Curious Ghost Netherlands. I like some of these names. Manuel uh Tal. We're talking about to grab a bite to eat. Of course, if you use the verb get, that also works as well. Um, I I didn't compare these two, but I think both of them are often used. Let's go get a bite to eat. Let's go grab a bite to eat. I feel like if you were in a cont a situation in which you were in more of a hurry, so you only have a certain amount of time for lunch. In that case, I think you would use the verb grab. Grab would imply like some quickness and you need to hurry. Okay, let's just go grab a bite to eat and then we'll come back. another expression that I just wanted to teach you, but these are words that are often used together. There is another word that I think you could use in this context, but overwhelmingly you're going to end this sentence with this specific word layman's. So that's the phrase we're talking about in layman's. There's something that I want you to explain to me and say, "Look, give it to me in layman's." Tell me in layman's. So what do you think? I've uh seen some uh good answers in there. Yes. Um tal Rhan Angela uh we're talking about layman's terms. In layman's terms. The other word that I feel like you could use. You may hear in layman's words. That also works. However, I think it's just much more common to say in layman's terms. In this case, terms and words. It really means the same thing. I saw some other people put language in there. I I again my recommendation in this case if you want to use this expression I would say in layman's terms to refer to simple language that anyone can understand. If someone's trying to explain something very complicated and maybe you don't have a professional background like look just tell me in layman's terms. Give it to me in layman's terms. It's a I think a great phrase to know uh because sometimes I think it's better to have things explained in just using the simplest language and you just have it in layman's terms. How about uh this one? This is a question and again I feel like just thinking about it you probably would know the answer. Would you be willing to m more responsibility? What is missing right here? There is a missing verb. And the collocation would be when you're talking about responsibility.

And think about the question. Think about the context. What is what is this person asking? Would you be willing to more responsibility? There are different verbs that you could put in there, but I'll go ahead and give you a hint. The one that I'm looking for is a phrasal verb because I think that would be the verb that's most commonly used in this situation. So, think about a phrasal verb. Which phrasal verb is going to complete this question. Would you be willing to more responsibility? Uh, excellent. Good job, Tayo. Manuel uh Rose to take on more responsibility. I saw some answers with take in this case. Again, I would say use that phrasal verb to take on would be more like okay to accept. You're going to accept more responsibility. You're going to take on more responsibility. This collocation is often used in the context of work. you have a job and a colleague asks you or your supervisor, boss, whoever asks you, look, could would you be able to take on a little more responsibility? And when you're talking about responsibility, you'd often use this phrasal verb to take on responsibility. And I would say it's even common to use the word more in there, to take on more responsibility. Not really, not often somebody's going to ask you, hey, would you would you consider taking on less responsibility? I think most of us would jump at that opportunity. Yes, I would love it. But typically, people are going to want you to take on more responsibility. Then I have this sentence right here for this one. There, of course, there's more than one answer, but there is a collocation that I wanted to point out because I think it may be new for some of you. There is a m difference between British, American and Australian English. Of course, there are many similarities between these different varieties. However, I could say there is a difference between British, American, and Australian English. There are there are a lot of different words that you could use to complete this sentence. Like, I see a subtle difference. There's a huge difference there. Those work. But there's one collocation the this adjective that I would like to use that would mean clear and obvious which are other words that you could use. There's a clear difference between British English. There's an obvious difference between British English um there's a slight difference. you guys are putting in uh a lot of great words in there that you could absolutely use in this situation.

But the collocation that I wanted to to teach you or talk about is there is a stark difference between British American and Australian English. Now, this is a collocation, even though there are probably other phrases, other adjectives that you would use with difference that may be more commonly used, but I wanted to point this one out in case this is new. If you're talking about a stark difference between two things, you're basically saying that there is a very distinct difference. It is clear. It is obvious. There is a stark difference between British, American, and Australian English. Once again, uh I just want to give you some news headlines so you can see how this is used in context. And for when talking about a difference like you have just seen, there are a lot of different words that you can use that are correct and would work. So, new study reveals a stark difference of asthma rates in poorer and richer enricer suburbs. The next article, the stark difference between Trump and Biden's response to Navali's death. And finally, why is there such a stark difference between Rexom's home and away form? I think they're talking about the Rexom football team in this case. So even though there are many words that you can use, if this is new and you want to emphasize uh that there is a clear difference, you can use this word instead. There is a stark difference between whatever things that you want to talk about. Then I have this uh sentence for you. We're going to go uh in a legal direction now. Tomorrow morning, my attorney plans to m an appeal.

fight um a decision that was made that you disagree with and you a lawyer would file an appeal and then I did not know they were dating. I'm totally m of the loop. This is an idiom. So in this case I would say there's just there is a correct answer. How would you complete this idiom? But it is a collocation. These words are frequently used together. I'm totally m of the loop. I did not know they were dating. I'm totally of the loop. Typically, I am not up to date with I think a lot of things that are going on uh especially in like other people's personal lives. And I would use this I am always of the loop.

I believe this is probably uh an idiom that I've talked about already in a lesson at some point. Excellent. Teao n uh lolatal zoey ssi out of the loop. If somebody is out of the loop, you just do not have knowledge or information about a particular matter. So, here are the phrases that we talked about just to get a little bit of a a review and just to go ahead and use some of these. Now, if I'm just talking to you and say, I think this is a great way to build your vocabulary. When it comes to building your vocabulary, I definitely don't think you should try to cut corners. You should really try to learn these phrases, practice them, go out there and use them.

people use collocations generally they're not that complex and difficult and people would use them and you could say that using collocations you are putting things in layman's terms which I think is very helpful uh because what else could I use um there is a stark difference between learning your vocabulary this way and just learning a word and translating it into your native language. I I think this is a better way to go to practice the word and see how it's used in context in English in these other sentences. So, if you enjoyed the lesson, again, please hit that like button, smash that like button, or if you don't feel too aggressive, just press the like button. It's perfectly fine. And of course, um, from my point of view, I hope that you continue, um, to watch more video lessons because, well, to from my point of view, I think it's really going to help you build your vocabulary. I'm just trying to keep using some of these different ones. And yeah, if you're a little hungry, uh, because it's lunchtime for me right now. So, I'm going to go get a bite to eat. And it's a little chilly outside, so I'm just going to make sure I wear my jacket. All right. So, I I think I went through most of them in that case. Now, uh, I want to thank you for joining me today. And also, I'm always curious, how did you do on the the quiz? Let me know down in the chat. I'm going to throw a little quiz in there right now. And you can tell me and let me throw this in there. Let's see. Start a poll. How How did you do on the quiz?

And if I say I really know my collocations. All right, I knew about half of them and I really need to uh study more. Okay, those are your three choices right there. if you want to participate in my little poll and let me know if you did 90 100% you really know your collocations or maybe you got about 50% you knew half of them or a lot of this was new for you learned a lot of new phrases and which is also great and you could say I really need to study more and that's why I'm here because you can join me all these lessons and study along with me because I want to help you build your vocabulary and keep improving your English skills. That is what it's all about. So, thank you guys so much for being here. I hope that you have a wonderful day. I've had about uh okay, quite a few votes. And it seems like it's a little bit of a mix between people knowing most of these or knowing about half of them as well as just a lot of it being new. So, it's always good to get that perspective. I feel like I did a I feel like this was a good lesson then as far as the uh the different levels and people who are taking it. If it's a bit of a mix, then I I take that as a positive. So, have a wonderful day. Um and keep up the good work. And of course, I will see you in the future with another lesson real soon. So long.

Collocations to Quickly & Effectively Build Your Vocabulary

let's build your vocabulary with collocations and these are words that are frequently used together and that is why I say that they are super common phrases in just spoken English and you're going to come across them all the time I have a lot of different collocations that I want to go over with you and this is a quiz lesson so of course I would love it if you participate write your answers in the chat in the comments I just love hearing from you so here is the first question and then I'm going to highlight the collocation and I want to follow up and we'll give you some more as well because there for many of these questions there there's going to be more than one answer so a m percentage of the population spends more than one hour um on their phone each day what do you think how would you complete that sentence a m percentage of the population spends more than one hour on their phone each day so there we're talking about words that are frequently used together in this case there's an adjective that is missing and of course there there are many different adjectives that you can use I'm just going to highlight one and then I want to give you some more phrases that you can use and then compare them as well so I see some some great answers again whether you you know High certain vast huge the the word that I was thinking of and again like I said there's more than one answer to these questions so just keep that in mind I was just saying a high percentage of the population spends more than one hour on their phone each day here are some other useful collocations when we're talking about a a adjective percentage of something a high percentage of something a large percentage of something or a great percentage of something there were other answers in there a certain percentage a vast percentage those would those work as well but if we're just taking these high large and great just to give you a little more context when it comes to well which phrase should I use if you can use different phrases when explaining something you know there there's not necessarily a correct or incorrect way but one thing I like to point out when it comes to these collocations is the frequency in which they're used because I think many of you would like to use the phrase that more is more commonly used when somebody is speaking English so just comparing these you can see that more often you're going to use and come across the phrase high percentage when comparing those collocations so again this is a great way to build your vocabulary and and learn a lot of different phrases at one time I want to make a very quick announcement because if you are interested in practicing and improving your speaking skills you can check out my speaking course there is a link Down Below in the description the course is for Upper Intermediate to Advanced speakers it's all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally check out that link Down Below in the description and you can also use uh a code to get a discount but this is something that I talk about in the course if we come across some examples I try to provide information about well this is a more commonly used collocation you're going to use this verb with this noun or this adjective with the um this noun so like the next one here's the next question if you would like to see the doctor I recommend that you m an appointment for next week once again there is more than one word that you could use to complete this sentence and then trying to understand which one is more commonly used so if you would like to see the doctor I recommend that you m an appointment for next week I I think uh I think you could say schedule I think overwhelmingly and I see this in the comments schedule works but you would make an appointment in this context you're going to make an appointment for the next day the next week the one thing I wanted to point out the difference uh because it's you could use another verb to make an appointment versus to have an appointment so you would use make an appointment when referring to scheduling an appointment and in that case you could use schedule as well if you have an appointment then that means that it has already been scheduled so just something to keep in mind because with some of these phrases there are differences what do you think how do I get people to respect my personal so we're talking about respecting someone's personal what What word could you put in there it is a common collocation these words are frequently used together and I've basically highlighted the the collocation for you to respect someone's personal what there again I think a couple of common words that you could use in this context uh you can use that picture to to give you a little bit of a hint I think it does help so what I would say is how do I get people to respect my personal space we're talking about someone's personal space like they just they they need a little more more room here are some other useful collocations I told you I'm kind of throwing a lot of phrases at you but the idea is that you're probably familiar with most of these already uh and hopefully you're even able to use them as well to respect personal space to respect personal boundaries or to respect personal privacy those are commonly used phrases one thing I will say is that in this case we are using that possessive adjective like my personal space when we're using that like respect someone personal I think in that case you're overwhelmingly going to follow it with space to respect someone's personal space but once again um this is uh I I I thought this was a funny meme so I wanted to share it with you again try to bring a little humor into these lessons I think it's a fun way to uh you know learn the language so in this case it says dude you're in my personal space and yeah that is a great example of somebody you know not respecting uh another's personal space or those personal boundaries what do you think about this one um I'm sure many of you are familiar with this picture right here uh this scene was in the news very recently and there was a meeting of course between Trump and Zilinski and I could say that the meeting ended what how would the meaning end in this case I'm I'm using an adverb so I'll go ahead and tell you the part of speech sure there are other you know there are different answers you can give but uh I I wanted to share a few different collocations and then once again we're going to compare the the frequency the meeting ended badly yeah that that definitely works it did end badly um abruptly good answer uh this is a a good way to kind of exercise those vocabulary muscles because like I said it's not just one answer that you could uh use the meeting ended uh terribly uh that also works uh badly perfect so the well the one the word that I was thinking of and that I wanted to highlight because I think uh you know badly of course works well I think that is a very you know a common adverb if you wanted to be a little more precise um you could use a word like abruptly so abruptly means in a sudden unexpected and sometimes unpleasant way so I think it's a great adverb to describe you know how that meeting went it ended abruptly to give you a little more context I I shared some news headlines with you uh and it I didn't I came up with this sentence before I even found that news headline top moments from the Trump Zilinski meeting that ended abruptly yes um Kroger CEO abruptly resigns after probe into personal conduct and then finally China abruptly replaces tech behind AI and chip push so just keep that in mind this is a great adverb I don't think it's too advanced but if you're saying something happens abruptly or it ends abruptly it it's just a great precise word I told you that we're going to make some comparisons and once again I'm going back to engram viewer I don't know if I mentioned that before I can you can use this site if you to compare phrases and see how frequently they're used so I have ended abruptly um ended suddenly and ended unexpectedly because that is that is the meaning of abruptly and as you can see using ended abruptly is more commonly used than those other phrases so it is a great adverb to know well done all right I like uh I like these lessons when there's more than one response and you can kind of just think of different words that can go in there so what about this one this is a little more challenging because there is a specific word that I'm thinking of you won't get it it's an M joke so two things that I want you to keep in mind as you're trying to think of this collocation and it is a collocation with the word joke the first thing is that somebody's saying look you you won't get it you're not going to understand this and then they say it's an joke you see that uh article and so you know then that the next word is going to begin with a vowel sound so if we're keeping those two hints in mind you would say you won't get it it's an inside joke all right well done excellent saw a lot of great answers so if we're talking about an inside joke I've given you some other collocations that you would not put in this sentence but other collocations with joke as well as the meaning so an inside joke is one that is only understood by people with specific knowledge and hence that first part of the sentence look you won't get it it's an inside joke now another collocation a running joke is just a a joke that's repeated many times you could say something is a bad joke a joke that's not funny I am infamous on this channel for telling uh sharing some bad jokes with you uh and then if you say oh look it's a little joke it's a joke that is intended to be harmless so sometimes maybe you make a joke and somebody if they're getting upset you're like look it's just a little joke all right you're trying to say okay it's not supposed to be very harmful so hopefully again that if you're not familiar with these phrases that they make sense because you are going to come across them movies TV shows and just casual conversation they're useful what about this one right here this is a place that I I need to go uh very soon uh the dentist and the dentist you go into the dentist you sit down I'm sure you all are familiar with that chair right there and the dentist would say let me m a look at your teeth let me m a look at your teeth I think this is uh this is almost like a a kind of a standard sentence when you go into the dentist maybe they even uh maybe they even teach this at a dental school who knows but you would tell the person let me a look at your teeth there are two words that I think would commonly be used in this situation a look at something so that is for that let me take a look at your teeth all right excellent uh moving right along love it seeing these uh these hearts and emojis love it gets me going how about this this is something else I try to make uh these questions relevant I guess to my own personal experience like I said I need to go into the dentist this is something else that I need to uh I almost I don't want to give it away I almost actually end up saying the the word that's missing we're talking about taxes now is the time of year when I have to M my taxes once again there are you know several verbs that you could use in this context I'm going to point out one and then we'll we'll talk about some others so uh just looking at what some of you said uh yeah to do uh my taxes to file my taxes to pay my taxes all right so all of those are what I'm seeing in the chat everything these are collocations the one thing that I'd point out or the distinction that I want to make what what I said as far as like if I'm saying this to you I me personally I'd probably use dude like yeah now it's the time I got to do my taxes I'm not really looking forward to doing my taxes I just don't like doing my taxes I think it is changeable with file you could say I have to file my taxes in in my opinion it sounds maybe a little more formal to say to file your taxes I think this is more casual and just conversation to do uh my taxes the one thing that uh I wanted to point out with pay because you can pay your taxes but I feel like do and file would be a little more precise in this context because you're really preparing these documents you're doing your taxes sometimes you do have to pay other times you might get a refund so I when I think of to pay taxes I think of just uh talking about oh you know you have to maybe pay a sales tax or you have to pay an import tax or you have to pay income taxes so in that case I feel like you would often use pay in those situations but just as far as like this time of year annually you got to do your taxes you got to file your taxes once again in this case you can see it's a little more common to say to do my taxes than file but either one of those would work well in that situation again I know I'm giving you a lot of phrases hopefully some of these are new or even as I talk about them do your taxes file your taxes you think okay I've heard these before I have come across both of those verbs in that context it's all about building your vocabulary it's going to uh it's going to take a amount of effort to finish the project What word could you put in there a m amount of effort to finish the project so you can kind of probably put the collocation together an M amount of I mean we're talking about effort but it'd be an M amount of something again there are gosh there are in this case probably this one there are many different words that you could use to correctly complete this sentence I think once again when trying to come up with these words this is a great way to be more descriptive because you're adding instead of just saying hey it's going to take effort to finish this project you're adding another word that is going to be give gives the other person a little more information so just to read it somebody uh it's going to take an enormous amount of effort that that works a tremendous amount of effort eort a massive amount of effort uh yes um a large amount of effort uh there there are many great answers so one that I I have not seen that I'm going to highlight right now which again you can keep in mind this is one that I like to use and when we're talking about an amount of something this is a word that's often used a considerable amount of effort so a considerable amount of something it really just means the same as these other ones so I've already mentioned uh a few of them already a considerable amount of a tremendous amount of an enormous amount of a massive amount of or even to give you another one a substantial amount of all of these phrases would work in this context and one thing that I I talk about even uh as I would go through my speaking course is getting a little bit of language variety you don't want to just say okay every time I want to use this I'm only going to use tremendous amount of there's a tremendous amount of effort or I owe a tremendous amount of money or there's going to be a tremendous amount of rain you want to vary your sentences from time to time just to it it just is more captivating in that regard so all of these collocations work you could even use some of the others again the idea for this lesson is just to get the vocabulary juices flowing what I I want to explain something um what do you think our employees seem a little down we need to find a way to M morale so a couple of things I want to point out you say the employees seem a little down this is a phrase to say they're sad now the picture they do not look down all right this is uh kind of after after the fact then the employees look very helpful uh uh they look very happy so our employees seem a little down we need to find a way to M morale keep in mind that final word morale the pronunciation the stress is on that second syllable morale there are again there's a couple of phrases that I'm primarily going to highlight when you're talking about um morale whether it's employee morale or some other type of morale so the word uh excellent you could say yeah to uh boost morale to increase morale um to what else would uh lift up improve morale uh you could also use a phrasal verb bring up as well but the word that I had in there is to boost morale boost employee morale I I like this verb when talking about morale this is a common cocation it's not like you're going to use the the word boost in a lot of other circumstances but in this case it's it's a good one um some of them would work raise morale I don't think is commonly used I see upgrade I don't think I would use upgrade in this context as well I would stick with Boost uh bring up improve um what else did we see uh increase I don't I think somebody said uplift I don't even I wouldn't use uplift either in this context so I'm um comparing a few like right here to boost morale to lift morale that was another one that I had um I forgot to mention as well as to raise morale so if we're comparing those three phrases with those verbs boost lift raise you can see it's more commonly it's more commonly used to say boost morale because if you were just to look at those three verbs boost lift raise you're going to use verbs like lift and raise you're going to come across those verbs a lot more often than boost but like I said when we're talking about moral that is a that is a noun that is often used this verb noun col to boost morale something to keep in mind and again hopefully uh that makes sense and yeah you can go on to use it if you are I don't know a manager or you own your own company and you need to find a way to boost employee morale what do you think you can a good living as a computer programmer you can a good living as a computer programmer so we have this collocation uh we're missing a verb there are I think a couple of them well there two that primarily that I want to focus on and we're talking about I'll give you the collocation a living so we have to somebody said to earn a living lot many of you make a living and you got it you guys nailed it so again some of these phrases they they're very commonly used you've heard them before I hope I hope that you are able to use them if you're having a conversation you can make a good living as a computer programmer so that is the collocation but I told you to earn a good living as well I feel like to make a living or to earn a living or are common if we're going to use good in there I would use make and that is another part of this collocation to make a good living doing something otherwise you could just say to make a living to earn a living both of those are commonly used once again if I were just to compare those two make a living versus earn a living it is more common to use make a living and I don't know if you've noticed the the answers that I've been giving you when I make these comparisons those are the um the ones that I'm putting in there as the answer the one that is more commonly used because that that is the one that I want to highlight if you got that correct let me know you can uh uh hit that emoji the 100 the the like thumbs up whatever that tells me that yes you you you're you're you're getting most of these and that uh you understand them and you're able to use them perfect uh again I wanted to throw in this little joke here just to keep it loose uh this is uh this picture of Santa Claus with the reindeer what is that on your back hey deer's got to make a living and it's like he has this uh version of like door Dash uh that he's delivering food while they're delivering these presents uh love it how about this one don't work too hard this is just the beginning M your strength now this is a collocation that I think is often used as a standalone sentence M your strength so try to think about the first part in order to come up with that missing word don't work too hard this is just the beginning your strength which word would you put in there that would really fit this context and and complete this sentence and like I said I think you often would use this as a standalone sentence that you would be telling to someone else kind of like giving them a command and saying look M your strength there is a one word that I think is probably more commonly used than than some of the others write your answers in the chat in the comments I just love it when you all are participating in these lessons so the word that I think is definitely more commonly used in this context telling somebody to save your strength so once again I'm I'm going to give you some other collocations with save as well as the meaning down here because there are many collocations with these individual words so if somebody tells you look save your strength they're just saying don't waste your energy this is a common statement in this context I don't think uh I didn't compare them but I saw a keep in there like keep your strength I don't think it would work as well I would in this case in my opinion I would encourage you to use Save the if you're telling someone look save your strength uh you you you're going to need it later on save your strength you could also save someone a seat in that case you're reserving or you're keeping a seat for another person you might save yourself the trouble by you basically avoid involving someone in a useless effort like you don't need to get involved look just save yourself the trouble and then finally save the best for last you're going to keep something appealing until the very end these are some common collocations with the word save I know I'm giving you a lot here hopefully you're familiar with uh many of these already this is a well I'll tell you where I'm going with this in just a moment I'm very curious to see what uh responses people put in here this is taking too long you need to make a decision this is taking too long you need to make a decision and I'm kind of curious because this is a word uh I there is one that I think is more common than the others but it the the other way which I don't want to say it's not incorrect but it's one that I often hear and I I to generally tell people like hey I think I would use this verb instead um so a decision now like I said I thought it was something that might be more common in British English but just looking into it it's actually not this is an article from Grammar Girl which is a great resource great website where they really break down some of these things and in this case they were breaking down like take a decision or make a decision and it says some people say that take a decision is British and lots of British speakers deny using the phrase so it's like what's the story and I've only taken this one piece right here um but the article goes on to say based on different polls that uh most British people even say make a decision but as far as a reason why I hear foreigners say this second language speakers one thing is in many other languages in in their in your native language maybe it is take instead of make and it's just maybe a language translation thing than anything else so just something to keep in mind but in this case I would encourage you to just say like look I you know I've already made my decision or you need to make a decision and use make when talking about that noun here is is uh a little review these are all of the cations that we talked about in this lesson as well as uh many others that I I wanted to share with you but once again this is a great little exercise to build your vocabulary but again just get those vocabulary juices flowing this is something that we talk about in my speaking course again if you're interested in joining you can check out the link Down Below in the description and use that discount code um if uh if you would like like to speak with me and practice and improve your skills so I would recommend that you continue thinking about collocations or building your vocabulary using collocations because this is a great way to learn the phrases that are commonly used in just everyday conversation if you did learn something new you can hit that like button it always helps subscribe to the channel uh and and just continue building your VOC vocabulary so that uh you can be a little more descriptive and precise when you're having a conversation telling a story all of it really helps so thank you again for being here I hope you learn something new and I will see you really soon in the future for

Collocations to Supercharge Your Vocabulary (B2 + C1 + C2)

today I want to help you supercharge your vocabulary by learning many different collocations which are words that are frequently used together and when you use them in conversation it's just going to help you sound more natural so in this lesson I'm going to teach you over 50 different collocations ranging from levels B2 to C2 so the phrases that we're going to look at are more Upper Intermediate to advance now I'm not going to lie to you building your vocabulary is something that may take a considerable amount of time but learning collocations can be somewhat of a shortcut so let's begin with some B2 collocations and with a word that I've already mentioned considerable this is an adjective that means very large or much and there are some great adjective noun collocations such as a considerable amount of something previously I mentioned a considerable amount of time or you could say that you're making a considerable difference or you're making considerable progress or you have considerable influence over someone and this collocation you may follow it with that preposition over besides we have to do a considerable amount of paperwork but you might go back and use your considerable influence and ask your cabinet colleagues if they might reconsider and I am confident that learning collocations will make a considerable difference in building your vocabulary and if that is what you'd like to do please subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and if you follow my video lessons I think that you will make considerable progress okay see how just natural that sounds let's continue with our next set of collocations that have the noun feedback so this is information or statements of opinion about something such as a product and saying whether it's successful or liked so you may give feedback or provide feedback or even offer feedback and give provide an offer those are really synonyms you may also get feedback as well as receive feedback and once again get and receive those are synonyms and this may seem simple but this is when I hear people make mistakes and they may say tell feedback instead of give feedback so these are some great verb noun collocations there are also some very common adjective noun collocations because I think overwhelmingly people may talk about positive feedback or negative feedback of course getting feedback is extremely important when it comes to improving your English skills and a great way to receive feedback is to take lessons and that's why I want to talk to you about cambly who is the sponsor of today's lesson cambly is an online platform for English Learners and they just launched new group lessons and I was selected to test out the launch and I really enjoyed the class because all of the lessons have a specific curriculum to help guide students through the conversation the agenda of group lesson is so the group lessons are one hour long classes with a native tutor you and a couple of other students which is a great opportunity to connect with students from other countries and have real life conversations so this is the topic it can be a recent or favorite holiday celebrating birthdays in a new year I will start with you how we go for recent or favorite holiday these are daily conversations that you might have with a friend a colleague or even a family member but you get to have fun and share things about your country your culture or even your community is there like a stigma on that if somebody has a sandwich or is it it's not a big deal or people every mom every every mom and Aunt would be like ah shame on you you didn't prepare your lunch what's going on right now with the launch of group lessons cambly is offering an exclusive price just for you but it's only valid for one week so click on the link in the description to take some group lessons and improve your English fluency the discount is also valid for one-on-one cambly lessons and after one week you can still use the link to get a free trial if you'd like to test out cambly in order to practice and improve your English which is what it's all about let's continue with many more collocations the next word that I want to look at is deeply we're going to mix it up with an adverb so deeply means extremely or strongly and it is a great way to add emphasis so there are some adverb adjective collocations that will may have a positive connotation or a negative connotation let's start with a negative you may say that you are deeply worried about something or deeply concerned about something so either of those colleague you may follow with that preposition about you could also refer to something or someone as deeply flawed so in this case you may be talking about a deeply flawed plan or maybe a deeply flawed individual I'm deeply worried about aging the US is deeply concerned about escalating conflict that will not end well for either side he's deeply flawed and somehow somehow some way we raised a child for those that may be a bit more positive if you're apologizing you could say that you are deeply sorry or maybe you were deeply moved by something and it just affected you emotionally and you're going to follow this with by or you could say that you are deeply in love he is deeply sorry I told him that I was deeply moved by a statement I was in love with her and she was in love with me we were so deeply in love then we have the word controversial and I have two different sets of collocations with this noun which means causing disagreement or discussion so let's start with some adjective noun collocations maybe you're going to debate a controversial issue or say that someone made a controversial decision or if you're talking about a person you could say well this person is a controversial figure and I'm sure right now you can think of someone who you would refer to as a controversial figure and they're really causing disagreement and then there are some common adverb adjective collocations if you want to say someone or something is extremely controversial or highly controversial and we can build on top of this and say that someone is a highly controversial figure and now we're using them all together can you think of someone who you would consider a high really controversial figure let me know down in the comments then we have the word wisdom which means using knowledge or experience to make good decisions and there are only two collocations that I want to look at the first one is an adjective noun collocation which is conventional wisdom and in this case the meaning changes slightly so if we're talking about conventional wisdom it refers to opinions or theories that have existed for a long time and that most people agree with and this is a common collocation conventional wisdom conventional wisdom suggests that our next move is to resume hostilities to fight well conventional wisdom says good fleeing will always be good chasing but the stats say put your money on the guy with the gun I have another adjective noun collocation except this time wisdom is the adjective and I'm talking about a wisdom tooth or wisdom teeth so this is the last tooth to come in at the back of each side of your upper and lower jaw and often you may have to get well this tooth or even the teeth remove your wisdom tooth or wisdom teeth dental emergency I'm getting my wisdom teeth pulled all of the extra painkillers that I had left over from my wisdom let's move on to some C1 words and some of those common collocations and we'll begin with the verb call so this is a verb that has well multiple meanings but in this case we're talking about arranging for something to happen such as a particular event and usually Something official and there are some great verb noun collocations such as to call a meeting or more specifically to call an emergency meeting and you could also call for something and we're going to follow the verb with four and I have a few different examples you could call for a strike or call for an election or call for a halt to something those are some great collocations with this verb next is the word tedious it's a word that I don't really like the meaning of it but I like using it because it's very descriptive it's an adjective that means boring or uninteresting so we can use this to describe some specific nouns and those are the collocations you might talk about a tedious job or tedious work or even a tedious task so once again job work task they're similar they're synonyms but great nouns to use with this adjective very selection is tedious work it's the only way to get through yet another tedious and useless task and then let's throw in a phrasal verb why not bubble over and we're going to follow the phrasal verb with the word with to Bubble over with something it means to be very excited or enthusiastic and there are some great phrasal verb noun collocations such as to Bubble over with excitement or to Bubble over with enthusiasm or even to Bubble over with emotion and hopefully it makes it a little easier to grasp these collocations because excitement enthusiasm emotion once again they're really synonyms I am bubbling over with excitement to continue teaching you more collocation with the next word which is burning and no I'm not talking about fire this word has a couple of different meanings and I want to talk to you about collocations with each so the first meaning would refer to something that is very strong and there are some great adjective noun collocations like a burning desire or a burning ambition so it's a great way to add emphasis firefighters have a passion for their work arsonists just have a burning desire is that even a joke it's a word player parody the next meaning is a subject or question that must be dealt with or answered quickly and there are also a couple adjective noun collocations with this meaning maybe you're talking about a burning issue or even a burning question so again we're really adding emphasis because we're not talking about a normal question we're talking about a burning question you look like a boy with a burning question one that my tarot cards can answer better than any book then we have the verb capture and the meaning that we're going to talk about is to feel interested or excited by something and there are a few different verb noun collocations such as to capture the imagination or to capture the attention or to capture the interest and you could follow each of these collocations with the word of to capture the imagination of someone we could also put a pronoun between the verb and the noun I could say that well someone's trying to capture the audience's attention or something captured my imagination and I hope that this lesson has captured your interest and if it has and you've learned something new you can let me know by hitting that like button let's continue with some C2 Words which are a little more advanced and we'll talk about some of those call locations and we'll begin with the word underlying this means that something is real but it's not immediately obvious I have several adjective noun collocations like an underlying cause or an underlying condition and these you may hear somebody use medically perhaps a doctor May talk about an underlying condition or the underlying cause of some illness as of right now the mortality rate is fluctuating between 25 and 30 percent depending upon underlying medical conditions you could also say that something is the underlying principle or perhaps an underlying motivation maybe you want to improve your English for more work opportunities but perhaps you also maybe want to date someone and have the relationship in English and you could say that maybe that is an underlying motivation it's real but it's not obvious next is the word framework we're talking about a system of rules ideas or beliefs that is used to decide something and you may hear people use this word with a few different adjective noun collocations talking about a legal framework or a regulatory framework or even a theoretical framework then there's the word expenditure which refers to the total amount of money a government organization or even a person spends and a few different adjective noun collocations include government expenditure or annual expenditure or even personal expenditure we also have a couple of verb noun collocations such as to cut expenditure or even to reduce expenditure something that I think many businesses try to do with current and projected deficits we need to cut expenditures by 32 percent then we have the word literal it refers to a words original or basic meaning and there are a few different adjective noun collocations that I want to share with you you may talk about the literal meaning of something or perhaps the literal interpretation or even use it in the phrase in a literal sense what's an and the 7g677 the black hole and what sounds in a literal sense and then finite I don't know why I said it like that finite this adjective means having a limit or end and a few different adjective noun collocations with this word include finite resources or a finite number or a finite amount those are some great phrases with this word we just learned a lot of different collocations and I do not expect you to remember all of these I think you're probably already familiar with many of these words but it's all about recognizing which words are frequently used together that's what collocations are and your brain is going to start recognizing that pattern so that when you're having a conversation you're just going to end up using the words together and you'll sound a lot more natural if you enjoyed the lesson and learn something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so

Collocations w/ Make, Have, Take, Give | Supercharge Your Vocab

Let's really build your vocabulary. And I know I say that a lot, but this time I really mean it. I want to help you supercharge your vocabulary with some common and useful collocations. You notice these verbs: make, have, take, give. We use them all the time. And collocations, it's an excellent way to build your vocabulary, really take it to the next level. And if you would like to get these lesson notes next to me, click on the link down in the description, join my email community, you'll have access to the notes, and then in the future I will send notes to you. So, if you're already a part of uh check your inbox, I have messaged them or I've sent them out. Let's just begin with the the main question, which possibly is review.

What are collocations? These are This is when you have a word or phrase that is often used with another word or phrase in a way that sounds correct to people who have been speaking the language for their entire lives. So, when I just to give you an example, make a mistake. Have fun. Take a bath. Give advice. You may be looking at this like, "Okay, I know these phrases." And that's great. This is not necessarily about learning a bunch of new words and phrases and vocabulary that people may not use. This is about reinforcing the vocabulary that you're going to come across in everyday conversation. So, my hope is that you're familiar, especially with these, as well as some of the other ones that I'm going to use with make, have, take, and give.

I already mentioned these are incredibly common verbs, but I I tried to choose some phrases that were a little more advanced and may maybe you learn something new. At least that's my hope. But, I will still say that I often hear people make small mistakes. For example, instead of saying make a mistake, I might hear somebody say do a mistake. So, this is really important when it comes to speaking accuracy. Let's begin, because this is a quiz lesson, and I I want you to participate. Write your answer in the chat. Basically, which verb are you going to choose? Make, have, take, or give? For bonus points, see if you can use the correct conjugation of the verb as well as the verb tense. So, the the first sentence, her keynote speech mm a lasting impression on the audience.

Which verb completes this sentence so that this is, you know, what I would say. And I feel like hopefully again, this is a little easier than some of the other vocabulary lessons, because these are phrases. These are collocations you're going to come across regularly. Her keynote speech mm a lasting impression on the audience. In this case, when you're talking about an impression, a lasting impression, you're going to use make, to make a lasting impression. I'm giving you the meaning up top here, which means to be remembered for a long time. Her keynote speech made a lasting impression on the audience. So, this is it's a good thing if you are able to make a lasting impression on someone.

And there are other collocations to make a good impression on someone. And in that case, they remember you and they think favorably of you whenever you make a good impression on someone. I hope that I make a good impression on you. And if that's the case, please go ahead, subscribe, turn on notifications. That way I can become your teacher. My name is West, the channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. I thought I'd I I forgot about that introduction part right there. So, you like I just slipped that in there using that phrase, to make a lasting impression. Here is the next sentence. He was going to quit, but he mm a change of heart after the meeting.

You I'm I'm giving you your options right now with either make, have, take, give. Of course, the the verb tense uh you may need to change it to the past or the conjugation. So, just keep that in mind if you want to be incredibly precise as we go through and uh complete these sentences. He was going to quit, but he mm a change of heart after the meeting. Of course, in this case, the expression or our part of the collocation is a change of heart. So, which verb are you going to use? See some great answers in there as far as using yes, the verb have. And in this case, we'll use it in the past. He was going to quit, but he had a change of heart after the meeting.

This is to change your opinion or decision. Now, I will say that it's not always interchangeable with you change your opinion, because to to give you a little more nuance, whenever you have a change of heart, it's often something that is meaningful or more important to you. So, I if we're talking about what to eat for dinner, are you going to have the pizza or the pasta? I'm not going to say, "Well, I was going to get the pizza, but then I had a change of heart, and I'm going to have pasta."

resignation. This one I think is a little more advanced, this collocation, but still one that you may come across if you're listening to a podcast or reading the newspaper. His comments rise to rumors about a potential resignation. Are we going to use make, have, take, or give? Of course, the collocation is to rise to something. So, all [laughter] right. Well done. Well done. To give rise to something. His comments gave rise to rumors about a potential resignation. Whenever you say something gives rise to something else, it refers to to cause or result in something. And you would say something gives rise to this thing. And that that is referring to the the cause or result. Um Good phrase to know, maybe a little more advanced, but every time I say that, everybody seems to get the correct answer. Well played, everyone.

Let's just move right along. I'm going to I'm going to run through these uh today. She tried to make amends by apologizing to him. She tried to make amends by apologizing to him. The collocation we're This is a verb noun collocation, amends. And basically, if you're not familiar with this word, I think you can kind of figure it out based on the context. But, which verb are we going to use with amends? Make, have, take, or give? I You guys are are rocking this, but this is good. This is a good thing. This is what I wanted, because this is reinforcing vocabulary that is commonly used. To make amends. Whenever you make amends, you do something to correct a mistake or injury.

So, I could say, "Oh, I made a mistake. Look like I'm trying to make amends." I'm trying to make up for this mistake. They're really interchangeable, but instead of saying like, "Oh, I'm trying to make up for a mistake," I want to make amends, especially when talking about another person. You're trying to make amends with someone and make everything right because of a mistake or or injury in this case. I'm too busy tonight, but I can I almost [snorts] said the verb, so I stopped myself. Hopefully, you didn't catch the first sound. But, I can mm a rain check on that dinner. Too busy tonight, but I can mm a rain check on that dinner. This is an idiom, really, but I could say it's a collocation, because these are words that are frequently used together. When talking about a rain check, I just said that is an idiom, which verb are you going to use?

And this is I I think this is more of an American idiom. And I don't think you'll come across it or use it as much in British English. Just something to know. And uh well done. Excellent uh Lolly, Rachel, Julia, Miranda. Well done. Just give couple quick shout-outs to take a rain check. Whenever you take a rain check, you decline an invitation now, but suggest doing it later. So, I'm too busy, but I can take a rain check on that dinner. To give you some nuance, I feel like and and maybe this is more my opinion, but I'll share it with you anyways. Sometimes you might hear people use take a rain check, and deep down they really don't want to do this. And instead of saying like, "Look, I just I don't want to meet you for coffee," you kind of put it off and postpone it. So, you say, "Look, I'll take a rain check." So, we can't meet you right now, but let's take a rain check, and then we'll see if we can figure things out later. But, I feel like often when people use this, maybe their intention is not to do the thing later, but they'll they'll still use this idiom. Here is your next question.

She her boss a wide birth whenever he's in a bad mood. This is an a phrase that is a little more advanced, but which verb are you going to complete this sentence with? Make, have, take, or give. The collocation is to someone a wide birth. So, that that is the collocation. Which verb will you use in that context? And of course, I'll I'll tell you the meaning of the the collocation. She gave. Or she gives her In this case, whenever he's in a bad mood, we'll use the the present simple. She gives her boss a a wide birth whenever he's in a bad mood. If you give someone a wide birth, or to give a wide birth, it just means to keep distance from someone or something. Maybe I think it often implies that there's a lot of there's some negativity that you want to keep your distance from, and therefore you give someone a wide birth if they're in a bad mood, or there's some other situation that you kind of you just want to keep your distance from. So, you'll give someone or something a wide birth and just stay away in that case. Well done. Excellent. Here is your next question, because I do have quite a few of these collocations for you this afternoon. The incumbent usually the upper hand in local elections. I think this is commonly used, and I'm sure you've heard this collocation before, especially if you are someone who likes getting exposure to English movies, books, music. You will hear this uh this collocation. I'm using it in the context of an election. The incumbent, the person who is already in power, usually the upper hand in local elections.

When talking about the upper hand, we're going to use the verb have. I'm kind of speaking slowly just kind of d- dragging it out dragging it out. is the upper hand in local elections. Whenever you have the upper hand, it means and somebody or some group may have the upper hand, and they are in an advantageous position whenever you or someone else has the upper hand. Great phrase, great collocation to know, and and listen for as well. I told you you will come across it.

for finding the best deals at the market. The phrase, and we're talking about this idiom, to a knack for something. So, she a knack for finding the best deals at the market. Which verb are you going to use to complete this phrase that I have talked before in maybe even a few lessons. I I don't know. But it's one that I I like to use because instead of saying like, "Oh, you're you know, you're really talented. You're good at something. You have this natural ability to do something." Instead, I would say, "You really have a knack for whatever it may be." If you have a knack for something, it means that you have a natural skill or talent.

She has a knack for finding the best deals at the market. And you could use that phrase I don't want to say it's informal, but it's a fun one because I think we can relate to it. We're talking about somebody's skill or ability, and you know, he or she has a knack for whatever activity we may be referring to. Here's the next one. The stress of the move is a toll on her health. What do you think? Are we going to use make, have, take, or give with this collocation to a toll on someone or something? The stress of the move is a toll on her health. If I'm going to be super strict and a bit of a stickler, think about the conjugation.

You know, think of how how are you see you see the verb to be there. So, if there was just one correct answer, then in this case, you should use the verb taking. This is in the continuous tense. The stress of the move is taking a toll on her health. If something takes a toll on your health, it just refers to this really bad effect on something or someone over a period of time. And I think that is a collocation, you know, take a toll on someone, but also even adding health. Saying something It's just not it's had a bad effect on my health. Something is taking a toll on my health, or something has taken a toll on my mental health. So, even adding health in there as part of the collocation is uh is a phrase that you will come across, especially when talking talking about your health, because I think there are many things that we do that may take a toll on your health.

I felt like the rest of the group was me the cold sho- shoulder. This is an idiom. Are we going to use make, have, take, or give in order to complete this idiom? This collocation, when you're in this situation, it's not good if this is how you feel. I felt like the rest of the group was me the cold shoulder. In this example, you're going to use the verb give. To give someone the cold shoulder, but in this specific sentence, then you see that verb to be, giving. Was giving me the cold shoulder. To give someone the cold shoulder is to intentionally ignore someone or be unfriendly. It's not a good thing. It has a negative connotation. If someone is giving you the cold shoulder, and it's also not nice if you are giving someone else the cold shoulder.

Well done. I see a lot of correct answers in there. You guys are rocking this. The next question, don't a snap decision when buying a house. Don't a snap decision when buying a house. Which verb is going to complete that collocation? And this is another one that I I really I would hear people make small mistakes, especially with this noun that I'm going to talk about in in just a second. Don't a snap decision when buying a house. So, we're talking about a collocation with the noun decision. Now, you could add more information to it when talking about a snap decision, but you're still going to use the verb make. To make a snap decision. Don't make a snap decision when buying a new house. So, you would make a decision, but if we're being a little more precise, making a snap decision means to decide very quickly without much thought. And you just you make a snap decision.

The mistake that I sometimes hear, especially when talking about a decision, is using take. Now, I think take is more accepted in British English, but still I think overwhelmingly when talking about the noun decision, even in the UK, people are more often going to use the verb make. To make a decision, or in this case, to make a snap decision. And we're just saying you decide on something very very quickly. Here's my next sentence. He's late often, but I'll him the benefit of the doubt. This is a I I think I've taught this before. This is one that I've taught in my speaking course. For for those of you who have have joined my speaking course, you should remember this phrase.

He's often late, but I'll him the benefit of the doubt. Which verb are you going to use with that collocation? Make, have, take, or give. In this case, we're talking about the phrase Well done. Well played, everyone. To give someone the benefit of the doubt, or to give the benefit of the doubt. You believe someone even if you aren't certain they're telling the truth. So, you're a little skeptical, but you're like, "Okay, I'll believe this person. I will give him or her the benefit of the doubt." He's late often, but I'll give him the benefit of the doubt that maybe something happened this morning that caused him to be late, and it's not as it's not what you think. It's not because this person's lazy. Maybe they had a they hit a lot of traffic, and you will give give him the benefit of the doubt.

Family obligations often mm precedence over social events. I think this is true. I think many of us, you know, we agree with this. So, which verb? Which verb? Can we agree on the verb that you're going to use to complete this useful collocation? Family all of obligations often mm precedence over social events. Make, have, take, or give when we're talking about precedence. That is the the noun that I want you to keep in mind when you're completing this sentence. So, family obligations often I don't see I don't see any answers for this one. Uh What do you think? It's not give. Not have. Oh, maybe this one is a little trickier. You're going to say that something often takes precedence over something else.

Family obligations often take precedence over social events. So, to take precedence over something is to be more important than something else. And therefore, you would say, "Well, yeah, this really takes precedence over this other thing." Here is the next one. Now I now I see all these takes in there. All right, well done. Well done. Maybe it was a delayed uh in the with the chat. Uh Their lack of preparation mm a mockery of the entire prepa- uh presentation. Their lack of preparation mm a mockery of the entire presentation. So, we're talking about a mockery. That is the what verb are we going to use to complete that collocation? In this case, we're going to use I'm speaking slowly just to see if we can elicit some responses, but it's okay.

Their lack of preparation made a mockery of the entire presentation. So, it's already happened. It's a finished action. We're going to use the verb in the past tense, and it made a mockery of something. To make a mockery of means to make something just seem ridiculous or useless. And in this situation, you're supposed to prepare for a presentation, be ready, but if you don't then if you're not ready and you didn't prepare, then you I kind of made a mockery. They didn't take it seriously. The whole thing just seemed ridiculous. Whenever you or someone else makes a mockery of something. Great phrase. Here is the next one. Don't mm your friends for granted.

Tell them you appreciate them. This is true, and I do not mm you for granted. I really appreciate all of your support. I really appreciate when you hit that like button. I appreciate when you subscribe and write to me in the comments, and I certainly don't mm you for granted. Giving you another context, and of course, you can pick out the collocation mm someone for granted, and we're going to use like many of you said the verb take. To take for granted means to fail to appreciate something because it is always there. That is if you take something for granted, but often I think you might use it like in this uh example right here or like I was talking about you and saying that you uh the opposite.

You know, I don't take you for granted or don't take this for granted in order to say that you appreciate it or that you should appreciate it, and we could use it with the negative. Here we go. What do you think? I can sleep well because I mm a clear conscience about my decision. Are we going to complete this sentence with make, have, take, or give? I can sleep well because I mm a clear conscience. That's the collocation. So, which verb are you going to use with that noun, a clear conscience? So, you are going to use What? [laughter] What do you think? All right. Yes, we're going to use the verb have. To have a clear conscience. I can sleep well because I have a clear conscience about my decision. Whenever you have a clear conscience, you feel that you've done nothing wrong. You feel like you did the right thing, and therefore, you can say, "I have a clear conscience. I think everything was fine was fine. It was okay. I did things correctly." And therefore, you have a clear conscience.

Here are all of the collocations from the lesson. I think you all did exceptionally well, and that was my hope because these are verbs that you're going to use all the time, make, have, take, give, and try to listen for these phrases. I told you that I I wanted to make them a little more advanced. Probably some of them a lot of them were more intermediate, and I really hope that this lesson makes a lasting impression on you, and I also hope that you go on to watch another video lesson. Even if you want to make a snap decision, that's okay. Please don't tell me like, "Look, I'll take a rain check." Because that might make me think, "Okay, you're not really going to do this later." Because learning English should take precedence over everything else in your life. Of course, that's not true. I just want to use the phrase. And uh yeah, I I know that you have a knack for building your vocabulary, learning new words, going out and using them, and um yeah, I believe you. I will give you the benefit of the doubt. So, that just trying to give you a little review. Use these phrases in context as I wrap things up. But if you enjoyed this lesson and you learned something new or you just feel like you got some good review, let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching, and I will see you soon.

Common Expressions Using the Word BABY

So today I want to teach you English expressions that are all related to babies. You're not looking at the camera. Hey everyone. My name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today I am doing a collaboration. It is a daddy daughter collaboration because I have our little girl Emi and she's going to do this lesson with us because the lesson is all about babies and different expressions in English that are, well they have to do with babies and they're related to babies. So the first thing that I want to talk to you about are different similes.

Now if you don't know what a simile is, it is a comparison. You're comparing two things and you're using the words like or as in order to make that comparison. So as you can probably guess, the similes that I'm going to talk to you about have to do with babies and you are comparing something or someone to a baby. So the first simile that I want to talk to you about is to cry like a baby. And if you say that somebody is crying like a baby, then that that just means that they are crying and I often think we use it in the context that somebody is complaining about something.

Usually you would refer to an adult. Are you?...What are you?... Are you complaining? What are you complaining about? They're complaining about something they probably shouldn't complain about and say, wow, you're crying like a baby. Stop crying like a baby. You shouldn't be complaining about this thing. You were huddled in a corner crying like a baby. Do you want to say a grown man cry like a baby? It's funny how a man reacts when his heart gets broken. Some break down and cry like a baby. I remember just crying like a baby. Crying like a baby or crying like someone in college. Then there is also the simile as helpless as a baby.

So when you think of babies, you think about, well okay, what are some things they do? They do cry a lot and they are well, they are pretty helpless as well. So if you want to describe somebody who is very helpless, they can't do anything on their own, you can say, wow, you're, you're as helpless as a baby. Are you? Are you pretty helpless? You're not that helpless are you? What do you think? Who stood by helpless as a baby. He was totally helpless baby when we met. Just like our relationship. Healthiest little baby in need of tender loving care. So she is getting a little tired of sitting here. So we're going to keep moving.

We're going to get going and I'll continue the lesson and just one second. Ready? You always got to stay on the move with these little ones. So I want to continue talking to about another similarly, which is one that I think is very common and that is to sleep like a baby. And what it means is just to sleep really. So for example, maybe you're, you're traveling and the next day somebody asks you, you know, Oh, so how did you sleep if you slept well you could say, wow, I slept great, I slept like a baby. So again, babies, they like to sleep. I think it's very normal right now. Um, yeah, you're not asleep. It's about time for her nap, so hopefully soon she will sleep like a baby and sleep really well.

At least that's what I'm hoping for. She's got a fever. Okay. Give her two white ones and one blue one. She'll sleep like a baby. Yeah, when it's done. I'm going to sleep like a baby. So did you guys get much sleep because I wouldn't have. I don't know about Emily, but I slept like a baby. Drove all night. And you slept like a baby. Do you want to stay here?. Where do you want to keep going? What do you, what do you want to do? What? What do you want to do? What do you want to do little bear, huh? All right, let's keep going. So we are back home after a nice walk outside.

What do you think? And we're ready to continue the lesson. Let's see. What does this look like? Is that framed up really nice? What do you think? All right. You ready to continue the lesson? Yeah. Yeah. I can't do it without you. You're a very important part of this lesson. So I want to do one more simile. that has to do with babies and that is as soft as a baby's bottom. You could also use this Emily, as smooth as a baby's bottom. And again, this would just be referring to, well a baby's bottom that it's soft or smooth. And in this, I think you would be comparing something you're talking about perhaps some clothing, maybe some type of fabric, and you just want to say that something is very smooth.

The way it feels know like, ah, it's as smooth as a baby's bottom, Oh so smooth. It's like a baby's bottom. Smooth as a baby's behind. Or perhaps it's just very soft, like a cushion or a pillow. It's as soft as a baby's bottom. I have very sensitive skin. Soft as a baby's bottom. Do they make my skin soft as a baby? You decide. And I think this simile, yeah, it makes sense because baby's bottoms there, they're pretty soft. They're pretty smooth. And if you've never touched a baby's bottom, you're just going to have to take my word for it. Yeah, it's pretty soft. It's pretty smooth.

The next expression that I want to teach you. We're going to move away from similes right now and that is to have a food baby, and what this means is that when somebody eats a lot of food, they eat a very big meal too much. Perhaps their stomach hurts a little bit and it's really, they feel like their stomach is really large. They might say, Oh, I have a food baby. Often I think it's used jokingly that if someone does have a big meal and perhaps they've, they're just too full, they might say this. They might say, Oh, I have a food baby right now. They might say this because, yeah, it's like they a baby in their stomach except it's food instead of food baby.

Oh Marge. I'm giving birth to a food baby. It's probably just a food baby. Did you have a big lunch? This is not a food baby. Then we have an idiom which is to throw the baby out with the bath water. Now, this idiom I think, in my opinion, is a little more old fashioned. You may hear it from time to time if you're watching a movie or a TV show, uh, but what it means or where are you going, where are you going? You don't want to be a part of the lesson anymore. And what this means is to throw something out that is valuable, that is important and you do so accidentally because you think that you're getting rid of something that's worthless, that's not important, and you throw it out and then you realize that there was something valuable.

There was something important in there and you could say, well, I just, I threw the baby out with the bath water often I think it's used to talk about...perhaps an idea. Something that is first disregarded as well. This is useless. And then they come to realize that, wow, it was a great idea. And you could say, well, if they decided, they threw the baby out with the bath water. I didn't buy a single second of that, but let's not throw out the baby with the bath water. I think there's something here. All I'm saying is I don't want to throw the baby out with the water because you'll get a wet, critically injured baby.

We're not gonna throw you out with the bath water. Don't worry. Don't worry. We're not going to. Then we have the expression to be one's baby because, well, a baby babies, they're very important. They're very special. Everybody. Well, everybody loves their baby and if you save that something is one's baby, you're referring to perhaps a project and or or even a business, it just means that something is very, very important to that person, that sometimes for people it becomes so important. It's very meaningful for them to make it successful, to realize their dreams.

Another person might refer to it as their baby because it's important to them. It's very valuable. You could say, yeah, you know, it's like, it's your baby. This is your car? No, it's my baby. I feel real weird about tonight. You hear that folks, okay, this one's for Frank. This is his baby. Sleeping with your fanny pack? Golden jab. Yeah, it's my baby. And you. You are my baby. Yeah, yeah. Then we have the expression to leave one holding the baby and this is actually an expression that is more common in the U K so you would hear this more often in British English. And what it means is to leave someone and have them take the blame for something that happens and you would leave someone holding the baby. So for example, maybe there is a business.

Yeah, you don't want to leave someone holding the baby, do you? For example, maybe there is a business and the boss is doing something illegal. The employees know about it and before they get caught the boss just leaves and leaves the other one's holding the baby that they will take the blame for for any wrongdoing and you leave someone holding the baby. Where do you want to go? So we hope you learned some new expressions today and if you did hit that like button and I just want to give a special thanks to Emi for collaborating with me on this lesson. Thank you guys so much for watching and we'll see you next time. Bye.

Can you say bye bye. We've been working on this.

LESSON 258 OF 749

Common Expressions to Sound More American

Today, I am going to teach you some very American expressions that's coming up. What's up everyone? Welcome to interactive English, which is the place you want to be to practice and improve your English skills. And the way we're going to do that today is I am going to teach you some expressions that are very common in the US and these expressions may be used in other English speaking countries as well, but some of them are very specific to the US and as we go through them, I will let you know which ones those are. So let's begin with our first expression. And that is it's, it's one of my favorite expressions. It's very easy.

It's just one word. And that is whatever. Now, as a pronoun, we can use this word to mean well, a lack of restriction or limitations. And people might say something like, well, you can do whatever you want. You can say whatever you want in those comments down below, you can write whatever you want. No, I mean you're in good shape and you can eat whatever you want. Take whatever you want. Tell you what. You play whatever you want. But we can also use this word as an informal exclamation to show a reluctance to continue talking or to, to continue having a discussion. And it kind of just shows a bit of indifference. Like, you know, I don't care. It doesn't matter to me.

So when I think about the word being used like this, I think about people having an emotional conversation, maybe even an argument and one person just doesn't want to talk about it anymore. They may just say, you know what, whatever I'm done talking, whatever, Believe what would you want to believe? I don't even care. Whatever. You want to mount it on the left or the right or the middle? Whatever. The next expression is one that I use a lot. I like using this expression and it is informal and it's just my bad. And when somebody says my bad, they are acknowledging that that they made a mistake, they did something wrong and it's not really a really, really horrible mistake because then I think you want to be a little more apologetic. But if it's just something small and you're know, oh, okay, I did something wrong. My bad.

Often I think it's used quite frequently in sports. When you're having a competition and you play on a team and somebody makes a mistake and they'll just say, oh, okay, my bad. You will see this in basketball, soccer, football, and any team sport, somebody makes a mistake. They may, they may point to themselves and say, you know, Oh yeah, my bad. Sorry. My bad. Then we have an expression which, which is more of an idiom and that is to lose touch with someone and when you lose touch with somebody, it means that you just, you stop communicating with them. And I think common, it happens especially over a long period of time that we, we have friends, but then we lose touch as the years go on and on and on and you just, you're just not communicating with people.

I hope that we never lose touch and that you are constantly writing to me and communicating with me and, and we always stay in touch, which would be the opposite. That means you keep communicating. There's an extra one there for you, but if you don't want to stay in touch with me, whatever, I'm just kidding. My bad. I, I really, I don't want to lose touch with all of you. You know, after high school you just kind of lose touch Then we have an expression, which is, is definitely very American. It's part of the United States and that is to plead the fifth.

Now when somebody says, you know, Oh, I plead the fifth, then they may say it informally and you might hear this on TV and movies, but what it really means is that it's talking about the Fifth Amendment and in the u s constitution, the Fifth Amendment means that you, you don't have to talk about something because you don't want to incriminate yourself. Let me explain that in case it doesn't make sense that say that you are witness to something wrong, but you yourself also did something a bit wrong and they call you to testify against this other person. They say, oh, can I, I want you to tell us what happened, but you don't want to talk about it because you also did something a little wrong. You might say, you know, I plead the fifth.

I don't want to talk about this situation because basically I'm going to be admitting to a crime as well that I committed, so I'm going to plead the fifth. That's a little civics lesson for you, but this expression, it can also be used in situations outside of that context said, even if you're talking to your husband or wife about something and you, you don't want to be completely honest about a situation because maybe you did something wrong. You can say, ah, you know, I, I plead the fifth. Could I plead the fifth? The fifth is just used to protect yourself. I'm pleading the fifth. Just try to keep your secrets. I dare you.

you want to say. So keep that in mind. Don't confuse it with, I could care less. I couldn't care less. That's the one you want. Stick with that. You just want more money for yourself. Don't you? Couldn't care less. I couldn't care less about the commendation. Amy, thank you for sticking up for me. Oh, I honestly couldn't care less. Then we have another, I guess it's just one word and that is like, now I want to, I'm putting this in there just for your, your comprehension. Not for you to go out and use it. This is something that you might hear young teenagers use and they use it as a meaningless interjection when they're having a conversation just during their, their informal speech. It just may be riddled with like, like, like, like life and people get into these bad habits and it just takes time to grow out of them. So if you're watching a a TV show or movie that is about high school, then you might hear it a bit more so it's more for your comprehension, not for you to try and just go out and use and start using this.

It's just for you to be aware of it. So let me try to give you an example. So I like wanted to go to the movies this weekend with my friend, but she was like, I can't because I have to do my homework and we can like hang out that night, which meant I didn't do anything, which was like totally boring. Okay. All right. That, that sounded ridiculous, especially hearing me say that. But I'm going to say it again and now I'm just going to take out all of those likes and you tell me if you think it makes more sense. So I wanted to go to the movies this weekend with my friend, but she said she can't because she had to do homework and we couldn't hang out that night, which meant that I didn't do anything, which was very boring.

So as you can see, I think it's much easier to understand when we, when we take those likes out. But again, if you are listening to a teenager talk in the United States, especially, I think if you're in places like California, then you may hear this word used quite often in China on this deck. Chandler let it slip that process in love with Rachel. He was like, oh my God,

The next expression is to give someone props. And this is actually a bit of slang. It may be more regional and it depends on your age that that you might say this or maybe you might hear this expression, but to give someone props means that you are recognizing them. You are acknowledging them for for some reason something that they did. Again, it's very informal so think of it maybe in the [inaudible] just to give you an example at at work you're like, yeah my, my boss really gave me props for all the hard work I did. I want to give all of you guys props for watching our video lessons.

You guys are like the best. It's just, it just sounds awkward and unnatural. When I say like, like, like, like, like, Some people give you props for challenging the ghoulies to a race and beating them. I had to pop a cop because he wasn't giving me my props in Oaktown. You and your friends have accomplished the impossible. For that. I give you mad props. Then we have John Hancock. This is another one. It's very American. It's really just used in the United States. And you would talk about it in the context of, well, I need to get your John Hancock, or I need you to give me your John Hancock.

And when they're talking about your John Hancock, they're talking about your signature. So if somebody were to say, hey, you know, I just need to get your John Hancock right here. They're telling you, well, you need to sign right there. So where does this come from? Well, John Hancock supposedly was the first person to sign the declaration of independence, and when he signed his name, he signed it abnormally large. It's the largest signature on the Declaration of Independence. And people say that the reason that he did this is because the king didn't have very good eyesight and he wanted to make sure that, that he could see John Hancock's signature.

So now that name has now become a reference to somebody's signature. I need to get your John Hancock. Mr. Callahan, I need your John Hancock on these reports. If I could just get your John Hancock. Oh sergeant. So we'll just need your John Hancock right here. And now the old John Hancock. The next expression is, is it's also an idiom and that is to get ahead of oneself. And this just means that you are planning prematurely or maybe you're being a bit overconfident. So for example, if you are going to take a trip, but that trip is a long ways off. You don't really need to start planning now, but if you do plan now, somebody might say, look, okay, wait, you're getting ahead of yourself.

We don't need to start planning for this now. Or as far as overconfidence goes, perhaps you have an idea and you start thinking of this idea and all of the amazing things that can come out of it and you're like, oh, I'm going to do this and then we can do this. And then you start thinking about it and you're like, oh, maybe I'm starting to get ahead of myself and I just need to take it one step at a time. So if you're planning prematurely, if you're a bit over confident, then you might be getting ahead of yourself. Well, I told you that would learn better if I had a study buddy.

Don't get ahead of yourself. Maybe I'll call him pappy. Look at me. I'm getting ahead of myself. Might be a cause for celebration. Wow. Let's not get ahead of ourselves. The next expression is another one of my favorites. It's a very short, very simple three words. It's all good. And if somebody says, hey, it's all good, it just means that everything is fine. Often I think people might say it kind of in the context of, of telling somebody else to relax. All right, don't worry about this. Relax. It's all good. Perhaps somebody who's trying to plan prematurely and they're really getting ahead of themselves and they're like, oh, well, well you need to do this, you need to do that. And you would just tell him, hey, it's all good.

Don't worry about it. I got it taken care of. It's all good. It's all good baby. So what I want you to do now because I don't want to lose touch, is I want you to join our community and subscribe to our email list because we will send you some useful and free resources. We will give you access to the secret fluency lesson. All you've got to do is write your email and give us your John Hancock. So check out the link in the description. If you don't want to, it's all good, don't worry about it. You can just write to me in the comments, we can communicate there and I will give you some prompts. I will recognize you, I will acknowledge you and I will just keep using as many of these expressions as I can. So the, so that you have a better understanding of them and that you are more likely to remember. Thank you guys so much for watching. I hope you enjoyed this lesson. If you did hit that like button, like, like really hit it, hit, hit it like hit it really hard. All right and okay, enough of that. I will see you next time. So I like one [inaudible] so I like wanting to go to the front. So I like wanting to go to the movies with my friend, and he was like, well, I have to do my homework. So I had to like stay home and it was like so boring and I can't even, I can't even get through this.

Common Grammar Problems | Tricky Prepositions

all right think this is about started so hello and welcome whether you're watching this live or whether you are watching this later I hope you are having a wonderful day wherever you are in the world so today I want to talk to you about something that is very very important and that is prepositions little words that can create a big problem and trust me you know come here this is important because many people have these mistakes and we can correct them so let's start boom okay so I want to talk to you about these tricky prepositions specifically the prepositions and the verbs that they follow and when it comes to prepositions you know there is a lot um oh again if you're just joining us please uh say hello in the comments tell us your name where are you joining from would love to hear from you we have one message uh KOB sorry if I'm mispronouncing names hey how's it going um hope you're having a great Saturday so today we're going to talk about these prepositions and the verbs that they follow we're going to do these four prepositions right here about with four and two because when it comes to prepositions this is a big topic you have prepositions of time prepositions of place prepositions of movement today I want to just focus on certain verbs and the prepositions that they go with because again these are mistakes that Learners make it doesn't matter whether you are a beginner or whether you are an advanced learner people have uh trouble with prepositions and that's perfectly normal because they can be difficult to learn and they go pretty easily unnoticed So today we're going to talk about these prepositions and then at the end we are going to practice what we've learned so again stick with us get ready to do some interactive practice um again hello a job from Afghanistan um living in Sweden great to have you thanks for joining us um again if you've entered let us know say hello what's um you know where you're from love to hear from you guys so let's first start with answering the question as to why are prepositions so so hard to get right okay so the first thing you need to understand that there are two types of words prepositions are function words so we have function words and content words now your content words are going to be your nouns your verbs your adjectives like things that we can visualize in our mind and they really give meaning to the sentence function words which are prepositions are those little words that connect them they don't give much meaning to the sentence but they sometimes might tell us the relationship between um different words so even though they don't give much meaning they are very important because they connect them which means they are necessary for grammar again if you're just joining us we're going to talk about prepositions so again say hello say something in the chat tell us your name where you're from and if you really want to be a super student then you can share this video and help us spread the word to more so that nobody is having any trouble with prepositions so as I was saying prepositions are function words and because of that they are not stressed they're not emphasized when you're speaking and that really means again like I said they go unnoticed which means people tend to make some very simple and easy mistakes with them and it's one of those those things it's a mistake that most of the time people are still they're going to be able to understand what you're trying to say the message that you are trying to get across but if you're speaking with a native speaker people will pick up on this and of course if you're an English learner out there trying to improve your English all of us would like to improve and correct our mistakes so I want to talk to you about four prepositions and the verb they follow those four prepositions at the bottom there about with four and two and as we go along I'm going to be asking you guys to write sentences uh to practice using these prepositions and then at the end we'll do a bit of a practice so first let's look at about okay so I've given you the preposition about and the verbs that it follows okay yeah I'm from Iraq I really want to talk like a native speaker awesome if you want to talk like a native speaker that's great this is going to help you because prepositions like I said there there little tricky words that become very difficult and confusing and easy to make mistakes so again these are verbs that are followed by about okay you can be anxious about something okay uh you can argue about something I wrote that sentence down below they argued about the bad service maybe you go to a restaurant you get bad service and you argue about it you also care about something you can be uh also again in that sentence we care about each other all of us care about different things and you can also be excited about something this is a very common verb that people use excited what are you excited about in the comments right now if you're in this uh if you're watching us write a sentence practice using the preposition with the verb what are you excited about okay I'm going to write that question in there what are you excited about and I want you to use the verb and the preposition this is how we improve our language skills so that you start using it correctly okay tell me what you're excited about Wes is excited about the road trip all right I love to travel I love taking road trips I'm excited about it you can also be upset about something you know maybe you're upset about um not being able to attend this live lesson I have no idea or you can be serious about something um you can also be sorry about something or you can worry about it we said parents worry about their children um awesome example sentence somebody just wrote I'm excited about my trip to Ukraine perfect excellent use of the verb and the preposition that is perfect so again these are verbs followed by about now these are not all the verbs again I'm just taking bits and pieces because again this is a very difficult and large topic but these are good to keep familiarizing ourselves with the verbs and the prepositions that follow them so these are some verbs that are followed by about again in the comments tell me what you are excited about and keep practicing and practicing and practicing because practice makes perfect okay let's continue again if you're just joining us today let us know your name where you're joining us from practice write some stuff in the chat use these prepositions because it's going to help you learn all right let's look at the next one is with okay so here are some verbs that are followed by with all right first we have agree you can agree agree with someone um I don't agree with you I tried to write some sentences that are kind of common that you might hear in TV movies or that you would use in conversation if you say yeah I just don't agree with you you agree with someone or you don't agree with them angry okay I've put a little Aster next to angry and bored and this is where prepositions get tricky and confusing and frustrated um be frustrating because you can use more than one preposition with some verbs so you can be angry with someone you can also be angry at someone so this is something um that's a little difficult typically I would say you're more angry at a situation you can also be angry about a situation but for right now just focus on with you're angry with someone all right so we have some more s I'm EXC excited about writing every word you are saying excellent perfect um hello Raymond hi hello from Brazil excellent we're getting people from all over the world this is great so angry you know you're angry with someone you also bored with something okay what are you bored with all right I want you um well not yet we'll do it and just a second you can be bored with something I put an asterisk there cuz you can also be bored of something so with or of those are two different prepositions that you can use now you're probably sitting there wondering like well okay how do we figure this out how do we keep doing this are there any rules I I don't like to say try to learn a rule to figure out these little grammar nuances the best way to do it is to practice like we're doing now where you're actually learning directly about it or even just reading when you're reading you see how it's used in context and you start to internalize that information

next we have busy you are busy with something they are so busy with their work and family maybe they don't have time to do anything um so again in the comments let's practice this tell me what you are busy with these days what are you busy with are you busy with work are you busy with travel are you busy with your husband your wife your boyfriend your girlfriend are you busy with children tell me what you are busy with with these days again recommend write the comments read each other's comments because this is going to keep this is going to help you learn this is how you get better um here wrote someone here I'm bored of doing boring things perfect sentence that is perfect structure perfect use of the preposition you're bored of doing something um you can also say I'm bored with doing boring things same meaning this is why they're tricky um I'm excited about my weekend here in in Brazil somebody wrote excellent all right uh I'm excited about my weekend too and I'm excited about teaching you guys about prepositions um let's continue with our list so fed up if you are fed up it means that you are you are tired of something you're frustrated you can't deal with it anymore you are fed up with something or fed up with someone so I wrote in the sentence you might hear something like I'm fed up with this crap all right you're just tired of it you could also take crap and write another word in there some profanity starts with an s ends with a T is also something common that you might hear especially in movies in music um but again that's what it means you are fed up with something all right what are you um somebody oh uh

I'm busy running long dist with running long distances okay great um I'm also running long distances cuz Yana and I are training for a marathon later this fall though so we still have time I'm busy with my cat Perfect all right excellent again if you're joining us practice using these write it in the comments in the chat what are you busy with that was my question for you let's continue with our list presented um you can be presented with something so in this case if you are presented with something then you are getting something somebody is giving something to you all right you are presented with a present you apologize to someone but you apologize for something you know whatever the mistake was that is what you are apologizing for you also can apply for something in this case it's pretty much talking about a job the job um that that you're looking for you are looking for a job you are applying for a job again you can also use two if you're talking about something a little more specific maybe you're applying to University I'm applying to this University I'm applying to that University but if you're applying for something you're talking about maybe a position that you hope to get that you hope to obtain you also can be blamed for something as well as famous for something me famous for interactive English not really famous because there will only be hundreds of people that might watch this lesson but hey that's great I hope all of you learn a little something about these Tri tricky prepositions so uh another example sentence great I apologized um for my I apologize you would want to say I apologize to my boss for coming late um at at my job all right I apologize to my boss or I apologized for coming in late excellent you can also prepare for something all right you want to prepare I was trying to prepare for this lesson this morning that's what I was doing also you ready you can be ready for something this is a common question you're going to hear are you ready for this okay are you ready for this um as well as responsible you know you are responsible for something for doing something uh in that picture somebody spilled some wine that is not good and you might ask who is responsible for this okay and then the last one stand you stand for something things something you believe in something you are passionate about all right what do you stand for all right these are common verbs that are followed by the preposition four all right let's take a look at the last one and then we will do the practice okay again if you're joining us practice using these write some sentences in the the chat I will comment on them uh so let's look at the last one two all right so here we have all right um have another example set I'm preparing my mind for a camping activity okay I'm preparing maybe a little better say I'm preparing myself for something I'm preparing myself myself for a camping activity I'm preparing myself for a trip um two verbs that are followed by to all right remember you can apologize for something but you also apologize to someone Wes apologize to yuana for his mistake now this is probably something I probably don't apologize enough and Yana might agree with that but I apologize to Yana for my mistake whatever that is um or whatever that may be you apologize to someone again I said you also apply to something maybe you apply to a university um you apply for a job you apply to a university okay accustomed you are accustomed to something you're accustomed to doing something we we're accustomed to cold weather we are comfortable with it we are used to it you are accustomed to something addicted this is something you you hear all the time my question for you again is I'm going to write it in the chat what are you addicted to all right what are you addicted to yes you can be addicted to doing something or you can just be addicted to something all right people are addicted to YouTube I'm addicted to YouTube I don't know if you are addicted to YouTube we are on YouTube right now um but people can be addicted to things if you're just joining us we're talking about prepositions and the verbs they follow try using these in the sentence that is what I would encourage you to do write it in the chat produce the language that is how we all learn um now shortly we're just going to do a practice all right so tell me again what are you addicted to the other four verbs is attached you know attached to something we have uh that example sentence the note is attached to the message board all right that example sentence right down there all right and it says follow us on Facebook again check it out uh it's another great way to practice English look us up interactive English another okay another great example s I'm addicted to cycling and running awesome all right something that you really really love doing you are addicted to it it refer again you refer to something all right they're asking you to look at it to consult it to check something out you refer to it please refer to this please refer to that okay you can also respond to someone all right you are responding to um a comment all right we always try to respond to your comments so again even if you're not live and you're watching this later write questions write sentences in the comments write us questions in the comments and we will respond to you okay and last you can have something can be similar to something else okay so these are verbs that are followed by the prep uh preposition to again there are more verbs out there but we just want to stick with a few we don't want to make it too overwhelming okay I'm addicted to I'm addicted to using social media okay excellent um please share our videos on social media that would be awesome um so you're addicted to using uh social media that's perfect um again sh we had a question um should we use a noun after addicted to you can it's it's up to you you can be addicted to um coffee for example or you can use the Jaren after it I'm addicted to drinking coffee I'm Addicted to You said I'm addicted to cycling okay you're using the Jaren in that case so you can use just a noun or the Jaren again a Jaren technically is a noun so either one you can be addicted to something or you can be addicted to doing something either one all right are you ready so hopefully you hopefully you guys remember this all right I'm going to give you some sentences now and we are going to practice what we've learned okay so here I have given you a sentence with a blank and I want you to use one of those prepositions about with for or two to complete the sentence okay again even when you have these situations with prepositions because they're function words um and you're not sure which one to use I would again say just do go with what feels right just try it and then again the more you practice the more you will internalize this information and you will start using it correctly so this is good practice right now please refer the safety manual for more information okay so which one which preposition should you use in this sentence all right you refer something okay this is a sentence that you will probably hear um on uh if you're flying if you're traveling on a plane uh they go over a safety manual and they'll ask you to refer the safety manual so in the chat in the comments write which preposition you would use with this question all right please refer um the safety manual for more information and if you're not sure um oh I just shared your video with my friend awesome thank you um if you're not sure which preposition to use just write I don't know okay it's perfectly fine this is how we practice practice practice again if you're just joining us we're are doing a preposition practice so I'm giving you a little mini quiz right now um and I want you to write your answer in the chat okay if you're watching this video later years from now write the sentence in the comments okay again it helps to produce the language make it interactive make it more active learning not passive learning so we have some answers in there excellent all right so please refer if you're talking about the verb refer it is followed by two okay please refer to the safety manual for more information okay so the next one I just have six of these okay so it'll go quickly the next question I have for you boom right here the team is upset losing the match okay the team is upset losing the match what are you going to use what preposition follows the verb upset are we going to use about with for or to okay again this is stuff that uh you know these are common sentences that you might hear and and we use that verb upset all the time all right but what preposition follows that verb write your answer in the chat okay are you going to use about with for to two the team is upset losing the match okay so we got some answers remember if you're talking about upset I the the complete one is the best answer about okay you are upset about are losing the match we had somebody answer said upset with okay let me make a quick distinction now so you are again you can use with after upset you're usually upset about something or you would be upset with someone so if you're talking about a person like yeah I'm upset with her I'm upset with him I'm upset with my children I'm upset with my parents you would talk about people all right if you're using with upset with someone but if you're talking about something a situation all right you're going to use about I'm upset about losing the match all right so that is a quick distinction let's do another one ready here is the question I want you to write in the preposition okay we stand Justice and equality all right which preposition follows the verb stand okay write it in the chat we stand Justice and equality okay remember uh I said like a common question people might ask um they would say what do you stand all right they're asking you about your beliefs what do you think okay you stand Justice and equality okay which one do you think are we going to use about with for or two okay so again I if if you're not sure just write it in there take a guess again it doesn't matter if it's wrong or right this is all to practice okay and I'm going to make some comments because these are tricky especially because depending on the context you can use more than one preposition all right so if we are talking about stand remember I said you stand for something okay what do you believe in okay I Stand For Justice and equality that's what I believe in that's what I want that's what I'm passionate about um we had one person answer stand with again you can use that I would say you stand with someone all right if you're saying like Okay I'm on your side I stand with her I stand with him all right in that case you can also similar meaning you stand by someone okay you you are with them you believe believe in them you support them you stand by someone you stand with someone okay but if you're talking about their beliefs kind of like um and it's mostly talking about you in this context when you say stand for what do you stand for I stand for this I stand for that okay let's do another one okay this is a good one how about this question what are we going to put in there which preposition boom okay I'm fed up these tricky prepositions okay when we're talking about Fed Up what are we going to use are we going to use about with for or two I'm fed up these Tri tricky prepositions remember I said Fed Up it means you're kind of you're you're tired of this you you don't want to deal with it anymore you are just fed up something okay which preposition are we going to use okay if you are fed up if you are fed up we would want to use with remember you are fed up with these tricky prepositions it's pretty much also a three-word phrasal verb because you're fed up with something okay you are tired of it um you are fed up with with all right so excellent let's keep going all right I have all right two more questions two more let's do two more um here we go so try this one all right this is uh a common sentence that you would hear TV movies in conversation if you're talking about um the verb worry all right I'm really worried you all right I'm really worried you you know what what's the most technically you might be able to use more than one but what is the most appropriate one that that people would use you know I'm really worried you okay which one uh are we going to use everybody's answering excellent excellent excellent correct you worry about someone I really worry about you okay what are you worried about I'm worried about this situation I'm worried about that situation I'm worried about this person that person um you worry about someone or something next one let's look at this okay here we go [Music] and Bam I need to prepare my job interview which preposition is going to follow prepare I need to prepare m my job interview again if you're watching this later on write the answers in the comments produce the language it's going to help you if you have any questions write them in the comments as well we will answer we will respond to you so which verb which preposition are we going to use with prepare I need to prepare my job interview um Estella hi how's it going welcome um again we're doing some prepositions I I want you to write your answer in the chat okay what are we going to use with prepare all right we got some answers in there excellent so I need to prepare for my job interview okay remember you prepare for something all right so again we talked about these prepositions and the verbs that they follow this is a great way to practice reading is another great way to practice if you're watching TVs or movies using subtitles is a great way to practice because again A lot of times um especially if you're just listening that's why reading is so important because you're seeing the preposition when you're just listening a lot of times it's difficult to pick up on those prepositions because we're emphasizing the content words not those function words and they're easily um they go unnoticed for the the most part so I want to thank all of you guys for joining us um I really appreciate it if you are watching this now or watching it later if you're watching this now please give it a like if you're watching it later please give it a like and if you have any questions just write them in the comments and we will respond to you um and always practice you can practice these questions and again write the sentences in the comments if you just joined us now sorry um that the the lesson is wrapping up we will keep we're going to try and do live lessons every Saturday we haven't been very consistent with our times just yet we're trying to work on that because we have a lot of different things going on right now but

I hope you guys are able were able to follow this lesson um and uh again if you have any questions just write them in the comments uh one question somebody asked can we say I need to get prepare for my job interview um you could say I need to get PR I need to get prepared um but again I I think it's just unnecessary to say I need to prepare for my job interview um it it kind of means the same thing uh you one say get prepar it'd be get prepared for my job interview um you are very welcome I know so you thank you thank you guys for joining us this has been great again um if you really want to help share this video share our other videos we're trying to spread the word and build a larger classroom and we will keep doing these lessons live lessons and releasing videos which we are doing every Tuesday right now so I hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and we will see you next time all right so long

Common Idioms & Expressions with the Word OUTSIDE

today i want to teach you some very useful expressions that all have the word outside that's coming up hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel that is just all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today i as you can see i am outside it's a beautiful day so i i wanted to take this opportunity to teach you some very important expressions in english that all have the word outside and because you know what it means to be outside i want you to keep that in mind because i i think that will help you more easily understand the meaning of these expressions so let's begin with one that i think is very common this is something as a teacher i would tell students quite often and i would say i would tell them think outside the box and what this means is to think in a way that is different and in a thinking in a way that is creative and innovative because if you think about a box inside the box that's the way everybody else thinks it's very it's normal it's expected you want to be creative you want to come up with some new ideas you want to be innovative you want to think outside the box you have to think outside the box think outside the box i might be able to do that i'll drum up some business we just got to think outside the box like the makers of dreyer's ice cream if we're gonna stop them we have to think outside the box then we have an expression which is to color outside the lines and i think think about a coloring book if you are trying to color this picture a lot of people would say oh you need to color in you need to color inside the lines in this case you're saying the opposite to color outside the lines because what it means is to act and behave in a way that is well it's not expected and you're kind of breaking the rules in that sense so if you're talking about somebody who who likes to color outside the lines then you're referring to somebody that may like to break or bend the rules a little bit they just don't like to follow the the traditional expectations to color outside the lines we must remember that sometimes it is okay to color outside the lines giving up the money i got what i could you lost the money trail lester when you decided to start coloring outside of the lines why are you out here i colored outside the lines seems like a harsh punishment then there's an expression uh it's it's more of a statement which i think is one that you might hear if you're watching a tv show or movie and people are pretty angry with each other and somebody says you want to step outside let's step outside in this case if if somebody is saying this to another person they're referring to fighting they're basically saying let's let's go outside and let's fight and that's the way we're going to try and solve this problem and they would say let's let's step outside it's not something that i would want to say i don't like fighting but and i hope it's something that you don't have to say but in this case it's good for your comprehension because if somebody asks you and they say hey let's step outside you say no no no no i want to stay inside you want to step outside yeah i'll step outside i'm not married to the biggest horse's ass in three counties all right do you want to step outside another expression that is kind of related to that uh it is just take it outside and this is like it's it's a command that somebody would say to perhaps another group of people who are arguing and and they would say look take it outside and it's not really saying that oh you have to go fight outside it could be it's really just saying take your argument and and leave you need to exit you need to get out of here because it's causing a problem maybe it's a distraction it's disruptive and somebody would tell this group who's arguing they'd say take take it outside we don't we don't want this in here take it outside take it outside never start anything inside the bar unless it's absolutely necessary but my friend here has hypothermia hypothermia all right guys take it outside [Applause] you guys please take it outside then there is the expression an outside chance and if somebody's talking about uh they're talking about a situation and if they say there's an outside chance it refers to an unlikely possibility so if somebody mentions um for example they say uh there's an outside chance that the game will get cancelled in this case they're saying there there is an unlikely possibility that the game will get cancelled but it could happen there's an outside chance if you even want to have an outside chance of reaching someone nowadays you damn sure better speak from your heart wasting my time listening to singers that don't sing all i can say is that she might stand an outside chance as a mime act of course there is one outside chance for a cure i think of it as a shock treatment then we have the expression on the outside looking in and this is talking about well a person might use it to describe could say detached from the world but i think in this case you're going to use outside do somebody is detached from the outside world and what this means is that somebody is kind of they're they're really away from society they're they're not participating in it so i think of somebody who might go and just live in the woods they want to get away from everything that's happening in the city or a town and they they want to get detached from the outside world i think all of us can relate to this expression because you could also think about it when perhaps you take a vacation and people might turn off their cell phones they don't want to be bothered by work or or anything else they just want to relax and they want to be a little detached from the outside world so that is another example as to how you can use this expression then we have an expression which i i think is very easy it's it means exactly what it says and that is it's cold outside and i think people would use this really to give it a little bit of emphasis because you're really you're saying that it's the world the weather's cold the temperatures are cold but instead of just saying it's cold people will add outside um and it's it's a pretty common expression if somebody wants to tell others and they they come in and they say wow it's it's cold outside it's it's just really cold out there so it's cold outside why does everyone in this state have to be such a wimp about it why it's cold outside huh oh there's new york with this it's cold outside you'll need a sweater a sweater and then there's an expression outside the law and what this refers to is somebody who is not abiding by the law or really they're breaking the law and they you could say that they are working outside the law or they are doing something and operating outside the law they're not following the laws they're outside the law they operate outside the law and they are dangerous tell monica are gonna tell joey no because then you have to tell them what we did we are desert steelers we are living outside the law so i hope you learned some new expressions and that you can even use them if you find yourself in the appropriate situation if you enjoyed the lesson and you learned something new please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and i'll see you next time

Common Work Expressions That You Need to Know

Today I'm going to talk to you about some useful business expressions that you need to know. Hey everyone, my name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is where you want to be to practice and improve your English skills. And today I have a business English lesson for you because we are going to talk about some common and useful expressions that you will hear or that you can use in the work environment. But you can also use some of these expressions in a variety of other contexts as well, which I will explain throughout the lesson. So let, let's just get down to business. And the first expression that I want to talk to you about is let's get down to business. And this just means that that you want to start something, you are ready to begin. And often you're, you're being serious when you say this. So you might be talking about a meeting or a negotiation and you could say, you know, let, let's get down to business. Let's begin this thing.

Let's get down to business. Why don't you tell me why you think you deserve a raise? Gentlemen, let's get down to business. We've got a lot of work to do. The next expression is to be on the up and up and it's often used with that verb to be and you may hear somebody ask the question is everything on the up and up? And when somebody asks this, they are asking if, if everything is honest, sincere, is it legitimate? You can use this when describing something like a contract and you might want to know, you know, is this, is this on the up and up, is this honest, is it sincere or even if you're describing a person, you could ask if he is on the up and up or is she on the up and up?

Is this person sincere? Are they honest? Can they be trusted? And I hope that you know that I am on the up and up when I tell you that I want you to practice and improve your English skills. And if you believe me, if you believe that I'm honest, please go ahead. Hit that LIKE button. Steven, you're a trustworthy young man. Is your cousin on the up and up? Basically I look at the financial books. Make sure everything's on the up and up. I want to take a moment and talk to you about a great opportunity if you would like to improve your English skills as well as your knowledge of business English. And if that's the case, I recommend that you check out Lingoda who was kind enough to sponsor today's lesson. So let's get down to business Lingoda.

Goda is an online language school where you can take classes in English as well as business English and learn with qualified native speaking teachers from the U S and the UK. I've also taken classes with Lingoda. I studied Spanish so I know that they are on the up and up. So there are several advantages to taking classes with Lingoda. First flexibility. You can take classes any day, any time, whatever best fits your schedule. Second class size. The average class size is about three students, which means that you will have plenty of opportunities to practice your skills and third cost. These classes are very affordable from as low as eight Euro per group class.

Now let's talk about business. English Lingoda has made some changes so that these classes are more flexible and more affordable from as low as 79 Euro per month. There are three different speeds that you can choose from depending on how fast you want to learn. Plus you can take a trial and get three free group classes to see if this is the right fit for you. Now, if you don't take the trial and you already know that you want to study with Lingoda, in either their English classes or business English, then you can use the voucher code Interactive5 and get 25 euro off your first month. So click on the link in the description to sign up for some classes.

Remember to use the voucher code Interactive5 and just make that commitment to improve your English skills. The next expression that I have for you? Well, it's actually a question and that is what's the game plan? And when somebody asks, what's the game plan? It's just asking, well, what is the strategy moving forward? What is our plan of action? And you can use this in sports, business politics, anytime where you need to have a strategy. You might ask somebody, you know, okay, what's the game plan? Would somebody please let me know what the game plan is. We have it handled. What's the strategy? What's the game plan? Don't tell me you're flying blind.

Awfully hot in that court room, wasn't it? What's the game plan, Kevin? Unfortunately, doctor for both of us, you're the last man. we have. What's the game plan doc? What is your game plan for improving your English skills? Let me know in the comments. Then we have the expression, my hands are tied. And the expression means pretty much the way it sounds. You know, if somebody whose hands are tied, it means that they are not free to act in the way that they would want to because there's some rule or maybe some law that prevents them from doing so. For example, in a business setting, you may want your colleague or even your boss to do something for you, but they can't because they have to follow the rules. And they may tell you, you know, look, I, I'd love to help you out, but I can't, my hands are tied.

This can be used in many other situations as well. Even in your daily life, if your friend wants you to do something, perhaps your friend wants to go out and party, but you have a young baby at home like me. And I would just have to say, look, I'd love to go out with you, but I just can't. I have other responsibilities. My hands are tied. I'm not free to act as I would want to go into you behind my back. You can't reward her for that. My hands are tied. I'd love to help you out, Benny. But Garvy is going to be in there to check on her soon. My hands are tied. My hands are tied.

He's just a kid chasing a goofy dream. I'm sorry, my hands are tied. I'm to leave with no reference. After working here for 10 years. I'm afraid my hands are tied. Then we have a great expression, which I think is very common in business, especially when you're speaking informally about getting a job and that is to get your in the door and if somebody says, you know, I'm just trying to get my foot in the door, that just means that they want to achieve success in the first stage of some process or the initial stage. And if we're talking about business, often I think it's used when somebody wants to be a part of a business or they want to be a part of a company and they say, you know, I just want to get my foot in the door. I just want to get an interview.

If there is a job available. Sometimes it's tough to get an interview for that job and you might say, you know, I just want to get my foot in the door. I'm trying to get my foot in the door so that I can be considered for this job. It'll likely be an internship. No pay. You get your foot in the door. So you can't perform without me. And you can't get your foot in the door with us. I have an idea. Why don't I introduce you around? You know you can kind of get your foot in the door and meet potential clientele. Then we have belly up. Now this is not well, it's not a very good expression because you're talking about a business and organization or an institution that just no longer exist.

They have gone bankrupt. They have spent too much money. They've gone out of business and you'd say, well, there, they've gone belly up. They no longer exist. It's no longer around. The business has gone belly up. You need to check out that stretch of Liberty Street. The stores went belly up. Lumpies the one left. Some bank has gone belly up. The boss has made it abundantly clear that he would love nothing more than to the whole project go belly up. 90% of all new restaurants go belly up within a year. You know what doesn't go belly up? Food trucks.

The next expression is to get the short end of the stick. And if somebody says that that they are getting the short end of the stick, then it just means that they are getting unfair or unfavorable treatment. So in business you might be comparing yourself with your colleagues and you could think, well, you know, I'm getting the short end of the stick. I'm not being treated the same way others are treated. It's a little unfair. So I'm getting the short end of the stick. You can also use this expression, uh, outside of a business context. You know at home or even among your friends, if you feel you're getting unfavorable treatment compared to others, you could say you're getting the short end of the stick or if you feel you're getting unfair treatment compared to the treatment, you should be getting that you should be getting treated better, but you're not.

You're getting the short end of the stick. That guy orders me around too much. Yeah, you're getting the short end of the stick all right. You don't think we want to be there for him? Of course we do. So once again, Jackson gets the short end of the stick. Alison gets the short end of the attention stick around here. In what way? Then we have an expression. Well it's also not a another expression that any business would want to hear and that is in the red. And if you say that a business or a company is in the red, it just means that they have spent more money than they have in their account.

Often times in that case, they would owe the bank money and you would say that the business is in the red. Well, she's got $10 in here and it cost me, $900 for six weeks, a unicycle lessons. So we're a little in the red right now. Too bad we're not making any profit. Between the repairs, the gas and that we are still in the red.

Another great expression is under the table and when you say that something is under the table, it just means that it's done secretly such as making a payment. Often times, I think it's used in that context that you are employing somebody, but you know it's, it may not be legal and you're not paying them through the company. Perhaps you're giving them cash. You would say that you are paying them under the table, or if you're the person getting paid, then you would say, well, you know, I'm getting paid under the table. I'm not technically an employee, but I'm still working. I'm getting paid, but it's under the table. It's secret.

So I want to tell you one more expression. I was actually going to end the lesson, but I don't want to give you the short end of the stick. I want to teach you another expression. This is just for you because I want to help you practice and improve your English skills. And, and truly I'm, I'm trying to be on the up and up and, and the expression that I have for you is there's no I in team and this is often just a statement that somebody would say there is no I in team. And what it means is that teamwork is a group thing that it's not about working individually. You have to work with your teammates.

And when they say there's no I and team, they're talking about the spelling, the letter. I if you want to spell the word team, T E a M. well there is no letter I but I also refers to the subject pronoun talking about yourself, the individual eye. So if you're working with other teammates in a group and somebody is being selfish, you could tell that person there's no I in team. I think this expression is used regularly when talking about sports. If you're playing sports on a team, but also in business because it's quite common that you would work with a group of individuals. So if somebody is being selfish, just tell them, you know, Hey there's no I in team.

You'd better not be working on our project because we're a team. Leonard. There is no I in team. How do you feel about losing a medal for your teammates? There's no I in team by team, I don't mean you. I always say there's no I in team, so I hope you can go out and get some use out of these business expressions and if you learn something new, let me know by hitting that like button down below. Thank you guys so much for watching and I'll see you next time.

Common verbs followed by GERUNDS or INFINITIVES

hello and welcome to another amazing and exciting this is a grammar but also a vocabulary lesson that's going to help you build your vocabulary but also like I said it's going to help you improve your grammar when it comes to writing but also speaking because this is when I notice people will make small mistakes and what we're going to be talking about are jirens and infinitives notice I said jiren or infinitive because in this lesson specifically we're going to talk about which one comes after some very common English verbs common verbs that you'll use in everyday conversation so are you going to follow it with a Jaren or an infinitive or maybe you could follow it with either one of them so let's uh let's begin by talking about well what is a Jaren and what is an infinitive as we go through this I do have a little bit of a quiz for you to allow you to to participate in this lesson because I I want I want you to be able to practice so a Jaren is a word ending in ing that is made from a verb and and used like a noun so you could have a jiren at the beginning of a sentence but once again I'm talking uh in this lesson we're going to talk about jirens that come after some common verbs so here is a list of just common verbs that are followed by ajared and I used a resource that was provided by Hunter College and it's a it's a useful resource resource I will link a PDF uh copy a link to the PDF down in the description if you'd like to check it out download it review it and and yeah this is uh this is one of the resources I used when creating this lesson so I don't expect you to memorize all of these verbs I think the best way to learn this is over time getting exposure to the language reading listening and then practicing like we're going to do in just a moment so these are different jirens that these are different verbs that are followed by a Jaren right here and now let's moving on moving on to the meaning of an infinitive so this is talking about the basic form of a verb verb that usually follows to I say usually because there are different types of infinitives like you could have the the bare infinitive in which case there is no two in this lesson though I'm going to be talking about when I say the infinitive I'm referring to using to plus the base verb to play to walk to dance to run so those are the infinitives that I'm referring to in this lesson and of course again I have another nice long list of common verbs that are followed by an infinitive all right so all of these verbs right here you when you're using these in conversation when you're writing you're going to want to follow them with an infinitive so again I I told you that you know you don't need to memorize them I think as you're reading you you see how these words are used together your brain is great at recognizing patterns but also practice practice is important so let let me give you some questions and I just want you to complete the sentence how what would you use the jiren or the infinitive you can write your answer down in the chat or if you're watching this later write it in the comments I just want you to participate and actually be able to to practice this uh as we go through them so the first sentence I regret you that the show has been cancelled so I'm giving giving you the um the verb there or at least the base verb and are you going to turn that into a Jaren or are you going to use the infinitive I regret you that the show has been cancelled so the key here is thinking about well that verb regret when you're using the verb regret what are you going to follow it with and I see some great uh good answers so I I think you guys know this excellent um Jean Marco luminus uh or a hell we're talking about the infinitive all right whoops that's the next one I regret to inform you that the show has been canceled so if we're using the verb regret you're going to follow that with the infinitive the next one right here um I waited what would happen so the verb in uh that you know either the Jaren or the infinitive C which one are you going to to turn it into but the the verb that it's following is wait to wait so waited I waited what what would happen so when you're talking about the verb wait are you going to follow it with a Jaren or an infinitive and if this is this is one of those situations where I feel like you might not stop in the middle of a conversation to think about try to just think about what Come What would natural all right what do you think so the excellent good job uh exie um Leila so you're going to follow weight with the infinitive I waited to see what would happen all right I saw in the before some of you were mentioning the Jaren so again it's my goal each of these lessons is that you learn something new so I waited to see see I waited to um I I waited to to learn what would happen I waited to again any anytime you're going to follow this with the infinitive so I tried to choose a sentence maybe that you might hear from somebody saying yeah just I'm going to wait to see what happens uh I want to wait to see what happens next then we have this one we considered M the train so so we're talking about take are you going to say taking or to take the Jaren or the infinitive when it follows the verb consider so when this is our verb again considered what we follow it with the Jaren or infinitive what do you think and again just just practice what do you think let me know and I I feel like this one if you think about other times you might hear it the context then you could kind of

piece it together what what someone might say so the correct answer excellent John Carlos uh sdb uh Savar we're talking about the Jaren in this case we considered taking the bus when the verb is consider you consider doing something the next one right here he managed his nose clean now this is an idiom which uh I'll tell you what it means uh if we're talking about you know his nose clean I'll I'll tell you once I give you the answer but again the the verb is manage in this case we're talking about it in the past but we're going to follow that with what uh the Jaren keeping or the infinitive to keep he managed M his nose clean so I hope that many of you uh said just like yes uh reesh and um winter yes to keep he managed to keep his nose clean so you manag to do something and again this uh to keep someone's nose clean this is an idiom this phrase means to to stay out of trouble to avoid problems and you could say yeah they manag to keep uh someone's nose clean it's an informal casual phrase to stay out of trouble then I have this one for you and this one um it it's it can be a little tricky the dentist advised after every meal and I'm sure you go to the dentist this is something that they um you know would advise so we're talking about either the jiren flossing or the infinitive to floss and I'll tell you why I think this one could be uh a little uh tricky and so the dentist advise M after every meal when we're talking about the verb advise uh you're going to follow that with the jiren the dentist advised flossing after every meal the one thing I said that this this could be a little tricky because if we add in there the the object the dentist advised us in that case then you're going to follow it with to do something the dentist advised us or the dentist advised me to floss after every meal so if we're talking about directly following the verb advise you're going to use a jiren but often times people would talk about well who they're advising this person advised me they advised him or her and then you would follow it with that too to floss to go to play so that this one's a little uh little tricky but again we're talking about just the the verbs and what would come directly after would it be a Jaren or an infinitive the next one

let's postpone M for let's postpone for the marathon until next week all right this is something that um this is something that I feel like I would say all right so the verb is is postpone and what are we going to follow that with uh are we going to follow that with the Jaren or the infinitive let's postpone M let's postpone M for the for the marathon until next week we're talking about like well train so training or to train so postpone you're going to follow that with the jiren training let's postpone training for the Marathon until next week we're going to postpone doing something excellent uh good job uh Muhammad mes nice so you would postpone doing something here's here's another one um he didn't expect the shot so you can see he's taking a a shot playing basketball he didn't expect the shot so the verb expect is it going to be followed with the jiren missing or the infinitive to miss he didn't expect M the shot when talking about the when talking about the verb expect you're going to follow this one with the infinitive to miss he didn't expect to miss the shot all right he didn't expect uh you know to to find something or didn't expect to discover this thing so you're going to follow this verb with the infinitive I have one more for you okay and again this one is it's a little tricky and I'll explain why in just a moment but again we're talking about the verb in this case admitted would be followed by what the jiren or the infinitive the students admitted M on the exam the students admitted M on the exam talking about the word cheat so cheating or to cheat which one of those do you think would you know really uh correctly completes that uh example so in this case we're talking about the verb admit you're going to follow this verb with the jiren the students admitted cheating on the exam the other reason why I said this can be uh a little tricky often admit you would admit to doing something so you might follow it with to but also again then follow it with the jiren so you could say the students admitted to cheating on the exam and really the the meaning is the same I try as to which one would be more common I often feel like that two would follow it two doing something you admit to doing something but as far as directly following it with a Jaren or an infinitive you're going to follow admit with the jiren okay so those are common verbs that you're either going to follow with that Jaren or with that infinitive so now we're going to switch gears and I have some other verbs for you um that you could follow with either one and I want to really dive a little deeper into these uh to explore well how are they different are there any differences between them so these are some common verbs may be followed by a Jaren or infinitive there are 12 verbs down here so let's uh let's start with this question all right if I give you these two sentences I like to watch YouTube I like watching YouTube which one do you think you would use if you were talking uh to someone you're having a conversation would you use the infinitive when you're following like hey I like to watch YouTube or would you do you think you would use the jiren I like watching YouTu do you think there's a difference between these sentences okay so again we're talking about the verb like it is a very common verb that um you're going to use quite often so either one of them is is correct and both of them these sentences mean the same thing so I want to begin talking about verbs that you can follow with a Jaren or an infinitive and there's no change in the meaning so I have I I had that list of 12 now um I'm giving you these five right here and there are other verbs out there as well but I just chose these I think like these are a little more common so we have like love prefer hate can't stand all right notice that all of these are stative verbs all right which means that you're not going to really use them in the continuous tense conversationally I'm sure probably you've heard maybe somebody using like or love in the continuous tense but in general like grammatically speaking these are stative verbs you would not use them in the continuous tense there's a reason why I'm telling you this and we'll come back to it uh in just a little bit so let's I give you just different examples like like I like to watch YouTube I like watching YouTube means the same thing she loves eating she loves to eat seafood uh she loves eating Seafood either one's fine he prefers to take the bus he prefers taking the bus you could use either one uh I hate to do laundry I hate doing laundry either is okay and I they can't stand to lose and they can't stand losing again no change in meaning I will say that there there are instances in which one may be more commonly used than the other and that's uh always a a question that I get and it's a little uh it's a little difficult to determine which one but I have a reference that uh uh a resource that I would like to share with you I've also included this link down in the description it is a link to Google engram viewer and what they've done with engram viewer is taken just this Corpus of writing which is from books uh websites I think blogs and what it does it is it allows us to compare how frequently words are used in this corpus now bear in mind that this is talking about writing but we can get a general idea as to which are which ones which phrases or words are used more often so for example and uh took these screenshots just to show you like so we have like to watch versus like uh watching you can see it's pretty close but according to engram viewer it's a little more common to use the infinitive you like to watch when we're talking uh about following it with watch if we go down here same thing with play what's more common like to play or like playing it it seems like it's more common that someone's going to use like to play either way they're both they're both fine the meaning is the same now if we switch it with the verb love and we're going to keep using like watch and to play well then it changes slightly if we're comparing love watching versus love to watch in this case it's a little more common to use the jiren uh same with play when you're comparing love to play versus love playing it's very close but according to engram viewer it's a little more common uh it's love playing occurs more frequently than love to play

now personally I feel like and this is just me um when I'm having a conversation I don't know why I probably end up using a Jaren more often but that's just the that's just me the next uh the next thing that I want to look at so we we talked about four or no five verbs in which the meaning stays the same all right so now I want to look at um a few verbs well where there's maybe a slight difference and I want you to think about this uh sentence right here what what do you think what would use we have only just begun to understand the human brain or we have only just begun understanding the human brain which one uh do you think is uh correct which one do you would you use if you were talking to someone and you say one of you're going to say this sentence would you use to understand or understanding and of course I'm going to I'll I'll let you know uh in just a moment we'll come back to this so so we're talking about these three verbs uh right here begin start and continue now in this case you could follow either one with a Jaren or infinitive and there's really little change in meaning and I really shouldn't use meaning I'm I I added the word usage instead I think a lot of sites they'll talk about well there's just a slight change in meaning but I would say usage would be a better way of putting it and I'll explain why in just a moment so number one all right when the verb is not continuous use either a Jaren or an infinitive all right either one is okay so like begin suddenly she began to sing a song suddenly she began singing I could say I either one of them is okay just to give you again little insert my opinion here I feel like if I were going to end the sentence probably I would use the jiren like oh suddenly she began singing she began dancing she began writing if I'm going to follow that with more information then maybe I would use the infinitive like she began to sing a song she began to write a letter but again you could say she began writing a letter she began singing a song either one of them is okay uh same with start all right you could use either one uh like that first one he then started to run even faster or a month ago I started running I feel like in the first sentence I either one would be okay in all right so so the next one uh number two okay so that was when it's not continuous when one when these verbs are continuous you're going to use the infinitive all right so remember I talked about like those other verbs like love prefer those are stative verbs so you're not going to use them in the continuous tense well begin start and continue we can use them with that ing so like like our first one he's beginning to believe he's beginning to believe all right what movie is that from all right that's a bonus question for you can you think of that movie he's beginning to believe and I put that picture there for you uh as a little bit of a hint let's see if anybody it's an older movie uh same start if somebody were to say hey I'm starting to feel left out again you're going to follow it with the uh infinitive and then again continue we're continuing to monitor the situation think of a a doctor's office all right they're monitoring uh a patient and they would come out and say hey we're we're continuing to monitor the situation it's ongoing it's continuous and we're going to use it um with that verb in the continuous tense so just that's something to keep in mind when the verb is continuous you're going to follow it with the infinitive and this is when I go back to talking about like usage um instead of meaning necessarily so in case you're wondering that um the the the movie that I was talking about is the Matrix when uh at the end he's saying oh he's beginning to believe um so then the third one okay in some situations the infinitive May mean that you did not complete or continue the action so in this case once again I think it's more common to use the infinitive we have only just begun to understand the human brain all right that was that first uh that that sentence those two sentences I showed you so in this case to understand again it tells us that okay this is this is not complete yet all right we're still doing this we've only just begun to understand same with start if I were to say I started to learn Korean but I ended up dropping the class so it you started to do something but this action was not complete you could use a in this context but once again all right it the infinitive really it tells us okay this this thing was not completed yet that's why added that but statement yeah I started to do this but something happened and it didn't work out and continue um even though we haven't discovered other intelligent beings we continue to look for life on other planets it's ongoing it's not complete we continue to look so the something to keep in mind when we're talking about these three verbs right here begin start and continue and there are still some verbs that we have not covered just yet and uh I wanted to open it up with this question uh or this these two sentences right here what do you think which one would you use I stop to use the toilet or I stop using the toilet okay what what do you think uh is is one that you might use from time to time okay so the the final four verbs that uh we're going to look at are right here and with these verbs there actually is a change in meaning so I've I've just given you the um the infinitive and the Jaren over there like you stop to do something you stop doing something you remember to do something or you remember doing something with all of these there is going to be a change in the meaning so let's begin with like stop okay so you have Stop Plus the infinitive it means that well to interrupt an activity in order to do something else so you're doing something you're driving and then oh I stopped to use the toilet or maybe you're walking I stopped to use the toilet you stopped what you were doing and then you did did something else I stopped to use the toilet if we're talking about Stop Plus the Jaren in this case we're indicating that an action is just we we don't do it any longer all right we no longer uh continues I stopped using the toilet in this case this is not a sentence that you're probably going to use I guess it is possible if somebody maybe moved out into the Wilderness um and and then they yeah I stopped using the toilet but in this case this would mean that you just don't use the toilet any longer which is not um the the case for most of us so just be careful with this verb stop because it could you could use either the jiren or the infinitive but it does have a different meaning the same goes with uh remember so remember plus the infinitive you remember that you need to do something I remembered to turn off the light all right you remembered ah I have to do this a I I remembered that I I have to turn off the light I remember to turn off the light uh remember plus the jiren this would be like you're remembering something that it's already complete you've you've done this maybe it was a long time ago in your past like I remember visiting the lake as a child like you're thinking back a long time ago it's been done uh for some time and you're going to use the jiren so just keep that in mind you either remember to do something all right something that you need to do or remember doing something it's already complete in that context and and the same goes when we're talking about forget so if you forget uh forget plus the infinitive you forget that you need to do something if I were to say he forgot to pay the bill in this case he did not pay the bill if we're following it with the jiren then it means that you just forgot how that you that you have done something so it means that you did it you just forgot that it happened so there's 's a difference again he forgot to pay the bill or in the next sentence I said he

with different things to see if something works so let's let's go back to that example like uh oh we tried to wake him up what are some different methods we use we tried playing music we tried shaking him we tried uh you know taking away the pillow you try doing these different things but in the end maybe he's still sleeping and then again it was not successful so then you would say we we tried to wake him up but he's still sleeping okay so hopefully that that makes sense this one it's a little a little bit of a slight difference um but again still a difference in meaning so again my my goal is that I hope that you learn something new from this lesson if you did then I would really appreciate it if you go ahead and hit that like button these uh check out that resour those resources Down Below in the links I really do think they help and the more you keep reading the more you listen the more you practice like we were doing in this lesson the next time you're having a conversation or even you're you're writing a letter or an email you're just going to use the correct one because these are not rules that I would say okay let go through and memorize them just learn them naturally over time and it's it's going to stick with you and you'll put it up there in your you'll make it a part of your active memory so thank you guys for joining me uh today thank you Elena Loi good to see you um Vicky Gustav social Vibe thanks for being here uh I will be back again with another lesson shortly uh hope you all have a wonderful day and I will see you next time

LESSON 263 OF 749

Confusing Grammar in English | Lesson for Advanced Learners

today i have an advanced grammar quiz lesson for you my name is wes this is interactive english the channel's all about trying to help you practice and improve your english and today i want to work on your grammar skills and this is actually a previous live lesson that i did a while ago and all i've done is i've just shortened it and so for some of you this may be review and it's always good to review for others uh if this is new then that's perfect you get to really work on your grammar i'm going to ask you some different questions and i will give you a moment to think about the answer and then of course i will explain the answer to you and really give you a bit more detail as to why it is correct so let's well let's just go ahead and start the quiz with the first question that i have for you which is this one right here i get so um when i get the wrong answer which word best completes that sentence are you going to say a frustrated or be frustrating the correct answer is a i get so frustrated when i get the wrong answer now the reason this is confusing grammar many times learners may confuse e d and ing adjectives so right down here i gave you a little bit of an explanation we use ed adjectives when we describe a feeling or an emotion when you describe the way you feel about something i'm frustrated i'm confused i'm bored i'm tired those are ed adjectives that describe our feeling we use ing adjectives when you are describing a person's character a thing or a situation so for example you'd say well i am excited that's the way i feel the movie is exciting and we use that ing adjective the next question i have for you is this one what do you think which which best completes the sentence the phone is ringing um answer it would you say a i'll which is the contraction of i will or b i'm going to the phone is ringing i'll answer it i will answer it now you might be wondering well this this is a slight difference between i will and i'm going to when you're talking about a quick decision something where there's not much time you're going to use i will because when you use going to it makes me think that there was kind of a plan to do this but the truth is you never know when the phone is going to ring that is a slight difference between using will and going to the next question is i plan to go to school to um my education is it a farther or b further the answer is b i plan to go to school to further my education now when you think about the difference between farther and further think of it this way all right both refer to some kind of distance we're talking about a distance farther refers to a physical distance while further refers to a figurative distance and in this case you're talking about your education you're going to go ahead you're going to become more informed you're going to get smarter and you're going to move a distance but you really don't know how far there is no number that you're going to be able to assign to that distance so it is a figurative distance and you would use further the next question none of the bananas um ripe which verb to be are you going to use to complete that sentence none of the bananas um ripe are you going to say is ripe or are ripe the answer is b r none of the bananas are ripe all right the reason is because you're talking about none it is an indefinite pronoun but with this indefinite pronoun it can be used with either a singular or plural verb it depends on the noun to which it's to which it refers so for example in this case you're talking about bananas none of the bananas bananas is a plural noun so this is going to take a plural verb let's look at the next question alright so here we go i had to throw out my i'm giving three three blanks jersey and get another one i had to throw out my um jersey and get another one i've given you three words here three different adjectives i want you to put them in order so i gave you blue basketball and raggedy raggedy means something that is old and torn and sometimes things have sentimental value and you don't want to get rid of them this is all about adjective word order which is another which is another part of grammar that can be a little confusing raggedy blue basketball jersey which would be three one two all right you're talking about i had to throw out my raggedy blue basketball jersey and get another one usually i think you're gonna find maybe just two or three adjectives used in a row i think very rarely you're going to have four or more adjectives come before a noun but if we're talking about order this may vary depending on the site you're going to use but most of this is pretty standard i think you're going to do opinion size shape condition age color pattern origin material purpose so in this case i'm talking about the condition first something is raggedy the condition and then the color which is blue and then it's basically the purpose it is a basketball jersey that's what it is raggedy blue basketball jersey which which is grammatically

correct now we're getting into a little bit of punctuation so we're talking about um a dialogue something that somebody says all right so you have four different sentences to choose from sentence number one she said i took the photo number two the photo was taken by me he said number three i took the photo he said or number four the photo she said was taken by me which one is correct but for this one you really need to look at look at those sentences and determine the correct punctuation the correct answer is sentence number four that is our winner sentence number four this is an example of a divided quote it's not something that you you will see this if you're reading people will take quotes and they will divide it and the reason it's a divided quote because i said quote the photo he said was taken by me and again this is written in the passive voice the photo was taken by me but i've divided the quote you would have quotes on the first part the photo and you need that comma there you need that comma she said comma and then quotes was taken by me all right let's look at the next one so which one best completes the sentence which one best completes the sentence we um for the bus for over 20 minutes hopefully it'll arrive soon is it a waited b have waited or c have been waiting the answer is c that is the that is the one that will best complete the sentence we have been waiting for the bus for over 20 minutes hopefully it'll arrive soon you use the present perfect continuous to talk about a continuous action started in the past it has continued to the present and will likely continue into the future i added that last part hopefully it'll arrive soon which basically means that you will still be waiting you are still waiting right now so it's talking about something that is happening an action that is continuous right now so that is why the present perfect continuous that is the correct answer for this question the next one are you ready and this is something that i i feel like learners confuse a lot uh especially in their writing i wonder where um eat dinner tonight is it a they will or b will they the answer is a they will i wonder where they will eat dinner tonight now the question that i would have for you if if you answered a and you answered correctly i would then say why why do we say they will instead of will they the reason that we use they they will is because this is a noun clause and a noun clause all right so if you don't know it is a dependent clause it acts as a noun it has a subject which is they it has a verb which is will and often these clauses if you want to identify them they often begin with words such as how that what so you need to have the subject and then follow it with the verb they will eat i think oftentimes when students might see this they they they have where and they think question and then they want to switch the subject and the verb but not in this case let's look at the next one i suggest that everyone um are saturday lessons which word completes that this is confusing grammar a join b joins or c will join the correct answer is a i suggest that everyone join our saturday lessons now you may be looking at this and be like wait a second subject verb agreement everyone joins but in this case i suggest that is talking about the subjunctive mood a suggestion that somebody has so in that case i suggest that everyone join our saturday live lessons the subjunctive mood it refers to a hypothetical situation in which you use the base form of the verb in the noun clause so right there we just talked about noun clauses it's another noun clause i suggest and then that everyone joins our saturday lessons that is our noun clause it starts with that and then we have our subject everyone in our verb join but it is the subjunctive so we're going to say everyone join let's look at the next one okay so this one this is i'm sorry you're looking at this like oh goodness i want you to first read this and tell me how many mistakes do you see how many mistakes and i'm just going to go ahead and tell you that they are all mistakes with prepositions because i can't you can't do a great confusing grammar lesson without talking about prepositions so this is a great way to practice this i've had this little reading for you i want you to say how many mistakes with prepositions do you see first let's identify the mistakes that's the first step in this process so i'll just go ahead and read it for you i'm gonna read it as is a long time ago i had a terrible flight experience leaving to new york first the flight was delayed from three hours many people complained over waiting with so long a few hours later everyone was told the plane was incapable of taking off i had to wait until the next morning to leave that was a long time ago now i can look back and laugh on it if you're just listening to me read it probably some of it sounds a bit awkward so there are there's actually quite a few mistakes with the preposition so the first thing i want you to do is just look at it look at those prepositions and find well how many mistakes do you see there are six mistakes with prepositions i have highlighted those mistakes for you right here all right so now you can see the mistakes leaving to new york it's a mistake delayed from three hours mistake complained over waiting mistake waiting with so long mistake incapable at taking off mistake and laugh on it mistake now what i want time after a few hours everyone was told the plane was incapable of taking off you are incapable of doing something i had to wait until the next morning to leave that was a long time ago now i can look back and laugh about it i hope that this grammar quiz this little interactive quiz was helpful for you that is what it's all about in order to practice your skills and actually talk about why the grammar is the way it is so if you learn something new if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button let me know that is the way that you can let me know that okay in the future we should do more grammar lessons

Confusing Phrasal Verbs with Similar Meanings | Improve English Fluency

we need to have a talk about phrasal verbs okay so phrasal verbs can be very confusing they can be very annoying but they're very important to learn because we use them quite often especially when speaking now today i want to look at some phrasal verbs that well they these can be very confusing because their meaning is similar nevertheless there are some slight differences which i want to teach you and this is really going to help with your comprehension and your overall english fluency so all of that is coming right up hey everyone my name is wes from interactiveenglishvideos.com the channel that's all about helping you practice and improve your english skills and today we're talking about phrasal verbs and well we're going to be talking about why some of them are so confusing so let's just go ahead and start with these two phrasal verbs right here burn up and burn down now when i first started teaching english and you know i was having to learn a lot about the english language and one of the things that i came across was just trying to show how crazy the english language could be and somebody was asking a question and they said how is it possible that a house can burn down at the same time it's burning up that just doesn't make any sense but it's true that can happen because if we have this sentence and somebody says oh my god my house is burning down all right it means the same thing and somebody could say oh my god my house is burning up so both of these phrasal verbs mean that something is destroyed by fire and in the example that i just gave you you could use either phrasal verb you could say my house is burning down or my house is burning up either one of them it's okay they mean the same thing but there are there there is a slight difference between these two phrasal verbs because if you say that something is burning down what that makes me think of is some type of structure like a home or a building or a bridge and when it burns down that structure is just destroyed and often it may just collapse if we're talking about something that burns up it makes me think of something that is perhaps smaller like an individual item not always because you could say that a home is burning up but i think uh you you will typically use this with smaller individual items paper a book or perhaps photo albums let's use that as an example so if you have this home and your home is burning down inside the home maybe you have some photo albums it's a smaller item and if it's destroyed by the fire then you would say my photo albums burned up in the fire they were destroyed by the fire but another word that i want to give you to help you probably better understand it would be that it was consumed by this fire i think that that word may help you make a distinction between burn down and burn up so if something burns up it's really consumed you could also use the phrasal verb when you get rid of energy when you consume energy you can burn up calories and the other thing that i would say about burn up i think there is a level of intensity that this is happening uh right in front of you it's intense it's really hot it's getting hotter and hotter and in that case think of the same way if somebody has a fever they might say wow your forehead is burning up you're really burning up

it's intense it's getting hot and and that is another way in which you could use this phrasal verb so in my original example of saying that my house is burning down or my house is burning up i think they are interchangeable you could use either one but i think it's because you are talking about something that is happening right at that moment you are watching this structure getting destroyed by the fire my house is burning down you are watching the the home getting consumed and it's very intense my house is burning up if we're going to talk about this in the past and it's already happened i think in that case most people would use burn down and you could say last year my home burned down all right you're probably not going to use burn up if you're talking about something that that's larger like a home you may use it if you are looking at it at that moment and you see that the fire is consuming it it's very intense you you could say oh no my house is burning up so again even though these phrasal verbs have a very similar meaning there are some slight differences between the two now let's look at the phrasal verbs walk up and walk down so let me give you an example perhaps you are looking for a restaurant and you ask somebody on the street hey do you know where this restaurant is and they say oh it's just right over there just walk down the street and you'll see it or maybe they say just walk up the street and you'll see it in this case that both are correct you can use either one because walk down and walk up it means that you are just walking to some place i would say that is very similar one is not that much more common than the other and then i was thinking wait maybe am i wrong is it just me that i would use walk down and a lot of other people would use walk up perhaps that is the case but we can look at it a little closer in depth because if you use walk up it can also mean something that's a little different so walk up can mean to uh to uh to walk to a person or place with a level of confidence that you are feeling very confident you have something you want to say and you might walk right up to some person or you walk up to some place let me give you some examples i could say she walked up to her boss and said i quit all right she walked up to her boss she was very confident and and really had something important to say another example uh would be he walked up to her and asked her out on a date again in that situation you are walking to someone but it really there really is a level of confidence that you have when you are going to this person or or this place so when i went back to google engram viewer i was a little more specific with my uh with my phrase and i put in walk down the street and walk up the street and yes in that case uh you can see that walk down the street is more more common than walk up the street and this also applies to drive if you want to say drive up or drive down perhaps you're looking for a grocery store and you ask somebody and they say oh it's it's just just drive down the road and you'll see it in about 10 minutes or just drive up the road and you'll see it in 10 minutes again they're interchangeable they mean the same thing you are driving to some place but i think it also applies if somebody's going to be driving uphill you could use drive up if they're driving downhill drive down and if it's flat either one but once again i think drive down is going to be used more often in spoken english now let's look at these phrasal verbs take off and lift off so i could say the helicopter is taking off or the helicopter is lifting off both of them are correct and both of them kind of mean the same thing in this case but these phrasal verbs do have a bit of a difference so for example take off refers to an aircraft or a bird or an insect that leaves the ground and begins to fly liftoff refers to the action of some aircraft or spacecraft that is leaving the ground and typically with liftoff i i kind of think of going straight up you are going straight up from a particular point so i could you could say that a rocket could lift off the ground or a helicopter could lift off the ground a hot air balloon could lift off the ground a drone could lift off the ground so if we're talking about takeoff i could use takeoff with all of those as well i could say the rocket took off the helicopter took off the hot air balloon it also took off even the drone it took off because i can use takeoff with with all of those as well as many more if we're talking about well like birds insects and planes take off is used much more often than lift off the reason why i think somebody would use liftoff would be if they they just want to be a little more specific and precise when whenever they're speaking or perhaps writing and they want to say that that this aircraft is leaving the ground and it's kind of moving straight up so you think of a rocket a helicopter a hot air balloon a drone those are things that can lift off but they could also take off as well i hope that you have a little bit of a better understanding about the differences between these phrasal verbs even though in certain instances they are interchangeable and you could use either one and finally i hope that i hope that you learned something new and if you did learn something new please hit that like button thank you guys so much for watching and i will see you next time

Confusing Words You Need to Know | Improve Your Fluency

hello and welcome to today's lesson my name's Wes this is Interactive English the perfect place for you guys to practice and improve your English skills so today's lesson is super cool because I am going to talk to you about some confusing words for English learners and go over eight different words that might be very confusing for you so we're gonna talk about that today now our reason why this is important is because in English there are so many different vocabulary words there's so many different words to learn some of them are very similar so it's easy for people to get confused so I'm gonna talk to you about eight different commonly confused words that might be troubling English learners so Before we jump into that I want to hear from all of you guys I want you guys whether you're watching this now or even later tell me your name say what's up write it in the comments we just love hearing from you guys so hi junior Ivy autist mauriello a lot excellent great to have you guys here with me today sorry if I missed some names but I will try to say what's up to everybody as I can so thank you guys for joining me today again we're talking about some confusing words in English and this is a great way if you know these words if you know how to use them correctly this is a great way to improve your overall English fluency as well as your comprehension because you'll know the meaning of what people are trying to say so let's first talk quickly about well why why do people confuse some of these words and I've given you three different reasons why it might be a grammar rule whether a word is a noun and word is a verb so it could just be the part of speech which confuses people the words could be you could have two different words that have a very similar meaning but the meaning might be slightly different and because of that learners might use the incorrect word and the last reason would be homonyms so you may have seen this graph before we had it in a previous lesson when I talked to you about some confusing words and if you want to check that lesson out later on I'll throw up a card so you guys can see that lesson as well I'm not gonna get into all the details of this if you want to check that graph out later you can look at it pause the video it really is useful but homonyms when you have words that are spelled differently but they sound the same or maybe sometimes they're even spelled the same it can really be confusing as to not only which word you should use but if you're listening to somebody else thinking like okay well wait a second what which word are they talking about I'm not I'm not really sure what they're trying to say right now so there are many reasons why you should try to learn these words and I'm gonna tell you about these eight words I'm gonna give you the part of speech as well as talk to you about their meaning and we're gonna go over some example sentences and then at the end we're gonna do a quick little practice and I'm gonna test your skills and see just how much you guys remember so if you guys are with me right now one thing I would recommend even if you're watching this later as we go through some of these words I am such a big advocate of practice practice practice practice all right take some of those words and write an example sentence give us an example sentence so that way that if people are watching this right in the chat now or you're watching this later you can see these other examples and see how these words are used in context and it's great to practice because that's the best way to learn so let's first look at these two words right here now they may look very similar because they're spelled either spelling is a little similar but the pronunciation is very different so the first one is the verb lose okay lose is the verb LOSE and it means to misplace something or it could be not to win a game or a contest so this is a word that has a multiple meaning the example sentence I don't want to lose my keys and again we're talking about winning a match like oh I don't want to lose the match now again this is in the present simple because the past is lost and that's not really going to confuse people but in the present simple it might confuse people so lose LOSE don't confuse it with this word right here loose now if you hear loose then you're talking about the adjective and that means that something doesn't fit correctly so I found that image and that sentence like oh she likes wearing loose shirts I am also somebody who likes wearing loose clothes some people I think the style now is to wear very tight shirts and tight jeans I like to wear loose clothes so again don't confuse lose with loose and again if you're with us now practice write write some sentence alright so you can see you can practice using those remember lose misplace you don't have it or you don't win the match loose is talking about the way something fits so when you think loose LOSE think about clothes alright that's probably what they're talking about the next one which I think is commonly confused is this right here so we have the the difference is maybe is one word it's an adverb and you're talking about perhaps possibility one word maybe oftentimes you see this at the beginning of a sentence maybe I'll go that way maybe I'll go this way maybe two words is it's a verb it's a helping verb may plus the main verb to be because when you're talking about helping verbs we are using the base verb afterwards may be and the thing that makes the reason this is confusing and I gave you that example sentence she may be in her office the reason this is confusing is because the meanings are similar one is an adverb one is a verb the adverb means again possibility in the maybe two words we are talking about a modal of possibility you don't know it's possible so for example she may be in her office it's possible we don't know if we could we could also say same meaning but using the adverb maybe she's in her office it means the same thing but again you want to be very careful with these words right here because I think most people would would confuse this in spelling if you are having to write something an email or a paper this is where people get in trouble because the pronunciation is the same maybe maybe so just be careful especially when you are writing these words right here next let's look at this

hominem right here stationery versus stationery so this is a word that just has a multiple meaning you can talk about it as an adjective when it's saying something is stationary it's not moving she's using the stationary bike you can see her exercising up there not moving she's stationary it's an adjective as a noun stationary is talking about things that you you write on little pieces of paper that you would find in somebody's office and I gave you that example sentence he just bought new ooh stationary he just bought some new stationery so let's look at next we have these two words right here and again the spelling is a little different and the pronunciation is going to be very different because as the verb all right which is breathe to breathe you are basically taking air in and out breathe he's learning to breathe fire the little dragon right there is learning to breathe this is different than the noun which the meaning is similar but again

the the pronunciation is different breath right here BR EA th breath you're talking about when you the you're taking air n it could also be again just the the the air in and out so it's it's very similar but one's a one's a verb one is a noun she took his breath away so let me try and give you another example of this so if I'm talking about the verb again it's an action breathe I'm basically breathing now if we're here maybe you yet maybe you're you're in front of me and you'd be like oh wait what did what did you have for lunch I don't know I don't like the smell of your breath then you're using it as a noun alright so somebody can have bad breath I try not to brush my teeth use gum but as an example you can people are breathing the action but breath is the noun alright you are you're holding your breath okay so there are many different examples for that the next one moving right along these two words right here again the big difference is a part of speech and this is advice versus advise so again the the meaning is very similar the spelling is going to be different and the part of speech is going to be different so if we're talking about the noun we're talking about advice recommend recommendation guidance that somebody's given you they give you advice the noun the cookie gave me some great advice those fortune cookies right there gave me some great advice and that was to eat more cookies that was some good advice now in the chat what I want to do or in the comments since we're talking about advice I want you to tell me what advice do you have for everyone else on how to improve your English skills we all want to improve our skills we want to get better what's some advice that you have for everybody else here write it in the chat write it in the comments and let us know what's something that worked for you what what some advice that you have now if we're talking about the verb the action of giving those suggestions those recommendations then we are advising someone to advise the spelling is different all right so be careful especially when you are writing these as well as saying this because advice with a C all right that C is gonna sound like an s advice advise that S is going to sound like a Z advise and this is something this is my advice to you to all students I advise students to study a little bit each day I always advise people to study a little bit each day it's very important it really really helps that is my advice to everyone so example sentence perfect Kyra I advise English learners to study vocabulary and grammar rules in context perfect excellent thank you for sharing with us next we have this right here less versus fewer now both less and fewer they are determiners and if you're wondering well what the heck is a determiner a determiner is a word that comes before a noun that kind it gives the noun a little context it gives us some more information often when we think of determiners you might think of articles those are also determiners a and the fewer and less they are also determiners because it's basically giving us information talking about an amount so we use less basically saying not as much fewer not as many so the difference between less and fewer is less is non count non count nouns we use fewer with count nouns so notice I didn't give you any example sentences because right now since we're we're moving along I want you guys to write the example sentences write them in the chat or if you're even if you're watching this later write it in the comments it's always good to practice practice practice don't worry about making mistakes just just write us a sentence share with us we want to hear from you guys so remember we use less with non count nouns less candy less water less rice thinking of a lot of food right now from probably gonna get some to eat after this fewer we're going to use it with things that we can count and again a way of telling that if a noun is plural and you can add an S to it then it's probably a count noun apples plural we can add an S so we're going to use fewer fewer apples fewer students fewer chairs now this is fewer and less this is one that really can confuse people I think even native speakers as well because I wanted to tell you that if you go to America and you go to a grocery store you might see this used incorrectly because I think in most grocery stores or many around the world if you have if you don't shop a lot and maybe you'd only get 10 things or you or you have or you or you have fewer than 10 items you can go to a special line which which is faster and a lot of those times you'll see a sign at the top there and it might say something 10 items or less and this is grammatically speaking it is incorrect but this is something that you will see in grocery stores all across America 10 items or less and it brings back that other conversation well is it okay what if what if people in America or Britain are using the language incorrectly what does that mean and and that is a separate debate but again I'm just trying to show you that there are many instances where whether you are an English Learner or you are a native English speaker people will use words incorrectly all the time I use them incorrectly as well some of them and you just got to keep studying and studying and learning but so that you know that this is how they should be used the correct way we use less with non-count nouns and we use fewer with count nouns if you're in the store it should say ten items or fewer so next what I want to show you is oh somebody have a great example sentence yeah we should consume less sugar if we want to be healthy perfect perfect next let's look at these two words right here another hominem all right but they're spelled differently or are they story versus story the pronunciation is the same we're talking about two words here they're both nouns most commonly we're gonna talk about the word here which is talking about a tail and account you're talking about something that that people might tell they tell a story or you're maybe you're reading a story it's it's something events that are happening it is a story it's a noun and we're talking about here you could talk about a terrifying story so right now I want you guys practice again see practice using these words and give me a sentence if you can in the chat in the comments now story down here is talking about a level of a building now it can be used as so for example I have this a two-story building alright it's a building that has two floors alright a story is basically again a way of saying floor if they're synonyms three floors three stories ten floors ten stories now one thing that's confusing is story sto re y that is how most English varieties British English that's how they will spell it Americans like me since we're a little weird and we're a little crazy we don't spell it this way we spell it like this one talking about events people will spell it sto ry so that is one another little difference between British English and American English would be the spelling of this word right here but if you're talking about a story again you're talking about how many levels something has how many floors does it have how many stories next we have these two words desert and desert okay so let's let's start with the first one because again some of these words have multiple meanings and they have different pronunciations as well so if we're talking about the now the the desert the desert you think of the sand think about dry weather it's the noun it is a place the verb desert to desert means to abandon something to desert desert desert the difference would be the emphasis where that stress is so the noun desert the stress is on the first syllable the verb desert the stress is on the second syllable as when it's an adjective it's also talking about an abandoned place nobody's there so for example right here you have the desert a desert island and basically they're not talking about an island that's full of sand or hot it's basically an island that would be abandoned all right it is deserted don't confuse that with this different spelling remember double s to s is something that probably many of us love including myself and that is desert so this is a noun that's just talking about something sweets a meal that we all like to have desert desert versus desert I can't even say the desert like think of a place the noun versus desert so again this is the the pronunciations gonna be a little different spelling is definitely different and just make sure that you are eyes you're trying to use these correctly so let's look at thank you for example sentence Giselle my favorite dessert is ice cream excellent I love ice cream as well my favorite ice cream is vanilla I love it so you know I know some of you may think oh that's such a boring flavor but you know like I said Americans were a little a little weird a little crazy so now that we've talked about the some of these words let's let's practice them I'm gonna give you some questions and I want you to write the answers in the chat and even if you're watching this later I want you to interact this is interactive English in practice write your answers in the comments all right write to us write to us write to us we want to hear from you guys so let's look at number one all right write your answers in the comments here is your question all right here's my mmm join our social media classes are you going to use advise or advice remember the difference between these the part of speech one's a noun one is a verb here's my mmm join our social media classes what would you guys say are you are you going to use advice or advise alright so yes excellent I see many people I V lotta Ana Ani Patricia excellent the answer is we're talking about the noun alright we're talking about the noun advice that you would give something here's my advice join our social media classes and yes if you have not joined us Facebook Twitter Instagram please join our social media classes we love posting questions interacting with you guys helping you practice your English skills join them next we have this question right here write your answer in the chat in the comments how would you complete this sentence take a deep and relaxed are you going to use remember remember the difference alright breath breathe which one would complete that sentence again we're talking about one's a verb one's a noun in this case take a deep and relaxed what would you say breath or breathe alright remember so if I'm saying take deep alright the key word in there think of because that means we're talking about the noun and the noun is breath all right take a deep breath and relax take a deep breath and relax perfect alright next let's look at this one now this is a double one remember

what's the difference between loose and lose this is something that many many many people will confuse if your pants are too hmm you might hmm your pants and this is this has happened to me before actually if your pants are too hmm you might hmm your pants how would you complete that sentence what do you guys think remember the difference one is talking one is a verb the other is an adjective alright remember I said loose all right loose LOSE is talking about clothing okay it's all so it's just it's an adjective describing clothing if your pants are too loose you might verb the base verb you might lose your pants if your pants are too loose you might lose your pants excellent Rosi Annie Patricia Sam excellent Ivy thank you guys for answering you guys rock this so remember just to recap in case you joined us a little late these are the words that we were talking about the difference between lose and loose we just discussed this loose lose is the verb you're talking about losing something or maybe not winning a contest loose think clothing alright loose something is loose maybe versus maybe both of them are talking about possibility one is an adverb the one word maybe is an adverb maybe maybe I'll get something to eat after this and maybe is talking about the verb you're talking about you're helping verb and the mae-mae verb the main verb so for example she may be in the office today so remember when you're writing remember the difference between these two stationery this is a homonym and multiple multiple meaning word stationery versus stationery it either means not moving or little little piece of paper cute little pieces of paper that you would write on this was another question breathe versus breath breathe is the action breathing in and out and breath is the noun is just talking about the air itself all right maybe you hold your breath maybe somebody has bad breath maybe they have wonderful breath who knows the next one we talked about advice the noun versus advise so again we're talking about recommendations suggestions one is a noun advice the other is a verb advise this one I told you is commonly confused even among native speakers less and fewer it's a matter of count versus non count we use less with non count words less candy fewer with count words fewer apples we discuss story and story versus story another hominem story is talking about a tale a bunch of events that are happening and this story down here it can mean like floors of a home floors of a building how many stories does the building have and desert and desert versus desert desert can be the noun about a dry place it can also be talking about the as a verb and an adjective it's abandoned all right a deserted area and then you could have dessert which is the noun talking about sweets so I hope that you guys I hope you enjoyed this lesson please if you did like it give us a thumbs up we really appreciate it if you have other questions once this video gets posted write to us in the comments we want to hear from you guys and if you know of other words that you think are confusing share those with us as well write them in the comments it's always good to share with everybody so we can learn more and more and more and more that is the goal thank you guys so much for watching for being here again as I recommended before join our social media classes it's a great way to practice and improve your English skills

Vivian jr. any to sell a lot Raymond thank you guys for being here again sorry sorry sorry Mattia sorry if I miss some of your names I'm glad that you guys made the time and joined us for this lesson and again we will be back next Saturday we will have another lesson out on Tuesday another live lesson next Saturday hope you guys can join us then and we'll see you next time have a great day

Correct Your Grammar Mistakes | Lesson for Beginner, Intermediate, & Advanced Learners

hello and welcome to today's lesson thank you guys so much for joining me my name is Wes and here on our channel at interactive English it's all about just trying to help you guys practice and improve your English skills and today it's a grammar lesson and it's about trying to help you well there's a lot of different grammar that we're going to talk about in today's lesson because it is all about correcting your grammar correcting your grammar mistakes and this is very I think it's very important especially in writing if you are writing an important email or some important message in English and you want to make sure that it's correct the first thing you need to do is just go back and reread it and see if you can identify those mistakes and that's what we're going to practice in this lesson is trying not only to identify different grammar mistakes but then see if you can correct them as well as well and and say okay here is the mistake this is how we need to correct it now so I have a bunch of different questions for you and I'll give you the the sentence we'll see if you can identify where the there's a problem with the grammar and then I'll tell you the answer and also after every answer if you want more information about this specific grammar I will give you a link to a previous lesson that I did talking all about the grammar if that's something you would like to learn a little bit more about and I've mentioned that this lesson is for I tried to make it for everyone for beginner learners intermediate learners as well as advanced learners and we're going to start with a little bit easier grammar and then as we go through these it's going to get a little more difficult and at the end those will definitely be advanced grammar questions so we'll say I hope I'm very confident that you guys are going to do very well on this on this practice so I do just want to give quick shout out to some people who are with me right now hello Vincent Lally 8in great to see you guys Shivani Lally Dan Edward thank you guys I will try to mention some more names as as we go through the lesson but let's just begin all right so here is the first question that I have for you all right and this is something that I might say but there is a mistake okay before we begin please go ahead and hit a like button alright now in this sentence in this statement there's a problem there is a a grammar problem see if you can identify it if you can write it in the chat let me know what you think the problem is and also see if you can correct it so what do you think all right what do you think is the problem with this sentence all right which well I don't want to give you too much - too many hints or clues before we begin please go ahead and hit a like button all right all right I see yes Leanne Shivani excellent so the problem is with the article like button all right in this case we're talking about a

we're talking about a specific count noun so you should say before we begin please go ahead and hit the like button and I give you a little more information here we use the article the when referring to specific count nouns so in this case where the word button is a count noun you can have more than one button so for example right now in front of you there are two buttons there's a a like button and a dislike button and if I'm being specific I'm talking about the like button the same way that if somebody you go somewhere and somebody says oh here why don't you sit in a chair they're not specific talking about any chair but if I'm specific and say sit in the blue chair that is when you would want to use the article the the definite article and if you want to learn more about the definite article the I'm gonna throw this I'll put these links down in the description below once the lesson is over then I'm also gonna put them in the chat right here so this is a lesson that I did all about the rules for of when you should use this definite article so this was the mistake in here it's just talking about the article a n or the all right the next question are the next statement that I have for you is this one all right this weekend I bought a blue brand new shirt all right what's the problem with this sentence and again with grammar I think if you you know that there's a problem first of all because I've told you that there is a problem even if you you're not sure about it I think I hope that you can at least read the sentence and think okay this just does not sound right this doesn't sound natural somebody would say oh this weekend I bought a blue brand-new shirt all right what do you think is the problem with this sentence alright and these are these are different they're they're all gonna be different so it's not about the article all right alright so again Claudia yes you kind of got it the the order maybe this is challenging Aden excellent Luisa the the

and I talked about it in much greater detail again I will throw this in the chat so I hope this this helps you that if you are not able to get something correct and you think oh I didn't know that then you can go look at these other lessons and hopefully that will help you learn a bit more about this specific grammar all right so let's go for the next one see if you can identify the mistake here all right now this is it's a conversation between different people person A and person B and it starts out person A saying did you enjoy the meal and then for somebody said Wes ate everything but the broccoli oh really why you just don't like it okay so this is a conversation between two people person A and person B did you enjoy the meal Wes ate everything but the broccoli oh really why he just don't like it okay so I hope that maybe this one it stands out a little bit more this mistake this grammar mistake and yes I if some of you if you've been following many of our lessons I have an ongoing rivalry with broccoli all right I've mentioned that several times before so yes excellent NAT Daniel Luisa so the problem is subject-verb at the end he just don't like it he we don't say he don't he doesn't all right he doesn't he just doesn't like it excellent hello Oh rod excellent perfect Gustav Vicki welcome so subject verb agreement he doesn't and the reason why I chose this is because when this is one of the times where I definitely hear learners make a mistake not just with writing but with speaking as well because you say if you want to say the negative do not I do not we do not you do not but if the subject is he she or it then you're going to use he doesn't she doesn't it doesn't so in this case it's just subject verb agreement and this is something again I think you you may hear it people even people in the US you may hear them break this rule if you're watching a movie or TV show so I understand why it might confuse people if they hear other people breaking this rule but just just be careful especially with your writing because writing is a bit more formal you want to make sure that the subject agrees with the verb and if you want to learn more about subject verb agreement all right all right they're right there in the chat I put that link to a lesson we did on subject verb agreement the next one uh let's look at the next question let's just move right along and say this is true not this this is there's a mistake with this but I could say to tell you the truth I'm really excited about this lesson all right to tell you the truth I'm really excited about this lesson what is the mistake in this sentence what I'll give you a hint what word is the problem and if even if you're not able to identify exactly what the problem is I hope that you can at least read it and think something is not right this just does not sound normal natural for somebody to say a sentence like this alright so I think many of you were able to identify it yes Bush Rob's a Nam go see ax the word exciting that is the problem instead of using the ing adjective I should use the IDI adjective to tell you the truth I'm really excited about this lesson and there are many different adjectives that are EDI ng for example bored or boring excited exciting tired tiring exhausted exhausting and it's it's important to know the difference because we use those IDI adjectives in general to describe like a feeling the way a person feels like I'm excited ing adjectives are often used to describe a situation if you're describing a movie oh the movie I saw last week it was so exciting the movie was exciting so keep that in mind those IDI and ing adjectives and again if you want to know a little bit more and do some more practice here is a link to a lesson that I did quite a long time ago on Edie and ing adjectives and I will again I will put all of these links down in the description after the lesson so in case you want to go back and and learn a little bit more about this specific grammar let's continue so we're starting it's gonna continue getting a little more difficult slowly little by little so this one a question have you ever went to Thailand all right what do you think have you ever went to Thailand so this is the grammar that we're talking about it's called the present perfect it's a question in the present perfect so I'm telling you right now it should be the present perfect it's a very common question if you're talking about places that you you want to travel or places you have traveled in the past and somebody might say hey have you ever have you they wouldn't say have you ever went to Thailand instead yes I think excellent you guys Rock that one where say Martha Rita Rose perfect um have you ever you could say a few different things and I gave you some different examples you you really need to use the past participle because when we're talking about the present perfect you're going to have the helping verb which is have plus the past participle so in this case I actually changed the verb I said have you ever been to Thailand the reason why I change the verb is because I think this is a little more common that somebody would use the verb to be have you ever been to

Thailand have you ever been to China have you ever been to Brazil however you could still use that verb go and go went gone gone is the past participle and it's perfectly fine you could say have you ever gone to Thailand that is a question in the present perfect or maybe you want us to use travel have you ever traveled to Thailand all of those are correct you just need to make sure that you are using the the verb have plus the past participle but just in case you're wondering what the difference is I think commonly more common people would ask this using the verb to be have you ever been have you ever been to someplace alright excellent you guys you guys rock that one let's look at the next one all right we have a conditional sent oh wait I forgot to throw in again if you want to learn a little bit more about the present perfect here mm-hmm here's a lesson another that I did quite quite a long time ago all right so we're moving into a conditional sentence all right if it will rain tomorrow we'll we'll plan a picnic for next weekend all right I told you it is a conditional sentence but there is a mistake there is a grammar mistake and what what do you guys think can you identify the mistake if it will rain tomorrow we'll plan a picnic for next weekend all right so let's see excellent I'm the tea sireesha dairy star I've mispronounced names excellent when you're talking about the first conditional you're talking about something that is well true but likely it's something in the future so in this case you're going to have the if clause which is going to be your your condition and then the result is going to be your main clause and the reason I'm using these words like your if clause and your main clause because your main clause that is where the main verb should be and when I say main verb that is the verb that really determines if something is in the present if it's in the past or if it's in the future so our main clause which is will plan a picnic for tomorrow that is going to be our future tense verb so in the if clause which is our condition if it rains tomorrow you will use the present simple so that is just a rule if you're talking about the first conditional that in the condition you're going to use the present simple and the the main in the result you're going to use the future tense if it rains tomorrow we'll plan a picnic for next weekend okay so this I know this is something that I think can confuse learners when you talk about conditional sentences because they might think oh I'm talking about the future why can't I why can't I say if it will rain but you got to remember that that is not the main clause all right that is your that is your if statement and that is not going to determine the time that something happens so just remember present simple and then the future and if you want to learn more about the first conditional again you're in luck because I have this whole entire lesson that I've done on the first conditional I've actually done lessons on all the conditionals if you want more information about them so let's continue and see just practice practice identifying these different grammar mistakes I think some of this maybe maybe some of it's a little challenging for you guys perhaps some of it is easy for you again I tried to make this lesson for as many learners as possible and started with some a little bit easier grammar and now it is it's starting to get a little more difficult and hopefully again if you see something that well I just did not know this grammar that you can go watch the other lesson and that'll help you understand it a little bit better so this one my bike my bike was stolen it-- again even if you don't know the reason why it's wrong hopefully you can look at it and be like yes this just does not this just does not sound right whatsoever my bike was stolen it-- and I already see everybody right there's just too many people to acknowledge at this point yes my bike was stolen so in this case stolen is the past participle there's that word again because we use the past participle in different instances so if we're talking about the verb steal is the present tense stole is the past tense stolen is the past participle and the reason we're using the past participle is because this is in the passive voice and we've done I've done a whole other lesson between active voice and passive voice and when you're talking about the passive voice you're going to have your subject plus the verb to be which in this case was and it's the past tense plus the past participle my bike was stolen last night I could say like but my bike was stolen last night by someone but in this case I really don't need to say by someone because well it's just not necessary now hopefully it maybe if I want to change it to the active voice in that case the same meaning would be someone stole my bike all right so both of those sentences they have the same pretty much the same meaning it's just one is the active voice one is the passive voice and if that is a topic that you would like to learn a little bit more about again throwing that down in the chat

let's look at the next one number eight I try to avoid to eat too much junk food all right it's getting maybe again in my opinion I think it's a little more difficult I try to avoid to eat too much junk food what do you think is the problem with this sentence what what word or words do we need to change in order to make this sentence grammatically correct all right I tried to avoid to eat too much junk food I think some of the a lot of you see it yes excellent sleep Walker Mike Tyson eating all right I try to avoid eating too much junk food in this case we're talking about the difference between gerunds and infinitives so a gerund is that you have that that word which is typically a verb with the ing ending eating running dancing singing or the infinitive is you have to plus the base verb and in another marathon someday all right to run that is the infinitive and if you want to learn more gerunds and infinitives here we go there is a nice long lesson nice long live lesson for you the next one is it's a question ok so this is it's definitely a question all right you're going to watch another video lesson are you alright you're going to watch another video lesson are you this is a question that I have for you right after right after this lesson right here I'm not going to ask you this question because it's wrong but what do you think is the mistake what what's wrong with this sentence you're going to watch another video lesson are you so again I hope even if you're not sure what the mistake is that you can just listen to be like wait a second there's something there's a problem with this this question and the problem is yes like many of you have just pointed out aren't you excellent in an Abu Jameel a-- we're talking about tag questions so if you don't know what tag questions are it's a way of you're asking a question but you're using a statement first so for example my statement is like you're going to watch another video lesson and then I follow that with my tag which is my tag question you're going to watch another video lesson aren't you now the rule with tag questions is that if you have a positive statement you're going to have a negative tag so in this case you're going to watch another lesson it's a positive statement so I use that negative tag aren't you kind of saying like or are you not going to do this aren't you now if it's a negative statement then you're going to use a positive tag let me give you a quick example so I'm going to change this to a negative and I'd say oh you're you're not going to watch another video lesson are you so in that case that was a negative statement followed by a positive tag you're not going to watch another video lesson are you but that's not the question I want I want to convey to you guys I'd want to ask you oh you're going to watch another video lesson aren't you and if you want to learn more about tag questions then you might want to watch this lesson right here and I hope I hope that you guys have seen some of these other lessons before and maybe that has made it easier for you to answer these questions right now so let's look at this one by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone was already ordered all right by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone was already ordered so again I hope that it's a little easier just having just this one sentence I know when you're talking about if you're if you're looking at helping somebody correct an essay or a message and you're having to read many different sentences it becomes a little more difficult to identify different grammar mistakes but again practice practice and more practice is just a excellent way to get better at doing this so by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone was already ordered so the problem that I think some of you many of you are pointing out is the the verb was alright that is the problem we don't want to say was ordered because this is not this is not that's not a passive statement what we're talking about in this case is a different verb tense which is the past perfect by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone had already ordered this is a great example of when you would use the past perfect and I'll link the lesson in just a second but this is what it means the past perfect because we use this verb tense to refer to to an action in the past that happened before some other action in the past so you're talking about two actions in the past or two events and you're basically saying that will one happen before this one but both of them happened in the past because I say by the time I arrived at the restaurant all right that is something that happened in the past what happened before that everyone had already ordered all right that happened even further back in the past so again this is a as far as a verb tense past perfect is a little trickier and it's one that learners tend to learn later on is the past perfect tense it's great to know good to use there is a lesson that we did talking all about the past perfect if you want to learn more about this verb tense then we have this one I hope that I hope that you guys get this one because this was I think a more popular lesson that we did the doctor recommends she gets some sleep alright the doctor recommends she gets some sleep what do you think all right

what would you say is the problem is the problem with this sentence write your answer write it in the chat and even if you're watching again this later on I would always encourage you write your answers in the comments it's a great way to again you're practicing your writing skills and you are actually getting a little bit more practice so the doctor recommends she gets some sleep all right now all right I see some people you you got it now the what what this sentence is it's talking about the subjunctive mood and we did a lesson before about the subjunctive mood so the the problem with this the grammar would be gets all right Oh future Cydia thank you thank you guys for joining thanks for becoming a member excellent so gets is the problem with this and let me show you what the the sentence should read the doctor recommends that she gets some sleep now the one thing I didn't have before is that word that in this case it's optional all right you don't have to say that if you want to you can use it if you don't want to that's perfectly fine it does not change it does not make the sentence correct or incorrect I could say the doctor recommends she gets some sleep that's perfectly fine the doctor

English but just to be grammatically precise this would be an example of the subjunctive mood and I did another lesson talking about three common grammar makes a while back and one of them was discussing the subjunctive mood so there is a link to that lesson right there in the chat let's do let's do another one all right now this one I feel like is definitely this is more advanced grammar and hopefully hopefully you can just because it's one sentence hopefully you can get it and think oh okay I understand this if I will take some medicine this morning I wouldn't feel sick right now so you see that if then that just tells you right there this is a conditional sentence it's another conditional sentence so what do you think is the problem with this or what might be the problem if I will take some medicine this morning I wouldn't feel sick right now okay so what I would go ahead and tell you remember I told you that in the the result our main Clause that is where your main verb is such as I wouldn't feel sick right now all right so would not feel that is our main verb and it's talking about the present okay the problem is in the condition if I will take some medicine this morning all right I don't want to use the future tense that is incorrect the reason why this is challenging is because it is a next conditional alright if I had taken some medicine this morning I wouldn't feel sick right now I say it's a mixed conditional because the first part the condition is the third conditional if I had taken some medicine this morning the third conditional is used to talk about things that are well kind of impossible and it's mostly it's impossible because it already happened you cannot change this so in that case you're going to use that past perfect if I had taken medicine this morning and this next one the result is a present result which is going to be the the second conditional all right I would not if I would not feel sick right now so you're mixing the second and the third conditional which is why it's called a mixed conditional and this is definitely this is definitely something that can be very confusing and I did a rather long lesson before about mixed conditionals and I really tried to break it down and give you a lot of different examples hopefully to make it easier so if you want to learn more about mixed conditionals you can go check out that lesson right there and once again I will link all of these down in the description below so I I really hope that you guys enjoyed this lesson and if you like what we do here at interactive English and you want to sponsor support our channel you can check out our youtube membership there is a button on our page or you can join us on patreon

we have some cool rewards there are links down below - to both of them in the description and I said we had a new member today Petri said ASR if I mispronounce your name but thank you so much for becoming a member and again I would encourage you if you saw some grammar today in one of these questions that you thought was confusing that you don't really understand I would encourage you to go watch that the other lesson that I posted and hopefully that'll help you give that'll give you a clearer understanding about how the grammar is used so thank you guys so much for for joining me today so disha the Cardo Aiden now Mike Tyson Sajid yoga Vivek Alisa Angela Lalique OCA just trying to run through some names as as quickly as possible lolli Rose Gustav Vicki Daniel Gertrudis thank you guys so much I hope that you enjoy the rest of your weekend NAT yes thank you Father's Day Father's Day is tomorrow is my second my second Father's Day that I am celebrating hope you have a wonderful weekend and I will see you guys next time so long

Correcting Celebrity Twitter Mistakes | Grammar Lesson

everyone makes mistakes even celebrities and today I want to correct those mistakes together that's coming up [Music] what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills and the way that we're going to practice our English skills today is by trying to identify different mistakes and see if we can correct those mistakes and these are mistakes that are on Twitter now I know what you're thinking Twitter it is not the best place for somebody to learn English if you are reading through tweets then you are going to encounter a variety of spelling mistakes grammar mistakes so we're gonna take these mistakes turn it into a positive and make it a teachable moment if you are on Twitter and you want to really get some value then check out our Twitter that is a good place to learn English and that is also a very shameless plug for our Twitter account so what we're going to do is I am going to show you some tweets tweets from famous celebrities and each tweet has a mistake maybe it has more than one mistake and I'll show you the tweet and I'll give you a moment to see if you can identify what that mistake is and afterwards we will correct it together and I will tell you what's wrong with it okay are you ready for the first celebrity tweet it comes from Lana Del Rey this is the only legitimate account I have don't follow any other account that says it's run by me what's the mistake I'll give you a moment all right technically there are two mistakes the first one is it's hopefully you spotted that one she uses the possessive it's when she really meant to use that apostrophe to make it the contraction it is don't follow any other account that says it is run by me it's run by me also there should be a period at the end but we will excuse that this is Twitter the next tweet is from Jamie Oliver the famous cooking show guy I really don't know how else to say it but he tweeted the following another true story a massive amount of UK farmers use human waste as fertilizer on their land do any other countries do this is this normal what do you think is the mistake or mess stakes okay so let's let's unpack this tweet obviously the first thing you may have noticed is just some capitalization mistakes always start a new sentence with a capital letter capital A and another capital D and do and capital I in is also UK is a proper noun so that is capitalized as well UK this is also missing the preposition about because it sounds a little awkward as it's written right now another true story about a massive amount there are also a couple of spelling mistakes he spells waste incorrectly human waste it should be spelled W a ste human waste it was the wrong hominem finally countries the plural form is spelled Co UN TR i es I understand people do this often when they just want to shorten words they want to write really fast that's what Twitter is all about but in this case you're not saving yourself a ton of time because it's really just one letter instead of YS it's just IES again these are just pet peeves I know people like ah Twitter who cares it's not serious but again it's just good practice good practice for us the next tweet is yes you guessed it the Donald all right we there's there's actually quite a bit to choose from with with his tweets but he tweeted the following Hillary Clinton should not be given national security briefings and that she is a loose cannon with extraordinarily bad judgment and instincts what's the mistake what's what's the big mistake that stands out so Donal made a simple mistake confusing the words loose and lose because the expression is a loose canon l oo.s and if you don't know what a loose canon is it's an expression that means that somebody is unpredictable uncontrollable but he should have written loose loose cannon loose versus loose there's also a spelling mistake at the end instincts is spelled I and STI ncts he forgot that n Oh Donald Donald Donald Donald the next tweet is from Justin Bieber probably somebody many of you may be familiar with pretty famous singer if you have

Bieber fever is that even a thing or maybe it's a believer people are gonna think I'm a believer just because I know that anyway he tweeted the following some video games some old movies that was a long bus ride but we here sleep what's the mistake what's what stands out to you right away what do you think so in the first part he's kind of just listing something so we'll excuse that you know some video games some old movies but that last sentence again simple sentences you need a subject and a verb but we are here but we're here I don't I guess maybe it's a little catchy R to say things like that and their fans like it but for all of you out there remember subject verb subject verb the next tweet is from Miley Cyrus another famous musician and she tweeted the following all right I don't even know what the

the spelling I guess if we're gonna get technical I was kind of hard on Bieber for doing the subject-verb she should have a subject in that sentence I went for a run and period at the end of that last sentence but again this is Twitter you're gonna find this all the time except on interactive English where we are super nerdy and we write in complete sentences

let's go to the next tweet which is from Mary J. Blige another singer and I think she also does acting nowadays so a lot of people are very versatile in their singing and acting but she tweeted the following why is it that people always try to understand estimate my intelligence they should never do that I haven't been on continued what's the mistake what stands out to you immediately so the big thing here would be the word intelligence again the spelling for intelligence i n t e l l i g e n c e intelligence once again Twitter is rife with spelling mistakes but teachable moment we can use the correct spelling intelligence she's also missing a word to make this question sound less awkward why is it that people always try to and and this is where it gets a little weird understand estimate I think what she wanted to say was underestimate my intelligence and this may be because of autocorrect but I'm pretty sure she wanted to say why is it that people always try to underestimate my intelligence the next tweet is from Rita Ora and she tweeted the following drop in my new song Monday if this get 100,000 retweets what do you see what's the problem okay in in this tweet two things stand out immediately Monday again it is a proper noun capital M also you'd say this gets subject verb agreement if this gets 100 thousand retweets period I don't know maybe that song didn't drop because seemed pretty far from those 100 thousand retweets and you know let's just do a bonus one for good measure alright I got another tweet for you and again it's from the Donald just can't get enough of this guy alright so Donald Trump tweeted another mistake can you believe it he tweeted the following looks to me like the Bernie people will fight if not their blood sweat and tears was a total waste of time cane stands for opposite what do you think what what what mistakes do you see I'll go ahead and give you that the plural mistakes and that there there's there's I'd say three big ones can you find them so in going through this tweet the first one would be there alright we're talking about the possessive their blood t h e I R again this is a hominem that that I think a lot of English learners might confuse not not really sure what his excuse is though so there t h e I R also we're talking about their blood sweat and tears which is a plural subject so we need a plural verb their blood sweat and tears were a total waste of time and yes waste is also it's it's misspelled or just confused it should be W a s t e it is a waste of time it is not important you should not be involved in this maybe correcting this tweet is a waste of time I don't know and cane stands for opposite I you know I'm not really sure what he was going for here but probably the opposite missing that article duh so how did you guys do were you able to identify most of those mistakes if you were let me know just write to me in the comments and just say write the words Twitter champ if you are a Twitter champ and you were able to identify those comments celebrity Twitter mistakes write to me in the comments and say Twitter champ so that I know I know that you were a Twitter champ if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button and and don't forget to follow us on Twitter we are not going to make mistakes at least I hope not we probably will alright and you can point them out to us I hope you do ok thanks so much for watching and I will see you next time

DESCRIBING GRAPHS IN ENGLISH | Great for IELTS, TOEFL, or Business Presentations

- You know what's more exciting than a graph? Describing it. Just kidding, they are not very exciting. But they are very useful. A graph looks like this. It's a great visual way to show us data and variables. And we see graphs everywhere. We see them at school. We see them at work. We see them in newspapers. So why do you need to know how to describe a graph? We use data graphs and analytics to talk about everything in our lives, from our gas bill, to politics, to crime rates. It's very, very, very, very important that if you are a learner of English, you need to know how to describe, what you see in a graph.

We need more than just, oh the numbers are going up, or the numbers are going down. Because it's very important that your specific. And that is why your here today, to talk about, how we can describe these in English. So what I've done for this lesson, I've split it up in a few different categories. And these categories are related to the trends and how the numbers are going. How the lines are pointing. So, I'm going to talk about words that you can use to describe when the lines are going up. Words that you can use to describe when the lines go down, when they remain the same, and then of course, we'll have a practice.

So what can we use if we see the numbers going up? Well first of all, we can use rise. So you can say, that the numbers are rising, or the numbers rose. So this can be like, going steady, little by little, or they could go a lot. Gas prices rose significantly in the last quarter. Another word is increased. And this is again, it's just like rise, they're synonyms. You can say the numbers are rising or the numbers are increasing. You can use either. Another word for going up is, soared or soaring. This is little different because it implies going up significantly and fast, it's a sudden increase. You have to use it if the numbers kind of just shot up.

The use of electricity soared last month as temperatures dropped. Okay, so now let's talk about how to describe numbers that are going down. Of course, if you want to use a general term for numbers going down you can always say decreased. And this is very general. If you want to be safe, and your not exactly sure of the trend, of the numbers, you can always say decreased. Well how about if the numbers are kind of steadily going down. well for that you can use decline. Because a decline implies, kind of, a change in numbers going down over time.

Another kind of general term, would be drop. This like just decrease, can be suddenly or it can be a little more steadily, but one thing is for sure, they're going down. The crime rate dropped last year. Now to get a little more dramatic, we can say fall. The numbers, or the sales or whatever, they fell. This is more of a sudden decrease when the numbers are falling. It's a little bit more than just slight decrease. You see a very sudden decrease, you can say that the numbers plummeted. It means that they went down far and quick. The company's stock plummeted after the CEO resigned.

Now be careful when you use these words, because while some can be very general, like decreased or dropped, a word like plummeted can only, only be used, when you see a very big change in the graphs. It's very, very good word to know, especially when your describing graphs. Okay now, there's another category that I want to talk to you about and this category is, if the numbers kinda go, up and down, and up and down, and up and down. So if you see the numbers go like that, you have two choices. The first is fluctuated. And the next one is zigzag. So fluctuated really means, when the numbers are going up and down.

The difference is that, they don't have to go up and down a lot. It just means that they are doing this back and forth. So they could go up and down a lot or they could go up and down a little. So we say that they are fluctuating or they fluctuated. Now zigzag is a little bit different because when you see numbers that zigzag, they have that (makes zigzagging sounds) zigzag pattern, which means that the fluctuations are really, really big. There's a really big difference between the high and low points. So because of the nature of this graph, just going like that, I wouldn't say it's very common but if you see a graph that goes exactly like that, you can say that it zigzags.

You don't hear it very often because mostly fluctuations are not that high. Her blood pressure fluctuated wildly before she became ill. Okay, so how to we describe a graph, that looks kind of like a line. If we want to more specific, when numbers kind of remain the same, because this is also very important to be able to do. So, for example, if the number stay the same, we say that the numbers remain constant, stay the same, or leveled off, or we can say that the numbers or the sales or whatever stabilized. And this one, the last one, stabilize, you can only really use it when the numbers before where fluctuating, they're going up and down and then eventually they kind of became constant.

So, it has an implication of, before they weren't stable but now they stabilized. The economy finally stabilized after years of fluctuation. So now that I've given you a lot of different verbs, to use in describing these graphs, how can we be even more specific? Of course we can use adverbs. So adverbs help us be even more specific, or describe a trend even more closely. We can use adverbs such as, gradually, or dramatically, or steadily, or even significantly, next to our verbs to kind of give us a little bit more of an accurate description. So I've given you so many different kinds of words that you can use because I want you to be more specific when you write or when you express what you're seeing but also because it's a little bit redundant if you keep using the same word.

So please, please, please, don't keep saying, oh the numbers are rising, the numbers are rising. I want you to be able to be more specific and be able to use a lot of different ways, which is why I've given you this vocabulary. Now, I've given you a lot of great information. It's time to put it to use and practice. Look at this graph right here. What I want you to do is write a sentence in the comments describing a part of it. Be as specific as you can. Just make sure that you use the vocabulary, in our video today. I hope you enjoy this lesson and had as much fun with graphs as I did.

I love graphs. So exciting. Well if you did. If you had fun and if you learned something, please share this video with all of your friends. Thanks for watching and I'll see you next time, bye. So we can use at so, blah, Yanna. Graphs looks like, oh okay. You know it's more exciting, oh okay, I need to stop. Moving on, moving on, I don't have time for this.

DIFFERENT WAYS TO SAY "GO AWAY!"

- Have you ever wanted to tell someone to go away? If so, I am going to teach you several useful ways that you can do just that. What's up, everyone? My name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills. And what I want to talk to you about today is something that is actually very useful. I want to talk to you about different ways that you can tell somebody to go away. You don't want this person around, you don't want to talk to this person anymore, so you just want them to go away, and I'm going to talk to you about several polite ways to do that, and then some impolite ways to do that as well.

I'll also give you some examples so you can see how the expression is used in context. So let's begin with polite; it's better just to start with polite, and then we'll work our way to being rude and mean. But if you want to be polite and tell someone to go away, and this applies to anyone; it doesn't matter who, you can just ask them, "would you please leave?" So you're asking them a question, you're using "please" to be a little nice and say you know, would you please leave? You want this person -- (laughing) you just want them to go away! You don't want them around anymore, so it's polite; you could say, "would you please leave?" - Would you please leave? (dramatic music) - Would you please leave this room right now?

- You know what? I'm not even gonna talk to you. Would you please leave? - Another polite way to tell someone to go away is just to say, "you know, I think it's time for you to go." And this is something that you might hear at a party. Say somebody's getting out of hand, and you don't want this person around anymore, you want them to go away, but you don't want to be very rude, so you might tell them, "I think it's time for you to go." That way, this person will get the hint; they will understand, alright, yeah, this person wants me to go away. - Chris, I... I think it's time for you to go.

- I think it's time for you to go. - Alright, now I think it's time for you to go. - Might be time for you to go. - It's definitely not time for you to go because I have some more great expressions, and the next two that I want to talk to you about are more so for family and friends. So these are for people that you're a little closer to. And then you could say to them, "could you please give me some space?" Maybe you're having a fight, and you don't want to talk to them anymore, and you want them to go away, you could just ask them, "could you please give me some space?" This is something I think couples might say to each other all the time, especially after a fight, and (laughing) you don't want to be around the other person, and you would ask them, "could you please give me some space?" - Can you give me some space, okay?

- Yeah, as Bernadette would say, give me some space. - Will wanted me to give him some space. - Something else that you could tell them, again, it's for family and friends, you might just say, "I just need to be alone." I need to be alone right now. And when somebody hears that, then they say okay, they need to be alone; that means that I need to go away. So you could tell your family, your friends, I just need to be alone right now, and that is a polite way of telling this person to go away. - I think I just need to be alone. - I think right now, I just need to be alone for a while.

- I just need to be alone right now. - I need to be alone for a while. - So, you can be polite and just tell them, I just need a moment alone. Could you please give me some space? Now if we want to start moving towards being more impolite, there are two ways that you could be condescending. And if you don't know what condescending means, it's a way of talking to somebody that you feel superior to this person. You are above this person, and you're talking down to them, and when you're doing this, you are being condescending. And a way that you can be condescending and tell somebody to go away is, "run along".

If somebody says run along, they're telling you to go away, and yeah, it's just rude. It's condescending, it's what adults might say to other kids, they don't want them around. They want them to go away, and they might just say, okay, run along; run along. We don't need you here anymore; run along. - Run along, now. - Okay, run along now, you impossible child. Run along. - You could also say this to other adults, but it's offensive; if somebody told me, okay, we don't need you; run along, I would be pissed off! - Run along, Cedric. - Run along; go make yourself interesting. - Run along and play with your little toys, hmmm?

- Another condescending way to tell somebody to go away is just skidaddle. It's just an expression, and it means the same as run along, and again, I think more of adults talking to children when they say skidaddle. It's not as common as telling somebody to run along, and because of that, I don't think it's as offensive, either, but still, those are two condescending ways to tell somebody to go away. - You know, Mom and Dad, why don't you skidaddle for a sec, and let us hipsters talk in privo? - So now, for the moment you've probably been waiting for, (laughs) which are the rude expressions. The impolite ways to tell someone to go away.

These are, I think they're pretty common. These are phrases that you would hear when watching TV or movies, probably even gonna hear them on the street. Hopefully, people aren't talking to you when they say this, but just so you know what they are, and what they mean, and you know, in case you need to use them, it's useful. So the first one is, just get lost! I think this is a very common one. If you want someone to go away, you can just look at them and say, get lost! Perhaps this person's bothering you. They're up in your face, and you say you know, get lost! Go away! I don't want to look at you. I don't want you here anymore; get lost!

- Get lost! - Get lost! - I didn't steal anything from you! - Get lost (mumbles). - [Man] Get lost! - [Woman] Get lost? - [Man] Yes! - Nice try. - Get lost! - The next expression is beat it! Alright, you don't need to be here. I want you to go away, beat it! (laughing) And maybe you might even think of the famous song by Michael Jackson, "Beat It". Beat it, beat it, Beat it, beat it, No one wants to be defeated. - Alright, exactly! Yeah, Michael Jackson had it right. He wanted those people to go away. He wanted them to beat it! - Beat it! - Beat it! - Beat it. - Another great way to tell somebody to go away is just one word, and that is scam!

Doesn't matter if it's somebody you know, or if it's somebody you don't know, if you want them to go away, you can just say, scam! You could even start throwing some of these together. Scram; beat it, get lost! Then they'll really get the hint that you want them to go away. - Now scam! - Scram! - Ew, who are you? Scram, scam! - Let's scam! - Another expression is take a hike! You can just tell the person, hey, you know, take a hike! Really try to capture that emphasis and intonation; take a hike! Because it just doesn't mean the same if you're like, hey, you know, take a hike. That person might just laugh at you, so you want to be mean; take a hike! - Take a hike!

- Here; take a hike, toots! - Take a hike, tiny. - We can also tell someone to get the hell out of here! I don't want you around; go away! Get the hell out of here! (laughing) This is, yeah, that's probably one of my favorites; I probably use this maybe a little more than some of the other ones, probably get lost and you know, get the hell out of here! Get the hell out of here; I don't want you around! Get the hell out of here! Notice you end up adding "the hell", because you could just say get out of here; that's perfectly fine, but no, no, no, no, no; you want to be a little more impolite about it.

You want to say, "get the hell out of here!" - Get the hell out of here. - Get the hell out of here. - Get the hell out of here! - Get the hell out of here! - Then, we have another expression which we can lace with a little profanity, and you could just tell somebody, you know, leave me the (beep) alone. I don't want, I don't want you around. I want you to go away, and I want you to leave me the (beep) alone. This is also a common one that you might hear people say, and they add that profanity, they add it to give emphasis, to make it even that much stronger, that much more impolite.

Leave me the (beep) alone. - Leave me the (beep) alone! - Leave me the (beep) alone! - That's it; now leave me the (beep) alone. - And those expressions, those are all perfect for American English, but if we want to throw in some British English, you could also tell somebody to bugger off. That is British English, telling somebody to go away, just say bugger off! So if you're traveling in the UK, and you want somebody to go away, just tell them, bugger off! - Bugger off! - Bugger off! - Now, bugger off! - If you say this when you're in the US, I don't know if they'll understand you, maybe they will, based on the context, but it's better to tell somebody in the US to scam, beat it, get the hell out of here, leave me the (beep) alone!

So there you have it. Those are all excellent ways that you can tell somebody to go away. So depending on whether you want to be polite or impolite, you can use those expressions, and I hope you use them wisely. Thank you so much for watching, and I'll see you next time. Okay, yeah; that's it. It's time for you to go. What are you... Would you please leave? I... look, please, will you just give me some space?

Alright, you... you know, run along! What are you... What are you still doing here? Alright, you're starting to, you're starting to piss me off now, alright? Get out of here! Did -- did you hear me? Get the hell out of here! What -- get lost! Scram! Leave me the (beep) -- (static) You know I didn't mean any of that! I love you guys; it's just always good to review.

DON'T SAY THIS! You Should Say This Instead. | Upgrade Your Small Talk

Don't say this. I'm going to tell you what to say instead. Now, of of course you can say anything you want. I really just want to help you upgrade your small talk. So, really this is about developing your fluency skills, developing your communication skills, and what I want to do is I want you to participate, and we're going to think of different questions and statements that you can ask whenever you're engaging in small talk. So, if you are interested in getting these lesson notes, click on the link down below in the description. Join my community. You'll have access to them. If you're already a part of it, then I have sent them to you. So, what I'd like to do is that well, let me tell you what I mean when I talk when I say small talk. This is just casual conversation that is often about, you know, unimportant topics, nothing too serious, that you're really going to have, at least in my mind, with someone that you either don't know, and you met them for the first time, or maybe somebody who's an acquaintance. You've You've met them before, but it's not like you know this person really well.

Generally, when you talk about small talk with another person, I don't think about talking with close friends or family members. So, what I want to do is look at some specific questions and statements that I think are often used. Many of them are cliché, and I want to share with you other things that you can use to make the conversation more vibrant, to open more doors to topics that you can then discuss and keep the conversation going. That is what's important. That's what I want you to do. I don't want to shut down conversations. I want to keep them going. So, with that in mind, I want you, when you're participating, and I want you to share your thoughts and opinions, I want you to write open-ended questions, because we're going to avoid these yes-no questions, and I'll tell you that right off the bat. So, if this is something that you're interested in as far as communication and and talking with others, please subscribe, turn on notifications, then that way I can become your teacher. My name is West.

The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. Believe it or not, I've done many many lessons. For those of you who have been following me for some time, I haven't really talked much about small talk. So, let's look at the first the first set of questions. So, these are questions that I think are I guess you could say they're cliché. That they're so commonly used, or you hear them all the time, that try to think of better questions to ask in these cases. And this is something that I'm guilty of as well, and other native speakers. So, if you feel like you are you're like, "Oh, I ask these questions." That is okay. I'm also guilty of asking these same questions, and this is something that, you know, native speakers are trying to learn and improve and work on their communication skills. It's perfectly normal. So, here is the first one. I want you to upgrade this. So, what do you do? Now, I told you again, I'm I'm guilty. I've asked this before. But, what's the issue with this? Now, as I'm going through and talking about this, I will share with you some other questions that I think are better. In the chat right now, or in the comments, what do you think? What are some better questions to ask that you think would be more engaging than just asking somebody, "So, so what do you do?" This is I said it's cliché. It's one of the most common questions, and it's fine, honestly, if you, you know, you want to talk about work. But, the the issue, at least that I'm that I'm highlighting, is it's very predictable.

I I told you it's one of the most commonly asked questions. You meet someone. I I I've asked this before. I probably will end up asking this in the future. But it it can maybe, depending on the other person, it can feel a little bit like a job interview. Like, "Well, you know, tell me about your work. What What do you do? What are your strengths? What are your weaknesses?" But also, I think the other important thing is that some people enjoy talking about their work. I I'm one of them. If somebody asks me about it. Other people, they may not like talking about their job. Or maybe you're in a situation where you're like, "Well, the last thing I want to talk about right now is work." I understand when you meet someone or you don't know them well, this is a common icebreaker. Let's talk about work. That's something we can both discuss.

But I feel like there are other engaging questions that you can ask. So, uh keep keep those questions coming. And what samples? Again, there's no right or wrong answer in this case. what would be some relevant questions in this case? So, here are some examples. What's keeping you busy these days? In that way, you can talk about work. You could talk about something else. It doesn't matter. You're letting the other person decide. Uh what do you do for fun when you're not working? All right, we're automatically talking about something that the other person likes and enjoys. Those are things that people would care talking about. They want to share the things that they're passionate about. And speaking of passion, what passion projects are you working on? That's a little more specific, but I think you could use this. Again, a lot of it depends on the context and and who you're talking to and where. But generally, these questions allow people to talk about more than just work. Of course, they you can talk about work. Maybe that's how they respond. What What's what's keeping you busy these days? Well, you know, work has been crazy lately because of this, that, and the other. But maybe they want to talk about a new hobby, or perhaps their family, their kids. And this just gives you more hooks to follow up on. You're talking about this time, okay, now I can ask more questions related to this other person's interest. And some people ask you you said you know, what do you do for a living? You you you could again, it's a work-related question that works. What are your interests? Um Uh what's your profession? Good, excellent. So, these are just different things that you can ask that go beyond just work. Of course, it is incredibly common for people to talk about work and that's fine, but I just want to get these, you know, the fluency juices flowing as far as what are what are some other things you can say.

Here's the next one. I have a I have a little anecdote about this. So, I want you to upgrade this. Can you believe this weather? All right, it this is it it is it is cliché. And I I I want you to again, think of other things that you can ask that besides talking about the weather. Of course, there's many things that you can discuss. Uh you know, how how would you upgrade this and then I'll give you my opinion. Now, the anecdote that I want to share with you is well, first I want to say like why this is an issue. Like the ultimate I don't know what to say. We're in this, you know, I just met you. I'm not sure I can we can talk about the weather. It's a shared experience. Maybe it's there's it's been snowing a lot. It's incredibly hot. So, it is, you know, a topic that people can discuss. But because I said it's cliché, it is like the ultimate lay the ultimate okay, I don't know what I should say. Let's go to the weather. And because of that, it yeah, the conversation may not go anywhere. So, my personal experience with this I did a long time ago one of these first lessons like it was, you know, don't say this, say this kind of again trying to that's my hook to capture you into it. And one of the things I talked about was the weather. And I did not explain it as well as I'm trying to explain it right now and saying it's cliché. There are other things that you can discuss. And because I didn't do that in the comments people were so upset and they're like, I'm from this place. We always talk about the weather.

We talk about the rain. We talk about the snow. And again, it was partly my fault because I didn't explain I'm like, okay, I'm not I'm not saying you can't talk about the weather, but because it's so common try to think of other ways to engage with another person that that you just met. So, let me give you my examples, but yeah, people in the comments people were not happy. The video performed quite well and maybe that was why. Maybe it was triggering for some people. you want to, you know, make a more local observation, you know, hey, I was reading about this something going on. What's your take on that? Especially if it's something that's well-known. Again, we're, you know, apart from just the weather um what are your plans this weekend?

Then you're talking about, okay, what is this person actually going to do? There's a lot that you can say. Maybe you want to instead of going into the future you want to go into the past. Like, hey, what did you do this this past weekend? How did you spend your weekend? So, of course there are other things that you can discuss as opposed to the weather. If you want to talk the the weather, if you love talking about the weather, feel free to do so. All I'm pointing out is that it it can be cliché and depending on the situation it can come off as like, oh, maybe this this person doesn't know you know, how to begin the conversation like what do we talk about? So, asking these how and why questions I I think show it is a signal that you care about somebody's perspective. You care about the things that they've been doing or that they plan to do or want to do which is another, you know, good way to uh to engage in small talk. Um, somebody said never talked about the weather. Uh, the weather needs to pick up. I'm under the weather. Yeah, if you're under the weather, sure. Uh, so I'm not saying that you can never talk about the weather. All right? And I just be mindful of the situation, what's going on. If you're struggling to think about some topic, then okay, then you could always comment about the weather and, you know, get somebody's opinion, ask what they think.

The next one and this one uh I you know, I'm kind of curious to hear what you all think. And this this can be a conversation killer, all right? And this has happened to me uh specifically. So, I want you to upgrade this. Do you like Biden? Do you like Trump? And I'll share you my I'll share my examples. The problem that I would say is casual small talk is it's not suited for direct political questions. Again, we're assuming when I think of small talk, this is somebody you're you're meeting for the first time or maybe they're just an acquaintance. You don't know them really well. Politics, of course, can be polarizing and therefore, especially if you are uh you know, using English as a second language, I think you could avoid it or you can try to ease your way into it. And that's what I want you to think about right now. I'm going to put you on the spot.

But even just right at the beginning, like even if like even if it's somebody I support and I think, "Yes, this politician is so amazing." Not that I really think that about any politician. The first thing that went off in my mind is like, "That is a really strange question." I don't even know this person. The first thing they said is like, "Oh, do you like Biden?" I was traveling in Austria with my family and I was talking to my girl and same thing. Somebody else came up to me. They heard us speaking English. "Oh, you're from the US. All right, yeah, you know, I've never been there. What do you think of Trump?" And that was the first thing they said.

And again, whether or not you like the person or hate the person, the first thing that I think is like, "That's a strange question." Even if even if I agree with you politically, just being that direct like, "Do you What do you think of this person? Do you like this person? Do you not like them?" In my mind it's like, "Okay, this is like strange. Like why why are we just jumping right into this?" So what I wanted to what I wanted to get into is if you want to talk about politics, if you really want to kind of ease your way into talking about, "Oh, do you like this person? Do you like that?" There are some other questions that I think are probably more relevant. Uh again, I I think depending on who you are, maybe it's best to avoid this. But if you wanted to kind of ease into a political discussion, you could talk about like something local.

Like, "What do you think is the most important local issue in the community right now?" Uh like, "Where are you from?" If I said, "Well, you know, I've lived up and down the East Coast. My parents are in Florida." "Oh, you know, what what's like something that's happening? What's an issue that that Florida is facing right now?" All right? That that would be relevant. "What are some of the biggest biggest political or social issues going on in your country?" And you can kind of again, listen to the other person. And then And then maybe ask about uh whether it's Biden or Trump or some political candidate. Or even like, "What is What's one thing about politics that makes you worried about the future?" You're not asking the person to immediately take a stance of, "This is, you know, who I am." Or, "This is who I agree with. This is who I disagree with." You're letting this person then express their opinion without worrying like, "Okay, is this going to be confrontational?" And again, you can focus on shared experiences. You know, discussing the the feeling in the air rather than supporting a specific candidate. That feeling in the air goes back to like, "What are some of the challenges? What issues are being like do you face right now?" So something to keep in mind. Because again, if somebody asked me, "You know, do you like Trump? Do you like Biden?" The first thing I think, "Okay, that's a weird question." And then I'm wondering, "Okay, is this going to be like a an argument? Is this person wanting to debate me? Like, what what's going on?" And that does kind of shut down the conversation. So if you want to talk about politics, these are some better ways to ease in to the conversation. The next one, are you having a good time?

I told you these these questions are cliché. I'm guilty of asking this depending on the event that you're in um you go up to some hey, you know, what do you think? Are you having a good time? Uh the issue. Try to avoid these closed-ended yes-no questions. I think that's a good rule of thumb if you want to keep the conversation going and really engage with someone else. Avoid the yes-no questions because in this case somebody said, are you having a good time? No. All right, that's kind of like uh shutting the conversation down a little right there, maybe a little awkward. Or even if somebody says, are you having a good time? Like, yes.

Well, now it's almost like you're back at square one. And then you need to come up with something else. So, you're not really able to then continuing you're not going to you're not able to continue talking uh about I mean, for example, like, oh, are you having a good time? Yes. It's like, okay, that's great. How about the weather? And then you end up going into that. So, just try to think of more closed and or open-ended questions. What's been the highlight of the event so far? If you're at a wedding or you're at a conference, you know, ask about that highlight. That's good. What do you know Do you How do you know the host? Or you know, what's your connection to this organization?

So, again, depends on the context, the situation that you're in. I think it's relevant or what's your take on, you know, again, it's a shared experience. The venue, the music, the atmosphere. All right, what's your take on that? By highlighting or by asking for a highlight or a recommendation, you're inviting the other person to share their preferences and you're avoiding that yes, no thing. So, let's look at the next one. I love again, we get into to politics and you know, it it amps up the conversation as far as like looking at the comments. This is one again, I'm guilty. I've asked this before and it's okay. I also there are many ways that I need to upgrade my own small talk. I think we can always improve our communication skills. Have you traveled anywhere lately? Now, what's the problem with this?

The question is quite useless if the other person just says no. And depending on the situation, maybe it could make the other person feel bad. Maybe thinking like well, their their life is boring or something's going on they haven't been able to travel and it could put the other person in an awkward situation and again, that couldn't that could influence the conversation moving forward. So, instead of asking, you know, have you traveled anywhere? What do you think? What are some other better questions that you can ask even if it is about travel. So, here's here's my thought and then again, you can share what you think. I've I wanted to highlight the down here like why it's better, which is why I've included all of these if if situations.

So, like instead oh, if you could vacation anywhere right now, where would you go? You know, where would it be? If you could revisit a place, where would it be? Again, so talking about a place you would like to go and versus oh, where would you revisit? A place you've already been or if we want to talk about living somewhere, if you could live anywhere, anywhere in the world, where would it be? When you ask these if questions, you're you're allowing them to use the imagination and you're able to evaluate their taste, their personality, the things that they may like to do, depending on the location. If they say, "Well, if I could go anywhere, I'd love to go to Thailand." Then I think, "Oh, maybe this person likes the water, they like the beach." Uh and it doesn't really require any sort of travel budget as far as like, "Oh, where have you been lately?" Well, I've been nowhere um because times are tough and I haven't been able to travel with my family.

Then it's like, okay, now, you know, where's this conversation going now? It could become uh a little awkward. So, keep that in mind. Again, these are common questions that are cliché and they I told you, I'm just going to reiterate. Yes, I've asked these questions before. Now, this one definitely definitely be careful. Why are you still single? Questions like this are intrusive. And it could be a sensible a sensitive or even a painful topic. So, it it does not lend itself to having a productive conversation if you're just trying to engage with someone casually. Why are you still single? When are you getting married? Why don't you have kids? These are questions that I would definitely say, yeah, you you don't need to ask these things, especially when it comes to small talk and you're you just met this person or you don't know them very well.

I think you might be surprised how often it does happen because, you know, different countries, different cultures, some things are accepted, others are not. Here is what I would say instead, "What's something you're really looking forward to next month?" Uh or how do you usually like to decompress after a particularly long and busy weekend? Thinking about those activities that somebody enjoys or they like to do. Or what's a book, podcast, or show that, you know, that's completely changed your perspective? Or or what is something that you're listening to lately if it's a podcast? You're allowing people to discuss and talk about the things that they're engaged in where there's some a level of enthusiasm because they're interested in this and they're able to talk about some of the things maybe that they're looking forward to doing instead of these personal questions that are intrusive and it's like you're digging into their personal life. Something to keep in mind, but again, I think you'd be surprised how often some of these questions end up or come up.

Let's look at some responses. So, those are questions that you meet someone and you want to start a conversation with them and those are just some ways to upgrade that com- the the the questions to to create a more engaging conversation. And here I want to look at some responses. "That sounds expensive." Okay, be careful with this one. Let's upgrade it. Let's think of some other statements. What are some other things that you could say instead of, "Wow, that sounds expensive." Because I just mentioned about money. In the US, I think depending on, you know, the person you're talking to, it could be more of a private matter. But if you're talking if you say, "That sounds expensive." Somebody says, "Well, I you know, I just went traveled to this place. It was amazing." You say, "Well, that sounds expensive." You're you're highlighting the cost and then you're putting the other person in a position to either defend the the spending that yes, okay, it's okay, it's not that expensive, it's fine, you know, I have the budget for it. Or in that case, maybe it's going to sound like they're bragging about how much money they have, their wealth, or how much money they make. So, this is a statement that again, I think we can make it better and upgrade. And the way that I would do this or some ideas, uh if somebody if you don't even want to make it about money, somebody's talking about, you know, oh I went to this place even if I think, wow, I could never afford that. I wouldn't say that. I would say, wow, that, you know, that sounds like a unique experience. Or that sounds like an incredible investment in your happiness, that's something that you enjoy. Maybe it's something that you would spend money on, but I'm not going to. A lot of people love concerts and they're willing to spend two, three hundred uh dollars on a concert ticket, that's that's not who I am. But I wouldn't say, wow, that sounds expensive.

I wow, that's uh that's a great investment to make you happy, you know, tell me about it. Or again, if you just want to compliment like, wow, you clearly have good taste. you know, you're giving a compliment more than anything else. Because small talk, you're trying to build a connection. You want to keep a a positive energy. You want to make it inclusive. Instead of like, well, it's something you can do, but I can't. Or, you know, oh you're lucky, but a lot of people can't do this, it's very expensive, that was a waste of money. Just be mindful of the way some of these things are are phrased, especially when it comes to money.

The problem that I hear is that people say this too soon. And then it really is a disclaimer. If it's like, "Hi, I'm Wes. Nice to meet you. Where are you from? Oh, you're from Vietnam." And then they say, "My English is not that good." I think it's a little too soon. If you want to get in, you know, start the conversation, and you're talking about your weekend plans or things you want to do, places you want to visit, and we're having this conversation, and then you want to use this to be a little more self-deprecating, because you people want to be humble, and you don't and you don't say, "Well, you know, sorry, like, you know, my English not that great." Especially if it comes to a certain topic, then I then I understand.

Just don't don't use it too soon. When you first meet someone and you start the conversation, "My English is not that good," then it really does become a disclaimer. Some things that I I think would be better to say, especially if you're in this conversation and you you don't understand everything, "Oh, could you say that again? Maybe a bit more slowly. I I want to make sure I catch everything." Or just be direct, like, "Hey, could you explain what you mean by this?" If you don't understand a specific word or phrase. "I haven't heard that before." Or it again, throwing out another type of disclaimer, um but I think it is more positive, like, "I'm better at understanding than speaking. Please bear with me." So, in that case, you're not just putting yourself down, but you are talking about like a value. "Oh, you're you know, you're better at understanding than than speaking. You know, you're working on your communication skills.

These statements, they help you shift shift the dynamic from an apology to like, well, you know, my English is not that great, to you know, collaboration. You know, using these alternatives, it's giving the other person more instructions so that the conversation can succeed. Can you explain this word or phrase? Or maybe I don't Could you speak a little more slowly? I might not catch it. So, again, if you want to say, look, my English is not that good, I feel like that would be more relevant as you get into the conversation, but not right at the very beginning. All right? Some Keep that in mind. I don't care. Okay. I think, you know, yeah, you you know why this could be problematic. You're talking to someone, you ask them something, I don't care.

Uh it sounds dismissive. To a native speaker, I don't care could it could even sound like I'm bored by this topic. If you If I were to say, "What do you think about AI and the implications it might have on the workforce in the future?" Maybe maybe, you know, there's there are things you could say. But if you just tell me, like, look, I don't care, then I think, okay, they, you know, they don't want to talk about this. Maybe I'll go speak with someone else. Or I commonly, again, if somebody's giving you a preference and you want to say I don't care, I do understand that. That's fine. Uh if you did want to upgrade that, if somebody say, "Hey, would you like uh um you know, would you like a glass of water or a lemonade?" All right? You could say, "Look, I don't have a strong feeling either way, you know, what's your take?" Uh and then even if you want to get into politics and you're asking about that, then, you know, you could uh say this, "Or both options sound great to me. Which one are you leaning towards?" Again, if we're talking about options.

Um "I'm easy. I'm happy to go with whatever you prefer." Talking about options. This first one would be more like my example of somebody asking about AI and of you saying I don't care. that's when you can say, "Well, I just don't have a strong feeling about that." And then ask the other person, "What do you think? this can be a conversation dead end. Even though it might be true, it is an honest response, but it could signal to the other person that you're not really engaged, you're not really excited, you maybe you just don't want to talk with someone. So, if you're in a situation where you're like, "I want to avoid people, I don't want to talk to anybody." Then maybe this response is for you. But if you are actually trying to keep a conversation going, have some small talk, I think these are some better statements that you can use instead of saying tired or I'm just tired. Like, "Look, I've had a lot on my plate, but I'm hoping to get a second wind." Using some idioms. If you have a lot on your plate, you're very busy. If you get your second wind, then you're just getting energized after a period of being tired, then you're having, you know, more energy whenever you get your second wind. Great phrase. "I'm a little low on caffeine today, but I'm I'm hanging in there." Uh instead indicating that yeah, the the energy's low, but you're going to keep going. You're going to keep going. "It's been one of those whirlwind weeks, you know how it is." So, it's you you want to maintain this warmth even if your physical energy is low. You don't want to make the other person feel like they're just sucking the energy right out of you. Like, "Yeah, I'm just tired." Um I I don't care. I'm bored by this conversation. How about uh "That's not true." Again, it's very direct, I understand it, but it can be very blunt for small talk. And the other person, if I meet someone, they're I say something and like, "Look, that's not true." I would interpret it that's kind of confrontational. It's disagreeable. We don't need to uh start arguing about politics immediately.

So, some other things that I think you could say, which would be better. Like, look, I'm not sure that's always the case. You know, you're softening it. But, I see where you're coming from. You're acknowledging the other person's point of view. Or maybe really, my experience with this has been quite the opposite. Softening it. Oh, I had a different impression of that. It's much softer. I keep saying that word soften because it is very useful whenever you want to disagree with someone and not be too blunt, not be confrontational. You could just soften it with some of these phrases and then add your own perspective without dismissing theirs. All right? Small talk, it's like a dance. If you stop abruptly to point out a mistake, you know, the dance ends. All right? Something to keep in mind.

This place is pretty crowded. Okay? I Yeah, I've I say this, too. I've said it before. This can be perceived as a complaint. This is the issue. Complaint rather than a conversation starter. You know, it may be factually true, but it can come off in more like a negative. All right? Yeah, you don't like it. And this is something that I would say because I don't like crowds. Uh but, instead of coming off like just starting out with a complaint, you know, you could try to keep it a little more positive. Wow, this is the place to be. I had no idea this restaurant would be so popular. Or I'm amazed to see such a big turnout at this event.

Or just say, look, it's a busy one today. A lot of people here. It's a busy one. So, you're still commenting on the size of the crowd without letting the other person know that you just Yeah, you don't like crowds or you wish there were not that many people here. So, you're pivoting from a complaint to an observation. And this is another It's a type of reframing because you're turning a possibility You're You're turning a possibly stressful stimulus, which would be the crowd, into signs of a a thriving environment. That things are good. Things are They're more positive. And if you're trying to engage in small talk, I think it's good good to be positive or at least be more positive.

trying to get you thinking about other things that you can say in order to be more engaging and in order to have in my mind a more successful conversation, which is really what it's all about. LESSON 271 OF 749

Descriptive (C2) Verbs that will Supercharge Your Vocabulary!

verbs. I love them because they give us a lot of information. And instead of using a boring verb like walk, you can use a descriptive verb like stagger. And that is the first advanced C2 verb that I want to teach you, to stagger. This means to walk or move with difficulty as if you were going to fall. And it's really like something causes this to happen. So I could say he staggered out of the bar at midnight. somebody's been drinking and yeah, it causes someone to stagger. Or after he was attacked, he staggered to the police station, probably because of an injury. So, it's a much more descriptive verb than just saying walk. Here are some more examples.

And staggers back. We heard them staggering down the road 2 in the mornings. Yeah. For some reason, when he staggered toward the lift, I just kept thinking that he was faking it. Now, if you are someone who likes building your vocabulary so that you can be more descriptive when having a conversation or when writing, please subscribe to the channel. Turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. Let's continue with our next advanced verb which is to cling. This means to stick onto or to hold tightly or to refuse to stop holding on to something or someone. Keep in mind this is an irregular verb. So in the present I can say I cling to the sock or in the past I clung to the sock. Or the present perfect I have clung onto the sock. And this is my daughter's by the way. But you may have noticed that you're often going to follow this verb with either the preposition to or onto.

I could say, "She clung onto the railing as the boat rocked." Or, "This wet shirt is clinging to my skin." And yeah, that is a feeling that I don't really like. You could also use this metaphorically and I I may say that someone is going to cling to power or they are clinging onto their wealth. Just to give you another word that's part of the same word family because I like helping you build your vocabulary. We can use this as an informal adjective clingy to describe a person that is emotionally dependent on someone else. And really it does have a negative connotation if you say someone's clingy. Unless you're talking about a pet like a dog, they are very clingy. But let's look at some more examples with our verb to cling. Cling on to what you have and what you know.

For hours he clung to my arms. Every one of you wrapping yourselves up in the flag and clinging to your guns. When you cling to these things, you cling to the past and you don't leave room for new experiences. Sorry to interrupt. I just want to quickly tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson, me. So, if you would like to practice and improve your speaking skills, you can join my speaking course. It's all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, and speak naturally. The course is for intermediate to advanced speakers. We go over things like connected speech. You learn vocabulary related to a variety of different topics, and we do some engaging speaking activities. So, check out the link down below if you'd like to enroll or learn more about the course.

And I just hope to speak to you soon. Now, let's get back to our lesson. Then, we have merge. This means to combine or join together or to cause this to happen. And really it's like we just have these two things and they can merge or merge together. Now there are two situations in which you will often hear or be able to use this verb. I'm talking about driving and business. Now when it comes to driving, I think you will certainly hear this in the United States because the US really does have a driving culture. So, I could say the two lanes will merge into one or cars will merge as they enter the interstate. Or maybe the two highways will merge together. Now, when it comes to business, to help give you a little more context as to how this verb is used, I have some news headlines for you. Honda Nissan aim to merge by 2026 in historic pivot. Getty Images and Shutterstock to merge to form $3.7 billion stock photo giant. Trump says Canada should merge with the US trolling Trudeau as he steps down. Now, I I know this is not a business example. I just wanted to give you another context. And yeah, I think these shenanigans are going to continue. But here are some other examples with our verb to merge. Please stand on a blind spot. Merging. Merging. Sorry. These storms, they're going to merge. And when they do, it's going to destroy everything. They're meeting up with leaders of another gang to possibly merge organizations. Next is the verb shuttude. I was going to try to act out this verb, but I thought uh it probably is not going to help you because I'm not a very good actor. But this means to shake suddenly with very small movements because of an unpleasant thought or feeling. But to give you some visuals because I am a visual learner, here are some images of famous actors shuddering like Ryan Reynolds. Not bad. Or Jerry Seinfeld. Very convincing. But Homer Simpson is the master. Doesn't get any better than that. But people really associate this verb with that action. However, you can still use it in conversation or you may even hear it. So, here are some video examples so you can get a better feel as to how the verb is used in context. And it was discovered that you helped the Starks come to that conclusion. To think a simple word to the queen. One shudders at the thoughts. Why did you shutter just now, Mom? I don't know. No. No. He's shuttering. He's shuddering. Is he fetal? Yeah, he curled up. Look at that. He's fetal. Then we have another descriptive action which is spit. And don't worry, I'm not going to do the action, but it means to force out the contents from your mouth, especially saliva. Now, I was a little surprised that this is actually a C2 verb because I thought it was fairly wellknown, but it is an advanced verb.

Now, it depends on the context, but this verb may be a little unpleasant to say or hear because of that descriptive action, even though it's something that we've all done before. Maybe you eat something unpleasant and then you got to spit it out. Now, keep in mind that this verb is often used as a phrasal verb to spit something out. Let's look at some examples. Spit it out. Robbie, spit it out. Spit it out. When you were talking, a little bit of your spit hit my lip. Then we have giggle. Great verb because it's more descriptive than just saying laugh. Because to giggle means to laugh repeatedly in a quiet but uncontrolled way. Maybe because of something silly or rude or perhaps because you're a little nervous. Like I said, it's more descriptive because it's like a smaller laugh. Perhaps you're you're in some situation when you're trying not to laugh and the end result is that you are giggling and you just can't control it. I want to give you some examples. Maybe you laugh, maybe you giggle. These are all headlines from The Onion, which is a fake newspaper. It's just trying to be funny. Like this headline right here. Donut pillow for smothering. And yes, that that is very true. Or at least child laborer not staring at iPad all day. You can uh do with that one what you will. And finally, area loser declared patient zero and loneliness epidemic. All right. I saw this picture and I thought he looked a little bit like a chubby Jon Snow from Game of Thrones. But maybe maybe that's just me. Here are some other examples. What are you giggling at, silly goose?

Why are you giggling? I saw seaman inside you. More importantly, you've stopped giggling at the word seaman. Glare. It is a long angry look. I'm trying to do it right now, but I told you I'm I'm not a very good actor. But that's what's happening if someone is glaring at you. Now, I have some great pictures demonstrating this verb. Here are some babies glaring at someone, and you can really you you can really pick up on the anger and frustration in their eyes. It's a very authentic glare. Now, let's listen to some examples using this verb. That icy glare is why I left the old country. No one would talk to me in the halls. They just glared at me. It's like high school all over again. You think that disapproving glare works on me after all the times I've seen it? Then we have to carve. This means to cut a hard material, especially wood or stone, in order to produce an object, design, or inscription. And there are some useful phrases with this verb like carve on. I carved my name on the tree like this inscription. Or carve out of the statue is carved out of stone and I I create this design or carve into. I carve the wood into a bowl and now it's an object. But when I think of this verb, I think of Thanksgiving and a turkey because yes, you can certainly carve a turkey. What else can we carve?

They left a message right here. Actually carved into the rock. Proof read it for me before they carve it on the headstone. Okay. Most fantastic clocks you ever laid your eyes on and all carved out of wood. Then there's intervene. This means to intentionally become involved in a difficult situation to improve it or prevent it from getting worse. And often this may be done by a person of authority, but not always. So perhaps two students are fighting, a teacher may intervene. or if if two colleagues are arguing then the boss may intervene. And to give you a little more context, let's have a look at some more news headlines. Tik Tok says it will go dark in ban if US government does not intervene. State board of education to intervene in Bridgeport schools.

And finally, police not liable for failure to intervene against counterprotesters. Now, I want to make sure that you have a perfect understanding of this verb. So, here are some more examples. Oh, intervene. Go ahead. Intervene all you want. I'm just afraid you might be interfering while we're intervening. Do something. Don't just stand there. I need you to intervene. You want me to intervene? some people pushing each other and he intervened. Revolt. This refers to a large number of people who refuse to be controlled or ruled. They take action against authority, often violent action. And just know, you may often follow this verb with against, to revolt against someone or something. Of course, you may hear this verb when talking about government. I could say the people revolted against their authoritarian government. But really, you could use this verb when there's really any type of authority figure. Maybe after the policy change, the employees revolted against management. Let's have a look at some more examples. They'll be receiving a $45 million endowment next week. Voters will still revolt. The midterms are going to be ugly. When the people rose and revolt against him, your father set their castles a flame. Now listen, I don't want anyone to revolt cuz I know you're all excited for your long weekend. Stifled the cry of liberty. We must rouse the peasants to revolt. Next is to sniff. This is a very descriptive verb. It means to smell something by taking in air through the nose. And I say it's descriptive because it really describes the action. There is a difference between let me find my sock.

Me saying I smelled the sock versus I sniffed the sock. If I just tell you I smelled the sock, you may not know exactly where I am in relation to the sock. But if I say I sniff the sock, okay, you know that my nose is right next to this item of clothing. And something else that people might sniff would be flowers. But often when people use this verb, they may be talking about dogs because dogs sniff everything.

Let's have a look at some other examples. Cookies, stop that sniffing. It's not for you. Why won't he stop sniffing my hair? Well, you sniff. You got to sniff for people. Uh, sniff, you know, stick your nose in the air and suck. And then we have blow. This means to make a sound by forcing air out of your mouth and through an instrument or just making a sound when someone does this. Keep in mind this verb has multiple meanings. I'm not talking about the wind blowing. In this case, I'm talking about the sound. Here are some common collocations with this verb and this specific meaning. You may blow a whistle perhaps during a match or a competition. You could blow out some candles like on a birthday cake or you could even blow on coffee or soup perhaps to cool it. These are common phrases that you should know and I'm sure that I am blowing your mind. Now that is an idiom with a different meaning but it is a C2 idiom. So, I'll go ahead and tell you what it means to blow someone's mind refers to something that is exciting, surprising, or interesting. And let me give you some more examples though with our verb to blow and just force that air out. Blow it out for him. Blow out that lamp. I'll take off my Victorian undergarments. Blow a whistle. Blow whistle. Blow the horn. He just hesitated. I was blowing on the coffee.

Now, I'm going to wrap things up, and you do not need to revolt. Or perhaps you're angry and you're glaring at me right now, but that's not necessary because you can continue building your vocabulary and watch another video lesson. I guarantee that it is going to blow your mind. If you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time. Solo.

Descriptive Collocations to Give Your Vocabulary a BOOST

I want to teach you some descriptive collocations that you can use for everyday conversation. Now, collocations are incredibly helpful when building your vocabulary because these are words that are often used together. So, you will hear them in everyday conversation. And if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. In case this is your first time here, my name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And if you would like to access these lesson notes, click on the link down below in the description, join our email community, and you can access them. You can review these collocations. If you're already a part of our community, check your inbox.

I have sent them to you. So when I do these lessons, as many of you know, I like to make them a quiz lesson so that you can participate, answer questions. This is after all interactive English. So I'm giving you a sentence and I've bolded and italicized the collocation to begin with. I'll make it a little easier. I'm giving you the first letter of the missing word. So it has become more difficult to work for him. In this case the missing word begins with the letter I. Now that is the collocation become. These are words that are frequently used together. I'll give you a moment to answer. Think of an answer. You can write your answer in the chat even if you're watching this later. So, the missing word in there, and with some of these, I'll be honest, there may be more than one word that you could use.

So, you could I'm seeing words like incredible. The the collocation that I'm going for is increasingly something is becoming increasingly difficult. You could even think of that as a collocation as well. when you say something is becoming increasingly difficult uh to do something else in this case it has become increasingly difficult to work for him now to follow up on what some people have said I've seen answers like it has become immensely uh difficult to work with him that would work it's become incredibly difficult to work him that would also work so with some of these I don't want to say there is a wrong answer but there is a specific collocation that I am trying to highlight in this case saying something has become increasingly difficult. Now the one thing I will say is that you would follow this with an adverb one of those ly words. So the next one again this is great uh well before to give you a little more context with this one I have some news headlines that I want to share with you. It says vacant homes become increasingly scarce in Switzerland. US dollar has become increasingly toxic and weaponized uh from a Russian economist. And then the last one, the big read, it's become increasingly difficult to smoke outdoors, but some way um but some way yet before Singapore is smoke free. I guess Singapore wants to be smoke-free, which means that yeah, it's becoming increasingly difficult for anyone who who wishes to smoke. But this is a useful collocation. How about How about this one? When he came home, I caught or got a m of alcohol on his breath. Which word is missing? And I don't know, you may recognize that incredibly handsome person in the picture, but the the word that's missing, it's going to begin with the letter W. And hopefully because of that, it it'll narrow down your options. So, I'm giving you the verbs caught or got. Remember, those are in the past tense, but with this phrase, you could use either one. Both of them are collocations. And I see some excellent answers. Um, great job, Tal, Joanne, Raphaela, Julia. We're talking about with. when he came home, I caught a whiff of his alcohol on his breath or I got a whiff of alcohol on his breath. So, a whiff is another word for like a smell, a scent, and you can catch a whiff of something or you get a whiff of something. And in case you're familiar, this I said incredibly handsome drunk young man. I don't know if I was too drunk in this picture when this was taken. That is me. That's from about 15 years ago. So though my party days are long gone at this point.

I'm I'm a family man. So the next one well to to I wanted to share this other thing with you because I just thought it's funny. So this this is a meme when thinking about using that word with in case the word with is new. So this dog if nice balls bro can I get a whiff? thinking about dogs will come up and especially they'll they'll sniff your crotch. And I just thought this was funny, the way that the picture was taken with this dog's long nose. Can I get a whiff? All right. And just trying to smell someone's crotch. So, think about remember that collocation to get a whiff or to catch a whiff. Either verb uh is it works.

How about this one? I think you'll know it. I want to see a lot of answers in that chat because I I feel like this one's a little more common, probably a little easier. Despite recent challenges, the company is not planning to change its business. There is a noun that's missing. It begins with the letter M and that is the collocation business. Which word is going to complete this sentence? And I feel like this is well I say all of them are common. They are common. Some are a little more difficult or advanced than others. I think this is a definitely a common phrase when talking about business uh starting a company entrepreneurship. Despite recent challenges, the company is not planning to change its business model.

That is the missing word. talking about a business model, the way that a company is running or it plans to run, how it's going to operate. Well done. Um, Lai Raphaela, uh, good to see the both of you. Uh, to me, Manuel, perfect. Again, I'll try to give some shout outs as we go through this, but how about the next one? Because you guys are rocking this. And if you are learning some new words and phrases, you can let me know by hitting that like button or even right now hitting the the heart button or whatever. I like seeing I like I just like seeing them fly up and down uh in the chat. The only way to m your influence on the upcoming election is to go out and vote. This is true. This is my plug to encourage people to go vote.

Uh I'm from the United States. There is an election coming up very soon, early November. And I think everybody should vote, should participate. And this is my sentence. The only way to m your influence on the upcoming election is to go out and vote. There is a missing word that you may use with influence. It begins with the letter E. I have not seen the correct answer yet.

Now, there may be there may be one uh a couple of options. I'm trying to remember. There's one specifically that I'm looking for, but when talking about trying to influence someone or something, which verb are you going to use that begins with the letter E? I have not seen the correct answer. That's okay. So, hopefully maybe this this phrase might be new for some of you. The word that I was looking for was to exert. To exert your influence is basically to actually well to do something to have some influence on the outcome. And you are going to exert your influence on something. In this case, you're going to exert your influence on the upcoming election or I I plan to exert my influence and I am going to vote. If you're in the US, you're a US citizen, I hope that you go out and vote and you exert your influence over the upcoming election. The one thing I wanted to point out with this one now I remember is talking about that preposition at the end because you might hear people say to exert your influence on something or to exert your influence over. either one of them works, but to point out a quick resource that you can use whenever you have some of these phrases and you want to know at least get an idea which one is more commonly used, engram viewer is a great resource, I put the two phrases in there, exert influence over versus exert influence on. In this case, you get a it puts it on a graph. you get a quick snapshot and you can see that it's a little more common for people to use exert influence on. But I know prepositions can be a little tricky.

This is when people make very slight speaking mistakes. But if we're talking about exerting your influence, you can exert influence on something or exert influence over something. I don't want you to interrupt the meeting unless it is m necessary. There is a word that's missing that begins with the letter a. And I think that this is a phrase, a collocation that you have certainly heard before if you watch TV shows or movies in English. If you listen to podcast in English, this is a phrase that is often used with the noun necessary. I don't want you to interrupt the meeting unless it is m necessary. I've given you the letter a and I think that probably makes it a little easier to identify the adverb.

And that is another hint because I see a lot of great answers in there. We're talking about the phrase absolutely necessary. Unless it is absolutely necessary, I do not want you to interrupt this meeting. So those are two words that are often used together in many different context. If somebody says, oh, you know, do I have to do this? You're like, yes, it is absolutely necessary. You certainly have to do it. It's absolutely necessary. Words that are often used together. It's a very useful collocation to give you some more context as well as to inspire you. Here are some inspirational quotes that use this phrase. The first one, goals are not only absolutely necessary to motivate us, they are essential to really keep us alive. So keep in mind, we're using that not only.

They're not only absolutely necessary to motiv us but to motivate us but they are essential to keeping us alive. The next one, this is something that I would say to you when it comes to building your vocabulary and improving your English fluency. Practice is absolutely necessary. You are practicing right now with this interactive quiz. You may sit down and listen to me by the hour every day, but if you do not practice, you will not get one step further. It all depends on practice. Practice, practice, practice. In my opinion, in my view, it is absolutely necessary. Just to reinforce that that collocation, what do you think about this word in some or this phrase?

In some instances, the threat of taking legal action is nothing more than a scare. Which word is missing? It begins with the letter T. In some instances, the threat of taking legal action is nothing more than a scare. So, this is a phrase that again you will hear from time to time. It may it's not as commonly used as absolutely necessary, but these words are frequently used together, which is what makes it a collocation. Scare, the missing noun in this case, great job. Nice. Uh Joan, Julia, Reggie, we're talking about a scare tactic. In some instances, the threat of taking legal action is nothing more than a scare tactic. You want to scare someone. You say something to make them afraid and fearful and you could say that is a scare tactic.

To give you a little bit of a joke to uh give you a little context with this collocation, if you can't read that, I'll I'll read it for you. It says, "The patient is ready for his stress test doctor." And the doctor is dressing up like the grim reaper and really essentially a stress test. This is nothing more than a scare tactic. And that is why it's funny. The doctor is engaging in a scare tactic, pretending like, yes, this person is going to die. And that is the stress test. I want to make it a little more challenging at least. Well, I think the the way that I'm going to do that is because I've taken away the letter, which is more of a hint. So, how would you complete this sentence? And I've bolden and italicized the collocation.

Our seats were mlocated near the exit. We were able to leave quickly when the show ended. In this case, uh I I'll go ahead and tell you it's like the person is very happy about this. They're very glad and they got to leave the when quickly when the show ended. And this is maybe what they're saying. Oh, our seats were located near the exit. We were able to leave quickly when the show ended. Which word would you often use with located in this context? And this is one that I think you've probably heard before. Whether you recognized that the words are often used together, there is an adverb that is used quite often when talking about something where it's located in a positive in a positive way. You're saying this is great. Our seats were conveniently located. So if you say something is conveniently located especially in this context that well the it's it's really wonderful that this happens to be the situation because there is some other value there is some other benefit that we're getting from this location and you would say that something is conveniently located somewhere because I appreciate good humor and like to to entertain you as well as inform for you and educate you when it comes to vocabulary. Here is another fun little comic. Uh again, I'll read it down below in case you you're having trouble seeing it. It says, "You know what they say. It's location, location, location." As you can see, this charming little one-bedroom is conveniently located right next to the local tennis club. So, it's like this one dog is a real estate agent trying to sell this dog house to another dog and saying it is conveniently located right next to this tennis club and there are many tennis balls inside the doghouse like the dog was able to go get them, retrieve them, bring them back to the doghouse and it is yeah conveniently located next to the tennis club. What do you think about this collocation right here? My boss told me that I'd get a raise at the end of the year. I don't know if I believe him. It may just be an M promise. There are definitely certain words that you can use with the noun promise, which are collocations. But I feel like in this context, I'm trying to make it a little more specific when somebody's saying, "Well, I don't know if I I I believe this person. I don't know if I believe him." It may just be an M promise. Another key word in there is the article an because you see that article, you then should you should know that the next word is going to begin with a vowel sound. And the vowel sound would be in the word empty. An empty promise. Well done, uh, Tyel, Lai, Raphaela. Uh, perfect. An empty promise. Uh, my boss told me that I get a raise at the end of the year. I don't know if I believed him. It may just be an empty promise. Here is a good visual talking about an empty promise. Somebody who is lying. They're not going to keep their promise. and they're trying to get someone to do something that maybe they normally wouldn't do. In this case, these people are trying to get that carrot and they're just falling off the side. And it's a good visual representation of an empty promise.

Then we have this collocation right here. I will say that there are two words that you could use to complete this sentence and I'll talk about them in just a second. The vet performed a successful surgery and my dog is my dog is expected to make a m recovery. Which word are you going to use with the word recovery? It is a common collocation. And I told you I think they're they're probably maybe more than two in this case, but uh and I'll I'll talk about the well the two that I'm thinking of. And you said the my my the vet performed a successful surgery and my dog is expected to make a m recovery. Now that I think about it and see some of your answers that uh yes, there are certainly some collocations, different ones that you can use.

So, one thing I will say, and this is not the the answer that I'm thinking of. You could say a um a fast recovery. Sure. A quick recovery, speedy recovery. I actually like that one, and I feel like it's probably more commonly used. None of those are the answers that I'm thinking of. There are other words that you can use when talking about a recovery, but I feel like speedy recovery is another useful collocation, especially when you emphasize how fast something is. But none of those are the answers that I'm looking for. But this is why I also love these lessons because you really are trying to get the vocabulary juices flowing and thinking of other words that also work. You know, the these are not incorrect. You guys are giving some great responses. I still haven't seen the ones that I'm thinking of.

How about uh this next one? It took years to grow a successful business and when we had to uh and we had to m many obstacles along the way. The collocation there is a word that would go with obstacles. You have you had to many obstacles along the way. There is a specific verb that I think is often used with this noun and I once again I feel like it's uh this is a common one that I think you you can probably get just based off of the context we had to many obstacles. Yes, you guys rocked it. Uh we're talking about to overcome different obstacles or overcome many obstacles. Excellent, Stephanie. Great job. Um, Lai, Teayo, um, Julia, perfect.

Let's see. Here are some news headlines. I just want to give you a little more context as to how it's used, even though I think this one is incredibly common. So, I'll just read these headlines for you. International Women's Day, girl, uh, give girls role models to overcome obstacles. The next article, seven ways to overcome obstacles to using AI in healthcare. And then finally, blue zone. I'm not really sure what that is. Collaborations help the denim denim industry overcome obstacles. So, this is another useful collocation. What do you think? I have never spoken in front of such a large audience. I'm a I almost uh I almost said the word there. I'm a m wreck which I don't want to give it away. So I'll give you a moment and then I'll tell you. I've never spoken in front of such a large audience. I'm a m wreck. In this context, I think this is a common collocation. And hopefully, even though it's not the most common word in the world when you're talking about wreck, hopefully that'll jog your memory and think, "Oh, okay. I know which adjective I can use." As some of you have correctly pointed out to say that you are a nervous wreck. Once again, there are other words that you could put in there. If somebody says, "Oh, I'm a complete wreck or I'm a total wreck." That also works. That's fine. I do think that probably this collocation is a little more commonly used to say that someone is a nervous wreck. Public speaking, a lot of people uh have that fear. And if they have to do it, you might say, "Ah, I'm just a nervous wreck." We should really keep an M on the weather in case we need to change our plans. Which word is missing in that phrase? Keep an M on the weather. I feel like you know this one. It's a little easier, but that's okay. If it's easy, I think that's good. That means it's more common, more commonly used. And this is when you definitely want to make sure that you know this phrase, you know how to use it, and you're comfortable using it if you're having a conversation. One of the hints in there is that article an because then you know that the next word begins with a vowel sound. And just seeing all the responses just roll right in. Excellent. Always love it when you guys are participating.

We should really keep an eye on the weather in case we need to change our plans. Perfect. This is another if you do some Google searches with like keep an eye there the as far as like jokes or memes there are some funny ones with kids like parents would say things like in this case look keep an eye on the ball and they take it literally and then they have pictures of these kids like literally putting their eye right on the ball and you say when you say look keep an eye on the ball as meaning like watch it just focus on it look at it keep an eye on the ball and then they just take that literally early.

This happened with my own little girl. I think it was uh a couple of years ago. I said, "Look, we need to jump in the shower." And she literally jumped into the shower. I was like, "Oh, wait, wait. That's a little that's a little dangerous. She want she thought I wanted her to jump in the shower. So, this is a um a fun way to think about some of these phrases. Here is a little bit of review. All of the different collocations that that I went over right here, these are incredibly common, very useful in just casual conversation. My goal with all of these lessons is that I just hope that you learned something new and can go out, try to use these or even listen for them because you will definitely hear them. Movies, TV shows, listening to a podcast, they are often used together.

If you enjoyed this lesson, you can let me know by hitting the like button. As always, I really appreciate you being here with me today, watching the lesson, participating in the lesson. That's what it's all about. I'm going to keep doing these quiz lessons in order to not just test your vocabulary, but to help you continue building your vocabulary, fine-tuning your vocabulary. Thank you so much. And

Descriptive Nouns to Talk about Profession, Personality, or Characteristics

today I want to teach you 20 different nouns to help you describe people and these nouns would describe somebody's well their profession or their personality or even their characteristics so as I go through and we talk about these nouns again I want you to try to associate these words with a person that you know which person do you think of when I tell you the meaning of these nouns try to do that because that is going to help you better remember the meaning so let's begin with with profession maybe somebody's somebody's job what they do for work or maybe even a position that they have for their work and we will begin with the noun amateur and if you say that someone is an amateur it means that they they do some type of hobby or activity for fun they are not a professional this is not how they make a living they don't typically get paid for it and you could say that he or she she is an amateur the next noun is a tutor now this noun it's talking about education because it's a person who will help a child uh study outside of school in order to give them extra help and you would say that that this person is a tutor maybe in math in science even in English anybody could have a tutor mostly we're talking about children but it could be a high school student a university student even an adult could have a tutor if they want extra help now let's stick with education and the next noun is a scholar this is talking about a person who studies a subject in great detail especially in University and if they they study it for a long time and they know it very well you could say that they are a scholar Amy is a decorated scholar she forged a successful career in journalism Jimmy's made a new young lady

Brenda she's really something Road scholar impressive [Music] scholar I see Kitty a man of matters the next noun is well it's actually two nouns that mean the same thing and that is big fish or you could say a big wig and in in either case it's talking about a person who is powerful and important and it usually refers to a position within a company and maybe you're talking about the boss and they are the big wig or perhaps somebody else in the company and say wow you know this person they're they're a big fish all right they're a very important influential and powerful person a big fish or a big wig well I wish I'm off to my first day as a corporate bigwig and we have information that uh mobster by the name of Marco Ocho move to Paris he's the one he's a big fish then we have the noun one's right hand and if you're talking about well one's right hand you're not you're not really talking about the hand you're talking about a person who supports someone else usually at work and you could say well you know uh he's my right hand or she's my right hand she's always helping me get stuff done and she supports my work one's right hand you may also use this as uh well another noun and people might say a right-hand man and if somebody is like the right hand man then that is the person who would help somebody else especially at their work or right hand man then we have the word valedict why am I having such trouble with this word then we have the word valedictorian and this is talking about the the person really the student who has the highest grades at the end of high school so when high school finishes the person with the highest grades that person is the valedictorian and typically they will give a speech at the the graduating ceremony when school finishes now I I don't know if this is the same for all high schools all over the world but especially in the United States the the person with the highest grades they are called the valedictorian and they would give a speech when when at the graduating ceremony valedictorian and of having very tough times saying that I was not the valedictorian that is okay but it's a word that you may hear if you're watching a TV show or movie and they're talking about somebody who was very smart in high school they did very well and he or she was the valedictorian valedictorian yes yes right now I'm the best student I'm gonna be the Velociraptor you're trying to say valedictorian now let's talk about nouns that are related to someone's personality kind of the talking about the type of person that that they are so you could say that somebody is a dilettante and this is talking about a person who is very interested in a subject but doesn't really have a deep understanding of it and I think all of us can relate to this that we might be interested in some area of study or or something in general whether it's cars fashion computers and we know about it because we're interested in it but we don't really have a deep understanding because well maybe it's not uh our job and you could say that that you know we are just still a tons in that regard so for example maybe somebody they're very interested in politics and you could say they are a political dilettante they're interested in learning about it but it's not their job and you know they don't have a very deep understanding of it dilettante then we have of the noun Aficionado and this is actually a Spanish word that means fan but an Aficionado is a person who is very interested and enthusiastic uh in learning about some topic and you say wow you know I am really a soccer Aficionado I love it or I am a Cigar Aficionado there's actually a magazine about cigars called Aficionado and I could say that all of you are vocabulary aficionados because you are interested and enthusiastic about learning new words and phrases and you are not dilettantes because you have a deeper understanding of these words you're an aficionado then we have the word Confidant and if you say that somebody is a confidant it is a person that you really trust and you are willing to share your feelings and secrets with that person you could say that that he is my Confidant that he is the person that I will tell secrets to or uh for well for me I'd really say my wife she is my Confidant if I have some problems some secrets and I just need to tell somebody I need some help she is my Confidant and I will tell her maybe not all the secrets but but most of them you need to choose her to be your vice presidential candidate no I chose you as a trusted Confidant Confidant of mine has told me that when he goes to Sansa Stark goes with him [Music] then we have the noun proponent and this is talking about a person who speaks publicly in support of some plan or action and you might often follow this word with the preposition of the that he is a proponent of some issue she is a proponent of saving the dolphins that she wants to publicly support it and talk to others about it she's a proponent of saving the Dolphins I think all of us are are probably a proponent of something if you think about something that you believe in that you want to support then you could say you are a proponent of this thing the next noun I have for you is a guru and a guru is it's more of a spiritual leader if you're thinking about like Hinduism but it's also somebody who is kind of a teacher as well and you may hear this word used in that context it makes me think of somebody who is wise and very spiritual and they want to help others and teach others and you could say that they are a guru then we have the noun Gourmet and if somebody is a gourmet then it means that they know a lot about food they're very knowledgeable about food and they typically like to eat fancy and expensive food and this person is a gourmet I like it better than tuna helper myself don't you Clark you're the

Gourmet around here Ed Frozen Lance tell you about me there's no real Gourmet oh yeah these sandwiches are delicious Mrs Elton you really are a gourmet next is the noun humanitarian and if you say that somebody is a humanitarian it means that they are interested in helping other people especially people who may be suffering in some way and they may be donating money donating clothes they they are involved in some type of activity and you could say well you know this person they're a great person they're a humanitarian personally I think all of us should be humanitarians and and we should try to give back and help others who are in need now let's talk about nouns that pretty much refer to people's characteristics their emotions their behaviors and you could say that somebody is well a coward and this is well it's not good to be called a coward because it's talking about a person who is typically afraid of a lot of things they're they're very scared somebody who is not brave you could say that this person is a coward we could also say that someone is an introvert and if somebody is an introvert it means that they are not very social they're often quiet a bit reserved they typically may like to be left alone and have time to themselves you could say that this person is an introvert now the opposite of an introvert is an extrovert and this is somebody who well is very social they like to go out a lot they like to meet all different types of people and typically they're very talkative and you would say that they are an extrovert I think if you were to think of yourself like for example I I think I can be both sometimes I am more of an introvert and other times I might be more of an extrovert and I like to go out and try to meet people and I'm a little more social introvert and extrovert Zelda was the sunny fun-loving extrovert look at my pumpkin Mr Peanut Butter whereas Zoe the smart cynical introvert my pumpkin's throwing up because Halloween encourages excessive consumption of refined sugar at a time when obesity rates are sky High then we have the noun perfectionist and if you say that somebody is a perfectionist it means that that this person thinks that well everything needs to be perfect that they will not stop until they believe everything is perfect and you would say that that he or she is a perfectionist now a word a noun that is a little similar to that but it's still different would be someone who is a purist and if you describe someone as a purist it means that that this person believes that things should be done in the traditional way that we should follow the rules we shouldn't do them in some other way follow tradition and you could describe this person and say that they are a purist oh yeah triple twist nice work you sure this is done by hand yeah she's a real purist hate those guys as a Sesame Street purist I don't think Alamo usually tells of passing women that they have a repeat this traveling soda tourists getting off on the undiluted experience and then we have the noun whiz and if you describe somebody and say that well this person they are a whiz it means that they are highly intelligent and very smart in some area or or some expertise for example you could say that somebody is a math whiz they're very good at math they're very intelligent when it comes to math they're a math whiz I could say that you know all of you you are a vocabulary whiz you are watching these lessons you're learning new words and phrases and it's going to help you improve your overall English fluency you are a vocabulary whiz so again the best way to remember the meaning of these different nouns is to think of somebody you know when I say the noun humanitarian which person in your life do you think of if I say introvert who do you know who's an introvert or who do you know who is an extrovert and when you're able to think of that person because you you know their position you know their personality you know their characteristic that is going to help you remember the meaning of these words so I'm going to end it right there I I really hope you learn some new nouns and I will see you next

Different Ways to Say "I'm Busy" Build Your Vocabulary

Are you a busy person? If so, then this lesson is for you because I'm going to teach you some different ways in which you can tell someone "I'm busy." That's coming up. What's up everyone? My name is Wes. This is interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And the way that we're going to do that today is I am going to teach you some useful expressions. These are expressions that mean the same thing as "I'm busy," but instead of just telling somebody, you know, oh, I can't do that. I'm busy. It's good to develop your speaking fluency by learning other phrases that mean the same thing. We all have busy lives, so it's great to learn different ways in which you can tell someone "I'm busy."

The first one that I have for you is - I'm preoccupied at the moment. Or You could just say, you know, I'm preoccupied and preoccupied. This is just a synonym for busy. You are occupied, you are busy doing something else. So if you want to be polite to someone, if you want to just say that you know you can't do something right now because you are doing something else, you can just say, you know I'm preoccupied, I'm preoccupied at the moment. I can't really help you out with that. I'm preoccupied. I want to talk to you. I'm a bit preoccupied. Scrap seems very preoccupied at the moment. What do you mean I'm a little preoccupied. What means preoccupied?

I'm sorry, I'm just preoccupied. Then we have another one which I think is common, especially in business because you might want to tell somebody, you know my schedule is full. I don't have any time right now because my schedule, if you look at it, it's completely full, which means that I am busy doing other things. So if you want to tell someone you're busy and you don't want to be rude or impolite, you can just tell them, you know, my schedule is full. That sounds like a real ranger. But my schedule already chunked full home from Henry's already. Henry has a fall schedule today. I've got a full schedule. Those boys.

Another great way to tell someone I'm busy is just to say I've got too much going on. If you have too much going on, then you're just telling somebody that they're, there are other things that are happening in your life. You're not telling them exactly what it is that you're busy with. You don't know if it's work or if it's personal, but it's a nice way of just telling somebody, look, I, you know, I don't have any free time right now because I've got too much going on. Yeah. It's so much going on right now. Too much stuff going on to bother with people like us means when you're overwhelmed, when we got too much going on yet another way of saying that, which is very, very similar. It's just to tell someone, I've got a lot to do. I'm busy.

I've got a lot to do. I don't have any time available to do whatever it is you're asking me to do. I can't help you out right now. I'm preoccupied. My schedule is full because I've got a lot to do. I've got a lot to do. Think of. Maybe taking work a little too seriously. I've got a lot to go. Huh? Lunch, but since she's not here, do you have plans? Oh No, actually I got a lot of things to do around here. Then we have, and this one is one of my favorites. I've got a lot on my plate. Again, this is another way of saying that that you've got too much going on.

You've got a lot to do, but you can say, I've got a lot on my plate, and again, just, just think about it. You have food on a plate. If there's a lot on it then then that. Yeah, that's pretty full. That's pretty busy. So you can just say, yeah, right now I've got a lot on my plate as a doctor. I have a lot on my plate. Unfortunately. I have a lot on my plate today, so I'm going to have to hand this off to my number two. Oh, well, um, I've kind of got a lot on my plate right now. Not that I wouldn't love a weekend in the country with a strange man.

Then we have an idiom. Well, it's actually a simile and you could just say, I'm busy as a bee now. This one is it. It's probably, it's not as common. It was just fun. I thought I'd throw it in there. There is an idiom saying somebody is a busy bee, but if you want to use a simile and compare yourself to something else, you could say I'm busy as a bee because bees, they're working hard. They're doing a lot. They're always busy, so you could tell someone I'm busy as well. Okay, come on, let's do a little bit. You're going to tell my father and I'm busy to be wrapping boxes with the John.

Just the barrel now. Myspace. Yes. I'm still here. I'm busy as a bee. Then we have the sentence. I'm tied up right now, so again, think about it. If, if you're tied up, then that means, well, you can't move. You can't help someone do this thing or that thing. You just have to tell him, look, I can't help you. I'm tied right now. I'm busy. I think I have your letter too. We'll see right now I'm a bit tied up. Actually, Maggie, I'm a bit tied up at the moment. I'm supposed to be meeting with Ron Swan. I understand that he's tied up right now. What a shocker. I've been trying to meet with him three months.

Next is another one of my favorite ones and that's just to tell someone I'm swamped that you have so many different things going on right now almost to the point where it will, it's just too much. This is another good one that you can use just in everyday conversation. You can also use it at work if, if you were just super busy with so many different things, you could tell someone, look, I'm swamped boss. I can't help you out right now. I'm swamped because I can't. I'm already covering for Doug. He's on a his and her spa day with his mom. What dawn asked. The point is I'm swamped. What I'd like to hang out. I'm sorry, I'm swamped.

Yeah, I'm swamped enough with schoolwork and kind of swamped here. You think you could give me a hand with some of the catalog? I'm sorry. What kind of swamped. Then we have another one which means the same as I'm swamped and that's just to tell someone I'm overwhelmed. I have way too much going on right now. I'm just overwhelmed and again, this is a good one because people might even, you know, they may feel a little sympathetic towards you and if somebody is asking you to do something and look, look, look, I'm just, I'm overwhelmed. Then maybe the, okay, don't worry about it. I don't want to stress you out. I'll, I'll find somebody else. I will ask somebody else to help me. You're too busy.

You're overwhelmed. Nothing. I'm just really overwhelmed. I'm just a little overwhelmed right now. Could use a drink or overwhelmed with work then we have, I'm buried in work and in this case you can replace work with something else. I'm buried in something and whatever something is that is the thing that you were very busy with and oftentimes you would use it with work because work is what it consumes much of our lives. You could say, yeah, you know, I'm, I'm buried in work. I'm buried in research. I'm buried in comments. And, but that's a good thing. We love getting buried in comments because we love hearing from you. They're trying to bury you in paperwork. Huge Corporation. Oh, here's some paperwork for the next 15 years.

This next one is, uh, another one of my favorites and that is I'm knee deep in work. Again, in this case you could just say I'm knee deep in something and that something is what you were very busy with. And uh, I think about it. If you are knee deep in something, then that means that you are consumed by it. It's surrounding you. You were very busy with this thing. For example, I could say I'm knee deep in work or I could get more specific and say, you know, I'm knee deep in editing videos. I spend a lot of time doing that. Or I'm knee deep in creating lesson plans for these videos.

So whatever it is that you're busy with, you can it and just say that you are knee deep in this thing. What do you need deep in, I really want to know I no straps. Then again, I'm knee deep in research. Most people would agree that I'm knee deep in a pretty rank crash, can not meet their need. Deep Fungus, this guy knows fungus.

Another great one which I really like and I do use from time to time is just to tell someone I'm up to my ears in something and again, something is just the thing that you're busy with so it allows you to be specific when you want to tell somebody exactly what it is that that you're busy doing. That can be up to our ears and I have work up to my ears. I'm busy, busy, busy, busy, can't step away. I just wanted to check in. Okay. Am Up to my ears in work. I'm up to my ears in answering comments and that is something that I want to be busy with. I want to be up to my ears in common so help me out with that.

Right to me in the comments I want to hear from you and if you understood all of these expressions, if you think you can now go out and use some of these expressions, then let me know in the comments and just write to me and say I'm knee deep in interactive English. That way I know, yes, this person gets it. This person understands because they are knee deep in interactive English. If you enjoyed this lesson, you can let me know by hitting that like button down below. As always,

Different Ways to Say "Sorry!" | Useful English Expressions

Do you keep saying sorry but no one forgives you? Find out why in this lesson because today I'm going to teach you about different ways to say "Sorry." Okay, so listen. Sometimes saying "I'm sorry," it's just...it's not enough. Or maybe it's just not appropriate. And in English this is also the case. There are different ways to say I'm sorry for different instances. But how do you properly express yourself in English if you truly are sorry about something you did?

Let's find out. So first I want to look at how do you say you're sorry when you've made a small mistake. So these are things like maybe you spilled a coffee on someone's paper. Or maybe you've stepped on someone's shoe. So these are smaller mistakes. They are not horrible, life-changing kind of mistakes. So just use them on small, small, tiny mistakes. Number one is the simple "Sorry," or "Sorry about that." So if you just say "Sorry about that," it's kind of an apology you do in passing. So that is when you use this one for small mistakes

Number two... "My bad." My bad is a very informal way to apologize. It's almost like a non-apology. It's kind of like saying "Yeah, I've made a little mistake. But I don't care enough about it to apologize." So you just say, "My bad." The cat is mischievous. He didn't carry he peed on the couch. Number three... "My mistake." And this one kind of means like a breakdown in communication. Again, it's not a very heartfelt or deep apology. It doesn't apply to a very, very, very big mistake that you've made. It's just something small. This can definitely be used in work context. So you can say "Oh, My mistake I forgot to call you."

Or "I didn't give you the the right number." or something. It has to do with smaller mistakes that you do. But that you're still kind of taking responsibility for. Okay, so the next set of apologies is for more serious mistakes. These are mistakes that definitely impact someone's life. Or really impact your life. Maybe you've done something really bad at work. Or maybe you've messed up something in your life or someone else's life. These mistakes carry a little bit more weight. So this is when it becomes important to make sure that you use the right kind of apology. Number four is kind of a simpler one, and it's just really "I'm so sorry."

Just adding that SO there in the middle, it just expresses that you care a little bit more. That you've done something, and then it's just it comes off as a lot more genuine than "I'm sorry." Generally speaking, "I'm so sorry" conveys a lot more emotion than "I'm sorry." It's also not as strong as some of the other ones we'll see down this list. So it's kind of for like a medium-sized mistake. Number five is "I'd like to apologize."

Now this one can be safely used in a work context. If you make a mistake you can always say "I'd like to apologize." It's sincere, it's professional, and it gets the message across. I'd like to apologize. Number six... "I take full responsibility." This is probably as professional as it comes. It's definitely work approved, so you can use this at work when you've made a mistake. And many times you can continue it with... I take full responsibility for my actions. I take full responsibility for my behavior. I take full responsibility for any damage I may have caused. The reason why I'm adding all of these is because this is probably one of the more formal ways you can apologize.

You are being honest. You are being serious. You are willing to admit your mistake. And you are doing it in a professional way. Something I have also wanted to mention, especially if we're talking about work. This is a very appropriate way to apologize even in a writing context. So this being a more formal apology, you can use it in writing like in work emails or letters. This is appropriate. I take full responsibility. Number seven... "It's all my fault." Now this one is definitely about a serious mistake. It's just not as formal as the previous ones. So you might not see it in writing, but just speaking. You can use "It's all my fault" in different kinds of relationships usually in close relationships.

Like a relationship you may have with your spouse, your husband or wife. Or maybe relationships you have with your family or close friends. If you want to express how you feel, and if you want to truly apologize from the heart, this is a good way to say it. It's all my fault. Number eight is "I regret." Regret means feeling sad and repentant and kind of wishing you'd never ever done this mistake. So you've done something so wrong that you just regret all of the events that led to it and the event itself. And you just kind of wish it never existed.

I'm going to give you a situation, and in the comments I want you to respond with the appropriate apology. Okay. Any one of the nine we discussed in this lesson. Here is the situation. You borrow your friend's expensive new iPhone, and you dropped it on the ground and it broke. How would you respond? What would you tell your friend? Use one of the apologies that we talked about in this lesson to properly express how sorry you are for destroying your friend's new expensive phone. And this is good practice for everyone reading. If you're wondering hmm...What can I say? Just check out everyone's answers and see what you think. Well that's it for today. I hope you enjoyed this lesson.

And if you did, please like and share this video. I hope that now you can finally express yourself properly and apologize in the right way. Thanks for watching, and I'll see you next time. Bye.

Different Ways to Say "Thank You!" | Useful English Expressions

I'm so thankful to have you join our class today. Stick around to find out more ways to say, "Thank you." The holidays are here. This is a by far, for me at least, the best time of the year because people get a little bit more introspective, a little bit more generous, happier. So, we want to make sure that we can properly thank the people in our lives.

Now, keep in mind that you can use these words any time of the year. In fact, we encourage you to do so. I think everyone becomes happier and it benefits everyone when people are a little bit more thankful. Are you ready to be thankful? Let's hear the words. The first one is grateful. And grateful means showing appreciation for something done or received. Grateful is often times used with "for." Many times we say that we are grateful for something or for someone. For example, we are very grateful for our community of students. Or, I'm grateful for someone's help.

Number two is gratitude. And gratitude is the state of being thankful. And often times we see gratitude together with show or express. So we show or express gratitude. Number three is appreciate. And appreciate me is to recognize the full worth of something or understand a situation fully. Number four is appreciation. And this means to recognize and enjoy the good qualities in someone or something. And many times we see appreciation with show. So we show appreciation. The following words and expressions are all interchangeable. Meaning they're all different ways to say thank you. Number five...I'm forever in your debt. Now, this one you can find with or without the forever. So we can say I'm in your debt or I'm forever in your debt.

And they mean the same thing. For example, if somebody gives you a ride home, you can say I'm forever in your debt. It's a nice way to say thank you. Number six...cheers. This is a simple one, just one word. Cheers. It's used a lot in British English. But you can often hear it in American English as well. For example, if you're at a restaurant and the server brings you the sandwich, you can just thank them I'm by saying, "Cheers." Number seven...I owe you one. Here's another nice way to say thank you. If for example somebody buys you a drink, you might reply with, "Thanks a lot. I owe you one."

Or just, "I owe you one." All it means is thank you. And the last one, number eight, is thanks a million. To express gratitude for your friends help you might say, "I don't know what I would have done without you. Thanks a million." So now we'd like to hear from you. Now that you've learned different ways to say thank you in English, we'd like to hear how you say, thank you in your language. Thanks a million for watching our lesson. If you're thankful and you feel like you've learned something new, you can show your gratitude by sharing this video with all of your friends. Thanks again for watching, and we'll see you next time.

Bye.

Different Ways to Say "Yes" & "No" | Useful English Expressions

Want to have a fun listen today? Don't answer with "Yes" or "No." Use these words instead. Let's be honest. It's a little boring to always answer questions with "Yes" or "No." Did you go to dinner? - Yes. Did you do this? - Yes. Did you do that? - No. In this lesson, we're going to teach you five different ways to say "Yes," and five to say "No." Are you ready? Let's begin with "Yes." The first one is okey-dokey. This one's a little bit more informal, but it's a lot of fun to say. Try with me. Okey-dokey. Okey-dokey. Okey-dokey. Okey-dokey. You can also do like a hand gesture with it like this.

Okey-dokey. I'm just kidding. I'm just going to take that part out. Okey-dokey is an informal way to say "Okay." Okey-dokey. Number two is by all means. And by all means means... By all means means... This expression means "of course" or "certainly." By all means. Number three...very well. Very well means "okay" or "alright" or something that somebody agrees to. Number four is absolutely or totally.

Now, I'm giving you two words here because you can use them interchangeably. They both mean the same thing, which is "to a complete degree" or "okay." Number five is sure. And sure...it means "yes." But this one's a little tricky because it depends how long you take to say the answer. So for example, if you take your time to say sure after a question, it means that maybe it's not a hundred percent "yes." For example, if somebody asked me "Would you like to go to a movie?" And I say...s-u-r-e. That means that it's a "yes," but not a hundred percent "yes." That I had to think about it. But if you answer right away, it's definitely a "yes."

For example... That's a hundred percent "yes." Okay, are you ready for the next part? Here are a few ways to say "No." Number one...out of the question. Out of the question means "impossible." It doesn't even warrant a discussion. It is just completely not possible. Number two...no way. Or sometimes you'll see it as "No way, Jose." It really just means "not at all."

Number three...under no circumstances. This one just means "never." Whatever the situation may be, the answer will always be "No." Under no circumstances. With this one, there's a little bit of grammar involved. And what you have to know is that right after the expression, the verb and the subject switch. So you say the expression "under no circumstances," then the verb, then the subject. under no Under no circumstances am I drinking wine tonight. Under no circumstances am I not having chocolate. Under no circumstances is he coming to our party. Number four...fat chance. This one's a little bit more informal. And when you say "fat chance" it means that you think something is certainly not going to happen.

Fat chance. Number five is not likely. And this one means "certainly not." Okay, time to practice what we've learned. Answer the question about this picture using one of the words we learned today. That's it for today. Hopefully you enjoyed our lesson and learned a few different ways to express yourself when someone asks you questions. If you like your lesson, please share this video with your friends. Thank you for watching, and I'll see you next time. Bye.

Different Ways to Say "You're Welcome" | Useful English Expressions

Oh, sure. No problem. Don't mention it. You are welcome for this lesson because today we are talking about different ways to say... Here is your coffee. Thanks for the coffee. You're quite welcome. Is there sugar in this? No, no I'll get some for you. Here you go. Thanks so much. Don't mention it. Oh is there coconut milk in here? Here you go. Thanks a bunch. No worries. Oh, you know what. Can I have some gingerbread spice? Yes. Here we are. Oh, yum. Thank you. No problem. Oh, you know what? It would be great if you could use my favorite cup. Oh. Oh, yeah, yeah. Sure. Coffee in your favorite cup.

Thank you. Sure. You know what goes great with coffee? What? Avocado toast. Yeah, yeah. I can make you some. Here is your avocado toast. Thank you. It's my pleasure. You know what I need? What? A fork and knife. Oh, yeah. Let me get that. Here you are. Knife and fork. Thanks. Happy to help. You're so amazing. Thank you. Can I get a refill on the coffee? Yeah. Here is a refill on your coffee. Is there sugar in this? I hope you guys enjoyed their little skit. Please understand that this is just for comedic value. Just for the sake of learning English. Not that I didn't enjoy it. But what I want to do is to look at each way Wes said, "You are welcome." We're going to analyze it and explain it.

So "You're quite welcome," or "You're very welcome," is used when you want to be really polite and respectful. We add the adverb very or quite just to show a little bit more respect. That means you really put in some work. And you really enjoyed helping this person. It's just a really nice way to respond to "Thank you." You're quite welcome. You're very welcome. It's really nice. "Don't mention it" is pretty informal. So this is not something that you necessarily say to your boss. It's something that you use with friends or colleagues. It also makes you seem a little bit more humble. Like you really don't need to thank me. Don't mention it. It's okay. Don't mention it.

No worries. Don't worry about it. It's something that we use all the time, especially with our friends and colleagues and just people who are our peers. It's not something that may be used with your grandmother, or a professor, or boss. So it's just something that you use in an informal level. And it's just it's kind of short for "Don't worry about it." "No problem" or a "No problemo," as Americans say it sometimes. It just...it's also used informally. It's kind of used interchangeably with "No worries." No problem Kind of short for implying that there was no problem in helping this other person. That you really had no issue with it. No need for things because this task was not a hassle.

No problem. "Sure." This one is even shorter. And I would say it's a little bit more informal. And sometimes followed by another expression of "You're welcome." So for example, you can say... Many times you will see it together with another expression for "You're welcome." But sometimes it can stand on its own. So "It was my pleasure" or "My pleasure" it is a little bit more polite than the ones before. And it's just saying that you enjoyed helping this person. It was my pleasure. Or my pleasure. Happy to help. Well this one means exactly what it says it does. It just means that you were happy to be able to help this person.

And you can use it formally and informally. It's okay on all levels. Happy to help. Okay. Well now that we've learned these different ways to say "You're welcome." It's time to practice. For this practice, I'm going to give you a situation and I want you to write down one of these different ways to say "You're welcome." So here it is. Imagine that your friend's car broke down in the middle of the night. And he or she called you on the phone. And you went to pick them up. And they are very, very thankful. What do you say in response? Use one of the ways to say "You're welcome" that we learned in this lesson.

That's it for today. I hope you enjoyed this lesson. And if you did, please like and share this lesson with all of your friends, so that from now on when you thank each other, you can say "You're welcome" in so many different ways. Thank you for watching, and we'll see you next time. Bye.

Difficult Words to Pronounce in English

Hello and welcome to today's lesson. This it's going to be a pronunciation lesson because I I first want to thank you uh all of you for participating and actually helping to make this lesson happen. So, uh, a few days ago, I made a post right here asking for some help, uh, that I was going to do a pronunciation lesson and if there are any words in English that you find difficult to pronounce. And I really thought that I was just going to get maybe like 20 or so responses. And I was just floored as to the number of people who participated in today's lesson. So, the first thing I want to do is thank you. And I am going to try to go through as many as I can. I'm not going to be able to do all of them, but as you as you'll see, um I'll I'll put the person's name up on top who asked um about the word. I'm going to say it a few times. So, please feel free to practice your pronunciation skills, fine-tune your pronunciation skills, say the word after me. You could listen and repeat, or even just say the word with me, which is part uh shadowing.

And with some of them, I'll try to dig a little deeper as to why they may be cu uh confusing or challenging a as well as point out some of the differences between American uh English and British English. to do Hello. Hello everybody. [gasps] Uh is start with this word and the reason why I chose this word to begin with is because I think there are it's a good word to point out some differences between American English and British English. And of course there are so many there are different English varieties uh across the world but I think often um the two most common ones in the United States which is where I am from as well as in the UK. So this word I would pronounce it as daughter. It has two syllables. The stress is on that first syllable. The first thing that I would like to point out is that with the American accent, I am going to pronounce this with that T. I'm gonna pronounce the T as a flap T. It's going to sound like a soft D. And it's because it becomes it comes between two vowel sounds. Daughter. So, can you hear that soft D when I say daughter? Daughter. In uh British English, you'll hear more of a true T sound. daughter and and it's aspirated to daughter. The other thing that I want to point out is the eer at the end because again another difference between the two in with the American accent people will pronounce that eer daughter mother father and again I'm emphasizing it right now remember with this word stress is on the first syllable in in British English it it may get dropped a little bit or it just takes on that schwa sound daughter.

daughter. Okay, so those are two differences but a very common word, very useful. Um, and I thank you Alisal for for bringing this up and uh asking about this word. The next one, thank you user is obvious. The there there are three syllables stresses on that first syllable obvious. Okay, this is a very useful adjective obvious. That that o us has that us sound. You have that schwa sound which is an h sound. It's an unstressed vowel sound. Obvious. Obvious. And I know many of you would like to practice and improve your pronunciation as well as as well as practice your speaking skills. And if if I am describing you right now, well then I think that it is obvious that you should check out my speaking course. I wanted to let you know quickly that enrollment just opened. Uh if you would like to practice and improve your speaking, the class the course is going to begin mid January. So you can find more information out here if you check out the course page. the it's an 8-week course with uh lessons that are 1 hour and 15 minutes each week, total of 10 instructional hours. You can also use the code, the cost is $1.99, but you can use the code speak 20 to get $20 off.

And you can find the class times that it's offered down here. And again, if you are someone who would like to start off the new year practicing and improving your speaking, then this this may fit in. And I there's only one way that I could describe that is just serendipity. All right? And that is the next word that I wanted to just segue right into serendipity. So I I've included the meaning for this one because it is a it's a more advanced word. It's not a word that you're probably going to use in just everyday conversation, but it's talking about the development of events or something that just by chance. It's like a happy happy coincidence. And you This is a noun.

Serendipity. So it has five syllables. The stress is on that third syllable, that dip. Serendipity. Say it with me. Serendipity. And I've provided a little syllable stress rule down there. If uh just just something to keep in mind. When a word ends in I ty, the stress will be on the third to last syllable. And this is where I think in English, especially when you get uh longer words that have four, five, six syllables, sometimes this makes a big difference because I will hear people, they'll stress the wrong syllable and it's just a minor adjustment that needs to be made. But if a word ends in it, it's the stress is on that third to last syllable. Serendipity.

serendipity. All right, let's look at the next word that I have for you right here. Okay, so this is a word that I think um I I get quite often that people have trouble with. Uh again, it's a pretty common word. The one thing that I really want to point out with this one is that there are two accepted forms of pronunciation. One with three syllables, jewelry. jewelry and then the other with just two syllables. Jewelry. Jewelry. So, in both instances, the stress is going to be on that first syllable. And I think it's probably a little more challenging to say it with three syllables. Jewelry. Jewelry. So, I I think in the American accent, I think saying it with two syllables is pretty common. Jewelry. I feel like I probably end up saying it like this most of the time. And what happens is that second syllable uh with the one with that schwa that uh sound it's going to elide. All right. An elision uh is part of connected speech. This is when certain sounds or syllables they get removed when speaking. And this is you know people do this to it. It gives the language that rhythm and flow. It allows us to say things faster. So again, there are two different pronunciations. You could use whichever one uh I think you find easiest, jewelry, jewelry. But I think for most people uh myself included, it's easier just to say it with two syllables. All right, so that was another good question. Great word. Thank you for um sharing this one. The next one, another by a user. All right, is literally. Okay. So, once again, that T with my uh American accent, I'll say it with a flap T and it had there are four syllables. I didn't I didn't highlight the I forgot to bold the syllable stress. The stress is on that first syllable. Literally.

Literally. Okay. Literally. We just talked about elision. Remember sounds getting removed. This is another word in which you may hear people remove that schwa sound which is in the third syllable that uh and they'll just say literally. Literally. So again, this is one that you may hear with four syllables literally or with three syllables literally. And yes, I'll say it with that flap t. But again, great word um great word to know and use because I think it is it is very useful. So the next one, sorry I haven't been able to chat too much in the comments because I'm just kind of going right through these and then we'll practice.

But I hope uh that you are practicing right now, saying these words with me, practicing your skills. This is interactive English. That's what it's all about. So here is another word that whether you're talking about uh has a different pronunciation. So in the US what I would say is schedule. Schedule that uh ch is going to have a c-c like a k sound. Stress is on that first syllable. Schedule. Hey, what's your schedule like? Um, I haven't uh I need to look at my schedule. Now, in British English, that ch is going to have uh the sh it's like the the cides and it's just going to have more of a sh schedule. All right, schedule. So, this one actually sounds quite different between uh American English and British English, but I would pronounce it with that C- sound schedule. All right. Both of them are perfectly fine. Both of them are okay. I know everybody has different learning goals when it comes to pronunciation. Some people uh enjoy and find the American accent easier and and would like to practice that. Others would like to practice the British accent. Either one um of those pronunciations is fine. The next one uh you this user asks uh was talking about the stress and the the syllable stress in these three words right here. So these are words that are all in the same word family. Distribute. All right. To distribute something. Uh it's a verb has three syllables. Stress is on that second syllable. Distribute. Distribute.

Distributed. Okay. So in this case again the stress is on that second syllable. that e d because the final sound if it's a t or a d, if it's a t or a duh, then we're going to add that extra syllable it to the end. So in this case, distributed has four syllables, but once again the stress is on that second syllable. And then we come to the noun distribution. Distribution.

Now the syllable stress changes. It's on that second to last syllable. And the reason I say second to last is because this is another syllable stress rule. And there again, this is generally speaking, but when the word ends with t i o n or even s i o n, the stress is going to be on the second to last syllable. Distribution. All right, you hear that stress pronunciation. Okay. Again, second to last syllable. So, it's good to again be aware of some of these syllable stress rules. It's not something that if you're having a conversation that you're going to be well thinking about what's the rule, but especially if you're reading. I know when you're reading, people are pronouncing the words sometimes reading out loud or reading up here in their head. And if you question, if you're wondering, oh wait, am I saying this word right? That is when these rules can come in handy. And you can think, okay, it ends with a tio n. The stress is on that second to last syllable. Make sure you're giving it a little more emphasis.

Gustavo for asking me. That's a this is a good word again that I think is very challenging for some people. Then we have another great uh this is a good adverb and it has that ly ending particularly. Particularly. So once again I said when they these words are a little longer. This one has five syllables. The stress is on that second syllable that tick particularly. But this is when people may slightly stress the wrong syllable or they end up stressing them all the same and it just it it modifies the pronunciation of the words slightly. Uh and people may pick up on this, but just keep in mind stress is on that second second syllable. Particularly. All right, say it with me. Particularly. All right, this is a particularly challenging word to pronounce. Okay, the next one. Let's keep moving. And this one, this word has been a thorn in my side. All right, I will confess. And I don't know. Okay, so again, we're talking about learning English. This is a part of speech. An adjective. Adjective. All right, three syllables. The stress is on that first syllable. That D is going to elide. We don't hear it. It becomes more of a silent letter. Adjective. All right. Adjective. The The thing that I I feel like I have even, you know, mispronounced this word in the past is that if I'm speaking quickly, I may even make that C a lot and I'll just say adjective. Adjective. Um, which again, you you would need that adjective. All right. Adjective. So I think one reason why I end up aliding in this word is in some words like if we ch take out that a d all right and change it to objective. All right now the stress is going to be on that second syllable in which ina case it's very it's a lot more pronounced objective.

But in this case with this part of speech the stress is on that first syllable adjective. So you hear that slight iick iick iick Iick in there. Adjective. All right. Thank you, Jacel, uh, for bringing this one up because, yeah, this is one that that I have mispronounced from time to time and you are you're going to hear um, just because somebody's a native speaker, people will pronounce things the wrong way. Uh, and they're, you know, you learn it over time, some of it's regional, other times it's just a pronunciation mistake and we all misspeak and it's perfectly fine. This is I included the meaning of this because this is a more advanced word. It is a verb to obfuscate.

Obfuscate. It means to make something harder to understand. Especially when it and it's done intentionally like somebody is intentionally trying to make it more difficult for others to understand. Um, so you could say like somebody is trying to obfuscate the truth and make the truth harder to understand. They don't want people to know the truth. So the stress there are three syllables. The stress is on that first syllable that obfuscate. Obfuscate. Obfuscate. Um, so after obfuscate we have okay a food word. All right, from Vicki Goo Gustavs Vetana. Uh, again, if you don't know, if you're unfamiliar with this food, quinoa, it's referring to the seeds of a South American plant. It's cooked. It's eaten. Uh, it has two syllables. The stress is on that first syllable. That keen quinoa. All right.

So, say say it with me. Quinoa. Now, again, if you are not somebody who eats quinoa, it may not be a word that that you're going to use all the time, but you may come across it if you're at a restaurant or somewhere else and maybe people are talking about food and they mention quinoa. All right, so now you know. Again, the spelling, pronunciation don't really match up. Um, but it's quinoa. All right, here we go. Let's keep rolling right along with this word which I think is very useful because it is it's quite common. Receipt. Receipt. So in this case we have a silent p. It's going to elide that second syllable. Not only is it stressed but it has that long e sound. Receipt.

Receipt. So if you go out and you buy something then you are going to get the receipt or maybe you lose your receipt. All right. So again this is an important word. Um and and I think with some of these common words that's when it becomes even more important that yes you kind of really nail the pronunciation so that it makes it easier for others to understand what you're talking about. But um great question uh Sangi. Thank you. Then Luis Miguel asked about these two words right here, bear and beard. So I put the pictures down there. Again, I think you know what these words mean. Um, but this is a great example because in both words you have that ea uh letter combination, but the vowel sound is different. So right here, the animal bear sounds like you're saying the word air. And then in the other word over there, talking about the facial hair, the ea has a long e sound.

Beard. Bear. Beard. And what is so crazy about English pronunciation and this is something that I just think you need to uh you know see the word see how it's spelled understand what it means and just just know the pronunciation so that it doesn't uh confuse you. If we remove those B's and we replace it with the letter H, well now the vowel sound it changes again. So if we take the the B in bear and change it to an H then it becomes a long e sound here like to hear something. Now the past participle of that heard h e a r d. Now it changes again to a relative vowel sound. So, I understand um that this is when English pronunciation can get a little crazy because you have these words that more or less are spelled the same, but in each case, the vowel sound, it's going to sound a little different. Bear, beard. Okay, so let's look at the next

Say it with me. Oil. All right. Then then we have this word right here. Again, I think uh very useful adjective. All right, want to make sure I hit that adjective. Subtle. And this is a C2 word. It's more advanced. So, I I included the meaning. It's talking about if something is subtle, it's not loud. It's not bright. It's not obvious in any way. It's subtle. So, it has two se two syllables. Stresses on that first syllable. The B is is just a silent letter. It's going to elide. Subtle. Once again, that L, it's a dark L. You can kind of hear that in as we transition into the second syllable. Subtle.

Subtle. [snorts] And with this one, I would pronounce it with a flap T. It's going to sound like that soft D. Subtle. All right. Wow. It's very Somebody they gave me a subtle hint. Subtle. Then we have months. Well, this was not the word that was asked about uh Ronnie. I know Ronnie because he has he has taken uh he has joined our course before. Good to see you, Ronnie. Uh but was asking more about the the words that end with ths. So I just chose this word mostly because it's a you know it's common. We're talking about months. So the ths in this case it is going to be a voiceless th.

So in words the you have a voice th uh in words like the and you hear that feel that vibration that they or voiceless th words like um throne um or in this case at the end of the word months. So, it's the And what makes it challenging is with the th sound, that voiceless th your your teeth, um, your tongue is just behind your your front teeth, which are slightly closed and you're just pushing the air through the I'm going to really get into the microphone here. that. And when you go into the S sound, you're just bringing your tongue back and and that's going to move it move us right into the S. Months. Months. Months. Now, I will say that when speak people are speaking quickly, uh they may end up dropping that H and it might just sound like months. So, it's just like a ts final ending. months, months, six months, seven months, eight months. So, just keep that in mind. Um, with that ths sound. All right. Then, anonymity. Okay. This is a noun. It's talking about, again, this is a word that I just went ahead and provided the meaning, a situation in which someone's name is not given or known. anonymity. It has five syllables. The stress is on that third to last syllable. Remember, we've already talked about when that syllable stress rule. When a word ends in iy, the stress is going to be on the third to last syllable. Anonymity. Anonymity. Anonymity. So, hopefully you can hear that stress on that nim. It's a little louder. Anonymity. The next word that I have for you, I have some more. Uh, keep going through these, metastasis. So, this is a word that's related to one's health because the meaning of this, this is a verb to metastasize. It's talking about when cancer cells spread to other parts of the body. So, cancer is something that I think affects um many of our lives. Uh, whether it's someone in our family or we know someone else. So, this is a verb that you may hear if you go and talk to the doctor and they're talking about cancer and they you might use this verb metastasize. It has four syllables. The stress is on that second syllable.

Metastasis. So, that third syllable has thatwah and the first syllable as well. Metastasis. Metastasis. So again, this is a word that may not come up in everyday conversation, but it's important. It's related to your health to metastasize. The next word is one that was borrowed from French. And that is again why the spelling and the pronunciation don't necessarily match up. Rendezvous. It has three syllables. The stress is on that first syllable and down there. So I put the word loan word because this is an example of a lone word. It's a word adopted from a foreign language with little or no modification. So in this case we we've adopted this word spelling has stayed the same. The pronunciation maybe more or less the same. Rendezvous, right? We're going to rendezvous at this place around at this time and then we're going to meet there. We're going to rendezvous. So, let's continue with some more French loan words with the next one. Um, Sergey asks about lingerie. So, lingerie, once again, the spelling and the pronunciation don't match. This is another word that we have adopted from French [snorts] has three syllables. The stress is on that first syllable. Lingerie. Lingerie. So, you can say this one with me. Lingerie. This is women's underwear. Uh, and the night clothes, lingerie. Then I have another French word. All right, we're gonna we're gonna follow this theme for just a moment. Genre. It has two syllables. The stress is on that first syllable. That G has a sound. Genre. Genre. So if you're talking about books, movies, TV shows, you might ask somebody, hey, what you know what genre is this? Is it comedy? Is it suspense?

What genre? So good word to know and know the pronunciation genre. So if you're wondering why it's pronounced this way, again, it is a lone word from French. All right. Then uh I have sophomore. Now once uh same with the word we talked about uh jewel jewelry and jewelry. This word has two accepted pronunciations. One with three syllables sophomore. Sophomore or two syllables sophomore. In both cases the stress is on that first syllable. And what this is in case you're unfamiliar with it. I didn't include the meaning. We're talking about the the year that you are where you are in school. So in English you have freshman the four four years freshman sophomore junior senior freshman sophomore junior senior.

Photography. Photographer also has four syllables. Stress is still on that second syllable. So again, photography like you're talking about the activity, something you enjoy doing. Oh, I really love photography. And er, when we add that er, we can create a noun referring to the person. Someone is a photographer. The next word, totally. All right, I definitely get it. Totally. So this is a word that has three syllables. Stresses on that first syllable. A couple other things going on with my accent. I'm going to pronounce that T as a flap T because it comes between those two vowel sounds. Totally. So, you can hear that soft D. And we've already talked about the dark L. I've still included that information down there. That L is a dark L. Totally. And you hear that?

Totally. Say it with me. Totally. All right. So hopefully this is hopefully you've learned something new because I've tried to choose words that are a little different. Some of them I think are very common. Others are definitely more specific such as this one, [gasps] pheasant. So it has two syllables. The stress is on that first syllable. We've just talked about with uh many words in English that ph is going to have an f sound just like in this word pheasant. pheasant. So a pheasant this is referring to the bird. And I it's a large bird that I think is rather colorful. And I've just included a picture down there because I thought that would just be the easiest way to uh just illustrate this word in case you were unfamiliar with it. Feasant.

Then we have this word persuade. This is a verb, two syllables. The stress is on that second syllable. Persuade. And you can hopefully again you can hear that it's a little louder. And with these two syllable words, I think it is important to really get that syllable stress down to make it that much easier to understand. Persuade. To persuade someone. Persuade. Then I have a word that I've I've talked about previously and again just as a reminder, it's a good word to know. Mischievous. It's an adjective. It has three syllables. The problem with this word is that you will hear people, even native speakers, they end up pronouncing it with four syllables. Mischievous.

And I've had people ask me like, "Well, you hear it quite often. Does that make it incorrect?" Um, again, language changes over time. It evolves. In any of the online dictionaries, uh, the dictionaries that I've looked at, they all list it as three syllables. So it has not changed um at least in that regard to where at least uh people are saying that it's an accepted form. So because of that I just I'm putting the three down there. The stress is on that first syllable. I would recommend uh that you also pronounce it with three syllables. Mischievous. Mischievous. Talking about somebody kind of being sneaky or naughty. Mischievous. I think this often gets used when talking about children as well. I have a couple more words. This is a minimal pair. Um, Alberta [laughter] asked about it. Okay.

Doll. Dull. So, the only difference I say it's a minimal pair. You have two words that are pretty much the same except for one sound. And in this case, we're talking about the vowel sound doll. All right. You hear that? A a sound like you go to the doctor and they want to look in uh your mouth. They say say a doll dull. So those are different. They're distinct short vowel sounds. Doll dull. But I think when it comes to these minimal pairs, this is great practice. It's practice just fine-tuning your pronunciation. So say the minimal pair with me and see if you feel like you're making that uh distinction. Doll. Doll.

Doll. Doll. So I again I've included some pictures. Doll is uh you see the the little toy down there. If you say something is dull, it's just not exciting. It's a little boring. So that's why that person tries to look bored like something's dull. And then we have another longer word uh an adjective. Conscientious. Conscientious has four syllables. Stress is on that N. Conscientious. So when I say it slowly, hopefully you can hear that. Conscientious. Conscientious. That that it is louder. Conscientious. Conscientious. All right. So, what I want to do now, okay, I want to I want to practice some. I I think in the future I will do more lessons like this. If you enjoy it, let me know. The best way to do that, just hit that like button. That tells me, okay, these lessons are helpful. It helps um you being able to ask directly like, "Hey, how do you pronounce this word? Let's talk about it. Let's practice it." But I do want to I want to do a little more practice right now. And the way that I want to practice is with some sentences. So please, I want you to participate. Say these sentences out loud. It doesn't matter. I don't care where you are. Just practice your speaking skills. And I've included some sentences. Well, these are sentences that have some of the words that we've talked about. And I bolded those words that we went through. So here's the first sentence. It's obvious that my daughter didn't follow the schedule. It's obvious that my daughter didn't follow the schedule. So, the words that we have obvious daughter daughter schedule. It's obvious my do it's obvious that my daughter didn't follow the schedule.

The next one right here, he tried to obfuscate the truth about his subtle but mischievous plans. All right, I want you to say it. Say it with me. Practice. Say it out loud. He tried to obfuscate the truth about his subtle but mischievous plans. Once again, like this is like shadowing. It helps like just trying to say it in the exact same way. All right, let's say it ready one more time together. Ready? One, two, three. He tried to obfuscate the truth about his subtle but mischievous plans. Well done. And the next one. Okay. We asked for anonymity when we met at the rendezvous to exchange the lingerie. So those are the three words I told you.

Rendezvous and lingerie. Those are loan words from French. So hopefully I'm sure some of you from France right now maybe it makes it a little easier. You're familiar with these words. We asked for anonymity when we when we met at the rendezvous to exchange the lingerie. And if I were exchanging the lingerie at the rendezvous, I also would want anonymity. And then at choir practice, I lost the receipt to my jewelry and it was particularly frustrating. Put four of them in there. All right, just say it right after me. At choir practice, I lost the receipt to my jewelry and it was particularly frustrating. So once again, I that I'm end up pronouncing jewelry. I'm saying it with two syllables. Uh let's say this sentence one more time together. Ready?

Here we go. At choir practice, I lost the receipt to my jewelry and it was particularly frustrating. All right, well done. So I appreciate you participating in the lesson. And once again, if you are someone who would like to practice and improve your speaking skills, improve your pronunciation, um please check out my speaking course. There is a link down below in the description and you can learn more about it. Um and yeah, that that's what it's all about. Each week we warm up with something related to pronunciation, connected speech. Uh it's all about helping you fine-tune your skills as well as learn uh a little bit of vocabulary related to the different topics. So I want to say a big thank you. Now I can give some uh shoutouts because I wanted to go right through the lesson and just talk about these words.

I want to say thank you for joining me today. Um Lai, Sleepwalker, Felix, Christina, George. Um thank Alex Rosalinda. Thank you so much to all of those who submitted questions and were asking about, well, how do you pronounce this word? This is something that I would like to continue doing in the future, especially if you find this useful. So, I hope that you have a wonderful day. I hope that you have a wonderful rest of the year and I will see you next time.

Do You Make These English Mistakes When Speaking?

Let's correct your grammar mistakes. Specifically, I want to focus on mistakes that you might be making when you're having a conversation. So, really, this is about fine-tuning your speaking fluency by avoiding or even just eliminating simple grammar mistakes. And if you are someone who would like to improve your speaking fluency, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So, the way that I want to approach this is telling you a story. So, I'm going to be speaking. I just want you to listen and see if you can identify the mistake. See if you hear anything that's incorrect or maybe even just sounds a bit awkward. And then we'll talk about the mistake and I'll tell you how to correct it. So, let's start with our first mistake and I'll begin with a story. So, I just want you to listen carefully. Are you ready?

Let's begin. My friend called me up and asked me if I wanted to do anything. So yesterday we go to this big park and walked around for about an hour. At one point a dog approached us and we don't see the owner. We hung out with the dog for about an hour and eventually the owner showed up looking for him. Did you hear the mistake? If I were to show you what I just said and you can read it, I think it's a little easier to identify the problem. So here is the story, this very short story that I just said to you. Now this is a story that happened yesterday in the past. It's finished. In that case, I should be using past tense verbs. And as you can see, so yesterday, we go to this big park and a present tense verb slipped in there. So yesterday is a time expression which indicates clearly that I should be using the past. So yesterday we went to this big park. As I continued the story, at one point a dog approached us and we didn't see the owner. This is a little trickier because there's no time expression, but still I should be using the past tense. We didn't see the owner. Generally, when telling a story, just choose one tense and stick to it. For the most part, you're going to be using the past tense when talking about traditional narratives. You could use the present tense when telling a story if you want to create maybe a sense of urgency. So I could tell you the same thing and say, "My friend calls me up and asks if I want to do something." So we go to this big park and we walk around. At one point, a dog approaches us and we don't see the owner. So again, it I'm saying the same thing, but I'm using the present tense and maybe it gives you this sense that you are there with me and it's happening. However, like I just said, most of the time when you're talking about things that happened in the past, which most stories happen in the past, you're going to use the past tense. So how do you correct this? The one thing you really need to do is identify if you're accidentally using present tense verbs when talking about the past. And there I think there are two ways to do this. The first is to record yourself telling the story. And then you can go back, listen to it, and see if you hear yourself using any present tense verbs. The next way, which I think is perhaps more useful, is to write the story down. go back over the story, see if you find any present tense verbs because you know that you're talking about the past. Writing is more reflective. So, it's easier to go back, look at what you've written, and identify those mistakes because if you're making the mistake when you're writing, you're likely making the same mistake as you're speaking and telling the story. So, try those two things. See which one works best for you. And that's a great way to remove those present tense verbs when talking about a story in the past. Let's continue with our next mistake. And once again, I want to share a story with you. And I just want you to listen and see if you hear anything that maybe sounds a bit strange. Are you ready? The other day, I had a job interview. It was at an office that was in this big building, and I was having trouble finding it. So, I told the person at the reception desk, "I don't know where should I go." Thankfully, she pointed me in the right direction. Did you hear it? mistake that I hear quite often. Let me show you what I said. And what I want you to really think about is the noun clause when I say, "I don't know. Where should I go?" This is incorrect. the word order is incorrect because what I should say is I don't know where I should go. So, let's first talk about noun clauses. A noun clause is a dependent clause that functions like a noun in a sentence. And often they're introduced with subordinating words such as that, what, whether, if. The problem is that when you have words like what, how, why, your brain is probably thinking question, in which case the subject and the auxiliary verb are inverted. So I understand why people make this mistake. So instead of saying I don't know where should I go, I'm not going to use that question pattern. You should say I don't know where I should go. And I'm using the normal sentence pattern subject verb. I don't know where I should go. So, how do you correct this? Often this mistake is made when you start a sentence with I know or I don't know and then follow it with a noun clause. And I I think you could really just drill some of these sentences into your brain and drill drill drill drill drill.

And that's what I want to do right now. So, I am going to say some sentences. I just want you to repeat after me. This is a drill exercise. I don't know where I'm going. I don't know where I'm going. I know who you are. I know who you are. I don't know what I should do. I don't know what I should do. I know how you can fix it. I know how you can fix it. The more you do this and just say these sentences out loud, even if they're just simple sentences, over time, your brain is going to recognize that there are actually two different patterns. One for asking questions, and then the other for using noun clauses. Let's take a look at our next grammar mistake when speaking English. So, here is your next story.

And just listen carefully. I was in such a rush this morning, I just ran out the door. I didn't eat something for breakfast. I was hungry the entire morning and I had trouble focusing on my work. Did you hear it? If not, let me show you what I said and you can read it. And in that case, it's probably a little easier to identify. So, the mistake, I didn't have something for breakfast. Instead of something, I should have said anything. I didn't have anything for breakfast. So, a mistake that I often hear is people confusing something and anything or even someone and anyone and even some or any. So, something and anything, these are indefinite pronouns, but you're going to use them in different grammatical context. In general, you're going to use something with affirmative statements and you're going to use anything with negative statements or questions. And the same goes for the other indefinite pronouns, someone or some with affirmative statements and anyone or any

with negative statements or questions. But I hope that as you were listening to this and you heard me say, "I didn't eat something for breakfast," maybe it sounded a little strange because I'm using a negative statement. I did not. Therefore, I should use anything. I did not eat anything for breakfast. In my opinion, I think the best way to correct mistakes such as this is just to read, read, read, read as much as you can. Get exposure to the language. But when you're reading, you're passively learning the language and you're seeing the words that are used together. So, my recommendation to you, uh, whether it's this mistake or many of the others, is just to keep reading. But in general, just remember you're going to use some, something, someone with affirmative statements and any, anything, any anyone with negative statements or questions.

Here is our next grammar mistake and your next story. Recently, I got a promotion because my boss told me I was making a good job and I should keep up the good work. I just hope I don't do a mistake in my new position because I really want to impress my boss. Perhaps this time you could just listen to the story and you notice that. Okay. Yes, this sounds a bit strange. But let me show you what I said and what I want to highlight the two mistakes. Making a good job and do a mistake. I'm using these verbs incorrectly. I should say doing a good job and make a mistake.

And often I will hear people confuse these two verbs, make and do, especially when they're using them in some common collocations. And collocations are words that are frequently used together. And because I'm talking about frequently used words and phrases, if a mistake is made, it does stand out a bit more if somebody uses make instead of do or or vice versa. I understand why people make some of these mistakes and generally it has to do with language translation that in one's native language you would use the verb do or you would use the verb make. So let me give you some common collocations with the verbs make and do.

Let's start with do. You do the laundry. You do the shopping. You do the cooking. You do chores. You do housework. You do your homework. You do research. You do a project. You do work. You do your job. You do business. You do your best. You do someone a favor. You do harm. You do damage. Now, let's have a look at collocations with the verb make. You make a decision. You make a plan. You make an effort. You make a mistake. You make a suggestion. You make an announcement. You make a promise. You make an excuse. You make money. Make a deal. Make an investment. You make friends. You make an impression on someone. You make dinner. You make a mess. So, there are many, many, many collocations with the verbs make and do.

I'm just giving you some examples, but there are a lot of them out there and they are commonly used in everyday English. So, let's talk about how to correct these mistakes because I do not expect you to memorize all of these collocations. But what I would recommend is that you passively learn this information through reading and listening. Our brains are trained to recognize patterns. So, the more you see these words being used together or hear these words being used together, you're going to absorb that information. And the next time you're talking about a mistake, you're just going to naturally use the verb make. And in that case, you will no longer make the same mistake.

And generally what happens is people will use an adjective when they should be using an adverb. Like in the mistake that that I just made, instead of she sings beautiful, I should say she sings beautifully. and use that ly adverb. Another common example would be me saying something like I do something good instead of I do something well. Good and well are often confused. In this case, you want to use the adverb well. You sing well. You dance well. You speak English really well. Adverbs can be a little tricky because they can modify verbs, adjectives, even other adverbs. So, they're very versatile. If you want to correct this, in my opinion, and I know I'm going to sound like a broken record, you should read, read, and read some more. When you read, you're going to see the adverbs that modify the verbs, the adjectives, even other adverbs. You're going to see the adjectives that modify the nouns. And ultimately, this is just going to reinforce proper use of the language.

Let's have a look at our next grammar mistake. So, here is your next story. I had an argument with my brother and lately we haven't spoken much. My birthday is next week and I'm having a party. I invited my brother and he said he is coming. However, I have doubts as to whether or not he will actually show up. So, this one it's a little trickier. It's a slight mistake, but let me show you what I said and I want to highlight he said he is coming because this is reported speech, but I'm using the wrong verb tense. I should have said, I invited my brother and he said he was coming. So, you have direct speech and reported speech. Most of the time when you're having a conversation telling a story, you're going to use reported speech, but you need to be aware of the verb tense changes. Here is a simple chart. And if we go back to what I said in direct speech, it's like my brother would say, "I am coming." If I change that to reported speech, I'm going to use the past tense. He said he was coming. To give you another example, in direct speech, uh maybe I say, "She is looking for her keys." If I change that to reported speech, then I'm going to change the verb tense. I said she was looking for her keys. To be perfectly honest, in spoken English, people are not going to pick up on a mistake like this as readily as some of the other mistakes, like confusing the verbs make and do. However, this is about fine-tuning your fluency. So, you want to make sure that you're using the correct grammar. When it comes to correcting slight speaking mistakes like this, I think writing can really help.

So, I would encourage you to write a story, write dialogue. In that case, you're going to be using both direct speech and reported speech. As I've already mentioned, writing is more reflective. You can go back, reread, try to identify any mistakes that you might be making. Make sure that you're using the correct verb tense because if you're able to correct these mistakes in your writing, I think it's going to have a positive impact on your speaking. Let's continue with our next grammar mistake in spoken English. And I I really want you to think about this one because I hear these mistakes all the time. So, let's first listen to the story. My cousin and I play in a basketball league. We have a game this weekend and my cousin plays in the opposing team.

the entire family is excited for the game and everyone is going to be there. This is a slight speaking mistake that sometimes it just goes unnoticed. I don't know if you picked up on it. Here is what I said and I'm going to highlight the phrase in the opposing team. So, the mistake is the preposition. Instead of in the opposing team, I should use on on the opposing team. When it comes to prepositions, I often hear in just casual conversation people using the wrong preposition. And again, this can be very confusing because there are many, many, many prepositions in, on, at, around, over. The good news is that when you use the wrong preposition, it doesn't take away from the meaning. People still understand exactly what you're trying to say. But in this case, it's really about speaking accuracy. You want to make sure you're using the correct preposition for clarity. Now, the the example I gave you is especially tricky because in and on when talking about teams, either one may be used. It depends on the context. So, when talking about sports, you're going to use on. She's on the tennis team. My cousin is on the opposing basketball team. When talking about work, you may hear people use in. They work in a team. So, what I'm really trying to get at is that prepositions can be especially confusing because there are instances when you could use more than one and both of them are correct. Now, sometimes there are rules that you can follow if talking about times of the day, in the morning, in the afternoon, in the evening. Other times you just need to familiarize yourself with the preposition that may follow certain nouns, verbs or adjectives or that may be used in certain phrases.

You're afraid of something. So how do you correct this so that you are using the right preposition and speaking accurately? ready to tell you one word. You probably know what word that it is. And yes, it is read. I want you to read more because this is the best way to passively learn the language, especially when we're talking about preposition, these small function words that people don't necessarily give much thought to. And I don't expect you to try to memorize a bunch of phrases, but as you read and learn this information passively, I think that is the best thing you can do. Because even though listening, reading, writing, speaking these are different skill sets but there is a lot of overlap and one skill may complement the others.

said people. There were two people behind me. So the word people is an irregular plural noun. It's not like other nouns in which you just add an s to the end to make it plural. But this is very important because it is a word that is commonly used. And most of the time when I hear a mistake like this, it's when people are using the word people with a number.

Accidentally, they use the singular person and try to make it plural. Two persons, three persons, four persons when we should be talking about one person. And then if it's more than one, two people, three people, four people, five people. And there are other irregular plural nouns in which I hear the same mistake. People try to add an s to the singular noun instead of using the irregular plural noun. Some other common examples would be child, children, tooth, teeth, foot, feet, woman, women, man, men. These are commonly used words and this is when a slight speaking mistake is made. Now, even though this is just a simple mistake, it really stands out. So just be mindful of these irregular plural nouns and try to correct these mistakes. So let's talk about how you can correct them. The first thing to do would be to identify if you are making any mistakes with these irregular plural nouns. I would suggest that you write a story and intentionally use some of the nouns that we just talked about. Those common words, person, people, child, children. Go through, see if you can identify any mistakes. The other thing I would say is that the list of irregular plural nouns, it's not that long. I think you could go through and just memorize it and familiarize yourself with this vocabulary, the singular noun as well as the irregular plural noun and just drill it into your brain so the next time you're having a conversation, you're using the correct word. Let's have a look at our next grammar mistake. So, listen carefully to the story.

I thought the playground would be crowded because it was a holiday, but when we arrived, there were less children than I expected. It was nice and relaxing. The family had a great time. This is actually a story that I might tell someone because I have two children. I don't know if you heard anything that was a little strange, but let me show you what I said. And I want to highlight the phrase less children. mentioned that children, this is an irregular plural noun. It is plural which means that it is countable. So instead of using the word less, I should have used the word fewer. There were fewer children than I expected. So you're going to use fewer with count nouns. Fewer children, fewer items, fewer opportunities. You're going to use the word less when talking about non-count nouns. Less money, less water, less time. Now, the vast majority of times people end up using the word less when they should use the word fewer. And often, but not always, it happens with these irregular plural nouns like children, people. Now, I will say that I think this is a slight speaking mistake because you will also hear native speakers make this mistake from time to time. I've even caught myself making this mistake and using less when I should use the word fewer. To give you another example, in the US, if you walk into a grocery store, you may see a sign like this that says 10 items or less. Items is clearly countable. So, grammatically speaking, the sign should read 10 items or fewer. It's gotten to the point where I think this is becoming more and more acceptable. But still, it really is all about accuracy. And that is why I want to teach you the correct grammar. As far as correcting this mistake, just be conscious of these two words. We're only talking about two words, less and fewer. So, when you're having a conversation, just be aware of the noun that follows.

Is it a non-count noun or is it a count noun? because if you're aware of it, I think you're more likely to be able to self-correct if you end up using the word less instead of fewer. So, I hope you're able to keep these things in mind and avoid any of these simple or even glaring grammar mistakes the next time you're speaking English. If you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time.

Do You Want to Reduce Your English Accent?

Today, I am going to tell you three different ways that you can reduce your English accent. Today's lesson is all about pronunciation, and I am going to talk to you about three different ways that you can reduce your English accent. Now, I want to say something very important right here at the beginning. And that is it's okay to have an accent. When you are learning another language, it is perfectly normal to have an accent, and you shouldn't be ashamed of it. It is fine. The primary goal when you are learning a language and speaking and communicating with others is that other people understand what you're saying. It doesn't matter if you have an accent.

However, I understand if people out there would like to reduce their accent. Maybe they are a little more self-conscious. Or they're a little reluctant to speak and have a conversation with others because of their accent. I've also been told that maybe if you're going for a job interview, learners have said that they might be a little worried that the person interviewing them might judge them because of their accent if it's really thick. So those are reasons why you might want to reduce your English accent. And if that is the case, then this lesson is for you. All of the tips that I am about to tell you are very simple and straightforward.

If you keep these in mind when you are learning and practicing your English skills, it will help you over the long-term. And you'll be able to reduce your accent. And become a little more proficient in English. So the first way to reduce your accent is to listen to the accent that you wish to imitate. So if you would like to speak and sound more like an American, then you should listen to an American accent. You can listen to movies, TV, music, and constantly try to hear that accent. The same goes if you would like to more like a British speaker. If you want to sound like an Australian speaker or a South African speaker.

Find the accent that you wish to imitate and expose yourself to it. Listen to that accent because listening is a very important part of pronunciation. Because when you're listening, you're not only hearing the pronunciation, you're hearing the rhythm and the flow of speech. You're hearing the intonation and the emphasis of certain words. So listening is the first step because we need to listen before we can speak. And once you listen to the way an accent sounds, then you can try to speak and imitate the same pronunciation. How are you? How are you? I'm good. Are you happy? Are you happy birdie? And this is something that actors and actresses do all the time when they would like to use a certain accent.

I've heard you've claimed that you can do an accent any town in the world. Minsk. In Russia...Minsk. Minsk is very tight. Tight Russia. Hamburg, Germany. Hamburg. Ya, natürlich. So in Germany... Fargo, North Dakota. Fargo. Yeah Fargo, it's not like you think it is. It's not because...it's not like, it's not like the show. Did you do voices? Yes. Always. You'd imitate people? Everyone. Give me a little Apu. What would you like to talk about Larry? May I say, it's an honor, true honor to sit across from... And Moe you gave us. Moe you had a little bit there. Don't get greedy Larry. All right. How about Chief Wiggum? How about him? You don't have any...you don't have any legal problems that I should know about do you Larry?

No, there are several different resources that you can use to find different sentences and words that are being said in American English or British English or Australian English. We did a video lesson on different pronunciation resources that you can check out. And these are some great online resources that are free. That you can use to practice and improve your pronunciation. The next tip that I have for you and it's basically the next step in order to reduce your accent is to record yourself. And actually practice your pronunciation. So first you listen to the accent, and then you need to try to practice it. And if you record yourself and listen to yourself, then you'll be able to identify areas of pronunciation that you need to improve.

And find out what you need to do in order to reduce your accent. Because maybe you are having difficulty with a certain sound or maybe you are having trouble with word stress. If you're able to record yourself saying different words or sentences, and then compare that with the way a native English speaker says it, you'll be able to identify the areas of pronunciation you need to work on. And you can record yourself using a phone. You can record yourself with the computer using an online voice recorder. There are many different ways that you can record your own pronunciation and then listen to that so that you can understand...Okay, "What do I need to work on in order to reduce my accent?"

That you feel that you need to work on. And this will be a good starting point. And all of this ties right in with the last tip that I have for you and that is to become a student of pronunciation. And in order to become a student of pronunciation you just need to study it and learn more about it. Learn more about the individual sounds in English. Learn more about the combinations that different letters make and the sounds that they make. For example, the -tion at the end of the word has the /shun/ sound. The PH will have the F sound. The WR at the beginning of the word has the R sound and W is a silent letter.

So if you are able to become a student of pronunciation, then you'll be able to reduce your accent because you're going to learn more about it. And when you speak, you are going to be saying the correct pronunciation. And then it'll just become a part of your overall fluency. And you won't even have to think about it anymore. There are also many different resources that you can use to improve your pronunciation. Like books. There are pronunciation books that you can use. You can also use the Internet and just look up different online, pronunciation resources, and you will find a variety of sites that will help you practice and improve your pronunciation.

And give you all sorts of information and tips that will help you reduce your accent. So I hope that you found some of these tips useful. And that you can use them in order to reduce your accent. If you did find them helpful, please give this video a thumbs up. And in the comments below, why don't you tell us about some sounds or words that you've had difficulty pronouncing. And perhaps tell us what you did in order to improve your pronunciation. So write to us in the comments. We love hearing from you guys. And, as always, thanks for watching and we'll see you next time.

Does having an accent matter? | Natural English Conversation + Vocabulary

today you are going to do two things you are going to listen to a natural English conversation as well as learn some new vocabulary that's coming up what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and the way we're going to do that today is that we have a conversation that we want you to listen to but not only that we want to teach you some new vocabulary that you are going to hear when listening to this conversation and that is a great way to learn some new words as well as see how they're used in context and I will highlight those for you so you will know exactly where to find them so today's topic is all about accents many learners ask us about this all the time and they ask if it's necessary to reduce their accent or eliminate their accent or many people ask us you know does it even matter if we have an accent does it that even important so we are going to discuss this topic with you share some of our thoughts opinions and ideas and teach you some new vocabulary along the way so first let's go over the vocabulary that you are going to hear in our conversation the first word that I have for you is slight and this is an adjective which means small in degree so you often find it before a noun in this case we're talking about a slight accent so that that's a very common way it might be used when discussing languages and if you have a slight accent you really wouldn't hear much of an accent and all because it is slight then we have an expression which is I just thought it was a fun expression spoiler alert and if somebody says spoiler alert then they're talking about that some future information is about to be revealed often it's used in the context of maybe a TV show or a movie and you're about to reveal some information and you say okay this is a spoiler alert sometimes it's even used sarcastically when something is very obvious and they state the obvious and then another person might say whoa spoiler alert so it depends on the context but it can be used sarcastically as well spoiler alert at the end of this lesson we will ask you to write to us in the comments then we have a verb which is to impede and this just means to make something more difficult to happen often you might hear it being used with the word progress you know you're trying to make progress but something impedes your progress it makes it a little more difficult to move forward to MP then we have crucial this is an adjective which just means of great importance something is important then you could say that it is crucial for example it is crucial that you hit that like button we really want you to hit that like button right down below it's crucial and nothing nothing is impeding you from doing that right now just just hit it just hit it right now right down below it's crucial next is exposure and this is a noun that means that you are experiencing something in an environment that is going to affect you let me give you an example we use this word a lot when talking about learning languages because we always tell you to try and get as much exposure as you can to the English language and that just means that you are experiencing English you are listening to English you are reading English it is a part of your environment you are surrounded by it and it is affecting you it is affecting you because you are learning you are learning the language because you are getting a lot of exposure next is an expression to get people down or you could say to get someone down and that just means to make someone feel a little depressed or demoralized that you know if something gets people down then it just makes people a bit sad it's not a good thing or if something gets you down then it's something that that maybe demoralizes you and it's just harder to keep moving and keep learning and and keep going forward but as long as you get that good exposure that is what is so crucial to developing your language skills and hopefully nothing is impeding you from your progress and you see how I'm doing that just using all these words so that you'll remember them then we have an idiom which is to put a spin on something and often we that something is just to put a spin on it and this just means to interpret and event in either a favorable or unfavorable way so for example if we're going to interpret something in a favorable way then you would hear somebody put a positive spin on it or if it was interpreted in an unfavorable way then they might put a negative spin on it so to put a spin on something is just a way of interpreting it can be good it can be bad it could be positive negative to put a spin on it so those are the vocabulary words that I want you to keep an eye out for as you're listening to this conversation and and I will highlight them for you so you will see exactly where they are and how they're being used in context all right so you're ready to listen to the conversation it is crucial that you listen carefully all right here's the conversation all right so we have a speaking topic that we want to discuss and share with you guys today and just talk about our opinions our thoughts and we are going to talk about whether how important is it for you to reduce your accent or try to lose your accent many we get many comments that people talking about like how can I reduce my accent or I want to sound like in a like a native English speaker from the US or I want to sound like I'm British and whether or not that's necessary and important yeah so what do you think maybe Barry so I mean technically speaking native speakers everybody has everybody has an active spoiler alert not my first language but I'll say this it isn't it isn't important it is in in the it's very important when it impedes communication in this is that if you're trying to say something like I've heard people say instead of recipe receipt or something like that where you have such a strong accent where you're saying the words inflection is wrong and then people just don't understand where you're trying to say it causes confusion that's what is so important because obviously the point of language the point of language learning is effective communication when you want to get across what you're trying to say people to understand what you're saying that's when accident is crucial but most of the time your accent is not going to to mess with that not too much I think it's rare yeah that that happens I mean I I do understand as well I know we've taught some learners that would say you know I want to you know I want to reduce my accent because it's for work or maybe they're applied they're applying for jobs and they're worried that whoever is interviewing them that that person might judge them or something on their proficiency that could happen yes I understand in that context that people would be like okay I want to sound as fluent as possible and therefore they want to reduce their accents or are worried about your accent there are things you can do to improve it slightly even though it's anxious well like when I was learning I kept saying cookies instead of cookies and every everyone thought oh I'll take you it the way you see cookies like it's like you would say like with like teaching little kids or something yeah be playing people in stir well cuz I said you know you know but in the teens I heard a lot of native speakers take cookies cookies cookies and I just learned that one sound and then like once you learn one side or like instead of before saying before those little things when you put them when you use them a lot everyday it reduces your action by quite a lot actually I think you sound a lot more native so you don't have to like reduce it completely in order to yeah and I think again it goes back to if you have a lot of exposure to the language and you're listening a lot then I think people can naturally reduce their accent on their own instead of trying to study specific things and specific information because you start to realize that if you hear a word being spoken people say it and kind of try to imitate that because many times native speakers do not say the correct way or the way they're true very true it's especially like in music yeah in what speaking in conversation because people don't to link their words together and sometimes the way that's being spoken you don't fully pronounce the word like you don't think I'm going to the beach yeah you don't say you don't see the final G sound is what

I meant to say oh okay yeah kind of dropped that G in the continuous especially if you link it anyway so I would say just pay attention to what's going on around you and try to stay that way but realize and keep in the mind of you're in the back of your mind that it's not going to be perfect you will make mistakes and that it's okay because it's been my experience in the english-speaking world that people you know we have so many speakers from so many different countries and it's it's so accepted it's like the one language where it's so accepted to have an and it's really welcome and it's kind of a conversation piece and that's another way for you to practice your language it's just to just talk to other people and tell them all your story tell them where you're from and it's perfect it's perfectly like like you wanted to set perfectly okay to have an accent I've been studying Spanish for years I've lived in three different spanish-speaking countries and I still I think a strong accent I don't eat strong anything entences usted is case Tommy Rondo este video he support our espanol they may look at the answers is escriba man comentario que piensa so brainy acento in espanol people can read and be like oh yeah that guy sounds like he's from maybe maybe but yeah it's okay and I think like you just just go with it go with it I I think again we all have our personal reasons why you may want to reduce it and that's perfectly fine and again I would encourage you guys practice you know try to practice that especially if you can identify where you're having some trouble with certain sounds but again I don't think it's something to stress out yeah you know and again I think it really gets people down like you said if they make the mistake if somebody says hey I don't understand what you're saying or like can you repeat that I understand that makes people feel maybe a little bad sometimes they're a little down like oh gosh I need to yeah but that gets better and I wanted to say like don't don't it I don't know for me it's been a positive thing having an accident living in the u.s. because it's always been a conversation piece because you are you from and yeah and I think if you keep it as part of your identity what's right I mean it's up to you if you want to keep it forever that's fine if you want to improve it that's also okay but it can be something that's interesting about you that's unique to you you vegetable language it means your you know you have this other background story and you could put a positive spin on it and I I think it is a positive thing that we all have these different things to share yeah yeah I think in the u.s.

far away from so okay yeah it in the comments like let us know we just want to hear from what what what should we write to us something about about accents if it's something you're interested in reducing it is something I feel you need to do and why you might need to do it because again we want to people to share information that everybody might enjoy reading about and that's useful and insightful because again that's it just helps people she's over there right over there right over there with Grandma and Grandpa so alright so write to us in the comments we love hearing from you guys and as always thanks so much for watching and we'll see you next time

Don't Always Say 'I THINK' | Useful Phrases to Build Your Vocabulary

useful phrases take one action I think you are going to love this lesson cut cut cut take two action I'm of the opinion that you are going to love this lesson cut take three action it goes without saying that you are going to love this lesson but let's just start from the very beginning action to think it means to believe something or have an opinion or idea and this is the most common verb whenever you want to express an opinion or talk about what you believe and it even ranks in the top 10 of the most common verbs in English now there is nothing wrong with using the verb think whenever you want to talk about something you believe or Express an opinion however as your teacher I want you to feel comfortable using a variety of phrases in different situations and I want to help you be a little more precise and just add a little more flavor to your conversations and discussions and if you are someone who likes building your vocabulary and learning new phrases Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so let's begin with that very common verb think and if you are going to use this verb and say I think I would recommend that you include an adverb that gives it a little more flavor a little more emphasis and there are some common adverb verb collocations so you could say I really think or I definitely think or I certainly think these are very common and useful in just casual conversation and if you're wondering which of these phrases is more often used among native speakers then we can check out engram viewer to see just how often they are used and as you can see the phrase way I really think is just crushing it I really think you should use an adverb if you are in fact going to use this phrase now let's continue with another verb that is also very common and that is feel I think I feel on the surface these phrases really have the same meaning but specifically when you say I feel it refers to having a particular opinion about something or just a particular attitude toward toward something so this slight Nuance is probably what you think it is you think with your brain and you feel with your heart and I want to give you a little mini quiz and I want you to fill in the blank which verb are you going to use think or feel I you made a mistake I think that you made a mistake this is your belief I that I could have done more to help I feel that I could have done more to help this is again your your opinion in this case you could say think but in this context I feel like there's a little more feeling from the heart so I would go with feel I that I let you down I feel that I let you down all right expressing my attitude towards this and I that this ice cream is the best I think think that this ice cream is the best if you were to use feel in this sentence it may just sound a little awkward because in this case it's an opinion coming from up here in your brain so with these sentences I don't want to say that they're always interchangeable think and feel because it really just depends on the opinion you want to express or the attitude you wish to convey I mean Rachel and I think you you are great with Emma just feel you you I just feel that chemistry isn't right you can also use the phrases it seems that or it seems to me and the meaning of seem is to appear in a particular way so when using these phrases it's like you're saying that well in your mind something appears to be true and these phrases really have the same meaning as long as you're following it seems with a that Clause it's seems that you've been living two lives of course you can omit the word that when using this Clause it seems you've been a bit irresponsible and adding to me just makes it a little more personal it's more about your opinion and what's true for you therefore it seems to me that our best course of action would be chemical disincorporation I could say it seems that you enjoy building your vocab otherwise you wouldn't be here or it seems to me you enjoy building your vocabulary either one works now it seems to me that you are also someone who likes to practice and improve your speaking skills and if that's the case I strongly feel and I'm adding emphasis this is from the heart I strongly feel you should check out my speaking course and I definitely think you should click on the link Down Below in the description and when you do you will find a special discount just for you the course is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally each week there is a different speaking topic you will learn vocabulary related to that topic we do engaging speaking activities we warm up each lesson with pronunciation or connected speech I'll also teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases and there are pronunciation video lessons included in the course so check out the link down below if you'd like to sign up or learn more about the course and I just hope to speak to you soon let's continue with some more precise phrases to help you talk about what you believe or Express an opinion instead of saying I think and the next phrase that I have for you is as far as I know or you could say so far as I know it's used to say what you think is true although you do not have all the facts so you're expressing a little uncertainty it's like based on the information this is what you think is true but you're not entirely sure often this phrase will come at the beginning of a sentence or clause and is used to introduce your thought and again this is usually in response to someone asking what you think or just inquiring about something so if I were to ask do you think it's important to learn English and the response might be as far as I know learning English is becoming increasingly important happen she wouldn't tell me I said what happened and she said it's not it's not important interesting what as far as I know there's only two ways you can injure your neck now the phrase is as far as I know and so far as I know are really interchangeable but as you can see it's more common for people to use as far as I know as far as I can tell it's more often used in casual conversation and personally this is the phrase that I would use as far as I know now let's continue with another phrase that I just mentioned as far as I can tell or you could say so far as I can tell these phrases are used to say what you have noticed or understood as far as I can tell your English is great and this is just what I have noticed communicating with you in the comments and because you're here building your vocabulary so far as I can tell you are a diligent learner and that's just what I have understood I just used both of them these phrases are interchangeable and once again they're really going to come at the beginning of a sentence or Clause I can't show you which of these phrases is more commonly used because they're too long for engram viewer but I have no doubt that people more often use the phrase as far as I can tell and I'm just leading you into the next phrase that I want to talk talk about which is I have no doubt this is used to emphasize that what you are saying is true and is likely going to happen and you're really expressing confidence I have no doubt that their lives and the lives of their families have been threatened but other times it could sound a little arrogant and cocky I have done nothing more than my duty my lady I have no doubt that on my return Robin's skills will have improved immeasurably ah that little finger he was just so SMU and in Game of Thrones I had no doubt he was a bad person I was under the impression this is the next phrase that I want to talk to you about it means to think or believe that something is true especially when it is not so you're often going to use the verb to be in the past tense it's like you're saying I thought this was true but it turns out not to be the case can I see your cap table business plan or any other relevant paperwork I just was under the impression that uh we would just be coming by and saying hi you know uh to pick up the check I was under the impression that you would hit the like button I hope it's true it may not be true and I guess I will never know unless you want to tell me down in the comments then we have the phrase it goes without saying this is used to say that something is obviously true and you're going to follow this phrase with the word that it goes without saying that fast food is not very healthy it goes without saying that some flights will get cancelled over the holidays I just hope it's not one of ours it goes without saying that this video Lesson must come to an end and that's what happens with all great things but let's get a little review I have no doubt that you can learn these phrases and go out and practice using them because as far as I can tell these phrases will help you you develop your overall speaking fluency and it seems to me that you will come across them in just everyday conversation now I feel that this is the appropriate time to end the lesson and I was under the impression that you would go on to watch another video Lesson and I think it goes without saying that I will have another new lesson for you in the future so if you enjoyed this lesson and learn something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

EMOJI SENTENCE GUESSING GAME

Today we are going to do the emoji challenge. So basically for this challenge you have to act out as many emojis as you can. Go! This is one. This is one. Is that coffee you're drinking, or is that something else? I'm just kidding. That's not the emoji challenge. So basically for this challenge Wes and I have written some sentences in emojis. Or a combination of emojis and words. And the other person has to guess the sentence we have put together. It's also challenge for you because you can try to guess the sentences we wrote as well. So here is Ioana's first sentence. The cat must not lick the dog. What kind of weird sentence... Try it again. The cat shouldn't play with it with the dog.

Winky face a dog. That's a winky face emoji? Or what emoji is that? The tongue is out. The cat is not a dog. You're kind of close. The dog does not look delicious to the cat. There's so many you can go with this. Close. That was the closest one. Really? Cats don't eat dogs. Well, I said something like that. That was...that's the answer. Why is that your sentence. I don't know why this is the sentence. That's such a weird sentence. This is Wes' first. My first one. Okay, I would say... She doesn't know what to eat for dinner. Tacos, salad, pizza, or soup. She doesn't know what to eat. Tacos, salad, pizza, or soup.

Yeah, that's correct. I didn't know that this was supposed to be tricky. I didn't know that we're like... Yes. Excellent. This is...this one...I think it should make sense. These look weird. Well think of...what would the sentence...think of a sentence. Celebrate at the Statue of Liberty with a haircut. You celebrate New York with a haircut. Wes got a haircut in New York, and he also celebrated. That's close. But why...that's not an emoji of me. The guy... Yeah. got a haircut... Yeah. to celebrate New York. Okay. Close. I was going for... The guy/the man/the boy...whatever... got a haircut for a party in New York City. Okay, that makes more sense. Got a haircut for a party in New York City.

How do you come up with these sentences? These are just...I'm inspired. That's your second one. This is the next one? Okay, so... Okay, I'd say... The teacher is teaching science to the children. Or you could say... The teacher...she is teaching students about dinosaurs. Is that kind of right? Yeah. I was thinking the teacher took the students to the museum. To the museum...the Natural History Museum where they can see the dinosaurs. Okay. Wow. That was pretty elaborate. Yeah, it was close. I would have accepted the teacher is teaching the students about the dinosaurs. Are you ready for my last one? Yeah. Does it involve animals eating each other? It does have animals in it. Of course. All right.

You ready? So just try to sound it out one emoji at a time. Turtle, bus, bank, money, bicycle. Okay. Exactly. Go! The turtle took the bus to go to the bank to take money out, so he can buy a bicycle. Really? Yeah. Yeah. That was it. The turtle took a bus to the bank, so he could buy a bicycle. Because he's a turtle. He's slow, so he wants to move faster. To buy a bicycle. That's really cute. That was...wow! I thought that would be the most difficult one. Not the cat is trying to eat the dog. Because it's so abnormal. Cats don't eat dogs. The third one from me. My last one.

Okay. He... He doesn't know what present to look for for the dance party. He doesn't see any presents at the dance party. He can't see... What party has gifts? He doesn't see any birthday presents at the dance party? Why dance party? What kind of party... Because they're dancing. I didn't realize this would be that hard. Yeah, what is it? He doesn't know about his surprise birthday dance party. Why dance? They're dancing because they're at a party. Oh, okay. I hope you're able to successfully complete our emoji challenge. I hope you guys enjoyed our challenge. I hope you're able to answer all of them. And now we have one for you. See if you guys can get this.

In the comments wants you to write this sentence. And see if you can guess what this sentence, right here, means. Write it in the comments. And also give this video a thumbs up if you had fun today. Thank you guys so much for watching and joining us. And we will see you next time. See you! Bye.

ENGLISH SPEAKERS USE THESE EXPRESSIONS ALL THE TIME | Binomial Pairs

- Are you sick and tired of boring English lessons? I am gonna teach you some very very fun expressions. More or less. What's up, everyone? My name's Wes, this is Interactive English, which is where you want to be to practice and improve your English skills. In today's lesson, I am going to teach you about binomial pairs. Now, you might be thinking, what the heck are binomial pairs, and that is a great question. A binomial pair is an expression with two words that's combined with a conjunction, and most of the time, the conjunction that combines these words is either the word and or the word or, and, or, and, or. These are expressions that you will often hear in everyday English, everyday conversation.

We like to throw out these expressions, especially when speaking, because they're a great way to express how we feel and really give that extra little bit of information that can really capture a situation. As we go through these expressions, these binomials, I'll give you the meaning, and I'll throw in some video clips, so that you can see how these expressions are used in context.

Let's begin. The first binomial that I have for you is pros and cons. When we use pros and cons, we're talking about a situation, and the pros would be the advantages, and the cons are just the disadvantages. A lot of times when people are trying to make a decision and decide what to do, they might make a list, or they might just think about what, what are the pros and cons, what are the good things, what are the bad things, and that can help us make a decision. Pros and con. - I think there are pros and cons to every candidate. - Let's look at the pros and cons. - Pro, we can fill in the pit and build a park.

- Con, we might be filling it in with dirty money. - There's pros and cons. - Yeah yeah, I know, this would be good, but it would be the same, go someplace else, it would be different, but it might not be as good. - For example, what are the pros and cons of watching Interactive English? The pros would be that you're learning so much about the English language, you're getting to practice and improve your skills, and the cons, you know, there are no cons.

The next one is sick and tired. You're sick and tired of something, or some situation. If you're sick and tired of something, it means that you are really annoyed, and you've kinda hit your breaking point to where you are about to get really angry, you're about to lose your patience. You're talking about a bad situation, something that you don't like, because it's something that you find annoying. You are sick and tired of, something. Like at the beginning, I asked you if you were sick and tired of watching boring English lessons, which is not what we do here. Not boring. - I'm sick and tired of having nobody. - I am sick and tired of talking about yo-yo's.

I was sick and tired of everything - Some examples with sick and tired, people might be like, I'm sick and tired of the rain, or, I'm sick and tired of having to stay late after work, or, I'm sick and tired of eating the same thing all the time. You get tired and fed up with something, you're sick and tired of it. Another great binomial, give or take. This means approximately. If you're talking to somebody, and you give them a number, you say a number, but it's not exact, it may be more, it may be less, you could say the number and then give or take. For example, if somebody asks, what's the distance from here to there, and you might say, it's 100 kilometers give or take.

That's just an estimate, you're not exactly sure, but it's somewhere around there, give or take. Maybe a little more, maybe a little less, but it's approximately that distance, give or take. - Two weeks, give or take. - Eight days, 11 hours, give or take. - In which case, $49, give or take. - How many people live here? - A million, give or take. - You're up 38 pins, give or take. - Then, we have short and sweet. This means that something is done very quickly, right to the point, you don't waste any time. It's short and sweet. For example, maybe you're going to give a presentation at work, and you say the information, you get right to the point, you don't waste any time, and it's short and sweet.

- When they interrogate us, which they like to do, all your answers, short and sweet. - Okay, guys, let's keep it short and sweet today. Anybody got anything new? - Thank you, Butters, very nice, short and sweet. - If something is to the point, it's direct, doesn't waste time, it's short and sweet. For example, I am not making this explanation short and sweet, I'm dragging this out, and now I'm talking slower. It's not short and sweet, even though you're probably ready to move on to the next one, so we'll move on to the next one. Then, we have, and this is a good one, odds and ends. If you say odds and ends, then you're talking about something that is unimportant, something that might be inexpensive.

Often, the way I would use it, when people ask, oh, what are you doing today, I'd be like, well, I have some odds and ends to tie up around the house. I have some things that I have to do, they're not super important, but I should still do 'em, these are just some odds and ends that I have to take care of. We all have odds and ends that we have to do. It's just part of life. - Just tying up a few odds and ends. - I know you have things to do. - What do you mean? - Packing last minute odds and ends. - [Character] What did you do back then?

- Odds and ends. - The next binomial, and it's another great one, hustle and bustle. This means to work very hard, to be very active, and to do something with a lot of effort and a lot of energy. You are hustling and bustling. Oftentimes, I think you hear it in the continuous tense. If you're describing a person and say, you know, he or she has really been hustling and bustling lately. They've been really working hard and getting a lot done. Hustle and bustle. - [Character] I've never seen this. I hear there's so much hustle and bustle. - Ask me, Reverend, how can you live in such a small town, so far away from the hustle and bustle of the 20th century? - Do you like to hustle and bustle?

Sometimes I do, sometimes I don't, sometimes I get sick and tired of hustling and bustling. The next expression, and this is a really common one, back and forth, and it means moving in one direction and then moving back in the other. You're moving back and forth, back and forth. We often use this to describe some situation that we see, or something that's happening that is actually moving from one direction to another, it's moving back and forth. - A mother held her new baby and very slowly rocked him back and forth, back and forth. - [Buck] I hung on to that sucker, and I swung back and forth, back and forth, back and forth.

- You can also use it in other contexts, like, such as, people having a back and forth exchange, they're having a conversation, they're having a discussion, and it's back and forth. - We started texting back and forth. - The next binomial is by and large. This is an expression that means the same thing as saying, in general. It would just replace those two words. By and large, overall is another way of saying it. You'd often find it maybe at the beginning of a sentence, because you could say, by and large, this neighborhood, it's a really safe area. By and large, in general. - Yeah, by and large, they are still made of steel and plastic, and that consumes a huge amount of energy.

- It was, by and large, a pleasant assignment, except for one thing. - By and large, there are many great channels to learn English, but again, nobody has the hustle and bustle like Interactive English. We keep our lessons short and sweet. There are many pros, and very few cons, about learning with us, and ya see, I like to keep using 'em again, so that you can try to remember.

Another great binomial, more or less. It means, approximately, mostly, almost, you know, more or less. More or less is a little bit similar to give or take. The only thing is, I think give or take is often used with a quantity, it's often used with a number; whereas, more or less, you would hear it often with things that are a little more abstract, so if somebody said, oh, did you have fun at the party? You're like, yeah, you know, I had fun, more or less, or maybe, oh, was he telling the truth? Yeah, he told the truth, more or less. - Did you find what you were looking for, Logan?

- More or less. - Are we hit? - More or less. - A boys home, like a reform school? - Yeah, more or less. - And I can sound like I'm speaking Italian, so it's more or less the same thing. - Then, we have loud and clear. This is talking about something that is easy to understand, easy to follow, confirming that, yes, you understand. You understand the directions loud and clear. You understand the instructions loud and clear. It can even be an answer, if somebody asks you, do you understand, you say, loud and clear. That's just a simple response. Yes, I understand exactly what you're telling me loud and clear. - Do you read me, Vice President Jetson?

- Loud and clear, sir, loud and clear. - You guys said that prison was better than this place, and I heard ya, loud and clear. - This isn't over yet, buster, do you read me? - Loud and clear, Mister Peterson. - I hope you learned some new expressions, because, again, binomials, they're fun to learn. We use them often when we're speaking informally. If you understood all of these binomials, let me know in the comments. I want you to write loud and clear. Did you understand this lesson? If you did, loud and clear. That way, I know that, okay, this person, this person gets it. Right now, I gotta head out. I have some odds and ends to do before tomorrow.

ciao so we are in Milan Italy and I want to quiz you on some English words that are actually Italian and the first one is talking about singing without musical instruments what would you call that do you know you would say acapella I graduated in four years I was drunk the whole time and I sang in the acapella group Here Comes Treble this is a word it's talking about power or influence that you may use to get maybe give an advantage to a family member is called what nepotism Luke is my nephew Michael that's nepotism Luke is getting special treatment because he's your nephew yes exactly then if we're talking about a spectacular amazing expensive event or entertainment this is called what do you have any guesses an extravaganza an extravaganza so I understand how important these extravaganzas are sure you'll have a Who

EPONYMOUS ADJECTIVES | Advanced Vocabulary You Probably Don't Know

in today's lesson i guarantee that you will learn something new just keep watching hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english and the channel interactive english it's all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today i want to help you build your vocabulary because i want to teach you some different eponymous adjectives and this is it's a little more advanced vocabulary and before we begin i want to say that i love lessons such as this one uh and the reason why i love this lesson is because i learn something new about the english language and i love it when i love it when that happens i'm always trying to learn new things about english just just like many of you and the reason why i learned something new is because when i discovered this i had no idea what the word eponymous meant so let's just start with the word eponymous the word itself is an adjective and what it means is that a name is given to something else so for example uh you could have an eponymous book title which means that the title of the book is taken from the name of perhaps a character or the main character harry potter is a great example of that that is that is an eponymous book title because the title comes from the main character who is harry potter you could also have an eponymous city name washington dc that is the capital of the united states which is where i am from and the name of the city comes from the george washington who was the first president of the united states so all of these adjectives come from the name of either a real person or it could be a fictional character but they all come from uh the name of a person and you can use them to describe different situations and we'll we'll get into this as we go through the lesson because some of these words can be used as collocations and they're frequently used with other words which i will tell you or they may be commonly used as a phrase as a very common phrase in english which again is going to help you build your vocabulary now there are many adjectives like this you can take the name of well perhaps just about anyone turn it into an adjective and and use it to describe something so like william shakespeare okay william shakespeare very famous writer you can turn shakespeare into an adjective and say that something is shakespearean you want to describe another person's writing and say that it's amazing it's incredible and you could say wow your writing is shakespearean i myself have done some writing i have written a couple different travel memoirs and i would go ahead and tell you that they they are not shakespearean or at least they're probably not i will go ahead and link them down in the description below in case you want to check those out but that is an example of an eponymous adjective so let's uh let's start with the first one that i want to teach you now this is a pretty common word it is still an advanced vocabulary word but it's pretty common and i did not even know that this uh this was an eponymous adjective that this word came from the name of a person and the word is chauvinistic so chauvinistic actually has two different meanings it has an older meaning which is more the original one and then the meaning as to how it's more commonly used today so the original meaning of this word is that somebody is showing an unreasonable love for their country or race and they think it's just so much better than than everything else and that is the original meaning today however i think it's more commonly used to refer to men that believe that women are are not as capable that they are maybe not as intelligent that they are less than in some way and you would use this word chauvinistic to perhaps describe another man or perhaps maybe they say something a chauvinistic comment or remark and the word comes from a fictional french character a french soldier named nicholas chauvin who was extremely nationalistic in in the story and that that is where the meaning that original meaning comes from that excessive uh patriotic love and you think that your country is just so much better but again nowadays it's really used to refer to a form of bigotry and bias against women and you would say that that somebody is chauvinistic uh this word is not going to be capitalized and it has different parts of speech because as an adjective

you could say that someone is chauvinistic oh jesse you look great what i look like is not as important as what i am bubba of course not what a chauvinistic fool i am but it's also pretty common to use it as a noun as well you could describe another man and say that he is a chauvinist and referring to that bias and bigotry against women mr compton is a galloping male chauvinist every single store in his chain has a man for a manager or it could be another noun chauvinism and you may hear it used as a collocation male chauvinism the meaning is still the same referring to that bigotry and bias against women so chauvinistic i learned when putting this lesson together actually comes from that fictional french character nicholas chauvin but again this is a common adjective and you do not need to capitalize it if you are writing which is unlike the other adjectives that i'm going to teach you in this lesson like the next one which is darwinian so you could describe something as being darwinian which comes from the theories of charles darwin who really looked into how plants and animals evolve over millions of years and basically saying that the ones that are best suited for that environment are the ones that are going to succeed and survive and the plants and animals that are not really well suited for an environment they are no longer going to exist so that's kind of the ideas behind charles darwin and we can use it as an adjective and perhaps describe something as darwinian another phrase that you could use to kind of talk about this situation is survival of the fittest that's another pretty common phrase that you could say which is describes this situation a lot of competition survival of the fittest and in this case we're talking about using darwinian as an adjective and again this is more it would be a proper adjective you are going to capitalize this word and you could refer to perhaps like business that would be a common way uh because business you have that competition and you could talk about darwinian capitalism raise you another two centuries this is merely darwinian capitalism or maybe you're just trying to explain something come up with some type of explanation and you could have a darwinian explanation this really weird gangly awkward organism and you think why are all these parts where they are yeah there's probably some darwinian explanation for it all or even in science you could have some sort of experiment where you want to know well what's going to succeed and survive and what's not going to survive and you could describe it as a darwinian experiment work together put on your darwinian experiment then we have this adjective right here faustian and this comes from the medieval legend of faust a very famous legend who made that contract with the devil to exchange their soul for unlimited knowledge and worldly possessions now this adjective again it is a proper adjective you are going to capitalize it but it's most often going to be used as a phrase and you are going to perhaps refer to something as a faustian bargain that's commonly how you are going to use this word as that phrase a faustian bargain which you're describing a situation in which somebody is willing to make a sacrifice perhaps one that they shouldn't make in order to get more power typically or even more knowledge and you could say that somebody is making this immoral sacrifice immoral exchange and you could say it's a faustian bargain uh yeah i'll pay any price you realize i'm the devil and and you're making what is called a faustian bargain right yeah sure sure according to the gloomonic angarat made a faustian in exchange for his magnificent sorcery he cursed his soul perhaps i think uh i think politicians might do this uh you could refer to somebody in that situation who they are maybe trying to get more power and they're willing to sacrifice some of their values their ideals and they make that faustian bargain in order to get more power and have more influence then we have herculean now i'm sure probably many of you know where this uh this word comes from which is the the greek mythology we're talking about hercules even though uh hercules is more the the roman name for the the greek myth but it you know hercules refers to is just this person with extraordinary strength so you can use herculean to describe something that really needs a lot of strength and determination and mostly i think this adjective is going to be used as a collocation with certain nouns you might describe something as a herculean task or you might even say that somebody needs to put forth a herculean effort in order to do something so this is a well it's a great adjective that you can use with those words if you want to refer to an extraordinary extraordinary amount of strength and determination that a person will need to do some sort of task or effort a herculean task or herculean effort physical therapy rehab talk therapy it's going to take a herculean effort for billy i'm going to need him to give me everything that he's got maintaining five friendships supposed to be a herculean task so i'm going to have to let one of you go then we have freudian which is related to sigmund freud who is a real person and it it really relates to his ideas on how a person's hidden thoughts and feelings will influence their behavior and you could use this to well really just refer directly to sigmund freud and you could say that some method or approach is freudian why don't we just talk oh the talking to classical freudian good choice but i think even more common than that this adjective is used with a certain phrase which is freudian slip and you would say that someone makes a freudian slip in which they they unintentionally reveal their hidden thoughts and feelings uh when they say or do something and you would say that somebody makes a freudian slip oh hey captain did you get my report on the finley murder oh yeah i looked it over nice work good thanks dad why is everyone staring at me you just called captain holt dad no i didn't i said thanks man do you see me as a father figure peralta so this is a great example when you call the next time you hear some of these collocations or you hear these phrases that have these eponymous adjectives thank you guys so much for watching hope you enjoyed the lesson and i will see you next time

EXERCISE PHRASAL VERBS Build Your Vocabulary

Today, I want to work out your English muscles, and the way we're going to do that is I'm going to teach you some different phrasal verbs that are related to fitness and exercise. And I know phrasal verbs can be very confusing because you have the verb followed by the preposition, and if that preposition changes, then you have an entirely new phrasal verb. The other thing that I know makes them a little confusing is that many phrasal verbs have multiple meanings. The good news is that in today's lesson, I just want to talk to you about one meaning of these phrasal verbs that's related to fitness and exercise. So, in case this is your first time here, my name is Wes. I am going to be your fitness phrasal verb instructor for today's lesson. This is Interactive English, and the channel is all about trying to help you practice and improve your English skills. So, let's just let's just start our workout, and the first place I think we need to go is just right to the gym. All right, so here we are. We're at We're at my gym.

This is where I like to go to work out. And that is the first phrasal verb that I wanted to talk to you about because it's so common. And what it means is just to do some exercise, especially to improve your health. And you're going to work out. And there are so many different ways that a person can work out. But before But before we work out, I think it's it's very important that we warm up, which is the next phrasal verb that I want to teach you. Warm up means that you're going to do some light exercise or stretches in order to prepare for that physical activity. So, before you really start a sport or or something, a really intense workout, I think it's very important that that you warm up first. And this is a phrasal verb that I think you could also use in the context of education and learning.

Maybe you have heard it before in an English classroom, and the teacher says, "Before we start the lesson, let's just warm up quickly with this activity." And you could warm up and prepare the students before really starting the activity. But I think it's very useful when talking about health and fitness and exercise. You're going to warm up. And before we really get into our workout with this lesson, I think I think it's important that we stretch. So, let's just head on over to my yoga class. Welcome to my yoga class. Don't worry, we're not we're not bothering anyone. I checked with them. I told them that we're we're going to be talking about phrasal verbs today. So, this is a place where I would stretch out. And that is the next phrasal verb that I want to teach you. Stretch out, it means to strain your muscle by overextending it. And I think it really is kind of talking about the act of stretching. So, in this case, stretch out has a very similar, almost interchangeable meaning with the verb stretch. So, then you may be wondering, "Well, if they mean the same thing, why should we even use stretch out?" That's a good question. I think people may use stretch out because this phrasal verb is separable when they want to put either a pronoun or a noun between the verb and the preposition. So, perhaps I might say, "Well, after my run, I'm going to stretch my legs out." And I use the noun between the verb and the preposition, stretch my legs out. Think about an airplane. I think this is another another example of when you want to stretch your legs out. I know I get very tired of just sitting there. I kind of want to stand up. And yes, I need to stretch my legs out. That's another context in which you may use the the same meaning of this phrasal verb. But while I'm doing yoga, I always have to try to like bend over and and get into these different positions. And for me, that's very difficult. But bend over is talking about really just moving downward at one's waist because bend means to curve something so that it's no longer straight. So, it makes sense that if you're just standing up and you bend over, you're moving downward at your waist. But bending over, touching my toes, it's it can be very challenging for me because I have some issues with my back. And speaking of back, there is a great idiom to bend over backwards. And to bend over backwards means that you are trying really hard to do something helpful or useful. And somebody might use it in a context like, "I've just been I've been bending over backwards trying to help this person and solve their problem." So, it's a great idiom, bend over backwards, something that I physically cannot even come close to doing. However, I'm always up to trying out new things because when when I'm doing yoga, I have to try out some new positions. And try out is another great phrasal verb that means to to test something to see how useful and effective it is. And you would try something out. I think this is a great phrasal verb when talking about fitness and exercise because I I think often people need to try out new things, to try out new exercises. And it can be really challenging because, well, if you're like me, I'm always worried that I'm going to do something wrong. When I see somebody using a workout machine and I want to try it out, I'm a little nervous sometimes that I'm going to make a mistake. I'm not going to use it correctly. But I think it's very important when talking about exercise that we always try out new things. Now, let's switch things up.

We'll head back to the gym and continue working out. This is a place that I try to work on different muscle groups. And when you work on something, it means you are spending time trying to produce or improve something. And if we're talking about fitness and exercise, you might say that, well, you know, tomorrow I'm going to work on my arms. And I want to make them stronger. And then the next day, I'm going to work on my legs. So, people would use this phrasal verb in that context talking about, well, things they need to work on in order to improve. And you could also use that in a variety of other ways. For example, when talking about language, I would like to improve my Spanish. So, I would say, "Yeah, I really need to work on my Spanish. I need to practice it a little bit more. I need to continue studying.

Something that I really need to work on." But while we're here at the gym, if we're working on our arms and working on our legs, I might really try to bulk up a little bit because that's why I'm working on these different muscle groups so I could bulk up. And that's the next phrasal verb, which means to get to get bigger and heavier. And you're really you're really just trying to bulk up. This guy right here behind me, he's doing that intense workout, really trying to bulk up and build those muscles.

Another phrasal verb that I think is useful if we're talking about like weight is lift up. Once again, this phrasal verb, it really has a similar meaning as lift. But people may use the phrasal verb when they want to put that pronoun or noun in between the verb or the preposition. And also, I think perhaps you're talking about maybe a specific time. So, perhaps I'm when I was lifting weights, I had some trouble and I'd say, "Well, I just couldn't lift it up. I could not bring it to a higher position. I couldn't lift it up." And I just can't help but think about that guy back there who's just He's just working out constantly. You would think eventually he's going to tire out. And tire out is another phrasal verb that means that you just get very tired and exhausted, and you would tire out. And because I don't want you guys to tire out, let's let's do something that's a little less intense. And maybe maybe let's let's go on the treadmill. So, walking on the treadmill like my friends behind me, this is a great way to cool down. And this phrasal verb means that you are allowing your body activity to return to normal after doing strenuous exercise by doing less strenuous exercise. So, you have you know, you're working out, you're you're working out very hard, you're working on all these different muscles. It's very intense. You need to cool down after that and try to let your body just just return to normal. It's it's a little different than cool off, which I think is another great phrasal verb when talking about exercise because when you're working out, I think people they tend to get pretty hot. And cool off means to become cooler after being hot. And I think at a gym, somebody if they're very hot, maybe there's a fan. And they go over to the fan in order to cool off and and just become a little cooler. And when people are exercising, I think it's common if they are working out very hard and then they cool down for a little bit, they may pick up the pace right after that and and continue working out very hard.

And pick up means that you are increasing or becoming stronger. I think when you're talking about fitness, it's often related to speed. And people will use that phrase that I just said, "Pick up the pace. We need to pick up the pace. We need to go faster. We need you to be stronger. Pick up the pace." And if somebody picks up the pace, that's a good way to burn off some unwanted calories. And burn off means to get rid of fat from your body by doing some physical activity. And yes, when I'm working out, I think I probably need to try to burn off some more calories. But sometimes I have trouble with that. In that case, if I can't burn off those calories, I should probably try to cut down on some of my some of my unhealthy habits.

And cut down on, this is a three-word phrasal verb, and it just it just means to consume less of something, to reduce the amount. And yeah, I think I my guilty pleasure, I like to eat chocolate and drink some milk. And I do that at night time. It's something that I should cut down on. Woo. All of that exercise just really did me in. And do in is the next phrasal verb that I wanted to teach you, and means to make someone feel extremely tired. And often I think people would use this phrasal verb in the past tense. You're referring to an action, an activity that's finished. It's already happened, and if you feel extremely tired afterwards, you could say it just just really really did me in. I hope that this lesson did not do you in, and that you are motivated, and you want to continue working on your English. And you can do so by watching some of these other video lessons to help you improve your language skills. And I just hope you learned something new from today's workout. If you did, please hit that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching, and I'll see you next time.

Easy & Important Word Stress Rules for Better Pronunciation

What's up everyone? How's it going? Thanks for joining us today. I have a super fun lesson for you today because I'm going to talk to you about ways that you can communicate more clearly. So, this is really going to help your speaking because we're going to talk about pronunciation and that's going to help us again communicate more clearly so that we understand each other. And the way that we're going to do that is that today I'm going to talk to you about word stress. So this is very important. Like I said that we really need to be able to understand each other when we're talking. So it doesn't matter if you have an accent. The most important thing is that we understand each other. And this goes it connects with word stress because we need to pronounce and we need to say words correctly so that everybody understands what what we're trying to say when we want to express our thoughts our opinions and have just a conversation because if we make sometimes when we make these little small mistakes it it does change the meaning. So, what I want to talk to you about today are six different word stress rules that you can keep in mind that's going to help you improve your pronunciation. So, hello Mitchum Long. Great to see you guys. Sorry if I missed some names. Thanks for joining me. And no matter when you are watching this, please write your name in the comments. Tell me where you're from because we love hearing from you guys. So, today we're talking about word stress and the rules behind word stress. I have six rules for you and I have this little quote right here. First, learn the rules, then break them. So, I I don't want to encourage you say, "Hey, just break the rules." I just thought it was a nice image. And it is important to learn rules especially when the rules actually exist to understand them and then once we understand them sometimes you know as always in any language rules are broken maybe you want to make a point or be funny but again it is important to learn the rules. So today I'm going to talk to you about six rules when it comes to word stress so that we can improve our pronunciation and communicate clearly and we can all understand each other. So let's first look at well why why learn word stress? Why why should we do this? I had already mentioned that yes it helps us communicate clearly and it makes it easy for everyone to understand what you're saying. So if we are I no matter which word we're talking about if we are using word stress correctly then it's going to be that much easier to understand each other. And that is the most important thing. Again it it doesn't matter if you have an accent. The most important thing is that we understand each other. Mutual intelligibility that we know what everyone is talking about and that way we can communicate easily and communicate clearly. So in order to understand word stress we we need to take the word and really break it down into its different parts. And when we do that we are talking about syllables. Okay? And a syllable, as I said, is just one unit of sound. So, every word has one or more syllables. And a syllable is just one unit of sound and it has one vowel sound. That's very important that it is always going to have one vowel sound. And it may also be surrounded by consonants. it come at the beginning or at the end or maybe it it's just the vowel sound and there are no consonants.

So when we break words down we break them down into syllables. And when we know how many syllables a word has then we can think about well which syllable is going to get the word stress. Uh hello Gia, Eduardo, John Hanade, Brandon, thanks for joining me. Glad you guys are here again. No matter when you're watching this, write your name, say what's up in the comments. We like to hear from you guys. And in today's lesson, I again, as with all of our lessons, we want you guys to participate. I am going to be asking you guys questions throughout this lesson. I want you to write your answers in the comments. I would also recommend that you you practice your speaking and and we're going to say some sentences and practice word stress.

So once we have a word, we can break it down into its parts into syllables and then start thinking about well which word is going to get that stress because word stress basically is when one of those syllables gets a little bit more emphasis than the others. We are going to say it a little louder. We're going to have it say it with a higher pitch and that is actually going to help us say the word correctly and say it clearly so that everyone can understand. So I'm going to give you some words. All right? And I want you to tell me how many syllables the word has and which syllable do you think gets the stress.

Banana. You can see, could you see how many times my chin hit my hand? All right. I'll say it again. Bna. You should have counted three. There are three syllables in the word banana. And the stress is on that second syllable. Banana. And again, when we're talking about syllable stress, you don't want to overemphasize it. So it's not banana. No, it's just banana. And I think when you're listening, you should be able to hear that second syllable get a little more emphasis. Banana. And you can repeat these words after me. All right. Banana. Banana. Let's look at the next word. So the next word right here, it's not a flag. I'm going for the country. Which country is this? And if you're not sure which country it is, I will tell you. It is Germany.

So in the comments, how many syllables does the word the country Germany, how many syllables does it have? Germany. And which syllable is getting the stress? So we can count the syllables again. Germany. Germany. Three syllables. Germany. So which syllable is getting the stress? Is it the first, the second, or the third syllable? Germany. Germany. Germany. What do you guys think? So again, yes, it has three syllables and that stress. You should have said, tada, the first syllable. So the first syllable is going to get that emphasis. Germany. If you got that right, hit that like button. Let me know so I know. Like, yes. All right, you guys are rocking this. Let's do one more. And this is this is a longer word. So you have that person there opening the refrigerator.

So that's our word refrigerator. How many syllables does the word refrigerator have? How many syllables does it have? Write it in the comments. I want to know. And again, it's good to practice. You can use this technique right here if you want to count the syllables. and no. And this is a good way again for trying to understand a word and be able to break it down into its parts into the number of syllables. So let's say this one together and you guys can count. All right. So refrigerator. How many times did it hit refrigerator? Five times. So, the word refrigerator has five syllables. Which one do you think has the stress? Refrigerator.

I hope that you said that second syllable. So, you you can hear this again. Refrigerator. Refrigerator. Can you hear that second syllable get a little more a little more emphasis? Refrigerator. Now, if you're if you're trying to think of, oh, okay, like I I'm not sure what to use, what source, if I want to find out how many syllables it has, a good resource that we I like to use is dictionary.com. I will leave a link in the description. You can go check it out. You put the word in there and it it breaks down the word just just like this into its syllables and it highlights which one gets the stress. So refrigerator has five syllables and the stress is on the second syllable. So now that we've talked about breaking words down into their parts and we know that each that words have one or more syllables, let's talk about some word stress rules when it comes to pronouncing and saying these words correctly. So, the first rule that I have for you is this one right here. We are talking about most two syllable nouns. And again, pay close. I said most. It is not all two-llable nouns. It is most two-llable nouns. And in the comments, I want you to write think of a two-llable noun and write it in the comments and share with us. All right. Garden. Rocket. Rocket. Ocean. Ocean. And then finally, chicken.

Chicken. So, with each of those words, you should have been able to hear that that first syllable has a little bit more stress. There's a little more emphasis on that first syllable. So again, in the comments, in the chat, write some words, some nouns, people, places, or things that have uh that have two syllables. All right, so you can share with us. Um, yeah. So said, yes, object. All right, two syllables, stresses on the first one. Breakfast. Excellent. Friday, perfect. the days of the week, Friday, stress is on that first syllable. So most two-llable nouns, the stress is on the first syllable. This is also the case if we're talking about two syllable adjectives.

And again, most is the key word, not all. Most two-llable adjectives, it's the same. The stress is going to be on that first syllable. So if we have these words right here again I will say the word and I want you guys to repeat. Repeat after me. Say these words out loud so that we can get a little speaking practice going. Ready? So the first one is easy, clever, anxious, splendid. So again this is easy. These are some easy word stress rules that you can follow. So if you come across a two-llable adjective, all right, probably the stress is going to be on the first syllable. Easy, clever, anxious, splendid.

So keep this in mind. These are good rules to follow when we're trying to learn the correct pronunciation. All right. If you guys are speaking, I want to know if you're actually practicing. Write that in the chat. Write the word speaking so I know like, okay, you guys are actually doing this. You are participating in these lessons because that's what we want. We want you to interact. This is after all interactive English. Let's look at another rule. So, we know that with most two syllable nouns and two syllable adjectives, the stress is going to be on the first syllable. Le how about two syllable verbs? If we're talking about two-llable verbs, most of the time with most words, the stress is on the second syllable. Now, I think most verbs out there, many of them, especially the most common ones, only have one syllable. So you don't need to worry about this as much, but if the verb has two syllables, for most of the time, it's going to be on that second syllable. So again, I want you to say these words. Repeat them after me. The first one, enjoy.

Enjoy. Relax. Everybody loves to relax. Suggest. Suggest. And then finally, become. Become. You should, as I'm saying these and you guys are listening and practicing your listening skills, you should be able to hear the stress on that second syllable. Enjoy, relax, suggest, and become. An exception would be, again, I'm thinking of an exception because again, it's not with all of them. Think of the verb open. All right? open to open something has two syllables but in that case the stress is on that first syllable that o open. So there are always going to be exceptions to these rules, but these are good ones to follow if you guys are trying to figure out, okay, you know, how do I say this word correctly?

And I want to say that this isn't something that this is good practice right now. So we're going through this and you're learning these rules because this isn't when when you're having a conversation, you're not going to stop and think like, okay, wait a second. How many syllables does this word have? Where's the stress? That's not the case. This is more for if you hear a word and you use it all the time and maybe you're listening for it and you hear like, hm, I don't know if I'm saying this correctly. Then that's the time that you can look up this information and know, okay, well, where is the stress in this word? How does how do I pronounce this correctly and clearly?

So, that is when you can really use that. And these are some good rules to follow because again, if if you're talking about a verb and you learn a new verb and it has two syllables, then you probably know, okay, the stress is probably going to come on that second syllable. these. All right. When we're talking about nouns and verbs, sometimes a word can be either a noun or a verb. And I want to talk about some of those words right now. And these words follow those same rules that we discussed before. So if the word is a noun, the stress is going to come on that first syllable. If the word is a verb, the stress is going to be on the second syllable. So again, I want you guys to say these. I'm going to say these words. I suggest you guys practice and practice with me. So, I'm so good to see some of the speak. Patricia, it looks like Oh, you got you're speaking. Excellent. Thank you. Um, again, somebody said, "Speak." Junior, you're practicing. Perfect. All right, Vivian. Excellent. Keep practicing. Say these words out loud. It helps. Um, I know that I can't hear you, but still you can hear me, and it's good practice. All right, so let's say these words. These are words that are both nouns and verbs. Let's look at these nouns first right here. So, the stress is on the first syllable. Present.

Present. Object. Object. Conduct. Conduct. So, you should be able to hear the stress on that first syllable. Now, if we are using these words as verbs, as we are down here, listen and repeat after me how I say this. So, present. Present. Object. Object. Conduct. Conduct. We are going to practice these more later because I have some sentences for you that I want you to repeat and practice. And that's really going to help you have a better idea again when when to switch back. Because this some this is something common right here that learners might make a a bit of a mistake. and instead of saying the noun they they might say it like the verb and most people will be able to understand but it might cause a a little bit of confusion. So this is a good rule to follow. If you are looking um there there is a list u I will leave a link in the description to you can click on it and see more words that are like this a list of words two syllable words that are both nouns and verbs and you can see the words that they have listed for you because there's many of them there's a lot of them out there. So this is a good rule to follow. Another rule is that words that end in t i o n and s i o n and there are many of these words out there. The stress is on the second to last syllable. The stress is on the second to last syllable. So these are some examples that I've given you. And for for the sake of consistency, I chose words that all have three syllables. So in all of these, because they have three syllables, the words end with t i o n or s i o n, the stress is on the second to last syllable. So it's going to be on that middle syllable. So let's say these words again together. Ambition.

Ambition. Position. Position. Decision. Decision. And collision. Collision. So, if you are listening to me say these words, you should be able to hear that second syllable has a little more emphasis. All right? Ambition, position, decision, collision. Now, as I said, there are words that also end with t i o n. Whoops, there it is. With ty, t i o n or s i o n. And the stress is going to be on that second to last syllable. For example, what about the word pronunciation? Pronunciation ends in t i o n. How many syllables does it have? Pronunciation. Five syllables. All right. Pronunciation. And the second to last syllable is that a a sound. Pronunciation. Pronunciation. Pronunciation.

You should hear it on that fourth syllable because it's the second to last syllable and that is going to have the stress. All right. So, this is a good rule to follow the final the sixth rule before we do our practice that that you guys can follow. And in the comments, I want you to think if you know of any words that end words that end in cy, ty, phy, g y, or a l, the stress is on the third to last syllable. So in the in the in the comments, I want you to write write some words that end in either c y, t y, phy, g y, or a l. Because again, it's good to have a list so that if people look at the comments and look through it, they they can see the word that you have written and then try to say it to themselves and see if they can identify the stress on that third to last syllable. So, let's say these words right here. Again, I've chosen all words that have four syllables so that it's easier to visualize because I'm using these dots right here. And in this case, I I've highlighted I I've circled the the end of the word. So that c y, the phy, the gy, the c. Um, and you can see that the stress is on the third to last syllable, which means for these words, it's on the second syllable. So let's say these words together. Ready?

Democracy. Democracy. Geography. Geography. Technology. technology and illogical. illogical. I hope it helps to be able to see this right here and the words being broken down into their syllables and then being able to see the stress. I I've capitalized those letters so that you guys can see it a little more clearly and a little more easily. So, we have some great examples of words um that end in the a typical um uh what else? Digital. Exactly. Uh psychology, another great one. Geology, magical. These are all great words. And again, it's going to follow this rule. The stress is on the third to last syllable. And again, a great resource if you're looking to say, "Oh, okay. I have a word. I want to know where the syllable stress is." Dictionary.com is what I like to use. And there is a link in the description if you guys want to check it out. And you can put in a word and it'll show you how many syllables and it'll highlight where the stress is.

So, are you ready? Are you ready to start speaking? Are you ready to practice? Because this is what I want you to do. I'm going to give you a sentence, okay? And I want you to read the sentence. You can read it to yourself. I would recommend saying it out loud. And then I'm going to tell you the sentence and say it. And then we're going to break it down into its parts. And I'm going to show you where the emphasis is, where the stress is for each word in the sentence. Again, I recommend say this out loud. It doesn't matter when you're watching this. if you're watching it now or later, this is good practice. It's good speaking practice. So, the first sentence that I have for you is right here. Okay? Look at uh this sentence. Say it to yourself.

Say it out loud. All right? Don't don't you don't have to think about, okay, well, where's the stress? Where's the stress? Just try and say it and see what comes naturally. Because again, when you're having a conversation, when you're communicating with others, you're not going to stop and think about, wait a second, where's the stress? Um, you're just going to try and say it naturally. And again, this is how we improve because we just start using it correctly. A and then that's going to it's just going to become embedded in our minds and we're just going to start using the words correctly and saying them correctly. So the sentence right here, all right, let's let's say this sentence together. You can repeat it after me. My philosophy teacher presented me with this awesome present.

My philosophy teacher presented me with this awesome present. So, let's look and see how this sentence is broken down. So, I've rewritten the sentence and I've capitalized the letters that stress that's going to have a little more emphasis. And I will say it again. I'll say it a little slower and I'll try to to emphasize it a bit more so you can hear it. So, my philosophy, remember, it ends with the the phy, that third to last syllable. Philosophy. My philosophy teacher, that's a noun. The stress two-llable noun stress is on the first syllable syllable presented. Presented. So this is the verb. The stress is on that second syllable. Again, this is in the past tense. So the ed is like going to have a third syllable, but we're only talking about the main verb here. That stress is still on that second syllable.

Presented me with this awesome. It's a twocllable adjective. Stress is on the first syllable. Present. That is again a noun. The stress is on the first syllable. So we use present two times in this sentence. Once as a verb and once as a noun. Let's say it again. My philosophy teacher presented me with this awesome present. If you said this correctly, let me know. Hit that like button so I know like, oh, okay. You guys you guys are getting it. Um, also let's let's look at the next one. Okay, ready? Easy peasy. Here we go. Think of this sentence. How would you say it? Think about say it in your mind or say it out loud. Practice your speaking.

Okay, just just say what comes naturally. Are you ready? So you can repeat it after me. Society objects to organizations that use people as objects. Society objects to organizations that use people as objects. Let's look at this sentence now with its individual parts. So the first one, society, all right, ends with that ty. Um, society objects. The verb stress is on the second syllable. Objects to organizations ends in the tio n syllable. The the second to last syllable that z. Organizations that use. Now use is a verb, but it's just one syllable. So again, that's going to have that stress that use people as a noun. Stress is on the first syllable as objects. So in this sentence, I used objects twice. Once as a verb and once as a noun. Society objects to organizations that use people as objects. If you are practicing your speaking, let me know. Write it in the comments.

Whether you're here with us now or watching it later, just write speaking because then I'm going to give you huge props for actually interacting and participating and and learning with us. So, write that in the comments.

Speaking. Let's look at another one. Okay, here is another sentence. How would you say it? Think about how you would say this sentence. Say it out loud. Practice your speaking and then we can we can say it together. All right. Okay. So for this sentence we would say she conducted the communications meeting with such professional conduct. She conducted the communications meeting with such professional conduct. I hope that you said it just like that. If you did, hit that like button. Let me know. So, this is how we would break it down into parts. All right. She conducted the verb stress on the second syllable. She conducted the communications. Remember communications.

She conducted the communications meeting which is a noun with such professional conduct. It ends professional ends in the a that third to last syllable. That profession fesh professional conduct. She conducted the communications meeting with such professional conduct. Okay. So again you guys this is a great way John Lao uh Rosa excellent thank you guys for speaking. If you are doing this write that in the chat let me know that you guys are actually practicing saying these words and I would recommend you know you go back and do it again and practice saying these sentences or even again this is something that people can do on your own. You could write your own sentence if you learn a word and you found out, oh, I'm pronouncing this incorrectly. You know, write a sentence with it. Find how it's used in context and just practice saying that sentence and and saying it with the correct word emphasis because again, this is going to help you speak clearly and we can communicate easily with each other and everybody can understand. So let's quickly I want to quickly review to you with you the six rules that I talked about in this lesson. So the first rule that uh we discussed was for most two syllable nouns. Remember the stress is on that first syllable. Garden, rocket, ocean, chicken. If we're talking about most two syllable adjectives, again the stress is on that first syllable. easy, clever, anxious, splendid. Now, if we're talking about most two syllable verbs, the stress is on that second syllable. Enjoy, relax, suggest, become. Those were the first three rules. The fourth rule that I was telling you about, which can be a little tricky, is if the verb um if the word is both a noun and a verb. In this case, you really need to pay attention to the part of speech. Is the word used as a verb or is it used as a noun? Because if it's used as a noun, the stress is on the first syllable. Present, object, conduct. If it's a verb, the stress is on the second syllable. Present, object, conduct.

The fifth rule is this one right here. If the word words that end in tio n or sio n, the stress is on that second to last syllable. And it doesn't matter how many syllables the word has three four five six seven that stress is going to be on the second to last one. So ambition, position, decision, collision. All right. Communication, pronunciation. And I'm overemphasizing right now so you can really listen for it. But that that's again, you don't want to overemphasize. It's just kind of a little little bit of a small um emphasis. And the last rule that we talked about was words that end in either cy, ty, phy, gy, or a l. The stresses on that third to last syllable.

Democracy, geography, technology, and eological. Those were the six word stress rules that you guys can practice to really help you improve your pronunciation and help you speak more effectively and communicate easily with other people. So again, thank you guys so much for for being here. Safe, Rosa, Whale, Fabio, Abby, um Nita, Freddy, Long, thank you guys. Excellent. Um, Abby has one quick question about ah, address. So, address is another one that can be either a verb or a noun. As a noun, it would be address, but as a noun, some people might also uh pronounce it address. So, that's a little bit of a tricky one because as a noun, it could go either way. But, as a verb, it's definitely the the stress is going to be on that second syllable.

Address. to address someone. Thank you guys again. Patricia Jr., thank you guys for being here. Please, if you enjoyed this lesson, like and share it with others. Help us spread the word and grow our classroom. You guys can follow us down here on our social media and join those classes. We're always posting questions to help learners practice and improve their English skills. And if you have any other questions, this video is going to get posted. Write it in the comments. LESSON 290 OF 749

English Idioms That Will Blow Your Mind

I want to hit the ground running. And we'll begin with that idiom right there, to hit the ground running. This means to immediately work hard and successfully at a new activity. And it really has a positive connotation. So, this is a great idiom that you can use when talking about work or just any activity that you're really excited to do. The project begins next week. We really need to focus so that we can hit the ground running. So, whenever you want to stress that you're going to work hard and right away, this is a great idiom that you can use. I hope you don't mind me starting on these documents. I just wanted you to hit the ground running first. When he does become eligible next year, I want him to hit the ground running.

Then we have under the radar.

And this is a great idiom because I think we can all relate to it. Sometimes, well, many of us are in a situation and we try to fly under the radar. She was not a well-known musician and for the most part her music went under the radar. There are some common collocations, some verb idiom collocations and often you will use this with verbs like to be under the radar or to fly under the radar or to go under the radar or even to stay under the radar. Nobody around here knows me. We can fly under the radar because of the news. We need to stay under the radar. Then we have the idiom to rain on someone's parade. This just means to spoil someone's enjoyment. Right after I got a promotion, I received some bad news. It really rained on my parade. And I'm sure that you can think of a time when someone rained on your parade and they just spoiled and ruined this good time. The last thing I want to do is uh rain on your parade.

Sorry, I don't mean to rain on the parade. I find parades to be impotent displays of authoritarianism.

English Phrases They Never Taught You in School

throw shade. Now, I'll be honest. This is an idiom that I don't really use. It is more informal and probably used mostly in the United States, but what it means is to subtly disrespect or criticize someone. So, it really does have a negative connotation. Jason Kid throws shade at the Celtics. Our group was ready to go. They were ready to celebrate. And in a way, he is slightly criticizing the other team, basically saying they weren't prepared, which is why they lost. So, what' you just stop by to throw shade? We're having fun doing sister stuff. Today, I learned to throw shade.

Breaking the internet. This is a phrase whose popularity has really skyrocketed because it means causing a major viral sensation online. Did you hear about the latest political controversy? It's breaking the internet. This is a phrase that really has become popular due to social media. And social media is not going away anytime soon. So, this phrase probably won't either. He's all over my Instagram now.

You're about to break the internet. Good. I hate the internet.

It's working. We're going to break the internet. The new normal. I don't know why I feel like I hear this phrase every other day now, but it refers to a state of things that is accepted as usual. According to a recent poll, many Americans believe that remote work is the new normal. Maybe I hear it more and more often because there are a lot of things that are different than before. Some of them a little weird, but they're becoming accepted and you could say it's the new normal. Over the past several days, there has been increased ico chatter, but that is the new normal. 21st century family coming through. This is the new normal.

English spelling is crazy! Let me tell you why ...

Today I'm going to try and help you answer this very popular question: Why don't we pronounce English words the way they're spelled? Over the years I've had many many many students tell me: Why is it that we don't say these English words the way they're spelled? It doesn't make any sense, it's very confusing, And that's what I want to talk to you about today. English has crazy spelling and weird pronunciation that goes with it. Keep in mind I'll be giving you the American pronunciation of these words Because well, I'm American. I don't think British English is that different, So what I'm going to talk to you about today is pretty relevant for just about all English varieties.

So let's just jump right into it. The first letter combination that I want to talk to you about is the GH. So let's start at the beginning of the word. If you see these two letters at the beginning of the word It's just going to have a simple /g/ sound. The H is going to be silent. For example: It's also a simple /g/ sound when you find it in the middle of a word sometimes.

Now if we're talking about some compound nouns, you might pronounce the G and the H. So for example, somebody might call somebody else a pig head. Not a nice thing to say, but in this case you would say the G and the H. Or bighorn. G and H are both pronounced. And finally when the GH comes at the end of the word, I think this is where it probably becomes the most confusing. Because often times it just has an /f/ sound. As in:

Now, there are some exceptions to this rule. And I know, English and all the exceptions... I hate it, but we just got to deal with it. So for example: In this case the gh is just completely silent. But remember, most of the time when you see the GH at the end of a word, it'll have that /f/ sound. You get the point. Next, let's talk about these two letters right here: the P and the H. I think this is a little easier because pretty much wherever you find it, at the beginning, the middle, or the end - It's going to have an /f/ sound. So for example at the beginning of the word.

In the middle. And at the end of a word. The PH will have the /f/ sound. Sticking with Ps: If you have a P and S together, basically the P is silent. So when you see it, oftentimes at the beginning of a word, you're not going to say the P. In these words the P is silent. Now, let's look at a vowel sound. And you might see these two letters, the double O, together. And most often it's either going to have one of two sounds. It's either going to have an... So for example, an /uu/ sound in: Or an /uuh/ sound in: These aren't the only sounds that these two letters make, and that can cause a lot of confusion.

Unfortunately, there is no rule for this. You just have to learn these words. Learn the pronunciation and practice and practice and practice. The double O may also make an... And it can have more of an... Again, there's no rule, you just have to read these words. Listen to the way people say them correctly and practice and practice and practice and practice. Keep in mind I think a wonderful way to learn spelling and pronunciation and to match them up is to use subtitles when you are watching TV or movies. Because you are hearing the pronunciation, as well as reading the words, and you're able to match the sounds to the spelling.

A good way to practice: Use subtitles. You can even use subtitles for this lesson right now if you want to listen to my pronunciation of the words. Next I want to talk to you about four letters that you often see at the end of words. And those letters could be -tion or -sion. The pronunciation is the same. -tion is pronounced /shun/. -sion also pronounced /shun/. When you see the -tion or the -sion the stress of this word, the syllable stress, is going to come on the syllable before. So for example, the word pronunciation. The stress is going to come on the syllable before the -tion. So it's... Same with the word comprehension.

The stress is going to come on the syllable before -sion, which in this case... Comprehension. Let's stay with word endings for right now because other letters you might see at the end of a word are these five right here. -ology And this is pronounced /ol-uh-jee/. And what makes this I think a little challenging is that you have these two Os right here. That first one is a short O sound, and the second o is more of a schwa sound. So we see this at the end of words like...

Another popular word ending is -ture. And when you see these four letters at the end of a word it's pronounced /cher/. We say -ture as /cher/. There's just so many words out there that the and in -ture. Just remember /cher/. Now these two letters right here, this is a very, very difficult one. And it is the RL blend. Because the R sound and L sound on their own those are difficult sounds to make.

Now I'm not going to go over those individual sounds. We did a video lesson about that before. And if you want to check that out, it'll help you make those individual sounds. Now since both of those sounds are very difficult, you can imagine that when you find these two letters right next to each other in some words it's very challenging for many English language learners. For example: You have to make that transition from the R to the L. Where the R sound, your tongue is in the middle of your mouth, and you transition to the L where your tongue is going to touch the top part right behind your front teeth.

Again, I encourage you watch the RL lesson. This will really help you with these two sounds. Now, I really, really, really want to hear from all of you. Because if there are any other difficult words or letter combinations that you think are challenging to pronounce, please write them in the comments. Share with us. Maybe we'll do another lesson in the future talking about this. Because there are so many different crazy English spellings and their weird pronunciation. Today I am going to talk to you about, wait, wait, I'll be right back. I just got to go number one. Hey everyone. My name is Wes and yes, yes, I'm back. I've returned. This is interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today I have a great lesson because I want to talk to you about euphemisms in English and you might be wondering, you might be thinking, well what is a euphemism? That is a great question. A euphemism is a phrase or an expression in English that is a little more pleasant. It's not offensive, and we use them because they take the place of something else that is perhaps offensive or unpleasant or that's just not, it's maybe it's embarrassing. It's something that you don't want to hear.

So instead of being direct and saying things that people might find rude, you would use a euphemism in its place so that you would sound more polite or you know, they're also a bit amusing as well. You can have some fun with these phrases, which is why they are great to learn and native speakers use them all the time. So this is perfect for developing your English fluency. So let's begin with business. And the first euphemism that I have for you is to let someone go. And if you let someone go, it's just another way of saying to fire someone. And when, when you talk about firing someone that that's a strong word.

Nobody wants to hear that they're getting fired. So an employer might tell someone, you know, sorry, but um, we're going to have to let you go. I don't want to tell you that you're fired because that's just going to sound a bit mean. So instead, I'm just going to say, going to have to let you go. You may also hear the person who was fired use this expression as well. If you're having a conversation with your friends or your family and you don't want to tell them that you were fired, you would just say, you know, I was let go. And personally I, I think it's a bit more professional because when you say that, that someone's fired, it makes me think perhaps, well they were doing something wrong. They were stealing.

Perhaps they were fighting. But if you say that, you know, I was let go, then it makes me think, well it's just, it's business. It happens. Uh, it's a fact of life. From time to time, companies will let their employees go. So in that case, it makes me think that it's not really something that, that you did wrong. It's just, it just happened. But company had to let you go. We're going through...little tough time, financially. And um, we're gonna have to let you go. And we are going to have to let you go. Hank, would you come up here please? Hank is our security guard. He will be ushering you out.

And if a company lets you go, then another thing that you could tell people is that you are between jobs, which is the next euphemism that I want to talk to you about. So when somebody is between jobs, it's just, it's another way of saying that are unemployed that they're not working right now. They are looking for another job. So you'd tell somebody, well I'm between jobs at the moment. I'm not working with my old employer, I have not found my new employer. So I am just between jobs. So in my opinion, I think it's better to say you're in between jobs because the word unemployed may have a negative connotation.

People might think you're a little lazy or perhaps you don't want a job and you're not looking for one. And if that's not the case and you are looking for work, but you haven't found it yet, it's just better to say, Hey, no, I'm between jobs, not working at my old job. I haven't found my new job. So right now I'm between, between those jobs, I'm between jobs. Um, Randall's in between jobs. And court appearances. Since Mitchell is between jobs, I've taken a part time job at a greeting card store Now just BizPro to BizPro. If you wait too long between jobs, you get stale.

Now let's switch from business to the bathroom, which is a natural transition to make. And the first euphemism that I have for you is I have to go number one and if somebody says that they have to go number one, they're just, they're talking about PA, they have to P. so if number one means to pee, you can probably guess that number two is talking about pooping. And these are euphemisms you might use just to, to have fun that you can have fun with these euphemisms. Somebody may even ask if somebody says, Oh, I got to go to the bathroom. And the other person says, you know, number one or number two, I don't know why many people might be asking that question.

Perhaps they want to know how long it's going to take. And obviously I think for the vast majority of us takes longer to go. Number two. So if somebody is like, well, you know, the train is leaving but I gotta run to the bathroom real quick, the person you're traveling with might ask, well wait, number one or number two, you better hurry up because we don't, we don't want to miss the train. Not sure if you caught onto that euphemism. At the very beginning when I said, well, I have to go number one and I left and then I came back. If you're going number one, you've got 10 more seconds.

I'm gonna go use the ladies room. Number one or number two? Number none of your business. To use the restroom. I'm only asking is for your safety. Is it a number one or number two? Your silence indicates number two. When I get out of that bathroom, you better be gone. Is it number one or number two? I just want to know how much time I have.

Now instead of saying number two, you could also say, do your business to do your business. That means to poop. And I think this might be a little more of a polite way to say it. Uh, maybe I dare say a more professional way to say that you have to poop. So if you are in a professional setting and you have to go to the bathroom and you actually for some reason you have to tell the other person what it is you have to do. Instead of saying, I got a poop, I'll be right back. Which is a little more embarrassing even though it's very direct. Just just say, you know I gotta do my business now.

If you are a woman and you need to go to the bathroom or go to the toilet, you can tell someone, I have to go powder my nose. This is a euphemism that that you might hear if you're watching a TV show or a movie and the woman is at a restaurant maybe on a date and they'd say, well, you know I, I'll be right back. I got to go powder my nose. It means that they are going to the toilet now. It doesn't tell us what they're going to do in the bathroom. Doesn't give any information about number one. Number two, it's just another way of saying that that you need to go to the toilet.

Even if it's just to wash your hands. You might say, well, I need to powder my nose. I don't know if this expression is still commonly used today. I would have to ask my wife, but it is something that you will hear when you're watching a movie or TV show, so try to listen for that next time. If a woman is out, especially like at a restaurant and they need to go to the toilet, They might say, I need to powder my nose. Drink up Tom. I'm going to go out of my nose.

Now play nice boys while I go powder my nose. I'm going to go to the bathroom and powder my nose. You sit here and think of something to say. Now let's talk a little bit about appearance. You may or may not know this, but the word fat in English, it is a bit offensive and I would hear learners describe people from time to time or even they may even talk about themselves and they would say, well, I'm fat or he's fat or she's fat. And again, it, it's not a very polite word in English. And I think there are many learners who are unaware of this, so keep that in mind. Don't describe somebody as being fat.

One way you could do it if you want to use a euphemism is to say somebody is big boned. He's big boned, she's big bone. And again, I think it's more commonly used when you were describing other people. I think even more appropriately, somebody would use the word overweight, but you may hear this euphemism from time to time and somebody says, well, he's big boned or she's big bone. And that is just another way of of saying fat, but not nearly as rude. My whole family is big-boned. It's genetic. I'm just big-boned. No such thing. I'm not fat, I'm big-boned. Why are you punishing yourself? Face it. You're a big-boned girl.

Bones don't giggle mom. Keeping with appearances, the next euphemism I have for you is love handles. And if somebody is talking about another person's love handles or maybe they're talking about their own love handles, they're referring to the excess fat that they have around their waistline. So it's just something that happens naturally. Especially I think as people tend to get older, they start to develop these, you know, these love handles on the side right here. Uh, yes, I, I do have some love handles. And again, it's just, it's more of a fun way to talk about it and less offensive. Instead of saying, Hey, you know, you're, you're getting fat around the waistline, you could just say, well, they're their love handles. It's just, it sounds a lot nicer.

It's like love handle alert. What he likes most about me is probably my love handles. Don't you worry about cholesterol, lung cancer, love handles. I don't worry about anything. The next euphemism is make love. And I think this is probably a euphemism that many of you might already be familiar with, but if you're talking about making love to somebody, then you're just, you're talking about sex instead of saying have sex. You would say make love. And the reason that I think you would want to use make love instead is because it's more romantic. It's a little more meaningful because if you just say like have sex, it could just be something that's a little more carefree.

It's not something that may be, you know, as romantic or if you're out on a date, you may want to think about that. And not be too direct and say, Hey, you know, let's have sex. You know, you try to make it a little more meaningful, make it more important, make it a little more romantic and you'd tell something, Hey, I just want to make love to you. I want to make love. And, and who knows, perhaps that will work or it may not work. And she'll look at you and say, you know, I, I've got to go powder my nose and then she'll leave and never come back. So I, you know, in all seriousness, I think this is a euphemism that you would use with somebody that you have been involved with for some time already. Maybe they're married, perhaps they're engaged, but they, they have a more intimate and romantic relationship.

They may use this euphemism, make love, instead of just saying, have sex. It is not sex. You must not call it that. Then what do I call it. Making love. Steve insists we turn the light off when we make love. If you're doing it, I think you should be able to say it. Make love. The next euphemism is to lose your lunch. And if somebody loses their lunch, then that is just another way of saying that they are vomiting, they are throwing up, they're losing their lunch. And it just occurred to me, I don't know how we went from making love to losing losing one's lunch. I know it's a weird transition, but just, just bear with me. Just go with it. Okay.

So if somebody is feeling sick and they think that they may vomit, then you know, you could just say, Oh, I think I'm going to lose my lunch. I might lose my lunch, I might vomit, I might get sick. Then we have a great euphemism, which is not the sharpest tool in the shed. And this euphemism is used to describe a person who is, who is not smart. Maybe this person is a bit of an idiot, but you don't want to say that because that's just mean. So you may refer to this and say, yeah, you know, well he's not the sharpest tool in the shed. So it's kind of a, a fun way of putting it.

And I don't think it's really more or less polite. It's just kind of having fun with it and it just doesn't sound as mean either. If you want to describe somebody in this way, and again, I don't think you still wouldn't, you would not want to say this to the person you're talking about, that is still going to be mean, but if you were just describing another person, then you, you could refer to them and say, yeah, you know he's not the sharpest tool in the shed. He's not that smart. He's an idiot. And Craig, you saw him. He's not the sharpest tool in the shed. Sure. He may not be the sharpest tool in the shed.

Please God, please open my heart. Send me a sign. We both know I ain't the sharpest tool in the shed. Now let's talk about dying. And again, the word die. It's a strong word. It, it brings out these strong feelings and emotions. So instead of saying that that somebody died, he died or she died. I think overwhelmingly it's more common and a bit more polite to say someone passed away and often you are going to use this in the past tense because it is something that already happened. He passed away last year. She passed away a few years ago. Somebody died, someone passed away. My best friend, even though he wasn't so friendly.

What happened to him? Passed away. I'm sorry. Aunt Sylvia passed away. He passed away recently. Run over by an ice cream truck. Now if you want to be very informal, you can say that someone kicked the bucket. It means the same thing that someone died, but this is it. It's very informal. You want to be very careful when you use it. You don't want to use it when you're having any sort of serious conversation about someone dying. But to say someone kicked the bucket, it means they died. So you might hear it used in the context of somebody died a long time ago. The feelings, the emotions are not as fresh and they might informally say, you know, well yeah, this person, they, they kick the bucket many years ago.

Or maybe if they're talking about a pet or an animal, you may hear somebody say, you know that that their dog, their cat kick the bucket. They died. Guess who just kicked a bucket. And what happened when he finally kicked the bucket? I was so upset when he kicked the bucket. I had no choice but the drown my sorrows when I woke up in the morning it was gone. If this is what they send when mom goes to jail, just imagine what happens when you kick the bucket. All right, so I...I'm going to go powder my nose right now. Actually. Well I wouldn't say that because I'm not a woman but I am going to go to the toilet number one, not number two.

And I know that's probably not a pleasant picture to put in your mind. I don't want to make you lose your lunch. I actually just want to practice using these euphemisms so you can hear it as a bit of a refresher because that's just going to help you understand their meaning. And I don't think it's problem for you guys because I, I think you are the sharpest tools in the shed. You guys are smart, you're very intelligent. So I'm gonna head out. I'm gonna take my love handles with me, and if you enjoyed today's lesson, please hit that like button down below. As always, thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time.

Euphemisms in English that You Need to Know

hey everyone today I want to talk to you about euphemisms in English now if you're wondering to yourself well what is a euphemism that's a great question a euphemism is a a phrase or expression that is uh polite it's Pleasant and what it does is that it is substituted for another phrase or expression that may be considered a little too direct perhaps mean or maybe it's even embarrassing so instead of saying something that a person might get offended by or or that's just not a very nice thing to say or like I said it could be embarrassing people will use a euphemism instead in its place so that they can sound a bit more polite or you could even just have some fun with these phrases and expressions and and kind of joke around with them so I want to talk to you about some common euphemisms in English because that's going to help your comprehension and it's also going to help you improve your English fluency as well so let's begin with people and talk about euphemisms that you can use to describe different people and the first one that I have for you is over the hill and if you say that somebody is over the hill all all that you're saying is that this person is old this person is maybe I there's no specific age in mind but instead of saying well somebody you know they're old you could say well you know they're they're a little over the hill they're getting up there in age they're over the hill so perhaps they may not be able to participate in some activity or maybe you're trying to talk about how what the state of their mind and you want to say Well they're getting a little more forgetful be because not because they're getting old but because they're over the hill I am too young to be over the hill I don't remember saying she was over the hill Happy Birthday Grandma it's better to be over the hill and buried under it then we have the euphemism better half and I think this is a common euphemism used among married couples because if uh for example me I am married but if I'm talking about my better half then I'm talking about my wife she is my better half and you say that because you're you're trying to give them a compliment and say well they they are a better person than you are so either a husband or wife could use this euphemism if they want to refer to their spouse and they could say that they are the better half I was just explaining to your better half here when we were tell out we happen to hit the main sewer line that is one impressive wife you've got there well I don't call her my better half for nothing I'm a married man buddy you want to say hello to my better ass come here next is the euphemism hearing impaired and if you say that somebody is hearing impaired it just means that they are deaf they cannot hear I don't consider that this is a more polite way of saying somebody is deaf but I think it's more of a politically correct way of saying it it's just a little more appropriate to say that that a person may be hearing imp reped this is something you may notice when watching a TV show or movie that they have captions subtitles that people can use and follow along if they are hearing impaired he said my favorite aunt is hearing impaired he just said you complete me my brother's hearing impaired and your goon took his hearing aids now let's keep with hearing and if somebody is is not deaf but they just have well really bad hearing and they're starting to lose it then you could say that somebody is hard of hearing they're not deaf but they're well they just they just don't hear very well perhaps they need to get a hearing aid because they are hard of hearing you would say something to this person and they would just respond like what what what did you say I can't I can't hear you say it again I don't think anybody wants to hear that they are hard of hearing but it may be a little more polite than just saying hey your hearing sucks your hearing is terrible you need to get hearing aids you could refer to somebody and say Well they're a little hard of hearing sorry what you're hard of hearing Mr Bachman really I was speaking at normal volume sorry man I'm just a little hard at hearing now let's talk about business and the first euphemism that I want to teach you is downsizing so this is something that you might hear a company or a business say they say okay you know in the coming months we are going to be downsizing or we're going to experience some downsizing and it just means that they are going to have to eliminate jobs and and let people go and fire them from their jobs this is a way that that a company or business could say it without probably offending a bunch of people or people just getting really really angry because a company is not going to come out and say hey we're going to fire a bunch of people instead they try to make it sound a little more pleasant I guess and they may say that that they're going to be downsizing downsizing I have no problem with that I've been recommending downsizing since I first got here so what we're all screwed that's what they're going to downsize an ATT I had to downsize the payroll department to one guy and an envelope stuffing machine next is the

euphemism early retirement and when you talk about an early retirement it means that somebody was fired and perhaps they are a little older and they're deciding not to go back to work so they may say well I I decided to take an early retirement and in that case then I might think well they might they may have been fired from their job I I don't know what happened and they just decided to go ahead and retire watch your mouth maybe you ought to just take early retirement right now and get some Ren aop night security job looks like he was uh forced into early retirement now I want to switch gears and go from business to talking about sex as well as pregnancy and the first euphemism I have for you is the birds and the bees and this is an expression that refers to sex education that you are going to talk to somebody and maybe teach them about sexual intercourse and I think it's common that adults will use this when they're talking about teaching their their child or their children about sex education and they'd say you know I'm going to teach my my son or I'm going to teach my daughter about the birds and the bees I'm going to talk to them about sexual intercourse so that they can learn all about that the birds and the bees and it's just a more pleasant way of putting it and when you're talking to a child to say let's let's talk a little little bit about the birds and the bees instead of just saying very directly you know today you know we're going to talk about sex did you tell us about the birds and the bees I don't think I'm really the right person to it but it says in the manual that the scout leader is supposed to tell us about that kind of stuff biology as in reproduction there's no need to be embarrassed about it it happens to the birds and the bees the birds and the bees are not Vulcans Captain there Comes A Time in the life of all human when uh well as they put it the birds and the bees speaking of sexual intercourse the next euphemism is carnal knowledge and if you say that you have carnal knowledge of somebody else then that just means that you've had a sexual relationship with this person often I I think it's been used in law when maybe the the police or detectives are talking about some situation and they might say well the suspect had carnal knowledge of the victim that they were in a sexual relationship together you may also hear it used maybe just casually as well but probably not as often if somebody wants to kind of uh talk about the relationship they've had with somebody especially if it was a a casual relationship they may say oh yeah you know I've I have had I I have carnal knowledge of this person which implies that they had a sexual history together okay I guess it's my turn isn't it all right the bet is $20 $20 you have to have carnal knowledge of a lady this time senior year who told Jessica fank that you were sick in bed when in fact you were having carnal knowledge of her sister in our treeh housee now continuing our our discussion on the birds and the bees I want to talk to you about pregnancy and a way that you could say that somebody is pregnant there are a couple euphemisms that you can use I think overwhelmingly the most common one is just to say that that she is expect that the woman is pregnant She is expecting and basically it's kind of short for saying she's expecting a baby in the future so a man and a woman could use this instead of just telling people their friends and family hey you know guess what we're pregnant they could say oh we're expecting we're we're we're going to have a baby and somebody could also use it and ask the question um are you expecting are you pregnant when are you expecting wanting to know when is the baby due if you hear it being used then you know that expecting means somebody's pregnant you're married that's Christine we're expecting our first kid any day now spoke with Jennifer crane she's expecting that's impossible Carrie didn't tell me anything your wife's expecting a child soon isn't she she gave bir to a son 3 weeks ago now if you want to use a very informal and Casual euphemism which is almost I it's a little humorous I think you could say that that someone has a bun in the oven and if you're saying that there's a bun in the oven it means well yes there there's a baby in there that she is pregnant She is expecting there's a bun in the oven see you got a bun in the oven yeah she's right Sky why you lay down a while in PR shake you got a bun in the oven I would still care for you both you won't be able to care for anyone if you abandons you with a bun in the oven now I think it's only natural that we we were just talking about somebody who is a expecting when there's a bun in the oven which is the beginning of Life let's transition to the end of life and and talk about death and dying and a euphemism that you may hear from time to time or you could even use is to put down and what it means is to euthanize and to kill so often when I think of this euphemism being used I think about perhaps pets that there's a pet a dog or a cat and they're in very old age and it's better to go ahead and put them down perhaps their quality of life is not very good at all so the owner may decide to put them down I have two cats but then I moved to this place with hardwood floors so had to put them down I'm joking what happened to your lip oh mod bit me ah should put her down that's my daughter ma'am it was a cute story we're playing in the backyard now if you've had to put down you your pet and then you're talking about it to some friends or family you could then use a euphemism and say that that they're in a better place and when somebody says that someone is in a better place it means that they have died and you're kind of referring that they they have moved on into the Afterlife they've gone to heaven they are in a better place now this doesn't just refer to animals you can use this when talking about people and somebody may be offering their condolences to you and saying you know I'm sorry that that this person passed away I know they were important to you and that then you may respond and say well you know they're in a better place we all have to move on Grandma's in a better place now what measure of Despair compels one to commit such an act we can only take comfort in the fact that she is in a better place now so those are some very common and very useful euphemisms that you can use if you happen to find yourself in this situation but just keep in mind that that these euphemisms are used when you just don't want to say something directly that might be offensive and rude or even embarrassing you can use these euphemisms instead thanks for watching I will see you guys next time

Everyday Words & Phrases You REALLY Must Know

I want to teach you some everyday words and phrases that you can use to build your vocabulary in a very practical way because we use this vocabulary quite often and if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary and improving your English fluency subscribe to the channel turn on notifications so that I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so I have divided this lesson into three different categories idioms phrasal verbs and useful phrases so let's begin with some idioms and the first idiom that I want to teach you is off the beaten path or off the Beaten Track this means not known or popular with many people and there are three things that I'd like to say about this idiom the first thing is that you can use either path or track and say that some place is off the beaten path or off the Beaten Track I don't know why but I tend to use path and say that I went someplace that was off the beaten path the second thing is that often you may use this idiom when talking about travel and the third thing is that generally especially if someone's talking about travel it has more of a positive connotation that there were not many people around it wasn't crowded and you visited someplace that was off the beaten path now that's not always the case you could use this to just say that some place is remote my grandfather's cabin is really remote and it is off the beaten path or when talking about travel last year I went to Thailand and I discovered a beach that was really off the Beaten Track so if you're like me and you like to avoid the crowds then this is an idiom that you can use because I often ask people where can I go that is off the beaten path he writes all about the best eats stays and attractions off the beat path you got off the Beaten Track where are you from a small town at West sort of off the beaten path next is through thick and thin and often you may use this with the past participle Ben and I'll talk about the grammar in just a moment but this refers to someone who has supported you when times have been good as well as when times have been tough and really you're going to use this when talking about a relationship typically one that you had over a longer period of time with a family member a friend a colleague so of course I could say my wife and I have been through thick and thin here is another cute example of some friends who have been through thick and thin now going back to the grammar often you're going to use this idiom with that past participle and you're going to use the present perfect because you're talking about a relationship that started in the past and has continued to the present and you want to say that you and someone else have been through thick and thin this next song goes out to a very special person who's been with me through thick and thin people who have been with you through thick and thin who you thought would never fail you friends stick together through thick and thin always then there's get or have your ducks in a row and this just means to be well prepared or very well organized for something that may happen in the future so I think this idiom makes sense just look at this picture these ducks they look very well prepared they look organized they have their ducks in a row so you can use this with either verb get or have and say that someone needs to get their ducks in a row and they need to get prepared or maybe say that someone has their ducks in a row that they are prepared and they are organized so because of that I think it's a great idiom especially in the context of work if you want to give someone a compliment and say that this person really has their ducks in a row nobody make any noise nobody go in that office I have all my ducks in a row I would appreciate it if you would please use discretion until we get our ducks in a row I know you're mad too bad you didn't get your ducks in a row cuz tonight would have been perfect looks like our ducks are finally in a row dealership's back on its feet off the hook I like this idiom it just means that you are free from blame or you are free from some annoying obligation so sometimes when I put together these lessons there may be a typo here or there and I find it really annoying because I can't change it and I hope that you don't blame me for just these minor simple mistakes I hope that you are willing to let me off the hook and I will be free from blame to give you an example with obligation maybe I say well look you don't have to come with me to the football match and I'm talking about American football maybe you don't like watching football and I say you don't have to come with me you're off the hook and you are free from this annoying obligation here are some more examples pretend this whole thing never happened oh I'm not letting you off the hook you'll get me off the hook yeah I get you off the hook we would let you off the hook what makes you think I want to be L off the H the next idiom is the home stretch this refers to the last part of something that is being done that last period of some activity now to give you a little more context this is an idiom that comes from horse racing so at the end of the race you may hear the announcer say the horses are coming down the home stretch the last part of the race so if uh you are doing some sort of activity maybe you're working on a project and it's getting ready to end perhaps there's a little belief that it's coming to an end this is when you may use this idiom and you tell someone yeah the Project's going to end next week so right now I'm in the home stretch it's going to end soon so I'm in the home stretch you're in the home stretch now how are you feeling let's not lose focus come on we're in the home stretch hey hey grab a brush we're in the home stretch ain't tough you're in the home stretch now I want to switch gears and teach you some descriptive phrasal verbs and I say descriptive because these are phrasal verbs that you can use in specific situations and because of that I'm not going to lie they are a bit more advanced some of them you may not be familiar with and that's okay I think that's a good thing because I want you to keep building your vocabulary so for this next part of the lesson I want you to get serious I really want you to focus and I want you to buckle down you got to buckle down Okay so let's just go ahead and begin with that phrasal verb buckle down this means to get serious about your work and to focus diligently on the task at hand now often when I think about this phrasal verb I think about school maybe parents telling their child you need to buckle down and perhaps I think about that because my parents would often tell me you got to buckle down work hard focus on your studies and you should really buckle down something else I want you to keep in mind is that this phrase verb is not separable and generally people are going to use it like you're you're giving somebody a command and telling them what they should do you have to buckle down you really need to buckle down I just buckled down and study sir do we joke around sometimes yes but when it's time to buckle down we're seasoned professionals we're going to make this work you need to buckle down and focus I'll do what I can then we have the phrasal verb fall through this is used when talking about well something that has been plan does not happen so I could say well my plans for the weekend fell through they did not happen and generally you may use this phrasal verb when talking about plans that you have that is a very common collocation and collocations are words that are frequently used together and this is an excellent way of building your vocabulary so your plans can fall through some other collocations with this phrasal verb Maybe you say that the sale falls through or the deal falls through or even maybe the project falls through and it just does not happen well truthfully our dinner plans fell through so we Brave the stor his plans fell through the deal fell through honey sorry the deal fell through the next phrasal verb that I want to teach you is mull over this means to think carefully about something for a long time so it it is really similar to someone saying well I'll think about it instead of saying I'll think about it you could say I'll mull it over but one slight difference is that you are thinking carefully you're really taking something into consideration when you are going to mull something over and I want to point out that this phrasal verb is separable like I just mentioned you can mull something over let's have some fun here is a meme a joke this is a play on words I must ask you a question but I will give you time to mull it over so I don't think I need to explain it to you mustache sounds like must ask as well as mullet over well just sounds like mull it over and you're going to think carefully about it here are some more examples all I ask is that you just take some time to really consider it mull it over okay if it's still a no no hard feelings oh Mr Simpson shouldn't We Begin by securing the strut let me mold that over and did he say why he's reluctant didn't give a reason just want to mull it over then there's eek out this means to obtain or win something really with great difficulty or through great effort so it's like you're saying that you just barely obtain this thing or you just barely want to give you some more examples as to how this phrasal verb is used in context I have some news headlines for you Dao NASDAQ eek out gains despite Middle East tensions Eagles eek out victory over wul Browns in week six that is an American football example for you and the team eeks out a victory us apartment rents eek out annual growth in September I want to give you some more examples so here are some videos using this phras overb Jake eak out a feeble Victory and last year I let the captain win because he's old and sad because of you I spent half the game in the Box yeah but you still eat dat a win it was great next is hash out this phrasal verb means to talk about something with someone else in order to reach some sort of agreement so let's say that you and someone else are having a disagreement and I want you to well solve your problem I might tell you look you need to Hash things out so in this case it is rather similar to saying that someone needs to work something out now I'll be completely honest saying hash things out it is not as commonly used as telling someone you need to work things out but it is good to get a little variety add some flavor to your speaking skills and and this phrasal verb it is a little more informal but that's also why it's useful everyday English you need to Hash things out yeah well you should be sorry maybe we can hash things out can't we at least just sit down and eat a piece of pizza together just hash things out like adults frankly I hoped it would be like dealing with you people with strong opinions hashing it out respectfully now I want to teach you some useful phrases my plans are going to continue I do not want them to fall through and I still would like you to buckle down so the first useful phrase that I'd like to teach you is pick up the tab this just means to pay a bill such as for a meal or drinks at a bar

now I will say that I think this is more of an American phrase and often you may hear people using this phrase when talking about drinks at a bar so pick up means to pay for something in this context to pick up the tab now if you're at a restaurant you could say pick up the tab but I think also it's very common to say pick up the check now the tab specifically refers to a tally of items and that's why I said maybe you would use this at a bar talking about drinks over a period of time and they just keep adding drinks to the tab so let's say that that you and I go to a bar and I say I am going to start a tab and we get some drinks and then maybe you want another one and I say put it on my tab and then at the end of the night I'm going to close my tab which is the drinking Bill and because uh we are friends I tell you I am going to pick up the tab don't worry about it drinks are on me I'm picking up the tab now uh who's going to be picking up the T he paid for everything I pick up our B tab all the time he's picking up our tab excellent at a loss for words this means that you are unable to think of anything to say you are speechless and if you're looking for a one-word synonym for this phrase it is speechless now often you're going to use this with the verb to be and say that someone is at a loss for words and and this is really a great phrase to to add emphasis and and it covers a range of emotions so I can say that I was at a loss for words when my daughter took her first steps and that was a very happy moment or I was at a loss for words when my grandfather passed away and that was really sad or I I was at a loss for words when my friends told me they were getting married and that was more surprising and exciting but in each of those examples I I could use this phrase and say that I was at a loss for words here are some more examples you know I'm always at a loss for words in these moments well if you're at a loss for words I can use to our youngest member this reporter is at a loss for words right now moot point I like this phrase perhaps cuz I just like saying the word moot but in general it refers to a claim that someone makes about a topic that is no longer relevant or it can no longer be questioned or debated it just doesn't matter it's a moot point maybe you think that I would have been a great doctor and it really doesn't matter because I decided to become a teacher it's a moot point so in this context it it really does have a similar meaning to irrelevant or pointless let's have a look at some other moot points if I were to talk about the nutritional value of eggs but you are allergic to eggs it's irrelevant it's a moot point or maybe I say there's a new update for the iPhone but you don't have an iPhone why am I telling you this it's a moot point here are some more examples but Mary's George's Guardian surely that gives her some sort of say it's a move point I'm starting to understand what you see in her but regardless it's a mood point then there's full of oneself this is an informal adjective phrase that means well you think that you're very important but in a way that really annoys others so it's kind of similar to arrogant or proud so it really does have a negative connotation often it's used as a standalone statement to describe an individual and if you want to add emphasis you can use it with the word so so full of oneself now be mindful of the grammar because you're going to use a subject pronoun with a reflexive pronoun as in well you are so full of yourself he is so full of himself she is so full of herself and

I'll be honest yeah at times I am so full of myself I have to go cuz oh hell I don't need a reason someone's a little full of himself don't be full of yourself girl be quiet you know who we are just so full of our then there's short and sweet this means pleasantly brief and relevant now this phrase is a binomial pair this is when you have two words that are joined together by a conjunction and often that conjunction is and or or in this case we're using and to say that something is short and sweet these are phrases that I think are often used in just everyday conversation now I am going to keep this explanation short and sweet so I will go ahead and show you some video examples I'll keep it short and sweet family religion friendship these are the three demons you must slay if you wish to Succeed in Business now we don't want to take up much of your time let's make this short and sweet I hope that you enjoyed the lesson and learned something new and if you did please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Exercise Vocabulary | Important Words for Working Out

So today, we're going to teach you guys some vocabulary words. And showing you guys words that you can use when you're working out next. As you can see, I'm working out really hard. I'm very strong. Whoa. Let's go. Let's go. And I am killing it. Today we're out and about. And we are about to do a fun workout. So today we're going to teach you guys some new vocabulary words related to working out and exercising.

First, the types of exercises we're going to do today... It's mostly just some calisthenics. And those are general exercises that are kind of like gymnastics that you do on your own. So we're going to do some of those too because they're pretty simple and easy, and you can do them outside. And it's a nice day, so that's what we want to do. But, before we start our exercises, we need to stretch. Are you going to stretch for us? Huh? Yea, yea, yea, yea. I'm going to try What is that? I don't know, but it looks cool. This is...this is funny. They're so far away.

Now, we're going to warm up with some jumping jacks. So first we're going to start out with a little run. But there are different types of runs depending on how fast you want to go. So the first type of run we're going to do is jogging. And jogging is running kind of at a slower pace. An exercise that most people do when they go out running. They usually go out jogging. A little bit slower than like a fast run. But it's still a run nonetheless. Is that 5 miles? Uhh...sure.

The next one is a sprint. And the sprint is a really, really, really fast run. Like as fast as you can go. And it is not meant for longer distances. It's just meant for really short distances. But going as fast as you can. As if somebody was maybe chasing you. So super, super, super fast. Sprint. One thing we've been trying to do lately is get more exercise, and get outside, and be more active. So that's part of the reason why we are doing this lesson. It's some good exercise. Feeling healthier already. I'm just here for the show. For the entertainment. I should be doing fitness videos and not teaching English.

I think you should stick with teaching English. So sometimes people do a series of workouts of the same exercises. And that's called the circuit. So they just do the same exercises in the same order. Multiple times. And many times they use these... these kinds of machines like I have behind me. This one is nice because it tells you how to do the exercises. These machines are a little strange. But... Circuit. Exercises in a row. And then you repeat them a few times. And then that's your workout. Only ten more. One. One and a half. Two. That's not one and a half. It was two. Just a few more minutes. A few more minutes?

It's tough. Ioana is going to complete the circuit. So one of the more standard exercises would just be the pushup. So let me demonstrate. Forty-eight. Forty-nine. Fifty. That was three. Ioana was not happy with my sit-up. So she's going to demonstrate. Do you always laugh when you do sit-ups? No, it's just harder than I thought. I'm done. You're done? So what's a crunch, Wes? It's a little similar to a sit-up. You're working out the abs. Okay, so Wes is going to drop it like it's hot now, and show us how to do a squat. Alright. Let's see Work that booty. A squat.

Now 30 more. No? There you go. Professionally done. Nope. What? Tuck your tailbone in. Like that? I think so. I think that's straight. And lift your abs. Am I straight? Take your belly button towards your spine. That's what the yoga person says. There we go. This is a plank that Wes is holding. Trying to hold. Trying to hold. It's a very good ab exercise. You have 20 more seconds. What? Is that the plank or a pushup? It's a plank. I thought you had to be on your elbows. No, this is a different way to do it. Try to push up while you're down there. Just try one. Yes. What was that? What exercise is this?

It's...I don't know. This is uh...this is a lunge. Well doesn't it feel tiring? It looks something like this. It kind of hurts my knees which makes me think I'm doing it wrong. So Wes is going to us how to do a burpee. And a burpees is like... It's a mini-mini-workout because you do... It's a series of moves that you do in one exercise, I guess. Ready? So it's a jump, and a push-up, and something else. Go. Yea, I'm ready. It's pretty cool. Do you feel... Was it amazing? You did three. I'm done. So you pull yourself up on the bar. So show us how it's done Wes. You've got to... Forty-nine. You've got to smile.

You've got to get to fifty. So a chin up is when you just reverse your hands and you pull yourself up from this side. Which one's harder? Is this the harder one? They're both... They're both pretty easy. That was a chin-up. Do it again. Do it again. For the camera, of course. For stock footage. Good job. So that is your workout vocabulary. We hope you learned a few new words and maybe some new exercises. Or maybe you had a good laugh. And in the comments below, why don't you let us know what type of exercise you like to do in order to stay healthy. And please, if you enjoyed this video, both like and share it.

And, as always, thanks for watching and we will see you next time. Bye.

Expressions Native Speakers Use ALL THE TIME | Binomial Pairs

- If you wanna learn expressions that you can use in everyday conversation, then you need to learn binomial pairs. That's coming up. What's up everyone? My name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today, I have a great lesson, because this is very practical for everyday conversation. We're going to talk about binomial pairs. If you're wondering what the heck are binomial pairs, that's a good question. These are phrases that contain two words that are connected by a conjunction. And that conjunction is either and or or. (laughs) And, or, and, or, and, or. Those are the two conjunctions that are often used to connect these two words, and these phrases are called binomial pairs.

And we use them all the time. You can use them in formal conversations, if you're giving a presentation, and you can also use them informally, if you're just talking to someone on the street. So, I'm gonna teach you some common expressions. I will tell you the meaning and give you some examples, so that way you can see how they're used in context.

Let's begin. The first expression is bits and pieces, and this just means an assortment of small things. For example, maybe you drop a cup on the floor, and you say wow, it shattered into bits and pieces. Or maybe you're talking about somebody giving you information. They don't tell you everything, they give you a little bit at a time, and they say, yeah, they told us the truth in bits and pieces. - Well, I had a few spare parts I found over the years. - And I had some bits and pieces at my work. - This box contains over 217 bits and pieces of information. - How's that coming, memory? - Bits and pieces here and there.

- The next expression, and this is a good one, I really like this one, wine and dine. And this binomial pair means to take somebody out and really entertain them. And usually you would entertain them with fine dining, maybe a fancy restaurant, and you wine and dine someone. And perhaps it's a special occasion, or perhaps you're really trying to impress someone. - He has spent the last month wining and dining these guys, getting 'em laid. - Being wined and dined by a rich guy might be nice. - How is wining and dining state senators not campaigning? - Because I have a room full of lawyers. - Often it's associated with a restaurant, and you are eating somewhere. It does not mean that you have to be drinking wine.

You're celebrating, I don't know, your anniversary, and you wanna take your wife out and wine and dine her and treat her to a nice, fancy restaurant. The next binomial pair, safe and sound, and this just means that there is nothing to worry about. There is no danger. You are free from harm or injury, and often you would use it to describe a situation and say that you are safe and sound or everyone is safe and sound. Perhaps there was a natural disaster, and you are okay, and you are letting somebody know, hey, I'm safe and sound. Don't worry about me. I am free from danger. Safe and sound. If you wanna study English with us, you're safe and sound. There's nothing to worry about. You're not gonna get hurt watching our lessons. (laughs) I don't know why you would. - I wanna make sure it gets to my daughter safe and sound.

- We're safe and sound and the future never looked brighter. - All here together safe and sound. - Then we have sooner or later. This is an expression that means that something will happen. It's definitely going to happen. We just don't know when it's going to happen. It may happen sooner, it may happen later. So, if you're describing something, like yeah I'll do that. I'll do it sooner or later. Then, you're basically telling someone or you're not telling them, when you are going to do this thing. It'll happen sooner or later. - Sooner or later that fire that I love about you, Rose, that fire's gonna burn out. - Sooner or later, Cersei always gets what she wants.

Sooner or later, love is gonna get ya Sooner or later, girl you got to give in - Sooner or later, you guys are going to be fluent in English. If you keep watching our lessons, I promise you, sooner or later you will achieve English fluency. If you don't, then maybe I'll take you out. I'll wine and dine you. How does that sound? The next binomial pair, and I really love this one, because I use it all the time, ups and downs. So, when you're talking about something having ups and downs, you're basically saying that there are periods when things are going really well, and then there are some periods where things aren't going so well after all.

- Another great binomial pair is wear and tear. And this is talking about damage or depreciation that may occur due to just ordinary use. So, for example, say that you buy a car. You buy a car, you use it, and then you want to sell it. You're gonna have to sell it for a lesser price, because there is depreciation. And you go to sell it, and you might tell the person, there's just a little wear and tear on the car, no big problems whatsoever, just normal wear and tear. - During the course of business, a copier goes through something called normal wear and tear. - That takes care of the normal wear and tear.

- Well the shift knob is loose, you know about that? - No, I hadn't noticed. - Have you been picking at it? - No, you know, it's just wear and tear. - We can sometimes get image artifacts related to normal wear and tear. - The next expression is little by little, little by little, and it just means a small amount of time. And we often use it when we're talking about trying to achieve some goal. You're not going to do everything all at once. You have to do things one step at a time, and you are going to get there little by little. You guys will improve your English skills little by little.

Even though there are many ups and downs, keep at it, because sooner or later, you will achieve fluency. The next binomial pair, which is another really, really great one is dos and don'ts. So, what this means is just warnings or advice about things that you should do or things you should not do. And often, it's used when maybe you're giving suggestions to somebody, or you're giving them advice about okay, be careful of this, don't do this, do this. You're giving them the dos and don't. So, perhaps you start a new job, and another employee might tell you the dos and don'ts, or maybe you go to a new school, and you get in the classroom and another student tells you the dos and don'ts.

When I'm teaching, usually in the first class, I'll go over the dos and don'ts. - The dos and don'ts of diaper rash. This is fascinating. - Now, underneath each one of your chairs, you'll find a pamphlet with a simple list of animal rights dos and don'ts. - Well, just a few dos and don'ts. You don't have to read it though. - The next one, rock and roll. So, you have probably heard this before. It is just a genre of music. You're talking about rock and roll. There are many different music groups out there that this what they play. They play rock and roll. We also use it to say, let's begin, let's do something.

So, if I tell you, let's rock and roll, let's do it, let's start, let's begin, let's rock and roll. - Rock and roll. - Rock and roll. - Now, let's rock and roll. - Right, let's rock and roll. - Another useful binomial pair, live and learn, and we say live and learn when we want to talk about an experience in life that usually teaches us a lesson. We learn something from this experience, and usually it's something that is not good, and we need to learn from it, so that we don't repeat it again, and you might describe that situation and just say, you know, live and learn. I learned from this experience, and I will try not to repeat it, live and learn.

So, for example, say that you buy a car from somebody else, and you did not do a test drive, because this person told you, there's just some normal wear and tear, there's no big problems. However, once you buy the car and you leave, there are many problems and you have to pay for a lot of repairs, and you'd say that this is what happened, it's a crappy situation, but live and learn. - So, how much is this thing gonna cost you now, like 5, 6000? Well, live and learn. (audience laughs) - But I see pity has its rewards, live and learn. - As long as you're not driving a car or nursing a baby. (audience laughs) Live and learn.

- Then we have peace and quiet, which is complete freedom from noise, stress and anything that's bothering you in life, and often people would just say, (sighs) I need some peace and quiet. I just wanna rest, I don't wanna hear anything. I just need some peace and quiet. For example, if you're listening to rock and roll, you're probably not getting much peace and quiet. - I'm enjoying the peace and quiet. - It's peace and quiet on Sunday. - Right now he just needs peace and quiet. - You get all that peace and quiet that you've always wanted. - Now that you all of those binomial pairs that I've taught you in bits and pieces, I wanna hear from you.

If this lesson was easy to understand, easy to follow, and you know all of those binomial pairs, let me know in the comments, and I want you to write the phrase, live and learn. That just tells me that you understood the lesson, and you learned something new, live and learn. I know that usually talks about experiences, which are not that good. I hope this lesson was a good experience for you, but I still want you to write that in the comments, live and learn.

Now, for some quick dos and don'ts. Please do hit that like button and share this lesson with others who are trying to learn English, and the don'ts, don't what? What do I not want you to do? Well, I don't want you to leave. Please, go watch another video lesson. Thank you so much for watching, and I will see you next time.

FAKE NEWS! | True Misconceptions about Learning English

hello everyone and welcome to our wonderful lesson today I have something super special for you so if you just start if you just started joining us right down I'd like to see where you're from and what's your name so please write it in the comments what is your name and where are you joining us from it's a beautiful Saturday afternoon so I'd like to see if you're joining what's your name where you're from hello hello hello with some good evening hello different timezones welcome to our lesson welcome Patricia welcome everyone thank you so much for joining I have a wonderful lesson for you that I'm very excited to teach because these are things that I hear all the time and I've heard throughout many years of teaching and I want to address them because I think it's very important when it comes to language teaching okay so oh wow we have such a beautiful group today thank you guys for joining thank you thank you and if you are joining us later please also write your name and where you're writing from because we have such a wonderful group of students from all over the world and hopefully it can keep getting bigger and we can get to know each other okay so here's our little lesson it's about misconceptions misconceptions is kind of a it's a long word and it's a very important word but it's a very very very good one to know misconceptions about language learning so I want to ask you right now if to write in the comments what do you think misconception means do you know this word have you heard it what context have you heard it on in what is this word mean misconceptions what thing I want to see if if you guys if you guys know thank you again for joining if you're just joining and you're wondering what's going on what we're doing we are writing about what we think misconceptions are but we are also sharing what our names are who we are where we're writing from because it's wonderful to share in this beautiful community ok so we see some answers wrong understanding or I have no idea yes you are right dosia it is it is understanding something in in the wrong way so a misconception is an opinion or a view that is not correct that is wrong so you are correct in that sense it's usually because we think we know something but we we don't know it we we think we're right but maybe we're not completely correct so it's something that's common that people many many people believe but it's just it's usually just false and sometimes there's some truth to it but it's just it's not completely true so I want you to look right now on my screen where it says mistakes are bad so a lot of people I think when they learn a new language they're always scared oh no I don't want to make mistakes it's so bad to make mistakes well that's actually a misconception that you have right here because mistakes are good I know you guys think I'm crazy probably but it is good it they're good because if you make mistakes you have the opportunity to learn from them you have the opportunity to become better to change those mistakes and if you hadn't made it maybe you couldn't correct it so that is a misconception that's an example right here so that is what a misconception is so are you ready to discuss some common misconceptions what I want to ask you right now before I show you the first one let me switch here is okay what do you think the first one is related to time how long does it take to learn a language so in the comments please please please write how long do you think it takes too long to take how long do you think it takes to learn a language how much time what do you think I'm so curious to see what everyone answers okay how much time do you think maybe what one year one months ten months three years four years five years how long do you think it takes okay so and I will show you what I have in my other question which we can talk about a little bit later is are you too busy to learn because I know we're all very busy we all have work or children or opportunities and school and a lot of other things and sometimes we feel like maybe we are a little bit too busy to learn a language so let's see somebody says 600 hours that's a that's an interesting estimate okay so see some people say it depends on the way you learn it it depends how much is yeah I think you guys have some really really good answers exactly I also it definitely depends on how much time you're spending and you're putting in it I also happen to think and this is because this is valid for everyone that it it can take a lifetime so let me let me share what I why I put this slide here I've had numerous students ask me even when I was in California teaching or in other places and I've had students come and they said you know teacher how long will it take me to learn English all the English and it was kind of a funny question because you can't they'll be like oh in two years will I speak will I be fluent will I speak all the English and it was kind of funny because I you know the answer is no because you're never going to be a hundred percent you'll still make mistakes and I think that's fine I for me it seems like you even with English or with other languages were constantly learning even native English speakers they're always learning for about new words they're learning about new concepts new idioms everyone is always learning so if we're thinking like okay I'm going to master this language in 1 year or so I think that's a very difficult goal to accomplish and if you have that goal for yourself you might be disappointed if you don't reach it so instead of thinking that way it might be easier to just say I'm starting to learn and just focus on progress instead of I will finish this language because it's it's not really possible to finish a language in a certain amount of time and of course some people make progress faster than others and different kind of skills so some people's listening may advance further than others people listening but maybe somebody else might be good better at speaking so it's it really is it really does depend from person to person and now my second question was are you too busy to learn this is something that of course as adults we face a lot we have so many obligations we have so many things that we're doing and sometimes if we want to learn a language that keeps getting put on hold and we say oh I didn't have time let's do it tomorrow let's do it next week I'll do it next semester I'll practice next month so I wanted to address this because it's all about motivation in my opinion and in my experience of course because some of you may know that I had to learn English as well you have time trust me you have 10 minutes you have 15 minutes a day if you make that a priority you I think it's much much better than not doing it at all so you can spend that time by writing in your journal or you can spend that time by speaking to your yes you heard me correctly to yourself or you can use that time by watching a youtube video or like interactive English whoa or or doing just a little bit for yourself to progress in that language so you you do have the time I think it's just hard for us because we think I have to spend two hours three hours just only studying English and it's just it's just not the case exactly we must find the time no excuses great good go see ya thank you so you have it you just have to make sure you dedicate it okay now my second question for you is about accent okay this is my second misconception this is an important one because I hear so many split opinions but I'd like to see and please write it in the comments whether you're watching now or later write down how important do you think accent is do you think having an accent is important is it a problem what do you think about it how important do you find it because I want to see your opinions and then I'll sure I'll share mine and then you can tell me what do you think - did how important is accent I will say this I've been asked many times is accent important like is it important and I would say yeah yes it is but not in the way you think accent is important just like we learn a language to be able to communicate with other people if accent stands in the way of that then we're not communicating effectively in the language we're trying to communicate so if people don't understand what you're saying then it's important but if they do and you just it sounds a little bit different then I don't think it's that important but it's of course it's very very very important if people don't understand you you should try to correct yourself because maybe your your stressing the word wrong and this is where I wanted to discuss that many people think that oh my accent is a problem if you're learning a different language pronunciation is about more than accent it's about intonation the way you end a word or the way like you could have rising intonation or falling intonation or it's the rhythm of the language or it's a word stress or there's so many aspects that come with pronunciation it's not just the accent so keep that in mind because if somebody thinks oh my accent is so strong it's so bad it may be the way you are speaking that is also that might be a problem more than your accent so keep that in mind okay that's that's that's very very important it might not be the accent but like I said it is important if people can't understand you of course and in that case if you see that somebody doesn't notice what you're saying can't understand can grasp it maybe try to correct that mistake other than that there's so many people in the world that have different accents speak they learn English in different countries it doesn't matter where you learn it as long as you can speak and everyone can understand to us you know most of the time okay so I have a more controversial I have even another controversial question for you guys and my question is about grammar okay so I want to see what do you guys think about grammar is grammar important what do we think about it is it not linguists can't even decide on this one so it is controversial some people say this some people believe that and I want to see what you guys think because your students and of course we care so please write it in the comments what do you think about grammar how important is grammar when you are learning English let's see how important is grammar so I'm going to talk to you about two schools of thoughts while you guys write your answers the first one is that some linguists talk about which has to do with language immersion and they say you know what grammar is not that important people should just go to a country where where the language is spoken and kind of start speaking and eventually they will learn the language perfectly and they don't even need to study grammar now the problem with that is that if if you make an error and it never gets corrected you always say nobody corrects you and you don't know the grammar rule you will end up making you can end up making the mistake forever and that's called error fossilization and it is a problem right because you're not using the language correctly so if you don't focus on grammar at all that can be a problem so let's see some people here say of course as I expected I have some answers where grammar is very important grammar is not that important it's important so I I completely understand why we have two camps because like I said even linguists don't agree who study um second language acquisition so they don't completely agree on this but I will tell you my take in a second now I want to talk about the other camp of people and especially this is this is taught in schools in many places in other countries or in the US or I don't know about the UK but I know about the US and the system and how its taught there and in other countries because I've had students who have told me how they learned and I know that there's so much focus on grammar there's so much that it comes at a detriment to speaking to developing your skills like like listening like writing and reading up many many teachers just like to focus only on grammar and gram only and I understand it because people like rules especially as adults I think when we're learning a language we want to be able to say it correctly right we want to speak correctly you want to say okay I want to say this sentence I want to say right I think the issue that comes with that is that when we do that we don't focus on what we're supposed to be focusing on I think a language is about speaking it's about communication it's not about a hundred percent about saying it right it's about actually being being able to say it and I think many teachers especially in schools they focus only on grammar and in my opinion grammar should complement the other skills so for example it should it should instead of only focusing on grammar you should focus on grammar when you're speaking try to say it correctly or when you're writing and when you're listening add it as a compliment not as a focus okay so grammar should complement the way you're using the language but it shouldn't be the primary focus in a nutshell we need a balance you can't just focus on grammar and I will tell you this when I was in university and it was my I think I was yeah my senior year my last year of university at UCLA where I studied I took a language I took Hungarian and high I took it because I was doing some research and I took it for a whole year a full year of Hungarian and I my teacher at the time only focused on grammar we did almost no vocabulary no conversation nothing just grammar grammar grammar grammar so I knew how to conjugate verbs I think and do plurals and things like that ooh I'm a good learner I was focused but at the end of the year I couldn't speak almost any hunger and I could right and translate but I couldn't really speak almost any Hungarian it was just from that was my experience for me so I think if you only focus on grammar it is not it's not a good way to learn a language but I will say this grammar is important you do have to know the structure you do have to know the structure of the language you do have to focus on some of the rules but don't just look at the rules make it as use it as a compliment so I know you guys are are sharing and thank you so much for sharing you know it's important in any language yes it's it's very important I agree but I would say that in some cases especially in universities or schools maybe there is a little bit too much focus on grammar as opposed to speaking and we see it all the time we've had students from different countries that can write something really well maybe but they can't speak because they've never been able to practice that in school grammar is just a part of the language let the point is not to only focus on it okay so my next misconception that I'm talking about is

let's see here it is about children okay so before I show you before I show you I want to know this is something that I find it again controversial what do you think about children and learning languages is it easy for them to learn is it not what do you think about children and language learning so please write that in the comments because I hear this one all the time ah sorry okay so children so what do you think the children learn their first language language in general or languages effortlessly is it easy for them what do you think and I will tell you what the research is kind of so everyone's yeah because they're distractions yeah so I think I think the consensus in in many cases that I hear is it's easy for children to learn English and I understand um I will say children learn languages really well but the research indicates that it's not effortless in fact it takes children many years to learn a language if you learn a language acquisition they don't just learn it like that children have to listen first and then only after they can produce the language they can speak it and even after that they end up making a lot of mistakes so it's not effortless it is it takes them a long time and even when they're older they'll make mistakes and this is how they learn so the conception is okay children they're they're so quick they learn everything but it's not effortless that's something that's important it's it's not that easy they also take time but we don't see that because we it's all happening in their brains but they do spend many years learning their first language and the second language depending on what they grow up with so it does take time and they do make mistakes for example I was reading that willingness to make mistakes and I know this is hard I know it's hard to try to speak with somebody knowing that you might make a mistake and you try not to do it but that's what we need to learn from children right is to take that there to take their way of learning and apply it because guess what it can help us as adults we have some advantages over children we have a broader vocabulary we have more of a structure we have more motivation possibly so we can have an advantage a little bit of course when it comes to pronunciation I didn't put it on here but children are better at pronunciation than adults and that is true that has to do with the biology and the brain and but we can still learn a language even as adults okay so I think I think the underlying message of this lesson is no excuses because everything I've been going through time accent grammar so far these are none of these are real excuses for why you can't learn English okay so that that was my let's see what you guys are saying yes so it does have to do something with the brain but I think you guys are also right in mentioning that children really don't focus on mistakes and it's they they make it fun they make it easy which if we apply that to our method of learning then that can benefit us as well but it is a misconception saying that children have it easy they don't even have to think about it that's not true if they do think about it it takes them a long time and they do make mistakes okay my next question we can just talk about this it's about talent or a gift some people say some people are gifted it just means they have a natural talent for it and I do hear this a lot some people say oh this person is so gifted with languages they speak seven languages they speak three languages oh you're so talented um maybe but not really the reason is many people in different parts of the world they speak more than one language and they learn it at different stages of their life and they're not gifted they're not all gifted it's not it's impossible for everyone to be gifted like I'm thinking about you know like Switzerland where they speak three languages immediately just like that in in northern Europe in Africa people speak oftentimes more than one language and it's not because they're gifted it's because they learn it and they grow up with it or they have neighbors that speak other languages or it's an official language it's really not about being able to it's not about capacity it's it's not about anything like that it's about willingness to learn so I put here a little note for everyone it's about attitude not aptitude so you have to want to learn a language and I think if you really really want to learn a language and you're invested then you can definitely definitely do really well so this is another yes there we go 1% inspiration 99% perspiration exactly so it's um that's that's exactly what it is so this is another no excuses situation maybe some people may be a little bit more talented but most people are not and it's they can still do it everyone can do it if you're willing to put in the time and motivation okay and my next question is again a little bit controversial and I want oh gosh I hear this all the time and it is do you have to speak with a native speaker with an with a native speaker to improve your you're speaking to improve your language is that necessary to your language development so please write down what you think yes or no maybe what do you think do you have to speak with a native English speaker to improve your English because I have heard I have heard this from many many many many people and everyone I'll share my answer in a second dip dip dip okay so if you're just joining we are talking about misconceptions and language learning and we are sharing if we think that you have to speak with a native English speaker to improve your language skills if you're watching this later please also write in the comments where you think because we read everything and we love to hear your answers so I'll say this um no that's my answer it's a short answer but it's it's no not to improve of course it helps but you don't have to speak to a native English speaker to improve your language English skills in fact many native speakers make mistakes and they depending on the area where they're from they might not know the right answers and just because they speak English and they're they they've always been speaking English doesn't mean they can help you with your mistakes or can correct your mistakes or many times they end up speaking a lot more and you don't have I mean it's just like speaking with anyone you have to you don't necessarily have a chance to practice so I don't think it's necessary of course if you have the opportunity it can help you but to improve to practice you do not need this okay you can practice by yourself it's really possible you can speak in the mirror you can speak to yourself you can speak to friends and they don't have to be native English speakers to be able to practice in fact I know so many people from other countries we right now we live in a country that is its first English is not it's not English and the first language is not English and so many people here speak flawless English and most of them haven't had the opportunity to speak to native English speakers we live in a world where you can Skype with people you can there's so many different ways to practice that it just really doesn't have to be with a native English speaker and some of them some people just sound completely flawless you can hear an accent you can there's so many ways you can correct yourself so another no excuse okay so no excuse not to learn so far I've given you quite a few okay website of the coin and because we've experienced I've experienced this as a teacher I've had students who this was back in the US which is obviously an english-speaking country and who you know they traveled all the way from other countries and they came to the US and they thought okay this is how I'm going to improve my English and of course they spent a lot of money doing this they're traveling they're there they're taking English classes the problem was they weren't practicing outside of class and they were just coming to class doing whatever they could do and then outside of class they would speak their language make friends with people who spoke their language from their country and all of the time they just spent using their language so and they were living in the u.s. this has happened for like a year to three it if you live in a place it doesn't mean that you will be fluent okay so just living doesn't mean fluency this is very very important because I think many people think that oh you have to just go to a country and it will you know you're you you'll be fluent it will be great what's not so okay it's like I said before about excuses it's really about you and practice and how much practice you are willing to put in if you try if you give your best effort if you practice every day if you are motivated if you're dedicated more than anything you will improve but you have to make sure to to give that effort no matter where you live so if you're in Iran if you're from let's see where you guys are from if you guys wrote if you're from India if you're from Thailand if you're from Italy it doesn't matter where you are it really doesn't matter Russia France if you practice at home if you practice in Brazil if you practice and in Portugal if you practice in Spain your English will improve so another no excuses okay Sudan yes it doesn't matter you can practice any where you are and like I said that's a beautiful thing about the world we live in today okay so my last misconception has to do with classroom teaching and this one may be different you may have a different opinion on this depending depending on maybe your your personality or it may be depending on how old you are and my question is is classroom education so going to a classroom taking a class with a teacher with other students is it the most efficient way to learn a language I'd like to know what you think so please if you're watching right now write down do you think it is it the most efficient way to learn a language if you're watching later please write it in the comments is it the most efficient way do you think this is the best way the easiest just what will help your language development the most what do you think okay and if you're just joining thank you for joining we are talking about misconceptions things that we believe to be true about language learning but that actually aren't let's see I will tell you some pros and cons like I did with other subjects so first of all there are some wonderful things about classroom teaching as a person who teaches in the classroom I love it I love the interaction as it as a as a teacher and when I was studying languages I loved going to class I will tell you why first of all if you have a good teacher this is very important you have to have a good teacher if you don't have a good teacher the experience won't be the same but if you have a good teacher who is willing to help you give you the tools and they have a good structure I think that's very important you have a structure and you know kind of which way to go so that's a pro that's a good thing another another really nice thing is you know you have there's a social element you can talk to other students maybe you can practice that's not so those are good things now bad some bad things is that not all teachers are good and this is very important I've had some really really bad teachers I just went into class they just started speaking and I wasn't able I wasn't able to speak at all in the language and it was more of a lecture and it just wasn't it wasn't great I wasn't really learning even though I was there I was trying to it wasn't really great and some some some of these can be very expensive and there are some problems with classroom teaching some of them can just focus on grammar so I think it really really depends on your teacher but I think it also depends on yourself what I mean by this is this quote I found here languages cannot be taught you can't teach a language but you have to learn a language so it's one of those things that you have to do yourself like I said before it's something that is important if you're motivated if you're dedicated if you want to learn you have to do it yourself your teacher can only give you the tools but you have to use those tools to develop your language learning so that's that's really important let's see what you guys are saying yeah sometimes it's not an advantage so it really depends some teachers are just they don't have maybe experience or they don't know what they're doing and maybe they're not helping others do but they I mean there are pros and cons but I would say that it ultimately depends on you okay so I'm just going to go over very quickly about what we talked about the misconceptions we talked about time and how long it takes to learn a language about accent and how important accent is we talked about grammar we talked about if you have to be gifted to learn a language about children and is it easy for them to learn about if you need to speak to a native speaker where to do you have to live in a country where the language is spoken about how important is classroom teaching and yeah I just wanted to thank you guys I I think I think if you take one thing from this whole lesson it should be that it really depends on you know if you are dedicated and willing to learn then you can you can just avoid all of these things you don't have to worry about speaking with a native speaker you don't have to worry about living in another country you just have to be really focused and you have to do your best and I truly truly truly believe and I promise you that you will succeed and I wanted to thank you so much for joining and if you like this lesson please share it with anyone you'd like anyone you think this would be useful to write questions in the comments and please join our social media classes thank you guys as always for watching us and I will see you next time

FAMOUS MOVIE QUOTES EXPLAINED | Improve Your English Fluency

If you like, movies, love learning English, and you also want to understand a little more about American pop culture. Well then this lesson is for you. Hey everyone, my name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today I want to talk to you about some famous movie one liners, some movie quotes that have gone beyond the films from, from which they have come to become embedded in American pop culture. So these are movie quotes that are easily recognizable, especially in the United States, but I think that they're pretty well known throughout the world because the movies that I'm going to talk to you about are, are pretty famous.

So you can use these quotes in everyday conversation if you happen to find yourself in a particular situation and the quote is relevant or you can use them just for fun to see if other people can recognize the quote and the movie that it came from, which again is part of your cultural understanding of the language, but it also adds value to your overall English fluency. So the first quote that I have for you is we're not in Kansas anymore and this quote comes from the famous movie, the Wizard of Oz.

Now the Wizard of Oz was originally a book, which was also pretty famous, but I think the quote really became popular after the movie, and Dorothy says this too, to Toto once they arrive in Oz and she says, well, we're not in Kansas anymore. We are in a strange and unknown place. So you can actually use this quote. If you find yourself in a strange and unknown place and you're with another person who also thinks the place is strange and you can say, you know, Hey, we're not in Kansas anymore. I don't know about this place. It's strange. It's unknown. We're not in Kansas anymore. Then there is another famous quote from this movie and that is there is no place like home.

There's no place like home. This quote comes from the end of the movie. When Dorothy is clicking those slippers together and she wants to return home and she really misses home and says, there's no place like home. There's no place like home. Once again, this is a quote that you can use in an everyday conversation if you want to express that same feeling and capture that emotion. If you are away from your home, maybe you've been traveling for a long time and you really miss it and you were thinking about it, you could say, you know, yeah, there's no place like that. Then we have this quote right here. Go ahead, make my day.

Now that was a terrible Clint Eastwood impression. I'm sorry about that, but this quote comes from the movie Dirty Harry and Clint Eastwood says this, Go ahead. Make my day. It's like he's asking them to react so that he can react and that's what this quote means, that you are you. You hope that another person continues with the action that they're doing so that you can react and do something else that might give you pleasure. This is a quote that you may hear in other TV shows or movies, and they may say it to reference this movie, this particular quote, but again, you can use it if you find yourself in that situation and it's like you want to dare the person to continue doing whatever it is they're doing and you'd say, go ahead, make my day.

Next is the quote. Say hello to my little friend and this maybe you don't recognize it by the way that I just said it there, but it comes from the movie Scarface. And this was a a popular gangster movie from a long time ago and he says, say hello to my little friend when he's getting ready to fire a missile launcher and actually kill some people. This is a quote that probably you're not going to, you're not going to say it. At least I hope you wouldn't say it and be firing some kind of gun or weapon at somebody else, but it is something that you may come across in other TV shows or movies.

So if you do hear it, then you know where it came from. It came from the movie Scarface. Now this is a movie that I have actually never seen, but I, just growing up in the United States, I was very familiar with this quote because you just hear it from time to time. It's just a part of pop culture. Then we have, and this is one of my favorite quotes, and it is I'll be back. I'll be back. This is my, my Terminator impression and it, it's a very bad Arnold Schwarzenegger impression. I apologize. But this quote comes from the movie Terminator and he says, I'll be back saying, you know, he's going to return.

So when you think about these quotes and one liners and about how you can use them as a learner this is a great way to practice shadowing and and practice your pronunciation, your intonation, your emphasis, and try to capture that emotion by repeating the phrase the the exact same way that you hear it in the movie. And the reason I say that you could try it with this one is because this is a popular quote that people will try to say mostly because it's recognizable. So if you find yourself in that situation where you are going to return to some place and you're just letting the people know, you can have a little fun with it and say, you know, I'll be back, I will return, I will come back. But again, you have to say it like that.

I'll be back. Another popular quote is you can't handle the truth. And this comes from the movie. A Few Good Men. This is another good one. When you think about shadowing and you people would try to say it the same way Jack Nicholson did in the movie. You can't handle the truth. So if somebody is trying to get you to confess, to tell the truth, you can just tell them you can't handle the truth and do your best. Jack Nicholson impression. And again, this is great for shadowing. It is a wonderful way to actually practice your spoken English. You can't handle the truth.

Now how about you? You, you give it a try right now. Say it just like that. You can't handle the truth. I'll wait. Okay. Alright. That wasn't bad. Shadowing is a great way to practice your speaking skills and if you did this, if you participated, let me know in the comments. Just write. You can't handle the truth. That way I know that you are actually practicing your speaking skills, which is what Interactive English is all about. Then we have the quote Houston. We have a problem. Now this quote comes from the movie Apollo 13 which was actually based off of the real life event, the real life space mission Apollo 13 which which went wrong up in space in and that is what was said. They called down to NASA, which is located in Houston and they said, Houston, we have a problem.

The movie was made many years later. It was very popular but I really think it was like a resurgence of this quote and it really brought it back into the mainstream and it is something that's very common in American pop culture. Now this is a quote that can be used to talk about a variety of problems or issues. If you have to tell somebody, and even if they're not in Houston, it really doesn't matter. You could just say, you know Houston, we have a problem.

Next is...it's another one of my favorite quotes probably because I really enjoy this movie and that is, Oh captain, my captain. And this quote comes from the movie Dead Poets Society. If you haven't seen it, it's a great movie. I highly recommend you check it out. But the quote itself comes from a poem by Walt Whitman and that is a bit of an analogy referencing, uh, the death of Abraham Lincoln.,

Now I think the meaning, Oh, captain, my captain is kind of showing respect and reverence to the leader. And in this case, Maybe the reason I like the movie so much is because it talks about teaching. It's about a teacher and his students and the students would stand up on the desk. Oh captain, my captain, kind of showing that respect, their admiration for the teacher. And I think it's every teacher's dream, especially if they have seen this movie to think that, Oh one day I, I hope the students are all standing on their desk saying, Oh captain my captain and really showing that respect. But unfortunately it's never happened to me.

The students have never said to me, Oh captain, my captain. They have said some other things to me and sometimes, yeah, it hasn't been very nice and then that's when I would tell those students, yeah, come on, keep it up. Go ahead make my day. But this movie quote, it's become a part of American pop culture but it's not something that may get thrown around in everyday conversation unless you are really referencing a leader and you're trying to reference the movie while showing respect and admiration. It's a Oh captain, my captain. We will follow you. We will listen to you. Then there is another quote from this movie and that is carpe diem.

Now this is a Latin phrase, but the movie I think really made it a lot more popular and it taught many people like me. It taught me what this phrase meant because before I saw the movie, I did not know that carpe diem meant seize the day. Take advantage of every moment and really try to seize the day and live life to the fullest. Carpe diem. So this phrase is a big part of the movie. Talks a lot about that. Carpe diem. Seize the day.

Next is the quote It's alive. It's alive. And maybe you recognize it. This quote is from the movie Frankenstein. When Dr Frankenstein has his creation come to life, he's yelling, It's alive! So this is a...it's another quote that is easily recognizable and you could use it also to reference the movie, but you could use it in a situation in which maybe you're, you're trying to build something and create something and you're testing to see if it works and if it works then you could say it's alive in reference to the movie, but also acknowledging that yes, your creation works. Good job. Then we have the quote, I'm going to make him an offer he can't refuse.

And that...that is my Marlon Brando impression. And that quote comes from the movie The Godfather. Now there are so many great quotes that come from the the movie series that The Godfather, if you haven't seen it, I suggest you check it out.

So this quote has become very well known in American pop culture and you could use it depending on the situation that you find yourself in. If you want somebody to do something for you and you're going to make them an offer so that they'll do it. You could say, you know I'm, I'm going to make you an offer you can't refuse or I'm going to make them an offer they can't refuse and reference this Godfather quote.

Another popular quote I told you, there are so many from The Godfather is this one. Keep your friends close but your enemies closer. Now this is a quote that did not originate with The Godfather. Many people credit it to Sun Tzu who is a famous Chinese military general and that, that was a long time ago. So this, this quote, this expression has been around for a long time, but The Godfather really put it into the mainstream. And I think it's easily recognizable because of The Godfather. The movie is so well known. People will, will think of the movie when they hear this quote. Keep your friends close, but your enemies closer.

Then we have the quote. May the force be with you. And I'm sure for many of you, as soon as you heard the word force, you may know that I'm talking about Star Wars. This is a movie quote that is said many times throughout Star Wars. Well, there's many different Star Wars movies and I think it's repeated in many of them. May the force be with you. That's a fun one. I think many people get that because Star Wars is just so well known throughout the world. Then we have you talking to me. You talking to me. This quote comes from the movie Taxi Driver and Robert de Niro really, really made this quote what it is, it's a part of American pop culture and I, People associate this quote with the movie Taxi Driver. Again, this is another movie that I haven't seen.

It's a very well known and popular movie, but I, I've always been very familiar with this quote because I've heard it in other TV shows other movies and people may say a jokingly when they want to reference that, that movie and that character. You talking to me? It's a quote that is kind of confrontational, so it's not one that I would say, Hey, go out and use this one. If somebody is saying something to you that, that that's not nice. That's mean maybe they're calling you a name. You could, aAe you talking to me? You talking to me?

Next is the quote. Nobody puts baby in the corner. And this quote comes from the movie Dirty Dancing. It's a, it's another quote that's become pretty well known in American pop culture. And it refers to somebody being, you know, kind of cast aside, forgotten about. That they've been put in the corner. And he says it in reference to the main character who's been put in the corner and he says, nobody puts Baby in the corner and he takes her out of the corner and then they do this, this big dance at the end.

Now this is a quote that you may hear a that references the movie, but people will take out Baby and they will substitute another person's name in there instead. A person who has been kind of cast aside, forgotten about and you want to say no, we need to acknowledge this person. We need to recognize them. Nobody puts him in the corner. Nobody puts her in the corner. Nobody puts Wes in the corner. At least I hope they don't. So now I want to make you an offer that you can't refuse. All right. I will continue to create new and exciting English lessons, but you got to hit that like button.

Go ahead and hit that like button if you learned some new movie quotes because if you don't hit the like button, I'll feel like you're putting me in the corner and nobody puts Wes in the corner. All right. Thank you guys so much for watching. May the force be with you and I will see you next time. So long. I'll be back. That's true. I will be back very soon with another lesson.

FAST SPEECH in the United States (Speak smoothly & naturally)

welcome to today's lesson in which we are going to be talking about fast speech in the United States so one question that I often get from Learners or a comment rather is well I easily understand what you're saying and when I listen to your lessons it's easy to follow but when I travel to the US or maybe if you live in the US and you're just outside listening to casual conversation it's a lot more difficult to follow and understand that people are talking so fast so that's why today I want to talk about fast speech and take some just simple sentences and really analyze them and talk about what's going on so that you have a better understanding of why people sound the way they do and especially if they're you feel like they're speaking really fast so there are two different parts to this I want you to practice with me when we go through these sentences I want you to say them out loud this is after all interactive English I want you to participate but I I want you to keep in mind that I think this is really useful for your listening comprehension because when we go through these sentences and talk about some of the things such as connected speech it's it's related to pronunciation but it's also about like related to Accent reduction and I want to say at the very beginning that you should never feel like you need to reduce your accent or speak with any sort of accent I know that people have different goals when it comes to their speaking fluency so I just want you to keep that in mind never feel like you need to speak with any specific specific accent but I do believe that understanding some of these different concepts will help you improve your listening comprehension because you'll you'll be able to pick this out and you'll be able to hear it as we go through so my name is Wes let me introduce myself the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals if that's what you'd like to do please subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher so let's jump right into it and we'll start out with the dialogue so this is the dialogue that we're going to look at and practice today and we'll come back to this at the very end so for right now you can just listen to me say the dialogue you have it there written right in front of you and then we're going to go through each one and talk about what's going on and practice them individually and then you and I we are going to practice them at the very end as well so we start out with this question and I'm just going to read both or say both A and B what did you do last night did you go to the movie yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again let's do it I'm up for watching it again so just listening to me say these sentences you can see the the words written right there I imagine it's probably a lot easier to follow along and you can pick out the the words and phrases that you just heard but let's really take a deep dive into these sentences and we're going to practice so let's start at the very beginning you can see all the images that I'm showing you are one way or another pictures from the United States that's where I'm from so again this is more this lesson is definitely closely related to the American accent so what did you do last night did you go to the movie all right the first two questions we'll break it down one at a time let's start with that first phrase what did you you hear me pronounce those three words individually often you're not going to hear people say them like that that clearly they're going to say what did you so a couple of things happening so that first T that final T in what in the beginning D and did T and D the position of the tongue in your mouth it's really the same it's the tip of your tongue is up behind your top front teeth so you really have overlapping sounds so you're not going to hear both of them you're really just going to hear one and I'll come back to that in just a moment the final DN did and the beginning sound in you those sounds May blend together and that is called assimilation The Sounds blend together to create a new sound in this case it's a slight J J sound and one way to think about it is that we're taking that J sound and we're putting it between the two words which then allows us to connect them so instead of what did you what did you what did you you can hear that slight J it's not really something that you have to force but I think as you say it if you're just saying this quickly it's going to come out naturally what did you what did you and this is common with this question this construction the first three words and you can really replace what with any of those question words if you're following it with did you so what did you why did what did you what did you what did you now the rest of that question due last night this is pretty simple and straightforward I just mentioned the lesion so a lesion is another part of connected speech this is when sounds may get removed and it occurs on several different occasions one time is with the t or d and the t or d may get removed it may get dropped when they come between two consonant sounds so last night again I'm not really you're gonna you're not gonna hear a aspirated sound and last it comes between those two consonant sounds so it gets dropped it aligns and it's just going to sound like last night last night you're not really going to hear that t and whether you're talking about the phrase last night last week last year again it's going to Allied with any of those phrases I appreciate the hearts thank you so here's the first question again what did you do last night say with me what did you do last night one more time what did you do last night the second part of the question did you once again we have that final D indeed in the beginning why Y sound and you they blend together and you get that J did you did you then the rest of that question go to the movie one thing that I want to point out and this is really common I think with the American accent in the United States people will take certain words and they're kind of reduced and that vowel sound is changed and this often happens with function words for example two so instead of two like I'm saying it right now like the number if I'm just saying it quickly it's not a word that gets emphasized or stressed that vowel sound may get reduced to sound more like the schwa ta go to the it's also a week the which again the is you hear that schwa sound because the the next word begins with a consonant sound the movie go to the movie The other thing I want to point out before you before we practice this question is you can see I put flap T there so in the United States people love the flap T it occurs when that t comes between two vowel sounds so even though it go it's a separate word but it still ends with a vowel sound and then that t comes between the two vowel sounds so it's going to sound more like a soft

D so that whole phrase go to the go to the go to the when I say it with my accent go to the and hopefully you can hear that soft D go to the movie go to the movie say it with me just that last phrase go to the movie and then if we combine it with that did you did you go to the movie did you go to the movie and and the other thing I I want to say about this question did did you go to the movie it's a yes no question a lot of times with these yes no questions you'll have a rising intonation at the end did you go to the movie did you go to the movie say with me did you go to the movie now let's practice uh all of this together right here and I just want you to repeat after me see if you can use these same things that we just talked about assimilation illusion the flap t what did you do last night did you go to the movie say it one more time what did you do last night did you go to the movie okay good all right keep that in mind we're going to come back to these questions all right if you if you are practicing and you're saying this out loud let me know I want to know in the comments just write the word speaking that way I know that you're participating and you are actually practicing your speaking skills which is what this lesson is all about and well speaking of speaking skills one thing I wanted to let you know and mention is that I am getting ready to start another speaking course the course is for intermediate to Advanced speakers it's all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly speak naturally we warm up with something related to pronunciation connected speech similar to the things that we're talking about in this lesson so click on the link down in the description I've also pinned a comment there in the chat you can use the code speak20 to get twenty dollars off but if you click on that link you can find out more information about the course as well as the available class times so check that out if you would like to practice and improve your speaking okay let's look at the next part all right great job excellent Kaio you're speaking nice Lali understand yeah it this can be definitely a bit challenging and difficult because I know that when many of you you learn English you start learning the language and you're learning the individual words and I know some people tell me that they try to pronounce the individual words because they just want to make sure that somebody understands what they're saying and that's perfectly Fair that's okay like I said this is not something you should feel like you have to do I do think it will help you improve your listening comprehension because if you're watching a movie or TV show this is you know you're going to hear people speak like this and it's good to be able to identify it so the answer to the questions uh yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work few things going on here so the first thing that I want to mention is linking this is extremely common in spoken English not just in the United States but really across all English varieties in the UK in Australia Canada South Africa it happens all the time and what linking is it's when you one word ends with a final consonant sound it may get linked with the beginning vowel sound of the next word so got uh in this case the final consonant sound got we can then link that with the vowel sound which in this case that article is just pronounced with the schwa uh gotta gotta once again that t comes between two vowel sounds so you'll hear me say this with a flap T gotta gotta it it really sounds the same as the reduction got to would also sound like gotta or in this case got uh with the article gotta yes I got a ticket and I mentioned before how certain words are commonly reduced this is one of them often and is going to get reduced and sounds will get removed and it's really just going to sound like n

so that first part yes I got a ticket and then yes I got a ticket and then called in we can link that phrase once again that final de and called because that Ed has a D sound because that final o that l sound is voiced and we can link that D with the vowel sound in in a lot of times linking occurs with those prepositions many prepositions uh begin with a vowel sound in on at over if the word before it ends with a consonant sound well that may tell you okay linking may occur called in called in sick to work so instead of two work which if you say two work it's perfectly fine but it's just easier and I do think again helps give the language that Rhythm and flow just sounds natural when instead of two t it's going to sound more like ta don't think of this as either one or the other think of it more like a spectrum and that you may hear more of the two or kind of sliding towards that to work to work called in sick to work called in sick to work if you're unfamiliar with that phrase to call in sick it refers to well somebody who cannot come to work and they just call their office their employer and say look I'm sick I'm not coming in today so in this situation the person asked about well did you go to the movie and they said yes they got a ticket they got their movie ticket and well they couldn't work so instead of going to work they called in sick and then they went to the movie yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work so let's practice this right here I want I'll say it slowly I want you to repeat and then

I'll say it a little faster so first time slowly and you repeat yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work all right let's say it let's speed it up a little yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work one more time yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work good all right again let me know if you're if you're practicing write speaking down in those down in the chat or in the comments if you're watching this later the next one uh the the other person responds instead of again pronouncing the individual words I'm going to go this weekend if you want to see it again I I would say I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again let's have a look at what's going on so

I'm going to there are two different ways that we can reduce this phrase again reductions sounds are getting removed very common so going to may get reduced to gonna something that I'm sure you've heard I imagine you many of you may be using this already I'm gonna she's gonna he's gonna we're gonna they're gonna you're gonna but if we're starting out the sentence with I am and we'll contract that to I'm we can reduce it even further and it may sound like I'm gonna I'm gonna Amina so I'm gonna or if you wanna say it even a little faster I'm gonna and typically what I notice especially when I uh I teach these classes and and talk about this I know some people don't feel as comfortable saying I'm gonna which I I completely understand but I notice how often I end up saying it when I say okay I'm gonna do this I'm gonna do that all right right now I'm gonna do this and I just start catching myself saying it quite often so I'm gonna go this weekend if you instead of want to another very common reduction wanna I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again it again we can link that final consonant sound with that beginning vowel sound in again starts with that schwa sound but that t comes between the two vowel sounds so it I'm going to pronounce it as a flat T it again it again just say that phrase with me it again if you want to see it again one more time if you want to see it again now let's practice the entire sentence and the first time I'm I'm going to say I'm gonna I'm gonna say I'm gonna and I still I want you to repeat after me I'm gonna go to I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again

now what I'd like you to do try that Amina just see how it feels again if it doesn't feel comfortable it's not something that you have to do but definitely listen for it so again just repeat after me I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again one more time I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again okay good and then we're going to wrap things up with this conversation right here and you can see this beautiful picture if anybody can tell me the name of that Park bonus points for you I'll tell you in just a moment let's instead of the individual words let's do it I'm up for watching it again when I say it like that to me I feel like I'm I sound a little bit like a robot but if I were just to say this naturally yeah let's do it I'm up for watching it again let's do it I'm up for watching it again let's have a look what's going on in case you're wondering this is a picture of the Great Smoky Mountains the Smoky Mountains National Park beautiful beautiful Park in the well it's yeah really the southeast so the first thing that I want to talk about we've talked about different parts of connected speech I think most of the time what happens is linking linking is something that happens a lot we've talked about assimilation The Sounds blend together you get a new sound like what did you what did you Elysian is another part of connected speech we drop some sounds and the

the next sentence we have linking and a reduction I'm up we can link that for is an is another word we can reduce that vowel sound is going to slightly change so instead of four it's going to sound a little more like fur it's a function word it's not a word that's stressed so when I say it often it's just gonna it's gonna sound like fur I'm up fur I'm up for I've added this down here if you're unfamiliar with this phrase to be if you say you're up for something it means that you're just willing to do something so in this case I'm up for watching it again this person is yeah they're willing to see the movie again so I'm up fur and then watching sometimes not always that g will get dropped I think most of the time this happens with verbs in the continuous tense you drop that G and the reason

this occurs is because when the next word begins with a vowel sound it's easier to link that final sound instead of the ing you can still link the ing if you want to but it's just a little easier so people will drop that G and then we can link that um sound with the beginning vowel sound of the next word which in this case is it the other thing I'd point out I said it mostly occurs with verbs in the continuous tense in this case it's a gerund which again it may still happen so we're going to drop that G and then we're going to link that final phrase watching knit again and that t and it comes between two vowel sounds so you're going to hear me say it as a flat T so check out this again this part that I've written giving you the phonetic spelling so you can actually see how I'm pronouncing it let's do it I'm up for watching it again and you can hear me as I say that watching it again it's almost like I'm taking that consonant sound moving it over to the next word watching nid again watching it again let's do it I'm up for watching it again I want you to repeat after me we'll do this slowly and then faster so slowly

let's do it sorry let's do it I'm up for watching it again and then we speed it up let's do it I'm up for watching it again and then if I want to speed it up a little more let's do it I'm up for watching it again so now that we've gone through these I think rather simple sentences it's this conversation this dialogue is easy to understand it's easy to follow but once again it's all about helping you have a better understanding of why people sound the way they do and I would encourage you to listen for some of this stuff like that first part the first thing that we talked about the assimilation what did you listen for that slight just sound what did you how did you when did you why did you where did you it's pretty common and trust me you will hear it so I'll read I'll say the dialogue again out loud so you can just listen to it one more time and then I want you to practice with me I'll say one you say the other and then we'll switch so I'll just say all of it right now so you can once again hear the way that I'm saying it with all of those I know we talked about a lot it's a lot to keep in mind but really just think about well again just listening to the way I'm saying it and trying to emulate those sounds so I'll say the whole thing right now what did you do last night did you go to the movie yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again let's do it I'm up for watching it again okay I want you to say it just like that if you can so let's start out I will say a and I want you to say B I want you to say this out loud doesn't matter where you are if you're at home or you're on the bus so let's just practice your speaking skills right now I'll say A you say B and then we'll switch are you ready what did you do last night did you go to the movie I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again excellent all right so let's switch this time I want you to say a I will say B ready you can begin yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work

let's do it I'm up for watching it again great job if you were participating and practicing and I just wasn't and I wasn't speaking to myself let me know write the word speaking in the chat or in the comments if you're watching this later this is a lesson that's all about just well not only helping you prove improve your listening comprehension but it depends on what some of your goals are when it comes to speaking fluency if you want to start using some of these different elements you want to start using reductions like Gonna Wanna Have to gotta they're very common in spoken English or if you want to take it a step further and use some of the assimilation I said a great starting point would be with those questions what did you why did you how did you when did you and some of those other things like linking I think it just takes time but the more you keep doing this the more you practice just like we did today I think you're going to feel a little more comfortable and you start using it in just casual conversation well a lot of people practicing nice Zach Julia uh Ulysses Sammy excellent love hearing that Lolly ouch right good good little good little practice but again overall I think this is great for your listening comprehension and once again just to give one last uh mention about my speaking course if you would like to join check out that link down in the description you can find out more about the available class times and use that code speak20 to get 20 off uh nice work all right Alexander uh talal hopefully you enjoyed the lesson and you learn something new this is really getting you know going deep into some of those different parts of connected speech assimilation linking illusion intrusion but hopefully you have a

FIND YOUR MISTAKES Learn How to Correct Yourself

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson this is interactive english for those of you who if this is your first time here my name is wes and the channel it's just it's all about helping you trying to practice your english skills improve your english skills for those who are who would like to achieve english fluency now today's lesson i think is a very useful one because it's talking about correcting mistakes so that's what we're going to work on in today's lesson is we're going to work on finding your mistakes as well as trying to correct those mistakes and i think many of you out there would like to do this because that's part of the process of working toward achieving english fluency so you you want to eliminate mistakes especially if they're just simple ones now uh before we jump into the lesson i do want to tell you quickly and let you know that uh enrollment for our speaking class is coming down to the wire which that's a great expression down to the wire means that it's it's getting ready it's getting ready to end so if you want to practice and improve speaking then check out our speaking course it is a 10-week course in which we will meet uh once a week for 50 minutes and the course is on zoom so you will i will send you a link to the classroom you'll click on the link you'll go into the classroom and we will have class with me and some of your other classmates and this is it's it's all about speaking we're going to speak and talk about a bunch of a variety of topics we're going to look at a lot of different questions and then you'll go into smaller groups to talk about those questions with your classmates and with me so this is a class that's mostly for intermediate to advanced learners and it's all about just trying to help you gain more confidence overcome anxiety help you improve vocabulary listening a little bit of everything the course it does some of you have asked it's 97 for this 10 week course and right now we in the future we're gonna offer more class times but right now there are four different times there are two classes on thursdays and two classes on fridays um both are at two and four o'clock european time zone so make sure you check to uh your time zone to see when the classes uh would be available so if you're interested in uh if you're if you're one of those people out there who's just like ah i want more speaking practice check out the course i will leave a link down in the description if you want to check it out i'll also throw one right here boom in the chat if you want to look at it and if you have any questions just send me an email at info interactiveenglishvideos.com so enough okay enough for the the self uh the self promotion just wanted to let you know because it's coming down to the wire let's get back to our topic which is um correcting finding and correcting your mistakes so let's do a little bit of a warm-up with this i'm going to show you uh well these are mistakes on twitter and i want to just practice see if you can identify the mistake and we will correct these together so this is on twitter people make mistakes all the time i think people are just typing quickly so but it's a good it's a good way to try to practice this skill so this one have the courage to speak to me face to face no fighting let's be adults and talk about it or bury the hatchet all right what do you think is the mistake with this tweet all right there's one real big mistake that hopefully you can identify and you know it's actually uh this is actually an idiom an english idiom so i hope that you were looking at that spelling that r b-a-r-r-y that is the mistake bury the hatchet it's so this is really just the the wrong word the word choice instead of uh or just a spelling mistake b-a-r-r-y to bury something b-u-r-y to bury the hatchet and if you don't know what that means to bury the hatchet it's a great idiom it means that you are going to stop fighting and you're going to make up and kind of forget about it so if you're fighting with somebody you're arguing about something you disagree you might say let's bury the hatchet and

let's move on let's forget about the disagreement we'll bury the hatchet and we'll move on so that is the first one what about this next one right here um what mistake do you see with this one this third well i'll go ahead and tell you there technically there's kind of two mistakes don't you wish your girlfriend was grammatically correct like me all right do you uh what what mistakes do you see i said there's two there's definitely one and i'll explain that in in just a moment don't you wish your girlfriend was grammatically correct like me all right so there's definitely one mistake and there is kind of another one and i would say this because we're talking about writing so the first one would be look at that you're all right she she uses the contraction um instead of the possessive pronoun so that's the first one uh would just be using the wrong word instead of you are you're excellent this is some of you got that don't you wish your girlfriend and i said the other one is a mistake because it's it's like a hypothetical in this case you would use the subjunctive um your girlfriend were grammatically correct like me it'd be the same way if i said um he wishes he were taller all right you would use the subjunctive in that case i said that it's kind of it's kind of a mistake because to be completely honest people will still they may not use the subjunctive so in this case um i you could cut her some slack and you you may hear people say and write girlfriend was but because we're talking about writing which is a little more formal uh i would just try to follow the the more the the stricter rules and use the subjunctive your girlfriend were the next one um what do you think the seizure salad i can't it's hard to read it because i want to read it correctly the seizure salad from mcdonald's is so good all right i don't know if this is perhaps a i don't know if they were trying to make a joke or if this is legitimately incorrect um but uh hopefully you can see that there is definitely a big mistake at the very beginning of the sentence they've just used the wrong word um yes excellent um lolly you're right so instead of seizure which if you don't know what uh a seizure is it's talking about a medical condition but in this case they don't want to say um seizure they want to say caesar the caesar salad is a type of salad the caesar salad um from mcdonald's uh or you could say at mcdonald's either one mcdonald's it is a proper noun so should have a a capital m capital d is so good and there should be a period at the end but again this is it's twitter people make mistakes all the time but you guys caught some of these mistakes excellent let's do one more one last little warm-up before we get into something that's a little more challenging all right so this person wrote i smell like men's colon all right well that's i know what i know what they wanted to write but that's specifically the way that you would pronounce it i smell like men's colon all right what's there there are several mistakes with this statement see if you can identify the different ones and there are well one two three three big mistakes that this person has made if you're just again looking at uh the way it's written if you're writing a sentence the first word of a sentence should always be capitalized capital i um and then yes if you get the other ones men's all right should be it is a plural possessive all right m-e-n apostrophe s i smell like men's cologne not not colon um that's that's very different so cologne i can understand why people might make this mistake because the spelling is very different than the pronunciation but cologne would be what what men might wear if they want to smell nice so women would wear perfume men would wear cologne c-o-l-o-g-n-e i smell like men's cologne and of course there should be a period at the end there so that's a little bit of a warm-up to see if you guys can try to just like start identifying different mistakes now this lesson is specifically about for you to identify your mistakes and the way that i would suggest you go about it is to use writing because the when you're listening and reading that's when you're like you're taking the language in and you are absorbing the language when you are speaking and writing you are using the language that is your output so i want you to try to use writing in order to identify some of your mistakes so that you know what you need to work on what you need to practice and what you need to correct because if you are making a mistake in writing there's a good chance you are also when you want to speak and you want to say something there's a good chance that you may make those same mistakes when you're speaking if you're using the wrong preposition or you're using the wrong verb tense you may make those same mistakes but your i want you to use writing for three main reasons and we're gonna practice this the first one is that writing is it's more reflective and i say that it's reflective is because when you write something down you can look at it speaking you're not always going to remember exactly what you said but when you write it down you can look at it you can think about it and that and then you can reflect on it so it is a more reflective practice a a form uh when you're writing the other thing i would say is always reread i think when when i would teach writing uh when i would teach writing class this is something you always tell to tell people and many people don't do it i try to do this myself whenever i write to you in a comment and i answer your comments i always try to reread even if it's a very short comment i just like to get in that habit of always rereading and even still when you reread this is when you're going to spot different mistakes but even after you reread and you do it again and again you may still make some mistakes it happens but you always want to reread and the next thing that i would tell you is to look for one mistake at a time this is something that i don't think people do they would typically read something and as they see a mistake that's when they correct it and then they're done but i think if you want to make it reflective and really not just identify some of the mistakes you make but really understand where you have a problem that you are always making a mistake with prepositions that's just an example look for one mistake at a time and i want you to keep track of it because when i taught writing class that is what we we would do so each day the students would write something in their notebook and then i would look at it and i would mark that there was a mistake i didn't tell them what it was the the mistake and they would go back and they need to identify the mistake and then they keep track of it so for example if there were two mistakes with articles they used that incorrectly in the first one they'd write that okay two mistakes and then for the next writing maybe oh they made three mistakes with articles and then the next one they made three more mistakes after you write about 10 things you can look at that list and you see that okay this is how many spelling mistakes i made this is how many mistakes i made with prepositions this is how many mistakes i made with verb tense and you can see that all right i i definitely made more mistakes with articles than anything else and then you know that is what you need to focus on so that's what i mean when i say try to identify one mistake at a time and let's do that right now so i'm going to show you um a writing there are many mistakes with this i just want you to read it and um we're gonna we're gonna do this we're gonna take one mistake at a time we're gonna make this a reflective practice and we're gonna take one mistake at a time and correct it and i want you guys to correct it with me and go through this so here here is the paragraph all i want you to do right now is read it and just at the very beginning just tell me how many mistakes you find just reading it quickly and how many mistakes you think there are in this one paragraph and write that write that down tell me in the chat how many mistakes you have found in this paragraph and then we're gonna go through it and look for one at a time so i'm just gonna read this and that's all i want you to do is just tell me how many mistakes do you think there are in this paragraph so it says today was my unlucky day i must have woken up in the wrong side of the bed first i missed the bus which meant i was late at work my boss will be so angry then i spilled my starbucks coffee i had to give an important presentation with a giant with a brown giant starbucks coffee stain on my pants to add insult to to add injury to insult i step through some dog poop right after i leave work i was so frustrating i wanted to forget about the day so i went to bed as soon as i got home all right so again as some of you you naturally you want to identify the mistake first just write down a number all right how many mistakes do you think there are total in this paragraph and then we're just going to take one at a time and we're going to identify those mistakes and correct them and then i'll show you how many there are uh in total for this one just this one paragraph all right um so somebody said maybe three mistakes all right that's the only it's the only that's the only person eloise six okay um all right those are the only two that have uh answered me about that how many mistakes total there are so let's look at um we're gonna do one one thing at a time and this is the list that we're gonna follow so the first thing we're gonna do is just look at spelling and capitalization then we're going to look at verb tense and then word order prepositions redundancies and word choices those five things and if you don't know what a redundancy is it means when you say the same thing again and again and you just say it too much it could be just one word that you keep repeating that is a redundancy and a word choice is you're just you you've used the wrong word so now i want you just to look for look at this again and tell me how many spelling and capitalization mistakes that you made just one thing at a time if you see other mistakes just we'll come back to that don't worry about those just specifically look for spelling and capitalization all right how many mistakes can you find in this one paragraph that there's either a spelling mistake or there is a mistake with uh capitalization and typically like you could add punctuation as well um in this case uh there it's not a punctuation we're just looking at capitalization those capital letters all right so with when it comes to spelling and capitalization um i'm gonna head go ahead and tell you

there are i believe there are four mistakes uh no no i think there are five mistakes with spelling and capitalization alone just those five so let me identify those for you and hopefully you were able to see some of the same mistakes all right here they are so the first one is i spilled my starbucks coffee the sea and coffee this is a common noun it's not a proper noun starbucks is the name of uh the name of a company so you're going to capitalize the name of the company coffee though the name is not starbucks coffee like it's not the name of some special coffee that starbucks has so coffee in this case it is a common noun so there are actually two mistakes with that because in both cases i had a capital c before it should be a lowercase c the word important was misspelled it should be spelled i-m-p-o-r-t-a-n-t that is the so that was a spelling mistake um the other spelling mistake was add to add um injury to insult i spelled it a d an ad a d is like advertisement or in british english people would say advertisement add a dd is like something additional something extra so that was also a spelling mistake add and then finally so this this is a compound sentence uh so we do not need to capitalize uh the letter s in so it should be a lowercase letter so those are five mistakes right there with just spelling and capitalization now that we've corrected those let's move on i want you to look at verb tense all right how many mistakes do you see with verbs forget about the other mistakes just look at the verbs in each sentence and this is what this is what you do this is the process that you can follow with your own writing because if you just reread and you look for just uh any mistake you see you're going to probably miss some mistakes but if you take uh something specific each time and look for that and each time you reread it you're looking for this one thing that is the best way that you're going to identify the mistakes so how many mistakes with uh verb tenses do you see and i'll go ahead and tell you typically the first sentence is what's going to set the tone for the story like you're telling a story so really that first sentence is going to set the tone as to whether it is the past the present or the future all right so i hope that you as you've been looking through this i hope that you were able to spot some of these mistakes and in total there are three mistakes so the very first sentence i said today was my unlucky day all right i'm talking about today but i'm talking about it like it's in the past tense like the day is already over so we know that this story that i'm telling you is in the past tense all right so the first one is miss all right i use that in the present it should be in the past all right m-i-s-s-e-d it is a regular verb the next mistake uh i said was my boss will be all right i use the future that should have been um probably an easier one to spot because the future just sounded a little awkward in this story so my boss was so angry we keep with the past and same with that last part um i stepped through some dog poop right after i left work all right left we're using the past tense so there were three mistakes with verb tenses we just corrected those now let's look at the next part all right word order looking at this paragraph can you identify any words that are in they're in the wrong order all right so if you're just joining us we are practicing we are correcting finding and correcting mistakes so we've corrected several mistakes and now i just want you to look at the word order do you see any mistakes with word order they are like okay this this needs to be switched all right um i hope that if you're reading this and looking at it there are i'm just gonna tell you there's two there are two different mistakes when it comes to word order the first one is with adjective word order so hopefully if you spotted two mistakes or even just one these are the ones that we're talking about so instead of a brown giant all right when you're talking about adjective word order size is gonna come for color all right i just bought um a big blue car i don't know uh so you're going to put size before color in this case uh i gave an important presentation with a giant brown starbucks coffee stain on my pants giant brown the next one word order is just this expression i don't know if you've heard this expression before and this is a good way to build your vocabulary to add insult to injury when i was reading this i actually i said it correctly as i was reading it and then i had to correct myself because it's just unnatural so instead of saying to add injury to insult the expression should be to add insult to injury you should switch those words and if you add insult to injury it's an expression that means that you are making some situation worse that something that's already bad if it becomes worse then you could say well that it just added insult to injury to add insult to injury is when something becomes worse so this person already had a very bad day and then they they they stepped in that poop and it just added insult to injury all right so that that is the phrase that you should be using that right there to add insult to injury all right let's look at this next part right here all right all i want you to do now is look for prepositions do you see any mistake with prepositions and there are several mistakes in which um the wrong preposition is used all right so i just told you right now there are several um and all right so so it says three okay uh so there are several mistakes with prepositions and those mistakes are as follows we're just looking at prepositions right here there are three mistakes so you would say again there's another expression about people waking up on the wrong side of the bed not in the wrong side of the bed on the wrong side of the bed and then the next one was first i missed the bus which meant that i was late you wouldn't say you were late at work but you could be late for work or you could say that you were late to work either one of those prepositions is okay i was late for work or i was late to work either one works and then finally we just talked about adding insult to injury to add insult to injury i stepped in some dog poop you would not really use through in that case it kind of sounds a little awkward when when people step in poop they're going to use the preposition in and they would always say oh i just stepped in some poop or watch out don't step in that poop you're going to use the preposition in all right now we're looking at the last part um which is we've corrected a lot of it i want you to look for some redundancies and word choice and remember redundancy is when you're using a word too much and this could be more a little bit like of an opinion but if i'm just looking at this as a teacher there are two corrections i would make with redundancies and one correction that i would make with a word choice and you're just they're just using the wrong word all right so the first redundancy i think is let's just look through it there's three mistakes the first one is with starbucks you say that it's a starbucks coffee you don't need to say it again there's no point in saying that the coffee is from starbucks again so i just get rid of it and you say that you had to give an important presentation with a giant brown coffee stain on my pants you could even

maybe get rid of coffee too because you've already said you spilled your coffee people should know that the stain is from the coffee but just to reiterate you could use coffee you don't need to use starbucks again the next one is um so because i've already used that as an adverb of degree when i said my boss was so angry i don't need to say that i was so frustrated because when people use words like that so very really those are some common words that people tend to overuse so i think you can use it but because we used it at the beginning my boss was so angry i'm gonna change that in the next one and instead of saying something like very or really it's always good to use something that's more precise and like i used the adverb incredibly i was incredibly frustrated and frustrated was the word choice instead i i said frustrating at the beginning but we're talking about the way that someone feels and that's when you use the adjective i feel frustrated if you're talking about some situation that can be frustrating so in that case you'd say i was incredibly frustrated three mistakes which means in total all right there were 16 mistakes in this paragraph now if you were to reread it just one time you probably would correct some of those mistakes but when you go through it and actually look for one thing at a time that is the best way to really be careful and identify as many mistakes as possible and then like i said a way to practice that would be to go back and and say okay how many mistakes did i make for each one so for example uh i think with this one um all right spelling and capitalization i made five mistakes with verb tense i made three mistakes with word order two mistakes uh prepositions there were three mistakes and then word choice there and redundancies three mistakes as you do this over time and you start making a list that's going to help you understand okay my big problem is with prepositions and i really need to focus on that or my big problem is with verb tense i keep using the wrong verb tense that's what i need to focus on so that is how you can make it more individual for you as to what you need to focus on so use writing to help you identify and correct your mistakes because it is reflective it is a great way to do that and now i want to just do a few more corrections just for fun sometimes you guys write comments and some people sometimes people make mistakes i want to look at some of those mistakes and correct them i'm not going to write the person's name but i just took a little bit and again this is a good way to try to identify mistakes these are all um these are all comments that that you guys had written at one point or another so what do you think about that first one my english is dramatically improved thank to your channel all right in this comment um there they're actually there are two mistakes with this sentence can you identify what those mistakes are alright i hope that you said that there's one with a verb tense and then one where there's just uh there's a letter missing so the two mistakes um you would say my english has dramatically improved something has improved thanks to your channel so you just need to add thanks to exactly excellent so those were the two mistakes what about this one um somebody says and i appreciate i really appreciate this comment you are a good and hard work teacher teach it that last one i i think that was just a typo instead of teaching i know they meant to say teacher the the t and the r are right next to each other on the keyboard so that's just a typo but what other mistake do you see um you are a good and hard work teach it i know that should be teacher but the other mistake i think that if you're going to use the adjective the adjective is hard working so you are a good and hard working teacher somebody is hard-working that is the adjective and that's just it's a way of saying that this person works hard and i really appreciate that um the next one uh this is what some this was a question somebody wrote um and it's a question and they want to change it to the passive okay what does your best friend drive in the past the passive voice how would you change that to the passive what does your best friend drive and i'm going to change it for you though we've done lessons before on active and passive voice most of the time you're going to use the active voice there are some situations when you might want to use the passive voice like if the subject is unknown or if you want to omit some information in this case it's not necessary but just for fun if you want to change it to the passive what is driven driven we're going to use the past participle of the verb uh what is driven by your best friend which is the subject but i you wouldn't want to write this it sounds awkward so in this case you would always i don't i can't think of a situation in which you would rather use the passive you just use the active and say hey what is your friend drive or what is your best friend drive and you're talking about the car but if you you could change it grammatically to the passive but it just sounds awkward so i wouldn't recommend it and finally this is some question that somebody had wrote in the comment i don't know i don't know if the question was for me or if the question was for other people who were in the comments um ram lives um the bus stand what do you think are you going to use the preposition by or a cross so i hope if you're just looking at that then you know yes buy would be the correct answer ram lives by the bus stand or if you're going to use a cross it'd be across from the bus stand really depends on where ram lives so uh that was a quick little little quiz with some of your comments but i hope that this will give you some ideas about what you need to do to if you want to try to correct your own mistakes use writing it's a reflective process use those steps that i talk to you about reread and when you look for mistakes just look for one thing at a time articles prepositions spelling verb tense and go through and see what you can identify it's a good way to practice and improve on your own and remember it's coming down to the wire if you guys if you want to join our speaking course enrollment is going to end tuesday there is a link down in the description for that and even if you can't join our speaking course that's okay but you want to show us some love support what we do at interactive english you can become a sponsor you can become a member there are links down in the description for that as well so i hope you guys found this useful um it's a good way to practice and we were able to do this together and uh yeah i just hope you have a wonderful day so thank you guys so much for joining me thank you uh lolly sarah louisa um a mint name morton sleepwalker great to see so many familiar faces rosalinda misreluctant hope you guys enjoy well i was going to say enjoy the rest of your weekend but it's about over i hope you have a wonderful week in the future i think we've kind of gotten off schedule i think i will go back to the normal schedule at some point of two new lessons out on tuesday and then doing live lessons on saturday but as things change i'll be sure to let you know um thank you guys for joining me julie um dhoni you're back sorry if i mispronounced names kareem uh davica um i hope you guys got some use out of the lesson fabiola all right i gotta end this have a wonderful week i will see you next time so long

FRANKENWORDS: They're alive! (blended words quiz)

Franken words. They're alive. And yeah, you may be wondering, what the heck are you talking about? What are Franken words? So, this is I I think it's a fun vocabulary lesson. And if you are someone who likes building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications, that way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals and I think vocabulary and learning new words and phrases is a big part of that. So, we're going to talk about well Franken words which are really port mentos. So, I I've put the the phonetic spelling down there so you can see how this word is pronounced because I've look guilty. I've mispronounced this word before. Portmanto. And what this is talking about is the blending of two or more words or parts of words that expresses the combined meaning of those words. And very quickly, if you would like to get a copy of the lesson notes that are right here next to me, you can join our email community. There is a link down in the description. I will go ahead and put that in the chat as well. if you would like to access a copy of these notes. So, I told you we're talking about Port Manttos. Let's go backwards for a second. And an example of that would be talking about Franken words. It's the word Frankenstein plus words. We blend them together to create this new word that refers to well vocabulary that's kind of crazy, out of control. And the words that we're going to look at today, some of them are new words that they're used and become popular in the last 5 to 10 years. Other words are actually a little older.

However, they were created by blending two words together and you create this new word. So, let me give you some examples of what I'm talking about. Metaverse. This is a word that you may have heard within the last couple of years. We have the word meta plus universe and that gives us metaverse, a virtual environment meant for social connection [snorts] or romcom. This is the you have the words romantic plus comedy, a show or movie plot that blends these two things together and you have a romcom. I don't know if you can see it back there. A good example is the movie Love Actually. Great movie. I I recommend you check it out, especially as we head toward the holiday season. And of course, there are many, many, many of these words, and I want to quiz you on some of them today.

Here is one last example before we start the quiz. And I see and we see just how much you know when it comes to these blended words. Frennemy. So this is one that I think is relatively new. Friend plus enemy. You get friendnemy. Someone who acts like or pretends to be a friend despite an underlying rivalry. And that's a good example. Think of a you have a rivalry with someone else. It's like you're com competing. You're enemies, but there's still like this respect. So, you could say that you are fremies. So, as we go through this, I told you I'm going to quiz you on some different uh port mentos. As we go through this, I want you to participate. Write your answer in the comments, in the chats.

This is interactive English. That's what that's what this is all about. And I we'll start out I think a little easier and I'll try to make it more difficult as we go through this. I'm already seeing a lot of great examples uh people putting down different port mentos in the chat. Motel station bromance podcast. Perfect. So you guys got the idea. So let's see how many of these other Franken words you know. So, we have the word brain and maniac. So, with this first part of the quiz, I'm going to give you the two words and you tell me, just write it in the chat or the the comments which word is being created when we blend these together. What do you guys think? Brain and maniac.

And this is a word that I think has has been around for some time. And the word that we're looking for, I haven't seen it just yet, so maybe people are trying to think of this. Excellent. Yes, I see some of the answers. Kate Learen. Perfect. Brainiac. So, an exceptionally intelligent person. You could refer to someone as a brainiac. Keep in mind, this is a noun. It's a way to describe a person. Somebody's a brainiac. Excellent. The next one, electronic and biology.

Now, I don't want to give it away. This is a maybe a little trickier, but we're going to blend these two words together. And which new word are we going to create? Once again, I don't think this is new as in the last 5 10 years. It's been around for some time, but it's new once we blend these words together. When they somebody blended them together and you get the word what? Electronic and biology.

That's what I hope. Here's the next one. Chuckle and snort. What word do you get when we blend these together? This is actually an old word. And I'll tell you kind of where it came from um before, but what do you get when you combine chuckle and snort? So I think you know the the individual maybe you know the meaning of these two words and then when we combine them together we're going to keep that same meaning and we get what this is we're talking about. Yeah. Laughter. When somebody's laughing and they're kind of can't breathe, you guys, I haven't seen the answer yet, but if we're talking about combining chuckle and snort, we get the word choral. Chortal. This is to laugh in a noisy, gleeful way. I told you that this word has been around for a while because I think this word was first used uh used by Lewis Carol like a long time ago over a hundred years ago. He's the one who came up with Alice in Wonderland and he's actually credited with creating a variety of new words uh throughout through his writing and poetry such as this one chortal. When somebody chuckles and snorts together, they chortal. To challe, this is a verb. Then we have this right here. Explain and man, we can blend these words together. And you have a verb that my wife actually used this word yesterday. And I would say this is a word that is new as in the last 5 10 years. It's become more common. You may hear it movies, TV shows or people talking about it. Okay. Excellent. Uh SD Angela. Uh perfect. We're talking about uh Whoops. Where'd it go? To mansplain.

So, this is when uh you explain something usually to a woman in a condescending or patronizing manner. And I mentioned that yes, my wife I I forget what we were talking about, but she kind of sarcastically made the comment, "Wow, thanks for mansplaining that to me in the the way that I was talking to her." [snorts] So, mansplain is uh yeah, it does again, it has a negative connotation because it's not uh a good thing, but excellent. Well done. Let's uh let's continue. And now I'd say maybe this makes it a little more difficult, but I think it's also easier because I've chosen words that I think are a little more common. Because now I just want you to look at the picture and tell me which word we're talking about.

I've also given you the meaning down here. So this is a meal eaten in the late morning. And I feel like this one uh is is pretty easy. I imagine most or all of you have heard of this before. Maybe you like to have this meal in the late morning. And this is uh of course there are many different pictures that I could go for, but this is just the one that I came across. And we're talking about this meal which you would call brunch, breakfast and lunch. Well done, Ava. Fala, Angela, uh, Julia, great job. So, brunch is that combination of breakfast and lunch. And I think this is something that I I don't know, in my opinion, I feel like it's becoming increasingly popular. There are restaurants that really cater to this and they're they're for brunch and that's why you would go to these places.

Nice. Well done. Uh, Lai, excellent, Zuma. Perfect. [snorts] Okay, the next one. just just look at the picture. I was going to just give you the picture and see if okay, what word do you think of, but I felt like that's probably a little too difficult. So, once again, the meaning down below. If you're having trouble seeing it, I will read it to you right now. It says the the term for viruses, spyw wear, worms, browser hijackers, etc., etc., etc. It really includes like just a variety of things and you would refer to this in general as what what Franken word would you use? Uh one I think that again with technology it's it's been around for some time but again new as in well since computers came out. Of course you can see the picture of that computer there.

Uh, well done Tana Piwa Maro. We're talking about malware. Malware is the combination of malicious software and that is a perfect example of a port mento a franken word. Malicious software we'll just call it all malware. These viruses, spyware, worms, uh, anything we could just refer to it as malware. All right, here is another one. And this is one that ah this is one I like. I think it's a fun word. So you see that drink there. Now you know we're talking about a drink, a non-alcoholic drink consisting of a mixture of fruit juices and other soft drinks. This is the meaning that I found uh online. Perhaps there are other ways to define this word. But again, this is a portmanto between two words that have been blended together to create this word which okay I think yes you guys are getting it. It's a mocktail. The combination of mock and cocktail. So the key word here es especially in the meaning would be a non-alcoholic drink because if you think of a cocktail those would be these uh drinks that have fruit juice and they would have alcohol in there some type of liquor. But this is non-alcoholic. So you could call it a mocktail like it's trying it's trying to pretend to be a cocktail but it's really not. It's a mocktail. All right. Here is another one which I think this word is very useful. I think that's a great great picture of uh yes this little boy right here. You're badteered as a result of not eating. this word, it's an adjective and you could say that well I am or he is what you have that that bad temper because you haven't eaten anything. I've changed the words a little bit because I feel like in the meaning it it was using one of those words and I told you I think this is a useful one because I think we can all relate to it and I'm sure you have heard it. the fact that you guys are really going through this one. Excellent. And I'm talking about the word, yes, hangry.

just want you to think about which word would best complete the sentence. I'm giving you the meaning down here, but then I will give you a hint in just a moment. I'll give you part of the the word combination. So I could say she was utterly. Now there are many adjectives that you could fill in this blank confused amazed like but in this case I'm s we're looking for a clear and obvious portmanto greatly astonished and amazed. Let me give you the hint to make it a little easier. One of the words is confound. So you have a word plus confound and then you get this new word which means greatly astonished or amazed and you would say someone was utterly what I think when I show you the word it's going to ring a bell and oh okay yes I've heard this word before but we're talking about a word plus the word confound found and you get what? All right, I see one answer in there. Well done, motto. We're talking about dumb plus confound, which gives us dumbfounded. If somebody's dumbfounded, they're kind of Yeah, they're astonished, speechless, amazed, like what's going on? I was utterly dumbfounded. Well done. Nice. So, now again, this is maybe a little more challenging as we go through these. The next one. [sighs] I wasn't sure how much to add, so I made a what? I wasn't sure how much to add. So I made a and I it gave you that picture thinking about I don't know maybe you're cooking something you're following a recipe you I wasn't sure so how much to add so I made a what and we're talking about a projection based on a hunch rather than data and if you're unfamiliar with the word hunch talking about if a hunch is well actually I was going to tell you I don't want to tell you I feel like that may may give it away a little bit. [snorts] So a projection based on a hunch rather than data is a what the hint that I'll give you even though I feel like you guys uh got it. So it's a word plus the word estimate. Estimate. And I was going to say and I didn't want to give it away. A hunch refers to a guess. I would say to be a little more spec specific. A hunch is kind of like the way you feel about something, just your your gut feeling. But it does mean guess. And if we add the word guess to estimate, we get guesstimate. I made a guesstimate. This is just uh you know, you make a guess based on the way you feel rather than following the instructions or the data and you make a guesstimate. Excellent.

Um where is it? Let me get some Angela. Angela uh learn uh Alexuma. Well done. Nice. So, here's another one which I think uh this is a word that's been around for some time. We're talking about the the weather. So, there is way too much m in the city. Just looking at that picture, what what port mantto could we use? There was way too much m in the city. It means hazy and polluted air. And like I said, I think this word's been around for a longer time. It's a well-known port mantto that you've probably not only know but maybe it's a part of your uh you know your active vocabulary that you pull from and talk about when you're having a conversation about the weather and you say wow there is way too much m in the city.

Excellent. Li um Manuel, we're talking about well I actually I didn't give you your hint. So smoke plus something else. Even though I see all these wonderful answers in the chat. So if we have the word smoke and then we add the word fog, we get the word smog. There's way too much smog in the city. So smog is not a good thing because there's that polluted part of that's the polluted part of this sentence that you have that smoke. It's not natural, but we combine it with the fog and then you get this smog which is it's kind of an unpleasant it's yeah it's an unpleasant environment to be in when it's you know there's a lot of smog outside. Again, my hope is that just some of these words are new and I will ask you about it in just a moment. This is a political word which I think is one that [sighs] I if you follow US politics, you will definitely hear this word more and more as we head into 2024 with the election coming up. So, if you're following American politics, this is definitely a useful word to know and try to understand just how weird our our uh election process is. So, political parties tend to engage in and I I will tell you where this word comes from because it's a little strange. it. It's talking about the manipulation of political boundaries to favor one party. I believe that this is the I think the original picture of well what was going on and then this is kind of what what came about.

So this is a port mento that is actually part of the word is the name of a person. It's the name of a person. And [sighs] I'll give you, let's see, I told you I'd give you a hint. The second part is salamander. So, we're combining the name of a person with the word salamander. And you're it's when they manipulate the boundaries to favor one party. And you could use this, it's often used as a verb and it could be used uh often as a gerand as well. But if you're reading any type of article about American politics, you may come across this word. And if this is a new one, that's that's great. I do see some correct answers in there. Um, migoon shotty.

So hottie. Nice. [snorts] We're talking about the words Jerry plus salamander gives us gerrymandering. They engage in gerrymandering or like I said, you may use it as a verb to gerrymander. So just sticking with American politics to make it a little more clear because this actually does come from American politics. Jerry is the name of um the Governor Elbridge Jerry of Massachusetts. Okay, the Elbridge Jerry. Most Americans aren't going to know who this person is. I I don't really even know either. It's just from looking this up when uh talking about this word. I knew it was a port manto and that there was a person uh the name Jerry. But this is was a governor of Massachusetts a long time ago. I think over a hundred years ago and what they do is they will take some of the boundaries within the state and they change them so that it's going to favor a party. So for example within the state a state will get um based on the population they will get a number of representatives in Congress. So a state like California will have uh many members of Cong Congress representing the state much more than a smaller state like Massachusetts that has a smaller population. But it's still important because each party wants to have more, you know, congressmen, congresswomen representing their political party. So to give you an example, in California, which is mostly Democrats, they may gerrymander and try to draw the districts in a way that they're going to get more Congress people who are Democrats. And Republicans do the same thing. They're doing it in North Carolina, Florida. Uh it's it's happening all over the country. And you may come across this word to gerrymander or gerrymandering.

[snorts] So, if you follow American politics, it's good word to know. Here are the words that uh I quizzed you on and that we went through. Again, my my hope is that you learned one, two, three new words. And of course, I really want to know how you did on the quiz. You can let me know in the comments or let me put this down. I am going to put a poll in there right now. I always like to do this and just so I get a feel for how you did on the quiz. How How did you do on the quiz? All right. Whoops. And I will give you the choices because I like to make them a little more fun.

Rocked it. Let's see. And 100. Um, let's do pretty well. Add another option. Not too bad. Not Not good. And then I'll just add oh boy with a sad emoji. [snorts] Okay. So, there are your choices to so I can get a better idea as to whether or not this was well, was it too easy? Was it too difficult? Again, my goal is not to overwhelm you with new words and phrases, but hopefully, you know, given my fe like my feeling as to uh the audience and the knowledge that people have, I think most people are definitely more intermediate, upper intermediate, advanced, or even highly proficient. I imagine you knew many of these words, which is great. That is the goal is to kind of try to remind you of them because again these are words that you may not use all the time, but they are useful if you're having a conversation and you're using talking about computers and that you have some malware that you need to remove or you're talking about that you feel uh you're a little hangry right now and you need to eat or you're going to make a guesstimate or again if you're talking about politics and you want to talk about the word gerrymandering as Well, and of course there are many many many others. I gave you those examples at the beginning like metaverse, romcom, friendnemy, and even many of you were writing other port mentos in the chat, which is perfect. So, let's see. It seems like uh everybody did pretty well, which again, that's kind of what I'm going for because that tells me that probably you learned at least one, two, three new words. I really appreciate you being here with me today, participating in this quiz, which is what it's all about. If you enjoyed the lesson, of course, I would really appreciate it if you hit that like button or write to me in the comments because I love hearing from you. But thank you so much for watching, being here. Uh, and just quick thank you. Good to see you, Li. Always good to see members. Uh, Suma, nice to see you. Manuel, Angela, Ava, Miguel, Gia. Again, sorry if I mispronounced names. Snowflakes Wonderland. Nice. Hope you have a wonderful day and I will see you in the very near future. I need to get something to eat because I'm getting I'm

FUN vs FUNNY | Confusing Words in English

Today, I'm going to talk to you about two English words that learners commonly confuse. These are the words fun and funny. So stick around because we're about to have some fun. Welcome to today's lesson, which is kind of a vocabulary and grammar lesson because I'm going to talk to you about these two words right here, and tell you how they are different and how to use them. But before we begin, I want to remind you to join our social media classes because you will learn new things and have fun. So the words fun and funny are commonly confused. Mostly, I think because they look very similar apart from two letters.

But it is very important that we know the difference between them. So let's begin with fun because I think this is... well, it's just more fun to start with that word. And I think is more commonly used. So first we need to know what the word means. And fun means enjoying something. Maybe you're enjoying it because it is amusing...maybe because it is entertaining. But if you are enjoying something, then you are having fun. So fun can be either an adjective or a noun. As an adjective, it's going to describe a noun. Maybe we're talking about a fun time, or a fun party, or a fun English lesson like this one.

So for example, we could use it in the following sentences. We had a fun time last night. Why? Because we went to a fun party. What were we doing at the fun party? We were watching a fun English lesson. I'm sure that's what you do at your parties, right? Yea, I didn't think so. More often, fun is used as a non-count noun, and we can use it with the verb (to be). Would you like some examples? Yea, I think you do. Here are some examples. It's also used with the verb (to have), as in "have fun." For example... There are also some common phrases that we use with this word, such as "for fun," which is talking about an activity or something you do for enjoyment.

So for example, you could ask someone "What do you do for fun?" What do you do for fun? You can also make fun of someone or something. This means to joke with someone or something, usually in a way that's not very nice. Oh, I know. It's fine. I look ridiculous in those pink gloves. But it's okay. I can make fun of myself and I can laugh at it because it's funny. You like what I did there with the transition from one word to the next? Yea. Okay. Never mind. So funny is an adjective that means causing laughter.

Now, it could be a situation that is causing laughter. But the key word here is laughter. Funny = Laughter. So here are some common things that people might describe as funny. Jokes are funny. Movies can be funny. Animals are definitely funny. See this cat wearing a handkerchief. How about this bird landing on a seal. And then there's this cute little dog climbing into a refrigerator. So as you can see, the main difference between fun and funny is that they have two completely different meanings. So, when you think of fun think of enjoyment. When you think of funny, think of laughter. That's going to help you so that you use these words correctly.

So now that you have a better understanding about the difference between fun and funny, let's practice using them. In the comments below, I want you to answer one of the following questions. Where are they? Where are the questions? There they are. Tell us... When you answer these questions, I want you to write the words fun and funny, and make sure you practice using them. And if you want to be a super-duper awesome student, Answer both questions, and use both of the words. Be creative. Write these nice long sentences. And most importantly have fun.

Finally, please give this video a thumbs up if you feel like you've learned something new. And check out some of our other video lessons, so you can continue practicing and improving your English skills. I promise you. It'll be fun. Thanks for watching, and we will see you next time.

Fall Idioms to Help Build Your Vocabulary

Today, I want to talk to you about some fall idioms that you can use in everyday conversation. Hey everyone. My name is Wes. This is interactive English, which is where you want to be to practice and improve your English skills. And today since it is fall I wanted to talk to you about some common idioms and expressions that you can use in everyday conversation and this will really help improve your, your comprehension and overall English fluency. So the first idiom that I want to talk to you about is to turn over a new leaf and this just means to start fresh. To start new. You really want to to change your attitude or your circumstances.

So for example, maybe somebody might lose their job and they say, okay, I need to turn over a new leaf. I need to start fresh and I need to change these circumstances. I need to start looking for another job, start anew, start fresh. Maybe a road trip is exactly what I need right now. I'm turning over a new leaf. Starting tomorrow, I am turning over a new leaf. Time with you is my number one priority. I'm turning over a new leaf and my good luck starts now.

The next idiom is the autumn years and well, autumn is another word for fall and if somebody is referring to the autumn years, they're talking about the later point in someone's life. They would refer to it as the autumn years. When somebody gets older and yes, this, this is not your autumn years, it's our little girl Emmy. She is just a little baby, but when you're talking about later on in somebody's life, you may hear, you may hear them refer to it and say the autumn years. You're getting a little philosophical for me. I suppose so. They say it happens in the autumn years. I make teach. I may write a book whenever the hell one does, when one approaches autumn of one years.

Then we have the idiom to drive someone nuts and this is relevant. I think of fall. I often think of nuts. You can find them on the ground and nuts is also an informal word, a kind of slang. That means the same as crazy. So if you drive someone nuts, it just means that you are making them crazy. Perhaps a person could be driving you nuts or maybe a situation is just driving you nuts. It's making you crazy. Hey, I'm not go ing to mince words Mitchell. You're kid is driving me nuts. You better thank your lucky stars. I'm not in this competition because I would eat you from breakfast.

Your'e driving me nuts. Babe, your mother drives you nuts. Then we have one of my favorite idioms cause I like, I like using it from time to time when especially when I feel sick and that idiom is under the weather and you say that somebody maybe feels a little bit under the weather and what it means is that person is kind of starting to feel a little sick so it's not like they're really sick. It's just maybe they're a little sick or they're starting to feel sick and say, yeah, I'm feeling, I'm feeling a little bit under the weather right now. Yeah...heard you were under the weather. Oh, I didn't think I was going to get to see you until tomorrow.

Yeah. Well, Bernadette is a little under the weather. Anubis, you sound unwell. Well, I've been feeling a little under the weather, but I'm feeling much better now. Next is neck of the woods. And if you hear somebody talking about like, Oh, for example, what are you doing in my neck of the woods? They're talking about a particular area or maybe even a particular neighborhood. So that's what it means, neck of the woods. And oftentimes yet people might ask a question like I just did. And they say, Hey, you know, you see somebody in your neighborhood and you say, Hey, what? What are you doing in my neck of the woods?

Or perhaps in the office that you work at, somebody in another department comes and visits you in your department and you'd say, yeah, what are you doing in my neck of the woods? What are you doing in, in this particular area? So what brings you to my neck of the woods? Just a few errands, I'm going to be in your neck of the woods soon. And, um, it would be very nice to see you. Well, if you ever get down to my neck of the woods, you got a place to stay.

Another idiom with woods is not out of the woods because when I think of the fall, I often think of the woods and if you say that you are not out of the woods, it just means that you are not out of danger. So out of the woods is talking about out of danger. And I think most of the time you hear it with the word not. Somebody is trying to say that they are not safe. They are still in a dangerous area. They are not out of the woods just yet. I think you might hear this in like TV shows and movies. If somebody is being chased by another person or a group of people and they, they haven't lost that group, they're still being chased. They say, you know, We're not, we're not in the woods just yet. We need to keep running.

I'm setting your chair, dearie. You're shaking like a leaf. He's going to be on muscle. Muscle? He's shaking like a leaf. How's he gonna do anything? He wanted to talk about his father's symptoms. He Skyped and there he was shaking like a leaf. Then we have to get wind of something and if you get wind of something, it just means that you hear some rumor about something. It could be a rumor about something or a rumor about someone and you get wind. Of this information, you learn about it, you hear about it, you could say, yeah, you know I got, I got wind of that, I heard about that rumor or I heard that piece of information to get wind of something.

Thought the publicity would really helps ZipCouch. Once the press gets wind of this. Bolivians get wind of this. You know what they're to say. They're going to say you wear pissy pants. If the pervert community gets wind of morning jogging, Oh God, help us. Then we have the Apple of someone's eye. And if, if you're talking about the Apple of someone's eye, it just refers to a person who is love the most by someone else. So for, for example, yes, I could say that that Emmy right here, you are the Apple of my eye. That yes, she is loved the most by me. She is the Apple of my eye.

Um, as well as you want to send things, the Harpo, they are the apples of my eyes. So if you described someone as the Apple of your eye, it just means that they are loved the most by you. What are you doing? She wants to get a kiss. Aw, look who it is, my husband, the apple of my eye. Hello. Oh apple of my eye. Love of my life. I mean his household was a joyous place. And his wife Dolly, well she was the apple of his eye. Then we have the idiom cold turkey. And you just got to include this because turkey...Thanksgiving...it is a very, very popular word around around fall. So if somebody, you might talk about quitting cold Turkey and what that means cold Turkey is that somebody stops a bad habit immediately and, and maybe suddenly as well.

And you would quit something cold Turkey often I think of smokers. Somebody is a smoker. They've been smoking for years and then they just suddenly quit. They would say I quit cold turkey. So any kind of bad habit that somebody might have, whether it's smoking or drinking, and then they suddenly stop, you could say that they quit cold turkey. So no, it's not your fault. It's partly my fault because I made you quit cold turkey. You're right Lisa. Love isn't about fixing someone. I'm just going to give her up cold turkey. You need to prove to Tara that you can be trusted. I'm cold turkey Jacks. No booze, no weed. I'm serious.

The world just can't quit on oil and nuclear power cold turkey. You'll dismantle our entire economy overnight. So there you have it. Those are some great idioms that you can use in everyday conversation. They are all related to the fall, but you can use them in a variety of different situations and context. If you enjoyed this lesson and you've learned something new, please hit that like button down below. And as always, thank you so much for watching and I'll see you next time. Bye bye. Say bye bye.

Famous Movie Quotes that Americans LOVE to Use

famous movie quotes so this is going to be more of a cultural lesson a casual fun lesson which is why i have not shaved i'm rocking the stubble right now but i want to teach you some very famous movie quotes that americans love to use and these are quotes that have become very popular over the years that they will be referenced in other movies and tv shows and people may even use them in just general conversation if it's the appropriate context so i will talk to you a little bit about that let's begin with our first quote which is show me the money show me the money and this is a quote from the movie jerry maguire it is a famous football movie american football movie from 1996 and he says show me the money meaning like how much will i be paid am i going to get paid for this and how much you need to show me the money you had me at hello this is another famous quote from the same movie jerry maguire and she says it to tom cruise the main character at the end of the movie he comes in and says hello and then starts talking about why he loves her and then eventually she says hey just stop you had me at hello meaning you don't need to say all of those things as soon as you came in here and said hello then yes i i want to be with you you had me at hello you had me at hello so the interesting thing about this quote is that people you can get a little creative with it so if somebody's talking about something and then they're trying to sell you on it uh something or some idea you could stop them and say hey you know you don't have to say anymore you had me at excuse me everyone sex now that i have your attention you don't have our attention money i'm listening you had me at sex and i must warn you this is no ordinary habit it's webbing it's a mesh of comfort and you had me at comfort a lot of times i i ask you guys please subscribe to the channel and i hope that you might be thinking like wes you don't need to say anymore you had me at subscribe okay you're gonna go ahead subscribe turn on notifications so that i can become your teacher my name is wes the channel is interactive english and that's what it's all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills the next quote that i have for you is a very famous one it's from an older movie and that is here's looking at you kid this quote is from a movie classic casablanca and this is humphrey bogart's line he says here's looking at you kid meaning like i'll never forget you and he actually says it uh quite a few times throughout the film is looking at you kid he's looking at you kid he's looking at you kid

then we have fasten your seatbelts it's going to be a bumpy night and this quote is originally from the movie all about eve from 1950. fasten your seatbelts it's going to be a bumpy night and what's really curious about this is that the quote it's often misquoted and instead of saying night people will say ride fasten your seat belts it's going to be a bumpy ride and what they're referring to is ride like could be you're getting into a car or even using ride talking about like a situation that you have to endure and it's going to be difficult and somebody could say fasten your seat belts it's going to be a bumpy ride fasten your seatbelt it's going to be a bumpy ride fasten your seatbelt it's going to be a bumpy ride why so serious i really can't do a good job uh definitely not as good as heath ledger did turns to me and he says why so serious it was an amazing performance uh in the movie the dark knight when he played that role of the joker uh an incredible actor and i think he did such a wonderful job like really getting into that character that people really remember that line it was a little disturbing a little creepy yeah why so serious and then there's this quote let's see if you recognize it all right all right all right all right this is trying to do my southern accent a little bit so this quote comes from the movie dazed and confused i love this movie the movie came out in 1993 but it's about high school kids in the 70s and matthew mcconaughey very famous actor is the one who says this line all right all right all right and even though he's been in so many different movies this this quote is probably what he's most famous for this is what people remember him saying all right all right all right whatever it is we look up to whatever it is we look forward to and whoever it is we're chasing to that i say amen to that i say all right all right all right and then we have just keep swimming all right and i say it like that with that that fist pump because it means never give up you have to keep going just keep swimming this quote comes from the film finding nemo uh came out in 2003 and it's about a clownfish who is searching for his lost son nemo and he has to keep looking just keep swimming i don't wanna know what you gotta do just keep swimming just keep swimming just keep swimming swimming swimming and this is actually one of the most famous movie quotes of the 21st century because i it has that that really important message never give up just keep swimming just keep swimming you're doing great are you not entertained i'm trying to to imitate russell crowe are you not entertained it's from the movie gladiator it came out in the year 2000 and he says this uh are you not entertained like trying to shame the audience because this film gladiator it's loosely based on true events that happen within the roman empire and he he would fight for the audience's entertainment and he's a little he's a little upset when he says this are you not entertained are you not entertained and to follow up on that one way i think this lesson it can be useful if you want to practice and say these quotes in the exact same way shadowing i think can really help your speaking fluency because you're trying to say it in the exact same way same speed same intonation same emphasis and really capture that rhythm and flow and i think shadowing can be very useful and with these movie quotes it can be a lot of fun as well here's a good quote if you want to practice shadowing and say it my precious you have to say it like that my precious this quote is from the movie lord of the rings and the first movie it's a trilogy came out in 2001 and it was actually it's actually based on the the fantasy books by jrr tolkien

but the movies brought the story to life in a new and unique way and people really remember this quote my precious [Applause] and it's become so popular that it's often referenced in other movies and tv shows my precious my awesome cool movie precious here is another famous quote from lord of the rings you shall not pass again i'm trying to say it in the same way but i probably don't sound exactly like gandalf shall not pass and once again i i don't know what it is about lord of the rings but this is another quote that is often referenced in other movies and tv shows you shall not pass you shall not pass you ain't heard nothing yet this is the popular catchphrase from the 1927 musical drama the jazz singer wait a minute wait a minute you ain't heard nothing yet wait a minute said it you ain't heard nothing and over the years it kind of changed a little bit and i think more commonly today people will say you ain't seen nothing yet and this actually comes from the 1970

song by bachmann turner overdrive that's the title of the song you ain't seen nothing yet i think if people are going to say one of these they they will use scene you ain't seen nothing yet it means however impressive something may seem it's going to be overshadowed by what will come so i could say like wow you you think these video lessons are impressive and amazing well you ain't seen nothing yet just wait for what is to come that's another reason why you should subscribe i'll have what she's having this is a quote from the movie when harry met sally from 1989 and well to give you some context the the two main characters are sitting in the restaurant uh meg ryan and billy crystal and she's pretending to to fake an orgasm oh god oh and then some other person in the restaurant it's not even a main character says i'll have what she's having as though it's the food at the restaurant or the meal that's making her feel this way i'll have what she's having and and even though this quote is said by like some real secondary character it's become so popular and it's still referenced in movies and tv shows today um i'll have what she's having

i love what she's having i'll have what she's having if you build it he will come all right and i say it like this because it's really like a voice that the main character is hearing in the movie field of dreams which is also from 1989 so kevin costner he hears this voice it's a great example of the first conditional that you have this condition if you build it and then the result in the future he will come and spoiler it's talking about building a baseball field and then the players will come like maybe your father will return all right sorry if i spoiled it for you the movie it's it's it's old you've had plenty of time to watch it if you build it he will come all right that's it hopefully you have learned some new quotes that you can now listen for if you're watching a tv show or movie i told you these quotes are so popular they will be referenced from time to time now what i'd like you to do because i love hearing from you write to me in the comments and tell me what is your favorite movie quote in english and and what movie is it from i'd love to hear from you if you write it he will come all right i can you can even change these quotes and have a little fun with them all right if you write it then yes i will come back in the future with a new video lesson all right thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Favorite Words of the Holiday Season | Year in Review

hello what's up everyone thank you for joining me this is our last live lesson of the year so I wanted to do things a little different today and just talk to you and just kind of have more of an informal chat conversation and talk to you about some vocabulary words words you may know or words you may not know but first if you are joining us please let me know I want you to say hi in the chat where are you from let me give a quick a little shout out to lolly as a you Alyssa Ahmed thanks for joining us Bella Jana Omar Giselle sorry if i mispronounce names that's that's just part of it just hello hello hello welcome you guys it's me thanks for joining me today on this special it's a special time of year and that kind of has to do with what we're talking about today because I'm going to teach you some of my favorite these are just my personal favorite favorite holiday vocabulary these are words that when it gets time this time of year around Christmas time New Year's the year is coming to an end these are just words that come to my mind so these are not words specific holiday words that you are going to use around the holidays these are just words again that that I think of I I feel like I these words come up in my mind so I want to talk to you about those words today and share those with you and as we're doing this always practice practice practice I want you guys to try try to use these words in a sentence I have some questions for you to help you practice using them so write these write the sentences in the chat and even if you're watching this later we want to interact with you guys write these questions right right some of these answers in the comments practice using these words please please please that's what interactive English is all about so let's just let's get into it the first word that I want to talk to you about and I want to share with you is a good one some of you might think it's a little cheesy but it's this one right here this adjectives sentimental so at the end of the year I always get a bit sentimental we you can use it and say that something is sentimental a common way that we use this word is saying that something has sentimental value it's important to you so if something has sentimental value it doesn't mean that it's very expensive and you say oh I got this new iPhone it has sentimental value no no no no no something that has sentimental value again it's personal it's important to you because it produces emotions such as happiness love sadness it could be any emotion but but it's something that you would say has sentimental value so right now let's practice using this tell me something that has sentimental value to you all right what's something that has sentimental value to you write it in the chat write it in the comments and just tell me blah blah blah blah has sentimental value now the reason I like this word at the end of the year when when you have the holidays and Christmas and New Year's you know I kind of get you get a bit sentimental you it brings about all of these emotions whether they are happy emotions because you're with family or maybe they're just sad emotions because the year is ending and you are maybe a little worried about the future so people tend to get a bit sentimental around the holidays and they're just thinking of those things so again as you guys write this stuff I'll share some of these sentences with you throw for example um tuba excellent great sentence my diary has sentimental value to me that is a perfect example because it's your diary it's something that you wrote it is important to you perfect learning English is sentimental I guess it could be sentimental it could produce some emotions but again think of things that are important to you that maybe somebody else might not care about something that you have for example like a picture pictures are often they have sentimental value because I look at old pictures and they're there they're meaningful to me and you would say it has sentimental value so something that is important to you and it's usually an object so like you listen my son has sentimental value sure I wouldn't really use it with a person it's more so some kind of objects something that that produces these emotions when you have it like a photo a diary a book maybe an old t-shirt like this is actually this is one thing that I always have this this shirt is probably about 10 years old and you wanna always tells me you need to get rid of these clothes but they have sentimental value to me they remind me of things in my past and and it's sentimental so that's the first word that I wanted to share with you around the holidays next one alright this is another one that I think describes my personality a little bit optimistic it's another adjective and if somebody is optimistic it's a great word that you can use to describe another person you could even describe yourself this way if you are somebody who is optimistic and when you went when you are optimistic it means that you are taking a favorable view of events that will happen in the future or that you're just expecting a positive outcome and you would say yes I am optimistic about the future or you are optimistic about some event you just think that there are good things that are going to happen so my question to you again write it in the chat write it in the comments because I just want to hear from you guys is this alright what are you optimistic about in 2019 so give me a sentence and tell me something you are optimistic about and notice that preposition that follows the adjectives you are optimistic about something all right something that's going to happen in 2019 you are optimistic about it you have a favorable view of this thing all right life is good you are very optimistic about it give me give me uh give me a sentence all right so Mart says I'm optimistic about 2019 I am also optimistic about 2019 it's going to be a great year our daughter is on although on the way she is going to be born in 2019 we have a lot of great things happening with interactive English we are very optimistic about this year and the reason I chose this word again it's not like oh this is a specific holiday word this is just a word that once you get to the end of the year you start thinking about the past and you're also thinking about the future you're thinking about all the things that are going to happen in the next year and you realize wow this year is already finished and it's good to be optimistic so okay

yes excellent sentence I'm optimistic about the Erasmus exam I think that you are going to rock that exam Adi I'm always optimistic to become general manager yes it's good to be optimistic you will become general manager perfect I'm optimistic about playing an instrument if it's something you want to learn that you are going to improve and get better you are optimistic I am optimistic that you guys are going to continue studying with us and learning with us here at interactive English so optimistic just just be positive stay positive be optimistic now one of my favorite expressions when when thinking about the holidays especially this time it's the end of the year all right this is an expression that you're probably you may be familiar with there might be a similar expression in your native language and that is just time flies when you think about the year is getting ready to change and you think oh my goodness what happened the year just started and then suddenly it's over and you think time flies so it just is to express that time passes quickly that suddenly boom it's gone often you might hear it when talking about a vacation you go on vacation you're excited for it and then suddenly it's over and you have to go back to work and you say you know time flies it's often used as a standalone expression and you just say you know time flies it doesn't have to be used with any other words or phrases my parents were just out here visiting and we had ten days with my family and then they left two days ago and I remember well just before they left we were talking about it and we we said this expression we said yeah you know time flies it just it just keeps going by it doesn't stop time flies so this is a great expression to use when you're having a conversation with somebody and you're talking about a certain situation and you can just throw that out there that time flies it goes fast and yes it doesn't stop so yes Juan Carlos I'm 25 years old the time flies suddenly yes you're 24 it's like me each year that I turn one year older it's like oh my goodness time flies I remember when I used to be 24 that was oh man that was 16 years ago I'm not gonna do the math tell you how old I am you guys can figure that out so the next word that this is a good word especially for Christmas all right but you can use it outside of Christmas as well it's a noun and that is Grinch okay so you could say someone is a Grinch and you can use it around Christmas time but you could use it any time of year if there's an event or a party going on and there's a person who spoils or dampens the pleasure and happiness of others they just ruin the party they ruin the experience they bring the happiness level from here down to here and you say yeah that person they're just a Grinch they're not fun to be around and if you're wondering you're like well who is this guy right here the Grinch is a famous character from dr. Seuss there's a book about it you guys should check it out dr. Seuss those those are some great stories great books to read so again the reason I chose this one is because you want to told this to me a few days ago she loves watching Christmas movies to be honest I'm not a huge fan I'm not big into the Christmas movies and whenever were like oh let's watch a movie and she's like how about a Christmas movie oh my okay let's let's let's think of something else and she says oh you're such a Grinch you're always a Grinch that I don't want to watch a Christmas movie and have that experience and I'm bringing the happiness level down so this is a great word grid noun to use a Grinch all right Brian says yes my boss is a

Grinch great example sure if your bruss brings to home that happiness of others then yes he is a Grinch but two of my younger brother is a Grinch is a pain in the neck that's another great expression pain in the neck great job excellent yes life is short let's be optimistic it's true time flies life is short be optimistic that's a great message so I just wanted to give you guys another quick reminder that if you like what we do check us out on patreon we have some cool rewards will leave a link in the description it is another great way to connect with us and support what we try to do these lessons that we make for you guys here at interactive English and we're just gonna keep making these lessons as we roll on into 2019 we got a lot of stuff like I said I'm very very very optimistic about this next year

there's just so much going on this is another expression that I think you'll understand just by the meaning and maybe hopefully you can go on and use it and say that something you know talking about an experience and you say you know it's an emotional roller coaster that is how you use it with that statement you're having a conversation you're talking about an event you're talking about an experience and you would describe it and say it's an emotional roller coaster around the holidays this is what I think of a holidays because it's not always fun it's not always relaxing it can be to me it can be an emotional roller coaster again like I said these are my favorite words these are personal to me and when something is an emotional rollercoaster it's a situation where you alternate between feeling happy feeling excited to you know feeling sad or disappointed or lonely it's an emotional roller coaster you're going you have the highs and then you have the lows and you just keep going up and down and up and down and I think for a lot of people that's how the holidays work it can be an emotional roller coaster that you're happy about some things you're sad about other things and you experience a wide range of emotions and you could just say you know it's an emotional roller coaster so this is a good expression all right another word that I think of when I think of the holidays is this one and it's not you know you think of it as like a miracle all right something that happens like the holidays are here the new year is coming and you think about all the great things that are gonna happen and it's like yes it's what's something that might be a miracle it's great it's a lucky thing that happens that you did not expect or think was possible another reason I'm telling you about this word is because I've been talking about this with some students we were reading a book the miraculous journey of Edward Tulane which is a good book if you're interested it's a quick read the miraculous journey of Edward Tulane and that is how you're using it as an adjective something is miraculous so if something is miraculous as an adjective as a noun something is a miracle now what I want you to do is complete this sentence all right if you're thinking about this year and you're trying to be optimistic okay what would you say how would you complete this sentence it would be a miracle if what what would happen this next year that would be a miracle it would be great you're being optimistic what is something that you would really want to happen but you know it's not likely to happen you'd say yes it'd be a miracle if this thing happened all right so yeah Kikki a great example sentence yeah meeting my boyfriend is a miracle maybe think yes it's a miracle I met the person who I was meant to be with and depending on how you met you could say oh it was a miracle all right ruse car that's a great use of the adjective her recovery was miraculous so yeah again if you're talking about somebody who is sick and they got better and they say well it was a miracle or it was miraculous as an adjective perfect all right Haram yes exactly great that's so true life itself is a miracle all right we're getting ready to have our baby girl and just thinking about that again that's another reason I put this word in here because of the things that are going on in my life getting ready to have a daughter and thinking about how you know how my life is going to change and just how life in general yes it is a miracle all right um so it would be a miracle if I traveled to the u.s. excellent even though I really hope I hope it does become possible and that you get to travel to the u.s. it would be a miracle if I spoke speak English all right just just keep practicing keep watching keep commenting and that miracle will become true we're gonna help you guys get there another word around this time that I think of is you know even if you don't drink it's fine like it's a noun champagne all right and the reason I chose this one is because when you're talking about New Year's Christmas any big event any event where you're celebrating something this is a drink that you might hear champagne it is French sparkling white wine one with bubbles that is drunk on special occasions and the reason it's important because again even if you don't drink you might watch movies you might be watching TV where there's an event going on some kind of social gathering and you will hear this word they'll talk about they're serving champagne at this event because this is a drink that people use when they drink it when they're celebrating something and oftentimes again around the New Year celebrating New Year's people might drink champagne but again I wanted to choose it's a French word because the pronunciation does not line up with the spelling so the way it's spelled is not the way it's pronounced again it's because it is a French word and you would pronounce it even in English champagne champagne alright so if you guys are celebrating maybe maybe you might drink some champagne or you know honestly I don't I'm not a fan of champagne I don't I don't really like it and slang people could call it the bubbly alright because it has bubbles people might informally call it bubbly alright so let's look at another expression alright this is again thinking of my life just showing you guys everything that's going on how I would describe the end of the year and you could this is a great expression not just for the holidays not just for the end of the year but any time in your life where you just think there is just so much going on you could say there is a whirlwind of activity alright you know it was just a whirlwind of an act of activity it's a great way to describe a situation in which you experience a lot of different emotions because a lot of things are happening so I would use it right now and say you know lately a you know everything it's just been a whirlwind of activity that's how I would describe it to you guys because we are celebrating the holidays with family because we just moved into a new apartment because we have a lot of doctor's appointments because we're preparing for the baby and because we're trying to work and do these lessons and teach English it's just a whirlwind of activity that's happening right now but this is a great expression not only to describe the holidays but to describe any period or time in your life any situation where you just have a lot of different things going on and you could say it's a whirlwind of activity and there's that world went down there to give you that visual reference all right so let's look at the next one and this one I do I'm gonna have another question for you because when we're talking about the New Year people also talk about this word resolution it's a noun and you can either you you make a resolution is the verb that it's commonly used with and when you make a resolution you are making a firm decision to do or not to do something often you might find it with people talk about New Year's resolutions all right what are your new year's resolutions would be a list of things the a list of decisions that you plan to do or some things you plan not to do during this year so my question to you which I want you guys to write in the chat or even in the comments if you're watching this later we always want you to practice practice using these words is what's one of your new year's resolutions for 2019 again it can be general it can also be specific it just depends alright these are some things like the resolutions what what decision are you trying to make for this next year thinking okay I am going to do this or maybe you think you know I am NOT going to do this for example one of my new year's resolutions is I want to I want to get outside more I want to exercise specifically though I want I need to do more stretching I really need to make that a part of my everyday life is not just exercise but definitely stretching maybe even do some more yoga and and learn yoga because it's something I've I've always been interested in but I haven't really tried it out yet and I have some back problems I think it will help so this is one of my resolutions all right I want to do some more stretching do some more exercise and make that a part of my life so whatever what's what are some of your resolutions what's one thing that you want to do for this next year it can be something you want to learn it can be a place that you want to go it can be just anything you want to accomplish and do and whoops let me this is where I wanted to go back here because show you that picture again 2019 new year's resolutions and people would just write things down all right the decisions they want to do and the things that they don't want to do let me look at some of your examples alright so Holly I never keep resolutions yeah you know a lot of people don't do them because I think what happens is when we when we look back on the year and we get all sentimental and you think oh maybe makes you sad you're like I did it I did not do these resolutions and then you can try to be optimistic for your future resolutions one of my new year's resolutions is that I want to read more and more that is a great New Year's resolution I hope you're talking about reading in English because that is a great way to practice and improve your skills hey West Fabio from Brazil what's up Fabio resolutions resolution is to lose weight sure my resolution is to walk more excellent that's a good one you Lissa Henry hits the gym yes I know what you mean I think many people have that resolutions they want to exercise they want to be healthier one of my users Resta is to crack one of those tough examen all right yeah maybe your new year's resolution is to pass an exam if you're still studying or you're in school excellent all right working harder than today is one of my new year's resolutions excellent shot perfect all right thank you guys for sharing with me this it's a good one so when you think talk about New Year's you might hear this if you're watching a TV show and this is what's happening or a movie around this they might mention New Year's resolutions things decisions that you plan to do now that the now it's a new year and and what you plan and what you want from this new year so another word that I want to talk to you about is it's a little similar to sentimental but not really it's an adjective nostalgic alright so the pronunciation it is nostalgic and it's having or bringing a feeling of you know sadness mixed with pleasure when you think about the past so when you again I I use this because every time at the end of the year I always get nostalgic and it's often used with that verb as well you get nostalgic and the reason you get nostalgic around this time is because it's the end of the year and I always kind of I start thinking back about at the beginning of the year I always start at the beginning of the year and I think about the different things that have happened throughout the year the good things and the bad things which is why it's a mix it's a mix of sadness it's a mix of pleasure because usually throughout the year the year can be an emotional roller coaster you're going up you're going down so towards the end of the year or when something is getting ready to end you always get nostalgic for example maybe you are changing jobs and you worked at some place for 10 years you might get nostalgic at the end because you're thinking about all the experiences you've had there or maybe you've lived in a country for one or two years and it's been an incredible experience and before you get before you leave you might get nostalgic and start thinking about the past and the different experiences that you've had so this is a great word again it's just one of my favorites around this time period once it gets to the end of the year around the holidays I always tend to get nostalgic alright that's that's just me so these are just some of my personal favorite words around the holidays around this time around Christmas and New Year's I always just start thinking about these words so hopefully you learn some new words today and that you can go on and try and use them because again they're they're pretty Universal it's not just holiday specific if you're talking about being optimistic all right you can use that anytime life again is an emotional roller coaster and you can talk about things that are important to you and say it has sentimental value so these are words that you can use in many different context in many different situations so thank you guys so much for joining me today for our last live lesson of the year we will have more coming at you next year please if you enjoyed this lesson like and share it hit that like button lets us know that we're doing a good job that you guys enjoy what we're doing and that you are learning new things always please also write questions in the comments we love hearing from you guys and you can join us if you want to follow us more join us on social media right up here we're on Facebook Twitter Instagram and of course right here on YouTube and be sure to check out our patreon link in the description if you want to connect with us there there are some cool rewards so thank you guys so much Molly Fabio IQ okie honest and kita i met olivia i'm just trying to go through these learn english with songs yoursself shot a tuba pretty on shoe Aleman thank you thank you thank you M's avala it's so great to be here with all of you guys we got so much more planned for this next year I am so optimistic and I hope you are too thank you guys so much for joining me and I will see you next time so long

Fine-Tune Your Pronunciation - 25 Advanced Words with Silent Letters

let's talk about some silent letters that you will not pronounce when you say these advanced words [Music] hey everyone my name is wes from interactiveenglishvideos.com and the channel it's all about helping you practice and improve your english and today i it's a pronunciation lesson but also a little bit of vocabulary because i want to talk to you about 25 words and i think these are more advanced words and i want to teach you how to pronounce them and all of them have a silent letter so in this lesson we are going to look at words that have silent letters at the beginning in the middle as well as at the end and i am going to show you both the phonetic spelling as well as the ipa so that you can see the pronunciation and i will also put the meaning of the word up there in case you want to build your vocabulary and the word is new for you i'm going to say the word twice so you can hear my pronunciation and feel free to repeat after me and actually practice your pronunciation so let's begin with the letter w because well my name's wes let's just let's just start with the letter w and often w may be a silent letter at the beginning of a word especially when it's followed by the letter r that w r combination for example we have the word wrangle wrangle to wrangle sometimes if i put on a little weight i may wrangle with my belt then we have wrench wrench if you have tools in your home there's a good possibility that you have a wrench and then there's the word wretched this is an adjective wretched keep in mind this word has two syllables because that e d at the end is the second syllable that id wretched now let's look at the silent k which is another letter that will often be silent at the beginning of a word especially when it's followed by the letter n so let's look at these three words the first one is knuckle knuckle right here your knuckles then we have the word not not same as like you're you're saying the negative in this case though we're talking about a noun and you may hear it being used with the verb tie to tie a knot then we have the word need need this is a verb to need especially if you want to talk about clay or dough to need dough now let's look at a couple of words that begin with a silent p and both of these words have three syllables so the first one is pneumonia pneumonia that stress is on that second syllable pneumonia then we have pseudonym pseudonym the stress is on the first syllable this time pseudonym and sometimes yeah if people write books instead of using their real name they will use a pseudonym okay now let's let's move to the middle of uh the word and let's begin with uh the letter c because often you may find words that have a silent c in the middle of the word especially when it comes after the letter s so all of these words you're going to see that s c combination so let's begin with crescent crescent it's a shape i often i think of the moon when i hear the word crescent next is fluorescent fluorescent stress is on that second syllable fluorescent if you work in an office chances are those may be fluorescent lights next is the word obscene obscene stress is on that second syllable obscene then we have resuscitate resuscitate stress is on that second syllable and this is a four syllable word resuscitate and if you well for example if you give someone mouth to mouth you are trying to resuscitate this person let's move on to the letter t a silent t that you will find in the middle of some words now i'm gonna go over four words all of them have two syllables and the stress is on the first syllable so let's begin with mortgage mortgage if you think if you are thinking about buying a home this is a word that that you will probably need to know mortgage next is nestle nestle to nestle cuddle close together sometimes people animals they like to nestle then we have hasten hasten this is a verb to hasten and finally we have moisten moisten it's another verb if you have a cloth or a napkin and you want to get it wet then you may moisten the cloth or moisten the paper towel now let's talk about some words that have a silent letter at the end and i'm talking about the letter b and often this this letter will be silent when it comes after the letter m that

mb combination so let's start with this first word which is catacomb catacomb three syllables stresses on the first syllable catacomb when i travel to to paris france i visited the catacombs next is the word crumb crumb when i eat cookies sometimes i might get some crumbs on my shirt all right then we have limb limb i hope that you never break any of your limbs stay safe and finally the word womb womb keep in mind that that o it really has that ooh sound womb we're going to talk about a silent t that you will find at the end of some words so the first word that i want to pronounce for you is debut debut i made my debut on this channel in i think 2017. wow it's been it's been a while then we have the word gourmet gourmet this is an adjective that you will find before some nouns like gourmet coffee next is the word rapport

Fluency Hack: Using Comparatives & Superlatives to Sound More Native

I want to help you sound more fluent using comparatives and superlatives. That is what we're talking about today. And yeah, I do think this is going to help you sound more natural if you are using the the correct one or even the one that is more commonly used. And you're going to hear me talk about that uh quite a bit, especially toward the end because in that case, you want to start thinking about, okay, what do most people use in this situation? If you're somebody who is interested in developing your fluency, subscribe to the channel. Uh turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes.

The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals, and to continue helping you reach your fluency goals. If you would like to get the lesson notes, click on that link down below in the description. Join my community. If you're already a part of it, check the inbox. I have sent them to you. So, the first thing that I want to say because this is more grammar, but also I think is going to help with your both your speaking and writing and the way that you're using the language. [snorts] Very quickly, just so you know, comparatives and superlatives, comparative adjectives compare one person or thing with another. And they really enable us to say whether that person or thing is more or less of a particular quality. Like look at the example. My brother is taller than me.

Taller. This is the comparative adjective in this case. Comparing my brother and me. The superlative superlative adjectives describe one person or thing is having more of a quality than than basically all others in a group. My brother is the tallest in our family. So the tallest that is the superlative that my brother is the tallest among everyone in the family. So these are adjectives comparative superlatives we use them all the time in just casual conversation. So, I think grammar-wise it's I think it's pretty simple, pretty straightforward. The thing that becomes trickier would be the actual adjective that we're discussing and how you're going to use that in certain situations. And that's why I said this is more like a a bit of a fluency hack to help you sound more like a native speaker, more natural. So, if you want to follow up on like what are comparatives and superlatives, what are the rules that you should follow, I wanted to give a shout out to Woodwardenglish, woodward.com. I think it's uh woodwardenglish.com.

If you were to go on their website, you do find a lot of great graphics like this. They have resources for students and teachers. This is just one of them. And uh like I said, just wanted to give them a quick shout out if you're interested in figuring out, okay, comparatives and superlatives. When you have smaller, shorter words, comparative, you're going to add that er. With the superlative, you're going to add est. When general in gen, generally with these two syllable or longer words, you're going to add more for the comparative and most for the superlative. There are exceptions to these rules. And we are going to talk about some of those exceptions, but I just wanted to put this up there.

to form them, and make sure that you're actually using them correctly when you're speaking, but also writing because there are some different uh rules when it comes to writing and the way you're spelling the word. But I don't want to spend too much time on this. This is a quiz lesson, so I want you to participate. I'm going to ask you some questions and yeah, I'd want you to write them in the chat in the comments. This is interactive English. So, let's begin with our first one, our first sentence. When we started the project, failure was the m thing from our mind. So, the adjective that we're talking about is far.

Now, again, I'll go ahead and tell you that we're what form are you going to use? Comparative, superlative. The one thing that would give this away is the the article 'the'. When we're talking about 'the', it's very specific. So, in this case, you're going to use the superlative was the m thing from our mind. The the the reason why this is tricky and I'll I'll tell you in a moment once I see I'll give you a moment to try to think of some of these the answers. So, we're talking about the superlative and it is a it is a small word. So, you are going to add the est. All right? I'm giving you part of the answer, but I want you to try to recognize what is the correct word because this this is an irregular this is an irregular com uh superlative in this case. So, what what do you think? We're using far the superlative, but [laughter] there's a I see I see some different answers in the chat. And this is exactly what what I wanted to talk about. So, you really have two choices. You could say farthest or furthest. Farthest or furthest. Those are both actually um the the forms that you could use with this. But I I do think there is a distinction. And let me let me go ahead and give you the answer. So in this case, especially with this phrase, I would say furthest the furthest thing from our mind. When we started the project, failure was the furthest thing from our mind. Here are some other collocations with furthest. Saying that something is the furthest away or apart or the furthest point, end, corner, furthest north, west, east, uh, south, furthest from, or in this expression, furthest thing from one's mind. Now, some some people were answering farthest to follow up on that. This [clears throat] is taken directly from Cambridge as far as the superlative forms between farther farthest or further furthest. So this is what I wanted to highlight. F farthest and furthest are superlative adjectives or adverbs. They are the irregular superlative form of far. We use them to talk about distance. So you could use either one to talk about distance. There is no difference in meaning between them. Furthest is more common than farthest. And that is the the part of the lesson when I say trying to help you sound more natural. Like what are most people going to say in this instance if you said farthest? It is it is correct. You you can use that. It's fine. However, I think most of the time, and myself included, especially with this this uh this phrase, I'm going to use uh furthest. That is the superlative I would use. I would say this is this is the furthest thing from my mind. Here are some other example sentences that they give you. But to emphasize this even further, this is I I've mentioned this resource from time to time talking about engram viewer as a way of checking how frequent certain words and phrases are used and if you want to know okay both of them are correct both of them are accepted in both you know American English, British English, Canadian English, Australian English doesn't doesn't matter all English varieties but what do most people use in this instance? So you can compare the phrases furthest thing from my mind with farthest thing from my mind. And as you can see, furthest thing from my mind is more commonly used because it is a little more I I would say abstract because you're talking about your mental state. I definitely think you would use furthest. If we're talking about a physical actual distance, like an actual like physical distance that you can measure, that is when I think people may use farthest in spelling F A R T H E S T. But when talking about things that are more abstract, I definitely think further is used. In this case, the furthest thing from my mind. So, I just want to point that out that both of them are well correct. They're both acceptable when talking about accepted when talking about distance. But just as the I pointed out right here, furthest is more common. It's more commonly used. So, keep that in mind. And that's going back to the whole point of trying to help you sound a little more natural and what makes this a bit more of an advanced lesson. Now, I know that I'm trying to I was trying to think of a plug to hit the like button and trying to use furthest thing from and maybe that that is not the furthest thing from your mind. You're thinking about that right now. If you enjoy these lessons, go ahead, hit that like button. Really helps us subscribe to the channel.

Really uh just promotes promotes the channel in general and helps me. Like I said, I was trying to think of a shameless plug for the channel using furthest furthest thing from someone's mind. Here is the next question that I have for you. I have well the the word much in general. I I want you to think about the um well in this case the comparative form. I have much work than I did yesterday. So when you hear when you see that than now you know that we're talking about a comparative we're comparing two things or two people and that is a key when it comes to identifying is it a comparative or a superlative. The same way I said when you ever see the definite article 'the' then you know okay that that's a superlative. So what is the comparative form for much? Once again, this is irregular and I think this one is a little maybe a little easier, but there is still something there's still something that I wanted to share with you uh about this. So, the answer some of you said the comparative form even if you were to take much out of there and I didn't put anything. I think you could put it into context and say, "Oh, okay. Yes, I have more work than I did yesterday." The one thing I wanted to point out with this is that phrase much more. if you want to add emphasis because this is when I feel like people might make a small mistake when they're trying to use much more. But you can use the phrase much more. It's a very common structure when you want to emphasize a significant difference between two things. But it's always going to be followed by an uncountable noun. In this case, we're talking about work. It is a non-count noun. Much more work than I did yesterday. Great job. Excellent. Manuel, Lai, Teo, um Vicki, Gustav, great to see you. Jing, great to see so many members here. Perfect. Let's look at the next one. This is another one that I think is easy that you're going to be able to to u identify the correct answer. However, th this is when people often make mistakes. That's why I'm I'm giving you this one because I hear a lot of mistakes. Even native speakers, I catch myself making these mistakes from time to time. And I'm I'm an English instructor and I'll just be talking and I'll say it. I'll be like, "Oh, wait. That was that was wrong." This curry is m then before. So you see then I will go ahead and tell you, okay, yes, it is the comparative form. What is the comparative of spicy? That is our adjective. this curry is m then before write your answer in the comments in the chats but I I will talk about why this mistake is commonly made and most of it most of the time it's when you're speaking when people are writing it's more reflective I think it's easier to catch the mistake and say okay this is not right but when you're speaking and you're just saying words then that's when small mistakes are made so you have two choices really the choice is either more spicy or spicier. What do you think? What are you going to use? Spicier or more spicy? So, the correct answer because I do I see I see uh uh both of them uh below is spicier. When we have that Y like spicy, the comparative form is spicier. Now, I I say this is a common mistake. Uh this is my note here, my personal note. Often people make a simple mistake using more with comparative adjectives that end in Y. So these are all two syllable words that end in Y. But the comparative form, I mentioned some of those rules before, is always going to be eer. Spicy, spicier, busy, busier, happy, happier, sunny, sunnier, pretty, prettier, silly, sillier. That is the comparative form.

But I often hear and like I told you this is not some this is a small small small small mistake and I say that because I hear native speakers make mistakes like this. I told you I will catch myself making mistakes like this and I might say more spicy and then I'll be like oh wait that was uh grammatically incorrect. The reason why I think people use uh a phrase like more spicy is because it actually is a phrase that you could use but not in the comparative. So for example, this is uh I've taken this from Oxford dictionary I believe and it's giving you the different meanings for more and this is the one that I want you to to keep in mind right here is more as a determiner and in that case we're talking about a greater or additional amount. And you may hear more used with those adjectives that I just mentioned when you're talking about additional. So, for example, here are some headlines. I don't know if you can see it, so I'll just read them to you. Uh, the first one says, "Do colder or warmer places eat more spicy or bland food?" So, you see this headline and your brain is automatically thinking, "Oh, more spicy." But it's not a comparative state statement. It's just talking about additional a greater amount of spicy food. Or the next headline, it says one more sunny day before rainier weather returns. One more sunny day. An additional sunny day. So these sentences or these headlines, this is this is different than a comparative statement uh that that I was showing you in this previous example. The courier is spicier than before. But when our brain reads and you listen and you hear these phrases used together, I think that is where the confusion sets in. not only among second language speakers, native speakers as well because you do hear these words used together from time to time, but not as comparatives, more busy, more spicy, more sunny. And that is why when you end up, you know, using it in the comparative form, your brain just reaches for that. And it happens.

But just to reiterate because I want to drill this home. Uh if we're talking about words that end in Y, two-syllable words, spicy, busy, happy, you're going to add that ei spicier, busier, happier, sunnier, prettier, sillier. So, let's uh move to the next one. Which sentence is correct? What do you think? This was the most imp. I apologize. This was the most impossible mission. Number two, her project was more perfect than mine.

Number three, this is I I should say that was a typo. Should say this is the emptiest bottle I've ever seen. Of course, the way it's written right there, it's incorrect, but it should say this is the emptiest bottle I've ever seen. And finally, gosh, man, what is with these typos? H I I got to get more sleep. Number four, it should say this battery is more dead than the others. Of course, battery is misspelled, but you know what I'm talking about. Uh if you've been here before, yes, I am prone to uh typos. But that's neither here nor there. We're mostly focused on these comparatives uh and these superlatives. Which one is correct?

This uh [laughter] which one is grammatically correct that that you could actually use? And I'll go ahead and tell you it is a trick question because as I was saying these sentences, this was the most impossible mission. Her project was more perfect than mine. This is the emptiest bottle I've ever seen or this battery is more dead than the others. Hopefully as I said those sentences, you're thinking like they they all sound a bit awkward. And that is because they are all awkward sentences that you're not going to hear. And the reason, the thing that I want to point out is with these particular adjectives, impossible, perfect, empty, uh, dead.

These are all absolute adjectives. And you could say non-gradeable, absolute adjectives. But basically, some adjectives are non-gradeable. They describe absolute qualities. To make them stronger, we have to use modifiers like absolutely, totally, or completely. So if you say something, for example, a battery, it's dead. It's it's it's empty or a bottle, it's empty. You can't really compare that uh to something else. Something cannot be more dead than something else or more empty. It's either empty or it's not empty. It's either the battery is dead or it's not dead. And that's why I'm talking about absolute. It does, you know, there is a little more ambiguity and confusion around like perfect because people may end up using that one, but once again, it it really should be more of an absolute. It's either perfect or it's not perfect. It's impossible or it's not impossible. So, in this case, when we're talking about these absolute adjectives, I've rephrased the sentences so that [laughter] What do you think? Write your answer in the chat in the comments. I'll give you a moment and then we'll look at I have a few like this. So clever is one of those where well we'll get into it in just a so clever the comparative form is cleverer. However, it is one of those adjectives and there are others which I'm getting ready to share with you that you could use either one. Both of them are considered acceptable. And I'm using a word like acceptable because sometimes I want to avoid like right or wrong. uh acceptable is more just do people use it? So you could say clever or more clever are both grammatically acceptable. He is uh certainly cleverer than he lets on or he is certainly more clever than he lets on. This is another time where we can go back to engram viewer and see okay we have clever or more cle more more clever which is which is commonly used and as you can see you are going to come across clever more than you would come across more clever I'll give you my personal opinion because when we're talking about engram viewer this is taking everything from written English and as you know speaking and writing are two different things personally I feel like I would end up using more clever and I think it's just because it's easier to say. Cleverer is a little challenging even for me. You have the eer er so it's a little tricky grammatically. Yeah. I think especially in writing you're going to find that er comparative but I feel like if I'm speaking and I'm just using clever I'd probably oh you know I think he's more clever than I am and I would use more. So following up on some of those words that are both of both of the forms are accepted are are okay. They're accepted. My question to you is which is more commonly used? And this I just keep saying the same thing over and over. This is what I'm talking about when I say helping you sound more natural, helping you sound more like a native speaker. because both of these forms are acceptable but one of them is more commonly used than the other. So what what would you say? How would you complete this sentence even though both of them are co okay he is the gentlest person I know or he is the most gentle person I know which one I don't I guess I could say go with your gut which one sounds better to you and then of course we're going to reference this I'm going to share with you engram viewers so that you know okay even though both of them are correct this form is the one that I'm going to come across most of the time when I'm listening to a movie, a TV show, podcast, or I just I'm in engaged in a conversation. He is the person I know, the gentlest person I know or the most gentle person I know. I I see some mixed responses in here. So, what which one is more common? In this case, we're going to use gentlest. He is the gentlest person. I know this is also probably what I would use. Um, of course, if somebody's gentle, they're just, you know, easygoing. They're they're uh very caring when you might uh, you know, taking care of somebody or something. And just comparing gentlest with more gentle. Again, if if you use either one, nobody's going to think, "Wait a second, that sounds awkward." You could use either one in conversation. It's fine. But just so you know, it's more you're more likely to come across gentlest. And just wanting to reiterate that and kind of hammer it home. I've given you some sentences and I'm just going to say the gentlest over and over again so you start to internalize it. He is the gentlest person I know. Or she used the gentlest tone to calm the nervous child.

Of all the trainers, he takes the gentlest approach with beginners and this soap is made for the gentlest skin types. Those are just some sentences using gentlest. How about the next one? Which is more commonly used? My former boss was humbler than my current one or my former boss was more humble than my current one. If somebody is humble, if you're unfamiliar with this adjective, it's it has the same meaning as modest. Somebody who does not brag or like, oh, I'm the best. I'm the greatest. So, which comparative form do you think is more commonly used? humbler or more humble. This is another one that again maybe you could do some research and you might find a source that says no no no this is the correct answer. I I try to avoid some of those. I I do think that especially spoken English you really think of it in terms of acceptable or not acceptable. So what do you think? Which one are you going to use? More humble or humbler? I see a lot of people. Wow. Everybody's kind of going with more humble. All right. Well, let's find out. So, if we check out engram viewer as to which one is more commonly used humbler, you're going to come across that er comparative a lot of times. I know it's a two-syllable word. Um, but uh yeah, you're going to end up coming across that more often. This is another one I'm trying to think more per like and he is the he is humbler than Yeah, I think I would use humbler. Uh, again, there might be a day. You never know, maybe I might use more humble. Uh, again, you could switch it up from time to time. Both of them are okay, but keep in mind, you're more likely to come across humbler whenever you're using it as a comparative adjective. My boss was more was humbler than my current one. He chose a humbler lifestyle despite his success. Living abroad made her humbler than many of her peers. And the second apology sounded humbler than the first one. Here is the next one. I have a a couple more for you. Which is more commonly used? Remote work is commoner than it was a decade ago or more common than it was a decade ago. Which comparative form are you going to use? Now, this one I I'm going to I'm going to refrain from giving you my opinion before allowing you to answer which one you think is the better choice between commoner or more common. Remote work is more than it was a decade ago. I think this statement is true. Many of you, it looks like you're going with more common as the more commonly used form. There's kind of a giveaway just in the question as I'm asking it to you. So, yes, you're going to use more common. I do think this one is uh I was going to say I again coming across sites that I was actually surprised that more that commoner is even found that much. To me, it does sound slightly awkward. Uh I can't really say if in other English varieties people may use it, but I would always go with like more common.

something is more common than something else. Remote work is more common than it was a decade ago. Or mistakes are more common than people often admit. Anxiety has become more common than many experts anticipated. And electric cars are more common than traditional gas vehicles in some cities. More common. More common. Just keep think of that. More common. All right. The next one, which is more commonly used of all the changes, the color adjustment was the subtlest or more subtle. If you're unfamiliar with the word subtle, it just means like it's not really not readily noticeable, that it's not like a major change. It's very small. It's very slight. It's subtle in case you're unfamiliar with the meaning of that adjective. So in this case, I'm saying that it wasn't a big adjustment, but the color the color adjustment was the what subtlest or was it the most subtle?

We're talking about the superlative form in this case. This is not I feel like like commoner and more common. I do think uh both of these are used. just a matter of preference and really a matter of which one is more commonly used to help you sound to help you sound more natural when you're having a conversation. [snorts] So I I do think uh a lot of people saying subtlest. Okay. All right. See another uh uh one most subtle in there. So for this one it's really a tie. [laughter] All right. When you put in most subtle or subtlest this is another one I was really thinking about it when I I'm speaking. I probably would use both of them. It depends. Um I probably would lean more towards most subtle. Uh I don't know why, but that's why I'm just giving you in the examples here of all the changes. I'd say the color adjustment was the most subtle.

The chef is known for making the most subtle improvements to classic dishes. Her facial expression was the most subtle sign that something was wrong. The soundtrack provided the most subtle emotional impact in the film. You could use subtlest in all of those sentences. I think both of these are really uh you know, you're going to find them at about the same frequency, but me personally, I probably feel like I use the most subtle when talking about the superlative form. [snorts] So, I hope that I hope this was insightful because we use comparatives and superlatives quite often in casual conversation, comparing two things or talking about the most of something among a group. And when it comes to these adjectives, they can be tricky because as I just went through those those last few, some of them are are both of them are correct. They're acceptable, and it's just a matter of which one is more commonly used. So, check out the link in the description.

Fun Animal Idioms to Improve Your English

Today, I'm going to teach you ten amazing, incredible, super, awesome idioms. And they're all about animals. Today, we're talking about animal idioms. So if you like animals, keep watching. Just so you know, you can use these idioms at any time and with anyone. But something to keep in mind is that generally idioms are a little bit more informal. So just don't use them on your job application or on formal essays. Otherwise, just keep it fun and let's learn some idioms. Are you ready to learn? Let's go!

Number one - busy bee. A busy bee is someone who is always running around busy doing things. They're always busy. They're always trying to get a million things done, and they're never finished. They're running around doing things like a little bee. BZZ - BZZ - BZZ...everywhere doing stuff. Number two is open a can of worms. Now, let me ask you a question. Do you like worms? Do you think they're cute, or friendly, or just look adorable? Yeah, I didn't think so. Not a lot of people do. They're not very pretty to look at. So when you open up a can of worms you are creating trouble or causing a situation that is unpleasant.

So this idiom sounds unpleasant and it is unpleasant. Number three - wild goose chase. A wild goose chase is a long and chaotic search for something that is difficult to find often because it does not exist. Number four - get your ducks in a row. And this idiom means to get organized or to get in order. I really like this idiom because I really like ducks. I think they're very cute, especially when they're babies. They're so yellow, and cute, and fluffy, and I just want to hug them all. They're just much, much better than geese which I hate. They're just evil. But anyway, I'm digressing. I need to get my ducks in a row and get back to teaching you some idioms.

Number five - one-trick pony. This idiom refers to someone or something that has only one talent or only one area of expertise. One thing that they're good at. Something or someone that is only good at one thing. A one-trick pony. Number six - the elephant in the room. I also like this one because I think elephants are very cute. I don't think this matters for this video, so I need to stop talking about it. This refers to an obvious problem that is usually very controversial. That everyone is aware of but nobody wants to talk about. The elephant in the room. Number seven - to weasel out of something. I really like this one because I think weasels are cute and funny and very weaselly.

To weasel out of something means to avoid doing something by being dishonest or tricky. Or by persuading someone in a clever way. Many times children try to weasel their way out of telling the truth if they've done something bad. Or students will try to weasel their way out of doing their work. Number eight - hold your horses. Hold them. Hold your horses. It means to wait a moment. I like this idiom. It reminds me of a time when we use horses for transportation and we had to hold them when we had to stop. Number nine - pig-headed. Pig-headed means very stubborn or stupidly obstinate. And I think it's safe to say that we can all be pig-headed at times.

And the last one for today, number 10 - to quit cold turkey. And to quit cold turkey means to abruptly and suddenly stop doing something that has an addictive property. If you have something that you want to quit immediately and suddenly, you can quit it cold turkey. For example, I used to bite my nails, and then one day I said, "You know what. This is enough. No more bad nails. I will quit cold turkey." So I stopped biting them and now they look...okay. Better than they used to, for sure. I quit cold turkey.

Now let's do a quick practice. In the comments below, I want you to write about one of the following. Tell us about a time when you went on the wild goose chase, or when you tried to weasel out of something, or perhaps when you quit something cold turkey. So you have three options to choose from and I look forward to reading your responses. And remember, the more you write, the more you practice. That's it for this lesson. Please give this video a thumbs up if you've learned some new idioms. And for extra practice, don't forget to join our social media classes. Thanks for watching and I'll see you next time.

Fun Halloween Vocabulary...Don't be afraid. Watch & learn.

and I think we are live hello and welcome everyone to our live lesson today so today Saturday October 21st and there is a holiday coming up a fun holiday for many so I thought that today we're going to talk about some Halloween vocabulary so I'd like to welcome everyone who's watching if you've ever wondered about Halloween or want to know more about it or love Halloween or just want to improve your English today you're welcome to our lesson everyone who's interested and thank you so much for for joining us today hi Marco wes is hiding it's true he has somewhere in there so again if you if you're interested in Halloween this is I think will be a fun lesson and I have a few questions for you first my first question is what do you know about Halloween if all the information if you know something that's interesting that you'd like to share please write it in the comments another question I have is what Halloween words or expressions do you know or what would you like to know about okay so those are my questions write them at any time in the meantime let us know your name and where you writing from we always always always love to hear from everyone who's watching so let us know what's your name and for your writing from and also if you have any knowledge about Halloween what do you know about it what words or expressions do you know and what other words or expressions you want to know about okay welcome thank you from Norway Marco wonderful so today we're talking about Halloween vocabulary it's super exciting to do this lesson because Halloween especially for children is a very fun holiday but also for adults so it's one of those things that I think a lot of people get very excited about so today I have thirteen vocabulary words for you guys thirteen expressions thirteen symbols of Halloween and this is because 13 is a good Halloween number and I want to ask you if you know why why do you think I have 13 vocabulary words for you today so if you know please write it in the comments um and I'm curious to read my first one is of course Halloween oh my god I was looking at the history of Halloween and let me tell you it is long it's a very long and interesting history so I would definitely recommend reading up more about it I haven't memorized all of it but I will tell you some of the things that I found it is it used to be a pagan holiday kind of got mixed up it's it's very interesting so I would definitely recommend reading it there are two major holidays that kind of seem to have merged into this holiday the first one is All Hallows Eve which is another term for saints or All Saint's Eve because in Europe as well as in Latin America now November 1st is the day of the dead or the Saints Day so the eve of course if you know what it means Eve is the day before or the night before so Halloween would have been the night before the Saints Day so that was a celebration that was a and then another one it's kind of that seems to impact at Halloween with Samhain and that was a Gaelic festival that was at the end of the harvest season because and kind of a midpoint between autumn and winter so it has so many interesting origin so I definitely recommend reading about it but the costumes people started wearing costumes initially toured off evil spirits so that's kind of those are kind of the beginnings and it turned into something completely different today but it's interesting to know about it because today it is many people's favorite fall holiday I know so many friends back in the US and Canada and their favorite favorite holiday ever is Halloween so it's a really really big holiday especially in North America but also celebrated in the UK Ireland and now it's kind of spreading everywhere so again if you're just joining us please write us where you're coming where you're writing from but also I'd like to know if there are any words or Halloween words or expressions that you know and what do you know about Halloween I'm kind of gonna go through these because it will be exciting to see what you guys think about it okay so this was my first one was Halloween my second is trick-or-treat again if you don't know about trick-or-treating this is a practice that is done mostly by children where children dress up in costumes and they ask for candy or money depending on what part of the world they're in and again it's spread in North America and UK and

Ireland but basically a trick it's it's kind of a it's it's cute but it's also a little creepy because a trick can be some kind of damage that you're doing on someone's house so it can be anything from putting toothpaste on their their doorknob to destroying property to who just really really bad things you can do to someone's house or and the treat is of course money or it's in the form of candy and now it's very very popular so it's even become a noun so many children say they go trick-or-treating it's very rare when children actually play tricks I think most of the time they just go say trick-or-treat look very cute in costumes and they receive a lot of candy it is a lot of candy to the point where I think parents have to ration these things out and it's very very popular especially in the US and Canada you know speaking of trick-or-treating my next word for you is candy and this one is of course everyone knows a candy is but I put it on here because of the grammar around candy so the candy related to Halloween is children receive this candy when they go trick-or-treating but something that I always hear English language learners say wrong is many people say Oh children eat many candies or they say like oh the candies are great actually that is not candies is the plural of candy but it's used as a non-count noun so we say that children got a lot of candy so it's it's like coffee or like rice just like any other non-count noun so don't see candies it will sound a little awkward just say candy when you are talking about the plural a lot of candy ok are you guys ready for the next one if you are just joining us you can tell us what do you know about Halloween what you'd like to know also if you have ever gone trick-or-treating maybe it's something that is done in your country maybe it's not let us know if you've ever done it and if so did you get a lot of candy ok this is my next term this is a very useful one related to Halloween so if you ever watch a movie if you ever about a turn is a carved pumpkin that has that is glowing because it has a light in it and initially it started because it was meant to ward off evil spirits because remember Halloween was supposed to be the night before All Saints Day when he did not want them and next to them so this is a jack-o'-lantern now why a pumpkin honestly I've always wondered this so I put it on here because I'm sure you have also initially so the these holidays came from Ireland but in Ireland there were no pumpkins come pumpkins actually come from North America so what people used to carve before it used to be turnips so they carved all kinds of vegetables and put embers in them toward of these spirits but it's not actually known when they started carving pumpkins but what is known is that the u.s. North America had a lot of pumpkins this time of year so it only seems to make sense that pumpkins would be used as some of the the the vegetables now now I don't know if you know this but these pumpkins in the image here there's especially grown to be carved so companies started growing and selling us specific kinds of pop needs to be carp so these are not the best kinds of pumpkins for eating so they're just especially made to be carved and it's such a huge tradition in the United States huge children do this with their parents many people use them for decorations so it's really really really big so if you're wondering what a jack-o'-lantern is if you've ever wanted to carve one have you ever carved one let us know in the comments I'm very curious I have personally because I didn't grow up in the US I've haven't carve it when I was a child but I did it with some of my students later on and it is a lot of fun but it's also difficult because you have to get these designs and it's a lot of fun okay so are you guys ready for the next one a costume okay now a costume it is not a custom so please don't pronounce it like custom because a custom is like a tradition it's it's a it's a it's a different it's a different word it's a traditional common practice but I wanted to ask you if you have ever worn a Halloween costume now this is one of those things that I think has spread throughout the world faster than the other Halloween traditions faster than you know decorating with a jack-o'-lantern or faster than maybe trick-or-treating so please let me know if you have ever worn a Halloween costume and if yes well was it and are you dressing up this year I don't think Wes and I are dressing up this year for Halloween I don't think we're wearing costumes we actually met at the school where we were working together and because it was an office I've always wanted to go as Jim and Pam from the office but he has not he has not one to this so we're not dressing up this year sadly but if you guys want to tell him please do so maybe he'll listen but yeah so if you guys have worn any Halloween costumes please write it down in the comments it will be nice to see what people have worn I've worn many Halloween costumes throughout the years okay another big thing that you should know about costumes is that now a days everyone is obsessed with sexy costumes so it's kind of become funny because people do anything sexy like any costume you can make sexy it can be a sexy police officer sexy nurse and it's definitely some people take this opportunity for Halloween to dress up as sexy as they can so if you ever watch movies and hear about sexy costumes around this time of year it is a thing a lot of people dress up and different costumes and they're trying to disguise themselves into into just a completely different person originally like I said the point of these the point of these costumes was to ward off evil spirits now it's it's changed into just kind of a reason to party okay so my next word that you should know for this holiday is decorations decorations so many people I've seen it a lot in the u.s. decorate their homes which means that they put different Halloween connected items on display to enhance the feeling of this holiday so Halloween decorations include spider webs tombstones pumpkins and people go crazy I've seen so many graveyards in people's front yards so people really really really decorate so if you guys are just joining us again welcome hi Sameer hi hi everyone if you're just joining us we are talking about Halloween vocabulary and things you should know about Halloween and how its celebrated kind of throughout the world so we also have a few questions for you if you were to dress up for Halloween which costume would you wear what would you like to wear have you ever gone trick-or-treating and what was my first question is what do you know about Halloween okay so please in the comments answer some of these questions it would be really fun to see what you guys have to say so again decorations are just things we put up around the house to enhance the feeling of a holiday it is really people really really really love Halloween decorations okay my next is a haunted house now a haunted house is the mean the general meaning of a haunted house hi forgot welcome the meaning of a haunted house is a house with ghosts or spirits in it but during Halloween time this becomes it takes on a whole new meaning because it is a symbol and it is a huge attraction so what do I mean by that some people decorate either they they they decorate their homes or houses very with a lot of decorations that are really really terrifying they make it is scary as possible and they even dress up or hire other actors who dress up and like these scary costumes to scare people who go through the house now many of these haunted houses you actually pay an admission fee for and it's a form of entertainment but it is a really big deal I know in the u.s. many amusement parks they they turn them into like really scary haunted houses like very extended forms of them so initially like I said it's a house with ghosts but it becomes a huge huge attraction for Halloween now I had another question which I forgot to ask but I want to ask is for any of other holiday not necessarily Halloween do you decorate your home for the holidays for any holidays that are in your country I'd like to know what you do what holiday is important and if you decorate or not not just for like I said not just for Halloween but any other holiday that you have okay so my next word is superstitions superstitions a superstition is a belief it's a it's so it's not something that is has any kind of rational route or anything but it's a belief that if you do something or if you have something or hold something that will bring you good luck or bad luck so it makes absolutely no sense but some people truly and fully believe in in superstition so some superstitions related to Halloween are black cats and this is really sad because it is believed that black cats bring bad luck so if you walk on the street and there's a black cat crossing your path you're supposed to have bad luck and in some countries they really really fully believe this so much that black cats are you know nobody wants to adopt them because it's believed to have bad luck and it's just picking you're crazy the number 13 is another unlucky number which is why today we have 13 words for you not unlucky but a number very symbolic of Halloween it's a little spooky Friday the 13th which we have had this month it's supposed to be an even more an even crazier day when anything can happen and one that I wrote here and again related to Halloween a Bloody Mary which it's a little scary a few our night and the mirror and say Bloody Mary three times you're supposed to have this crazy woman appear and I don't know what she does it feel like I don't know if she kills you or tells your fortune or something just nothing good nothing good but that's another superstition and there's so many other superstitions so I wanted to ask you what superstitions do you have in your country do you have anything that you've actually believe in there are things even like walking under ladders looking into a broken mirror salt like spilling soul spilling milk there's so many different kinds of superstitions but I want to know and I'm curious if you believe any of them do you follow any and what are some that you have in your country in my country for example this is something that I believe in actually and it's again it doesn't make any sense but I believe it it has to do with flowers so when somebody receives flowers they in my country you're not supposed to give an even number of flowers so you can never give somebody two four six eight ten twelve flowers you're only supposed to give an odd number of flowers so it's only one three five and so on because because you only give an even number of flowers when somebody dies so it's it's just a superstition it's a silly superstition it doesn't make any sense but to this day especially in the US if I receive a bouquet of flowers it's very popular in the US to give a dozen flowers which is twelve so I always take one out so I have eleven or add one so I have thirteen and it's just something that I've done over the years even though I don't think I don't consider myself superstitious but just that part I just don't like yeah so yeah long I'm not I don't think I'm superstitious but there are a couple of superstitions that I follow if that makes sense are you guys superstitious let us know oh this one I like spooky you hear spooky at Halloween more than any other time of the year just like you hear jolly around Christmas it's just a word that goes with a holiday and some synonyms for spooky or sinister ghostly easily frightened scary but I would say it's not as strong as scary so it's just slightly under like you're not actually terrified you're just a little a little bit scared so an example sentence would be you know if a place is spooky late at night you're a little bit like a park you know it's gonna be a little spooky but you're not completely terrified so that is spooky but again it really really really really goes with Halloween okay another one that again doesn't make much sense is scarecrows so why scarecrows became a symbol of Halloween I have no idea some people think maybe because it's around harvest time so these are used by farmers and they're used to scarecrows so the whole autumn thing kind of you know it just kind of became a thing I don't know but scarecrows are definitely definitely a symbol of Halloween and many times they're used as decorations in people's yards and sometimes they're used as costumes so some people dress up as scarecrows like this kid right here on the left so scarecrows are a big a big part of Halloween and again they're just they're just these things stuffed with hate meant to scare meant to scare crows I used to live long thanks for asking I used to live in the San Francisco Bay Area but I don't live there any longer okay this was one of my favorites hocus pocus and I included it because of if you've been on the Internet at all these days you can see this everywhere it's a huge huge huge symbol of Halloween it's mostly it refers to this movie that I'm gonna talk to you about in a second but hocus-pocus it's originally a magical term and it's something that magicians say or it's something that witches or wizards say when they're about to do a charm or a spell it's or this is what it's believed that witches or wizards would say of course hocus pocus it's kind of like a decocker

Dabra or you know those kinds of things it also means it's just some meaningless talk it doesn't really mean much so my example and for hocus pocus is dealing with politicians so much of what politicians say is just hocus-pocus so it doesn't really mean that much um it okay now the movie it's a famous Halloween dinner movie I think it was in the nineties like early 90s 92 93 and it has these three witch sisters I just recently watched it I made worse watch it he didn't think it was that great I loved it it's it's a very it's a classic Halloween movie so if you'd like to watch and learn about trick-or-treating and the history of well not history but um you know if you want to have a cultural experience about Halloween I would definitely recommend this movie because it's a huge part of the Halloween history so go ahead watch it it's a Disney movie it's not too scary um it's it's not meant to be too scary but it's it's it's I think it's cute okay I'll stop um okay I just have a few words more a few more words it's late um my next one is monsters so we can't have Halloween without monsters monsters are scary and natural creatures not you know like not people and on Halloween you see things like werewolves vampires demons zombies and a bunch more but these are some that are very very popular around Halloween people dress up as them people watch movies with them so if you see them there are monsters in my last one my 13th word I have not been to Norway long I would love to come to Norway or to go to Norway hopefully soon hopefully soon I would love to a witch so which we all know I'm sure we've all seen this picture is a woman with magical powers but what some people may not have known is that it's commonly believed that witches could turn into cats so again you have all of these symbols of Halloween like black cats so witches they can mean you know they can be witches and and monsters and and scarecrows and what else do we have haunted houses and skeletons and zombies and so many things that are related to Halloween and witches are among them so that is it for that is it for today Oh an example of a zombie a zombie I didn't include here maybe I should have a zombie is supposedly a person who used to be alive and now it's not so it's a corpse who has risen from the dead and depending on the legends or depending on the movie or horror book or whatever you're reading they can either be very slow or they can be very fast but there are usually monsters that are trying to kill you so those are zombies people who used to be alive another dead and they have risen from their graves okay so I wanted to let you know so we actually have a few more Halloween lessons coming up that I'm very excited about on Tuesday we have 13 scary words this is a really fun lesson with some really useful vocabulary a lot of it is academic vocabulary so I think it will be very very helpful if you're trying to expand your vocabulary in English you don't you don't just use them at Halloween you can use them at anytime they're just there to help you improve and expand your knowledge and on Halloween Day which is October 31st we have some Halloween idioms and again I think it's gonna be a fun less and I think you guys will enjoy it oh it's a very good question for cut what is the difference between witch and wizard I was actually just reading up on it today because witch has this negative connotation and wizard it doesn't they're actually the same thing a wizard is a male who has magical powers and the witch is a female who has magical powers now of course you can have a good witch and a bad witch but usually witches have bad connotations okay well thank you guys so much if you like Halloween if you guys would like to share this lesson with your friends or you find it interesting please go ahead and share it write any questions you have for us and join our social media classes thank you again for joining us and I'll see you guys next time happy Halloween thank you guys thank you for joining

Future of Work Vocabulary You MUST Know in the Age of AI!

I have an incredibly incredibly important vocabulary lesson for you. And I know I I say this every week, but this time I really mean it. I want to talk to you about the the future of vocabulary, covering a topic that is likely to change many people's lives. And I'm talking about AI. So, if you are someone who's interested in building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. And I should probably introduce myself. My name is Wes. This is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So, I want to talk to you about vocabulary that I think is relevant that you will likely hear and actually use if you're having a conversation about AI or or just technology in general. But I do have some very AI specific words and phrases that we'll get to uh a little bit at the end. Now, this is a quiz lesson, so I want you to participate.

And if you would like to get these lesson notes that you see right next to me, uh, click on the link down in the description. You can join my email community if you're already a part of it. Uh, check your inbox. I've sent them to you. So, let's go ahead and just jump right into it with the first question. I'm giving you the meaning and you can see the word that is missing. New regulations are needed to combat the malicious use of m technology in political campaigns. So the meaning of this word I'll go ahead and tell you it is just a word a video or sound recording that replaces someone's face or voice with that of someone else in a way that appears real. So what would you call this? And in case you're wondering, the word malicious means that you have basically, you know, an evil intent that you want to trick, confuse, or even just lie to people and you have uh in this case the malicious use I almost said it, but I stopped myself. Of of what? Technology. I think this is a word that quite likely you've heard of before. I don't know if you use it, but this is all about expanding your vocabulary. I think some of these words you will you absolutely are familiar with, and that's good. It's always good to get a little bit of review. So, the word that we're talking about, excellent, uh, Julia, deep value, Joanna, deep fake. A deep fake is a video or sound recording. It just looks real even though it's completely it's all AI generated. And this is something that I think it can be very very dangerous. So I imagine that maybe you have seen a deep fake video before. It's not real. It's just an AI, but it looks like the real person that I mean they're trying to to imitate and they're using both video and sound. This technology is getting better and better and better and it's actually I think it's quite scary. So, we're talking about deep fake technology in political campaigns. So, let me I'm going to give you a political example. All right. Now, I want to go ahead and say uh that of course, you know, I'm not a big fan of Trump. I don't really like the guy. And it's okay if we disagree. If you like him, that's perfectly fine. I get and nowadays it seems like nobody can disagree about politics, which is a little weird. But this is, you know, I don't care for him. This is an example. This would be a criticism as to why, you know, I don't care for him. But again, it's okay if we disagree. So the the reason why I chose this, this is a very recent example. This was a deep fake video that he put out there maybe gosh, you can see uh a couple of weeks ago. And basically the whole video is fake. It was saying that he's going to give people access to some medbed technology, which I don't they're not even real. It's just the supposedly they heal and cure all illnesses and disease and that only really really rich people have access to them. Anyway, he put this video out there completely fake. Ended up deleting it maybe I think you know 12 hours later because people were probably like what the hell are you doing? Uh but this would be an example of why this technology is very scary because people don't know what's real and what's not.

especially when we're talking about video. And as far as my criticism, it's just like again, it's like, what the hell are you doing, dude? Why are you why are you putting this out there? Uh, I don't know. It's like he's not taking it very seriously. That's that's my opinion, but again, it's okay if we disagree. So, let's look at the next one. Again, if you if you're not familiar with the word deep fake, try to put that into your at least passive vocabulary because you're going to come across this in the future and hopefully, you know, you can be able to use it actively if you see a video and say, "Well, I think that's a deep fake." All right, it's a fake video. So, how about this one? This one is a little more challenging, I think, as far as trying to guess the word. The long-term of deep fake technology, I'm trying to follow up and get you a little review as we go through this for political stability are a cause for concern. So, consequences of an action or event. And you might ask like the question, well, what are the ramifications of doing this thing? What might be some of the unwelcome consequences for this action? And I'm sure that we're talking about AI and you know, nobody knows what the hell is going to happen, what the world is going to look like 5 years, 10 years from now. So right now we can only speculate as to the ramifications of AI, deep fake technology and some of the other things that are going on. So another uh another good word to kind of just put in your bank uh so that you have it and know it and understand it because you're listening to a podcast, you're reading an article. I think this is absolutely a word that you'll come across when people are talking about AI.

What are the long-term ramifications of deep fake technology? That is a good question and we'll we'll find out soon enough. If you I didn't see any uh answers to my quiz there right there as far as uh what are the ramifications of AI. This is a picture you can kind of see it of the the Terminator a little bit. You can see the Arnold Schwarzenegger in there. Uh, and I hope I hope that that is these are not the ramifications of AI and it turns into some dystopian type of Terminator world.

Let's let's just hope. What do you think? Next question or next sentence and I want you to, you know, write your answers in the chat. Write them write them in the the comments. This is interactive English. I want you to participate. And I love it seeing all these uh seeing everybody uh try to guess even if you get it wrong or it's not the word I'm thinking of that's okay. So the firm helps companies to m their HR and payroll operations. All right. What this company helps them the payroll operations. So they're the use of machines or computers instead of people to do a job especially in a factory or office.

This is another word that I think you I I'm pretty sure you've heard this word and you maybe even actively use it if you're having a conversation about technology or some of the changes that are happening nowadays and many companies are trying to do this. They're using machines or computers instead of people doing the job. And in that case, they are trying to automate. Automate or automation. So you guys, you you kind of you beat me to it because I wanted to give you both of these words because they're in the same word family. In this sentence, we're going to use the verb to automate. So the firm helps companies to automate their HR and payroll. uh option operations.

So you do not have to search very hard in order to find whether it's a news article or a report talking about automation that is occurring right now or companies are trying to automate and basically use uh a computer instead of having a person do it. It's easier, it's efficient, it's cheaper, and they're trying to automate the process. So, both of these words, whether you're using it as the verb or the noun, the meaning is really the same. But I wanted to give you both of them because I think you will hear people use both the verb to automate something as well as the noun automation. To to really put a finer point on this, I told you you don't have to search very hard. I do I put in the words AI and automate in quotes. go to news and these are all articles from the last like day or two and just to give you a little more context uh let's just read them. It says Google Cloud CEO says he doesn't buy into the hype that AI is going to automate everyone's jobs. That's that's probably true. Not everyone's jobs, but probably still many many jobs. And that is that should still be a concern for people in my non-expert opinion. The next one it says almost 100 million jobs could be lost to AI automation. Uh Senate report this a Senate report talking about again automation and it may cause people to lose their job. Companies don't need uh as many employees. And then finally at the bottom a hacker used AI to automate an unprecedented cyber crime spree. Anthropic says, and if you're unfamiliar with the word spree, it just means u a lot of something in a short period of time. So if we're talking about a cyber crime, this person used automation to have this, you know, do many, many cyber crimes in a short period of time.

And that's why they call it a cyber crime spree. And it was unprecedented. So let's uh All right. Um, let Okay, I don't want to give it away, right? I maybe I just did. We'll see. So, let's go ahead and look at the next word that I want you to know that I think is relevant when talking about AI and technology. So, I think, you know, AI is like the larger conversation, but I think these words, you're going to hear them used in a variety of context when talking about technology and the changes that are coming. And that's why I said this vocabulary is important for the future. The speed of AI advancement in the past year has been in technological history.

The meaning of this word it means never having happened or existed in the past. The reason why Okay, I was gonna I I said the word just like a moment ago and I I did this on purpose, but I think I kind of gave it away as I was leading into this. Uh because the word that we're talking about is unprecedented. And I was going to say, well, speaking of unprecedented, let's look at our next example. Kind of forgetting that I'm giving you a quiz right now. So unprecedented. The speed of AI advancement in the past year has been unprecedented in technological history. This is a word that I think is becoming more commonly used not just when talking about AI but things that are happening I don't know politically and say oh this is you know this has not happened before in our lifetimes. It's unprecedented.

Here are some common collocations because I think this is a great way to continue building your vocabulary and really understand a little bit more about the word. In this case, unprecedented. So, you're going to hear people talk about um an unprecedented event. And yes, this this is uh an adjective or saying, well, this is an unprecedented action. Or if we're talking about uh legally in the judicial context, I said you could use this word in a variety of contexts. You might hear somebody talk about an unprecedented ruling by the Supreme Court or talking about AI or company, unprecedented growth or unprecedented opportunity or there has been an unprecedented increase or decrease in something. So again, these are some common phrases using this adjective. This is I think often you're going to hear people use it with one of these nouns.

It's unprecedented. So, uh um here's the next one. The move from search engines to generative AI represents a major shift in how we access information. I think this is this is certainly a more advanced word. It's it is related to AI but I think technology in general and the meaning is uh it's talking about a typical example pattern or model of something generally in my opinion when I think of this word I probably would lean more towards model that the way something the the model of how something works or looks or operates and we're talking about a m shift this is a little more challenging because based on well because of the sentence I'm not really giving you too much information to help lead you to this word. So I'm going to give you a hint. Starts with the letter P. All right. What do you think? Starts with the letter P. And I do think this is also a collocation a M shift. And you're going to hear these two words used together. And I don't know if I gave you guys that hint before everybody started writing paradigm paradigm paradigm but great job Li Charlotte uh deep value tal a paradigm shift I mentioned is a collocation with uh this word but if you're talking about a paradigm you're referring to the an example pattern model of something and in this case yeah I think it is going to change the the normal way of doing things the normal the the models as to how things work and the way we do business and there is going to be a paradigm shift for better or for worse we'll find out what do you think as I as I've given you these example sentences I'm trying to put in you know some words we've already talked about just to get a little bit of review automation threatens to m millions of workers in logistics and customer service roles. I think more than that, but this is just an example. The meaning is to take over the place, position or role of something. I think this is another word that has become much more commonly used when talking about AI specifically, even though you can use the verb or the noun in other context as well. It doesn't have to be you don't have to use it to talk about AI or technology. But in this case, what are we what are we saying? Automation, we've already talked about that. Using computers or machines to replace people threatens to millions of workers. Now, of course, you could say replace that works. That is not the word that I'm looking for. I think there is another word that is often used in this context and it's going to what what do you think love it love seeing all these answers uh again don't be shy write your answers in the chat doesn't matter if you get it wrong it's okay and as I told you there are other words that you could replace would work but that's not the word uh I have for you so great job well done I Katarina um Rachel besides replace to displace or as the noun displacement you might hear people when talking about AI to displace workers or the displacement of the workforce. So automations threatens to displace millions of workers in logistics or customer service. it does have a very similar meaning. Uh I mean a little bit to replace uh but you could use displace in other context as well.

So once again I think this is a word you may know or maybe you've heard of it but I think it's useful to be able to actively use it. Make it a part of your active memory so that you when you're having a conversation talking about what's happening in the future or something you read in the news and your concern or worry that workers are going to get displaced by AI or because of automation. It's just really useful vocabulary to have. So let's look at the next one. If you've learned something new, just let me know. You can hit the hit that like button. That tells me that you're getting some value out of these lessons and that it's helping you better understand how to use some of these words even if you've heard of it and you're already familiar with some of them. Like I said, it's always good to get a little bit of review. Here is this was a comic. Uh it's not the most like optimistic as far as like saying lost my job to a better robot. I don't know. Maybe this is the world in which uh that we're heading into where automation is going to or AI is going to displace people in certain roles and then those robots or that those uh th that software or whatever it is is going to then get replaced by even better AI. So it's just trying to make light of the situation even though I think in some ways it like I said it can be a little scary. What do you think? AI is expected to m traditional business models across the banking and insurance sectors. What this is another word that I think you know and that you're familiar with. I don't know if you'll get it based on the context maybe. But the meaning is to prevent something especially a system essentially a system process or event from continuing as usual or as expected. What word in this case it's a verb. So the verb it's a missing verb. What what is the meaning uh or what is the word the verb that has that meaning? And I think the meaning is I liked it. It's very specific, very precise. you're preventing something especially a system process or event from continuing. So AI is expected to m traditional business models. I think traditional business models in you know whether it's banking, insurance or whatever sector I think this is what's going to happen. It's going to many different business models. I I told you already there's going to be a paradigm shift and things are going to move. So let's see the the word that I'm looking for again some of them like reform. Sure. Um replace but upend I think that's a better word. I don't think you would use like reform really in this context. Uh especially with this meaning we're talking about you're preventing it from continuing to exist. So the word that we're looking for is to disrupt. Well done, Charlotte Manuel.

Good to see you. Uh, Julia, to disrupt the verb or disruption, the noun. I wanted to give you both words because I think both of them are useful. They're both important, both parts of speech when talking about new technology. Uh, that, you know, this is the result. and there is a disruption and it's going to prevent things continuing as usual because there's a paradigm shift. I feel like the more the more I say paradigm shift the more likely you are to Okay, I'm going to I'm going to take that away from today's lesson. So AI is expected to disrupt traditional business models, which is true across the banking and insurance sectors. I'm not in those sectors, so I don't really know. I can just assume that probably yes, there is going to be some some disruption taking place. So, just using it both as a verb and a noun. Great words to know. Once again, I wanted to give you some examples, some news headlines using the word, and you do not have to look very hard. If you read the news, these are words that people are going to use just in the heading right there when talking about AI or technology. So let's go through these. AI is poised to disrupt the job market. Some roles could radically transform or AI will disrupt equity research from the bottom up. And then finally, it doesn't have the word disrupt or disruption, but it says, will artificial intelligent be the end of teachers? Uh maybe. I don't know you guys. Maybe you're not going to need me. You're just going to find some AI deep fake Wes or some other English instructor and it's just going to completely disrupt the online teaching industry and YouTube and social media as we know it. Who knows? Who knows how much longer uh I'll be around. We'll see. If you want me to stick around, hit that like button. Let me know. Let me know. Uh I'm just trying to get you to hit the like button. This is just my way to to trick you into hitting the like button. What do you think? The debate centers on how much should be granted to military drone systems. Once again, and I keep repeating myself, but that's okay. The more I repeat myself, the more likely you are to just take in this information. This is a word that you need to know, that you should know, but I think many of you know it already, which is a good thing because you read the news, because you listen to other YouTube channels talking about a variety of topics. This is a word that that comes up quite often, especially nowadays. All of these words, I would say within the last 10, 20 years, the the usage has increased tenfold and people are using them much more often because of technology and specifically now because of AI. So the debate centers on how much should be granted to military drone systems. Again, don't worry too much about connecting it to the sentence like drones. Think about the meaning. This describes something that functions separately or independently.

That is th you know those are key words right there. Functions separately or independently. Now that I'm stressing those two words perhaps you're thinking oh okay I know what he's talking about right now. So the word or words because there are two that once actually three that I want to share with you all three words in the word family that I think you're likely to come across is autonomous autonomy or autonomously in the sentence down here. We're just using the noun autonomy. The debate centers on how much autonomy should be granted to military drone systems and, you know, whether they should operate independently or if humans and people should control what they're doing or uh or where they're going. But you may hear it used as an adjective and talk about autonomous vehicles, I think, is probably one of the more common phrases that people use with autonomous or autonomously.

Cars are now driving autonomously and we're going to use it as an adverb to modify that verb. So know all three of these. Be able to use all three of these as an adjective, a noun, an adverb, autonomous, autonomy, autonomously. Can be a little tricky to say them one right after the other, but still great words to know. All right, let's look at the next one. The M in the e-commerce site recommends products based on your past purchases and browsing history. I think we can all relate to this sentence that you're doing something I don't know whether you're you see uh you're doing something on the computer somewhere else and then you go get on another computer and an ad comes up and you're thinking like how the hell do they know that I was thinking about buying this or enrolling in this? How how the hell do they know?

It's scary. They know. They know. And when I say they, I'm talking about the the robots, the software, the the the internet in general. But in this case, we're talking about the mathematical instructions as I've been rambling on. You guys have just been writing the answer, which is fine. That rule that rules uh mathematical instructions are rules that especially if given to a computer will help calculate the answer to a problem. And of course, we are talking about an algorithm. Once again, a word that you are going to hear and that you should be able to use if you're talking about new technology, AI, or things that are AI adjacent or other types of technology. You're going to hear this word a lot. Social media.

All of these companies right now, they use an algorithm basically in order to make more money. In the case of social media or e-commerce, they want to sell you more products, sell you things. So, they have a specific algorithm to track you down and just put things right in front of you that they think you're going to buy. And they're going to use an algorithm. How about this one? Regulators must the training data of new facial recognition systems for signs of demographic bias. This is well it's a word that you can use in a variety of context but I think this is also very important when talking about I'd say AI specifically or the things that AI is going to do and we should examine or inspect it closely and thoroughly.

That is the meaning of this word to examine or inspect closely and thoroughly. And regulators must the training data of new facial recognition systems uh for signs of bi for signs of demographic bias. And you know, I think you're all familiar with facial recognition systems. And then basically it's saying that, you know, it should not have any demographic bias, whether you're uh a man or woman, old or young, whatever demographic it may be. So the word that we're looking for, which many of you have, um, perfect is to scrutinize. Scrutinize. Hi Flowers, Manuel, Julia, Mahmud, uh, Ava, well done. To scrutinize is the verb or scrutiny is the noun. And with the American, you're going to hear me pronounce that. It's more that it is more of a glottle stop. You could say scrutinize or scrutiny. That's perfectly fine. But yeah, you hear me when I say scrutinize or scrutiny, you hear that glottle stop instead. Little pronunciation when it comes to this word. So regulators must scrutinize the training data of new facial recognition systems for signs of demographic bias.

whatever I think type of new software uh or even you know they're trying to automate the business I think all of it should be scrutinized and examine it closely carefully for well to make sure that things are functioning correctly and some of it can I think is more important than others especially when talking about things like the facial rec recognition system to give you a little more context I mentioned before that These words are becoming more and more commonly used. Engram viewer is a great resource. So I just put some of them up there so you can kind of see the trend with all of these. Of course you see AI just boom just take off like a rocket as far as people using it, writing about it. Uh this is from the written corpus, but people are talking about it more as well. But all of these words are on the uptrend. uh whether it's displacement, autonomous, unprecedented, these words are I think the trend is going to continue which is why I wanted to share them with you and which is why I encourage you to not just understand it if you're listening to a conversation but be able to actively use these words as well. Try to practice using them. I think that's also very important. So a lot of these words that I've been giving you so far I think are talking about AI in a broader sense. I want to give you some words that are definitely more AI specific and I think these are more challenging but uh I still think it's worth knowing uh because you're going to come across them. The first one, this is um this is an acronym that you may hear people use. LLM, the meaning is software tool capable of corpus-based linguistic analysis. That's a mouthful and prediction, particularly an artificial intelligence system. And you hear people talking about chat GPT or Gemini, these AI uh systems that people are using. And LLM is an acronym that you may also hear people use. What does this acronym stand for? And I'm not going to give you too much time. I think people kind of get it. Nice. Milan deep value large language model. So if somebody refers to an LLM, they're referring to a large language model that basically it's going through the corpus, which is every basically everything written in English, whether it's an academic text, a news article, a blog, and it basically combs through all of it to better understand the the words and how they're used. So it can help you find better information and kind of again, I don't know exactly too well how it works. uh but you hear that these different models as they get better that it can predict so many words into the future which is going to help uh give a more accurate response a more precise response which is helpful but again it's this is why it can be a little scary as well people want companies wanting to automate and it could then displace people uh which is going to be another challenge another issue AGI what does it stand for the these are not all acronyms. This is your last acronym right here. But if somebody's talking about AGI, this is a hypothetical type of AI that could perform any intellectual task a human can, demonstrating humanlike cognitive abilities such as understanding, learning, reasoning, and creativity across various domains. I think this is starting to sound more and more like the terminator when uh when I read the the meaning of AGI.

So AGI I think a you know what AI stands for. So you kind of piece it piece it together. But what do you think the G G stands for? AGI stands for artificial general intelligence. Artificial general intelligence. Excellent, Mosh. Uh, Lai, well done. So, here's an example sentence. Oh, and I gave an example sentence for um large language model. I forgot to tell you, but it says, "AGI remains the holy grail of AI research, but experts disagree on its timeline for arrival." So it's like this is what everybody this is what we're trying to reach or all of these big companies whether it's Alphabet, Apple, Meta, uh Nvidia, this is the race that it seems like a lot of these companies are in the race for artificial general intelligence and this is you know people are speculating okay what is the world going to look like if we have artificial general intelligence? Uh, are there going to be a lot of problems? Uh, are a lot of workers going to get displaced? Is the internet going to run rampant with deep deep fake videos? What are the ramifications? All right, just keep getting that review. What are the ramifications of artificial general intelligence? So, this is the holy grail. This is what everybody's kind of going for. To give you that example sentence with LLM, let me just move back really quickly. Uh, the new chatbot is powered by an advanced LLM with over a trillion parameters. I don't know if that really helps give you a little more context, but I had given you I had had the example sentence. I felt like I might as well share it. Uh, LLM large language model.

How about this? Here is another fill in the blank. Not fill or just a missing word. Scientists are developing new encryption methods to secure data against potential attacks from future machines. This is this is not a word that you're often going to use just in general conversation. This is more AI specific, techspecific, but it's talking about a new approach to calculation that uses principles or fundamental physics to solve extremely complex complex problems very quickly. I'm having a tough time just spitting out the sentences today. I apologize for that. Maybe I don't know, maybe an AI maybe an AI West wouldn't make these same mistakes, but then it wouldn't be real. What's the fun in that? So scientists are developing new encryption methods to secure data against potential hacks from a future what I'm just going to go ahead and give you the phrase. We're talking about quantum computing. If you follow the the stock market, uh this is something that companies have been gaining steam and people are speculating on companies that are involved with quantum computing that it is the next big thing. And this is something again that people are um working on, but it's more specific. It's not one that like displace or autonomy or disruption that you're going to use as casually. Uh if you're talking about AI or technology in general, what do you think? Companies are investing in tools that create an not replace people. So this is what they give us to say hey you know don't worry we're not going to completely replace everybody we're just trying to create an what the meaning is a workforce supported and enhanced by AI and automation and I do think this is again my non-expert opinion not that this is where we're going but I think we're kind of in part we're there already and uh we're talking about what there's two words and it's very specific. It is a workforce supported and enhanced by AI and automation. And the second word is workforce. We're talking about a different type of workforce. What what adjective are we going to use to modify the word workforce? So in this case when it's supported by AI and automation and it's like well look we're not uh displacement of the workforce is not our goal right now and I say right now right now we're just trying to create an augmented workforce. So, if you hear people uh or you read something and it's talking about an augmented workforce, then it's just this workforce that's using AI that there there is a level of automation that exists, but people still have jobs. Maybe not as many people because they don't need as many people whereas before you needed 10 and maybe the augmented workforce is now four or something like that. So, it it's still again, maybe maybe I'm a pessimist. I don't know. I don't know how you feel. You can let me know in the comments how you feel about uh AI and how everything's going and and shaking out so far.

Here is one that once again, this is a little more difficult, more specific when very specific when talking about AI. Some scientists predict the M could occur within this century, a theoretical point in the future when AI surpasses human intelligence. I mentioned already that the one of the goals is artificial general intelligent. Now there is another word that captures this this theoretical point when AI surpasses human intelligence and maybe at that point it gets a little scary. So this is a word that you're not going to use every day. Maybe you haven't come across it but maybe you will because I told you you're just going to get more and more exposure to people talking about AI to people reporting on AI more conversations discussing it. And that's why I think this vocabulary is relevant.

It's important. Maybe not this word, uh, you'll need right away. But I'm talking about the singularity. So the singularity, if you hear anybody mention this, it is that point in the future when AI surpasses human intelligence. And some scientists predict the singularity could occur within this century. to follow up on this. And even though it's scary, I'm gonna go ahead and make light of the situation with another comic. Uh this guy, the scientist says, "Should I be worried about uh Singularity?" And this robot says, "Don't be silly. By the way, you no longer have a house or a bank account." Kind of just representing the uh well, I don't know what what could happen. We'll see. We don't know exactly uh you know we don't know what the ramifications of AI or even AGI will be in the future. Still trying to sift through it. But I am going to be here to help you navigate that as far as the vocabulary and you know as far as being a part of your English learning journey until you no longer need me and I am just displaced because there has been a paradigm shift and the internet is just replaced by all these deep fake fakes and maybe an AI version of Wes and uh yeah I don't know maybe I can just license myself in some way and still continue to try to make a living. I'm not sure. Here are the words and phrases from today's lesson. Uh again, some of them, those ones at the end were really more AI specific. Some of these others I think you could use in a broader uh sense, but I think they're incredibly important. Knowing what a deep fake is or the word ramification or an algorithm especially, and some of those verbs and nouns automate, displace, disrupt, very important. If you enjoyed the lesson today and learned something new, let me know. Hit that like button, subscribe to the channel, turn on notifications. It just helps us, you know, promote the message and helps others in their English learning journey, build their vocabulary, learn new things. And I think, yeah, this is very important vocabulary. Vocabulary for the future.

GO OUT Has 8 Different Meanings Phrasal Verb Lesson

today I'm going to talk to you about a phrasal verb which is really going to help you improve your listening and speaking fluency [Music] what's up everyone my name is Wes this is Interactive English which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills in today's lesson we are talking about phrasal verbs but we're really just going to talk about one phrasal verb and that phrasal verb is there we go go out that is the phrasal verb that we want to look at today and I'm going to teach you eight different meanings for this phrasal verb you heard me correctly this phrasal verb has eight different meanings and that is one thing that is really challenging about phrasal verbs is that they can have multiple meanings not just two three or four but even more than that so it's important that you know how this phrasal verb is used especially in everyday conversation because that's going to help you improve your listening and speaking I'm going to tell you the meaning I'll give you some example sentences I'll also show you some videos so that you can see how the phrasal verb is used in context you ready let's begin the first meaning of go out and probably one of the more common uses is just to leave the house and induce something usually you're doing something for enjoyment oftentimes you might hear people say you know what are you doing tonight well I'm going out with my friends so get all dressed up to go out with friends go out with some friends later if you want to come or they might just say I'm going out tonight we're going out tonight let's go out tonight you're going out it's not what are you guys doing tonight are you going out are you staying in let me know tell me in the comments I'm gonna be staying in tonight a bit of a homebody no not gonna be going out are you going out tonight yeah I'm going to a club hey you hate me who a second would be Casey we're going out tonight another meaning of go out is to have a relationship with somebody that you are dating another person it doesn't really give us specific information as to how serious the relationship is but it just tells us that okay these people are together they're they're in a relationship so you might hear somebody say like well I've been going out with her for six months or I've been going out with him for three years that just tells us that these people are in a relationship and it could be something that's long-term or even if you just started dating somebody and you could say yeah you know we haven't been going out for very long I'm going out over a month Wow so how long did you go out with your phone alright about six months once you're married you wouldn't use this phrasal verb to say you're in a relationship with your husband or wife you wouldn't say we're going out but it's it's more so just dating you're in a relationship before you're married already been going out for years won't come here I think that we should stop going out on dates a respectable well born young woman going out with a married man guys girls go out with the three months have the time of their lives until they grow up meet the man that married another meaning of go out is to stop burning it can also be used when talking about lights in the case of a fire you're just waiting for the fire to stop burning and waiting until it goes out can be used when talking about lights as well a flashlight or even the lights in your home there was a strong storm and the lights went out or if you're using a flashlight and the battery dies you could say yeah

you know the light went out so in this case it's often used in the past tense because you had light and then you don't have it anymore and you'd say it went out these lights went out one by one if you said the lights went out immediately after the killing I can't believe she told me to put trees on that drawing no no honey my light went out the next meeting of go out is when you're talking about the sea you can say that that the tide goes out that the water is moving away from the land the tide comes in the tide out the water is moving away from the land it goes out every time the tide goes out I'm sinking goes out takes the sand within say another meaning for go out and I think this is the fifth one is to send a message by post often when I think about this one I'm thinking about an invitation perhaps a wedding invitation and you might say well the the wedding invitations they haven't gone out just yet so in this case it means the same as to send to go out well I'll certainly try sir actually the wedding invitations go out this week another meaning go out and this is British English is just to be broadcast so if you're talking about a TV or a radio program you can say that it goes out at 8 a.m. on Mondays this is when it is broadcasted and it goes out it went out on the radio is that right well we ain't got radio then we can use this phrasal verb when we're talking about sports and and just use it to say that you leave a competition especially if you're competing in a tournament and you might hear somebody say yeah you know our team we went out in the first round and often you would hear it being used in the past tense because the team has already lost so they would say yeah we we went out last round and we're no longer competing we can also use this phrasal verb when talking about fashion there are so many different uses for go out and you would use it to say that something is no longer fashionable in this case I think people would often use it and say that something goes out of style it's no longer fashionable people don't don't wear these clothes anymore it's gone out of style for example my clothes never go out of style I'm so I can't I can't even get through that sentence without without laughing because it's so yeah it's just not true this baby never went out of style [Music] it went out of style in the 50s and trust me honey it making a comeback so those are the many different meanings for go out do you remember all of them let's review really quickly so you can go out and leave the house for enjoyment you can date somebody and have a relationship and go out with them a fire can go out and no longer burn or lights can go out and they're just no longer on if talking about the sea level the tides can go out what was the other one messages by post invitations can go out in British English a radio or TV program can go out and be broadcasted in sports you can go out of a competition because you are no longer participating and in fashion something can go out of style I hope you enjoyed this lesson and if you learn something new please hit that like button also I'd recommend that you subscribe to our newsletter it's another great way to connect with us we send out all these cool messages with useful and free resources and all of this information will go out to you link is in the description thank you guys so much for watching and I'll see you next time

GRAMMAR QUIZ | 15 Questions for Intermediate to Advanced Learners

let's just go ahead and start the quiz this is a grammar quiz for beginner to intermediate english learners and i will give you the question and then i will give you a moment to think of the answer and then we will talk about it so here is your first question you have less than um hour to complete this quiz which article are you going to use a an or the you have less than um hour to complete this quiz the correct answer which i'm sure you chose is an an hour so we're going to use an indefinite article because we're talking about any hour it's not specific and we're going to use an because it comes before a word that begins with a vowel sound so remember we will use a before words that begin with a consonant sound and and before words that begin with a vowel sound like hour an hour and throughout the quiz i i want you to keep watching i want you to participate and this leads us into the next question i will try to keep it um okay which adjective are you going to use i'll try to keep it we're talking about the difference between ed adjectives and ing adjectives i hope that you chose interesting i'll try to keep it interesting so you're going to use 80 adjectives to describe the way a person feels bored confused interested you're going to use ing adjectives to describe a thing a situation or even a person's characteristic boring confusing interesting so in this case i'm talking about the quiz it i'll try to keep it interesting and i like to think that all of my lessons are interesting and if you would like to continue learning with me please subscribe turn on notifications so that i can become your english teacher my name is wes and interactive english it's all about helping you reach your fluency goals you can also get a pdf copy of this grammar quiz along with the answers when you click on the link down below and yes it will be yours and i will also send you some other cool stuff from time to time here is the next question

i went to the store a few days um which word are you going to use to complete this sentence i went to the store a few days so these words are commonly confused especially in spoken english the answer is a go i went to the store a few days ago and we're going to use a go when we're talking about an unknown time before the present and you'll often find it like with that expression a few days ago a few months ago a few years ago so it's not exact and it is unknown we use before with the time expressions that count back from a past moment if i were to say before i brush my teeth all right brushing my teeth that might be the past moment but then something happened before so just remember the the difference between these two a go we use with unknown times before the present and the next one i get up 7 30 a.m which preposition are you going to use in on at the correct answer is at so i get up at 7 30 a.m if we're talking about time then you're gonna use at when talking about a specific time at 7 30 a.m at 5 00 p.m at midnight you will use in with expressions of time like in the morning in the evening in the afternoon and you will use on if you're just talking about like a day on monday on tuesday on wednesday so there are rules when it comes to using these different prepositions they're good to know and then i have well this sentence for you i have been here um a while i have been here um a while will you complete this sentence with for or since and these words are commonly used when using the present perfect and the correct answer is 4. i have been here for a while the reason for that is because 4 refers to a period of time whereas since refers to a specific point in time in this case i'm talking about a while a period of time so we'll use four i have been here for a while and for the next one i'm just gonna let my daughter tell it to you [Music] all right so which word completes this sentence i would like um juice please these words can be a little confusing the correct answer is some i would like some juice please because well you can use some or any with both count nouns and non-count nouns but you're going to use some with the affirmative and you will use any with the negative like i don't want any juice or with questions do you have any juice in this case she's using it in the affirmative so she would say [Music] okay all right the next one that i have for you there um a lot of children at the playground when we go to the playground this is yeah this is what i would say there um a lot of children at the playground are you going to use is or are the correct answer is r there are a lot of children at the playground so when trying to decide between there is there are it still really depends on the noun is it a singular noun or a plural noun in this case the noun that the sentence is referring to we're talking about children children is an irregular plural noun so we will use are there are a lot of children at the playground and then i want to give you an idiom how would you complete this sentence you need to pull um together so well it's part of the idiom to pull um together means to recover control over your emotions so i'm not giving you any choices hopefully you're able to just look at it and think about it maybe say it out loud and you know that the answer is yourself we're going to use a reflexive pronoun you need to pull yourself together to pull oneself together and we use reflexive pronouns to refer to a proceeding noun or pronoun so in this case in this sentence that that is you i'm talking to you you need to pull yourself together so i i'm not telling you that i'm sure you have complete control over your emotions but hopefully maybe you've learned a new idiom you need to pull yourself together and then we have this sentence the money was stolen and i just want you to tell me is this an active sentence or a passive sentence i hope that you said passive the money was stolen is a passive sentence and you really just need to know the difference between active sentences and passive sentences in general active sentences it's when the subject is performing the action if i were to say i stole the money in that case i am performing the action stealing the money it's an active sentence with passive sentences the subject is receiving the action in this case the money the money was stolen and then you could add by someone to the end of that the money was stolen by wes it's just an example i'm not going to steal your money and then i could tell you this you speak english really which word are you going to use good or well you speak english really well okay so the the difference between good and well is really their part of speech good is an adjective so i could say something like wow you're you're really good at speaking english in that case it's an adjective like you are good uh if i say you speak english really well well that is an adverb it modifies the verb speak you do something well you speak english well here is the next one and it's a little tricky i'm late because i stopped you a present which one are you going to use to buy or buying and i say it's tricky because well you can follow the verb stop with either the gerund or the infinitive but they have different meanings with this sentence you should follow it with the infinitive i'm late because i stopped to buy you a present so if we follow it with the infinitive stop to do something it's like you well it's like you stop what you're doing in order to do something in this case in order to buy you a present if i were to follow it with the gerund stop doing something in that case i'm talking about something i i just not going to do anymore so if i say yeah last year i stopped exercising i'm just no longer doing it so just be careful with this verb you can follow it with either the gerund or the infinitive but it has a different meaning and then i have a conditional sentence for you if i were you i um ask for help should you use will or would the correct answer is would because this this sentence is in the second conditional the second conditional it's refers to an unlikely or hypothetical situation if i were you i would ask for help so you're going to use the past simple in the condition that if statement if i were you and then you'll use would plus the base verb in the result i would ask for help and then there's this sentence my mother um me to talk to him which word are you gonna use i'm really asking you if you know the past tense of the verb forbid my mother um me to talk to him so this is an irregular verb so the answer is forbade my mother forbade me to talk to him if we're talking about the past simple and i i will say it's not a verb that you're going to use every day i just wanted to to test your knowledge a little bit of irregular verbs in the past tense so remember with this verb you have forbid forbade which is the past simple and forbidden is the past participle here's the next one al also a little tricky this checkout line is for people with 10 items or um are you going to use fewer or less these words are commonly confused so the correct answer is fewer this checkout line is for people with 10 items or fewer so fewer and less are are commonly confused but you're going to use fewer when talking about count nouns and you will use less when talking about non-count nouns so in this sentence items it's plural it's a count noun so you should use fewer the the the thing that makes it difficult is that in many stores especially in the united states you will see signs like this 10 items or less i don't know why they they're just breaking this this grammar rule but just just be aware of it use fewer when talking about count nouns here's the next one also i think a little tricky i now have a um picture than before are you going to say clearer or more clear the answer is clearer i now have a clearer picture than before so so the general rule that you should follow when we're talking about comparatives you're going to add er when we're talking about short one syllable words like clear clearer and you're going to use more when with words that have two or more syllables like more famous or more fascinating and i i say that well this can be a little tricky because you you may hear people use more clear in spoken english not the majority of the time but it will happen i know some even say it's acceptable so just be aware of that but even if you were to look at the frequency in which these words are used of course you see that it's much more common to say clearer the reason why i think that people end up saying more clear is because you have this adjective that ends with an r and it's a little more challenging to say that r at the end clearer so i think people just sometimes find it just easier to use more in that case but

Gerunds vs Infinitives | Advanced Grammar Lesson

all right this should be uh turning on soon if it hasn't turned on already okay so welcome welcome welcome hope everyone is having a nice weekend a nice Saturday if you are watching this and it's not the weekend I still hope you're having a nice day so today um this week we are going to do our live stream lesson it is a grammar lesson talking about jarn and infinitives now I don't want to lose you just yet I know a lot of you are thinking oh gosh grammar um sometimes it's not the most exciting stuff but it is so so so so important um especially what we're talking about today so I guarantee you that if if you stick with us you are going to learn something new so if you are joining us right now please say hello to us in the chat tell us your name tell us where you are watching from um and and just say hello um we'd like to hear from as many people as possible and again it's always good to keep practicing your English and writing is a part of that and honestly even if you are watching this after afterwards sell us hello write in the comments your name where you from n hello from Vietnam awesome uh hope you're having a great weekend so today as I said I mentioned we're going to talk about boom all right let me see make sure you can see me uh jirens there we go we're going to talk about jirens and infinitive so the Jaren is just the Ing and the the infinitive is to plus the vase BB specifically we are going to be talking about verbs that are followed by the jiren and infinitive um Marco hello how's it going uh hope you're having a great weekend so that's great again if you guys are just joining us say hello tell us your name where you're from and we have an exciting lesson for you plan today jirens and infinitives and at the end we are going to do a little practice and during the practice you will need to write in the comments because we want you guys to keep practicing and practicing and practicing because practice makes perfect so we're going to talk about jirens in infinitives today and the verbs um that are followed by a jarn and infinitive and this is something that can be very tricky um it it can confuse English Learners sometimes and this is how people make these small small mistakes where we understand what everybody is trying to say but at the same time it kind of impedes fluency and sometimes it does confuse the meaning of of what you're trying to express so first let's look at um in where are we here we go let's look at verbs that are followed by by a Jaren right here okay so here we have um or actually no wait wait this the first page I want to look at ah this one sorry sorry sorry this is the one that I wanted to look at um right here ah here we go it is just our overview of what jirens and infinitives are so again we're talking about um oh you're doing well I can't complain either I'm also doing excellent um thank you for asking Marco um we're talking about verbs that are followed by jirens or infinitives and I gave you a couple examples so the verb followed by a jiren is in blue I recommend studying with interactive English okay so if we're talking about the verb recommend it's going to be followed by a Jaren the ing the next one which I've I've highlighted the verb in red is plan I plan to study with interactive English um again this one is followed by the infinitive which is to plus the base verb to study okay both of them kind of have you know similar meanings I recommend studying with interactive English you recommend that somebody does something and the other one I plan to study with interactive English um so again one is followed by the jiren the other is followed by the infinitive uh let's again let's move right along because I want to show you that page that I had up there before which is Boom this one now these are verbs that are followed by Jaren okay and what I've done here is there there are more verbs that are followed by injn I've just listed the ones that I personally feel are a little more common than others and that are commonly used um with jirens and are used in everyday English again I'd like you to know if you're just joining us say hello say what's up in the chat um let us know where you're from what your name is so again these are verbs avoid consider dread enjoy finish feel like quit Miss postpone recommend you're all going to be followed by jarn and what I'd like you to do is ah n great question what does dread mean dread means that something you don't want to do it means that you are not looking forward to doing it you are kind of like uh I really don't want to do this that is what dread means so again if you have any questions just let us know what I'd like to ask you to do is always practice practice practice just take one of these verbs and try to write a sentence write a sentence in the comments um using a

Jaren after these verbs so again these are some of the more common verbs that I feel um that are followed by a jarand I've gave you some examples down below and these are examples that are kind of you know personal that that are about me and

I've highlighted the verb and the jarand in blue so it says I feel like eating pizza tonight that's true I woke up today I was like H all right I'd feel like uh eating some pizza tonight so again eating is the Ing and it follows that verb feel like okay you feel like doing something and the next sentence he avoids going to the dentist that is also something that describes me because I do not like the dentist so I avoid going there you avoid doing something okay so again these are verbs that are followed by the jarand again if you guys are just joining us hello what's up let us know your name tell us where you are joining us from write to us in the comments we are talking about jiren and infinitives today we're going to do a quick grammar lesson so again these are verbs that are followed by the jirens one thing I will say about this is when you're learning these um some people might say okay like there's not really a hard- fast rule all right this is something you just need to memorize you need to practice because some people might say okay yeah verbs that are followed by in jarand it's something usually something that is real it is something that is fixed it is something that you know is already completed so you could say for example I quit watching TV all right that is something that is completed all right I quit watching is the jiren TV but I think again me personally I feel like the best way to learn these is just to memorize them just to keep reading keep listening keep practicing like we're doing in this lesson right now because when you're in having a conversation you're not going to stop and think about the verb and think like well wait a second is this completed okay I'm going to use a jiren it just needs to come naturally so Natalia hello from Brazil how are you um hope everybody's doing well this weekend so again this is just something that I would recommend if you're trying to learn the difference between these the JN and infinitives just just learn study the verbs find the list and just keep practicing try to practice them when you're reading you're going to come across them and eventually you are going to internalize this information so Mar an example sentence with Dread okay so for example we could say that one sentence he avoids going to the dentist I can write I dread going to the dentist okay so that could be something like you dread you don't want to do something you dread going to the dentist you can um dread um meeting uh somebody for that you don't want to meet you can dread going to work in the morning there are many things that you can dread um but again in this case dread I've chose it because it's typically you it when you use it it's going to be followed by jiren more often than not in whatever sentence you're saying so these are verbs that are followed by jirens now let's have a look at verbs followed by infinitives okay so here we have another list of verbs um again hello if you're joining us uh Roger morning how are you um again say hello to us in the chat um tell us where you're joining us from

Marco had a question um what is different like to do and like doing something we are going to get to that in just a moment you're you're reading our minds right now so we talked about verbs followed by jirens these are verbs that are commonly followed by infinitives but Roger we will get to your question in just a moment in the next uh slide that I'm going to show you so again we have a list of verbs that I would just recommend that you become comfortable uh familiarizing yourself with uh because you're not going to learn all the the different nuances but again you can learn like okay agree you you practice using that with the infinitive then at some point it's going to you're going to internalize it and you're just going to start using it correctly so again if you want to practice one of these choose one of these verbs write a sentence in the comments so I gave you some example sentences down below he promised to take her to dinner all right this is something that I've promised youan so maybe tonight we will go out to dinner and because I said I feel like eating pizza maybe we'll go out for Italian food he promised to take her to dinner the next one like that picture I have down there for you I learned to ride a bike again to ride is the infinitive and it is following the verb to learn you learn to do something you promise to do something these are followed by the infinitive all right again hello if you're joining us hello from y I didn't see that Cel hello from Yemen awesome got a people from all over the world with us this morning so I hope you guys are having a great weekend again in the comments just say hello let us know where you're joining us from we're talking about jirens and infinitives so these are all verbs that are followed by infinitives now we've talked about the ones followed by jiren followed by infinitive and now to kind of go to um Roger's question there are also verbs that are followed by either a Jaren or an infinitive such as the one you just asked in your question like like so these are verbs um again these are not all of them I'm just choosing the ones that I personally think are more common all right so verbs like begin continue hate like love start you can use either a Jaren or an infinitive to to say whatever it is you want to say and the one thing that you want that you need to keep in mind is that the meaning does not change it it's it's the same meaning so for example I gave you two sentences down there the Jaren is in blue the infinitive is in changes all right and these are the ones that I think can really confuse Learners a little bit because depending if we use the jiren and if we use the infinitive it has a different meaning so forget remember stop there's not that many of them but with these verbs you can use either a Jaren or an infinitive but there's a difference in the meaning so let's look at these examples she remembers buying a birthday present all right remembers is followed by the jiren she remembers buying a birthday present it's kind of just talking about um a memory she's thinking back of like oh like she remembers doing this thing in the past it's a Memory it's finished she remembers buying this present all right so if we said she remembered to buy a birthday present all right that means that she didn't forget she has not bought the present yet all right she's going to do this in the future so remembers buying is a memory it's already done you know she's already bought the present and remembers to buy she hasn't bought the present she remembers like oh wait I still need to do this thing so again very different meanings all right one's talking about the memory the other one's basically saying like oh you didn't forget to do this so again we'll practice with these a little bit but these three verbs definitely remember um forget remember and stop these are verbs where the meaning will change a little bit and I think this is the more difficult part of this again if you guys are just joining us we're talking about jirens and infinitives you can say what's up in the comments let us know where you're joining us from um so before we do a quick little practice all right I just want to go review what we've talked about Okay so we've gone over let's see we've now talked about the verbs that are followed by a Jaren again these are some common verbs that we would just use with jirens all right and I recommend afterwards you can rewatch this video and again use the comment section just write sentences write random sentences I'll have a look at them you wantana we'll have a look at them and we'll give you some feedback

there are these other verbs here that we talked about these are followed by infinitives which is two plus the base verb again I'd recommend practice using them because practice makes perfect we also then have another set of verbs like we had that question um about like doing something or like to do something these are verbs that can be followed by either a Jaren or infinitive you can use both and they have the same meaning the meaning doesn't change okay and some of these verbs are very common such as like uh we use it all the time talking about things we like to do um and then we also have these other verbs where the meaning does change forget remember and stop and you want to make sure you using them correctly and if you want some more information about jirens and infinitives I'm telling you what you can do is you could even just do um a Google search jirens versus infinitives and you're going to find a lot of information talking about the verbs that are followed by these and even some practices that you can do online so what I would like to do now uh or actually I don't know if you saw that I don't think I switched it over aha so I wanted to show you here again you can do a Google search jarn versus infinitives and you're going to find a lot of different information and you know some of them will help you even practice using these so what I'd like to do now is I want to practice um what we've learned all right now I ask can we do some more examples yes we're going to do some examples right now um so I'm going to give you a question all right and the for these first few I just want you to write is it are we going to use the Jaren or are we going to use the infinitive okay so the first question that I have for you where's my question page right here okay is this so Jaren versus infinitive we talked about this one dread is something you don't want to do I dread to the dentist are we going to use the Jaren I dread going to the dentist or the infinitive I dread to go to the dentist so in the comments all right just practice I want you to write going or to go are we going to use with this sentence are we going to use going or to go we just talked about this one um in our lesson if you're just joining us we're doing a practice with JNS in infinitive so what I'd like you to do is write the answer in the comments okay we got one all right I dread going to the dentist which one are we going to use going or to go I'll get again dread is something if you're not sure what it means it means something that you don't want to do okay so again in the comments just write which one all right so for this one where is my aha for this one again we are going to use dread is followed by the Jaren okay so we're going to say I dread going to the dentist all right the next one that I want to talk to you about let's do another question all right let's do this one right here boom okay here's the next one write either the jiren or the infinitive he hopes an English teacher all right becoming or to become right either the Jaren or the infinitive which one are we going to use with the verb hope okay and this is like this is a sentence for me all right he hopes an English teacher something I've always wanted to do ever since I was a little kid not really I wanted to be an athlete but unfortunately uh that didn't work out too well so um what do you think are we going to say use hope becoming or to become what do we use with hope is it followed by a Jaren or is it followed by the infinitive again if you just joined us we're doing a practice with jarn and

of these and then we'll do bam okay what about this one I decide in tonight are we going to use staying or to stay so with the verb decide are we going to use the Jaren or are we going to use the infinitive okay which one do you think I decided in tonight uh this is something um hello M hello hello all right welcome welcome all right if you guys are just joining us again um we're doing a little practice with jirens in infinitive so again write your answers in the comments okay practice using it practice what we've just learned so what is the answer I decided in tonight so if we're talking about the verb decide again you decide to do something okay so for this this one I decided to stay in tonight okay you decide to do something I decided to go to work today I decided to play soccer this afternoon all right you decide to do something let's try another one um this one boom okay this is something uh about you know school learning homework um if we don't have homework now I'm sure we did at some point in our lives so what would we say how would we complete this sentence all right she finished her homework she finished her homework are we going to use the Jaren doing or the infinitive to do all right what do you guys think all right excellent getting more answers in there awesome all right so this one again you finish doing something okay so for this one we are going to use the Jaren there it is she finished doing her homework all right and often times again you again we're talking about you finish doing something it's almost a cocation that you're going to find these two words together frequently you finish doing this you finish doing that okay then next one um let's do one more and then we're going to switch it up a little bit and see if this works so one more sentence with the jarn's infinitive so how about this one they promised with the project okay so the verb promise are we going to use a jiren or are we going to use an infinitive write it in the comments okay which one are we going to use and if you're just joining us again we're doing a practice with jirens and infinitives because grammar is important um and if you I would recommend again watching the presentation again to learn this even better because this is something that you need to know so which one um getting some answers here n sn di getting answers excellent all right so again what do you think they they promise with the pr

Jaren or infinitive so if we are talking about promise okay promise is followed by the infinitive you promise to do something all right they promise to help with the project okay I promised to take Yana out to dinner tonight okay so you promise to do something it's followed with the infinitive again um you know this is good practice practice practice so let's do a different one so with these okay I'm going to give you some sentences and I want you to tell me if the meaning changes or there is no change so let me show you what I'm talking about so here we have two sentences boom all right in the comments I want you to write if there is a change or no change so now these verbs are verbs that you can follow with a Jaren or infinitive you can use either one the difference is does the meaning of the sentence change or does the meaning not change we talked about this um so again we have two sentences we love studying English we love to study English does that meaning change are those uh is the meaning of those sentences is it the same um or does it not change all right does the meaning change or is there no change if there is no change then they are exactly the same so in the comments just write change or no change and again if you're watching this even a week later a month later a year later later write the answers in the comments just practice as we're doing this it will help you so again if we are talking about the verb love we can follow love with either a Jaren or infinitive but the meaning does not change okay with this let's see I can get this bam there is no ch change both of these mean the same thing we had a question earlier about what's the difference between um you like to do something or you like doing something it's the same with that we like studying English we like to study English there is absolutely no change in those so what about um this one okay again I'm just trying to choose verbs that we use fairly um regularly common verbs okay here's another one change or no change I hate watching horror films all right I hate watching horror films all right or I hate to watch horror films all right is there no change in the meaning these are the same all right the meaning is the same or does the meaning change is it different I hate watching horror films or I hate to watch horror films okay what do you think remember hate we can use either a Jaren or infinitive the question is you know does the meaning change or does it stay the same which one do you think all right what do you guys think change or no change okay write your answer in the comments okay what do you guys think we're getting some answers in here excellent excellent so with this one again when we're talking about hate it can be followed by a Jaren um or infinitive but there is no change in the meaning the meaning of both of these is essentially the same the difference is and I will tell this um tell you this and this is again this is my opinion English is no absolute I feel like when you're using the verb hate you can use either ajared or infinitive but I think in this case I think it's much more common that people will often use a Jaren all right you hate doing something you could say I hate to do something right getting answers from everybody Nom Sylvia excellent Roger um what do you guys think is there change or no change write it in the comments so if we're talking about this one the verb is forget we talked about this um I forgot setting the timer I forgot to set the timer in this case all right there is a change okay there is a difference in the meaning between these two okay so let's look at them a little closer because again this is something that that can be a little confusing so I want to make a little more space down here um so again this meaning changes so for example I forgot setting the timer all right all right in this case you did set the timer you just forgot doing it you forgot about doing it all right I forgot setting the timer the timer is on you just forgot about it all right in the other situation I forgot to set the timer all right okay I'm going to make this a little smaller so let's see so this can all be up here there we go all right I forgot to set the timer you did not set the timer you completely forgot about it okay so in this case there are different meanings between you know you forget setting something or you forget to set something all right I forgot I forgot setting the timer um I forgot to set the timer so remember the three verbs that we talked about where the meaning changes remember forget and stop those change so let me give you an example too I think somebody had asked about stop okay um I'm going to give you an example with stop real quick so you can see how the meaning changes um okay so we have this sentence I stop smoking so in these two sentences again the ones followed smoking is the jiren to smoke is the infinitive completely different meanings okay and the difference between these is I stopped smoking it basically means that again you quit smoking all right you do not smoke anymore you quit smoking it's not part of your life you stopped doing this activity you stopped smoking if you said I stopped to smoke then basically what that means is you smoke okay you stopped somewhere you stopped somewhere outside you're going somewhere and you stopped to smoke you stopped to do something okay so again very different meanings depending on whether you're using the Jaren or infinitive you stopped to do some you stopped doing something all right you no longer do it or you stopped to do something it was an interruption in your daily life in your activity because you wanted to do it all right so I hope you guys enjoyed this little lesson this lesson on um jirens and infinitives again I'd recommend check out our social media if you haven't already join us connect with us we put up a bunch of questions for you guys to answer to help you practice and improve your English skills again um if you want a little more practice I'd rewatch the presentation part so you can see those verbs that are used with either a Gerund or infinitive and and I would just practice using them you know as you read as you study more as you listen more you are just going to understand when and when not to use it and how it's used and you're just going to improve your English and you you won't even probably realize it at the time so thank you thank you thank you for joining us um hope you guys learn something new and we will continue with more lessons next Saturday um not really sure what time and we will see you then all right thank you guys so much have a wonderful rest of the weekend and keep studying

Ghostly Halloween Idioms That Will Scare You Stiff

Watch the original lesson on YouTube

Today I'm going to teach you 11 spooky, scary Halloween idioms. I'm sure you're wondering, "Why 11?" Because 11 is an odd number and we are all about odd things around Halloween time. Today we're talking about Halloween idioms. So if you're ready for some spooky fun, keep watching. You can use these idioms anytime, anywhere, not just on Halloween. But keep in mind that idioms are more of an informal way of communicating. So don't go putting them on job applications, or essays, or things like that. Are you ready for some spooky idioms?

Let's go! Number one... Are you scared? You should be because this idiom is scared stiff. And scared stiff means very badly, badly, badly, badly, frightened. So frightened that you can't really move. You're stiff. You can't move. Badly frightened. Scared stiff. Number two - something that comes back to haunt. This idiom refers to a mistake from the past that affects someone later. So if something has come back to haunt you, it's not usually good. It's something that you've done a long time ago, and you see the consequences of that action now. It's not good, and it's very, very terrifying.

Number three - a stab in the back. Ouch...that is painful. Now from the get-go you can tell that this is not good. Nobody wants to get stabbed in the back. But what it really means is if somebody betrays you. This idiom could be a stab in the back or it could be to stab someone in the back. This idiom usually does refer to people who are close to you. They are usually the ones who can stab you in the back. So if you have any friends, please don't stab them in the back. It's not nice. It's painful. Number four - witch hunt. A witch hunt is an investigation usually used to harass a particular person or a group of people.

So it's not good. It's like you're targeting a specific person or group of people to harass them. Not good. Number five - skeleton in the closet. Whoo...did it get cold in here? This one refers to an embarrassing or incriminating secret from your past. It references having a corpse hidden inside your closet. You wouldn't want anyone to find out about that. Number six - blind as a bat. I love this idiom. And you know why? Because I am kind of blind as a bat. It just means a person who cannot see very well. So without my contacts or my glasses I am definitely blind as a bat. I would run into things, hit things, fall. Not good.

Number seven - night owl. This is a person who is awake during the night. They are very comfortable staying up at night. Maybe they're working or they're studying. Or maybe they're watching movies or other things. They're just very comfortable being up and awake in the middle of the night. I am NOT a night owl. I love to go to bed early. In fact, it one of my favorite things. So...not a night owl. Number eight - in cold blood.

Now we're really getting somewhere scary. This idiom means to do something without mercy or emotion. And it usually refers to killing. So it's an idiom that I hope you don't use very often at all. Hopefully maybe never because it's just not a good situation to have. Number nine - a death trap. A death trap is a place that is potentially very dangerous. I challenge you to say death trap ten times. Go! Death trap, death trap, death trap, death trap, death...five times even is hard. Number ten - ghost town. I love ghosts. No, sorry ghosts. If you hear me, I don't love you. I was joking. It's not as scary as it sounds though because a ghost town is a place that is empty.

So it doesn't have to be an actual town full of ghosts. Although, how scary would that be? But I'm a wuss so I'd get scared and run. And number 11, the oddest one of all, to give someone the heebie-jeebies. I love this idiom. The first time I learned this idiom, I was actually watching Madagascar. Out of all things...yes the animated cartoon movie. Yes, that's the one. Does anyone else have the heebie-jeebies? It sounds really funny, the heebie-jeebies, but it doesn't have a good or funny meaning. If somebody is giving you the heebie-jeebies, it means they're making you very, very scared. So scared that you're trembling. Ohhh. Gives me the heebie-jeebies.

Now are you ready for spooky practice? In the comments, tell us about a time when someone scared you stiff or gave you the heebie-jeebies. Go! That's it for this lesson. Please give this video a thumbs up if you feel like you've learned something new and had some spooky fun. Thank you for joining us and we'll see you next time. Bye!

Grammar Quiz - prepositions, verb tenses, adverbs, & more

this is a comprehensive grammar quiz and if you enjoy practicing and improving your grammar skills then please subscribe turn on notifications because I would like to become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you improve your skills and reach your fluency goals so what I've done is I've taken some of my favorite grammar quizzes and I've put them together in this nice long comprehensive quiz and I think it's only appropriate that we begin with prepositions because they can be a bit confusing so I think that's a good place to start I'm going to give you the sentence and I just want you to tell me which preposition best completes the sentence okay so the first one that I have for you is this right here all right the first one is they were convicted um a crime they didn't commit what do you think convicted on convicted by convicted with convicted of which one do you think it is convicted of here's the next question I have for you he's accustomed driving in snowy weather which preposition best completes that sentence he's a custom driving in snowy weather and the answer yes is two he's accustomed to driving in snowy weather the team is devoted winning the championship all right what do you think the team is devoted winning the championship is it devoted to devoted at devoted in or devoted on which one do you think which one of these sounds right to you when you're talking about these prepositions so I hope that you said the answer again is two the team is devoted to winning the championship many believe the iPhone is superior all others Superior Superior at Superior with Superior to or Superior of I don't really have a strong opinion this was just the only example I could think of

but the answer is two many believe the iPhone is superior to all others the next one uh that I have for you another uh multiple choice question parents want to keep their children safe um danger and some of you again maybe you know these without even looking at some of the choices that I gave you would you say safe to safe from safe around or safe over we're talking about keeping somebody safe I think this is very true I definitely want to keep our little girl safe and I would want to keep her safe from danger parents want to keep their children safe from something else something dangerous I could say I really hope you are engaged in these lessons Okay if someone is engaged that is a way to describe a person that is an adjective and you would often follow it with a certain preposition so what do you think I hope you're really engaged these lessons the answer is in I really hope you are engaged in these lessons so if you are engaged in something it just means that you are you are paying attention you want to learn and you are engaged in a certain activity and you're very engaged that's a good thing the next one is I'm grateful um your offer what do you think if two people there they come to an agreement somebody might say this I'm grateful um your offer which preposition best completes that and you would say that they are grateful for I'm grateful for your offer and if you are grateful for something it's the same as saying that you are thankful for this thing and again that is another uh adjective that you'd follow with that same preposition grateful for thankful for the next one that I have for you is their marriage is devoid um laughter so this one uh this adjective may be a little trickier a little more advanced devoid um something devoid of their marriage is devoid of laughter and if we're talking about uh if you are devoid of something it means that they lack something that there it that it doesn't exist there is none there is no laughter in their marriage it is devoid of laughter devoid of something the next one I could say are you concerned um your health and I tried to make this question relevant to I have the picture of these Donuts back there uh Donuts that you know they're not very healthy it's not the healthiest of foods so somebody uh could ask like hey are you concerned your health concerned about so if you are concerned about something then it just means you're worried about it so again even in that case you're concerned about you're worried about they mean the same thing and we use that preposition about concerned about something the next one she is very well acquainted the facts of the case so there in the background you kind of have this picture of a woman and the idea would be perhaps she's a lawyer and we're talking about a case she's trying a case and you could say well she is very well acquainted the facts of the case the answer is with she is very well acquainted with the facts of the case if you are acquainted with it it means that you are you know about it that you are familiar with this thing now I'm going to try and make it a little more challenging because this time I am going to give you a sentence and there are two there are two missing prepositions all right so the first one I could say that is this if you're addicted our Channel destroying my shoes if you are uh if you are notorious for something all right if you're notorious for something it means that you are known for this thing and if you are fed up with something you are tired of it you are not going to take it anymore and say I'm fed up with this let's look at the next one the store was crowded um people who were eligible um the grand prize so those are the two adjectives you're talking about crowded many people and the other one eligible eligible um something the store was crowded with people who were eligible for the grand prize so if you say a place is crowded with something it means there are many things and if you are eligible for something it means that you have met the requirements to get something the next one that I have for you is and this is how I feel so this is what uh this is why I chose this sentence I don't know if you can see the picture it's a picture of an airplane and there are seats on the airplane and I would say I'm incapable getting comfortable this seat you would say that I'm incapable of getting comfortable in this seat so if you're talking about you are capable of doing something that that you can do it if we want to say the opposite you would say incapable of doing something since we're talking about a seat and somebody would sit in a seat you would say comfortable in this seat because we're sitting the next one if you're Keen this is what I would tell you guys or I try to tell you guys all the time if you're Keen improving your English join our community and you'll be amazed all the cool stuff we'll send you you are Keen doing something and you are amazed hmm something if you are keen on doing something it means that you want to do it you desire to do it if you're keen on improving your English if you want to do it then I would say join our community and you'll be amazed by all the cool stuff will will send you it's amazed by you are amazed by something I'm sure that you rock that part of the quiz you can let me know down in the comments but right now I want to switch gears to something that's very important and what I'm talking about are verb tenses and I say this is very important because this is going to tell us the time when something happens so let's begin and good luck let's just look at our very first question and again this is all about verb tenses I'm going to give you a sentence with a blank I want you to write the correct verb tense I'm also go I'll tell you the verb as well and I'll give you a little bit of a hint so so here's the first one it's gonna get more difficult as we go along so here is our first sentence all right and I want you to complete that sentence and this maybe this is a little tricky so I've given you a hint that this is uh well there is a modal in this sentence the main verb is no all right so how would you complete this sentence he ought better what do you think the answer is to no so I told you that it's a little tricky because you're not only writing the verb you need to put the preposition 2 in there so ought is your modal verb many people really consider ought to as the modal and then when you have like a modal verb you're going to follow that with the base verb no so he ought to know better the next one right here um this is going to be again maybe it's a little tricky so the plane um your main verb is arrive at 8 pm your clue is scheduled time you might be thinking schedule time wait what does that have to do with anything I will explain when I give you the answer the reason I said I thought it would be tricky is because I thought many people might say will arrive which you could say but schedule time it's more common that people are going to use the present simple even if you're talking about something in the future so if we have to go to the airport I would tell you like oh we we need to leave now we need to drive to the airport because the plane arrives at 8 pm how about this one again um your clue unspecified time all right the main verb is the verb to be so how would you complete this sentence I um to China twice in this case unspecified time we're talking about the present perfect tense I have been to China twice I didn't tell you the time so in that case it's it's common people are going to use the present perfect tense I have been to China twice here we go and this is true actually uh this is a true sentence for me and my family I'd say last year last year at this time we um a trip to Romania your clue is I'm talking about an action at a point in time so hopefully these clues that I'm giving you will help remind you of the verb tense that you should be using because when you're learning verb tenses this is what this is the way people would teach them this is how I would talk about them and I would tell people oh think about think about it's an action at a point in time you're going to use this verb tense we're talking about the past continuous last year at this time we were planning a trip to Romania I I said it's an action so if you think about an action it's like something that's happening at a point in time which means it's going to continue because we were talking about an action typically it's something that will continue along and in this case it's the past continuous let's look uh at the next one okay the main verb is get I um the door in this case I want you to think about the situation and you're saying this sentence like it's a quick and sudden decision and if you're talking about a sudden decision I'll get so you're going to use will with quick and sudden decisions something that would happen immediately and I think most of the time in conversation people are going to use talking about a continuing action I am English for four years and I will continue to do so in the future another key word there is for for the preposition not the number so I am English for four years and I will continue to do so in the future we're talking about the present perfect continuous I have been learning English for four years and I will continue to do so in the future let me tell you why it's the present perfect continuous so that first part am that first independent clause I've been learning English for four years something that started in the past it's continued to the present so that really tells you you're going to use the perfect tense but in this case it's better to use the present perfect continuous because the next part is saying that you will continue learning English in the future so that is one difference between the present perfect and present perfect continuous I think of uh an action that will continue in the future you're going to use the present perfect continuous I have been learning so here's the the situation there's two sentences your key is that there's like just some evidence so think of the situation there's only one minute left in the match our team win so when is the verb that I want you to use how are you going to use that what verb tense in order to complete that sentence so that it really that the situation makes sense in this case remember how I told you before that sudden uh sudden quick actions like something that happens immediately you're going to use will in this case you're going to use going to when there's evidence or even there's a sign that something will come in the future you're going to use going to there's only one minute left in the match our team is going to win this is great let's look at the the next question or the next sentence that I have for you this is an example of the subjunctive technically the subjunctive mood so here's my sentence the doctor recommends that she some sleep recommends is your really that's your that is the main verb the that she am some sleep that is a clause but a clause it still has a verb in it you would say she get the doctor recommends that she get some rest did I say sleep in that first sentence No Rest sorry maybe I misspoke when I was talking about it the doctor recommends that she gets some rest now I will say that again I'm writing this down so in writing I think it's very common people use the subjunctive mood now if we're talking about spoken English I think that people will say gets and this is sometimes when um the way people speak does not always match the way somebody would write something that is grammatically accepted or correct here's another one are you guys ready what do you think two past events all right and now I'm giving you two blanks so think about the situation by the time I am at the restaurant that is actually an adverb clause the main Clause everyone and I want you to use already order so how would you complete that sentence there's two different blanks in this one by the time I am at the restaurant everyone so the first part by the time I am at the restaurant that is my adverb clause and with the adverb clause you're going to use the simple past the next part it's appropriate especially because you see the word already that to tell you okay the perfect tense and because we're talking about the past then you would use the past perfect so it's almost like you're talking about these two events that happened in the past by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone had already eaten so I this is a good example as to when you would use the past perfect tense okay now we're going to talk about some extremely common words in English and this can be difficult because in some languages these words don't exist and I'm talking about articles a and the or no article so after I tell you the answer I will explain why you would use this article

here we go I'm talking about the Articles a and the and no article as well often I think in grammar books you may see people use this Sim symbol this Theta symbol when they want to represent that no article is used so I'm going to give you a bunch of different sentences and I just want you to complete the sentence with the correct article let's begin with this question right here and that Blank Spot um and I'd say that's great this is something I might tell you I'd say that's great you want to learn um English so what are you going to use in that blank which article are you going to use a and the or no article the answer is no article so when you're talking about languages we do not use articles before languages if you're talking about English French German Russian Japanese you are not going to use an article the next question is and I want you to put yourself in this situation pretend that you are at a restaurant and you are asking this question and you say excuse me can you tell me where um toilet is which article would you use to complete that sentence the answer is the excuse me can you tell me where the toilet is and in this situation specifically I'm talking about a restaurant you use the when you assume there is only one of something so if you're at a restaurant you assume there's probably just one toilet for men there's one toilet for women and you would ask the question and use the the next one is this woman uh right here I would say just talking about her job she works as University Professor all right she works as University Professor I told you to think about the noun but you're also in this case you need to consider that adjective the word university because it's describing which type of Professor and the reason why that you need to consider that adjective is because of the sound that comes after the article so what do I mean by that the correct answer is a she is a university Professor or you could say she is a university Professor either pronunciation is correct I tend to use uh and just say that schwa sound she's a university professor and we use a before non-specific nouns it's Professor it could be any Professor that begin with a consonant sound I told you you have to think about University because that is the next sound that you hear when you think about the rule with A and N many people think oh look at the letter is it a consonant letter or a vowel and that's going to tell you the answer it's re it really depends on the sound if it's a consonant sound that follows the article you're going to use a u is a vowel the letter it's a it's a consonant sound that yeah yeah University um all right the next one this is true this is something that I think I've said before and I would say one day I hope to climb um Mount Kilimanjaro okay so what are you going to use to complete that sentence a and the or no article we're talking about a mountain Mount Kilimanjaro it is a proper noun if we're talking about mountains we are not going to use an article before the names of mountains so when you are giving the name and using the proper noun Mount Kilimanjaro or Mount Everest you are not going to use an article before that name this is one of those rules that again you don't need to memorize the rule but just the more you see sentences like this and you say to yourself okay one day I hope to climb Mount Kilimanjaro the next time you are talking about a mountain and you say the name you're just going to naturally you're not going to use an article let's look at the next one which is this this is a little uh trivia question for you too all right what is um most northern capital city in the world and I'm gonna give you the real answer to this so what is um most northern capital city in the world the key word in there I think is most the answer is the the key word is most because when you're talking about superlatives you're going to use the article the the most um the most beautiful the most incredible or even if you're talking about like those shorter uh superlatives the fastest um the the smelliest the dirtiest and the answer this is true the the most northern capital city in the world is Reykjavik Iceland the next question that

I have for you is this one right here um and this is where uh this is where I used to live would you like to visit um Golden Gate Bridge okay so um I'm talking about uh another name it is a proper noun would you like to visit um Golden Gate Bridge so again when you're thinking about those rules I'm talking about the name of a bridge what do you think you're going to use the correct answer is the when you're talking about the names of bridges uh you're going to use the article the the Golden Gate Bridge the Brooklyn Bridge so these are rules that the more you practice the more you read the more you listen you're just gonna start to remember this information so this one now I'm gonna throw a few at you with uh two two of the two options in there lake in North America is um Lake Superior which article a and the or no article again that first one we've talked about the answer is the and no article so we talked about that first one when we're saying the superlatives the largest the largest lake in North America is Lake Superior you you will not use an article before the names of lakes let's look at the next one right here um again there's two two different ones that I want you to complete and this is something like you're you're telling a story think of this as like uh storytelling and in this case this is not an exciting story it's kind of just starting out I say here is a man standing next to um plant there is a ladybug on um plant it's kind of a boring story but I'll I'll tell you why this is useful in just a moment so what uh what two articles would you use to complete this story these sentences so that it's correct the way you would say is here is a man standing next to a plant there is a ladybug on the plant if you're talking about a story and that's why I wanted to reference this in relation to storytelling because you have the the rule of first mention you use a or uh the first time that something is mentioned so when you're talking about a store and you mentioned something for the first time you're going to use uh or a the next time that you mention it the second mention you're going to use the and the reason for that is because the first time you say something it could be just non-specific and you could be talking about any plan the second time you mention that same thing it then becomes specific he's learning how to play um tennis okay so the noun I told you guys to think about the noun that follows so we're talking about tennis it's a sport he's learning how to play tennis when we're talking about the names of sports or games even if we're talking about games you are not going to use an article he's learning how to play tennis or I play soccer or I love um to play Monopoly the name of a game there's no article before that then we have uh this is an extra Russian what do you think apple a day keeps um doctor away so if you've heard this expression you probably know which articles um go in there or maybe no article so we're talking about Apple it is uh it starts with a vowel sound so you're going to use n the expression goes an apple a day keeps the doctor away all right so and before non-specific count nouns that start with a vowel sound the before specific nouns the reason why I say specific is because when you're when you're saying this expression I think typically well people have a specific doctor and that's what they're referring to when they say the expression because if you say a doctor again you'd be talking about any doctor but people in general they they may have a doctor that they will regularly go see so I think that's why in this case Doctor would be specific an apple a day keeps the doctor away I guess it's true apples are good for us the next one Manny Pacquiao I hope I believe I'm pronouncing that correctly maybe not if you're from the Philippines you can correct me Manny Pacquiao who is um famous boxer is not from Malaysia he's from um Philippines fill in the blank with either a and the or no article but Manny Pacquiao who is a famous boxer all right just in general like I said at the very um um beginning we talked about someone who was a professor who is a famous boxer is not from Malaysia no article when we talk about the names of countries and this this is a rule that applies to most countries countries with plural names you're going to use um the and I think Philippines is probably one of the more famous uh well-known countries with a plural name I think there are um two or three more maybe you guys can think of some but for most countries you're going to use no article but you use the before countries with plural names or if you're talking about countries where it like names the type of state it is or it's like a collective a group for example the United States or the United Kingdom or the Republic of China then you will also use the as well as before plural names and this one if you enjoyed the lesson please hit like button how would you complete how would you complete this sentence talking about something it's specific there's only one so the answer is yes the if you enjoyed this lesson please hit the like button how are you doing so far all right I'm gonna try to make it a little more difficult because well the next thing that we're going to talk about I think this may be the most difficult part of the quiz and we're going to talk about conditional sentences and we're going to go over all of them so without further ado let's practice using conditionals it's a bit of a conditional quiz I'm not going to go deep into the the grammar of these different conditionals we're just going to practice uh writing sentences and practice our skills um just some Basics okay so what are conditional statements this is when you have a condition and a result so the condition is going to be that if statement the result is just your main Clause so you can see this sentence right down here if you don't pay attention that is a condition if you don't pay attention you won't understand conditionals the next part is just let's look at the types of conditionals okay so I've listed uh five different kinds of conditionals and I've given you an example sentence so the zero conditional if you touch fire you get burned this is just like a general truth the first conditional we're talking about a result that happens in the future if I go to the party I'll call you the second conditional those are your hypothetical situations okay those are kind of imaginary if I could fly I would travel the world all right can I fly no it's imaginary the third conditional okay is unreal and the reason I say it's unreal is because we're talking about a condition that happened in the past it's already happened we cannot change the past so that's why I say well it's unreal you can't change the past if I had gone I would have told you so maybe you're talking about that party that you're supposed to go to well if I had gone to the party I would have told you and then the final one the mixed conditional this this one can be really challenging because you're taking oftentimes you're taking a condition that it happened in the past and then you're talking about a present result as in as in this example sentence right here if I had eaten all right I wouldn't be hungry now if I had eaten earlier in the day I didn't eat but if I had eaten then I would not be hungry right now so we're gonna start out we're going to start a little easier and then it's just going to get a little more difficult the first part is what I'm going to do is I'm going to give you the condition or the result and I just want you to complete the sentence let's just do the first one so for example let's talk let's look at the zero conditional okay this is the one I want you to write a sentence in the zero conditional if you commit a crime what what's the result so I've given you the condition the if statement if you commit a crime okay tell me the result remember to keep it in the zero conditional this is talking about a general truth keeping it in the zero conditional you go to jail so a general truth okay if you commit a crime present simple you go to jail present simple let's look at the first conditional okay so I've tried to make this a little more challenging okay those are the pictures all right you see study tests all right I'll fail you're talking about a condition and a result they're not always in that order sometimes the result can come before the condition the meaning is the same so I've given you the result I want you to complete the sentence tell me what the condition is and use those pictures I'll fail what's the condition if I don't study for the test the result is going to have the future tense I'll fail the condition present simple I'll fail if I don't study for the test and usually yes that that's that's true statement um let's look at the next one okay the second conditional hypothetical situation okay if you're just maybe you're just thinking something to yourself if I had five dollars okay if I had five dollars what the condition is in the past simple if I had five dollars I would say I would buy you a coffee the result would plus the base verb I would buy you a coffee I would go I would sing I would dance so again this is the second conditional now let's look at the third conditional are you ready in in this case again I'm giving you the result first all right I'm giving you the result we would have hit the like button and again you you could you might say something a little different it's fine you can have different answers I just want to make sure you guys have an idea as to how you should use these conditionals and then make sure you know the the grammar isn't confusing you too much all right so again you're talking about something that happened in the past all right we can't change the past I would say again we would have hit the like button if you had asked us I didn't ask you I didn't ask you in the past it's already happened so then again think about the grammar the condition if you had asked is the past perfect had asked and then the result we have would Plus have plus the past participle would have hit okay so if you haven't hit the like button I am asking you now please go ahead hit that like button if you like practicing your English skills and practicing using conditionals okay now let's do a mixed one and I just realized all right this is this is very similar to that example uh okay I don't want to tell you we've already we've already kind of talked about this so this is a mixed conditional if I had eaten breakfast that is the condition I want you to give me a result from the present all right so think about this situation think about your real life you didn't eat breakfast how would you feel if I had eaten breakfast again I wouldn't be so hungry right now I'm talking about the I said right now just to emphasize that I'm talking about the present okay this is an example of a mixed conditional and a common one that people might say well if I had eaten earlier I wouldn't be so hungry that is a common example Okay so what I want to do now all right we're going to switch it up a little now I have a few more questions for you and this is just going to be a gap fill it's multiple choice so let's look at the first question if I um it was going to rain I would have brought my umbrella okay what what do you think best completes that that conditional statement if I um it was going to rain I would have brought my umbrella so the correct answer is B all right we're talking about uh the third conditional if I had known it was going to rain I would have brought my umbrella third conditional all right excellent the next one but this one I think you can see clearly I um you to dinner if you help me move what do you think what what best completes that sentence I um you to dinner if you help me move what will happen in the future we're talking about the first conditional all right so the correct answer wait a second the correct answer is C yes I'd want to know make sure that I got the right letter I will take you to dinner if you help me move

let's do another one here we go um if you if okay if I um you I join our email list what what uh uh what would you what would you say if I um you I join our email list so the correct answer is B I put if I were you I join our email list it's the second conditional when you're talking about the second conditional it is grammatically appropriate to use the subjunctive if I were you writing is more formal so I think if you're writing something I would stick with the subjunctive and use were so just something if you said a then I would say okay you're not really wrong I told you so I would accept both of them so just keep that in mind this is the subjunctive so now what I want to do is I'm going to give you a situation this is kind of talking about

Transformations

I'm going to give you a situation I want you to write a conditional sentence so let's look at the first one right now so again I will read it in case you're you can't see it very well because of the the colors and the picture so it says I didn't take the bus so I didn't arrive on time okay what is a conditional sentence that you could use that that would mean the same thing that would capture that same meaning taking one sentence and using uh saying it in a different way but having the same meanings if I had taken the bus past perfect I would have arrived on time so basically like I put the sentence down there so you can reference it I didn't take the bus so I didn't arrive on time if I had taken the bus I would have arrived on time so we can use the third conditional to say to have that same meaning and it's a little more challenging because you have to think it through a bit more with that grammar let's do another one so I don't live in New York City because I didn't get the job I don't live in New York City because I didn't get the job what conditional sentence could you write that has the same meaning remember how I said typically you'll find like a condition your if statement and then the result you can put the result first and then the condition that's a hint so if we're going to put the result first I would say the following all right I would live in New York City you're talking about right now I would live there right now if I had gotten the job and I would say again when you're talking about the the past perfect had gotten had got you can use either one either one of those is correct one more good good practice right now so I'm shy I didn't go over and talk to her okay I'm shy I didn't go over and talk to her what conditional would would capture that okay so again think about uh a the condition and the result so in this one I switched it around all right I know I said it's it's still it's still best to use the subjunctive but I wanted to give you this example because again somebody might say this and they might not use the subjunctive and this is this is how it is in English but I would say again just even though I didn't do it here if you're writing I would I would set recommend stick with the subjunctive if I weren't so shy I would have gone over and talked to her but again somebody might just be having a conversation they say wow if I wasn't so shy I would have gone over and talked to her okay right now I want to practice some useful words and phrases to help you be more descriptive and they're going to help you be more descriptive when talking about time manner or place do you see where I'm going with this so I want to quiz you on adverbs and if you know this it's going to help you dramatically improve your English skills

let's begin we're going to start with some adverbs of frequency and I think this is a little hopefully this is a little easier your familiar with many of these adverbs and all I want you to do and there's more than one you see those percentages there so we're talking about frequency which word would you use to talk about something that is one hundred percent of the time and then which word would you use for 75 percent of the time and then fifty percent of the time 25 and then zero saying that okay this I don't want to give the adverb the word away but that is how frequent this is zero percent the first one 100 we're talking about always something that you always do I always brush my teeth before I go to bed but 75 percent I think uh most of the time people are going to use usually usually you could also use the word often and fifty percent of the time sometimes you know it sometimes rains in the in Spring 25 percent of the time rarely I think this one is commonly used I would even say rarely I think you could go less than 25 and then I think zero percent at the at the end never if you say I never do something then you really zero percent I think you will always use these words in conversation talking about how frequently you do something now let's move into some um well some other things that I think are kind of well similar different ways you could say this so here is an expression if I say we like to eat sushi um and it equals it's the same as sometimes so I'm talking about like 50 what is an expression that I can use that means the same as sometimes there's more than one answer but what I was going for was this one every now and then so every now and then means kind of the same as sometimes I've also put another one down there from time to time is another phrase expression that you could use there are many different adverbs of frequency this this next one is an idiom and I've given you a hint down here so and this is kind of true um especially we live in Hungary it's a landlocked country we eat seafood um what what would uh what would I complete that with it's the same as rarely actually I would even go like like lower than that and say it's probably closer to like hardly ever so I tried to give you a little bit of a hint to tell you what this idiom is um the answer is once in a blue moon I told I put two moons down there with a calendar because that is a blue moon a blue moon is when you have two full moons in the same month they call that a blue moon and it is something that happens rarely it does not happen that often which is where this came from this expression that oh you do something once in a blue moon you just you do it rarely you don't often do it but now I want to switch to kind of another group adverbs of degree so the first question that I have for you thinking about like a degree like to the extent of something this is a question that somebody would ask kind of like jokingly trying to be humorous if it's like very hot outside and you're talking to somebody else and you know that that person feels like wow it is hot you know this person thinks it's very hot outside you could ask this question jokingly is it hot um for you the answer is enough that is the that is the adverb that I'm looking for it's an adverb of degree is it hot enough for you so that's a good phrase to know as well this is more like vocabulary so now I've given you the adverb these are all adverbs talking about like a degree and I I want you to think of which word may follow there are different words that might often follow these adverbs and I just want you to think of some right now this is a great way for um you know to build your vocabulary collocations are when you have two words that are frequently used together so if you were to think of the adverb like fully what's the next word that just comes to mind not really a quiz question but really trying to get you to think of different words so uh the ones that I was that I chose and again there's no right or wrong answer fully aware yes you are fully aware of something that you know that something is happening deeply sorry about something a situation like sorry or regret deeply is one that you would that you would use you're deeply sorry about something or you deeply regret something and then utterly I I think this one because utterly kind of means the same as extremely there are many different words that you could use utterly insane is just the first one that came to my mind uh but you could say something is utterly ridiculous I think is another common collocation now I want to look at some adverbs of manner and the first question I think is I I think you guys will know it I think it's not too difficult uh is this one it's just to fill in the blank I think you speak you to take the test carefully we're saying it's the same thing it has the same meaning if we're talking about those adverbs of manner it's it's often it's those ly adverbs not all of them end in an ly but many of them do now I want to kind of combine degree and manner with this uh this is a question and the reason why I'm giving you this question it's kind of a play on words as a teacher I would say this to students sometimes kind of just joking around being funny I told you it's a play on words are you working or um working hard and hardly so are you working hard or hardly working and it's a play on words because we're using that that adverb you have hard as an adverb and then hardly as an adverb and the reason why it's funny it's a play on words because working hard and hardly working are opposites if somebody is working hard in that case we're talking about that adverb of degree like you're working with a lot of intensity hardly as an adverb of uh manner means kind of like well uh slightly very little so that's why I said it's kind of a play on words working hard hardly working their opposites and this is a good example of that using these adverbs are you working hard or hardly working so we talked about adverbs of frequency some manner some degree these are all uh some adverbs of time which again I think many of these these are very very common adverbs and this is one that I don't think I don't think it's too difficult the reason why I'm putting this up there maybe it's challenging because I do often hear people make mistakes when it comes to using this adverb of time the package arrived and then what how would you complete that sentence and I've given you the calendar down there to kind of really put it in context I know that calendar it does not have seven days that's okay just pretend like it's a it's a four day week so you see that the blue that's when the package that's today um and then then you can count backwards the days when the package arrived the answer I was looking for you could say yes earlier not yesterday again because again count backwards all right it said not yesterday not not two days ago but three days ago sometimes I hear Learners make mistakes and they'll say things like two days before or three days before um or like five days before instead of using like five days ago or one week ago or three years ago something we have not talked about so far are questions and I want to test your knowledge when it comes to tag questions and and I think this is more relevant when it comes to spoken English because we use these in just casual conversation so it's helpful to know how to use them correctly do you have an episode about Tag questions and I had to respond and say no but that's a great great idea so today we are going to talk about Tag questions or question tags so the first thing you might be thinking is well Tag questions question tags what's the difference and the answer to that is absolutely nothing so you have two types of statements you have a positive statement and negative statements positive statements are followed by a negative tag he finished the report didn't he now a negative statement negative statements are followed by a positive tag he didn't finish the report did he did he is the positive tag after let's the tag begins with shall let's eat shall we so this is a fundamental rule that you can follow the other one is right here use aren't I in tags to mean I am not I'm the favorite to win aren't I use won't for polite request so somebody would say you'll help won't you we're going to use will or would with imperative sentences and remember imperative sentences those are commands write to us in the comments would you or write to us in the comments will you use didn't in a question tag when the verb is used to all right you used to watch our lessons didn't you there are two endings possible when have is the main verb one of them is more common in American English that first example if somebody says oh she has friends doesn't she but in British English many people might say she has friends hasn't she this is good because if we're we're using you're gonna use it in the question tag that includes this or that so when you're using this or that in your statement this is it isn't it and again same down here if we're talking about these or those these are your shoes aren't they we are going to do a practice and what we are going to do for this practice is I'm going to give you the statement and all you have to do is write the tag are you ready are you sure all right I'll give you one second to prepare one all right here we go so the first question uh is this all right he's always studying so I want you guys you know what what is the tag that we're going to use to make this a question he's always studying he's always studying isn't he okay remember positive statement negative tag next one let's try this one okay give me a hand hmm how are you going to this this is a common question that you would ask somebody give me a hand if it's an imperative sentence you're going to use will or would so oftentimes even if you're watching TV or a movie you might hear somebody hey you know give me a hand will you or give me a hand would you next uh next one next one here we go what do you guys think I told you what happened I told you what happened how would you complete that question and this is again this is just think of it as a conversation this is people are talking and somebody is like wait a second I I told you what happened didn't I I told you what happened didn't down in the comments was it easy was it difficult I I just love hearing from you and if you enjoy practicing and improving your grammar skills please hit that like button that is all I have for you today I know it was a long quiz but as always I just hope that you learned something new thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Grammar Quiz on English Articles | A - An - The - No Article

hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english and our channel it's all about just helping you practice and improve your english skills and today i want to help you improve your grammar well not not really just grammar but also i think speaking and writing because this lesson is going to be a quiz lesson it's going to be a grammar quiz but it's going to be a quiz about articles in english so i'm talking about the articles a and the and no article as well often i i think in grammar books you may see people use this symbol this theta symbol when they want to represent that no article is used so what we're going to do i said this is a quiz lesson so i'm going to give you a bunch of different sentences and i just want you to complete the sentence with the correct article you're going to use either a and the or no article and if you can just say no article instead of trying to use that theta symbol but i i said that this is grammar but it's good for your speaking and writing fluency as well because it's really about being more accurate and using the language correctly now i'll give you a few moments i'll give you a moment to answer the question and then afterwards i'll tell you what the rule is because when you're talking about articles often there are rules that you should follow

now i will say that i don't think it's necessary to memorize the rules because well i think the best way to learn articles is more reading more listening and more practice which is exactly what we're going to do today and the more you do that you're just going to start using these articles correctly and naturally you're not really going to have to think about well what is the rule so that's why i would say that even if you're unsure about one of these uh questions about well which article should i use try to do what feels right just take a guess think about what feels right and often i think that is the correct answer so let's begin with this question right here and that blank spot um and i'd say that's great this is something i might tell you i'd say that's great you want to learn english so what are you going to use in that blank which article are you going to use a and the or no article what do you think and i will say that when you're trying to think about well which is the correct article look at the noun that follows the article because our articles are essentially adjectives they modify those nouns so look at that noun and i think that's going to help you all right excellent um great job paulo anna lolly angela excellent um you guys seems it makes me think maybe you've seen this before this question all right the answer is no article so when you're talking about languages we do not use articles before languages if you're talking about english french german uh russian japanese you are not going to use an article and again i've used that theta symbol that theta symbol represents no article the next question is and i want you to put yourself in this situation pretend that you are at a restaurant and you are asking this question and you say excuse me can you tell me where um toilet is all right which article would you use to complete that sentence a and the or no article and again the hint is think about you are in this situation you're at a restaurant and you ask this question excuse me can you tell me where um toilet is all right uh excellent uh perfect davika angela uh neilma lolly estella give some quick shout outs the answer is the excuse me can you tell me where the toilet is and in this situation specifically i'm talking about a restaurant you use the when you assume there is only one of something so if you're at a restaurant you assume there's probably just one toilet for men there's one toilet for women and you would ask the question and use the now if for example you are in like a large building or a shopping mall and there is probably more than one toilet then you are going to use um the the article a a toilet or um you could say a toilet either pronunciation is correct but when you assume there's only one you're going to use the the next one is this woman uh right here i would say just talking about her job she works as um university professor all right she works as um university professor all right what are you going to use to complete that sentence a and the or no article okay so think about again i told you to think about the noun but you're also in this case you need to consider that adjective the word university because it's describing which type of professor and the reason why that you need to consider that adjective is because of the sound that comes after the article so what do i mean by that the correct answer is a she is a university professor or you could say she is a university professor either pronunciation is correct i tend to use uh and just say that schwa sound she's a university professor and we use a before non-specific nouns it's professor it could be any professor that begin with a consonant sound okay so i told you you have to think about university because that is the next sound that you hear when you think about the rule with a and n many people think oh look at the letter is it a consonant letter or a vowel and that's going to tell you the answer it's re it really depends on the sound if it's a consonant sound that follows the article you're going to use a uh if it's a vowel sound you're gonna use uh so even though it is a uh you is a vowel the letter it's a

it's a consonant sound that yeah yeah university um all right the next one all right and if you just if you're joining us we are doing a grammar quiz on english articles i want you to complete the sentence with either a and the or no article so this this is true this is something that i think i've said before and i would say one day i hope to climb um mount kilimanjaro okay so what are you going to use to complete that sentence a and the or no article we're talking about uh a mountain mount kilimanjaro it is a proper noun so if we're talking about mountains yes excellent uh lolly angela sleepwalker we are not going to use an article before the names of mountains so when you are giving the name and using the proper noun mount kilimanjaro or mount everest you are not going to use an article before that name this is one of those rules um that again you don't need to memorize the rule but just the more you see sentences like this and you say to yourself okay one day i hope to climb mount kilimanjaro the next time you are talking about a mountain and you say the name you're just going to naturally you're not going to use an article all right so no article before the names of mountains let's look at the next one which is this this is a little uh trivia question for you too all right what is um most northern capital city in the world and i'm going to give you the real answer to this so what is um most northern capital city in the world which article or no article are you going to use to complete that sentence a and the or no article okay so the key word in there i think is most all right excellent um bobby estella lolly davika uh farat the answer is the all right and i said the key word is um where is it whoops wait a second what's going on oh here we are sorry i'll show you the next one the key word is most because when you're talking about superlatives you're going to use the article the the most um the most beautiful the most incredible or even if you're talking about like those shorter uh superlatives the fastest um the the smelliest the dirtiest all right and the answer this is true the the most northern capital city in the world is rykovic iceland all right so that's a little uh trivia question for you so when you're talking about superlatives you are going to use the all right the next question that i have for you is this one right here um and this is where uh this is where i used to live all right um would you like to visit mmm golden gate bridge okay so um i'm talking about uh another name it is a proper noun would you like to visit um golden gate bridge so again when you're thinking about those rules i'm talking about the name of a bridge what do you think you're going to use what article a and the or no article all right um excellent uh paolo sleepwalker luisa be happy the correct answer is the when you're talking about the names of bridges uh you're going to use the article the the golden gate bridge the brooklyn bridge um where i live in um in budapest in hungary the the most famous bridge there's that superlative the most famous bridge is the chain bridge and you're going to use the before the names of bridges so again these are rules like the before bridge names you're going to use well no article before the names of mountains so these are rules that the more you practice the more you read the more you listen you're just gonna start to remember this information so this one now i'm gonna throw a few at you with uh two two of two options in there so there are two blanks what do you think uh a and the or no article um largest lake in north america is um lake superior all right which article a and the or no article would you use correctly to correctly complete this sentence all right so write your answers write your answers in the chat i want you guys to participate so there are two uh there are two that you need to um complete for this one so yes excellent uh zanat farat uh rosie lolly close so again that first one we've talked about the answer is the and no article so we talked about that first one when we're saying superlatives the largest the largest lake in north america is lake superior you you will not use an article before the names of lakes lake superior if you're talking about lake malawi um which i think is the largest lake in the world but again when you're talking about the names of lakes no article all right so let's look at the next one right here um again there's two two different ones that i want you to complete and this is something like you're telling a story think of this as like uh storytelling and this is something we do in everyday conversation if we're talking to a friend a family member a colleague and we may be telling a story about something that happened during the day and in this case this is not an exciting story it's kind of just starting out i say here is a man standing next to um plant there is a ladybug on um plant all right it's kind of a boring story but i'll tell you why this is useful in just a moment so what uh what two articles would you use to complete this story these sentences so that it's correct all right here is a man standing next to um plant there is a ladybug on um plant excellent uh perfect mahmud uh anawat uh zinnat so yeah sleepwalker the the way you would say is here is a man standing next to a plant there is a ladybug on the i know that in the picture you can only see there's only one plant so maybe you think oh that's specific but if you're talking about a story and that's why i wanted to reference this in relation to storytelling because you have the rule of first mention is what it's called or you could just say you use a or uh the first time that something is mentioned so when you're talking about a story and you mention something for the first time you're going to use uh or a uh that like here is a plan the next time that you mention it the second mention you're going to use the and the reason for that is because the first time you say something it could be just non-specific and you could be talking about any plan the second time you mention that same thing it then becomes specific so you could think of it as the rule of first mention you're going to use a or a but when you mention it the second time you're going to use the article the so this is useful uh i think especially when you're talking about uh telling a story and talking about something that happened during uh your day like oh i was out walking and i saw a dog and you wouldn't believe what the dog did so even if you just listened to me right there i used both a when i first mentioned the dog and then the dog when i mentioned it the second time so very useful very useful rule to follow then we have okay this one i'm sorry i couldn't think of i wanted to use a name and i just use myself um it's a little weird looking at myself i guess i feel a little vain right now could putting all these pictures of uh myself up there but i i wanted to use a name which is why i said this sentence so um wes always tries to create interesting lessons okay typically i try to be a little self-deprecating in these lessons and make fun of myself but i do i try to create some interesting lessons uh so what do you think again there's two blanks so what are you going to use a and the or no article um wes always tries to create interesting lessons okay so i think if we're talking in this situation we're talking about a name all right let me give you uh the rule so we're going to use no articles before names and this is something this is a mistake that i hear learners make from time to time they're talking about a specific person and people may want to use the but when we're talking about the name of a person we there's no article so i'd say wes always tries to create interesting lessons because when you're talking about lessons it is a plural count noun and it's non-specific as well you're not going to use um article uh you're not going to use um an article so no article and no article okay so it again it'd be like saying a plural count noun that's non-specific if i say for example basketball players are tall all right i'm just referring to basketball players it's a non-specific plural count noun no article i just say basketball players are tall just making a statement uh the next question that i have for you is this one he's learning how to play um tennis okay so the noun

i told you guys to think about the noun that follows so we're talking about tennis it's a sport so when you're thinking about sports what do you think are you going to use an article a and the or maybe no article all right how would you best complete that sentence he's learning how to play um tennis all right i think yes excellent uh sleepwalker anna god uh ricardo be happy you guys i think you nailed this one he's learning how to play tennis when we're talking about the names of sports or games even if we're talking about games you're not going to use an article he's learning how to play tennis or i play soccer or i love um to play monopoly the name of a game there's no article before that then we have uh this is an expression a very i think well a well-known expression in english it's something that i think um parents might say to children um what do you think um apple a day keeps um doctor away so if you've heard this expression you probably know which articles um go in there or maybe no article what do you think a and the or no article apple a day keeps dr away all right so again i think you guys well uh actually wow i think i maybe uh tricked some of you with this one excellent angela eloisia so we're talking about apple it is uh it starts with a vowel sound so you're going to use n the expression goes an apple a day keeps the doctor away all right so and before non-specific count nouns that start with a vowel sound the before specific nouns the reason why i say specific is because when you're when you're saying this expression i think typically will people have a specific doctor and that's what they're referring to when they say the expression because if you say a doctor again you'd be talking about any doctor but people in general they they may have a doctor that they will regularly go see so i think that's why in this case doctor would be specific an apple a day keeps the doctor away uh good expression good expression to know and i i guess it's true apples are good for us all right so what about this one i used to listen to mmm mp3 player when exercising all right i used to listen to mp3 player when exercising we're talking about uh i don't want to get i almost said the answer mp3 player what are you going to use which article will you use before that a and the or no article this is another one uh i would say it's a little tricky uh because again you people tend to look at that letter that consonant uh that m before there but yes uh well okay well somebody different all right now this one's a little trickier the correct answer is an we're talking about an mp3 player because again we're it's use and before non-specific nouns that begin with a vowel sound so if i'm just talking about somebody is just to somebody in general like oh i used to listen to an mp3 player when exercising it's really could be any mp3 player if i wanted to be specific then i'd say my mp3 player and there would be no article but in general if it's non-specific i'm going to use n because it begins with a vowel sound when you say mp3 you're saying the individual letters m all right so m starts with a vowel sound an mp3 player let me give you another word to show you if i talk and say i'm going to um i need to go to an embassy embassy starts with that same sound an embassy or i work at an embassy i'm going to use an all right so i think that one maybe was a little trickier all right um because again it trying to get you thinking is it a vowel sound or is it a consonant sound the next one um this is another one two all right are actually three and some of it's a little review manny pacquiao i hope i believe i'm pronouncing that correctly maybe not if you're from the philippines you can correct me manny pacquiao who is um famous boxer is not from malaysia he's from um philippines okay what uh what articles will you use to complete those that sentence um are those sentences fill in the blank with either a and the or no article all right manny pacquiao who is um famous boxer is not from malaysia he's from

um philippines all right uh excellent uh anna rosie so the correct answer i think subby you can get that is it takes uh it's a little longer but manny pacquiao who is a famous boxer all right just in general like i said at the very um uh beginning we talked about someone who is a professor who is a famous boxer is not from malaysia no article when we talk about the names of countries and this this is a rule that applies to most countries but he's from uh oh wait wait i made a mistake i see it it should be the philippines i forgot to add the in there but it should be the philippines all right i put it down there but we use the before plural name so countries with plural names you're going to use um the and i think philippines is probably one of the more famous uh well-known countries with a plural name i think there are uh two or three more maybe you guys can think of some but for most countries you're going to use no article but you use the before countries with plural names or if you're talking about countries where it like names the type of state it is or it's like a collective a group for example the united states or the united kingdom or the republic of china then you will also use the as well as before plural name so i forgot over there i forgot to write the when i said the philippines so yes that is a mistake all right and this one if you enjoyed the lesson please hit um like button what do you think all right how would you complete how would you complete this sentence all right yes there are there are many rules but like i said don't don't worry too much about the rules just the more you read and listen and practice like in this lesson you're just going to learn them naturally i wanted to give you a reminder about the rules but this is the best way to learn them so if you enjoyed the lesson please hit um like button talking about something it's specific there's only one so the answer is yes the if you enjoyed this lesson please hit the like button and yes if you guys enjoyed learning uh practicing your grammar then please hit the like button let me know so that in the future i will continue i'll do some more of these quiz lessons and it's always a good way to review grammar and i think of more it's a fun way to review grammar as well so i hope that i hope that you enjoyed the lesson i hope that you learned something new and we're able to practice and just let you know again if you guys like what we do here at interactive english want to show us some love support our channel you can do so through youtube memberships uh patreon saw some members who were in here uh today lolly um uh putri was here before so see some people coming in and out uh patreon is also optioned there are links down in the description so thank you guys for for being here and joining me today

finally we got through the lesson this was the third time the third time that i tried today's lesson i'm happy that it's worked out and uh i just hope that you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend thanks so much for being here uh and i will see you guys next time so long

Greet People Like a Native Speaker | Pronunciation Lesson

What's up everyone! How are you doing? That right there is actually today's lesson. I'm going to show you how to say different greetings just like a native English speaker. Before we begin, I'd like to remind you to please subscribe to our channel for more videos on how you can practice and improve your English. Also, you can join our social media classes. It's another great way to practice your English skills. And it's FREE! I'm sure just about all of you are familiar with some greetings in English like "Hello" and "Hi". I don't want to talk to you about those today. Instead, I want to talk to you about other greetings and focus on their pronunciation.

Because this is going to help you improve your overall English fluency. Now, when people start learning English a common phrase that they learn for greetings is Hello! How are you? I'm fine, thank you. And you? This is perfectly acceptable. It's grammatically correct. But the pronunciation sounds robotic. And you don't really hear native English speakers talking this way. So let's look at a few different greetings that people often say, and we'll practice saying them together. The first greeting I want to talk to you about is simple. This is a very common greeting that people use to say hello. Culturally speaking, however, it's important to note that when people say, "How are you?" They're not really looking to start a conversation.

And this is especially true in the U. S. It's just a way of acknowledging somebody and recognizing them, and just saying hello even in passing. When pronouncing this greeting, native speakers will kind of link the first two words together. So the final sound in "How" and the initial sound in "are" will get blended to sound like /hou-ahr/. Then, the word "you" may have but not always, the reduced schwa sound. And it'll sound like /yuh/. As I mentioned before, this is not always the case. It's perfectly fine to say "you" but sometimes native English speakers will reduce it with the schwa, and it'll sound like /yuh/.

Now we have a whole video about the schwa sound and I strongly recommend that you check it out. So then, when we put all of this together We have /hou-ahr yuh/. In case you're wondering, I'm using phonetic spelling which means that I'm spelling the words just like they sound. Some of you may be familiar with the International Phonetic Alphabet. Others of you may not be familiar with it. But I think everybody can follow and understand the phonetic spelling.

Let's listen to this greeting a few times before we practice. Let's practice saying this together a few times. So I'll say it, and then you repeat. Good job! Now, here's a slight nuance to this greeting. If two people say it to each other, the second person is NOT going to reduce the word "you" with the schwa sound. /yuh/ Instead, they will actually say "you."

Let's look at this example. The next greeting I want to talk to you about is very similar to the last one. We're just going to add one more word..."doing." Again, when greeting somebody, you won't really hear native English speakers say... To me, when somebody says this, it's more in a consoling manner. And they will say, "How are you doing?" when somebody is sad, and they really want to know how that person is doing. But when it's used as a greeting, just to kind of say hi. Then it'll get reduced. Now, there are different ways to reduce this greeting. Almost always the "g" in "doing" will get dropped. And then it'll sound like, "How are you /doo-in/?"

Then, it can get reduced even further with "How are you?" "How are you doing?" You give it a try! Nice! Finally, the most reduced form of this greeting would be to eliminate the word "are" altogether. You try! The last greeting that I want to talk to you about is a very informal one, and one that I use all the time. I used it at the very beginning of this video and that greeting is... Again, this is a very informal greeting. So, it's probably not something you would say to your grandparents, or professor, or even your boss. It's mostly used among friends. Sometimes I hear learners respond with "Good." Or they ask if it's okay to say "Good."

NO! "What's up?" --> "Good." This is because even though "What's up?" is a greeting like saying "Hi." It's more similar to someone asking "What's happening?" or "What's going on?" And you wouldn't really respond with "Good" to either of those questions. The appropriate response to "What's up?" is either "Not much." Or "Nothing." Or you really don't need to respond at all. Just say "Hey" back. You should also know that "What's up?" has different meanings as well. So, for example, when you approach somebody and they look upset, you could say "What's up?" As in - you want to know what the problem is or what's wrong. Also, when somebody comes up to you and you know that they want to ask you a question, you could just say "What's up?" as in "What do you need?"

So let's look at the pronunciation. "What's" is always going to be contracted. You don't really hear people say "What is up?" So after we contract "What's," the final -s sound gets blended with the vowel sound in "up." You give it a try! If you want to be super informal and reduce it even more, you can drop the "What" and just say "Sup?" Okay, so now you know how to pronounce three different greetings just like a native English speaker. So what we'd like you to do now is to say "Hello!" to us and everyone else in our global classroom in the comments below. You can use a greeting from this lesson or any other greeting in English.

You can even use a greeting in your native language. Just write it in the comments below! Please "Like" this video if you enjoy learning about and practicing English pronunciation. We'll see you next time. Bye!

HALLOWEEN VOCABULARY & IDIOMS QUIZ

hey everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills that's what we're doing so we have so many different lessons for you and today I have an interactive quiz for you we are going to do a quiz which is all about Halloween it is a Halloween quiz and I am going to be testing you on your knowledge of Halloween vocabulary Halloween idioms Halloween expressions and even some information about Halloween in general so if this is your first time here I want you to write your name in the comments in the chat tell me where you're from because I just want to hear from you guys I'm so happy to have many of you with me here today to take this quiz just want to give some shout outs hello IRA Lally go see Moses violet Angela Manny hello welcome thank you for joining me for today's Halloween quiz all right so we're just gonna jump right into it and begin the quiz and I hope that by doing this you you probably know some of these answers already but I hope that maybe you will learn a new word a new idiom something maybe even something about Halloween in general because the reason that we're doing this is because well Halloween it's right around the corner and if you say that something that's an expression if something is right around the corner it means that it's very close and this has to do with my first question and it's this is an easier question it's a bit of a softball all right I'm full of these expressions today because if you say something is more of a softball it's an easier question it's an easier task and this is a softball question for you and then they're going to get more difficult Halloween is celebrated on em which day is it eh October 28th be October 29 see October 30 or D October 31st all right when when do you when do people celebrate Halloween all right on the 28th the 29th of the 30th of the 31st write your answer in the comments if you're watching this later I encourage you to participate and write your answers in the chat because that's what this is all about it is about interaction and interacting which is why we're interactive English yes everybody

thank you for your answers room azide Luna Deena ro thank you the answer is D of course Halloween is celebrated on October 31st it is a fun holiday where everybody they dress up the kids especially they would go around and they would get candy so it is a it is a holiday that most people I think most of us enjoy so October is celebrated on October 31st and again it's I'm from the United States if you didn't know that it is a very popular holiday in the United States people celebrate Halloween I think there are a few other countries out there that that celebrate Halloween as well the next question alright is this one it's a vocabulary question for you and an apparition is another word for M what an apparition it's it's basically a synonym for this word is it a which B ghost C zombie or D wizard all right the reason why I'm reading them out I'd some people have mentioned that they like to listen to these lessons kind of like a podcast so I'm just gonna go ahead and read it out for you all so what do you guys think all right write your answer in the chat let me know all right a which C goes B ghost C zombie or D wizard which is another word for an apparition all right excellent you guys are rocking it out yes alchemy IRA Sarah lolly English vibes Angela Omar you're correct the correct answer is B ghost so an apparition this is just another word for a ghost and obviously I think overwhelmingly people would just use the word ghost but I I think if maybe if you're trying to get like more scientific or something people might use the word a Napper they saw an apparition or they heard that there was an apparition living in this haunted house it is another word for ghost all right so this is another fun Halloween question when children visit a home what do they say they say what do they say a trick and treat B trick-or-treat or C trick-or-treat what do you think all right I think these questions at the beginning they're a little easier and they will get a little more challenging what do you think is the correct answer a trick and treat be trick or treat or C trick for treat children they go to their home they knock on the door and then they say this and then they would get some candy all right so yes you guys are rocking it out yes ghosa money UN MELAS warty sada what I saw sorry if I mispronounced reims rumah try and get as many shout outs as I can the correct answer is B trick-or-treat when children they knock on the door they say trick-or-treat and people give them candy so in this case basically the trick refers to like a ret of mischief that they're going to do something to this person's home or property or they can give them a treat which is referred to as candy so this is kind of a little more information about the expression trick-or-treat we will play a trick on you or you can give us a treat and parents will her families will give kids the treat because that is what Halloween is all about it's about collecting a bunch of candy then the next question all right so this is an idiom all right if you can't read it again I will say it if you're having trouble reading that if someone has embarrassing or shameful secrets we can say that they have skeletons in the mmm what do we what do they have if they have embarrassing or shameful secrets they have skeletons in the mmm and that is the idiom right there we talk about skeletons in the closet is it a closet be grave or see tomb which which one of those words best completes that idiom right there again we're talking about Halloween people have secrets maybe they're embarrassing and yes excellent perfect MELAS French girl violet Angela perfect you guys all answered a all right we're talking about skeletons in the closet so if you say that somebody has skeletons in the closet it means that they have some kind of dark or embarrassing secrets that that they don't want to let out and I think again you can use this in casual everyday conversation because I think in general all of us have some skeletons in the closet there is some information about us that we don't want other people to know and you know obviously some secrets may be much worse than others but in general I think all of us have as you know some skeletons in the closet so that is the idiom skeletons in the closet a dark secret now when someone dies this is the next question when someone dies the letters are IP stand for what all right you hear people say rip our IP what do those letters they're all capitalized it's an acronym what do those letters stand for okay because again when you think about Halloween you think about ghosts you think about you know death dying people dying so I thought this question would be relevant when someone dies the letters are IP stand for what write that in the chat and write that in the comments again we just want you to interact answer these questions the best way to not only learn English but remember what you already know and retain the information is to practice practice practice and practice some more all right so excellent yes Katarina ghosa Lali Ricardo ciao knock on door I began mispronounced jana Thep the correct answer our IP stands for rest in peace so this is a common acronym that when when somebody's having maybe a conversation about death or perhaps you might be listening to a TV show you might be watching a TV show or a movie and you will see this rip r.i.p it stands for rest in peace rest in peace so I just want to let you guys know again we've talked about this before if you guys enjoy what we do if you like what we do and want to show us some love and support what we do please check out our patreon page I will put a link right here in the chat as well there is also a link in the description down below we offer some cool rewards if you want to connect with us and join with us on patreon much love and shout outs to our patrons out there all of you guys you guys really helped make all of this possible thank you so much but again it's just you don't have to do it again we do these English lessons for you guys all the time every week it's just what we enjoy doing we're firm believer in building bridges and connecting people that that is one thing we love to do so the next question all right so which of these people or creatures might cackle so that is the word that you you want you to try and understand cackle what does it mean what's a cackle so which people are creatures might cackle is it a a werewolf be a demon see a witch or D of vampire which of those people or creatures would cackle this word cackle is associated with I think is it is more commonly associated with a a certain person or creature what do you guys think it is werewolf demon witch or vampire all right this one I'm seeing I'm seeing some different answers all right so I just want to give some shoutouts yes Kareem yes cow milk on perfect what other answers most of you said a werewolf but no no that is not correct a cackle would be most associated with a wish it is a loud harsh laughter and it would sound something like think of a witch and they have that laughter like something like that is my cackle right there if you think of a werewolf it would be more like a howl so I think of a wolf or a werewolf would howl especially at the moon but a which would cackle they have that loud harsh laugh that I was trying to download a cackle that would sound better than mine but I wasn't able to get it ready in time so yes see cackle see which is is something that you might hear a witch do that loud harsh laughter excellent all right glad to find one that maybe most of you didn't get overwhelmingly you guys were rocking that so the next question that I have for you this is a little bit of a dialogue okay so person A would say hey I'm taking your car person B says no you're not person A says yes I am and then person B would say mmm my dead body this is an idiom it's an expression that that somebody might use so they would say I'm taking your car no you're not yes I am and then that person would say hmm my dead body would they say under a under my dead body B over my dead body C from my dead body or D without my dead body which of those words under over from without would best complete that idiom so this is an idiom an expression that people would say again in that context and that guy I tried I just used a picture of that guy because II let's look very angry all right so yes thank you

yes Sarah or Lena Omar it's going so fast on Tron french girl perfect the answer is B over so if somebody says over my dead body

it's used this idiom this expression is used to emphasize that you are opposed to something you are against somebody doing it and it's used often I think in that context when somebody would say I'm going to do this and the other person says over my dead body you are not going to do it I am opposed to it and they would say over my dead body so this is a good expression that you can use again in a variety of context and situations if you want to emphasize that you are opposed to something you are against it you would say over my dead body all right the next question I have for you is this one it's a little bit different it's not multiple choice some people believe that black cats are bad luck this is an example of a mmm which word it's an example of what all right I've given you some choices there that you can try to figure out the answer that's the word has 12 letters all right it starts with an S and you can kind of try and fill in the blanks there those blank spaces what do you think I think I probably could have given this to you without any of the letters but I wanted to make it a little bit easier all right so this is an example of what people believe that you know black cats might be bad luck all right so excellent um perfect who haven't I said other names tsamina perfect fool eehh excellent IRA Romeo Lopez perfect all right thank you guys for all your answers it's an example of a superstition so again many of you may know this word already a superstition is a belief that a person or even a group of people has that that's not really based on scientific evidence it's just something people believe and they would call it a superstition for example Halloween I think of superstitions with bad luck and some people believe that maybe black cats if they walk in front of you that that would be an example of bad luck and of course definitely not that cat I chose like the cutest black cat in the world I don't think that little guy right there is bad luck but another example of a superstition I think a lot of it has to do with good luck and bad luck for example if somebody sees a shooting star they will make a wish and they will wish on a shooting star and that wish will come true that is a superstition people believe that that you know these things happen and sometimes I think they're just a bit fun I think of birthdays people blow out candles and you make a wish it's a superstition all right this one I think may be a little more difficult this is a vocabulary question and the word I think is related to Halloween all right so the forest evoked a mmm feeling of fear so we're talking about the forest evoked a mmm feeling of fear is it a truculent is it be macabre or see Lagoo be lugubrious all right a truculent be macabre or see lugubrious which of those you know again we're talking about a feeling of fear and that picture of forest it looks dark it looks a little scary so I'd say this forest a vocht it brought on this feeling of fear this mmm feeling of fear truculent macabre or lugubrious and the this is more advanced vocabulary so again let's see yes nor add on Robin one two three four English fives say drew yes the correct answer is B macabre so macabre is an adjective and it just means something that is gruesome something horrifying pertaining to death that macabre feeling of fear all right that deathly feeling when I think of this word I think of there's a famous poet Edgar Allan Poe and he would write these scary poems these scary stories and it makes me think of his writing these stories macabre they were all like horrifying death so that is a word if you don't know those other words lugubrious maybe could use lugubrious means a feeling of sadness it talks about like a sad feeling and if somebody is truculent that just means that they kind of are easy to anger and they're standoffish and that you know you don't want to be around somebody who's truculent they're just gonna kind of be a bit of a nasty person so those are all adjectives good words to know more advanced adjectives that probably are not as common the next question that I have for you and if you guys are guys are just joining us we're doing a quiz it is a Halloween quiz all about different idioms and vocabulary that deals with Halloween so here is the next question I just want you to complete the blank fill in the blank and this is another idiom that's relevant idiom that has to do with Halloween he plans to betray his friend and mmm him in the back he plans to betray his friend and mmm him in the back is the answer a stab B hit C kill all right what do you do are they gonna stab him in the back are they gonna hit him in the back are they gonna kill him in the back this I think is I think this is a pretty common idiom that you will you know you're gonna hear this from time to time whether you're watching a TV show or a movie or in just everyday life if you're talking about this situation excellent thank you guys yes Lally Aziza Angela Sarah rose Clark or the correct answer is a to stab him in the back because to stab someone in the back it just means to betray someone and I kind of I gave you that answer more towards the beginning he plans to betray his friend so if he's going to betray his friend then he will stab him in the back you stab someone in the back you betray them like I said you can use this in a variety of ways there are many different situations in which somebody may betray another person and you can use that idiom to stab someone in the back the next question that I have for you is this one it's a vocabulary question which is not a name for this type of box so I've shown you casket and coffin those are types of funeral boxes most of the time I don't think people would say a funeral box they would either say a casket or a coffin those words are very similar the only difference and I'm sorry I don't know this I think the only difference between a casket and a coffin is just the design of a funeral box and I'm not actually positive the difference in the design but I think in general most people again you could just say a casket or a coffin that would be a best way to refer to that type of box a tomb is more like it's something that's underground and it is where you might put a a casket or a coffin in the tomb is more like a wider room where somebody is buried it makes me think again of ancient Egypt so the next one a vocabulary question there's this scary house right here I'm just gonna premise it and say yes that is a scary house and as if you can't read it I'll read it for you this house gives me a a or n it gives me a mmm feeling or you could say it gives me an mmm feeling all right which kind of feeling does that house give is it a an ambiguous feeling be a convivial feeling or see an eerie feeling what do you guys think what it what word best completes that sentence if you're looking at that house and I say ooh this house gives me um mmm feeling all right the answer yes excellent ricardo shetty shekhar perfect um Lolich gosh it's moving so fast trying to give some names Ladon who's Ava Samina Sarah Lally yes the correct answer Zi Shan C eerie so if you're talking about that house most appropriately you would say it gives an eerie feeling because something that is eerie it is an adjective that means strange or frightening so you and I think often times it's used with that word with a feeling you want to describe the feeling you'd say ooh I have an eerie feeling about this I have a strange feeling I have a frightening theory a feeling so often I think that is a good collocation to learn those two words are commonly used together an eerie feeling if something is ambiguous it kind of means it's just it's unknown it's a little vague you're not really sure about it so you wouldn't really say it's an ambiguous feeling and convivial is kind of the opposite it's just a pleasurable it is a happy feeling and that house definitely does not give me a happy feeling so it is an eerie feeling alright the next question just something again fun for you guys alright what do you think

Halloween it's all about a time for for dressing up and just going out and costume it's mostly for children but many adults would do this as well adults might have a Halloween party or they go out with their friends and they dress up in a costume so I want to know if you were to dress up for Halloween I would be mmm what what would you guys be if you're gonna dress up for Halloween maybe maybe some of you are going to dress up for Halloween and I want you to let me know what what would you bet what would you be what would you be a character would you be two so all I said is Wonder Woman excellent go saw a vampire perfect run a witch a monster a vampire let's see I said Judy said ha it's Halloween good for children well it's it's a fun holiday but yeah I mean it's not healthy because children are going around and they're collecting candy so I would not say it's a very healthy event for children IRA a Wonder cat cool Sarah Smiths you're gonna go is Trump okay sure why not Alex MacEwan all right Rose Claire Harry Potter you know who I am you're gonna go with me you're gonna be Wes excellent a wizard perfect so I just wanted to kind of get that information from you if you're watching this later please definitely write that in the chat or write that in the comments let me know what you would dress up for for Halloween so this is you know like I said Halloween is right around the corner it's it's coming up in a few days on October 31st so I thought this would be a fun time to kind of acknowledge the holiday try to teach you some vocabulary and idioms that are useful for this time of year but of course you can use those idioms you can use that vocabulary in a variety of situations not just talking about Halloween so I just want to thank you guys so much for joining me for this lesson if you if you learn something new if you enjoy these live lessons please hit that like button before you head out please hit hit that like button be sure to hit that write to us in the comments questions we'd love to hear from you guys and you can check us out on our social media classes we are active on Facebook Twitter and Instagram so just let you guys know um so thank you guys some more shout outs I do my thang Pizza I like that I would love to see a pizza costume thank you guys rawan Sarah ever Antonio Nerio Black Panther very cool outfit Judi rumah a Lopez sir it's moving so class Rose

Claire thank you guys so much for joining me today I hope you enjoy the rest of your day and I will be back later on for another live lesson which I hope you will join me then have a wonderful weekend I will see you guys next time so long

HAVE YOUR WORK CUT OUT FOR YOU | Advanced #Idiom to SUPERCHARGE Your Vocabulary

to have your work cut out for you this means to have something very difficult to do and it's really a way of adding emphasis so instead of saying well that's going to be difficult for you I can just use this idiom you have your work cut out for you guess you got your work cut out for you Hey listen just so you know you might have your work cut out for you sounds like you have your work cut out for you the other thing I want you to think about is the grammar because if I were to use he she or they it's going to change a little bit because you have a subject pronoun a possessive adjective as well as an object pronoun he has his work cut out for him she has her work cut out for her they have their work cut out for them just something to keep in mind he knows he has his work cut out for him well I guess Babs has her work cut out for her they've got their work cut out for them

HOW TO EXPRESS THAT YOU'RE ANGRY

- Have you ever felt angry? Of course you have and after this lesson, you'll know many different ways to say just how angry you are. What's up, everyone? Today, we are talking about the word, angry. I'm going to teach you some different words that have the same meaning or a similar meaning. This is great because learning synonyms is an excellent way to build and expand your vocabulary because you already know what one word means. You already know what the word angry means. (booing) We've all felt it, we've all expressed it and now you will be able to express it in different ways. When we talk about anger, it's usually on a scale.

You can be just a little angry or you can be very angry. We're gonna start with just words that mean you're a little angry, you're not happy about something and then we're gonna work our way up to being extremely angry. And what I'll do is I'll give you the word as well as some examples and also tell you some prepositions that commonly follow these words. So let's start out with just a little angry. If you're a little angry and something's wrong, there's a problem, you might say that you are upset. - Upset? I'm not upset. What makes you think I'm upset? - So you could be upset with someone or something and you could also be upset about some situation.

Another great synonym, which is interchangeable, it has the exact same meaning is annoyed. If you're a little angry, you might be annoyed. So if you are annoyed, you could be annoyed with someone or something or you could also be annoyed at or by some situation. It really just depends. You could be annoyed with him or annoyed with her. Or you could be annoyed at somebody's bad behavior, annoyed at the traffic jam. Those are all great reasons why you might be annoyed. - I'm not hostile, I'm annoyed. - Hi, how are you? - I'm annoyed, that's how I am. - And sometimes when you're dealing with people and you're trying to resolve some problem and people don't really wanna talk or open up, then I might say...

Another synonym that means you are a little angry about something is bothered. When we use bothered, it's often followed by the preposition by. You can be bothered by someone or something or just some situation. Bothered by. (laughs) Say something that you don't like? Are you bothered by that? I don't know. Some people get really bothered by other people's comments or remarks. Yeah, you could get bothered by that.

Now, another great word which has a little bit of a different meaning and we use it in a different context is exasperated. If you are exasperated, you are angry but you're angry because you're trying to do something and it's not working and you do it again and again and again and you just get angrier and angrier and at the end, you could say, I am exasperated. Georgie! Stop, Georgie. Or perhaps, there's just some bad situation that just continues and continues and continues until you are exasperated. And you might say that you are exasperated by some situation. What are you doing back there? Are you looking over my shoulder?

Now let's talk about some words that you're starting to get really angry and if you're really starting to get angry, then you could say that you are irate. And if you are irate, then you are beyond angry. You wanna show the person just how angry you are. You're not just angry, you are irate. And when you hate then you're bound to get irate. And typically you would be irate about some situation or maybe you are irate with some situation. It doesn't really matter. You're just really angry, you're irate. Notice the theme with my examples. It's about flying. Sometimes I get angry when I'm flying.

Another synonym to show that you are very angry is enraged. You are really angry, you're irate, you are enraged. And you might be enraged by something or someone or some situation. Another synonym for very angry, furious. So, if you are super angry about something, you could say that you are furious. For example, when I see that somebody dislikes our lessons, I am furious. (laughs) I'm just kidding. I don't get furious. It's okay. That doesn't make me furious, but there are many other things that do make me furious. And you might be furious at someone or some situation. It's true, I'm tall and it can be very uncomfortable and when that seat goes down, I'm furious.

Another word or actually this is a phrase which is slang and probably one that I would use the most is if you are very angry then you could say that you are pissed off. I say that a lot. Instead of saying I'm really angry, I just say I'm pissed off. That's usually how I say it, too, with that intonation. - Tell Clay I'm pissed off. - I swear, I'm so pissed off at my mom. - I lied because I'm pissed off. - So if you're pissed off, then you're really angry, but again this is more slang. It may just be American slang. I'm not really sure if British people also say it, but pissed off is a great expression to say that you were very angry.

Truth be told, it's just an example. Our camera thankfully did not break, otherwise, I would be pissed off. So I hope some of these words may be new for you and you can go out and use them and practice them especially the next time that you are angry about something. Try to switch it up and use some synonyms. It's a great way to build your vocabulary and improve your overall English fluency. And if you're looking to improve your fluency even more, check out the secret lesson which is linked in the description. I hope this lesson didn't make you angry, but rather perhaps happy because you've learned some new words. However, what I want you to do to express a little bit of anger, I want you to hit that dislike button.

Go ahead, show me that you were paying attention. Hit the dislike button. This is the only time I'll probably ever tell you to do this. Be a little angry, hit that dislike button. I hope you learned some new words today and remember go out and use them, go out and practice them. Thanks for watching and I'll see you next time.

HOW TO GIVE A GREAT PRESENTATION

what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which of course it's the place that you want to be to practice and improve your English skills so today I have it's a very cool lesson because I say I say it's a cool lesson because I think it's very useful if you are a learner of English it's actually going to be very helpful even if you are a native English speaker because I am going to talk to you about today how to give a great presentation what's the best way to give a fantastic moving and really impactful presentation and we're going to talk about some tips and suggestions that that you guys can do in order to give that great presentation that you're looking for so if you're joining us please say hello what's up in the comments love hearing from you guys just want to give a couple quick shout outs to hi Sarah Richard Luciano um AMOM

loii oth Katie hello Ira nopan um Faith Ronaldo mam hello thank you guys so much for joining me as we go through this lesson um I'm going to ask you guys some questions so you will have some opportunities to to interact and answer some questions about how to give a a great presentation so before we start there are a couple of things that that I want to talk to you about at the very beginning and that is first I I want you to to understand that there are many different ways to give a great presentation you don't just have to follow all of the suggestions in this lesson there there's many different ways to go about it the next thing I want you to understand is that this is something that I had to learn and I learned it a few years ago because I actually taught a presentation course at the school uh that I used to work for and part of the students were visiting Scholars that were traveling to the US and most of them were going to present their research and there were people from all over the world and what I learned is that presentations mean different things in different countries and cultures so a great presentation in the United States and in the US that doesn't mean it might be a great presentation in France or a great presentation in China or a great presentation in Brazil so people of different countries and cultures have different expectations so today when I talk about giving a great presentation I'm giving you the American perspective and in that case you can think of it like I'm telling you how to give a great presentation to an American audience to an English-speaking audience I think it's okay to say that because a lot of the tips and suggestions I'm going to give you I I think are relevant for most people that are native English speakers if they're from the United States Canada the UK Australia I I think if that is your audience this is going to help help you these are great tips and suggestions and another reason why it's going to be so useful is because we all give presentations you might be giving a presentation for work you might give one for school and and you're going to be talking about things you're you're sharing your ideas your thoughts and opinions so this is useful information especially because I think a lot of people some people are are a little worried and nervous about giving presentations so let's begin I want to start out by showing you like well what exactly are we going to talk about today today it it's broken into three parts I'm first going to talk to you about the visual and when I say the visual I'm not just talking about pictures and images I'm talking about anything that people will see during the presentation it could be pictures maybe you have a PowerPoint slideshow and on that slideshow you are going to have words that is also a visual it's anything that somebody will see during your presentation the next part of this lesson will be talking about the content exactly what is in your presentation what are you saying what are you telling people what are you presenting and the last part is going to be about you while you're giving the presentation what should you be doing in order to make it a great presentation in order to make it an effective presentation so let's start out I I love starting out with questions so I'm going to give you a question I want you guys to write your answer in the chat and that question is this all right many great presenters follow a simple rule and that is this rule no more than M slides no more than M minutes no less than M font size and this is called the M rule so what what number goes in those blanks right there how many slides minutes and a font size is it the 51020 rule five slides 10 minutes 20 font size is it B the 10203 rule or is it C the 15 2540 rule I want you guys write your answer in the chat

what what do you guys think this is a a nice rule of thumb that's why I put that thumbs up there so it's something that you don't have to follow but I think it's useful and and it is good practice if you're going to follow these what do you guys think all right is it a b or c I want you to write your answer in the chat and then I will tell you what what what many great presenters try to follow and and what they say all right I see some answers in here most people wow all right people think uh most people think it might be a all right the answer is B it's talking about the 10230 rule that if you're giving a presentation it should be no more than 10 slid it should be no more than 20 minutes and you should have no less than 30 font size so let's let's touch on each of these quickly so when you're giving a presentation no more than 10 slides think about it where do you want people to focus if if you're giving a presentation you want people to be looking at you you don't want them watching some slideshow if you have 60 slides and you're just flipping through those slides people are not going to be looking at you they should be looking at you and listening to what you're saying so that's why you're saying no more than 10 slides if you have less than 10 slides that's perfectly okay I actually try and do many of my presentations with as few slides as possible because again I want people focused on me so you should have no more than 10 slides that's a good rule to follow no more than 20 minutes because if you go over 20 minutes that's the difference of something becoming from a presentation to becoming a lecture so when you go over 20 minutes it gets to be a little too long and when you think about it think about some of the most common forms of presentations if you go online and and you are looking for people giving presentations what is a popular famous website for that most people think of TED Talks Ted Talk stands for technology uh wait what is the E not education uh technology something and design and when we think of those TED Talks you guys can write it in the chat or in the comments if you know those are actually presentations that people give they're sharing their ideas they're sharing their research and most of those talks are anywhere from about 10 to 20 minutes you don't really find them longer than 20 minutes so that's an actual one resource to think about so no more than 20 minutes and even when we do these lessons these are actual lessons where we're teaching you we've talked about this and we've decided that if we can make our lessons anywhere from 25 to 35 minutes we we think that is a nice amount of time to have a lesson that too long it kind of drags on but we also want to make it long enough so people can can enter the lesson and we can interact and talk with them and engage so that's kind of what we try to do but no more than 20 minutes if you're giving a presentation that's a good rule to follow and no less than 30 font size I don't think I need to explain this one because if your font size is really small if somebody's looking at your Visual and they cannot see the words that are on there then it's pretty useless there's no point in having that information on the screen if you can't read it Judy entertainment exactly thank you perfect technology entertainment and design thank you Judy very much excellent so this is something to keep in mind again it's not something you have to follow you don't have to follow this rule exactly again it's just something to keep in mind that this is what many great presenters will try to do another rule of thumb is this one right here it is the 6x6 Rule and that just means no more than six words words per line and no more than six points per slide and that's what I mean they're talking at bullet points so again I think this is useful because when you're you're writing no more than six words they just need to be short statements you really shouldn't even be writing sentences up there you should just be writing a short little statement that that say that kind of captures what you're talking about and then there's no more than six bullet points per slide because again when you just start listing all these things it's just there's just too much clutter and people start focusing on the slide instead of focusing on you which is where they need to be focused so let me give you some examples of some good slides and bad slides here so check out these examples below uh these are just some a couple that I pulled off uh off of the internet by just doing a search on Google Images so this good example I thought is you know it's just a picture there's just a few words on there and you can put that slide up there and just talk about this issue or talk about say whatever it is that you're going to say and talk for about five or 10 minutes give some examples tell a story but this image

it's a good image and again there's not that many words on there you're just talking about one point and I guess that point is to reframe the issue I actually think that uh the picture might be a little too good because it can maybe be distracting because people might tend to focus on that but this this is an example it's a pretty good slide now this wait no no no this one over here this is not a good example again there's just way too much information and you would be amazed that even when I was doing my ma and it was for teaching English to speakers of other languages so these are people that we are teachers we are standing in front of other people people we are presenting all the time like I am presenting you information right now and I was amazed at how many slides I would see like this these people would get up there and they would show a slide and they would have like 500 words on one slide and again nobody is going to read all of that information the only thing that I would see off of this this slide right here is how rivers are formed all of that other stuff it's just too long long it's unnecessary so again keep this in mind when you guys if you're putting together a visual remember don't have have very very very few words on there all right that's very important so why also why do we use visuals why is it good to have visuals when we're giving a presentation well the first thing is it it just complements the presentation it's the difference between you know I'm giving you this I'm telling you this lesson right now I'm talking about to you guys about how to give a great presentation I don't have to show you any slides or anything I could just turn it on like this and I could sit here and talk to you guys for 30 minutes about giving a great presentation the information is still useful because you guys can listen to what I'm saying you understand what I'm saying and and you can think about that and and keep that in mind when you're giving a good how to give a great presentation but I think it's very important when we have these visuals when we have these slides it it just adds a nice compliment to the overall presentation the other thing it does and this is really helps me is that it helps you stay focused because when I'm giving this presentation right now I can put this slide up here and kind of see the information and it reminds me what I should be talking about it reminds me if

I want to add some more information to this point or that point and it also helps me stay organized as I go through this presentation so it really helps me stay focused and it would help you stay focus to have some sort of visual that that you can talk about during your presentation the next thing would be it it just helps the audience you guys or whoever it is that you are presenting to it helps them remember what the information is all about it helps them remember what you presented and what you talked about so again this these are the different reasons why that that you would want to use a visual during your presentation so going to just let you guys know quickly if you like what we do all right remember check us out on patreon there's a link in the description it's another great way to connect with us and support our lessons and support what we do here at interactive English so let's look at the next part okay so the next part of the presentation is the content what is the presentation all about what is in your presentation I have another question for you and I want you to write your answers in the chat okay here it is the m is something that grabs your audience's attention and makes them want to hear more this would be the first thing that you guys are presenting what what what is that called what's what's it called the very first thing you would say to get the audience's attention and that makes them want to hear more about what it is you are presenting about what do you call that the hook do you call it the snare or is it called the Trap write your answers in the chat in the chat and even even if you're watching this later write your answers in the comments we like hearing you guys when when you share answers with us in the comments so yes we got some excellent answers great job yes if this is the first thing you know that you would say it's part of your introduction and that is the hook the hook is the thing that you would say whatever information you're sharing to get people's attention and grab their attention and there are many different ways that that you can do this you can do this by asking a question start out with a simple question and then go into your introduction you can State an interesting fact about the topic or whatever it is you're presenting about you could tell a story that's relevant to your presentation you can use a quote to start out with or even reference an event something that happened in history that is Meaningful to the information that that you're going to present so I think it's always useful to to have some kind of hook and usually they're very short unless you're telling a story it's something that's very quick and then you go into your introduction and we actually we try to do it with all of our lessons and we try to give a quick little hook about what the lesson is about and usually we'll ask a question or try and say something funny and then the introduction would come on and then we'll go into explaining what the lesson is about so the next time you see one of our videos think about that think see if you can identify the hook or many of the videos that you might watch on YouTube especially some of the great ones they will always start out with some type of hook to grab your attention so keep that in mind and now let's look at the part s of the content so when we talk about the parts of the presentation at this point I'm talking about the content like what it is you're saying and there's only three parts to the presentation you have an introduction you have a body and you have a conclusion it's the same if you were writing an essay you're going to have an introduction you're going to have a body and you're going to have a conclusion I wanted to give you some of this information up here because it's kind of a guideline as to how much time you should spend on each part so the introduction could spend anywhere from 10 to 15 minutes uh not 10 15 minutes 10 to 15% of your presentation talking about the introduction and the hook is part of the introduction the body that is the main that is the main part of your presentation it is what you are actually really trying to tell people about if you're trying to inform them if you're trying to convince them persuade them or even entertain them it should take up about 75% of your presentation and then the conclusion at the end to wrap up the presentation would only be about 10% again this is not a hard set rule this is just some information that you can follow to help you give a great presentation so let's look at this next part when you are giving your presentation and when you're giving the content of your presentation it is so so so I'm going to add one more so important that you make your presentation easy to follow and especially if you're talking about giving a presentation in English English is a very linear language you go from one point and you go down right to the end so you need to make it easy to follow and to have some sort of logical order and that logical order could be you know your your time it could be chronological order you're talking about order in the you're talking about the events in the order that they happen it could be order of importance there are many different orders that you could follow but make sure it's logical and the other thing is right here use signpost to transition between your ideas make sure you use the signpost because that makes it easy to follow and when I say signpost I'm talking about those key words that tell us where the presentation is going so those can be sequence words like first then next finally or you could have those coordinating conjunctions like however in addition if you want to add more some more information or if you get to the end of your presentation just say in conclusion as soon as I hear somebody say the words in conclusion I know that they have gotten to the end of the presentation and they are going to be wrapping it up and ending it so those signposts make it so much more they make it so much easier to follow so I encourage that encourage you to use signpost and we did a lesson all about signpost that I will link up above for you guys to check out and the last part and this one is also important is to take a breath every now and then and the reason I say this is because when people give a presentation some people they don't like public speaking maybe they get a little nervous and when people get a little nervous they tend to speak a little too fast and they just start talking fast because they want to get the presentation over with and they just start saying everything really quickly and then it becomes harder to follow because people don't know what they're saying because they're speaking really fast so again take a breath every now and then slow down use take pauses so that it it again it just helps make the presentation more meaningful it helps make it easier to follow so I have one more part that we're going to talk about all right and that is this that is you all right what should you be doing when you are giving a presentation all right this is this is very important because again most people people should be looking at you so the first thing I want to ask you again start with a question and this is just to get your opinion in order to give an effective and Powerful presentation you should practice at least M times and and this is again there's no right or wrong answer I just want to know what you guys think how many times should you practice a Pres presentation before you give it to your classmates or your colleagues at work if you have an important presentation and you want to make it very meaningful and you want to give a great presentation how many times do you think you should practice practice that at home or anywhere before you start giving it all right what what do you guys think just write a number in the chat or even if you're watching this later write write it in the comments I'm curious this is just your opinion what what do you guys think how many times should you practice a presentation all right I see some answers three times okay uh in the mirror 25 times all right wow two times 10 times again this is this is just up to you guys because everybody has a different style the one thing I would tell you is that I think it it goes without saying the more you practice the more likely you will give a better presentation because you know what you want to say maybe you think of something that you want to add to it maybe you want to throw a joke in there make it a little entertaining at some point the more you practice the more you do it when I was looking up this information I saw anywhere people would say at least five times some people said at least 15 times another person who was talking about giving Ted Talks would say that they would practice their presentation over a hundred times before they would go and give the Ted talk so the more you practice the better when I would give presentations often when I would do it when I was getting my ma I would probably practice about 10 to 15 times and I would have my presentation and usually I would walk to work I would walk to work and I would walk home from work and during my walk my walk was about 45 minutes I would practice my presentation in my head during this time so 45 minutes my presentation was 10 to 15 minutes I could practice three times each way so again the more you practice the better that's the only thing you need to keep in mind so when you're giving a presentation and people are looking at you what should you be doing in order to speak effectively there are some simple things that that you can do the first one is eye contact make sure that you make eye contact with the audience with the people who are watching your presentation many times I

I seen people give presentations and they have their slides up on the board and then they just look at their slides they look at their slides they read their slides and they rarely look at the audience but it is more meaningful uh to make a connection with those people who are in your audience if you are making eye contact the next thing would be to use gestures and you could use gestures with your arms to to emphasize a certain point and use gestures or it could be something as simple as just walking around this is like teaching 101 when you're becoming a teacher and if that you want to learn okay what's something that I can do in the classroom to give an effective lesson and something that's very simple is just to walk around the classroom when you walk around the classroom your students are having to move their eyes and it's something very small but it does help keep their attention just a little bit more so you can use your hands or just walk around it is very useful the uh the next thing oh we talked about it yes walk around very I kind of jumped the gun and got ahead of myself there another thing you can do is smile and again I think I mentioned before that this is more uh an American specific uh if you're giving it to an American audience or even if if you know the American point of view of giving a presentation and that doesn't mean you have to smile the whole time you're giving a presentation like this and it looks a little awkward just just smile when it's like you know you're giving your presentation you should be happy to be sharing this information you should be happy to be there and and you want people to know that that you are you are proud to be giving them this information so it's a little difficult to think okay well do I smile at a certain points again it should just be natural when you say something that maybe is a little humorous you can smile then but just keep that in mind and then the last thing we told you is practice again and then again and then again the more you practice the better that is that is for sure all right so these are the three parts of the presentation that I want you to keep in mind that we discuss throughout this Les lesson the visual the content and you and if you keep all of this in mind the next time that you are giving a presentation at school or if you are giving a presentation at work especially if you're giving a presentation in English to an English-speaking audience these tips will come in help these tips will be very useful and I hope that you can use them and Implement them the last thing I want to mention is if you want to connect with us cool information and updates about what we are doing here at interactive English because we have a lot planned for this year so thank you guys so much for joining me for this lovely lesson if you like this lesson and you think you learn something new please hit that like button down below share this lesson uh with your friends your colleagues anybody that you know who is going to give a presentation please follow the follow these suggestions as always you can write us questions in the comments because we love hearing from you guys and join our social media classes which are up here all right we're active on Facebook Twitter Instagram YouTube so thank you so much uh Mr ven cut LLY LLY

yes practice makes perfect Carla Katie thank you guys for being here um ABD Rashad uh zos I'm just trying to give some shout outs real quick sorry marari uh Raj Clancy y yogendra thank you guys for joining me today I hope you enjoy the rest of your day and we'll be back next time I will see you guys later so long

HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR ENGLISH IN 2019

all right what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which again it's the place that you guys want to be to practice and improve your English skills we love doing these lessons with you especially these live lessons cuz it gives us an opportunity to really interact with all of you today we have a very very very special lesson because we just switched over to the New Year it's 2019 so a lot of us we we have we have New Year's resolutions and I hope that maybe one of your resolutions is to take your English to the next level that you really really really want to improve your English so that's why today I'm going to be talking to you about six ways to improve your English in 2019 and really take your English to the next level so if you're joining us today just want you to say hello in the chat tell me where you're from see a lot of familiar faces which is great uh Leandro Milton Jonathan kava uh Ronaldo welcome thank you guys for joining me L goia great to have you guys here um Asik uh you know Steve uh Jalel what's up welcome welcome welcome thank you guys I'll try and give a shout out to some other people here and there as the lesson continues because again I want you guys to write stuff I want you guys to interact as we go through this lesson even if you're watching this lesson later on write your name in the comments tell me where you're from because I just want to hear from you we try to respond to each and every comment that we can we really do and it's a lot of work because we get a lot of comments but that's what but that's what this is all about about we really like hearing from you guys so again if you're just joining us we're going to be talking about six ways that you can improve your English in 2019 I'm going to talk about six different ways and I think a lot of this is is common sense I don't think anything is going to shock you or surprise you but hopefully it'll give you some ideas and and start that creative thinking because that's something that we're going to continue talking about throughout this lesson uh because youd have to be creative and the first way that you can be creative and that you should be creative is this I want you to use technology to your advantage that is the first way that you can take your English to the next level in 2019 use technology to your advantage and it's it's a very broad statement so right now what I want you guys to do is tell me what technology do you like to use when it comes to learning English what's your favorite technology whether it's learning English or learning something else do you prefer to use like it could be anything do you prefer to use your cell phone do you prefer to use the your your your computer the uh online do you prefer to use you know TV movies that's also technology it can be anything I just want you to get some ideas out there so people can see well what what types of Technology uh is everybody using and how we can use it to your advantage so these are just a few suggestions about using technology to your advantage what I always tell people because so many people ask like what do I need to do to become fluent in English and I always say well immersion immerse yourself in the language now it's not easy for some of us to pick up and move to the United States or the United Kingdom and Surround themselves with the language but because of technology I tell students try to create this little English bubble that you're surrounded with the language and it can be simple things even just like that first one you know change your change the language settings on your phone or your computer so that it's in English so that anytime you're you're doing something with your phone if it's personal even if it's not language related the settings are in English you're constantly reading English and you are exposed to it that's just a small thing another thing that you can do is many students will ask us about like well you know I learn this new word can you give me some example sentences and part of what we want to do is again teaching you on your own how how you can do all this on your own and and how you can improve your English by yourself because many of you out there you you you're not taking a class you're not surrounded with other English Learners and you might feel like okay this is difficult because I'm doing it by myself but if you have a new word for example use technology use the internet Google News if you have a word you can search it using quotation marks and you can find words used in context so for example this is my example if you learn the word jubilant and you're like well okay it means happiness it means you know extreme happiness but how do people use it I I would like to see how people use it in different sentences you can go to Google News put jubilant in quotes and then a bunch of news articles are going to come out and you'll see how the word is being used in context and how it's related to the story you don't have to read the whole article it will just give you a short little few sentences and highlight where the word jubilant is used so again you can take this with any word any new word that you're using and search for it and see how it's used with in context another great thing is you can connect with people online you can try to meet people in person there's a great site called meetup.com and and you can it's about people that share the same interest in something and you can go and hopefully practice your language skills you can try to connect with people through Facebook groups you can connect with people in our community right here I love seeing like as as we start these lessons and you guys are in there and you're waiting and you're talking to each other and saying hey what's up how's it going that's great you are connecting with other people and the last thing I'd say again discover what you like you know you need to be creative I would say as a teacher I would say try to do many different things use apps on your phone podcast read ebooks social media is another great way to practice and as you use these you might think well this doesn't work for me so then you don't need to do it but maybe podcast you're like I really enjoy it I'm getting a lot of value and improving my listening skills

so discover the things you like and then that's what you can focus on that's how you can use technology to your advantage so just want to look at see what you guys have said um uh Mega the best way is to your channel is the best way to improve English thank you thank you thank you we hope so we try to come out out with all these lessons interact with you guys I think that's the best part justel cell phones um Loi computer TV yes those are great way ways to to use technology to your advantage um uh lock read The Washington Post excellent uh Gabrielle I listen to NPR radio again these are these are great resources many of them are free too you don't really have to pay the the internet is such a great place to find free resources that you can practice your reading skills your listening skills uh and even try to find a speaking partner many people are trying to find a speaking partner so that they can practice their speaking skills Olivia prefer watching movies excellent all right these are all great suggestions to to use technology to your advantage the next one that I have for you and you know this is this may be difficult to track down but again just it's something to keep in mind mind when you think about well how do I want to learn English all right I would say this all right try to find fun ways to learn the language all right find fun ways to learn English now the reason I'm telling you this is because it doesn't language learning it doesn't have to be boring all right I think when when we study languages in school and they give you a grammar book and you're doing the grammar book and you're thinking H H

this is so boring it's the same thing over it's not interesting you can find fun ways to learn the language it's going to keep your interest and it's going to it's going to help you stay engaged with the language engaged with English and it's going to make learning that much easier if you can find some fun ways to do it now I'm going to give you an example and it's not something maybe you can do on your own maybe you can um I always would start out with riddles in class sometimes it's just a warmup to to loosen people up to help them feel relaxed uh to to make them a little more interested in what we're going to do that day I would warm up and start up with a riddle so I'm going to give you guys a riddle all right and these are riddles uh in English that and I want you to write your answer in the chat or even if you're watching this later write your answer in the comment uh because we want you guys to participate in these lessons so the first riddle and maybe you've heard this before I don't know I want you to listen carefully all right write your answer in the chat okay listen carefully to the riddle ready okay here is the riddle ready it is let me find it um okay there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't okay you're probably thinking to yourself what listen very carefully I'll say it again because this is just practicing you know you're listening your creative thinking all right there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't that's my question okay it's a it's a sentence and a question the sentence there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens my question how many didn't if you don't know you can just write it in the chat just say I don't know or just put question mark question mark question mark question mark and I'll say like oh okay that's uh that's difficult so again if you guys don't know riddles are just like kind of uh fun questions that you ask to somebody that that gets them thinking and they're tricky questions they're tricky questions so again there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't all right some of you giving 10 58 25 100 I told you to listen carefully because now it's going to make sense all right there are 30 cows in a field and 20 20 cows that's the number 28 chickens we're using eight the past tense of eat how how many didn't so if 30 if there's 30 cows and 20 of them ate chickens then yes that means 10 of them didn't we had an answer I think yes goia got it 10 excellent so again it's a bit of a puzzle it's a little challenging because when I say 28 I think many of you were thinking of the number 28 so this is a bit of a play on words it's a riddle all right your next riddle your next riddle is this one I think it's a little easier what has a face and two hands but no arms or legs so what has a face two hands but no arms or no legs all right so again these are good ways that like I said I would start out a class with a riddle just to try and get people thinking all right and have some fun it only takes a couple of minutes so if you are an English teacher out there and you are watching this lesson it's a great

there are no legs so again it's just something to think about but these are these are fun ways that you can practice and learn the language but there are many other fun ways as well especially if you're using technology to your advantage the next the next way that I want to talk to you guys about the next thing that you can do to to really improve your English and this is it's easy and it's difficult the reason it's easy is because anybody can do this the reason it's difficult is because not many people actually do it and I'd be curious to know if you do it I want you to let me know in the chat but what you should do is set a schedule set a schedule as to when you are going to learn English so here I've just put down some benefits to setting a schedule so if you set a schedule and you're you're right now with us in the chat let me know all right tell me tell me whether you set a schedule or say whether you don't so if you set a schedule just write the word yes so I know okay you're you set a schedule and try to plan out your learning if you don't then write the word no okay just write yes or no so that way I know and it'll be interesting to see well how many people are doing this and how many people don't do it like I said it's easy because anybody can do it you just write it on your schedule but it's difficult because I think a lot of Learners don't end up doing this they study on their own time but they don't really have a schedule but a reason a great reason why you should set a schedule is because it promotes consistency that even and and I don't mean that you have to study every single day even if it's just once a week week and you say hey every Saturday I am going to attend these live lessons that's part of your schedule that is setting a schedule even if it's once a week and if you have that consistency and you do it over the course of a year or two years or three years you are going to see your skills they are going to go up the next reason why it's important is because it helps you organize your learning needs so for example if you're writing down your schedule and you think okay well this week uh you know I'm I'm going to work on my reading skills and I'm going to start reading this book the next time I'm going to I want to practice my listening skills so I'm going to listen to this podcast and it gets you thinking about what you need to do and what you should be practicing because you're writing it down you're organizing you're organizing your learning needs and you're putting it down on a schedule so it helps you it's very beneficial and helping you realize what you need to do to get to improve your English and then the last part is it just it has a sense of accomplishment because you can look back on your schedule for the past month and if you did you know this this one or two things each week that you put on your schedule then you think okay I completed this task I completed this I completed this and it just makes you feel good about what you're doing it makes you feel good about your learning so I have a lot there's a lot of people exactly thank you guys so much for sharing because and thanks for being honest all right so it's great if you are setting a schedule uh maab goia Olivia um Ros rossclair all right that that that is excellent that's awesome all right it it really is going to help you if you can sit down and do this for those that aren't doing it um uh ali mayin uh L Kai uh Johnny Khan thank you guys waffy thank you guys for sharing with us I understand what you're going through because I do the same thing I even though I'm a teacher all right and I'm telling you set a schedule I'm trying to learn uh I'm learning Romanian right now that's a language that I'm trying to learn I had a schedule before and then I kind of lost it and now this year that's something that I've told myself that I'm going to do I'm going to set a schedule and once a week or twice a week I I'm going to do this I'm going to practice my speaking skills I'm going to watch a video I'm going to read uh a page in this book and it's something that I need to do so I understand what you guys are going through if you're like no I haven't done this yet it's good to do it I if you if you can but you have to make yourself do it and I have to make myself do it as well so again thank you guys for sharing with us so before we move on to the next one again I just want to let you guys know if you want to connect with us more if you want to connect with us again we have some cool rewards you can do that on patreon check us out on patreon I will leave a link in the description and you can check us out and again make that make that connection with interactive English the next thing that I want to talk to you about about taking your

English to the next level is this reason right here is what you need to do and I think you know this practice all the language skills Skills Practice all of them and what I mean by all the language skills in short I'm talking about the four primary language skills Reading Writing listening speaking practice all four and I you know I've I've asked you guys before when you're talking about like what language skills do you want to improve overwhelmingly everybody says speaking and I think it's because many are studying on their own or they they they that is that is the number one way in which we communicate so everybody obviously wants to practice speaking I understand that and I also understand that because of Technology it's easier to practice the other skills it's easier to go read an article um on the Internet it's easy to go buy a book it's easy to listen to music and and you can practice those skills try to practice all of them even if you're what I worry is that so many people they're so focused on speaking or something that they forget about some of these other language skills for example I think reading is a skill that is often neglected I think that many people don't read as much or they're just reading very short amounts because of you know technology they're just reading headlines or because of things like Twitter they're just reading very very short little statements but I think it's important to keep reading because the reason I say study all of them is because the four language skills even though they might be different they are all connected they are intricately connected to one another so if you're doing one skill it will help you with another skill for example when you're reading you are seeing the grammar used correctly you are seeing punctuation used correctly you're seeing words used in context you're you're seeing prepositions those tiny little function words and the verbs the adjectives they're used with and if you're you're taking that information in and the next time it comes to speak and you you have to speak and produce the language you will start using it correctly you'll start using the grammar correctly you'll use those vocabulary words correctly and a lot of it might be due to reading it is a value it's a benefit so again try to and this is where it goes back to set a schedule you know set a schedule try to use all the language skills and I know that many of you you're saying okay well I want to I need to practice speaking how do I do that you got to try to be creative think about ways that you can find a speaking partner and it doesn't just have to be well okay I need to speak English and just practice English use your interest to your advantage if you can find maybe in your town a book club and it's maybe with if expats or whoever and you can you know create a book club where you're you're reading books in English and then you get together with other people to talk about those books in English and talk about the stories so again you just need to try and get creative as I mentioned before and use all of those language skills so let's see another one that I have that I think is very important when you're thinking about okay this year in 2019 what do I need to do what I would say is to set shortterm goals all right set short-term goals and set specific goals all right you know don't don't just say like I'm going to take my English from this level to this level you need to identify how you're going to do that what specifically are you going to do what are you going to accomplish and and it doesn't you know set a short-term goal so instead of saying I was talking to somebody recently and said oh okay what's one of your New Year's resolutions what's one of your goals for learning English and they told me they said I want to read 50 books I was thinking well you know okay that that's a good goal but it's a long-term goal and it's too much and I think when we set long-term goals and if they're big goals and you don't accomplish them then you know it brings down your confidence and that's the reason why these are reasons why you should set short-term goals is because if it's just a short goal and you complete it then you have that sense of accomplishment it boosts your self-confidence and helps you maintain your motivation and desire to learn and that is so important because when you start to lose your motivation that's when you know you stop setting a schedule that's when you stop studying and practicing your skills and then all of a sudden you notice your English or you feel like your English is just going down down down down so set short-term goals things that are realistic and be specific and this is what I mean when you can set short-term goals and put those in your schedule the other reason is again you get quick feedback about your progress you get that accomplishment okay I did this all right and if it's a short-term goal like I'm going to take this vocabulary quiz all right we did a lesson a live lesson a while back about a vocabulary quiz you can go check that out I'll I'll link it above take that quiz and you get that feedback about okay well how did I do on this quiz all right what words did I learn and and what learn words should I practice and it's a great way to get that feedback so I of course I I wanted to give you examples when I say oh be specific here here are some examples about like a short-term goal you know maybe you say that for one month you're going to try and learn one new word a day all right just one new word and if that's too much just do you know for one month learn one word a week and you learn that word and you practice that word you search for it on Google News so you can see how it's used in context that's a shortterm goal one month you're going to learn one word a day or one word a week or again even just for one week you learn one word a day and see if you can maintain that goal all right if you say well I'm going to do this for an entire year then you're going to have days where it's just not possible we have things going on in life we're too busy and we can't accomplish that goal so just make it short term do it for one month or less even one week is another good one uh again number two like you could say for one week I'm going to read five minutes a day or if you can't do it each day say for one week I am going to take you know two days and I'm going to read for 10 minutes you just find an article somebody mentioned the Washington Post uh you can find articles uh online New York Times USA Today a bunch of different articles and newspapers that you can read and just read one article find something that interests you and read it all right um another one and and as you guys want what what's one of your short-term goals okay I want you to write that to me in the chat share with each other because again that's a good way to give each other ideas about well what is a short-term goal so write a short-term goal in the comments all right Ahad said yes please give us some examples of a short-term goal perfect so these right here these are the examples that I would I would suggest but it's just something for you to start thinking about so right now I as you guys are thinking about well what is one of my short-term goals write that in the chat or write that in the comments if you're watching this later because it's great for other people to be able to read it and think okay you know that's a great idea I'm also going to do that uh another short-term goal would be like okay I'm going to watch a TV show or a movie using subtitles and the reason you're going to use subtitles is because then you're practicing your reading skills and you're also listening to the pronunciation and see how it's matched up with the words or the phrases so again using subtitles I know most people think well if I'm watching a show or a movie it's just practicing my listening skills I'd say you can add to that you're practicing your listening skills you're identifying the pronunciation and you're practicing your reading skills and that is a very short-term goal because a TV show is maybe just an hour a movie is going to be a couple hours and then you accomplish it it's done it's something that you can do and it's very easy to accomplish so again these are some examples of short-term goals that that you can do so again some short-term goals uh people writing in the comments all right yeah uh you know says I'm going to watch an American movie each week perfect okay that is a great example of a short-term goal um Roxanne says watching Vlogs help a lot and again that's a great thing if you are interest if you know somebody that you enjoy their Vlogs and those are just like five or 10 minute videos you watch those Vlogs that is great listening practice and you're also learning a little bit about culture as well depending on where the vlogger is from um what else do we got uh says all right learning 10 words a day reading 20 minutes watching a lot of TV yep those are all great things um you know great goals and the things that you can accomplish that's perfect all right so again set short-term goals it's really going to help you this year the next thing that I tell you to do and you can do this today is subscribe to our email list this is something that we've been doing the past few months and we've switched over to another platform so if some of you are already subscribed we we're putting the wheels are in motion all right it's taken us a while to get things up and running the reason that we would ask you to subscribe is that again you'll get updates on the latest news things that are going on in our lives and again

we're writing you emails we're not going to we're not going to write you emails every single day and it just becomes spam and you're like okay it's just too much too much but again we'll we'll send you emails from time to time maybe once or twice a month you'll get this email from us you're able you're reading in English and plus we're going to give you some free resources we'll we'll provide you with free resources from time to time not every email will have something but some emails will talk to you about resources that are available some will have resources that we made specifically for you plus you'll also be able to access the secret fluency lesson um which we have hidden on our YouTube channel so if you want to access that lesson subscribe to our email list I will leave a link in the description it'll just say secret fluency lesson you can click on it subscribe and the most important thing of all right there will be your best friend all right so it's a great way it's another great way to connect with us again if you've already subscribed just just hold on we're we're getting that put together so that these emails will start getting sent out and again it's another great way to connect with us so in 2019 because the year has just started so these are all great ways to do it I'll just go through them again real quickly the things you want to do are to use technology to your advantage find fun ways to learn the language all right not just boring old grammar books remember to set a schedule for your learning it's very important that you schedule the things that you want to do practice all the language skills listening reading speaking writing try to practice all of them set short-term goals things that you can do things that you can accomplish because it's really going to boost your motivation and and keep you engaged in learning English and the final thing is subscribe to our email list you can stay in touch with us and we will point you in the direction of a lot of different free and useful resources so those are all great ways to improve your English in 2019 and of course another great way is check us out whoops uh there right there on social media Facebook Twitter Instagram you know it's another great way to connect with us we post questions all the time it's a very short and easy way to practice your your English skills if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button and as always we really appreciate it if you share it with with other people you know who are learning English especially if you are in a class of other Learners share these lessons hopefully they'll also join these live lessons write us questions in the comments we love hearing from you guys and you know just yeah thank you thank you thank you for joining me um just want to give some shoutouts for people who are here thank you um uh let's see ly Marcelo thank you Judy um anaga Olivia gelle uh nurman Sergio thank you thank you roseclair thank you guys for joining us I appreciate you being here with me today again like this like the video spread the word and don't forget there are links in the description uh to help you guys out links to our patreon links to the secret lesson thank you thank you thank you Ronaldo uh Sergio no oev Edison Muhammad go just's so many of you this is such a great Community I really appreciate it and join us join me next week uh hope you can join me next week for another live lesson Mildred kala Kinsey um goia thank you thank you um Kim Kim Chan chel Kim Chan chel thank you thank you for joining me all right you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend have a wonderful week and I'll see you guys next time all right I'm kind of just dragging this thing on right now so I'll see you next time

HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR LISTENING SKILLS

all right so hello hello welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes from interactive English I hope that you having a having a wonderful day we're a bit jet-lagged right now so we just finished traveling a long way so feeling jet lag which if you don't know what that means it basically means that after traveling a long distance changing time zones you feel really tired and sluggish and a bit out of sorts but that is neither here nor there I don't want to talk to you about that today instead I want to talk to you about something that is very very important I want to talk to you about perhaps the most important language skill and that is listening so I want to discuss with you how to enhance your listening skills and more specifically I want to give you five tips where is it there we go five tips on how you can enhance your listening so if you are just joining us in the chat please tell us your name where you're from tell us how you're doing but I want to talk to you about listening today and this is a good practice because right now you are listening to me and practicing your skills so I'm going to tell you about five different tips about how you can improve your listening skills and I'm gonna put some of those quotes down there that I like to hear that I like like this one says don't just hear the words listen to them so listening is a very very very important skill so let's first talk about why listening is so important just a moment ago I told you that it is perhaps the most important language skill and this is true and the reason I think this is true is because it is the one skill that we get a lot of exposure to alright we here listening all the time alright we hear it when we're in conversation we hear it on the radio we hear it when we are watching TV or movies all the time we are listening and listening and listening we are doing that much more than any of the other major language skills and that's why it's so important and for me I personally think it's the most difficult skill I think a lot of people out there they find like speaking or reading might be the most difficult but for me for some reason listening has always been the most challenging so I speak some

Spanish I'm comfortable with Spanish I've lived a couple of years in spanish-speaking countries but still to this day when I'm having a conversation in Spanish it's very easy for me to tune out and stop paying attention and then all of a sudden I rejoined the conversation and I'm thinking oh my gosh what what are we talking about what's going on so I don't know if you also have challenge listening but it is very important so hopefully these tips will help you if you do find it challenging and even if listening is one of your stronger skills these tips are still relevant they are still very important excellent we got a lot of people joining us Nate hello from Lao awesome purl India we got a lot of people here Tong from Vietnam Barbara from Poland excellent thank you guys for joining us today we're going to talk about ways to enhance your listening skills and again like right now you're practicing your listening skills because you are watching this video and hopefully this will help the other reason why listening is important is because it is a very effective way of learning a language and a lot of people who study languages you know agree or disagree about what's the most effective way the people that think that listening is the most important usually do this by observing you know children young children all of us as we're growing up you know the first skill that young children or babies are exposed to is listening that's all they're doing for those first couple of years is listening listening listening and then they start to speak and it's usually a little slurred noncoherent and then speaking is the next skill but listening is the one skill that people use to learn the language and then they can start to speak it so it is very very important Ricardo great to see you again Jose from Colombia awesome so if you're in the chat let me know again I just told you for me listening is the most difficult language skill what it what do you think is the most difficult language skill between the major ones listening speaking reading or writing which is the most difficult for you we are all different today I'm going to tell you five tips to enhance your listening and this is relevant it is important whether listening is one of the easier skills or whether like me it is one of the more difficult skills for you and this is one of my favorite quotes down there at the bottom if you are not listening you're not learning and that's pretty obvious and it is very true that in order to learn listening is very important alright so the first tip that I have for you to enhance your listening skills is be attentive and be engaged as I just told you for me listening is the most difficult even when I'm having a conversation in another language it's easy for me to lose focus and then all of a sudden I try to rejoin the conversation and it's more difficult to follow along and understand what that person was saying and then I often have to ask them could you please repeat yourself so it is very important to focus on the conversation and one good way to do that is to maintain good eye contact when you're using good eye contact and looking at the other person or you are looking at the other people who you are speaking to or who are speaking to you then it is very easy to pay attention to what they're saying and show that you are engaged in the conversation again if you're just joining us let us know in the chat where are you from what's your name tell us how your weekend is going some of you are showing up it seems like for me speaking is the most difficult again other people speaking so yeah I know speaking is definitely a challenge I think this is cuz most of us would like more opportunities to speak that is the one good thing about listening and trying to practice and improve your listening is that there are so many good resources out there and like I said you're practicing your listening skills right now because you're listening to me you are able to communicate with me in the chat and write but I know that speaking is a challenge for many of you the other thing about listening in order to be attentive and engaged is you're not just listening to the words and following the conversation there are other things that you should listen for as well for example listen to the tone of the person who is speaking do they sound happy do they sound sad do they sound excited this will help give more meaning to the topic that you are discussing or that the other person is telling you about also listen for intonation again this will help you distinguish whether it is a statement or a question is it a falling intonation when they're just making a statement or is it a rising intonation are they asking you a question rising intonation this is going to help if you can identify these little things then it's going to help your listening skills in understanding what the person is telling you and again I know some of you speaking and they talked about that quote down there if speaking is silver

then listening is gold for me listening is gold which is why I really really really want to improve my listening skills so if you're just joining us today we're talking about five listening skills five tips to enhance your listening skills Antonio from Costa Rica excellent welcome pura vida' that is actually one of the spanish-speaking countries I used to live in so it's great to have you let's look at the next tip number two is picture what the person is saying now when you're reading this is exactly what we're doing you're reading a story you're reading an article and you are creating the pictures in your mind because it helps you to follow what you're reading try to do the same thing when you are listening to somebody it's a little more challenging because listening it goes much faster we can all read at whatever pace we want to and then we can go back and reread to help us understand when you're listening typically it could go very quickly and you really have to try to follow it which is why the first part of being attentive is very important now the next part like I said number two picture what you're saying the way you can do this is by focusing on key words so if somebody says some key words something that is like an adjective which is very descriptive try to put that pick in your mind because when you create these pictures it's going to help you concentrate and follow the conversation and as they say another very very famous quote a picture is worth a thousand words so let's look at tip number three the next tip that I have for you guys is right here put the conversation in context this is something that I would tell students all the time and I know a lot of you who are following us some of you are joining us are also English teachers and I imagine you may be telling this to your students all the time is to put things in into context and context basically means that you understand the words or the meaning before and after a certain word or phrase that maybe you don't understand but because you understand the words at the beginning and at the end you can kind of understand the entire meaning of everything because when you are having a conversation and you are listening to somebody they may say a word or a phrase that maybe you're unfamiliar with maybe it's a phrasal verb or it could be an idiom but because you understand the entirety of the conversation you can kind of guess what that meaning is so try to put things into context Patricia from France hello welcome glad to have you guys joining us again if you just joined us we're talking about different five tips to help enhance your listening and let us know your name and where you're from in the context in the comments talking about context it's in my mind so how can we put things into context well listen for you know those key question markers those that who the what the where the when the why the how if you can kind of follow along with that it's going to help you put the entire conversation into context and you'll be able to understand what the person is talking about now this is probably more important or very important when you're not having a direct conversation when you're maybe listening to or the radio or maybe you're listening to a podcast because you're not able to see someone it becomes a little more challenging and that's why it's more important to put these things that you hear into context another good way to put things into context is to ask yourself what might happen next this is a good way to check your own comprehension so as somebody is telling you a story or as you're listening to somebody speak maybe ask yourself like where are they going with this what do you think they're going to talk about next what's going to happen next and even if you are right even if you if you are wrong if you are able to think about something that they may talk about next then that means that you've pretty much understood what has already been said that you were able to effectively listen to what that person was saying and you're able to kind of think well what might happen next so this is a good comprehension check that you can do on your own while you are listening to a conversation or again if you're listening to the radio or a podcast and really check your comprehension mohamad hi how are you great to hear from you this is great hello from Hong Kong awesome we have people from all over the world this is wonderful the next tip the next listening tip that I want to talk to you about is this one right here where it where is it let's see number three whoops I'm missing number four let's be fun number four oh gosh I don't have number four up here so let me add it real quickly so again this is let's remove this using this platform I can add something what was it called I want to talk to you about some pronunciation resources that you can use and again I went through this before making sure everything was perfect and then realized come game time it's like oh wait it's missing so listening resources in the chat if you're in here I want you to tell me what pronunciation are what listening resources do you like to use what do you think is helpful while I add this and get this up here all right so

[Music] okay so and there we go you can tell we're live because again this was not planned all right so hopefully you can see you should be able to see this again I want to ask you what's listening resources you use because the other tip that I wanted to talk to you about is this right here is about using a variety of listening materials as I said before that this is listening is something that I don't think many people or as many people have trouble with again I have trouble with it but a reason that they may feel this way is because there are so many resources out there for people to use so let me know in the comments which resources which listening resources do you like to use because my suggestion would be to use a variety of them again if you're having a conversation you're going to be using your listening skills if you are listening to the radio or podcast you're using your listening skills video TV movies YouTube right now you were using your listening skills music is another big one I think a lot of us listen to music in English if you listen to music in English let me know write it in the comments write in in the chat who is your favorite music artist who do you listen to and then online resources there are a lot of them out there you can just go on to google and type in I put it in quotes just type in online listening comprehension practice if you put that in there and look at the results it's going to give you a list of different sites that you can go to that you can use to practice your listening skills to practice your comprehension skills so I would recommend in order to improve your listening use a variety of skills and again I think a lot of us are using you know TV movies YouTube of course but try to make it a little more difficult try to make it a little more challenging go find a podcast and listen to that because you are then you're not going to get those visual cues and actually have a picture of what's happening you are then gonna have to put that picture in your mind which is going to help you practice and and really try to identify the different material that you are listening to so again people are talking about I think YouTube is a great resources prefer to watch sitcoms so again anything that you like to watch and enjoy it is a great way to practice your listening and again this is often a fun way of practicing English because we want to watch these TV shows we want to watch these movies and we want to listen to music so it really really really helps so again use a variety of resources when you want to improve your listening skills the last one the last tip I have for you which you probably already saw it was up there before is this one is to ask questions again this is good to show that you understood or you comprehend what you just heard a lot of times when I would teach business English and I would have students talk to me about their getting ready to do a job interview and I would tell them that in the job interview you should always ask questions at the end if you're asking questions then that means that you're interested you were engaged in what was happening and what you were talking about in the interview process so always ask questions because it really shows the other person that you are engaged in the conversation and that you are listening and it's also a good way again to check your own comprehension that you are asking a follow-up question about you know what you're talking about to get more information and it shows engagement the last thing I want to tell you is and I know this is something that none of us like to do is that it's okay to ask somebody to repeat I would do this all the time and especially if you are maybe an intermediate learner or even more of an a high beginner you're going to have to ask people to repeat if you don't understand and there's nothing wrong with that it is perfectly fine and it's just going to help you in the long run because it's going to help your listening comprehension if they repeat it again and then you understand then you're going to retain that information

something you will see on the internet a lot because there are websites you will go to and it'll say FAQ it stands for frequently asked questions all right I'll write that in the chat for you so you guys know frequently asked questions alright excellent got it if you guys have any questions if you have any frequently asked questions for us what I would tell you to do in this video go to the comment section once it gets published and write a question ask us a question about anything related to listening skills or anything related to English please let us know ask away but just write them in the comments so that is all for today's quick lesson talking about five tips to enhance your listening skills I hope you guys are able to use these tips and practice them because in general it is going to help you improve your overall English fluency

I promise you alright so thank you guys so much for watching please please please like and share this lesson with others if you have questions again I told you just write them in the comments and the very last thing I would tell you to do is to join our social media classes we're on facebook Instagram snapchat and Twitter it's another good way to practice and improve your English skills thank you guys for watching I hope you have a wonderful weekend and if you are watching this it's in the future sometime I just hope you have a wonderful day all right we will see you guys next time

HOW TO PRACTICE SPEAKING ENGLISH ON YOUR OWN

The one thing that learners tell us all the time is: "I want to practice my speaking skills" "I want to speak. Speak Speak Speak". We hear it every day. Now, I understand that it's difficult for many of you because you might not have the opportunity. So that's why I'm gonna tell you three ways that you can practice your speaking skills on your own. That's coming up. So I think that just about everybody out there would like to improve their speaking skills because when we're practicing our speaking skills, we're kind of taking everything that we've learned And trying to put it together, and think quickly, and have that natural free-flowing conversation. And it really makes us feel like: Yeah, we're making some progress.

We're improving our language skills. So I understand why everybody out there would love to practice their speaking skills. But I also realized that it's not possible for many of you because you don't have a language partner or maybe you're not taking English lessons and getting that opportunity or the opportunity you would like to have a conversation and practice speaking That's why I want to talk to you about three ways that you can practice your speaking skills on your own and try to improve, so that way the next time you DO get the opportunity to speak with somebody else, you'll maybe feel a little more confident and ready to have that conversation.

Now, before I talk to you about these three amazing ways to study on your own, I want to address one thing- because many of you might be thinking: Well, I don't know how valuable this could be because nobody is able to correct my mistakes. And that's true. Nobody is going to correct your mistakes, but I want to say that that should not be your primary focus, especially when you're talking about your own self-study. The idea is just to get that practice and to start using and speaking the language. Don't worry about making mistakes, Don't worry about trying to correct all of your errors. The goal is just to use the language and practice and practice and practice because practice makes perfect.

The first way to practice your speaking skills, (and I know you might think: "Well this is just ridiculous", but it's not) is to talk to yourself. Have a conversation with yourself. I do this when I'm learning other languages. I try to create a conversation in my head and maybe I ask myself a question about a certain situation and then think: well how am I going to respond to that question? What words or phrases do I need to use? and then you're having this conversation in your head And then all of a sudden: Wow, I'm actually thinking in another language! That's one of the first steps to start thinking in another language is to actually start using the language on your own, in your mind, in your head.

So have a conversation with yourself! It doesn't have to be a conversation that you wouldn't have in real life. Think about: how would I talk to somebody about their job? How would I talk to somebody when I first meet them? What are some things I would ask? What would I say? How might this other person respond? and then keep the conversation going. Or maybe you think about the things that you need to do in your daily life: things that you are doing at that moment If you're preparing some food for dinner, think about the steps you're taking What do you need to do? What other food do you wish you had in order to make the meal better?

Have that conversation with yourself. First because at some point you will have that conversation with somebody else for real, And then you'll be a little more familiar with this topic and the words or phrases that you might want to use to express your ideas and opinions. So talking to yourself is a valuable way to practice on your own. The next way to practice speaking on your own is to read out loud. I used to have an instructor who told me that reading out loud: it is not a reading skill, it is a speaking skill. mostly because you're listening for people's pronunciation And it is true. This is a speaking skill.

Reading out loud, pronouncing the words, using the language correctly is an important way to practice those skills Also, when you're reading out loud, you're really practicing the rhythm and flow of speech. You're able to practice your cadence, which is the inflection in your voice because you are following the punctuation that you see. For example, if there's a comma, you're taking a short pause. If there's a period at the end of the sentence, then you'll take a breath. And because you're able to follow the punctuation, It's going to sound like a more natural conversation. And I would suggest reading out loud books that have dialogue in them that actually have conversation and you're speaking.

So, we're going to try that and this is our practice for today: I'm going to ask you a question and then a follow-up question, and I want you to give me your answers out loud. All right, this is just a very simple short conversation. Are you ready? Here's your first question. So where did you go yesterday? Okay, well why did you do that? So I hope you gave an answer out loud. Again, just a short sentence answering that question.

Now, to check if maybe what you said is correct, think about the question that I asked you: Where did you go yesterday? I'm talking about the past, so you should have answered using the past tense; using that past simple because we're talking about something that happened yesterday. Are you ready for another question? All right, here we go: What will you do tomorrow? Well, do you think that'll be fun? For these answers, you should have used the future tense because again we're talking about tomorrow I was asking you: What will you do tomorrow? So you should have responded using "will" or "be going to" because those are the two ways that we talk about the future.

So you can go back and practice again and practice giving different responses and pretend like we're having a conversation and think about: Well, what do you want to say? How can you describe these things? It's all good practice. Also, if you actually did practice and say your answers out loud I want to know, so: If you did, I want you to write the word SPEAKING in the comments below So that way I know that you were actually speaking and using the language and giving your answers out loud. I hope that you're able to use my suggestions to practice your speaking skills and be prepared for the next time you really do have a conversation.

If you enjoyed this lesson, please give this video a thumbs up and share it with anybody else - you know- who's trying to practice and improve their English skills. Thank you guys so much for watching, and we'll see you next time.

HOW TO SPEAK WITH A STANDARD AMERICAN ACCENT

let's talk about the American accent but in this lesson we're going to talk about the standard American accent and I really just want to break it down and talk about what are some of the different parts that make the accent what it is today now the first thing I want to say is that if you are an English learner you should not feel like you have to speak with any sort of accent the most important thing is mutual intelligibility that we understand each other that being said I do think this will help with your listening comprehension if you're watching a movie or TV show and really just get a better understanding of why people speak the way they do and of course we are going to practice throughout the lesson and if you enjoy practicing your English skills Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes

the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and if you would like to practice your speaking fluency check out my speaking course click on the link down in the description if you're interested in improving your pronunciation practicing connected speech as well as building your vocabulary I will come back to that at the end of the lesson but right now let's talk about the standard American accent and the first thing that I want you to keep in mind is that you need to pronounce those RS especially at the end of words so this is a pretty clear distinction between British English and American English because in British English those RS may get dropped but not with the American accent father car water you hear that R sound at the end of those words I am your father car for car car for car there are some Regional Accents in the United States uh for example New England in which you may hear people drop those RS but when talking about the standard American accent you're going to pronounce them at the end of words so I want you to repeat these after me and I'm going to really emphasize that r at the end father car water good we're going to build on top of this as we go through the lesson but I want you to think about that last word water because this brings me to the next part of the American accent which I think is very common and I'm talking about the flap T so the flap T it sounds more like a soft D and it often occurs when the t comes between two vowel sounds like in the word water you don't hear a true T you hear a flap T when I say it water and this is why these two words right here with the American accent they sound like homonyms metal metal a flap te may also occur when the t comes before a dark L such as in the words little bottle rattle you hear that slight D sound bottle of water I want you to repeat after me bottle of water now if you were saying it in the exact same way as I was then you were linking a couple of different words and that's the next thing that I want to talk to you about linking this is part of connected speech and it's when you link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word and it's almost like you're just taking that consonant sound and just moving it over to the next word or syllable now linking is not specific to the American accent other English varieties use linking as well as other languages but I do think it helps give the accent part of its rhythm and flow so bottle of water we can link that dark l in bottle with the beginning vowel sound in of bottle love now let's add to this phrase get a bottle of water so I've added the words get uh except I didn't pronounce it like that I said get a bottle of water now that final T and get because it comes between two vowel sounds I am going to pronounce it as you guessed it a flap T and then can link that soft D sound with the article a and it's going to sound like geta get a bottle of water and then we can turn this into a question I want you to repeat after me can I get a bottle of water excuse me can I get a bottle of water can I get a bottle of water can I get a bottle of water please many Learners often ask me how can I practice linking and this is something that I think you can easily do on your own just take any article really any paragraph go through the paragraph and identify all of those indefinite articles uh as well as any preposition that begins with a vowel sound in on at if the word before ends with a consonant well then linking May likely occur and then just go through the paragraph read it out loud and focus on those phrases and make sure that you are linking that final consonant sound with the beginning vowel sound so let's look at well the very

the UN United States this is when speakers shorten change or remove particular sounds and there are many different reductions but I I think going to want to have to those are some of the more common ones now even though you see them written right now I would avoid using them in writing I know sometimes you may see people use them in writing like in a text message but in general I I would just avoid them but when it comes to spoken English I think they're great to use because I I think they'll help you develop a nice Rhythm and flow there's one thing in particular that I want you to keep in mind and that is reductions are not really emphasized and when I've taught them in the past sometimes Learners have trouble with this because when focusing on the reduction people may have a tendency to stress or emphasize them but they're not emphasized I just want you to listen as I say the following sentences what are you going to do tomorrow I want to take a vacation I have to work in the morning so I'm not emphasizing these reductions if anything they're really deemphasized and they're just going to help you run right through the sentence now there's one word that I really want to highlight because we often use it and you're probably not even thinking about it and I'm talking about the word for so this word is often reduced and that vowel sound changes to fur it's very soft and subtle but see if you can hear the difference wait here for for a moment wait here for a moment and it's actually much easier when pronouncing that vowel sound just to say that f for a moment again we can reduce that word and just move quicker through the sentence wait here for a moment let's keep adding to that question and now we have do you want to get a bottle of water for your father I want you to say it with me do you want to get a bottle of water for your father one more time do you want to get a bottle of water for your father the next thing that I want to talk about when it comes to the American accent that I really think that you need to master is the schwas sound people in the United States love the schwas sound this is just an unstressed vowel sound and it really is just going to sound like uh and you hear it all the time in so many different words and phrases even those reductions that we already talked about that second syllable would have the schah sound GNA wna have to when it comes to the schwas sound it's important to know which vowel sounds in a word may be unstressed because those unstressed vowels may be pronounced with the schwas sound and at times this is when I hear English Learners make a slight mistake and they'll end up stressing a syllable with a vowel that should be unstressed and pronounced with the schwas sound so have a listen to these words right here a IAL pencil address syringe all of these words have the schw sound and they're all different letters and that's what I wanted to point out is that any vowel when it's unstressed it may get pronounced with the schwas sound it's unstressed and another way to think about it is that it's just a weak sound and that's where I want to go next and talk about weak unstressed function words so there are two common words that may have different pronun iations depending on whether the word is stressed or unstressed and I'm talking about the words U and two so when unstressed youu may sound more like Y and to may sound more like T and you hear that schw sound my suggestion is that you don't think about these words that you're always going to hear one or the other either U or Y think about it more like a spectrum and you may hear anywhere in between because the fact that you're not stressing these words and you're using a weaker vowel sound that's what's changing it to more of a schwas sound listen to this phrase right here at the start of a question when stressed do you w to when unstressed do you wna do you wna or this phrase when stressed to the airport when weak and unstressed to the airport to the airport

let's add these phrases to the question there's that t to create a pretty long sentence that has everything that we just talked about do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport now that we have this long question we just need to practice and that is the next thing that I wanted to talk to you about practice because it is so important and if you have been practicing with me throughout the lesson I want to know write the word speaking in the comments that tells me you've been practicing your speaking skills so when it comes to practice there are several things that you can do listen to native speakers and try to imitate their pronunciation pay close attention to the way people articulate sounds and then try to replicate them even if we're talking about well slight and subtle weak sounds we just talked about those words to U for being pronounced as says t y and fur this is what can help you develop a more authentic standard American accent if that happens to be one of your speaking goals so let's practice and because this question is so long I am going to break it up into two different groups and I'm going to put a slight pause between the groups so I'll say the question try to listen for that pause do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport hopefully you heard that slight pause after the word father which is before that dependent clause and I do this in order to really control the pacing so let's practice I am going to say that first group and I want you to repeat after me and then I'll say the

let's begin do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport one more time do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport again do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport excellent now if you were able to say that question just like me well then you're using a lot of the things that we talked about in this lesson you're pronouncing those final RS you're pronouncing ounC in that flap T using reductions linking as well as some of those weak sounds like t y and F and remember the most important thing is to continue practicing and really try to make time for it because exercises like the one that we did in this lesson are really going to help you in Daily conversations and speaking of conversations let's now talk a little bit about my speaking course if you are an English learner who would like to practice and improve your speaking skills check out the link down in the description and when you do you will find a special discount just for you the course is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally each week there is a different speaking topic we warm up with pronunciation or connected speech similar to some of the things we were doing in this lesson you will learn vocabulary related to each topic there are engaging speaking activities I'll teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases and there are also pronunciation video lessons included in the course so check out the link down in the description if you'd like to practice and improve your speaking fluency if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Halloween English Lesson | Pronunciation + Culture + Vocabulary

hey everyone welcome to interactive english in case this is the first time your first time here the channel it's all about just helping you practice and improve your english and today i i think it's a fun lesson we're gonna do a little bit of everything we're gonna do some discussion uh about vocabulary a little bit of cultural information as well as some pronunciation and the topic how we're going to connect all of these different things is we're going to talk about halloween so halloween is coming up it is the 31st of october which i think is uh next saturday so this whole lesson is going to revolve around halloween when we do pronunciation culture we'll learn a little bit about the holiday as well as some vocabulary that i think some of the vocabulary is easy and then some of it can be pretty difficult so i want to give a few shout outs uh to some of you who join me right now

hello uh rose lolly uh kyo angela good to see you thank you guys for for being here today i hope all of you have a wonderful and happy halloween even if you don't celebrate it so the the reason why i'm doing this is because it's it's leading into halloween and i think this is just this is more of a fun lesson so let's begin with uh some pronunciation okay and oh here's the this is our schedule for today's lesson uh we're gonna do this order so we're gonna do pronunciation first and then i have some questions which is more of a i guess you say it's a cultural quiz because this is about the the holiday itself then we'll do some vocabulary uh with synonyms in which i am going to ask for your help in thinking of words and and your vocabulary so this is a great way for you to participate

then we'll talk a little bit about halloween food and then some advanced vocabulary words that are related to halloween so let's begin with pronunciation the pronunciation part and the first thing i want to do to lead into this is talking about the w sound and how to make this sound so this is a voiced sound which means there's a vibration in your vocal chords if you were to make this sound and put your fingers right here over your vocal cords you'll you should feel that and you can feel that vibration and to form this uh to to form your mouth to the correct position you're going to have your lips around it in a small circle think about it like you're like you're gonna give a kiss alright so you you round your lips even if you're gonna blow a kiss if you want to know where your mouth needs to be positioned um you would like blow a kiss and that is that w uh that's the w sound when you're uh trying to form your mouth to make that sound and you could say words like which and watch so even if you were to look at my lips as i'm saying those words you can see how small and round it is which watch now the reason why i chose those two words is because it leads in to our little pronunciation activity which is a tongue twister all right i want to practice this tongue twister and i would like you to practice with me so i would like you to try and say this out loud let's read it we'll read it slowly so this first time ah i'll read it you can listen to me and then you can uh repeat it so if two witches were watching two watches which which would watch which watch give it a try all right and i'm just gonna i'm gonna take your word that you're actually uh you're participating and speaking and practicing your pronunciation all right so again i've had some practice with this tongue twister um and trying to form the those w sounds like with witches and watches now let's practice again this time i want to do it uh like shadowing and what shadowing is is when you say it immediately after i do kind of like we're saying it at the same time so very close so it's almost like you're saying it with me so i'm gonna read it slow i'll read it one more time and then i want you to read it with me like you're shadowing and practice your pronunciation so this is the speed that i will read it at i'll say if two witches were watching two watches which which would watch which watch all right so let's say it together all right i want you to say this out loud practice your speaking practice your pronunciation are you ready and let's begin if two witches were watching two watches which which would watch which watch all right so again and then you could try this as fast as you can if two witches were watching two watches which witch would watch which watch okay so this is just a little a fun tongue twisters it's a fun way to practice pronunciation i will leave this tongue twister down in the description if you'd like to read it again practice on your own it's just a fun way to get a little bit of speaking practice the next thing that i want to do um if we go back uh is just a little this is a little bit of a cultural quiz so again i want you to participate write your answer in the chat let me know what you think so halloween whether you celebrate this holiday or not i'm sure most of you have heard about it and it has it has different names and one of this is a pumpkin all right you could say pumpkin but i'm talking about what do you call the pumpkin what is that called and it has a specific name when you're talking about halloween and you carve out this pumpkin and you put it outside the home and that's just part of the tradition the way people celebrate halloween so uh most of you i think yes saying pumpkin you do carve a pumpkin but the pumpkin has a specific name lolly you you rock that one uh the name that you would call it it's called yes mean it close it's a jack-o-lantern so when you carve this pumpkin you you put a picture in it you put a face on there it's called a jack-o-lantern and you take your jack-o-lantern you you put a candle down inside or some other light you put it outside your home and that's just part of the tradition of celebrating halloween all right so if you didn't know that that's a good word to know good way to build your halloween vocabulary then the the next question uh this is again i'm going back to multiple choice and maybe this is a little too easy we'll see so part of the tradition when people are celebrating halloween it involves going around and you knock on doors and when children visit a home the the door opens and they say what what do they say uh is it a trick and treat b trick-or-treat or c trick for treat all right what what would a child say they they go they see this home there's the jack-o'-lantern it's outside and they walk up there they knock on the door the door opens and they say all right excellent i think everybody uh you guys are very familiar i'm sure there's a lot of tv shows movies related to halloween the answer is be trick or treat all right so the in case you didn't know the trick this is refers to like uh historically it's like you're threatening to do some type of mischief to if they don't give you something which would be the candy the treat refers to candy then you're going to do something that's mischievous and really it's it's just playful but this is what a child would say when they knock on the door trick or treat and they would get some candy all right so that's a little bit of a very quick cultural quiz for you learning a little bit about halloween culture now i want uh you guys to really focus on your vocabulary and think about words you already know because we're going to put together a list and we're going to see how many different words you can come up with and the real question that i have for you is how many halloween monsters or creatures can you name and what i want you to do is just write one at a time don't write a whole list out but write one at a time and as i see them i'm going to add them to our vocabulary list so together we are going to create a list of creatures or monsters anything that's really related to halloween so i want you to think about the words some of the words that you know the creatures the monsters that might be related to this very scary holiday alright so i have my list right here and let's do it okay so uh we got ghouls good one ghost i'm gonna write them down as a get it vampire bat spider uh i see goblins um reaper wow okay reaper banshee witches uh we'll just say witch singular uh devil zombie that's a good one uh mummy perfect scary bat werewolf excellent um a hot dog okay uh i didn't i i don't know about that one maybe i'm not sure uh dracula perfect uh skeleton some of them are repeats so i may not be including them but we got 15 so far just take my word that i've already written some of these down um i got a wolf man i guess you could say i i would say that's close to werewolf we do have werewolf down there uh cemetery is a place but i'm thinking of specifically like creatures and monsters that you might uh relate to halloween i'll do okay pixie like uh or you could say fairy trump all right sometimes he is a bit of a character yes um let's see spooky would be more of an adjective to describe uh halloween let me see uh somebody said spray i think you mean spirit a spirit like another form like a ghost the devil i'll write that one down sure um frankenstein yes that is a popular uh character that people would dress up as frankenstein a cow may i get i don't know if that would really be like a monster or something goosebumps goosebumps is a famous i thought that was more of a story um biden why is everybody's throwing in these these presidential candidates for for creatures and monsters uh chucky is another okay i'll give it in case you guys don't know what chucky is that is a from uh a movie um so again let me know what do you guys think we have our list i'm looking for some new ones here uh skull i'm thinking more skeleton i have skeleton can you guys think of any more a pumpkin maybe um the dead okay i'll i'll do that one we could do that the dead i guess it's kind of like uh could be refers to like a zombie um freddy all right from a nightmare on elm street can you guys think of any more all right jason we'll do all the movie characters uh michael myers from the movie halloween sure let's see so we have 23 different words uh creatures or monsters that people walking dead okay um can you guys think of any others any more words a ripper i think we have like a reaper i put that one down somebody who would come and like collect the souls i believe that's the job of like a reaper the grim reaper uh a dinosaur okay we'll put it down we'll throw it down on the list um i know some of you putting down like uh like catwoman you could say batman i think those are like costumes that people would typically wear um but when i think of uh just a sleepy hollow um i'm trying to think of the character that was one of the characters from the legend of sleepy hollow let's see any others scream mask okay so i think we have a good list of different uh creatures or monsters from this can you guys see okay you can see all of them that we have down there all right so i thought this would be a fun little activity that all of you could participate in so let's do the next part all right so i want to go back now and talk a little bit about some of the food associated with halloween i think this this is going to be a little easier so this vocabulary this food vocabulary i think will be a little easier and then we'll get into some more advanced vocabulary uh afterwards so just a quick little warm-up um with this food vocabulary food that's related to halloween which is also i think part of culture looking at this picture come on you guys know what this is all right this is what uh the kids would say trick or treat and they would hold out this big bowl like this and the kids would grab some candy yes all right i think you guys knew um that this this treat candy it's not very healthy i try to avoid it but halloween this is a time when uh kids would want to get a lot of candy what about this right here do you guys know what this would be called this is another type of food um snack that people might make around halloween time i feel like in in places like the us they might do these projects at school and they might make some at school or they make them at home with the with the family what would you call this right here this this snack right here do you guys have any guesses write it in the chat always love it when you guys participate in these lessons so you would call this excellent or linda this you could there's a few different names all right i i'm used to calling it a candy apple so a candy apple but it's also it also may be called a toffee apple or a caramel apple either one it means the same thing it's when you put that um like typically caramel around the apple sometimes people will sprinkle some nuts on there as well and i'm just when i grew up i was used to calling it a candy apple all right and then the final finally um right here what are we looking at here this is well you can see in the picture it's pie all right i'm showing you a piece of pie but what kind of pie is it i think that because you know we're talking about halloween and uh we've already talked about a jack-o-lantern when you carve out that pumpkin this is pumpkin pie probably another well i think a famous and popular dessert that somebody might make around halloween or maybe somebody would go to the store and they would buy a pumpkin pie excellent uh rayon takayo mary esmina firdos excellent lolly i i think so i think this food you guys know it you're familiar with it let me challenge you a little bit more with some i'd say advanced vocabulary that's related to halloween so we've already put together our list um and on the list i did write some of somebody had put ghost but what do you think and um is another word for a ghost so if you're wanting to build your vocabulary learning synonyms is a great way to build your vocabulary it's great for your comprehension and it's great to um use different words to describe a situation most of the time people will they'll they'll say ghost there's probably a few other things the one key that i will give you notice the article that i'm using before the word i'm using the article n which should tell you that the word the noun that i'm looking for is going to start with a vowel sound so that's a little bit of a hint because i know people are putting phantom or spirit yeah i think you could uh you could use those words but that's not the one i'm looking for that's not the advanced word that i'm looking for and um is another word for a ghost and i would say i don't want to say this is more of a scientific word but i think of when i see those tv shows of people really trying to find ghosts and track them down they might use this word and the word i'm talking about because i haven't seen it yet is an apparition an apparition is another word for a ghost an apparition all right so maybe that that's a new word for some of you out there in apparition the next one is uh this a witch's laugh may be more precisely called a which is a which is a loud harsh laughter or a loud harsh laugh so what do you think again i i often talk to learners when it comes to building your vocabulary you want to use more precise language because when you use more precise language you know exactly what the person is talking about it's great for everyone's understanding so i'm not just talking it's it is a laugh but is a certain type of laugh so this type of laugh is more precisely called a which is a lard uh which is a loud harsh laughter all right uh i see correct answer julio excellent uh the word that i'm talking about a witch if i'm sure if you've seen a tv show or movie you've heard this laugh it's very specific you would call it more of a cackle uh is what you would refer to this laugh and i really do think um typically people when they laugh they're not cackling i guess some people might but i really do think of a witch and it's that laugh that that kind of cackling uh sound that large harsh laughter is what you would call a cackle all right excellent um then this i think maybe this one you guys can get some people believe that a black cat crossing in front of you is bad luck but it's really just a what so this idea of a black cat you see a black cat um it crosses in front of you what wha what is that that that's that is a um all right i can't give you any more hints than that somebody else isn't only a noun a cackle you could refer uh no cackle could be a verb too too or a four-leaf clover you make a wish on a shooting star these are all examples of superstitions so that's a good word to know it's a good word um because you can really have some different conversations about that because so many there's so many different superstitions out there so what i want you to do for this one here's your sentence he betrayed his friend i want you to rewrite the sentence but i want you to use an idiom instead okay so instead of saying he betrayed his friend you're going to write another sentence that has the same meaning but i want you to use an idiom that you could say is related to halloween i think of of of death and it's scary so what's what idiom could you use um in this sentence right here so that again the sentence it's going to have the same meaning he betrayed his friend so instead of saying he betrayed his friend what idiom would you use uh all right do we have any what do you guys think so i think if you obviously you know that the main verb in this sentence is betray so you're looking for an idiom that has that same meaning to betray uh excellent um fatima yes you guys got it uh fatimah weirdos perfect may yes to stab someone in the back now if i want to rewrite this sentence the same way all right he betrayed his friend the sentence would be he stabbed his friend in the back so both of those sentence it's really just a kind of sentence formation practice that you are transformation you're changing the sentence but it really has the same meaning he betrayed his friend he stabbed his friend in the back to stab someone in the back it is an idiom and it just means to betray someone so this is one that you'll hear not just around halloween but i think in any type of situation could be at work or wherever if somebody betrays you at work one of your colleagues and you'd say oh they stabbed me in the back they betrayed me then we have this one what i want you to do so i have i have a strange and frightening feeling about this place we're gonna do the same thing i've highlighted strange and frightening because so instead of strange and frightening i want you to use a different word instead all right a different adjective so instead so you're we're looking for an adjective that means strange and frightening and i think this is a word that i guess i would relate to halloween because i think of things that are scary and i think it's often used with uh the noun feeling if you have a feeling about some place you may use this adjective to describe that feeling i have a um feeling about this place so instead of saying strange and frightening what word could you use and again this is uh this is a little more uh advanced vocabulary so hopefully maybe for some of you this might be new for others of you maybe it's not i see two correct answers up there excellent uh fatima the word that i'm looking for was eerie i have an eerie feeling about this place so eerie is an adjective that just means strange and frightening but like i said i think this could be used as a collocation because you if you have that type of feeling about some area someplace you're walking whether it's in a city or you're talking about a house or maybe you're walking in the forest it doesn't matter but you could say wow i have an eerie feeling about uh i have an eerie feeling about this place and you would just say it's a little scary or it's straightening or it's frightening or again you could say maybe you're describing some situation you have a bad feeling about it you could say i have a i have an eerie feeling about something okay so i think that's a common collocation eerie means uh strange and frightening so again hopefully that may be a new word uh then we have one that this is just for all of you guys just for fun i know that some of you um you maybe where you live your country you don't celebrate halloween but it's a it's a it's a tradition that people would dress up uh typically children and they go around and they say trick-or-treat but sometimes i think adults would do this too and they would have a halloween party and they would they would put on an outfit and they would dress up for halloween so if if you i'm asking this question to you i know i said if i were to dress up for halloween um i would be what what i want to know what you would be if you were to dress up for halloween what would you go as what what character would you want to be i feel like if i were to dress up for halloween this year i don't know maybe i'd go trying to think hmm that's a good question i can't i'm having trouble even thinking of an answer what do you think all right excellence uh curtis said uh harry potter was linda you'd be a vampire angela a vampire uh fierce a cheetah nice arlinda an angel aveda werewolf uh brown adam sandler good good one yes you can dress up as anybody um venom okay interesting you know you could dress up as venom i guess you could uh leticia female devil julio skeleton chucky um all right so again this is a good way to to wrap things up because we've talked about well i told you we talked about a little bit of everything we did some pronunciation i had some questions for you teaching you a little bit about the culture the tradition behind this holiday we worked on vocabulary talking about different animals creatures some advanced vocabulary so i hope i really hope that you learned something new in everything that we have done today i also want to say if you guys do if you like what we do and want to show us some love support interactive english um saw some members here with us uh today like lolly uh and you wanna sponsor you can find links in the description uh for a youtube membership or also on patreon um either one and we have some cool rewards as well so i hope again i i hope that you guys have a wonderful day a wonderful week and i will see you next time so long what's up everyone thanks for joining us today we just wanted to make this quick video to let you guys know that we are now on patreon so yes you might be asking yourself well what is patreon well if you're wondering patreon is a place where you can support your favorite creators and there's some really cool ones to support you make a contribution and there are some really cool rewards that you can get in return for your contributions and what we're doing with these contributions is that we we're using them to to help grow our channel we're using them for subtitles for a website to to buy new equipment we'll leave a link in the description and we hope you guys go check it out because we have some cool rewards every month we're going to do a video of the month in which we'll highlight a certain word or phrasal verb or idiom there's a patron I only feed where you only see and have access to it if you're a people a little behind-the-scenes look at what we're doing for slightly larger donations we're offering access to our lesson notes so you can get this very cool ebook it's it's a book that I wrote about my teaching experience in Namibia so you know it's very meaningful to me these rewards may change over time we'll see we also might add some more levels and tiers this is something that's brand new so we just want to let you guys know that it's out there that it exists and and you can check that out it's just another way to connect with us exactly we'd really want to thank you guys for being a part of our community for watching our videos and writing us comments we love hearing from you guys and if you like what we're doing and you're interested in what you know our our journey and what we're doing with teaching English check us out like I said it's a great way to connect with us and just continue to practice and improve your English even more thank you guys so much for watching thanks for being you and for being a part of our community and we will see you next time bye

Helpful Dating Phrasal Verbs about Love & Relationships

Have I got a fun lesson for you today. Because we're talking about dating and phrasal verbs. Two of your favorite things, right, right, right, right? Phrasal verbs...yay! So much learning. So much fun. Yay, English. Sorry. I'm done. Today we're talking about dating and phrasal verbs. And the reason I chose this category is because... Well, first it's fun. Who doesn't want to talk about dating? But second is because one of the best ways to learn phrasal verbs is by putting them in categories.

Otherwise, phrasal verbs can get a little bit confusing. And if you're finding them difficult, don't worry. You are not the only one. And they're difficult because we have to memorize them.

And the meaning can change depending on what preposition we're using. Putting them in a category like dating makes it a lot easier to remember. So we're going to learn about these, and we're going to practice them together. Are you ready to have some wonderful English fun with some beautiful phrasal verbs? Let's go. Number one...AKS OUT. And usually we ask someone out. To ask someone out means to invite someone for drinks or for a movie or for dinner. Because you are interested in them. You want to have a relationship with this person, so you ask them out.

Number two...to GO OUT. Now to go out nice to date someone and have a romantic relationship with them. To spend a lot of time with this person. Basically, when you're going out with someone. It means you are dating this person. You are boyfriend/girlfriend kind of...situation. Number three...HOOK UP. Now this one's a little bit more informal. Because if two people hook up, it's usually when they're just starting a relationship. Or they're in that stage before a relationship. And they're just kind of...getting together. I don't know how to say this without sounding sexual. When two people hook up, it's very open. It's very casual. They're starting a new relationship, or maybe it's the beginning of a sexual encounter.

Number four...MAKE OUT. Oh gosh. Is it getting hot in here, or is it just me? Just me? Okay. Okay. I'll come down. To make out means to kiss and touch in a sensual, sexual way. That's what it means to make out. I'm such a child. I'm always laughing at these. Number five...COME ON TO. Come on to is to behave in a certain way that shows that you are attracted to someone. And you'd like to have some kind of relationship, romantic relationship with this person. If you're coming on to someone, it just means you're showing them that you're interested. When Wes was coming on to me when we first started dating, I thought he was the biggest dork ever.

Because he kept talking about his socks and sandals. And like that was supposed to impress me. I don't get it. Number six to FLIRT WITH SOMEONE. To flirt with someone means to behave in such a way that you are showing that you are romantically interested in this person. This one's a lot of fun because it requires two people. It's about fun and engaging with a person. So your kind of going back and forth in this fun cute banter. You flirt to this person, the other person flirts with you. To flirt with someone. Number seven is to BREAK UP WITH SOMEONE. And this one's a little bit sadder because it means at the end of a relationship.

And this could also be found as SPLIT UP WITH SOMEONE. So if you're trying to break up with someone, it means that you are done. This is the end. You are trying to end this relationship. You want to break up with a person. Number eight to GET OVER SOMEONE. This one is a good one. And it just means to start to feel happy again after a relationship has ended. When you break up with someone, you are not the happiest person. You're probably sad and a little depressed. But as you get over someone, those feelings of happiness start coming back. To get over someone. I hope you enjoyed learning these new phrasal verbs.

And now it's time to practice them. Choose one of the phrasal verbs that we talked about today and write a sentence in the comments. If you're feeling adventurous, write two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, sentences. As many as it takes because the more you practice the better you will be. And this is especially true for phrasal verbs. Well, that's it for today. I hope you enjoyed this lesson. And if you did, please give this video a thumbs up. Thanks for watching, and I'll see you next time. Bye.

Helpful Study Tips to Improve Your English Skills

I think I am live hello and welcome to our live lesson today it's a beautiful Saturday afternoon where I am in Budapest kind of beautiful it's not raining so it's been raining a little bit I would like to welcome our students who are watching us today welcome from interactive English my name is you wanna and I have an extraordinary lesson for you today something very exciting I think hi Cynthia welcome welcome welcome so today we have a some wonderful things to talk about hi hi Christian ah hi Patricia hi I'm Ann hi I'm ed welcome welcome welcome oh we have some wonderful people here from Chile Mexico France so wonderful to see you all and welcome and yes hello hello everyone I am speaking like I said here from Budapest and we are very happy to have people from all over the world join us today so I am going to show you how I'm going to talk about today about the useful study practices and the reason I started this lesson now it's it's September many places have started school already and I think especially for some of us who are seeing the seasons change and where there's fall many times we get introspective and we think about the things we can change the things we can add the things we can improve so this is one of the things where we're always trying to get better at which is studying English and just getting better at it or if we've been thinking about this the whole time then even better but it's a good time to bring it back up so I would like to ask you everyone who's joining us today if you are joining us please tell us where you're joining from and what's your name it would be really really nice to see where everyone is from well thank you Steven okay so let's talk about some useful study practices and what I mean by study practice is so the word practice is of course comes from the verb to practice but I'm not here to talk about the verb today because I think we're all very used to it practice English learn English it's to keep to do something until we get better and better but practice as a noun is the habitual way to do something so what I mean by habitual is I really like the word because it comes from habit so when you when you build a habit you'll get yourself used to a kind of learning and a kind of practice that you do all the time so it's something that I'm that I'm going to introduce that I think you may have heard before or if you haven't it may be and you look at it but I think it will help you with your practice in English and also because I think all of these things that I'm going to talk about today work together wonderful Patricia welcome I think you're going to have fun it's it's it's a good lesson we're building a wonderful community here and welcome the same from amano welcome from Egypt wonderful so if you're just joining please write what's your name and where you're from okay so let me tell you about some of the practices that I thought about that have helped me in in learning first learning English and then in learning a lot of other things but I think these have also helped me teach and a lot of my students have been very happy using these practices okay so the first one I'm sure you've seen before and it's not new to you but I have a twist for you so I call it practice what you learn but don't stop there of course of course we all know this when you first learn something make sure to use it immediately like if you weren't if you learn a new word make sure to use it right then and there and and make sure you understand it and use it in a sentence and use it in a dialogue and and use it all the time I know we all know it but the problem is I've seen so many students who have these long vocabulary lists and they learn them and an hour later they don't know them anymore so make sure that you actually practice them don't just learn the word it's not going to help anyone if you just learn the word and then move on so the first the first little practice is to use the word so make sure every time you learn a new word write it out use a sentence use two sentences three sentences and so on to remember it and but that's not it and I wanted to talk to you I don't know if you've heard about spaced repetition if you've heard about this practice it's it's a method of learning especially vocabulary it's very useful for that and it's a practice where when you first learn a word you practice it a lot immediately like right then and there a lot a lot a lot but then you practice it the next day and then maybe three days later and then you come back to it maybe a week later and then you don't give it up you come back to it maybe a month later so you you space out how many times you practice a word so that you can keep coming back and to it and it's been proven to really really help improve our retention of words and of course what is language if not vocabulary right so we want to make sure that we retain as many new vocabulary words thank you added as for for writing about the what space repetition is very good wonderful so I definitely suggest trying it I've used it a lot with my students and every time I've used it the students have not forgotten any of the words that we learned together not one single word and I might add don't try to do it with too many words at once it's it's not beneficial but we'll we'll talk about that a little later so don't learn like 80 words mm-hmm it's not gonna help you okay by the way if you're just joining us hello and thank you we are talking about different study practices that you can do and you can do these all at once to improve your English of course speaking of practices I am a huge proponent of building a daily practice now I've been I've been doing a little research on this topic on the internet and I found some crazy advice some people saying like what did I find people are talking about you know study a lot make sure you study like seven hours a day or something like that sure you can do that if you have the time but I think most of us don't have that kind of time to dedicate to the language now of course if you travel to a country and do some intensive study that will work for you but what's realistic is that most of us have a limited amount of time when we want to perfect the skill so if you want to improve I think even ten or twenty minutes every day will help will definitely help and what's important is not how much time you put in it but the actual practice that you sit down with your book and pencil and notebook or with your computer and you know there are many social media lessons now that you can take there are different ways where you can integrate those few minutes throughout the day that I think if you make yourself sit down at the same time every day you'll be it this will be very beneficial for you so thank you thank you nice to see you from Senegal from Malaysia from Egypt to welcome to our class today we are talking about useful study practices that I think anyone will benefit from but especially if you don't know how to how to practice your English this is a good way to start so just a little bit now the other point with having doing something for 10 to 20 minutes every day is that it's doable you can you we have 10 minutes you know we can sit down because oh I've done this especially with things like exercise where I said I'm going to start working out five days a week two hours every day it didn't happen so but when I said you know I'm going to try to do like 10 minutes every day much better much easier the point of that is what I wrote here is if you don't use it you lose it that cannot be more true with language I'm not sure if you've noticed if you've ever been at a certain level in English or another language where you were maybe very proficient and then you know things happened life happened maybe you didn't have time anymore and you stopped practicing and then you were trying to pick up and you just you forgot a lot this has certainly happened to me when my study I used to be very good at Italian and then I haven't spoken it in years now and I completely most forgot it so if you don't speak the language every day you are going to forget and you know this is applicable to many other parts of our lives like I'm sure you've noticed with exercise or or playing a sport or something like that very nice to meet you from Korea again thank you guys for joining us we are talking about useful useful study practices and I was talking so far about practicing what you learn with spaced repetition making sure you come back to the word again and again and again and by building a daily practice starting small but doing it often so that we don't forget because we don't want to forget ok this one is my fate one of my favorites I wanted to ask you if you know what your learning style is so if you've ever heard of a learning style

I'm going to talk about it in one second but if you know what your learning style is I wanted to ask you to write it down in the comments in the chat because I'm really curious to see how we all learn okay so for me I will tell you now that I'll explain what it is my learning style I have I'm a combination of visual and kinesthetic so that's my learning style those are it's a combination of the two but I wanted to see if you guys knew ok so learning styles generally speaking in education we say that students learn with three different learning styles some of us learn by you know some of us are visual learners so we learn by looking at pictures colors we're very good so if you've ever caught yourself like highlighting or organizing things a lot by color if you're very if that stimulates you and you understand better then you might be a visual learner or it might be part of how you learn there's actually a test that you can take their mini test if you go on Google and just type in find your learning style there can be there are a lot of really good tests out there that can help you figure out what kind of learner you are but I'll talk to you about why this is important in a second now an auditory learner is a person that learns a lot by hearing listening to things so maybe if you notice that you are you catch more words by listening to people or by listening to the radio or by listening to podcasts you might be auditory and kinesthetic learners are learners who learn by doing things by movement it's that's why that's where it comes from is moving movement so for example if you've noticed and children many times are taught with kinesthetic methods so they have to they they move things a lot in the classroom they build things they have to make things it's too bad that later teachers don't use this method so much in the classroom anymore because it's actually very very useful let's see thank you guys for sharing it's so nice to see see we have visual visual and auditory I think a lot of us are visual and auditory those are very very useful like I said I'm can aesthetically for me it helps when I do something like it's good great to see great to hear but when I do it I really understand it so if you're kinesthetic maybe if you hold flashcards and you move things around that can help you learn better if you write things down the action of writing helps you remember things so it's actually it's very good to know what you are but thank you guys so much for sharing now the reason I said that you need to find your learning style is because then can apply it to your knowledge so if you know that you are a good your visual learner then you can look at pictures instead of trying to listen to definitions look at the pictures and if you know your for example an auditory learner you can make yourself listen to podcasts or the radio to have some really good practice so there are ways to be able to to learn according to your learning style so it's really cool okay now the other question I had for you guys was when do you learn best is there a time that you've noticed that you are better at learning than other times during the day so I was wondering if you guys can write down what time of the day you are most active you think your mind is focused and you learn the best for me it's usually in the morning and I have done this in university where I try to stay up because everyone else was staying up and studying at night and it was a disaster I could not do it I had to read a paragraph like seven times I could not do it it always had to be in the morning so I've learned that for me the best time to learn is in the morning which meant that now I know that if I want to improve my English not my English but if I'm learning trying to learn another language the best time for me to study is the morning or the best time to work so it really really helps if you guys find out when the best time of practice is for you and use it because you will learn much faster when you're most active and your brain is like I want to absorb all the information okay welcome everyone I thank you guys for writing see some of some of us are doing evening some of us are mornings early mornings nights we're all over the place for example Wes and I are completely different I like to study in the morning and he is what we call a night owl so he is up late at night while I'm asleep so everyone is different thank you again for for joining us if you're just joining us it would be lovely to see to let us know what is your name and where you're writing to us from and we have two questions so far the first one is if you know your learning style please write it down it's nice to see it and the second question is when do you plan it when are you best what is your gosh the best time of day for you to practice because some people we all have different times okay wonderful my I have a little footnote to this kind of advice so it's good to follow what you're good at but if you want to challenge yourself I would suggest to practice what you're not good at for example I told you guys I'm a visual and kinesthetic learner I am NOT an auditory learner I have a really hard time listening so for me when I try to challenge myself in Spanish for example I don't watch something and I just try to listen so I'll listen to music and try to understand all the lyrics I'll listen to people speaking on the radio when it's on so in that way I am making it more difficult for myself so I'm creating a challenge and thus improving it's the same for example if you're a visual learner and you're maybe used to using subtitles on the TV I've noticed a lot of people do this who are very advanced learners they'll use subtitles well if you want to make it a little bit more difficult and challenge yourself and become better I would say turn off those subtitles and listen and watch so you're making it a little bit more difficult for yourself and you can do this as a practice like I said everyday if it's too difficult and to never have the subtitles remember what I said about the daily practices do it for 10 minutes if you're watching an English will be just for 10 minutes turn off the subtitles and try to understand okay very nice welcome everyone Oh from India from Vietnam so wonderful to see you guys thank you for joining in I'm just gonna go over very quickly about what we've been talking about which are some useful study practices so the first one is practicing what you've learned and spaced repetition which means to not to come back to a word again and again even a month after you've learned it the second one is to just do a little bit every day like even 10 minutes if you have them and the third one is to find your learning style use it your advantage but also challenge yourself and make sure that you don't stay with the same style what is the moderator yes thank you okay this is I said the other one was my favorite maybe it's a tie with this one because this one is to act like a child it's such good advice sometimes you know we're so busy with our days with everything we do every day they were so serious we become very serious and we forget to to act like children and to be open and to learn and be curious so what do I mean by act like a child children the way they learn languages is first when they're babies of course they just listen so they don't start speaking immediately obviously because of physiological the way of biology works but they learn by listening first and then they're speaking so when you're first starting to to learn a language wherever you are in your practice please listen make sure you listen as much as possible and of course you can listen to anything you want anything that's interesting to you but also you can choose what to listen to if things are more difficult or easy depending on what level you're trying to listen I would suggest for people who are intermediate and higher TED Talks are very useful to listen to there's a variety on different subjects so many YouTube videos a lot of our YouTube videos or even doing a lesson like right now when we are talking to you it's a live lesson there's no transcript but you can listen and then of course practice by speaking speaking in the mirror it's a great way to do it if you don't have who to talk to and I know many of our students maybe are not enrolled in a classroom so they don't have who to speak with speak with your friends who also who are also trying to speak English but speaking alone in the mirror thinking out loud is a great way to practice and I'm never going to stop saying this one I know I've said it in like maybe two other lessons we have a whole video about this and then I'm never going to stop saying it it's okay to make mistakes don't be afraid of it okay listen listen you are going to make mistakes you are going to sound silly people might not understand you it's okay I think I think the thing that is important here for me is the children do this a lot they make mistakes sometimes they make bad mistakes but you know what they forget about them really quickly they just get over them that's how we should be you know you make a mistake who cares so what let's move on we're trying to become better learners right so in that sense we should never stop learning and like I said in a previous video when you realize that you never stop learning it doesn't bother you as much when you make mistakes because you realize oh you you're gonna keep learning so it's okay okay the best advice is to have fun with it so please if you hate sports just came on top of my head if you hate sports don't make yourself read sports articles okay so you're not going to have fun if you hate you know I've read articles like you know about like chemistry or just things I I'm not really familiar with or physics or something you're not going to have fun so find things that are fun for you play games speak laughs watch comedies like watch things that make you that that help you have a good time I didn't put it in this in this video but there is this thing called effective filter and the way we learn is when whenever our filter which means like our were like we're scared the information we receive is usually filtered right so whenever we are a little scared or nervous or afraid to make mistakes it's very hard for us to to put out the information that one that we want but when we lower that filter when we relax when we're happy it's so much easier easier for us to to be able to speak to actually engage with someone else in the language so have fun don't worry about it make mistakes be a child you're learning the language it's new it's okay people are going to be understanding and it's fun it's something new that we're learning so why not enjoy it okay I'm almost to my last one I just wanted to welcome everyone again for joining us if you're just if you're new here I wanted to thank you for joining us if you could leave your name and tell us where you're from and also to answer if you know what your learning style to know what it is and what time of day do you learn best so far we've been talking about different useful daily practices that you can learn and that you can practice so we have practicing what you learn building a daily practice finding your learning style acting like a child and the last one is to be a turtle and what do I mean by be a turtle okay my other question is do you guys know what is the name of the cartoon rabbit in this picture if you guys know please write it down I'm curious to see if you know him so if you write if you know his name please write it down okay so what do I mean might be the turtle I don't know if you know this this little fable it's the story of the turtle or and in the rabbit and it's this little kids story about the turtle and the rabbit have a race and the rabbit is of course faster than the turtle and they both start at the same time but the rabbit the rabbit is really fast so he halfway through his his course Heath goes and falls asleep and he'll think like I'll wake up before the turtle comes but the problem is of the turtle the the rabbit stays asleep and the turtle passes him and in the end the turtle wins the race sorry if I spoiled it for you um it's a it's a really good story because it has a really good moral so again if you're just joining us and you're seeing this this picture this cartoon please write if you know the name of the cartoon character the bunny cartoon character the rabbit cartoon character who is he do you know him is he famous I'm curious if you guys know okay so what do I mean by being the turtle the turtle is slow but it's steady the turtle so the turtle goes let me see how the turtle moves slow but it moves as a steady pace and what I mean by that is if you're going to always if you're going to keep learning take it slow it kind of goes with building small practices go slow and steady so don't try to take on too much too quickly because you might get burned out and fall asleep like them pour a little rabbit in the picture so you know keep keep studying take it little by little and you will see improvement but don't stop because the turtle never stop the turtle always kept going and of course my question here is what is the point of learning something fast if you're going to forget it that's a stupid rabbit yes so what is the point I've I've been there I've had to and I think we all have when you're trying to learn something the night before an exam and you're learning everything and you may know it for the exam but then I don't know two days later you've forgotten all the information I think that's basically a waste of time all the time you wasted learning all of this if you're not going to repeat it and really make sure that you know yeah don't feel disappoint if you feel like a turtle it's a good thing as long as you keep as you keep practicing you are progressing and progress is what we want we don't want perfection you can't be perfect at the language please believe me it's impossible everyone makes mistakes you know native speakers native English speakers make mistakes all the time so don't worry about being perfect it's not going to happen so you might as well just enjoy your progress okay so this was my last useful practice so thank you guys so much for joining us I'm so happy I'm so happy that you guys were able to join us I hope that the learning practices that I've talked to you about today have been useful I love them I try to use them every day in different things that I learn not just language because I think they're very useful and I think they really help so I'd like to please like and share our lesson if you found it useful write any questions that you may have in the comments and we'll answer them that maybe if I couldn't answer them today and join our social media classes we teach on Facebook we teach on Twitter on Instagram and snapchat and we'd love to have you as our students it's another way to practice every day so if you want to improve there's so many different resources but if you want to use them just follow us and we'll help guide you thank you so much you guys we love to hear from our students we hope you have a wonderful Saturday and again it was lovely talking to everyone and thank you and that's all see you next time goodbye

Heteronyms to Build Your Vocabulary & Improve Speaking Fluency

hey everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills so if that is what you're looking to do please subscribe to our Channel and join our community and take your English to the next level so today I have a it is both a vocabulary lesson as well as a speaking lesson because we're going to practice your pronunciation and try to improve your speaking fluency by talking about hetero names and those two pictures that that is an example and we will get back to that in just a second so the way that we are going to learn hetero names and I'm gonna help you build your vocabulary and practice your speaking it is by actually practicing and doing some exercises too to help you learn these would your vocabulary and you want to improve your speaking let me know by hitting that like button go ahead and hit that like button so that way I know okay then we need to do more vocabulary more speaking lessons so the way I thought that I would introduce this topic is with just a simple question alright and that question is this I want you to try and think of a word that changes pronunciation when it's capitalized alright so this is the way we're going to introduce the topic and this is going to be a bit challenging so we're talking about a word that that when it's capitalized the pronunciation changes so if it's being capitalized we're talking about a proper noun it is the specific name of a person a place or a thing and if you can think of any words I want you to write that word in the chat or in the comments I want you to interact with this lesson that is what this channel is all about interactive English we want you guys to participate in these lessons all right so which word all right think of a word when it's capitalized the pronunciation changes all right so I got some okay there's some answers again this is going to be a very challenging lesson yes lolly great great answer that was my first example so you have the word polish which can be just a noun talking like about shoe polish we can also say it's a verb all right to polish something to clean it to shine it now once we capitalize that word the pronunciation changes from polish to Polish and in that case we're talking we're referring to the country we're referring to the people of Poland or even the language of Poland Polish and I put the IPA up there in case that helps you with the pronunciation so you know how these words are pronounced there are more so we can also have nice this is a very common adjective you could say something or someone is nice if we capitalize that n then suddenly it becomes the name of a city in France and the pronunciation changes from nice to Nice we also have this right here reading it is used it's a verb to read in the continuous tense I am reading a book if we change that and we capitalize that letter then it becomes the name of a town in the UK reading reading changes to Reading so those are examples of Hedren um's and if you're wanting to if you want to know well please just tell us what exactly is a Hedren m well this is a hetero name it is when you have two or more words that have the same spelling but different pronunciation and meaning same spelling different pronunciation and meaning usually I would say Hedren M's you're just gonna have two words there are some three word Hedren M's but that it's not common at all so this is different than a homonym when you're talking about a homonym you're talking about two words that have that have

maybe they might have the same spelling or pronunciation but a different meaning so the difference between a homonym and a Hedren 'm is that pronunciation homonyms will have the they may have the same pronunciation Hedren UM's are going to have a different pronunciation like those two words right there those two pictures you have dove which is the past tense of the verb dive I dove in the pool yesterday or if we're talking about the bird it's pronounced dove dove dove those are Hedren UM's and the reason why it's so important to learn Hedren um's is first for your speaking fluency so that you can actually pronounce these words correctly so that the other person understands you but also so that you understand other people when you are listening to a conversation or even watching a TV show or movie you are able to identify these words and you know exactly what is being said because Dovan dove are two very they're spelled the same but they are two very different words now let's let's look at this when we're talking about pronouncing Hedren um's there are two rules of thumb and if you're wondering what a rule of thumb is it's just talking about a general rule there are always some exceptions to these rules but in general you can follow this rule that if we're talking about a word that has two syllables or more the noun is stressed in the first syllable the verb is stressed in the second or in the last syllable most of the time I think you'll come you'll find these nouns and verbs as two syllable words

so let's look at the noun those examples that I gave you right there in dark blue so you have the noun conflict there was a conflict between the the two colleagues the two colleagues had a conflict all right they had some kind of some kind of fight that they had to work out or if it's the verb the stress is on the second syllable conflict all right there were can selecting arguments about what we should do what what whatever the issue is you might have conflicting opinions or conflicting arguments all right so conflict conflict now if we're talking about S&Z this next part right here rule of thumb noun is pronounced with s and the verb is pronounced with a Z so the noun a house which is where people live people live in a house or if it's used as a verb we pronounce it with a Z house so I could say that the the city is attempting to house its homeless population they want to help out the homeless in the area so they're going to house them in different government apartments so that would be an example house house now again like I said the best way to learn and and try to understand this is to practice we're gonna start with things that are a bit easier and then it's going to work up and become more difficult and I promise you these are they will get more difficult and I want you guys to write your answers in the chat or in the comments even if you're watching this later so the first part is a speaking practice and I want you guys to speak wherever you are if you're at home if you're on a bus it doesn't matter actually try to say these sentences out loud and practice your speaking practice your pronunciation so I'm just gonna give you a sentence all I want you to do is say it out loud and then I will I will pronounce it for you and show you where the header in M is okay so just take a moment say this sentence alright okay so now you can listen to me say the sentence and I would say drug abuse is a serious issue and nowadays people abuse opioids and if you're wondering what opioids are that is a it's a drug a pharmaceutical drug that might contain opium which is heroin they can be very addictive there is a big problem in the United States right now with opioids so that that's partly why it's relevant so drug a let's let's look at this so I hope this is what you said drug abuse again we're talking about that s abuse because it's a it is a noun drug abuse is a serious issue and nowadays people abuse with a-z opioids so abuse the noun abuse the verb alright if you guys if you said that out loud right that in the chat or comments just write the word speaking so I know that you are participating in the lesson are you ready here is the next one okay drug abuse and abuse abuse is when you somebody asks abuse is talking about when you to abuse means that you have a problem with something usually it's talking about an addiction you're too much of it and abuse has a similar meaning it's the verb to abuse a drug is you are hurting yourself you're taking too much of it alright so yes excellent we am Huffy thank you for participating missus reluctant excellent all right the next sentence I just want you to say it out loud practice your speaking skills and then I will say it are you ready all right so in this sentence I hope that you said listen to me we get a lot of use out of our boat we use it every weekend again I'm talking about that noun verb that s and Z we get a lot of use out of our boat that's the noun use we use it every weekend the verb use so again these are very common words that you're going to use in everyday English all right you get a lot of use out of our boat out of something we use it every weekend you use it every day excellent all right so again thank you some shoutouts knock you foo Fatima thank you guys Lucia for participating in this activity all right so let's look at the next one again more speaking practice I want you to say this sentence out loud all right now listen to me say the sentence uh all right I took the lead and led the group through a dark tunnel where people were mining for lead all right there are there there's two different words one's a verb 1 one is a noun but the pronunciation is going to be different all right I took the lead all right to lead someone or in this case it is used as a noun the lead all right you were ahead of the group I took the lead and lead which is the past tense of lead I lead a group I led a group I took the lead and led the group through a dark tunnel where people were mining for lead which is a noun and that is just the material that people would excavate from a mine lead all right so this is a head random I don't think this would be considered a a three-word Hedren M because again the first one lead and lead it's the same it's the same verb one is the present one is the past it's the same as the verb read read I read every day I read a book yesterday that's also an example of a Hedren M and the next one are you ready another more speaking practice I want you to say it out loud don't be shy all right you're standing too close to the door close it and these are two words that I would often practice with learners close and close one has that s sound the other the Z sound you're standing too close to the door close it now this is a little different because we're not talking about a noun and a verb in this case too close we're talking about an adjective in a verb so the adjective has that s close and the verb to close something has that Z sound all right so let's look at oh I wanted to let you guys know if you guys want to show us some love you can get our patreon page we have some some cool rewards and I will throw up a link in the description alright if you guys want to check that out boom right there alright check that out if you guys want to show us some love support what we do we will thoroughly appreciate that excellent alright let's look at somebody just pointing out actually yes I just realized in that two examples ago when I was talking about lead and lead I made a mistake the spelling is different for the past tense all right it is led so that is a mistake I apologize for it I think I just need to get some sleep we have a little baby and I don't sleep very much but that's not gonna stop us thank you thank you for pointing that out good eye all right so the next the next way that I want to practice these hetero names is this is the challenging part I want to see if you guys can identify these Hedren em so I've given you a sentence now the words are different the pronunciation is different but the spelling is the same so see if you can put the sentence in context there's going to be two blanks and in those blanks would go the Hedren um's alright so let's look at the first one we'll start out a little easy and we'll start out easier and we'll start out easy and then it will get more and more difficult ready so let's see how well do you know your Hedren um's so I'll read the first one so a mmm was about to attack me so I hmm into the pool hopefully you're able to identify at least one of those blanks and then you can get the other one alright so I want you to see if you can write your answer in the chat or in the comments and also try to say it out loud so that you're practicing you're speaking practicing your pronunciation because again with Hedren um's that is the key there is a different pronunciation that's what it's all about alright a mmm was about to attack me so

I mmm into the pool all right hey yes excellent uh-huh feed English pies mr. lakhtin lolly Alberta misses FA excellent so what I'm talking about I think that last part into the pool hopefully that kinda gave it away and you could say a dove was about to attack me so I dove into the pool all right I know that a dove would not likely attack someone but in this case it's just it's just for practice all right so a dove was about to attack me that's the noun it's white bird so I dove into the pool which is the past tense of dive all right excellent are you ready the next one okay when I saw the mmm in my new jeans uh oh that should be this another mistake it should be I I got uh mmm in my eye not a that should be I when I saw the mm in my in my new jeans I got em in my eye what what Hedren em goes in those two blanks it's the two two different words of the same spelling different pronunciation and different meaning and hopefully you can kind of put it into context a little bit so you can identify and you know these words all right what do you guys think what do you think yes all right so seeing some good answers yes lolly we um yes ooh aleem step hood josh is okay if I'm mispronouncing names so when I saw when I saw the tear in my new jeans it's a noun it's talking about a split or a rip in something usually talking about clothing there is a tear in my shorts or my dress or something maybe not my dress but somebody else's dress and I again that was a mistake I got a tear in my eye I thought maybe that would help you that was a clue that you would have something in your eye a tear which is a drop of liquid from your eye tear tear now tear can also be a verb to tear something you rip it alright so again it has multiple meanings excellent are you ready here's another one there they're going to get more difficult I'm gonna be very impressed if any of you get this one alright and you might if you just think of the right word the business is hmm a lot of mmm which word which Hedren M could appropriately complete that sentence and again if you're just joining us we are practicing our our Hedren M's alright and and this is a great way to learn to build our vocabulary and improve our speaking fluency because the pronunciation is different all right what do you guys think Dee can you think of any words any Hedren m that could complete that sentence the businesses mmm a lot of mmm

what do you think all right this one is more challenging because there's not there's just not that much information all right yes I do see answer lolly yes excellent so I was going to give you a hint and say you know think of like vegetables or something like that if you go to the store and what I would say the Hedren M is talking about the businesses produce a lot of produce so again this is one of those that that rule that I told you about before remember that general rule of thumb when we're talking about a verb and a noun in case some of you missed it I want to just show you where is it right here all right when we're talking about the noun is stressed in the first syllable the verb is stressed in that second syllable okay so I've lost my place sorry about that all right so the business is produce again that stresses on the second syllable produce a lot of produce the stress is on that first syllable and we're talking about produced to create something to make something produce is agriculture or talking about natural products my hint was gonna be like vegetables if you go into the grocery store and you look in the the produce section of the grocery store you might find you know different vegetables so that is that is the answer produce and produce the next one we need to mmm the people into - mmm teams we need to mmm the people into - mmm teams what do you think what what what Hedren in best completes that sentence and I know like I said this is this is challenging you guys really you need to think outside the box a little bit because again you're looking for two think it's challenging maybe maybe you guys are easily going to get the answer I hope so so what what Hedren m best completes this sentence what do you guys think write your answer in the comments write your answer in the chat okay so we're talking about - same spelling different pronunciation alright he has many great hmm which he hmm to his success ah ideas made alternate no uses I kinda sounds like the word that I'm looking for alright is this one attributes so he has many great attributes it's a noun we're talking about somebody's characteristics which he attributes to his success so attributes we're talking about their characteristics the now the verb attributes which is talking about you you're you know you regard something it's caused by something else all right it attributes to his success so those attributes he attributes those to his success alright that because of those attributes he has become very successful alright he has many great attributes which he attributes to his success that is another example of a Hedren M attributes attributes okay so I wanted to show you where is it these are a of the Hedren um's that we went through in today's lesson I've outlined them here for you the capitalization changes at the beginning when you capitalize the word the pronunciation changes the pronunciation one right here this is the difference if it's talking about if it's a noun the stress is on that first syllable if we're talking about the verb the stress is on the second syllable think about that word right there the noun conflict the verb conflict the other rule of thumb is we're talking about the noun it's going to have the S sound if it's the verb the Z for example house a house or two house and then those are the other ones we identified some more Hedren M's just practicing trying to expand your vocabulary as well as improve your pronunciation because I think a lot of these words the these are common words that I think many of you know most of them you may not have known the Hedren 'm that went along with it so hopefully you were able to learn something new and build your vocabulary as well as improve your speaking skills and your speaking fluency so this is a list of Hedren M's from the lesson and if you guys did all right if you guys learn something new from this lesson please hit that like button show us some love as always you can write to us in the comments because we just love hearing from you share this lesson with other English learners anybody you know who's trying to practice and improve their English skills and if you want to practice with us more follow us on social media we post a lot of questions on our Facebook page Instagram well Instagram is mostly just pictures of our family but Twitter we also post questions to help people actually practice their their English skills which is what interactive English is all about thank you guys so much for joining me thank you Rasha adam fatima miss reductant hans in Mahesh thank you thank you thank you Maria glad you guys could join me today I really appreciate it I hope that you have a wonderful wonderful day and I will see you guys next time so long

Homonyms & Homophones to Build Vocabulary

what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills so if you want to improve your English you're in the right place so I hope that you subscribe turn on that Bell so that you will get notified when we put out our new lessons so today I have a fun lesson for you and in this lesson is to help you build your vocabulary with words that you probably already know as well as improve your comprehension if you are reading these words or you hear them in everyday conversation and the words that I am talking about in today's lesson are homonyms this is what we're going to discuss today and we are going to practice and practice and practice and by practicing I hope that reinforces the meaning of these words so that you better understand them and can use them so let's let's just start out with something that's a very simple question just look at like what is a homonym so a homonym is when you have two or more words that have the same spelling or pronunciation but different meaning okay so maybe the spelling is the same but the meaning is different perhaps the pronunciation is also the same and the meaning is different okay so I'm gonna explain this a bit more later on as we go through the lesson but you can see those two visuals right there and you could probably guess those word that word because it's just one word and that is bat so the way that I really want to open this up is with a riddle okay so if you don't know what riddles are those are just kind of these fun little games where you really have to think about what what is being asked so this is really all about listening okay and and what I want you to do because we have a lot of people here which is great I want you to try and write your answer in the comments so I'm gonna give you a riddle I want you to listen to what I'm saying and listen carefully and then write your answer in the chat or if you're watching this later write your answer in the comments because we just want want you guys to interact with the lesson alright so here is the riddle and I will say it a few times maybe you've heard this before okay here we go so the riddle is this there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't okay so I'm saying this slowly so that hopefully you can try and piece it together listen carefully I will say it again there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't so I'm asking I'm giving you some information and then I'm asking you the question okay there are there are 30 cows in a field just like that picture shows you there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't that's that's the question that I want you guys to answer alright what do you think alright write your answer in the chat write your answer in the comments I don't see any answers just yet maybe this is difficult I'll say it one more time okay there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't okay so I think one answer no all right now let me let me show you all right let me show you this and when I show you then it I think that that light bulbs gonna turn on you're gonna be like oh okay I see some guesses the answer is 10 the answer is 10 so now let me let's read this again together there were 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens that's what I'm saying and then I asked you how many didn't so what most of you are hearing is that as soon as you hear a number you hear that number 30 the next time you hear we're talking about chickens automatically everybody thinks of the number 28 and then if you're thinking of that then the question just does not make but in this case eight as in the past tense of eat and the number eight those are homonyms specifically those are homophones and we will be working with those as well today so this is a fun riddle obviously cows don't eat chicken so it's just kind of an activity but this is a good exercise you can you know try if you have an English class tell your tell the other students tell your English teacher see if they can figure out this riddle because yes I think a lot of native speakers also have trouble with this which is why which is why it's a riddle there were thirty cows in a field and twenty-eight chickens how many did it okay so that's a good little introduction about what we're talking about today and that is hominem so when you think of homonyms I think of it homonyms it's kind of like an umbrella term and there are different parts underneath homophones are one part so typically homophones are a type of hominem but specifically if you want to know the difference between a homophone and a hominem a homophone has the same pronunciation but different spelling and meaning so like the one we did before ate and ate the past tense of eat and ate the number eight those are homophones they have a different spelling and different meaning the same with those two images right there I don't know if you can see them like meat and eet to meet someone part of your vocabulary okay so I have a lot of questions for you guys today let's start out with something that's going to be a little easier all right which is just we're gonna start out with identifying homonyms so these are all words that they have the same spelling the same pronunciation but there are two different meanings all right sometimes there might be even three different meanings so the first one I'm gonna go through these quickly alright so and then we'll do some practice so we have right as in like the test I got the right answer it was correct or the direction if somebody says you know you need to go left or you need to go right the next one we've already talked about that a baseball bat and a bat that you might see flying at night then we have well as in somebody I think of somebody's health like oh I'm feeling well or maybe a well that you would use to try and get water from a water well you also have bark on that side like the bark which is kind of the skin of a tree or a bark that the sound dog makes dogs bark down here we have bright as in something as shining the Sun is bright or I tried to put it in that picture right there bright like an idea alright somebody that light bulb comes on and like oh so if somebody is bright it just means they're smart they are intelligent they are bright all of you guys I think you guys are so bright because I think I'm gonna ask you these questions I think you would do very well and then the last one you have rock which is a style of music rock and roll and a rock which is just the object that hit that hard a hard rock okay so now it you you've seen these homophones the first step which to practice them would be just trying to identify them in sentences which one are we talking about so I will go through this quickly if you if you want I want you to try write your answers in the chat write them in the comments participate in the lesson so the first question all right that I have for you is this it's just a sentence all you need to write is just just put a or B which one and which one am I talking about which meaning if somebody says you know you don't look so well would you like a drink which well am I talking about A or B just being able to identify the meaning of that hominem alright and I this is a little easier and as we go through these it's going to get a little more difficult alright you don't look so well would you like a drink yes I'm talking about a as in somebody's health the way they feel you don't look so well would you like a drink perfect alright alright I knew I knew that you would get that right alright I'm just gonna just keep using homonyms the next question that I have for you is this alright this is this is an idiom and you could say I think you're barking up the wrong tree okay and this in this idiom I think you're barking up the wrong tree which which bark what am I talking about alright and if you are unfamiliar with the idiom barked up the wrong tree what it means is that you're trying to do something in a way that it's not gonna work okay you're trying to do something and it's not going to work you're barking up the wrong tree alright you so for example you're trying to do something and it's not gonna work that hey you know you're barking up the wrong tree you need to do something else in this case alright to bark up the wrong tree yes excellent is B hey you're talking about somebody barking like a dog is barking it's a verb which means it can be used in the continuous tense if you're talking about the bark of a tree that is a noun so this one I tried to trick you a little bit because again it has tree in the idiom and the next one let's see if you can identify this one all right we saw some big bats at the baseball game last night what do you think okay which which meaning do you think okay I don't want to give you any more hints but just just think about that we saw some big bats at the baseball game last night all right what do you think write your answer in the chat in the comments if you guys are just joining us now we are talking about homophones we are learning homophone homonyms we also do homophones we're learning homonyms we're gonna practice them and to help you build your vocabulary so this one is where I think homonyms can confuse people at times because to be quite honest we saw some big bats at the baseball game last night well at a bit in baseball people use bats and there is an expression talking about big bats alright the the bats that the players were swinging they were big they were they were hitting the ball far but last night you could also be talking about bats that you might see so depending on the context this is a this is an example where we need more information we need to know well what is the person what did they say before this sentence what did they say afterwards because depending on the conversation both of them could be correct all right if I'm telling my friends like yeah you know oh we saw some big bats at the baseball game last night there were about 10 homeruns alright then you could say eh or if I said wow you wouldn't believe we saw some big bats at the game last night these bats were huge they were flying everywhere in that case it would be B so again yes it depends on the context I saw that Paul excellent all right so what I want to do is quickly just to let you guys know if you guys enjoy our lesson if you like what we do you can check us out on patreon and help support us there we have some useful and and cool rewards that you guys can find on patreon so that first part was all about just trying to identify the meaning of these homonyms the next part what I want you to do is testing your listening skills okay so we I want you to listen for the homonyms I am going to tell you a sentence and I just want you to hold up your fingers I know that I can't see you I just trust that you're doing the activity okay and before we move on I just want to throw in that link alright there's our patreon link if you guys want to go check that out there's also a link in the description okay so let's look at this right here so these are very very common words again I said listen for homonyms even though technically these are homophones I told you that homophones is kind of it is a type of hominem so we have number one listen for my pronunciation number one is there number two there and number three the pronunciation is there all right you probably noticed you can hear that all three of those sound the exact same so what I want you to do for this activity is more of a listening this is comprehension I am going to say a sentence and all I want you to do is hold up your finger all right am I saying number one or am I saying number two or number three okay all right ready so the first sentence the first sentence that I have for you as if I said okay look over there hold up which one one two or three look over there I hope that all of you are holding up number one look over there alright we're talking about a location all right we did an X we did a live lesson just a weeks ago no no that was a different one

I'm conflating I'm confusing my own live lessons right you know so look over there all right the next one are you ready just hold up hold up your fingers if somebody asks you know hey you know what's their problem you know these these people what what's their problem what do you think what's what's their problem all right I hope again in this case what's their problem all right we're talking about number three you should be holding up number three what's their problem I meant to go over these before remember number one if you're talking about number one they're it's it's an adverb and it's talking about a place number two there is the contraction form of they are and number three is the possessive okay so just a quick review but like I said I think most of you know the meaning of these words because they are very common this is all just practicing your comprehension all right the next one sense I have for you is this one alright just hold up one two or three if I said that that that joke it went over their head that joke went over their head again I'm using another idiom I'll tell you what it means in just a moment if I say if somebody said yeah that joke went over their head which one am I using I hope that you are holding up number three again the possessive their head that joke went over their head if something goes over someone's head it means that they don't understand it so I say oh the joke went over their head they didn't understand the joke alright the next one if I said I think they're watching us I think they're watching us what do you guys think I hope that you were holding up to do what no all right two two two fingers I think they're watching us okay two fingers now let's make it a little more challenging I am going to say a sentence with two of them in there okay so then you could tell me is it am I talking about one two or is it three two okay so here is your next one and just hold up the fingers you guys writing them in the chat that's perfect okay so the next sentence is this um there are two deer in their yard there are two deer in their yard there are two deer in their yard which ones do you guys think there are two deer in their yard there's two of them you should be holding up two fingers two different ones all right so the first one there are two deer in their yard they're number one are two deer in their yard number three the possessive so that was one three the next one that I have for you testing your listening comprehension they're trying to help on their own terms they're trying to help on their own terms they're trying to help on their own terms what to do you think in that one they're trying to help on their own terms all right I hope that you are holding up two and three they're trying to help they're trying to help on their possessive own terms they're trying to help on their own terms let's do another one this says this has all three of them okay what they're doing in there is their business what they're doing in there is their business what they're doing in there is their business what do you guys think all right that's all three of them right there what they're doing in there is their business all right what they're doing in there is their business okay so two one three what they're doing in there wait wait what they're doing in there they are in there that's one is their business all right so again this is I think a lot of this is just your comprehension you need to put this into context and really understand okay which meaning that they're going for and some of this this can even this can easily confuse native speakers as well as I mentioned I gave you that riddle I think most native speakers would be very confused at that riddle so I encourage you to go try it let's try three more different homonyms okay so we have rain as in the water is falling from the sky it's raining outside to rain as in like a king or a queen a ruler over a certain area a certain country which is there the time that they rule would be there rain and then rain number three like the reins of a horse what what you would use to control the horse the reins alright so again hold up one two or three depending on what you hear so the first sentence I have for you is you need to grab hold of the reins you need to grab hold of the reins alright so and you need to grab hold of the reins you should be holding up number three alright we're talking about a horse's rein so grab hold of the reins the next one if I said oh it's raining it's pouring the old man is snoring what do you think this is actually this is a nursery rhyme it's raining it's pouring the old man is snoring he went to bed he went he bumped his head went to bed didn't wake up in the morning alright it's raining it's pouring the old man is snoring we're talking about number one

all right you should be holding up one it's raining alright excellent the next one said Oh what are we going to do during her reign what are we going to do during her reign what are we going to do during her reign maybe you're talking about I don't know Game of Thrones and we thought everybody thought Daenerys was gonna get on to the Iron Throne people they oh no what are we going to do during her reign if you're talking about a king or queen reign you should be holding up number two Rey all right let's do one more this one has two two of them I lost the reins because of the rain I lost the reins because of the rain I lost the reins because of the rain and and again this is a sentence that depending on the context you could hear it sounds a little weird because of the the homonyms I lost the reins alright because of the rain three one I lost the reins because of the rain maybe they slipped out of your hands okay so this is good listening practice it's all about improving your comprehension to see if you can listen for these different homonyms homophones and identify them okay let's let's do let's do some more practice all right if you guys if you rocked that listening practice let me know hit that like button down below so I know okay you understand these homonyms and you are able to identify them correctly hit that like button if you were able to get most of those correct so the next part is I am going to test your knowledge and - and just see which of these words you know okay and what I want you to do for these is yes try write them in the chat write them in the comments I want to see how many of these homonyms you know and the way out well I'm just going to go ahead and give you the first one I think you'll see how it's done okay so the first one that I have for you is this this is all about knowing your homonyms so something a dog wags and another word for story okay what do you think write those words whoops kind of just told you it's two different words write it in the chat write it in the comments we want you to interact to participate in this lesson so what what am I talking about something a dog wags and another word for story okay this is just seeing how many like just is testing your vocabulary to see if you already know some of these homonyms okay so what I hope all right I

let's see what do we got here yes Riza Marina Sarada excellent imran fatima so something a dog wags is a tail all right ta IL another word for a story is like a tail we're talking about Oh a tall tale of something something happens it's the word for a story perfect the next one is right here think about this someone with a sword okay and then when it's dark outside do you know what what am I talking about there I'm not gonna try it not gonna try and give you any hints or accidentally give it away all right someone with a sword and when it's dark outside what do you think okay if you guys again if if you're just joining us we are practicing homonyms and and just helping you build your vocabulary and improve your comprehension so excellent yes Jacob marina we um it is a wonderland Nisha perfect someone with a sword is a knight k and IG HT and when it's dark outside it's just it's nighttime it is night out all right those are homonyms again technically those are homophones which are a type of hominem but I think people will use them interchangeably but again they have same spot same pronunciation different spelling same pronunciation different meaning the next one if we're talking about a pair of items and a stick for lighting a fire what do you think that is talking about a pair of items a stick for lighting a fire right your answer in in the chat in the comments the best way to practice and and to actually help you try to remember and retain this information is to practice is to interact is to participate that's what we want all right so what do you think a pair of items a stick for lighting a fire okay what do you think alright so yes this one is actually this is a pure hominem because it is talking about the same spelling same pronunciation different meaning all right a pair of items you could say is a match and a stick for lighting a fire is also a match excellent Salaam Lali a full moon Cristina Anna yes you could say again some of you wrote a stick for lighting a fire matches that would be fine as well but we're talking about yes a match pair of items match for lighting a fire so now it's gonna get a little more challenging okay I'm trying to make these a little more difficult to avoid work or you could also say it's an engine running slowly so this word that word has kind of two different meanings avoid work or an engine running slowly and the next one is an object that is representation of a god okay these again which it's I don't want okay I don't want to give any any more hints or information what do you get what do you think that is alright avoiding work and an engine running slowly that's kind of together and the different meanings but they are together with the same word and an object that is a representation of a god alright excellent yuk yuk bionaire perfect free 99 English excellent so what I'm talking about is if you say idle IDL e you're avoiding work there's an expression in English that says idle hands are the devil's workshop if you are avoiding work if you're not using your hands it's the devil's workshop you should be doing something is basically what the expression means or you could say that the engine is idling the car engine is idling the boat engine is idling or an object that is representation of a god idle I do L so again these are homophones different spelling different meaning the next warrant so I hope again I hope if you didn't know that hopefully you're learning some new words you're learning some new vocabulary two units of liquid a hard colorless mineral alright so as I said it's getting you know it's getting a little more difficult two units of liquid a hard colorless mineral what do you guys think and and there are again I'm just choosing some at random there are so many different homonyms out there but what what do you think two units of liquid a hard colorless mineral yes rockman air I'm probably pronouncing your name wrong but if we're talking about two units of liquid Lalli excellent perfect we're talking about quartz okay two units of liquid would be a quart quar TS and a hard colorless mineral quartz quar TZ so again I said two units because you one want just one quart you need that s two quarts three quarts so the plural form courts and courts they are they are homophones are technically yes Hama they are homonyms but again we could say they are homophones if we want to be a little more specific it is a type of hominem they have different spelling different meaning but the same pronunciation so what I want you guys to do okay this is a list of the homonyms and the homophones that that we've talked about in this lesson and like I said there are so many different ones out there I think it's always good to practice because it's good to practice first to build your vocabulary so that you're able to identify these different types of homonyms also for your comprehension because if you're reading them in a story or you're listening to them in conversation you'll be able to identify the correct meaning so it's always good to practice and what I want you guys to do is help each other build build our build our vocabulary and I want you to in the comments to write another pair of homonyms you can write another pair of homonyms or write another pair or a pair of homophones either or there are so many out there but share with us share with the community that is the best way for us to help each other build our vocabulary and if you learn one of these new words if somebody writes it in the comments and you've learned it new hit that like button like their comment so that we know okay what which words are important which words are people learning thing new things because then when I do a future lesson perhaps I will choose those words so please share with us write some homonyms in the comments and if you learn some new ones hit the like button on their comments so so that everybody can help each so that we can help each other build our own vocabulary all right thank you guys so much for joining me today for this homonym lesson if you enjoyed it again please like and share our lessons help us spread the word you can write to us in the comments we always love hearing from you and check us out on social media we are active on Facebook Twitter and Instagram and of course right here on YouTube you can always find us so thank you neasha foo via live a santosh marina Salaam Camila 3 3 lei lolly thank you thank you thank you trying to give some quick shout outs Jacob K Lane Morgana toga Dean thank you guys so much for joining me I hope you have a wonderful day and I will see you next time so long

Hot Summer Idioms to Burn Into Your Vocabulary

so it is very hot outside right now and that's why in today's lesson i wanted to teach you some different idioms and expressions that all have the word hot or heat in it and i want to switch things up a little bit today because what i want to do is kind of i want to present these to you in the form of a quiz and i'll give you a moment to think of your answer and then of course i will tell you the answer talk a little bit about what the idiom means and how people generally use it and i think learning these is useful because it's going to help you improve your overall comprehension but i tried to choose more common idioms that you may find yourself in a situation that you might be able to use them in just casual conversation and help you develop a more natural way of speaking your first question your first idiom is right here how would you complete this idiom in the heat of the and i'll go ahead and tell you the meaning it means that you do or say something without thinking because you you get really angry suddenly you get angry or upset and you do or say something in the heat of the so as i was talking about the meaning i think an important word a key word would be suddenly so it just really it's like you're reacting all of a sudden when you get angry and you do something in that well that instance or that moment in the heat of the moment so this is an idiom that i think we can all relate to because if you're arguing with someone and you really get upset and you get angry because again heat has to do with anger and you may say something or do something in the heat of the moment and often when this happens it's like you would either say or do something that you generally would regret you you regret doing this thing so you may hear somebody even apologize and say yeah i'm sorry for saying this i just i said it in the heat of the moment or you're talking about an instance in which you did something like you got really angry and yeah i just i got so upset i threw the chair in the heat of the moment and again these are actions that you would typically regret and you would say that it just happens in the heat of the moment what was she thinking i guess in the heat of the moment she just forgot that she doesn't really like matthew that way honey let me just tell you what i think sometimes in the heat of the moment things happen

the next idiom that i have for you and i'm really really starting to sweat it is very hot out here is to be in hot water and i'm going ahead and giving you the idiom and i want you to think about what does it mean does it mean to be in danger does it mean to be rewarded for something or does it mean to be in trouble now if you were to think about well literally being in hot water it's not a good situation so i'm sure you know it's not to be rewarded for doing something what this means is to be in trouble and it's like you you do something and then you somebody could say wow you're you're in hot water all right you're in trouble someone else is upset with you or they're they're angry and then you would be in hot water again this is another idiom that i think we can all relate to if somebody was angry with you um because you did something and say yeah you know right now i'm in a little bit of hot water with my boss because i missed the deadline and yeah she's just really angry with me and i'm in hot water and if you do not hit that like button then yeah you're going to be in hot water and i also think if you don't subscribe then you're again you're going to be in hot water i'm going to be very angry and of course i don't mean that i just i just set it in the heat of the moment i'm sorry i didn't mean to do that careful with that gun oh yes sir we're fine but i really would appreciate it if you go ahead and subscribe turn on notifications that way i can become your teacher my name is wes

the channel is interactive english which is all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals then we have this idiom right here to m the heat so what it means is to well you are the one who's going to get blamed or you're going to accept the criticism and you are going to um the heat i need to be careful with the words that i use when giving you the meaning because i'm i'm really asking for the verb in this situation what is the verb in this idiom to um the heat and i hope that you said take to take the heat so when someone takes the heat yes they are they're taking the blame they are accepting the criticism so you could uh use this in a situation where maybe i i made a mistake but i want you to take the blame for it and say hey can you can you tell them that you were the one that made the mistake and you might say to me look i'm not going to take the heat for your mistake all right you need you need to take the heat because you are the one who made the mistake or if i wanted to talk about criticism i could say some of the company executives took a lot of heat for their inappropriate comments and they were criticized for this now you could also slightly change this idiom and say you're going to take the heat off someone and this just means to reduce criticism so to follow up on that sentence that i just said i could say when the company when some of the company executives resigned because of their inappropriate comments that took some of the heat off of the ceo so perhaps the the company was getting a lot of criticism the ceo the executives and then those executives resigned and that reduced the criticism and took some of the heat off the ceo your mom is wrong i'm gonna tell her you said that that's okay you tell her i'll take the heat then i have this expression for you okay if you can't take the heat get out of the okay and that blank space is referring to well a room in your home all right i'll give you that hint if you can't take the heat get out of the so think about um what room in your home might be well a little hotter than some of the other rooms so the answer is kitchen if you can't take the heat get out of the kitchen and really you could think it is an expression people might end up using it like a proverb and what it is when you say this to someone you're telling them look if you cannot handle or deal with this difficult situation this pressure situation then you need to remove yourself you know you need to get out of the way you need to get out of the kitchen and this is an expression that is actually widely attributed to former president harry truman and this goes back to the 1940s and at that time he was actually a senator and he was on some committee leading an investigation and the person that they were investigating was angry they were objecting to this and he said something along these lines like look uh if you can't take the heat get out of the kitchen we are going to continue our investigation welcome to the big leagues right come on now get up

let's take the heat get out of the kitchen rook you have nothing to fear but feed itself if you can't stand the heat get out of the kitchen and i think that you can absolutely take the heat of learning new vocabulary and learning these idioms so you you don't need to get out of the kitchen in fact i think you can actually step up your game and improve your speaking fluency when you join my speaking course and you can click on the link down below in the description to learn more and when you do you will find a special discount just for you the course is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally each week there is a different speaking topic you will learn new vocabulary as well as some idioms related to that topic we do engaging speaking activities we start each lesson with pronunciation or connected speech

there are also pronunciation video lessons included in the course and in addition i will teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases the same way i'm doing in this lesson so if you'd like to sign up click on that link down below in the description there's not much time left the heat is on and that is the next idiom that i want to talk to you about the heat is on and i realize in in trying to use it as i was kind of ending that announcement i've just gone ahead and given you the answer i'm sorry about that but when somebody says the heat is on what this refers to is a situation in which there is pressure to do something or to achieve something and it's a you know it's a high pressure situation so typically you may use this idiom at the end of a statement maybe you talk about the pressure situation and then you would follow that with well the heat is on i have two weeks until the deadline so the heat is on all right i really need to work hard and there's even a famous song by glenn frye from 1984 that goes that was i don't know if that's going to look ridiculous or not anyway hey freeze the heat is on and then there's this idiom in the hot okay what word completes this and i'll tell you the meaning it refers to well someone who's in a position where they're responsible for difficult or important things and again this is more of a pressure situation and you could say someone is in the hot seat okay in the hot seat and often i think people may use this when a person is well responsible for answering some difficult questions and you could say they're in the hot seat think about a game show someone participates in a game show they they come up and they're going to answer questions in order to win money so that is a pressure situation you could say they're sitting in the hot seat sometimes i would even use this in the classroom if we're doing an activity in which one person would have to come up to the front of the class and sit down and all of the pressure was on this person and i would say yes they're sitting in the hot seat you're so bad how about you let's put you in the hot seat huh you see yourself in ten years okay it's really hot let's continue the next one is hot under the and what this means is well when someone easily gets angry especially with things that are not that important you could say this person is a little hot under the um trying to give you a hint right right here so the answer is collar hot under the collar so again we as i've mentioned before like you can think of hot is associated with anger and your collar is just the this piece of clothing that goes around your neck your collar and if you say someone's hot under the collar that's what it means they easily get angry and often i think you may use this with the verb get to get hot under the collar i can get a little hot under the collar when you don't write to me in the comments okay i just it makes i get easily angry about these things that aren't important i get hot under the collar and of course that's not true i'm sorry i just i

well you seem hot under the collar or is that the sweater and then there's a hot shot okay this is talking about a person but what do you think is the correct meaning does this refer to a person who is too self-confident too angry or too greedy which is the correct meaning and i i hope that you said too self-confident so if you say that someone's a hot shot it means well this person is just overly confident in their ability to do something and it i guess it would be more derogatory if you say someone's a hot shot but you may also use this playfully among family and friends if somebody's just being really self-confident in their abilities you could refer to them as a hot shot so in a more well derogatory sense if i talk about one of my colleagues and say yeah you know he thinks he's a real hot shot at the office all right i'm saying my colleague is just way too self-confident or just more like playful if you got all of these questions correct and you knew all of these idioms and you're like yes i have a perfect score i'm the best i know all of this and i might say okay well well here's another question for you hotshot and i would call you a hotshot if if you were acting very self-confident and that's just more playful because yeah we're friends try a round kick is this supposed to be hard all right hot shot show me a hook kick unfortunately i don't have another question for you that was all of them so if you got all of them correct then yes you would definitely be a hot shot so with all these lessons i really just hope that you learned something new and if you did please go ahead hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching i'm gonna go jump in this pool because it's so hot and i will see you

next time so long

How I Became FLUENT in English...

How I became fluent in English, and how you can, too! Full disclosure: I was born and raised in Romania, so my first language is Romanian. I was there until I was 15 years old, and after that, I moved to the US, to California. I lived in LA and San Francisco for about 14 years, so at this point, I'm probably half American. But I do know people that have lived in the US for much longer than I have, and have much stronger accents and a harder time communicating in English. Why? They don't immerse themselves in the language. So what is immersion? Immersing yourself in a language means getting completely involved in that language by watching movies, by listening to music, by reading, by speaking with everyone... basically completely surrounding yourself with that language.

Not too long ago, I came across an article that talked about how language is rooted in culture. The author, a Hungarian CEO who speaks seven languages, talked about how the English language is rooted in the Anglo-Saxon culture. He mentions how positive thinking is embedded in the English language. For example, using a word like "challenge" instead of "problem". He also mentions how English uses a more indirect approach than other languages... ..how the Brits and Americans do not always directly state something. They might say That's interesting. That means it's not interesting. Hey, let's get together the next time I'm in town. You're not going to get together. Well the main takeaway from the article is that it praises language immersion in order to fully become fluent in that language.

If you're interested in reading the article, I'll leave a link to it down in the description. I think there's so much truth in this article. As an English teacher, I've observed the progress of so many students who have immersed themselves in the language, versus the stagnation of students who were translating, and only practicing English inside the classroom, and not outside. And so, I got inspired to tell you about my experience with learning English. Here's what I've learned: Number 1: When you immerse yourself in a language, you open yourself up to learn something new. You leave your character and your personality at the door, and you embrace a whole new one. Honestly, it's part of experiencing the world at a new level.

You should try it! And don't worry: your identity is not going anywhere! You don't lose yourself when you're immersed in a new language. So what's the result of immersion? You learn new idioms, phrasal verbs, local expressions, which automatically make you sound a lot more like a native English speaker. People also have an easier time understanding you. In addition, you are able to comprehend and use colloquial English. ... because it is NOT the same as academic English or the English we learn from books. So, the second thing I've learned is that learning English is not easy... and it takes time. But, it can be a lot of fun, especially because most of it does not happen in the classroom.

Once I had a student ask me: "Teacher, do you think in two years I'll know ALL the English?" I smiled and told him: "No! But you know what? You'll be so much more proficient than you are now!" I'm proud to say that even after 20+ years of learning English, I'm still learning, because a true learner never stops. It also makes me a better English teacher. Let me tell you: Once you realize you're always learning, you're not stressed anymore. You just focus on the things you can change, and actively work to change those things, one at a time. So where's the fun part you ask? Well, I learned a lot of English from movies, books, parties, friends, and boyfriends.

I always paid attention to how people spoke, and every time I heard a new idiom or expression, I took a mental note of it, and made sure to use it the next time I had the opportunity. For example, I remember when I heard one of my friends saying the word "to". And they meant "to"- like you go to the beach. But I noticed that this person used "uh", like: "tuh" I made a note of that little syllable because it wasn't "to", like "ooo", that sound that I used to make. And I started using too, so I'd stay stuff like: I'm going "tuh" the doctor, I'm going "tuh" school. Well, let me tell you: That one simple vowel made such a huge difference in my fluency, and how people understood my spoken English.

And don't worry: As you learn, you can still communicate in English, and it does not have to be perfect! Which brings me to my last point: It's OK to make mistakes. In some countries, people might judge for grammatical errors or pronunciation mistakes. I don't think it's the same with English. In today's world, there are many different versions of English: different accents, different grammar... English is a world language! So people in general may be kinder and more forgiving of your mistakes than you think. They certainly were in my case! In fact, if you listen carefully, you can hear native speakers make mistakes as well. I think I make less mistakes than Ioana.

As you can see and hear, it is possible to become fluent in English. You just need to continue practicing. Keep practicing with us! And give a thumbs up if you found this video helpful.

How Important is Grammar to Becoming Fluent

how important do you think it is to study grammar that is what today's conversation is all about what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I have a conversation lesson for you because we're going to have a discussion about how important it is to learn grammar how much time and energy should you be focusing on grammar in order to improve your English skills but before you listen to our conversation I want to go over some vocabulary with you that you are going to hear during our discussion because this is a great way to build your vocabulary you learn the meaning of the word and then you get to listen to it being used in context so let's begin the first word that I have for you is subjective and this is an adjective and what it means is that that something is based on or influenced by your own personal opinions your feelings your taste and you would say that something is subjective for example if we're talking about an exam if the exam is multiple-choice then it is not subjective you either get the answer right or you get it wrong but if let's say I were evaluating your speaking skills well then that may be partly based on my opinion my view of your speaking competency so you could say well that that type of exam is a bit subjective then we have reinforce and this is a verb to reinforce something and this just means to strengthen an idea a feeling a habit that already exists so for example you already have some language skills like reading listening speaking and you want to reinforce those skills the skills that already exist you want to strengthen them you want to reinforce them next is a phrase in conjunction and what this means is well simply together you often do something in conjunction with something else so you are doing something together at the same time that you are doing another thing and you say well we are doing these things in conjunction or you'd say I'm doing something in conjunction with this other thing next is a word that when it comes to language learning many of you probably do not want to and that is exception it is a noun and what it means is that it just it just does not follow the rules and you would refer to something that doesn't follow the rules as an exception and when it comes to learning English as well as many other languages there are always exceptions and that that can make learning a bit frustrating the next word is bash and this is a verb to bash and you can bash something or you can bash someone and it just means to criticize and this is more of an informal word that you would hear mostly in spoken English and it's a bit casual to bash to criticize then we have the verb nag to nag someone about something and what this means is to continuously annoy or irritate someone so for example maybe someone in your family they Edition want you to take out the trash and they keep telling you again and again and again you could say well they are nagging me to take out the trash they're nagging me about this the next word is impede and this is another verb to impede and what it means is to delay someone or something by obstructing and you often hear it when talking about progress to impede someone's progress which means you're just not able to move or learn as fast as you would like because well something is obstructing your progress it is impeding your progress then we have takeaway and this is just a word that means a final key point or fact or piece of information that should be remembered you're talking about well the final takeaway from this lesson is that well I hope that you remember these vocabulary words and and we are going to try and reinforce the meaning of these words because right now you are going to listen to our conversation and our discussion about whether or not you should really focus on grammar to improve your language skills so keep an eye out for these words because that's just gonna help you build your vocabulary here's the conversation that's recording there's the camera alright so we wanted to have a conversation about a topic that I think is pretty common when it comes to learning English as a second language in public schools academies and we want to talk about grammar and how important it is to study grammar and the reason why we wanted to discuss this is because I think especially in some countries their public education there is a strong focus on grammar along yeah a lot of it can be you know grammar grammar grammar grammar and and less focus on some of the other skills like speaking and listening and reading and I think we used to work at a school that had a strong focus on grammar almost maybe too much of a focus I think I think that its grammar is easy to test so I think that that's why I like how do you test speaking how do you think I mean if there are ways of course but it is much it's more subjective and of course you know you can test a whole group of people very very quickly and I think in Korea and I was taking some classes in Korean and the focus was grammar grammar grammar and I almost think maybe at the the onset of studying a language it does make sense to try and learn the structure and which is what grammar is important but I think what's interesting it seems to stay with people even as they become much more advanced and they're really focusing on grammar when personally I think as the more advanced you become I think there are other ways to reinforce your knowledge of grammar and even learn grammar like reading that's what I was gonna say so I feel like studying grammar is not the entire picture like if you're going to it's an important part of the language when you should not do it by itself like you have to do it especially if you get more advanced you have to do in conjunction with speaking with reading with writing yeah it has to go together otherwise your skills are not going to be well-rounded yeah the other thing I thought was interesting because I know like as adults when you think about adults learning a language and children learning a language whereas I think children will play around with the language a lot more and adults are more like we you know what's the rule we want to know what the rule is so that this makes sense and I think grammar kind of provides that structure of like okay what is the grammar rule okay let me try and learn this and let me try to follow it they tend to want those rules and to understand those rules which can even write it's like nice to be able to solve it but in some ways I think it can almost make the language a little more confusing because I always think it's great to know the rules but oftentimes especially when you think about learning more just casual English that might be spoken just everyday outside on the streets just among friends often some of these grammar rules are broken it does become a bit more of a puzzle that way trying to understand why certain rules might be broken just in casual speech plus not to mention that English has a million exceptions to articles like everything you learn so that's why I said that if you try to learn grammar you're going to drive yourself nuts but just following all the rules but I think that's a much better and easier way to do it would be to just do it in context of everything else so like reading would be a great way to notice how the because then when you're reading you're seeing the correct grammar structure being used even if you're not specifically studying a certain grammar structure or trying to learn a certain verb tense you're at least you know exposing yourself to the information to the grammar used in its correct form I don't want to sound like we're bashing grammar at all like because I think there is a value in it I think it's always good to learn review especially what you've learned I think now it just makes as English instructors it just makes us wonder is there too much emphasis on grammar in certain educational settings and I think that is true trying to practice your your English and you have that little nagging voice in your in your head like oh like what work should I put in here like what not worth work well like what tense should I say and then you're trying to speak and it's impeding your communication then yeah that's they don't focus on the grammar because yes it's important but at the point of speaking two languages that you communicate so focus on them what's more important I guess no I think that that's a very good point that when you get fixed in and focused on these grammar rules and then you need to do something else like writing or speaking it's adult and produce yeah typically but then they're thinking like oh wait I don't want to make a grammar mistake so they end up you know their speeches a bit slower it's a little more thought-out instead of that you know that natural fluency and again as I think as instructors we always you know I would always encourage learners like don't worry you know don't worry about making mistakes we say that thousands and thousands of times like if you make a grammar mistake it's okay just so much brighter just keep saying it it's so much it's so much better for your language progress if you say it and say it wrong then if you don't yeah cuz I just like no because I know that I we used to be scared to say and it's just like well then you're not making any progress yeah because as you continue your studies you are going to find out like if you are made mistake in your spoken English if it's a grammar mistake you find that out and then work on correcting it instead of like I don't want to say it at all if you know that you're making a mistake and you know you've done don't just keep making that same mistake if you're aware of it corrected because otherwise explain fossilisation happens when somebody learns a language and they make a mistake and then they have used and they have made that mistake so many times that they end up it becomes part of their permanent vocabulary so they just use it all the time and it becomes much harder to try and correct it again because it's basically just stuck in their mind and it's fossilized but yeah for us it's like the main takeaway from this conversation is that grammar is important but it should be used smartly in in conjunction with the other yeah so what I'd like to know from all of you is how important do you think grammar is and is it something that you are trying to improve and to work on and what is it about grammar that you feel like you you would like to know more about if that is something that you wish to improve but I'm really curious to know what all of you guys think because you are out there learning the language or trying to improve your skills how important is it to you if you enjoyed our little conversation please hit that like button whoops I want to cover you with my thumb and if you want to connect with us subscribe to our community there is a

How good are your listening skills? | Comprehension Quiz

what's up everyone welcome to today's listening challenge if this is your first time here my name is Wes and this is interactive English which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills and the way we're going to practice our English skills today is by doing a listening quiz those are always fun it's good to really practice our skills so I want to give a quick shout out to some of you who are with me right now IRA Mustafa Jason mano onus um Jeffrey cocea Anwar Luiz so many amazing people thank you for joining me even if you're watching this later this is going to be very useful because I also I want you to practice your listening skills okay so this is really an active listening exercise because you're not just going to listen to me talk or like like people would do in another English lesson I actually want you to participate in this lesson if you guys are in the chat I have some questions for you I want you to listen and then I want you to try and answer the questions even if you're unsure of the answer even if you don't know take a guess we just want you I just want you to participate and if you're watching this later use the comments section use it like it's it's a it's a piece of paper and write your answers in the comments so before we begin I want to give you a couple of tips when it comes to listening comprehension and those tips are as follows so the first thing to do especially if you are listening for key details is to listen to that specific information listen for the names of people or places listen to dates when did things happen or numbers as well when you're talking about quantities those are some things that that should stand out that really are are listening for those key details the next thing which would really have to do with your overall comprehension and understanding the main idea of a story or a conversation would be to use context context words to put pictures in your mind and when I say contact content words sorry content words when I'm talking about content words I'm talking about the nouns the adjectives the adverbs the the words that you can really put a picture to the the colors the smells the tastes that are going to help us like again you put a picture in your mind as though you're watching a TV show or watching a movie and you're just following the story or following the conversation as it moves along so keep these things in mind as you are listening and in practicing and you know

okay we're gonna do this mount before we begin I want to give a quick shout out and let you guys know if you want to connect with us even more than I suggest check out our email list there will be a link in the description I will also throw a link in the chat right now and we just send you all this cool stuff from time to time resources to help you guys practice and improve your skills you can access the secret fluency lesson so so check that out if you have not signed up already so today the way that we're going to do this all right I have three different listening selections for you I am going to read each one I'll read it twice and then I will ask you some questions okay so that's how we're gonna do it and all of them are a little different um so I'll give you a little more information about that as we go through and I get ready to to read these different ones well I'm gonna read it you guys are just going to listen okay so again this is a way to practice your skills and your listening skills and making an active listening exercise so that you can actually improve so are you guys ready are you ready are you ready to practice your listening skills let's take the quiz so the first listening that I have for you is about Game of Thrones all right I'm gonna read you some information or I'm gonna I'm gonna tell you some information about Game of Thrones I just want you to listen to it and I'm going to read this at a normal speed I'm not going to speak very slow like I am right now I'm just gonna read it to you at a normal speed but if especially if you're watching this later because some people might ask like hey can you slow it down youtube allows you to change the speed of speech so just go to the settings you can slow it down if you want to you know take a little more time to hear this information okay here we go so all I want you to do is listen and I will read it twice ready here we go here is the listening alright so here is it okay here we go Game of Thrones is an American fantasy drama television series created by David Benioff and DB Weiss for HBO it is adaptation of A Song of Ice and Fire George RR Martin's series of fantasy novels the first of which is a game of Thrones the show was both produced and filmed in the United Kingdom filming locations also included Canada Croatia Iceland Malta Morocco and Spain the series premiered on HBO in the

Weiss for HBO is it it is an adaptation of A Song of Ice and Fire George RR Martin's series of fantasy novels the first of which is a game of Thrones the show is both produced and filmed in the United Kingdom filming locations also included Canada Croatia Iceland Malta Morocco and Spain the series premiered on HBO in the United States on April 17 2011 and concluded on May 19 2019 with 73 episodes broadcast over eight seasons all right now I'm gonna say it's hard it's hard to memorize don't worry about memorizing it okay just try and take it all in absorb the information I know it's a little challenging but my first question that I have for you and I want you to write your answer in the chat write your answer in the comments I'm not gonna put it up on the screen the question I'm just going to ask you because again this lesson is all about practicing your listening skills so the first question I have for you is in how many different countries was Game of Thrones filmed okay Game of Thrones the the TV series for HBO was filmed in how many different countries okay I listed the countries see if you can kind of remember and again this is information some of you may already know some of this so if you don't remember exactly try to take a guess all right again you you I would always encourage you to take your best educated guess okay how many different countries was the show filmed now I don't know if people that I got this this is all from Wikipedia so I'm guilty as charged for using Wikipedia but it's all from Wikipedia that's what I'm reading so if there may be some other place now the correct answer okay is wait one two three four five six seven okay seven different countries so I'll show you the answer of what I said I said the show was both produced and filmed in the United Kingdom filming locations also included Canada whoops Croatia Iceland elta Morocco there we go and Spain all right there are seven different filming locations for the show I know most of you said six did anybody say seven did we get a seven in here I'm trying to go through seven seven anybody anybody most people said oh maybe five most if you were close Game of Thrones devika seven excellent perfect yes how would he carry yes seven excellent okay we've got a few people the next question that I have for you and even if you can't get all of this that's okay all right this is asking for some of those numbers all right and this was at the end I want you to tell me a few different things can you tell me the year in which Game of Thrones began when it was aired the TV show went the year that it began and the year that it ended I also want you to tell me how many episodes were there over how many seasons so I'm asking for four different numbers here the years that the show was running all right it went from this year to this year how many episodes were there over how many seasons okay so those are four that's all in one question okay because if it all came at the very end I gave you those years I then I gave you the told you the number of episodes and how many seasons so some people Wow some people getting the months in there Aiden excellent so yes as far as it when it began okay excellent bassam onus sim Ramez go SIA excellent so the show began I think all the use it in 2011 okay the show began in 2011 you Lissa perfect and it ended in 2019 there were 73 episodes yes Abdo Dubrovnik ah yes perfect over eight seasons better bluh perfect yes so I said the series premiered on HBO in the United States on April 17 2011 and concluded on May 19th 2019 with 73 episodes broadcast over a season so again those are those numbers those key details if you forgot them it's it's okay it's okay all right don't worry about it this is all just just practicing now this this was a little more challenging I know we've done these before and I think some of them were a bit easier I tried to make this one a little more difficult so the next listening that I have for you all right is it's a conversation so just pretend like you are listening to a conversation this is a conversation that takes place at a hotel and it's a conversation between the employee at the front desk the person at the front desk and some customer at the hotel all right it's just a quick little conversation I want you guys to listen to it and then I will ask you a few questions okay so this is just trying to do a natural conversation again if you guys are just joining us we are we are just practicing our listening skills I'm reading I'm reading you something I want you to listen and then answer some questions okay so hopefully this will be a little easier that's conversation are you ready so here we go and you'll just put it into context as to who is who the the hotel employee and the customer are you ready so here we go let's see all right so it's about asking directions so the front desk begins hello how may I help you hi I'm looking for a place to eat somewhere I can go on foot well there's a great place called the ladle when you go outside head to the right and go three blocks hang a right and go another block then go left for two more blocks and you'll see the sign awesome I really appreciate your help no problem would you like me to call you a cab oh oh never mind sorry silly question enjoy your dinner okay that's it that's it that was the conversation so hopefully again this is when try to listen to those content words and and put a picture in your mind of actually watching these people two people have this conversation let me I'll read the conversation to you again are you ready all I want you to do is listen and then I have three different questions for you all right so I'll read the conversation again between the hotel employee and the customer hello how may I help you hi I'm looking for a place to eat somewhere I can go on foot there's a great place called the ladle when you go outside head to the right and go three blocks hang a right and go another block then go left for two more blocks and you'll see the sign awesome I really appreciate your help no problem would you like me to call you a cab oh whoa oh never never mind sorry silly question enjoy your dinner okay all right so this is about asking directions at a hotel you're probably wondering well why didn't the person just put it into their phone and figure it out that's a good question but for the sake of listening it's just the activity all right so the first question that I have for you is this alright how far is it from the hotel to the restaurant how many blocks away is it again if you're talking about a block it's just one one street length how far is it from the hotel to the restaurant remember we were giving those directions what what do you think is it a four blocks be five blocks see six blocks or D seven blocks how do you think remember he told the person where to go all right all right so what do you guys think some answers okay all right maja said ah yes

the broth sorry if i mispronounce names aramas krista go SIA yes the answer is C six blocks remember I said when you go outside head to the right and go three blocks hang a right you turn right again and go another block so if somebody just says oh yeah I go another block you're just talking about one and then go left for two more blocks when you total that all up three one and two all right we get six blocks the answer is six the next question that I have for you and hopefully you guys kind of remember this this is a good one all right when you get to the restaurant he says you'll see a sign which of these utensils do you think you'll see on the sign a B or C okay if which of these utensils will be on the restaurant sign all right what do you guys think take a guess now this again is you had to hear some specific information in order to understand this question and probably and get this answer so what what do you guys think well maybe it's not as difficult as I thought some people are doing pretty well yes so honest um keep going yes Krista vb7 k2 excellent IRA yes you would C be the reason that you would see B is because I said there's a great place called the ladle all right so this is what you as a utensil a cooking utensil this is called a ladle now if you don't know what the other ones are a is a grater you know it like a cheese grater and C is just a spatula so the name of this restaurant was called the ladle all right excellent good job that was awesome I'm very impressed you guys got that then next one okay the question I have for you so when the person you know they left the the the haut the person at the front desk all right when the person at the front desk asked the customer asked if the customer would like a cab why did he then say oh it's a silly question never mind what do you right at the very end he said Oh would you like a cab he said oh no never mind silly question enjoy your dinner why did he stop and say that was a silly question I'm not giving you any options for this I want you to think through again put put the entire conversation you know try to put it in your mind okay what is the situation what was the person asking okay I want to see if you you caught this so this is something from the end of the conversation that you know information that you had at the beginning okay uh perfect yes Bassam keep going Maha Menotti perfect I said remember at the very beginning of the conversation the the customer asked you know I'm looking for a place to eat somewhere where I can go on foot if you go somewhere on foot then you're just talking about walking you want to walk somewhere preferably someplace that's close by and you would go on foot so again that's another good expression if you didn't if you're not familiar with it that maybe you're learned if you say Oh like how are you going to this place oh we're gonna go on foot you're just walking it just means that you're walking okay so excellent I have another one for you guys another listening challenge so again even if you're just joining us we are just practicing our active listening skills because I want you guys to write your answers in the chat and if you're watching this later use the comments like it's a piece of paper make it an active listening exercise that's what it's all about it's about practice now the last listening that I have for you it's this is from an article ok so I took that that other conversation I just made up myself but this is from an article from the Architectural Digest it is about the most expensive home in India do we have people from India with us right now watching this so this is about the most expensive home in India I'm gonna read you the information try to again don't think like oh I need to memorize every single little thing just try and get the main idea first of all try and understand the main idea try to pick out some of those key details those numbers and that will help you answer the questions okay so I'm gonna read this it's a little it's a little longer okay so this is about the most expensive home in India and then I have a few questions for you are you ready here we go so the most expensive home in India owned by India's richest man Mukesh Ambani the four hundred thousand square-foot Antilia on Mumbai Kumba la Hills is situated in one of the world's most expensive addresses all to Mount Road designed by chicago-based architects Perkins and will with the Australian based construction company Leighton Holdings taking charge of its construction the building comes with 27 floors replete with ha extra high

Mount Road designed by Chicago-based architects Perkins and will with the Australian-based construction company Leighton Holdings taking charge of its construction the building comes with 27 floors replete with extra high ceilings every floor is equivalent to an average two-story building's floor in fact Antilia can survive an earthquake of magnitude eight on the Richter scale India's most expensive house has also has six dedicated floors for cars including Ambani's INR five crore Mercedes Maybach alright whoo here we go so let's let's hear some questions for you all right and I since this was longer I tried to make it a little easier okay so the first question I have for you is this in which country were the architects from okay maybe it's not maybe it's not - maybe it's not so easy all right think about it we're talking about I was giving you all that information talking about the home who built who designed the home who built the home and I threw some different places in there and this one could this one may be difficult all right in which country are the in which country were the architects from all right so the architects of this home are from which country is it Australia be United States see India D Austria all right so excellent perfect getting some good answers on assume you know who I am perfect keep going Wonderland ATL perfect so the answer is B the United States now in this text I did not say the United States but I did say a city in the United States it was not California it was Chicago so I said designed by Chicago based architects Perkins and will so Perkins and will there Chicago based architects there from the United States Chicago is in the US with Australian based construction company

Leighton Holdings taking charge of its at construction so the construction company was Australian alright the next question I have for you is it in this in this reading I am asking about the word replete so I'm gonna say this one sentence for you and I want you to tell me so it says where is it okay the building comes with 27 floors replete with extra high ceilings what does the word replete mean so think about it try and put it in context what does the word replete mean what do you think I'll read it to you one more time it says the building comes with 27 floors replete with extra high ceilings so again this is just taking a word and trying to put it in context what does the meaning of this word mean it's actually I think we had a vocabulary quiz maybe about a month ago and I talked about this word I don't know if you remember it so in the story again I say the building comes with 27 floors replete with extra high ceilings does it mean a supplied with be constructed from C limited by D Austria oh okay that was a mistake all right see actually I forgot I forgot to change D that is from the last one so who you you know nobody put D that's good all right so I think you can bathe you can understand it based on the context that the word replete all right means supplied with all right a supplied with the building comes with 27 floors replete it means it's supplied with or it's full of extra high ceilings ok so again it's just taking that word and see if you can put the meaning in context the last question all right ready is this one okay well here here is actually a picture of the building of the home if if you haven't seen it okay and the question that I have for you is so this again think about it all right in this home how many floors are for living space how many floors are just for general living space what do you think okay so think about the you know I threw out some numbers there when I was talking about this home I kind of want I want to say a building because it is a building but it is just one person how many floors okay are for living space what do you think okay alright so yeah this one I think you guys you got it alright yes honest em Donna V pin Bassam perfect maja yes so I said in the story okay there are 27 floors but 6 floors are dedicated to four just cars alright so it's just dedicated for all the cars which would mean that 21 floors are probably just dedicated to general living space bedrooms living rooms who knows probably a swimming pool in there so 27 floors are are the entire building six of them are just for the car space okay excellent perfect so yes alright that that is our listening challenge again this this exercise was all about helping you guys practice and improve your listening skills cuz that's what it's all about alright what I want you to do all right what before before you head out in the comments okay especially if you're watching this later I want to I want to I have a question for you what is it that you like to listen to how do you practice your English listening skills because I think this would be something that information that many people would like to read so I want you to write that to me in the comments tell me what you like to listen to do you like to listen to music do you prefer to watch TV shows or movies do you listen to potty podcasts audiobooks there's many different ways that we can practice our listening skills I want you to tell me how you like to practice your skills in the comments and please be specific tell me exactly what you use because what I want to do is I want others to be able to look in the comments and see exactly what other people are doing because that will give people ideas about oh I can practice listening to this song or I can practice listening to this podcast so share with us sharing sharing is caring how do you like to practice and be specific give us some specific information in the comments about how you practice your skills because I think many people would like to read about it if you watch TV shows tell us which TV shows you are

next time so long

How long does it take to learn English? | Natural Conversation + Vocabulary

Today I want you guys to listen to a natural English conversation. What's up everyone? My name is Wes. This is Interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And the way we're going to do that today is by listening to a natural English conversation. We are going to have a discussion about a topic that many learners ask us about and it's just a common question which is how long does it take to learn English. So we are going to discuss this question and give our thoughts and opinions about how long it takes to learn English. And before you listen to the conversation, I'm going to go over some vocabulary words with you that you will hear when you are listening to this conversation so that you can identify these words.

So, it's also a great way to build your vocabulary. So, now let's go over some of the vocabulary that you are going to listen to in this conversation. And this is a great way to learn some new words as well as hear these words being used in context. So the first word that I have for you is an adjective modest, worth. So what does that mean? For example, maybe you speak a language and you speak it fairly well. You don't want to tell people like, "Oh yeah, I'm the best. I speak the language perfectly." It's better to be modest and maybe say, "Yeah, you know, I speak that language, but I I'm still learning things." It's always good to be modest and not brag and tell people you're the best.

Next is legitimate. This is also an adjective that means reasonable or acceptable. So, you might hear it being used before a noun, and you might be talking about a legitimate reason, an acceptable reason. Or maybe something was a legitimate excuse, a reasonable excuse. You can also say that someone or more common something is legitimate. It is acceptable. Next, we have an expression which is to take the edge off. And this just means to reduce the intensity or the effect of something. So, for example, you often do something in order to take the edge off. If you are full of stress, you want to reduce your stress level. So you might exercise in order to take the edge off. Then we have credentials. And this is a noun that's just talking about somebody's qualifications or their achievements.

For example, if you are going to apply for a job, you will give them your CV, your resume, and it's going to list your credentials. It's going to list your achievements. It's going to list your qualifications. It will list your credentials. Then we have a saying which I thought was just fun to include. And that saying is it's not about the destination, it's about the journey. And what this means is that if you have a goal, it's not about that final outcome. That's so important. It's about how you got there. What did you do? What was what was the experience that you had in order to reach that goal? That experience is what is unique. For example, many of you want to learn English and maybe your goal is to be fluent and that's a good goal. But if we're using this saying and talking about well it's not about the destination, it's about the journey. So it's not about that final outcome of being fluent.

It's about well how did you get there? Maybe you lived abroad for several years and you had that experience. In that case, it it's not just about that final outcome of becoming fluent. It's about the experience that you had along the way. It's not about the destination. It's about the journey. Then we have a verb to allocate. And to allocate means to set aside something for a specific purpose. So if you have a task that you are doing, you might allocate certain resources in order to complete this task. Or maybe you might even allocate more time in order to complete the task. So you are setting things aside for a specific purpose.

Next is an expression which is to fall into this camp. So if you hear this expression and somebody says, "Yeah, you know, I fall into this camp." That just means that that this person is a part of a group of people that that share some similarities. For example, for me, the most difficult language skill is listening. And if I'm telling this to another person and listening is also the most difficult skill for them then they may say yeah you know I also fall into that camp which means that for both of us we are a part of that group in which listening is the most difficult language skill. So if you fall into this camp then it means that you are a part of that group of people. Then we have a verb which is to atrophy and this just means to decline in effectiveness and gradually diminish. So again for example

We need to wrap it up. So, I am going to wrap up these vocabulary words right now and I want you to try and listen for them in the conversation and I will highlight them so that you can see perfectly how they're being used in context. So, here is our conversation talking about how long it takes to learn English. All right. that we get My hair looks great. [laughter] So, I'm very modest. Yes. So, we we get a question quite often, people asking us about, you know, can I learn English in 3 months or how long does it take to learn English? And I think that's something when you're learning a language, many people, it's a legitimate question, I think.

Yeah. People want to know. So, we kind of wanted to just talk about that uh with you guys and share with our share our opinions about what we think. Um, so what what what do you think? What what what is your response? to me the answer is like it just takes a lifetime forever [laughter] if you are talking about becoming proficient in a language but but to me that's not a problem but most people are just like they want to achieve a certain level of fluency I mean I think when people say that you know what they mean like what what would you tell them as a Obviously, even for native speakers, you can always learn new things. But, but the reason I was saying that and why that it doesn't bother me that it takes a long time to learn a language is because once you realize that it can take a really long time and then you the pressure is kind of off. You stop worrying about it cuz you're like, okay, I'm always going to keep learning.

It's just I want to improve in this language. Takes the edge off. That's why I don't I don't have like a time stamp that I would put on it. Okay, that's a good idea cuz I would say I I felt the same way when I first decided like okay, I want to learn Spanish. I remember asking um a friend because I was going to study in Spain and I said, "Do you think if I study really hard for two months that I'll be able to come back and I'll be very I'll be very proficient in Spanish." And they kind of looked at me and was like, "Yeah, I don't think that's the way it's going to happen." But anyway, I did that. I went to Spain and I studied for two months. And I can honestly say after two months, I wasn't even close to being proficient. my my my Spanish had improved but there was still there was a lot to learn and there's even a lot to learn now after many years. So what I tell students again is just to you know again don't worry about the time but try to put yourself in the best position possible to improve your language skills and actively do it. Yeah. Do a little bit at a time. Like try to study a little bit each day. try to get a variety uh of of study whether you're you know practicing your listening skills one time speaking reading try to get as much exposure to the language as possible I feel like as long as you just improve like that's that's a success and we shouldn't look at at achieving the lang like you know achieving I don't know A1 B1 C1 those kinds of levels like just just look at just because so much of of knowledge of language knowledge cannot be measured by these these things. It can just I I don't know. I think it's but I think that's where it comes into it. So many people are learning English or any other language for school or maybe they're learning it for work and they're asking for those types of credentials like oh you need this level and that's why you need for work then it's a little different cuz cuz that's you you have to measure yourself against that.

But to be honest if you just needed to speak to communicate uh language is so much more than that. If you're doing it just for your own personal enrichment, then again, there's a lot that you can do without having to worry about like, okay, I I only have this amount of time, some progress. Yeah, I would say the the the the best answer would be like, yeah, don't. I think there are some people that can achieve fluency in languages in a very short period of time because they're naturally gifted or talented like the same way somebody would be very talented at a musical instrument and it it's going to be different for each person. I know for me it takes takes a long time. It's not about destination, it's about the journey. That's true.

Exactly. I'll follow that up with another uh quote. It's not a sprint. It just takes time. full of quotes today. Yeah. Full of great great resourceful, insightful quotes. So, I think that's, you know, hopefully um that may answer your question a little bit. If you're wondering like, okay, how long it's going to take. Um the short answer is it's going to depend. Yeah, it doesn't really matter. It's going to depend on the person. It's also going to depend on how much time you can allocate to learning and again the type of exposure that you're going to get. if you're living in uh like an English-speaking country or if you're, you know, living in your own country and only able to study a little bit. I do want to say something though because I tend to fall into this camp where you feel like, okay, I will say it doesn't matter how long it takes.

Don't get lazy though. keep in order to see improvement, especially with language learning, you have to keep on top of it because if if you if oh my god, I'm going to do another quote. If you don't lose it, you if you don't use it, you lose it. Now I have to think of a quote. Okay. No, but but what I mean is with language learning, if you don't use it consistently, you forget. I think it's like anything. I think I always think of it like your language learning skills are like muscles and you have to keep working them out. And if you don't, it's going if you're serious about it, keep pract uh vocabulary or forget the way certain grammar structures. So yeah, you it's it's important to stay active and and keep refreshing uh you know, learning new skills and refreshing your old skills. Always focus on progress.

next time. See you next time. inside.

How to Be MORE Polite in English | Common Phrases to Navigate the Culture

Today we're going to teach you about how to be more polite when speaking in English. Hi, and welcome to our global classroom. Before we begin our lesson on politeness today, I'd like to ask you to please share this video with anyone you think might need a little lesson on how to be more polite. So today, Wes and I are going to teach you 15 different ways to be more polite when speaking in English. And remember being polite gets you very far. So Wes is going to tell you what not to say and I will tell you what you should say to be more polite. Are you ready to be more polite?

Let's begin. Okay, hopefully you can use these sentences from now on to be more polite with your friends, your family, your teachers, anyone...when you're speaking English. And now we're going to put your politeness to the test. Are you ready? Are you polite? Are you feeling polite? So here's the situation. Let's say it's morning, and you're running a little late. And you get to the coffee shop and you really need some coffee. In the comments below, please write what you would say to order the coffee. Like exactly the words you would use. Okay, so please make sure it's the most polite way you would ask for some coffee. And, also please tell us what kind of coffee you'd order.

It's just fun to know. So that's it. Thank you for being with us. Thank you for learning about politeness. Thank you for joining today's lesson. And we'll see you next time.

How to Describe Yourself in a Job Interview | 20 Awesome Adjectives

Today i have an awesome lesson to help you build your vocabulary, because i'm going to tell you 20 great adjectives to describe yourself. That's coming up. In today's lesson, I'm going to talk to you about 20 amazing adjectives that you can use to describe people. And these are really action words that stand out in a conversation. Which, means, they are perfect for a job interview. You can also use them in presentations, and you could use them on a resume as well. These words really stand out and people notice these words. They also happen to be 20 of my favorite adjectives. So let's begin. First adjective that i have for you is diligent.

And this is a great adjective because it really shows that you care about your work, your duties, the things that you have to do, and that you are also a hard worker as well. You are diligent. Next is motivated. It shows that you are determined to do something. So if you're in the job interview, you could tell somebody that you are motivated to succeed. You are motivated to finish the job. You are motivated to learn new things.

Another adjective that you could use instead of motivated, which is interchangeable, is driven. You are driven, you are determined to do something as well. So for example, I could say: I hope you are motivated to learn english with us. Also, i hope you are driven to hit that like button if you enjoy learning new adjectives. Another great adjective to use in a job interview is ambitious. because this word just means that you have a strong motivation to succeed. You don't just want to succeed. You really, really want to succeed. ... because you're ambitious.

Now, if we want to talk about our ability to work with others, we could use collaborative. ... because this just means involving two or more people working together to achieve a certain purpose. So for example we could use it and talk about a collaborative effort. Or maybe we'll have a collaborative meeting. And of course we'd all want to work in a collaborative work environment. One of my favorite adjectives because this describes me is punctual. And punctual means arriving at the expected or correct time. So if there's a meeting, it's important to be punctual so that you are always there on time and people aren't waiting on you. Or maybe you have a deadline that you have to meet. You could say that you are always punctual and you finish things on time.

Next, we have efficient. ... and this just means working quickly and effectively in an organized way. So in business, it's very important to be efficient. Great word. Another great adjective to describe yourself is detail-oriented. And this just means someone who pays close attention to the details. And jobs that I think this would apply to somebody who is a doctor. They should be detail-oriented. An architect, an accountant (you're working with numbers). You need to be detail-oriented One of my favorite adjectives: personable. And this is just talking about somebody's manner, their appearance, somebody who is easy to approach and easy to talk to. They're very personable. They're great communicators, and they enjoy talking to other people, meeting other people.

We all want to work with people who are personable. A wonderful adjective to describe someone's energy is enthusiastic. ... and this just means showing a lot of excitement and interest in something. that you are enthusiastic about the work that you do. Another important adjective is adaptable. And this is just talking about your ability to easily change depending on the condition or situation. Instead of adaptable you could also use flexible. Same meaning: you're adaptable, you're flexible, you can easily change. If you'd like to really impress people, a great adjective to do that is innovative. because if you are innovative, that means that you are able to create new methods and come up with original ideas to solve a variety of problems.

You are innovative. Another adjective that I like to think describes me is organized. And this means that you have arranged things in a systematic way that makes sense. So if you're talking about your workspace, you want it to be organized. Or your schedule: you should have an organized schedule. Or maybe you're discussing different projects that you're going to do. You should be organized.

Another great adjective, which I think is very very very common, is responsible. And this just means that you have to answer for something that you have control over. You are responsible for something. So you can think: how are you responsible? What is something you have control over and you have to answer for that? You have to make sure that it gets done, and that everything is right. You must be responsible.

Another very common adjective is reliable. And this just means that you can be trusted to get the job done. They can count on you because you are reliable. and businesses - they are always looking for reliable people. Next is insightful. And if somebody is insightful that just means they're showing a deep understanding of something, and because they have a deep understanding of it, they can really express their their thoughts and opinions really well; and give insight because they're insightful.

Now if you want to use an adjective to describe your speaking ability, you could say that you are articulate. And this just means that you can speak intelligently, and you are good at expressing yourself, easy to understand, and you can explain things very well. You are articulate. And it's very important to be articulate during presentations, in meetings, and job interviews. Another one of my favorite adjectives is resourceful. And if somebody is resourceful that just means that they are skilled at making Decisions and working on their own, and that they can easily overcome any problems that they may encounter - because they're resourceful.

Finally, we have proactive. And this is a great adjective because it's talking about somebody who takes action to control a situation, instead of just reacting to it. So if somebody's proactive, they go ahead and they make a decision, and they take control of the situation in order to solve the problem. So now, let's practice using some of these adjectives, and we're going to pretend like we're in a job interview. So, I'm going to ask you a question, and I want you to answer using some of these adjectives. And I want you to try and speak. So you can pause the video as you give your answer. My question for you is simple: How would you describe yourself?

Now, if you were a little too shy to speak, that's okay. I want you also to write it in the comments below. Practice using these adjectives and tell me: Why are you resourceful? Why are you proactive? Why are you responsible? This is great practice for the next time you are in a job interview, or even if you're just describing yourself to somebody else. I hope that you learned some new adjectives today, and you'll be a little better prepared the next time that you go in for your job interview. Thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time. Bye!

How to Dramatically Improve Your Grammar

So today I want to talk to you about some common sense ways that you can improve your grammar. That's coming up. So grammar is basically what ties is language together. It gives us rules. It gives language structure. And because of that I think many adults out there really want to focus on grammar and and learn grammar. Because they think it gives them a "yes" or "no" answer to many things. In my opinion, I think people end up emphasizing grammar maybe a little too much, and focusing on structure and rules without realizing that we're... we practice our grammar skills all the time when we are listening, when we are reading, as well as when we're practicing speaking and writing.

So today I want to talk to you about some common sense ways that you can practice your grammar skills. And these are things that we should all know and we should all be doing. And it's that doing part that is a little difficult because I think many people tend to overlook some of these tips and suggestions, and therefore don't end up continuously practicing and improving their grammar skills. The first suggestion I have for you is to get more language exposure. And the easiest way to do this, and the most accessible way to do this is by listening and reading. You can listen to a podcast, listen to music, listen to TV, movies.

And that's going to provide you with some additional exposure because you're not only hearing what people say, but you're hearing correct grammatical structures. And that's the same with reading. When you're reading a story or when you're reading an article online, you are reading the way that grammar is correctly used. And that's going to help reinforce your overall skills as well as your knowledge of grammar. So exposure is so, so, so important for improving not just your grammar skills, but your overall English fluency. Get more exposure with more listening and more reading.

Next, it is very important that you use the grammar. And when I say use the grammar, I think especially in speaking. If many of you are out there and you're studying grammar, perhaps you have a book and you learn something new and you have these written exercises, continue practicing and try to actually speak the grammar. And you can do this by talking yourself, thinking of questions and trying to actually use it because that's the best way that you're going to remember it. And also just end up using it correctly. So really try to practice the grammar and use it, especially with speaking. You can also practice identifying grammar when reading.

And you can do this and make it an exercise all on your own. So say that you're learning new grammar, you're learning either gerunds, or verb tenses, or phrasal verbs. you can read an online article and try to identify the different grammar. And go through the article and see what you can find. Because again, that is going to help reinforce your understanding of the grammar, and you'll be able to get that exposure and see how it's used correctly.

The next suggestion that I have for you, and it's something that I tell students all the time, is don't try to think of grammar as being right or wrong. Think of it more in terms of being acceptable or unacceptable. Because often when people are learning grammar, they want a clear answer. Is this correct or is this correct? And again, there's not always going to be one clear-cut answer. It's better to look at it as acceptable or unacceptable. So for example, we use the subjunctive with the second conditional. And you would say "If I were..." / "If he were..." However, in informal colloquial speech it's pretty common that you might hear somebody say "If I was..." Now if you want to be really strict with grammar, then you'd say "No, you should use the subjunctive." But the issue is so many people don't end up using it.

So instead of looking at it as...well this is wrong and this is right, look at it as something that's either acceptable or unacceptable. With other grammar you might find that something is not as acceptable. And if something's not acceptable, then you should try to avoid using that. So try to be comfortable with not always having a Yes/No answer. That something is right. That something is wrong. Think about it as acceptable or unacceptable.

Another common sense suggestion, which I think a lot of people don't end up doing, is review old grammar concepts. When it comes to learning grammar, I think so many people out there just...you know, I want to learn something new. I've already studied this. I want to learn something new. You should constantly be reviewing old grammar concepts because that's just going to help you improve your overall English fluency. So it's great to learn new things. It's great to practice new things. But also don't overlook reviewing old grammar concepts. So for example, we have a lot of grammar lessons on this channel, and even if you have studied this grammar and you think you're familiar with it, probably helps to go back and watch it.

And practice using that grammar. Next...and this kind of ties in to grammar being acceptable and unacceptable, keep in mind that rules are meant to be broken. You're going to encounter some grammar rules and you're going to say, "Okay. This is what I need to do." This is how I'm going to use it. But you may then see that those rules are broken when you're listening to a song or maybe you're watching a TV show. For example, I think it's much more common nowadays for people to end up using the verb LOVE in the continuous tense. And they say, "You know, I'm really loving this song. Or this...you know, I'm absolutely loving this.

I'm loving these odds. I'm loving this. And I'm loving it. I'm loving you too. And as a stative verb, it should not be used in the continuous tense. But these are some of the rules that people might break. Also, if you're traveling in the US and you go into a grocery store, you might see a sign that says, "10 Items or Less." Instead of saying, "10 Items or Fewer." Those two words are commonly confused, and people will use "less" instead of "fewer." And they will end up breaking those grammar rules. So again, my recommendation would be that you should always try to learn the rules and try to follow them.

But don't get too frustrated or hung up if you discover that some rules are being broken. The next common sense suggestion, well This is more of a reminder for you, is that grammar is evolving. That it is going to be constantly changing. Now, it's not really going to change too quickly. But the grammar from 500 years ago is different from the grammar today. And that's going to be different from the grammar 500 years from now. So just remember that it's constantly evolving and that there will be some changes along the way. And you can either decide to embrace those changes if you feel that this is acceptable or or you may decide not to use them if you think it is something that's unacceptable.

Another very useful suggestion, which I think many of you know, but many of you may not always do, is don't worry about making mistakes. Don't let grammar or your knowledge of grammar get in the way of you speaking or writing. And trying to actually use the language. Because I've seen students that they're worried about saying something incorrectly. And because of that if they make it a little anxious. And that anxiety keeps them from actually practicing the language. And if you're not practicing the language, it becomes more difficult to improve your language skills. Don't let anxiety get in the way. And don't worry too much about making grammar mistakes. We did a lesson on how you can overcome your anxiety and I will link that up above.

Here at interactive English, we love doing grammar lessons so now we want to hear from you. And in the comments tell us what kind of grammar lesson you would like to learn. What kind of grammar are you studying? Or what would you like to learn more about? Let us know in the comments. And as always, thanks for watching and I'll see you next time.

How to Find & Correct Your Grammar Mistakes

now we all make mistakes whenever we're learning other languages and to be perfectly honest I think many of us make mistakes even in our native languages as well but when you are learning a language and many of you out there you are here because you are learning English I think it's important to what once you're able to identify your mistakes try to actively fix them and correct them so that you are no longer making this mistake in the future and that's what today's lesson is all about it is about finding and identifying your mistakes so what before we get to this just to reinforce that this is a great practice lesson because what we're going to do is I am going to walk you through the process about how to identify your mistakes and then just work on practicing and practicing and practicing so that you can avoid those mistakes in the future and when you're able to do that it's just going to help you improve your overall English fluency so this is very important but it's also something that I think is overlooked and what I mean by that is I think many of us want to correct our mistakes but we're not really sure how to do it and even if we know how to do it I think sometimes it's difficult to actually set time apart in order to do this identify your mistakes and then practice correcting them I think most of the time for many people get caught up in learning a language that's all about let's learn something new let's new new new new new new vocabulary new grammar and you know when it comes to correcting your mistakes you're actually talking we're talking about correcting things that you have already learned that you already know so I want you to keep that in mind because this is a it is a process like I said and I'm going to walk you through the process the same way I did with my students in the past when we're in the classroom because right now we in this is our online classroom so if you are in the chat again I want you to participate try to practice your skills answer the questions and even if you're watching this later I would encourage you to engage and answer these questions because that's what interactive English is all about so let's do a little warm-up all right you've you've heard my long introduction to this let's go ahead and start with a warm-up of you know just see if you can identify the mistake so I've taken some tweets alright and on Twitter you will find a plethora of grammar mistakes that people will make so this one is from Donald Trump of course can you spot the mistake I want you to write it in a chat write it and write it in the comment section if you're watching this later and then I will show you the answer so he said Wow every poll said I won the debate last night great honor all right what do you think what is the mistake now I hope that you can you know just read this quickly and again something really stands out and right away it should just be that spelling mistake okay honor if something is an honor it means that well you are proud of something that happened it is spelled H o n o r our great honor all right the next one are you ready so this is from somebody named Jennifer I have no idea who this is but she said hate when people try to sugarcoat it okay again there is a I think again a glaring mistake that if you read this and you would see it oh okay this is clearly the mistake what do you think is the mistake hate when people try to sugarcoat it all right you may be able to hear the the correction by just listening to what I said but in this case in this tweet she's just using the wrong word in order to convey the meaning that she wants to all right so I hope you said yes hate when people try to sugar coat it all right her coat and if you don't know what it means to sugarcoat this is a good way to build your vocabulary it's when you try to make something usually sound better than it really is so really think about what it means that you are if you are coding something with sugar you're putting sugar on something usually because people might think well this tastes better all right people can be you can get addicted to sugar it tastes better so when you say this and you're talking about what something somebody is saying when they're talking and if they sugarcoat something if they sugarcoat an explanation then it means that they're trying to make it sound better than it really is to sugarcoat something often if you don't want to hear bad news somebody may sugarcoat it for you and they make it sound like well it's not so bad after all all right so that's what it means to sugarcoat something it means when you are talking it's talking about what people are saying all right it's about spoken English the next one and this one has several different mistakes all right so says I want to visit the Eiffel Tower in France one day that's what it says I read it like that but it should be you know I want to visit the Eiffel Tower in France one day but there are you know several big mistakes just right off the bat if you're looking at this I hope that you can read this quickly and know that yes okay France it's the name of a country it is a and identify my mistakes in spoken English and that can be a little challenging but what I would recommend I want to tell you my recommendation because both writing and speaking are productive language skills you are producing the language in order for well in writing for somebody else to read and speaking for somebody to listen to you so in that in that sense if the things that you can write many of the times those are also things that you can say that's not always true but there are similarities in that regard so what I would say even if you want to correct your spoke in English I think the best way to practice that all right is with writing all right so because the the reason I say that is for this so steps to identifying your mistakes the first one like I said is just to write more so
