whether you want to identify your mistakes in writing or even speaking I think writing is the way to go and the reason I say that is because it is reflective and what I mean by that is when you write okay you are writing something down on paper you can look at it and then actually take some time to think about it think about okay is this what I want to say is what I'm saying correct am I making any mistakes and oftentimes if you find some mistakes in writing if you are using the wrong word or maybe it could be something a mistake with a preposition often you may be making the same mistake when you're speaking so if you are able to correct these mistakes in writing I think that will help reinforce correct speaking whenever you want to have a conversation so the first thing I would say especially if you are trying to do this on your own is to start writing take a little time and write about a topic and this would be an activity that you are really trying to identify your mistakes so the first thing you need to do is write something it can you can be writing in a journal you could write in a diary you could just write something it could be an email that you have written or even you know the comment a comment that you would write to me on this YouTube channel that is practicing your writing and the next thing you need to do is always reread and this is something again I think is overlooked people tend to write something and then they don't reread it and actually try to look for mistakes and correct their mistakes I always try to make this a personal habit of mine whatever it is that that I'm writing if it's an email even if I'm responding to one of your comments I always tried to reread it make sure that there are no mistakes and then I will post it and then the last suggestion that I have for you because I said this is a process that you are going to write something you're going to reread it and you're going to look for one mistake at a time now when most people reread if I write something I'm going to reread it I usually just look at the whole thing altogether and see if I any mistakes pop to my mind now if you are actually trying to identify one of your mistakes that you are making because you're an English Learner I think a great way to do that is to go one step at a time and look for one mistake at a time and that's what we're going to practice right now we're gonna practice I'm gonna give you a writing I want you to look at it and we're gonna go through it and correct one mistake at a time so that you know exactly what I'm talking about alright so the first thing I want you to do let's just I want you to well hold on wait there's one more nope there's the paragraph okay what I want you to do is I want you to read this paragraph all I want you to do is read it okay and just see if you understand it it's not very difficult I'm only gonna give you about maybe 15 seconds to read the article all right are you ready so all I want you to do is read it right now here we go I'll give you 15 seconds ready begin okay okay so I hope by now you have read this paragraph alright now I'm gonna go back over here so you read the paragraph great you understand it perfect what I want you to do right now you're in the chat how many how many mistakes do you did you see how many mistakes did you see in that paragraph I want you to let me know write that in the chat write the number and again even if you're not sure exactly how many mistakes there were take a guess how many do you think that you read because I'm sure that when you read that you came across some definite mistakes how many do you think they've you found write that in the chat I see some different ones lolly says five Mary seven English vibes four okay so four five okay we're around there four or five now Samuel found eight okay so what we're gonna do is we're gonna go back through that same paragraph together we're going to correct it and we're gonna do one thing at a time so I told you this is what I would do in a classroom with a group of students and this is what we would do I'd say okay this is what we're gonna look for the first thing we're gonna look for is just punctuation all right I don't want you looking for any other mistake even if you find it that's fine you can see the mistake I don't want you to think about that one just yet all I want you to look for is just punctuation the next one that we're gonna look for is just spelling and capitalization and then we're gonna go through it again and look for subject verb agreement and verb tense and then we're going to look for articles and then prepositions the last one now you can make a long list of of different things this is just a list that I put together for practicing this reading right now so now that you have this list alright you know that we are going to we're basically going to reread that paragraph five times looking for each one of those and trying to correct it and again the more you reread something the more likely you are to find some mistakes so if you're just joining us I know some people come in here and they're we are working on correcting your mistakes so this is what we're gonna do we're going to go through it one at a time and look for these different things now notice that these two first things right here number one in number two punctuation spelling and capitalization that is strictly about writing because when you're doing that you're talking about you know your writing skills because when you're speaking that it doesn't apply because people may say some word wrong for example I showed you that Trump tweet that is you know he just misspelled it you would probably say it correctly even though you're misspelling it so 1 & 2 are strictly for writing 3 4 & 5 that would also apply to speaking as well that is good for both writing and speaking finding those so let's go through this here we go the first one that I want to do is this alright so now let's read it all I want you to do is look for punctuation and if you don't know what I mean when I say punctuation I'm talking about periods full stops question marks you know commas should there be a comma anywhere apostrophes just the the punctuation that you would need to use for correct writing okay so look for the writing what do you guys see how many mistakes that you can find if you find a mistake I want you write it in the chat and this one this one is a little I think this one's a little more challenging all right punctuation all right look for those periods those apostrophes those commas do you see any problems all right now let me show you so there are two punctuation mistakes and maybe these are a little more difficult and I've underlined both of them so the first one is talking about a bird's eye view this is an idiom which means that you have an overview of some area kind of like the view that a bird would have and you'd say wow it was a bird's eye view so birds is possessive all right which means you need an apostrophe there birds bee IRD apostrophe s the next one right here is just this whole sentence after eating a quick snack I begun walking down back down this is an example where after eating a quick snack this is a dependent clause it is an adverb phrase so when you have a dependent clause that comes before an independent clause I begun walking back down you need a comma to separate the two so after eating a quick snack comma I begun walking back down so those are two mistakes just for for punctuation two right there all right now what we're gonna do let's read it again now this time I want you I've left those I've left those Corrections in there so all of the corrections are left in red I want you to look just for spelling and capitalization do you see any spelling mistakes or are there any capitalization mistakes as well are there any proper nouns that should have a capital letter or perhaps maybe there's a capital letter that that is not Kappa that that should not be capitalized all right so do you see any spelling or capitalization mistakes those that's what I want you to look for right now all right and then again just look through it quickly see if you find anything and then I'm going to identify it for you all right yes Yousef persik English fives excellent okay so go say yes so those those are the three the people I just mentioned they found those mistakes all right the first one yesterday I went for our hike bin Diamondback mountain all right it is the name of a place this is a proper noun you should have a capital M Diamondback mountain cloudy it was a cloudy day CLO you dy before I had it spelled with the W cloudy and the last one afternoon I don't know if you noticed but I snuck a u in there before but it should be a te RN oon afternoon so those that is to spelling mistakes and one capitalization mistake right there because Diamondback mountain is a proper noun so those are three more mistakes so right now we're at five five total now I want you to go through and look for subject verb or verb tense so when I say subject verb I mean does the subject does it agree with the verb a plural subject should have a plural verb a singular subject should have a singular verb and verb tense what I mean by that is well verb tense tells us when something happens is it the past is it the present or is it the future so make sure that the verb tense is correct should we have the past tense should we have the present tense so can you find any mistakes with subject verb agreement or verb tense what do you think all right yes excellent sleepwalker very nice so I think when you're looking through this you probably notice there are there are a few different mistakes so let's go through this so the very first word is yesterday so yesterday is a time word that tells us okay this everything happened in the past all right so all of these verbs that this should be talking about the past so instead of I walk for hours I walked for hours it should be in the past that one sentence where we have the comma after eating a quick snack I began walking instead of begun begun is the past participle I began walking back down and then that last sentence that is subject verb agreement I would not say it were that is a mistake it was it was a nice way to spend the afternoon three more mistakes okay so now that we've looked for subject verb and verb tense now I want you to look at the articles articles I'm talking about a and the you can also have the omission of an article and when I say omission maybe it means that you do not need to use an article so those are possible mistakes there a and the or no article alright do you see any mistakes when it comes to articles can you find any there definitely are some because if there weren't I would not show it to you so now we're going back through it and looking just for mistakes with articles yes I think many of you see the

when talking about top perfect so there there are actually two mistakes all right it's right here yesterday I went for a hike at in I winter a hike in Diamondback mountain now when it comes to articles there are rules that you can follow for example if you're talking about the name of a bridge you're going to use the the Golden Gate Bridge the Brooklyn Bridge when we're talking about mountains no article alright so before the name of a mountain Mountain you that is when there is no article so you do not need to say the so if you're talking about oh you know I really want to climb Mount Everest I'm not using an article before Mount Everest uh I what's another thing of a famous mountain going just four highest mountains ah one day I want to hike up Mount Kilimanjaro again we're talking about the name of a mountain there is no article and then I think some many of you spotted that other one I walked for hours before reaching the top we're talking about a specific location specific point before reaching the top two more mistakes all right the last one that we're going to I want you to look for prepositions do you see any prepositions that are incorrect what do you think write those in the chat and let me know if you find those mistakes this is all about trying to identify five different mistakes what do you think write those in the chat so if you haven't found any I'll show you there are two mistakes when it comes to this right here and we have this okay so yesterday I went for a hike you wouldn't go for a hike in a mountain you would hike up a mountain or you could hike down it but because later on I talked about going back down which means at the beginning of our story that I should say I went for a hike up Diamondback mountain and then the next mistake was a it was a cloudy day so I didn't get much of a bird's-eye view much of a bird's-eye view this is a great phrase if somebody says well I didn't get much of something I didn't get much of a view I didn't get much of an explanation from somebody about something so you didn't get much of something so those are two mistakes with prepositions and now we have our corrected paragraph which if you add them up in total there are 12 mistakes so what we did is we just corrected this paragraph we talked about all 12 mistakes and we went by through this one at a time one at a time this is how I would recommend that you try to identify any mistakes that you're making and the reason why I think you can do this as writing again I said it's reflective that you're able to look at it and try to think about okay is this right or is this wrong and if you if you're not sure about it that is when you can use the Internet and try to look up and find the right answer and then go back and correct it now what I would typically do with students when I would go through I would make these curl I would try to help them identify where the mistakes were made and then they would have to write down what kind of mistake it was is it a spelling mistake is it a punctuation mistake an article mistake and then I would have them count up how many must they made with prepositions how many mistakes did they make with subject-verb and over the course of time when you start counting how many mistakes you made then that allows you to see where your biggest problem is because if you are writing and you are actually keeping track of how many mistakes you're making and what type of mistakes you're making you may see that oh my goodness I am making so many mistakes when it comes to articles and that way now you know what you need to focus on what you need to study in order to improve your skills so this is what I would recommend to try to identify your mistakes use writing reread and try to look for one mistake at a time now if you're just looking and thinking well I just want to really try to practice and like how can I improve my grammar I think reading is a great way to do that because when you're reading it's something you're doing just for your own enjoyment but you are actually seeing how the correct grammar is used even if you're not studying it you are seeing how the correct articles are being used correctly you're seeing how words are being spelled correctly and even if you're not thinking about it at the time that information is still going up here so reading is a great way to improve your grammar skills if you guys before I have a few more Corrections that I want to go through with go through with you but if you guys enjoy what we do again you can check us out on patreon we are active there it's just another way to connect with us we have some cool rewards you can check that out I'll throw a link in the chat there's also a link down below right there and check us out on patreon and just connect with us if you guys want to support what we do here at interactive English so now I want I have one more last section of Corrections that I want to make and these are Corrections that this is writing that I've gotten from all of you so what I've done is I've gone through some comments where people have asked me and they said hey is this correct can you correct this for me and I've identified some of those and now I want to correct them with you so these are a little more challenging so can you find the mistake the first one I'll read it it says if you don't respect grammar rules you'll miserably fail what do you think is the mistake what what can you identify that mistake I'll give you a few moments and then I'll tell you what the mistake is because again there are all sorts of mistakes that people can make when it comes to correcting your writing and improving your English skills so what do you think if you don't respect grammar rules you'll miserably fail alright what I would say there are different ways that you could go about and try to correct this sentence but what I would say is that the the words the word order is incorrect because miserably is an adverb and adverbs can be confusing because you can use them all throughout the sentence but when you're talking about this expression like you want to say that you would say you'll fail miserably this is commonly how this phrase would be used and this I would also say is a collocation because these are two common words that are found together if you don't respect grammar rules you'll fail miserably excellent I think some of you many of you got that one perfect the next one so somebody asked me they say good morning sir can you correct me thank you this is the sentence I captured on the video how they were fighting how would you correct this sentence if you're just you're you're reading it now what would you say what is the mistake how would you correct this sentence again in this this is a little this can be a little confusing I'm sure because when it comes to correcting mistakes there is a lot of different grammar that we could be talking about so what do you think I captured on video how they were fighting if somebody told me this I understand what what they mean that sentence but it's still little awkward now the reason that I would say it's a little awkward is because when you think of a normal simple sentence the sentence is going to have a subject a verb and oftentimes it's going to have an object as well subject verb object so the way the sentence I think to make it less awkward would be I captured how they were fighting on video because how they were fighting that is a noun phrase that is the object of the sentence I captured what I captured how they were fighting on video that is going to be my prepositional phrase and that will go at the end of the sentence again there are different ways that you can correct this I know some of you are writing that in the chat this is just what I would do if you want to keep the original words and the meaning you'd say I captured how they were fighting on video next all right I think many of you should probably be able to get this one I am very happy with this classes because it gives me knowledge what do you think is the mistake I am very happy with this classes because it gives me knowledge again if somebody I understand what they want to say if somebody said this to me and spoke in English I understand still I would know I would be able to know reading it there's a mistake even if I were listening to it I wouldn't I would hear this mistake and know that something is wrong so the mistake yes is this classes alright when you're talking about this and these all right there you could use it in one of two ways you could say I am very happy with this class because it gives me knowledge remember you we use this with singular nouns or I'm very happy with these classes because well in this case then you would need to say because they give me knowledge so to use the sentence I'd say this class would be the best way to complete this sentence but you could say these you can use that with plural nouns I am very happy with these classes because they give me knowledge we would need to use they in the next part of the sentence so that it corresponds with classes all right then we have alright this message right here I had hi teacher you were great hi Wesley you're a great teacher I have a question he's elder to me he's elder than me what would you say how would you correct this sentence or why do you think you know it's a bit strange again this is incorrect it's a word though there is a word that is incorrect so what do you think I'm sure if you're reading this like I read it I know what the person wants to say I know what they're trying to say but can you identify the mistake what do you think so yes I think many of you think like that you know older should be the word now the difference between older and elder older is an adjective elder is a noun so we're gonna have some options you could say he's my elder in that case elder we're using it as a noun which is you're telling somebody well this person is older than me which is the other way of saying it he's older than me so if we want to use the word elder you'd say he is my elder he's my elder she's my elder or he's older than me she's older than me that is the correct way to use it the last one all right my father spends a lot of time in the church is that correct I hope you can answer me soon well it may be correct it depends however I think there is a better way of saying this sentence that is a little more natural and this would be just a matter of fluency because technically speaking you could say that sentence it is grammatically correct but I think the message what they really wanted to say I think there's something we could change to make it better and that is the preposition in so you when when you use in to describe a place then it becomes a little more specific that this person is inside this building so if some this person says my father spends a lot of time in the church I think of okay they are inside the church now what I think that they wanted to say that they could make it a little more just for just for you their overall fluency to make it a little more natural a little more fluent my father spends a lot of time at the church now when we're talking about at we're talking about a general location it could be inside it could be outside is another grammar nuance about whether you should use the or no article all right so I hope that this is something I know that I think in 2020 I I think I mentioned in a previous lesson to try to identify one of your mistakes that is a good goal for 2020 and if you're wondering okay well how can I do this writing is a great way to attempt to identify a mistake that you're making write something down reread it and if you think that something is not correct or you're not confident about some then that's when you're able to look it up and see if you can find the right answer and then correct that mistakes or you'll probably if you reread something that you wrote you're probably just going to find a mistake I know I find mistakes in my writing all the time and that's what I'd like all of you to do right now is that in the comments I want you to write to me and tell me a mistake that you have been able to identify in the past that you were able to learn that okay this is something that I was doing wrong and this is what I learned is the correct way to write something or is the correct way to say something please share that with me in the comments I think it will also be very useful for other people to read when when other people are able to learn about mistakes that others have made perhaps they're making the same mistake so this is very useful information and I hope you share that with me write that in the the comments what is a mistake that you were able to identify in your past and how did you correct it so thank you guys so much for joining me I know I didn't give many shoutouts today so I'm gonna give them right now thank you ghost Seraphina Sophie Syed sleepwalker Mahmood Michelle English vibes lolly Angela Mary Wickham thank you guys for joining me today Muhammad I really appreciate it if you enjoyed this lesson please like and share it write to me in the comments let me know of a mistake that you were able to correct in in the past in your that which has helped you become a little more fluent in English you can always join our social media classes we are active on Facebook Instagram Twitter and right here at YouTube so just a few more shout outs Thank You Leila Putri Daniel Eloisa you Lisa Alexander Farhat Goldie and Valdo Yousef thank you thank you thank you I hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend merry Brit I think I I think I got most of you I hope Kareem just throwing them out there now I hope you guys have a wonderful weekend thank you and I will see you guys next week with another live lessons

How to Improve Your Reading Skills

Because good reading skills will improve your overall English language skills! So let me tell you how you can improve your reading! After spending many years in school, we think we're good at reading. But what if I tell you we're not? And that reading greatly affects our ability to learn a language? Let me explain: First, reading can improve your vocabulary. Studies show that reading significantly improves people's receptive vocabulary. These are words that you might not necessarily be able to produce, but you can recognize them and understand them when you read them in a text. Studies have also shown that vocabulary is most important when learning a new language.

Second, by actively observing the text, you can improve your grammar. Basically, your grammar improves when you're paying attention to what you're reading and follow the patterns of the text. This will enhance other skills, such as writing, or speaking, and it's especially important if you're trying to learn English for academic or business purposes. Here are four ways to improve your reading. Number one Read, and read as much as possible! There're so many things you can read in English: books, magazines, articles, newspapers, and of course our Interactive English lessons! Our advice to you? Read something you like! If you like history, read about history. If you like sports, read about sports. Just choose something that will keep you reading, and remember: practice makes perfect.

Whatever it is you're reading, read it more than once. The second way to improve your reading is to check your comprehension. Sure, you read something, but how do you know you understand it? Well, for example, if you're reading an academic article, you can write down the main idea of each paragraph. Then, when you're done reading, you have a summary of the entire article. Or, if you're reading a storybook, check your comprehension by paraphrasing what you've read. You can either write it or say it in your own words. If you have difficulty paraphrasing what you've read, then this will show you that you probably need to reread the story. And of course, you can check your comprehension by practicing with us!

In our videos, we ask you comprehension questions and we'll help you find the right answer if you make a mistake. The third way to improve your reading? Read at the right speed! Let your hand be your guide. Put your finger on the text and move it along as you read. This will help you find the right speed for you that will maximize your comprehension. If you're looking for a challenge, there are many speed reading exercises online. Or you can also practice with us! In many of our reading videos, we show you texts that move at the speed of a native English speaker. Look, this may be challenging, but it will train your mind to start reading faster.

The fourth and final way to improve your reading is to interact and engage with the text. Ask questions about what you are reading, just like you would ask to another person. For example, before you read, you might ask: Then look for the answers while you read. If you're an advanced English learner, think of questions with more substance. When you interact with the text, you will become a better, more efficient reader. And you will have a lot more fun reading, as well! We hope you find these suggestions helpful. Be sure to check out our video lessons in order to learn and practice your reading skills. We love to hear from our students. In the comments below, let us know what you enjoy reading!

We'll see you next time! Bye!

How to Improve Your Speaking Fluency | Q&A w/ Interactive English

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is wes this is interactive english the channel if in case this is your first time here i know for some of you it might be the channel's all about trying to help you just improve your english skills because we have there's so many lessons uh that we have across our channel related to vocabulary grammar pronunciation and today i want to take your questions related a little bit to all of those um and i want to talk to you about improving your speaking fluency because that's a very common question that i get uh in the comments people send me messages about they want to improve their speaking skills or what should they do and it's a very it's a very broad question which is why i think it's useful there's many different things we can talk about because vocabulary is it's related to speaking grammar it's related to speaking pronunciation of course it's related to speaking so i want to take some of your questions anything that that you are well curious about or you want to know when it comes to improving your speaking fluency and i will answer it to the best of my abilities the first thing though i quickly um and i may come back to this because uh talking about speaking fluency this is the last call i'm getting ready to start another speak up course it is a 10 10-week course that is all about trying to help you improve your speaking skills to help you speak confidently to help you speak clearly and to help you speak naturally so there once a week you have an hour lesson with me it's a small group class and there are weekly pronunciation video lessons i do um there are resource guides to help you practice on your own there's also you get a weekly pdf the lesson as well as a video preview to help you better understand what the lesson's going to be about there there's a link in the description you can check that out if you want to know the times of the course just scroll down to the bottom and throughout the class i'll i'll take questions here and there if you guys do have some questions uh about the course i'll throw some information in there right there as well oh also you can use the voucher code speak to get a 10 discount as well that's also one other thing so i want to say hello uh thank you hello lolly good to see you uh welcome hiwa hello hadil angela jasmine uh sleepwalker uh sajad esther anastasia ladan awesome thank you guys for joining me so you if you have uh questions about improving your speaking or just trying to like achieve fluency then let me know write them i'll try to get through as many as i can but uh sometimes if i'm not able to get to it leave me the question in the comments once the video is posted and i'll try to get back to that later but it also it gives me ideas as to what i should talk about in future video lessons as well uh so hi maria teresa hello good to see you i will see you i will see you next week next saturday uh kareem hello um i think hell's asking me well not really related to speaking fluency that's okay about my beard yes i think now though if you want a new uh word in english i for some of you this i wouldn't really call a beard i would say this is more stubble so stubble is when you're kind of a little lazy like me and you just have not shaved in a few days and that's that's really what this is it's stubble so you could say yeah what's up with your stubble you need a shave so that's a new word in case some of you have not uh have not heard of it then that that's good maybe hopefully you learned something new um let's see he will ask how do i know if i'm fluent or not because sometimes i feel like i am and sometimes i feel like my english sucks okay that that is a good question and it's very i would also say it's subjective and i know that that's not probably the best answer you might want to hear and when i say subjective it really depends on you as the individual of course there are tests out there that people will take to kind of evaluate their english proficiency like the ielts or the toefl but even with those they're really specific to university to say that that's the goal of those tests is somebody capable of studying at the university level in english that's the purpose of those tests as to whether you are fluent i feel that that would really depend on you know where you feel like you're at with your goals and i know it's probably something that for most people like me i always even with english i always feel like i can be a little bit better that i can learn some new words that i can fine-tune my grammar so in that case i you might not ever feel like oh i'm perfectly fluent because to be per to be honest i have seen um people that say like that they are fluent or they say yes i'm fluent in this language and this other language and i may because i i can speak spanish i don't know i don't i'm comfortable with my level i don't know if i would say that i'm fluent but i've heard people speak spanish and say that also is a mark of fluency so i think there are certain things that you could go by and maybe that'd be a good idea for a future lesson i could kind of create like a fluency checklist and kind of go down but again even as i would be giving this to you it would still be a bit subjective based on my experience teaching english studying the language studying learning about teaching learners the the language but um that that's a good idea that's a great question um you're looking forward to class me too excellent i am i'm also looking forward to it uh let's see we have some other questions um oh what is the spelling of stubble vivek asked ladan yes that is the correct spelling thank you for the assist nice double thank you we're supposed to talk about fluency we're just talking about my stubble that's okay um what is the best um the most effective way to learn new words books movies or books and the as far as learning new vocabulary that is going to vary by person because all of us are different learners some people are you know kinesthetic learners it helps them to move around and they're more involved in what they're doing other people are visual learners and you really need to see what's happening um others um so i don't think there would be one way of like this is the best way to to learn if you're just comparing movies and books i'll give you my opinion i would say books would be better for building your vocabulary because it is more of a reflective process and what i mean by that is that if you're you're listening to me speak right now so all of you you are practicing your listening skills five minutes from now you're not going to remember every single word that i've said or what i've been talking about in this lesson but if it's a book you have the ability to go back and try to put things in context if it's a word that you don't understand you can do that in listening but it just goes really fast so if you're talking about a movie and you're just listening to it you might hear a new word but if you're trying to follow and keep up with the story then you may forget about it or if you focus too much on it then maybe you're not going to be listening to um everything else that's being said so what i would say i in my opinion i think reading is probably better than watching a movie or tv show but you could also use subtitles i think that that helps um quite quite a bit uh also you hear the pronunciation while you're reading that's also very useful so i'm i'm a big advocate of reading because not just you're you're able to learn new words reflect on it but you're also seeing the the correct grammar and you're learning these other small things that i think can confuse learners for example prepositions people may use the wrong preposition or maybe they put the preposition in the wrong place but when you're reading you just see that even though you're not studying it you're taking that information in and then the next time you're in a conversation you're speaking you're more likely to use the correct preposition or use the correct grammar and then that's when it's like oh i'm just gonna do what feels right uh let's see to be fluent on my bucket list said shadazad excellent awesome it's always good it's always good to have a bucket list and if you guys don't know what a bucket list it's just the list of things that you want to do things you hope to accomplish before you die um that is an idiom in english uh edward asks can i improve how can i improve my english with newsletters yeah i think there are so many different ways that you can improve it if newsletters i think that's useful because you're probably reading about or if you're listening to it um a variety of different topics you're getting a lot of different exposure so uh i think you can do that the only thing i would say when it comes to reading or if you're looking for movies or tv shows definitely do something that interests you because if you're not interested in the story whether you're reading it or listening to it you're less likely to continue with it you're not going to have the motivation and then if you stop that's that's not what you want at all so definitely just find something that interests you um says hello hello how are you um thank you pooja thank you i appreciate it uh i'm natasha my question is why do i usually avoid using vocab i've recently learned um and use vocab i think that's perfectly normal that when you learn a new word you might not feel that that has to do with confidence that you don't feel confident that you're going to use it correctly maybe it gives you a little anxiety to try to to use those words and that's why i think it's very important to be comfortable in the environment that you're in comfortable with the person you're speaking to comfortable in the place that you're in so that you can try to kind of explore a little more with the vocabulary and if you make a mistake who cares it doesn't matter and that's what speak up that's what i try to do in the class i try to make it a very comfortable environment so that again if people make mistakes it's not a big deal we learn new vocabulary we try to practice in conversation using the vocabulary and i think that that's also part of the exercise in the course when i do that and we look at new words because some people might know the word others don't and it's really just as people get a little more comfortable maybe using a very a brand new word when they learn another new word i think then they'll try to use it again whether they're speaking with me in class or just in another conversation in general so i really think that would be more related to your confidence um in feeling like you can do this uh let's see um west can you spell the word instead of beard please i couldn't get it uh so the word we were talking about before uh was stubble um just the short facial hair i'm going to write the definition too when someone is too lazy to shave all right that's my definition even though that's not the real definition some people um some people like stubble i think they they try to have it usually i i don't care one way or another but yes i just don't i'm not a big fan of shaving every day um miguel says try to cite english uh i don't know if that was a uh sammy ass about improving pronunciation yes there are a lot of different videos um out there i don't know miguel if you were answering that question um they're saying how do i prove my pronunciation youglish uh yes actually i saw you tag that person yes english is a great site where what it does is you just put the keywords in there and it searches youtube for all these videos using those words and phrases and you can listen to it find it i think in the american accent uk british accent as well as australia and that is a that's a site that i reference when i talk about shadowing if you want to practice speaking practice your pronunciation not just pronunciation but your intonation your emphasis because you're trying to say things in the exact same way it's like if you were just going to shadow me just then you would say it with that emphasis on exact you're trying to say it in the exact same way that is something else we we practice um in the course and we work on i have a new shadowing video lesson so meri teresa you'll you'll you'll get to see that lesson and i've also put up an audio resource on the speak up so as i i keep running the speak up course and i keep adding new stuff to it more video lessons i'm starting to add these audio lessons in which you're basically like listening to me i'll say some some sentences some phrases a paragraph and it's kind of like sometimes listen repeat other times i'm asking you to shadow and typically we're focused on something specific maybe related to connected speech like reductions so again like a lot of some of the stuff we do in the course is really just trying to help you practice and work on your pronunciation on your own so you can speak naturally and clearly i keep reiterating all of that because it's part of the it's part of our our slogan right there naturally and clearly and for those of you who have been i'm sure following me for a while i'm sure you've seen me teach lessons in that shirt i really need to get a new wardrobe um it's something i am in desperate need of uh let's see so we have um mr corleone says suggest some vocabulary some books with simple vocabulary i always say read at your level so simple books it really depends i would start go easier there there's a site called um breaking news english and the reason why i'm talking about that site is because it allows you to choose like a level it it's a current event article and they'll give you like some not all of the articles but like level one level two level three level four level five and the level five article is much longer um but it really that at the beginning level it uses simple language and you can kind of work your way up from there but as far as books i mean that you have shorter books like the little prince you could use um i read my little girl like dr seuss those are actually entertaining books but uh it really it's harder to find i think books that might be more interesting to you especially as an adult um if you're looking for very simple books because a lot of them are geared toward uh children but i think it's important find something at your level uh cos2 says how can i improve my grammar this is another example where i think reading um reading is something that's going to help you improve your grammar and develop it because you're going to see the grammar being used correctly otherwise i think there are so many grammar books out there if you can find something that you want to specifically work on whether it's articles or prepositions or the verb tenses and i think just again the more you practice the more you keep doing it and then you keep getting that practice which is why i'm talking about speaking fluency because the two ways that you can practice and actually produce the language would be speaking and writing and and if you can do that and get that practice that's just going to reinforce what you've already learned so that's really the main thing of like trying to talk about speaking uh let's see uh deal i like to study english i love it awesome vivek says why don't we organize a speaking class on zoom well that's what speakup is all of the classes uh we speak up they are on zoom um and i'll send you the link so yes we we do hold those classes um through zoom uh let's see yes he yes how can uh site that says you're the best thank you i appreciate it um you're the best how about that yes he says how uh how can we improve intonation that's when i think i mentioned shadowing because the goal of shadowing is not just you know um listen to me say the sentence and repeat i have a bottle shadowing would be like you're trying to say it in the exact same way using the intonation and emphasis so if i were to say like i have a bottle all right and then you have that rising intonation at the end which would make it a question that's like what you're practicing it's like a question statement i have a bottle like i'm a little confused about it um

but that's just as an example as to how shadowing can be beneficial because you're you're having to use the intonation the emphasis that's the goal of shadowing um let's see do you know i can truly say thank you marie teresa for for sharing your experience and and and talking about it i appreciate it um let's see we're back to stubble does double have other meanings or just talking about beard now as far as i know stubble is just like just the short facial hair um i can't think of another meaning that it has off the top of my head so yeah uh let's see um divya says i'm new here welcome always great to to hear from new people and guys if you're new let me know uh tell me your name where you're from or even again if you're watching this later write it in the the comments i do read the comments uh some people those of you who have been following the channel and you write comments i try to respond to as many of them as i can uh let's see charles dickens great expectations like how is that for reading i that really depends again on your level as well as your interest um like if it's something that that topic interests you that type of writing uh i would say that's definitely more advanced um but hey you know uh lolly says practice practice practice the only way absolutely like they say there's that expression practice makes perfect um it's true the best way to improve your skills and really fine-tune them practice speaking writing that that's the best way to do it um vivek says are there demo classes available so the one thing i'll come back and say about this because a lot of people have uh people have asked about like how does it work can you do a free trial class i the way because we i do this through teachable so let me just explain you would sign up through this platform called teachable and that's kind of where you would find like the lesson pdfs the weekly video lessons i will send you the zoom link via email and then each week you would just click on that link and then you'd enter the classroom but teachable is where you would find the the instructional um like the the videos the the lesson pdf the resource guides all of that stuff i'm not able to run like a trial class um using uh teachable but what i've told people before anybody uh is that if you because i think people might be unsure of like uh this this class is for intermediate to advanced speakers and i've had people ask like oh i don't know what level i am and of course like i said at the beginning i want everybody to feel comfortable that is like one of the most important things to me that everybody feels comfortable in class so that they're not afraid to just say what's on their mind and they can enjoy it and have fun and just have a natural conversation what i would tell what i've told people is that you just sign up um you pay for the course give it a try if uh because there's a 14-day money-back guarantee if after like a week or two weeks that you're like look this is not for me it's too advanced or like this is not what i thought it was you can send me an email i'll refund the money um that's the only way i can work it right now if i were like some big fancy company then and i had the option of doing some system with a free trial class i totally would uh but it's just it's just it's just me i'm kind of a one-man show uh with all of this but yeah if you're kind of on the fence which is a good phrase if somebody's on the fence it means that they're unsure of what to do so if you're unsure of what to do with speak up if you if you're interested and you're available at that class time and you want to give it a try i'd say yeah sign up in if after like yeah the first week you're like look this this doesn't work for me just let me know um and i can refund the money uh let's see i say is anybody else um should i stop telling you um eve says should i stop talking with my non-english friends to speed up my fluency like honestly i don't know your situation i'm guessing maybe you i think again what i would say is the more exposure you get to the language uh the better so if you are constantly exposed to english among your friend group at home if you're watching tv or listening to music or you're watching lessons like this and you're constantly getting english english english that that's the best thing i don't know if i would like say like recommend to stop like talking to a friend uh because of that uh i don't again everybody has different goals i think it's great to just i don't know just have friends no matter what language but i i assume that you're saying that you have some friends that you want you want to speak english but maybe you're speaking your native language i'd say try to get as much exposure to english as you can but i'm not going to tell you to don't be friends with that person or anything like that um so lydia says yes i always respond it makes us feel very special thank you i appreciate yes i really i i always uh i make a point to really get into those comments to feel so i kind of understand like what you guys are saying what your needs are what you guys want um because that helps me for the future

let's see uh raul says i appreciate enjoy your lessons thank you raul uh i appreciate it um [Music] uh was all right all right thank you um thank you angie excellent a lot of it so so living on it says how many speaking sessions a week it's it's a 10-week course lessons are once a week so it's not really it's not it's not intensive in the way like there's five classes each week it's once a week for 10 weeks and i put a lot of the other resources on teachable like those pronunciation video lessons those resource guides i'm starting to create like some audio practice things so that again during those other days if you're looking for something to practice get exposure to the language then you can keep doing that um who says summer approaching how's the weather where you live the weather here in budapest today is a really nice day it's about 22 degrees outside sunny so i think it's heating up quickly

that's what i would recommend you've said where's a link for the class there is a link in the description i'll throw one here in the chat the other thing because i've been talking a little bit about the course i want to make sure that you guys hear this part if you are um if you're interested you can use the code speak 10 to get a 10 discount so the cost of the course is uh 179 for the 10 weeks which includes the the 10 week lessons with me the lesson pdfs the lesson preview videos the weekly pronunciation videos the resource guides and use that voucher code get you can get 10 so if you go to the the page and go to the bottom you'll see the class times hopefully that'll help again i if you guys are joining i know people are probably coming and going i'm trying to take your questions on speaking fluency improving your speaking fluency and everything's kind of on the table because so much is related to speaking vocabulary grammar pronunciation so i'm kind of answering as many questions as i can um mafia says for ielts speaking can you give any advice is it the same as normal speaking i would say no and the only thing i'd say about the ielts i mentioned those tests before it's really trying to gauge about the idea is that the test is meant to determine whether somebody can succeed in a university environment and that's why universities require international universities in the u.s many of them would require international students to take either the ielts or the toefl to see their level because that's supposed to determine whether they can succeed keep saying that at university so it is different than just like normal conversational stuff what i would say for the ielts or any of those tests and i hate saying this but when is like study to the test learn the structure and how the test is going to be laid out so that you feel more comfortable you feel a little more confident that you're ready for it because the way the speaking is set up on an ielts it's pretty specific you're going to sit with somebody i don't know how it is nowadays they may ask you some general questions that are more just conversational like tell me about your family what do you like to do in your free time and then they'll start moving into some more difficult questions that would be more like you're giving a presentation or it's like you know what are some things you think that we can make what are some changes we can make today in order to address the problems of climate change something like that and and that in that case you would kind of talk about it and then present your points and those are the things they're listening for so it's not necessarily like oh it's just going to be like normal conversation i just say study for the test and prepare yourself there are again questions that are just rather normal though um alex says i learn songs through lyrics and try to sing it helps very much awesome if that helps you perfect um i think again singing it's another thing you're practicing uh like shadowing that intonation that emphasis let's see says um uh see it asks or am i done with the actually no i have not uh gotten the vaccination just yet i because i'm a foreigner here in hungary they just opened it up to foreigners living actually i think my wife was saying like no not yet uh the site is not up so yes i have not had access to it uh yes please play for india yes i know uh india is definitely in my thoughts it's a lot of uh it's a very difficult situation going on there now um jane says can you make more live videos yes i i mean typically every tuesday there's a new video lesson on the channel and then saturdays this is the time that i try to do live interactive lessons with all of you sometimes i'll have a grammar lesson other times it'll be like a vocabulary quiz or we'll talk about idioms but this is yeah this is a general q a get to talk and interact with you guys directly and if anything this is good i hope for your listening you're getting some listening practice uh let's see sleeper yes we need to use different uh get used to different options absolutely i always say that if for example you're traveling um chances are if you are you know you're from france and you travel to thailand you're probably going to be speaking to people in thailand english will likely be the common language so it's useful to get exposure to um other english accents even from places that are learning english as a second language which there's many countries out there now uh hi from new york hello hello how are you uh hi from serbia hi um okay how is raymond murphy's books i'm not too familiar with him i might be familiar with some of the books but i'm not too familiar with him as an author um have you michelle said or have you been practicing your spanish no no i need to i want to i'm trying to work on more romanian at this point that's like the language but uh yeah i need to i keep i need to keep working on my spanish um and it's difficult because i've lived in a couple of different spanish-speaking countries so at different times somebody had mentioned at the beginning um i think hiwa said like it feels like good sometimes he feels he's fluent and then other times it feels it sucks um and i feel like i can relate to that i think after living when living in a country and like i'm constantly surrounded by the language i feel a lot more confident that i'm learning a lot i've building my vocabulary my grammar's getting a little better my pronunciation and then when you're taken out of that environment it does it it starts to diminish little by little if you don't continuously brush up on it and use those skills which i have not been doing i have not been as good as doing that as i should be um samia asks where can i get further details about the course i'll throw sorry just kind of bombarding you guys with links i'll throw another link there's a link in the description i'm going to throw one in the chat right there boom um you can click on that link it'll take you to the course page and as you go to the the bottom of that page they list the class times so classes are on mondays wednesdays and saturdays right now and i'm going to continuously keep doing the course and i'll offer different times us why hasn't your wife showed up all this while yes that's something we're kind of working on i think she's gonna kind of start getting back into the channel and doing some other videos uh with me it's been uh like i said it's been a it's been a tough year i think like even this last year with everything going on a tough year for all of us um so i think in many ways trying to get back to normal um i know you have said thank you i really appreciate that muchas gracias july i saw your first video with words to guests they were found oh glad you enjoyed that that lesson yeah some of the uh like our older and maybe i'll i'll start doing some of the some of them again some of our older videos were a lot more like i'd say interactive in a way like i'm talking to you right now and i'm expecting you to say something um but those are like practice video lessons and the those are actually lessons because again with the speaking course lessons are once a week and what i want to do is kind of keep adding more and more video lessons and actually doing more practice video lessons like that probably like one of the earlier ones you saw where you i describe something and you guess the name and then i ask you to describe a word to me and just really kind of getting you thinking um about how you would do that and it's really kind of exercising your vocabulary muscles because you're trying to think about words that you've already learned and ways that you can talk about this uh let's see um jax thanks for the backup thanks for all right no you're welcome yeah thank you guys um so yes we speak portuguese is i don't know uh yeah i don't besides um obrigado i don't really know much portuguese i would love to learn it i think there's many languages that i'd like to that are on the list that are on my bucket list right now is it mandatory to live in an english-speaking country is it mandatory to live in an english-speaking country to be fluent in english i'd say absolutely not um and the reason for that i told you i think in my opinion one of the best things the the best things that you can do for improving your language skills is just getting exposure and nowadays with the internet you can easily i think many people can easily get exposure in like their their home country um with with listening with reading with writing like even right now you guys are listening to me you are getting exposure to english um you're learning new words like the word stubble just keep bringing that word back up and uh yeah so i definitely think it's possible uh nowadays i think the one challenge that i i get from hear from many people would be when they want to practice like speaking because you guys can easily write to me in the comments you guys are writing in the chat right now you're practicing your writing skills but i understand when it comes to speaking that it can be a little more difficult um if you're not in an english-speaking country but not impossible i think they're because chances are whatever town or city you live in you're probably not the only person who wants to practice and improve their english and maybe there is a group out there that you can join and practice with others or maybe you can even form your own group or of course there are online classes that you can take like like mine i've been talking about throughout this lesson speak up um is again it's a way you can learn online practice your speaking that is what um that's what it's all about um you know any arabic words i know like um like things like uh inshallah uh stuff like that and there was another one that i had i forget what it is but i had some students teach me uh in edible because i had some other students they were from a couple of like brothers from like saudi arabia and they wouldn't sometimes do their work or something or like in class and i i had the other students teach me the expression like guys you're killing me you're killing me um and they taught me how to say that in arabic but i forgot i forgot i haven't used it in such a long time so um eloise says your videos are so well prepared thank you i really appreciate that uh louisa thank you um miguel says question when you're speaking here on the video class use normal rhythm or a bit slower like the way i'm speaking right now i think this is kind of my normal speech sometimes i think now when i get in front of a video a camera maybe i tend to speak slightly slower but at this point after so many years of teaching my the speed of my speech has naturally slowed down and sometimes when i go back to the us and i talk to friends um they may even say something to me they're like why are you why are you speaking so slow um so it really again it just depends on the individual but i i think it i hope that it helps again i hope it makes it easier for people to understand everything that i'm saying because that's that's the most important thing that your comprehension that you can understand listen at your level that's another thing i would always say um sir holly what's the words okay jacqueline's asked between bathroom and bedroom so that is a minimal pair between the the bathroom that's a voiceless th sound and bedroom bedroom bedroom that voice sound uh let's see that inshallah means if god will yes awesome you guys are teaching me a little bit uh let's see it says how can we automate our grammar for speaking a lot of readings from azerbaijan um i don't know you mean like in terms of using grammar when speaking i think that's i don't know if that's kind of what your question is i think that's something that goes overlooked because people study grammar mostly in books and they don't really take it then into a speaking component and sometimes i would always do that when i was teaching grammar like we're learning new grammar now let's use it in conversation and let's let's start us let's use a situation in which we're going to use um some of the grammar so i think that if that's kind of what you were asking for how do i learn the grammar and then utilize it when speaking again practice would be the best way to do it online classes find a classroom that may be in that they're using that method because yeah i think overwhelmingly people tend to just study grammar out of a book and even just practice grammar in a book and even though that is related um i still think it helps anything helps but i think it's useful not just to do learn something like grammar and then only practice it with writing it's useful to practice with speaking as well uh all right so i shall ask how do you pronounce uh those words so i'll just say those real quickly baked dressed blessed so those e d uh endings all have that t sound because the the consonant before is voiceless baked dressed blessed and i was actually emphasizing it a little too much there just so you guys could hear it uh all right so again if you there's still a little time left this is the last call though um if you're interested in signing up in my speaking course called speak up the enrollment ends tomorrow so tomorrow's it um because then we start classes this next week on monday wednesday saturday so you have less than 48 hours if you're interested there's a link in the description i'm going to throw one more uh the link again in the chat one more time in case some of you just recently joined and remember you can use that voucher code speak 10 to get a 10 discount if you have any questions about the course once this video gets posted write them in the comments if i haven't already answered them send me an email at info interactiveenglishvideos.com um let me i don't know if let me see email me at info inner active english videos.com okay you can that that's my email if you have a question about the course and i'll try to get back to you as soon as i can again it's a 10 week course it's all about like the like the poster says trying to help you speak confidently clearly naturally lessons are each week one hour long with me it's a small group class and we talk about a variety of topics in order to get like just a lot of different practice to help you feel a little more confident speaking about a variety of topics we'll do some vocabulary idioms expressions their different speaking activities weekly pronunciation video lessons um try to build it out as much as i can and it is for intermediate to advanced speakers that's the last thing i will say about it uh so um i hope that you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend i hope that you and uh join me next week for another live lesson and i don't know i have to figure out what uh what we're gonna do but enjoy the weekend thank you guys so much uh sleepwalker lolly always great to see you um there jane uh oj asked what time usually uh i go live saturdays around 3 30 p.m um central european time is kind of around when it is if you go to the channel home page um typically you'd see some notification and then you could uh ask to get notified once the live lesson begins uh thank you guys angela kritika kareem ariya audio has had to speak confidently again i think the more the more practice you get speaking the more comfortable you're gonna feel talking about well a variety of different things and you're just gonna feel more confident in general and as you continue practicing while doing those other things building vocabulary learning new grammar it's just going to reinforce your level of confidence that you're saying things correctly but again also i'd say the the it's very important too like just not to worry about making mistakes that's very important because you don't want to lose confidence when you enter a conversation um great to see you uh vish sorry if i mispronounced names cecilia um cassia ario michelle leonardo uh la fianista luisa giovanni trying to give ewa good to see you felipe trying to give as many shout outs as i can at the very end but i am gonna try to go outside right now and maybe go for a walk with the family enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will see you next time

How to Listen for Details & Improve Your Skills

hello and welcome to our live lesson today we're having a gorgeous Saturday and a super super useful lesson this lesson is going to be useful for everyone and I think we always always need to improve our listening skills so it's going to be a great we're going to have a great time if you are just joining I'd like to welcome you to our class to our global classroom please write down your name where are you writing from welcome Kira welcome ahead you're welcome Ozma thank you for for joining us today on this wonderful Saturday so yes please hi Diego welcome welcome welcome if I don't see all of you please forgive me sometimes things don't sync up the way they're supposed to but I would like to welcome you so listening for details this is such an important skill listening is on more than one account I've heard from students that listening is one of the most difficult difficult language skills and it is so because many times when we just have to listen we can't see the person who's talking or we can't read their body language and sometimes things get muffled people speak too fast and it can be very very difficult so in the comments please write down is listening difficult for you do you have trouble with listening and if you're just joining hello and welcome and thank you so please write down do you find listening difficult what do you think could your listening skills improve and [Music] listening for details I put here details are just one of the skills that we can improve we can listen for more than just details we can listen for things like main ideas or for to try to infer what's happening and there's so many different skills but details are some of the most important skills and why what are details okay is my question for you guys today if you didn't know now it's a good time to listen and pay attention it is very specific information that you hear and many times this information is important to communicate to pass on to other people so good morning everyone or evening or whatever so in listening can be again very very important for for those details because it's it's important information now why why should we want to improve our listening for details why is this important how can it be useful well for all of these reasons that I've listed here that I'm going to talk about plus more first of all communication right if if we can't understand especially if you've noticed if you've traveled into an english-speaking country and you've heard people speak very very fast sometimes you can say you're having trouble understanding and that's where this is very useful if we listen for details we can understand what's happening not just in other countries but even on TV or we can hear on the radio music lyrics movies all of those things it's so important to be able to catch to understand to see what's going on now even for people who are having to take some exams oh my goodness yeah there's always a listening component in English we have exams like IELTS and TOEFL and I know that a lot of our students are interested in these listening is a huge part and I've prepared with my students with these four over the years and they this is kind of a hard it's a hard one for them they don't always catch all the details and of course in everyday conversation so it's one those things that the more you practice the easier it becomes so you just have to keep keep at it it's very very I think it's a very useful skill but it can be very difficult and I'd say if you think watching TV or something is easy for you make it more challenging by just listening don't watch don't look for somebody's body language just listen no subtitles and see how much you can understand that way okay because that will really really help so it's great to see your answers yeah it is difficult because some people sometimes speak too too too fast and I think that that can be very difficult and also because maybe we don't catch the same words or we don't have all the vocabulary so it can definitely be a little bit harder now I have a little tip for you if you can't catch all the details how can you do this so here's here are a couple tips that I would like to share with you the first one is to focus make sure you're not your mind is not kind of going all over the place I just try to focus on the conversation imagine it in your mind put a picture and just see what is happening

try to envision and make your make sure that you are focused on what is happening and catch as much as possible try that and make sure that that you do it so this is a little bit of a tip yeah see so and and you know what it's it if in the beginning you don't understand a hundred percent it is not too bad don't worry about it keep doing it because maybe next time you'll understand because I saw somebody wrote I understand only like 30 percent maybe next time you'll understand thirty five percent maybe next time time after that forty percent and so on we are focusing on progress here it's a good thing so details what should we listen for this is very important usually when in in in listening exercise there are some very important cues as to what you're supposed to listen for and those are names dates places very important these things I want you to focus on the names the dates and the places colors age feelings anything that you see that that you here sorry that you think is going to be important focus on those okay and I'm going to read a text to you I'm going to read the text to you two times and then I will ask you some questions so please please please pay close attention are you guys ready is everyone ready you guys excited I'm so excited hello welcome everyone who's joining us okay ready for some great listening practice here it goes so I'm going to read it twice Nelson Mandela was a famous politician and to visit in South Africa he won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1993 and he was elected as South Africa's first president in 1994 he is regarded as a hero and champion of hope he died in 1999 at the age of 95 okay I will read it again Nelson Mandela was a famous politician and activist in South Africa he won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1993 and he was elected as South Africa's first president in 1994 he is regarded as a hero and champion of hope he died in 1999 at the age of 95 okay now let's see how much you remember here are my questions this is my first question and if you know the answer please write it down in the comments remember I told you to focus on those names I told you to focus on the dates and the years those are important that's very very important information so my question to you and please write it down in the comments in what year did Nelson Mandela become president if you know the answer write it down I want to check your comprehension okay and what here okay so we have some years here a lot of responses for 1994 some for 1993 are you ready to see the answer okay so 1994 is the answer and I did throw a 1993 over there too to throw you off a little bit because it's good to pay attention to the details in connection to the context so you have to pay attention to both but great job you guys are you guys are giving some great answers good job good job are you ready for the next one here it is how old was he when he passed away please write it down in the comments now notice that I asked the question in a different way and this is because we have I have to make sure that you understand the main idea how old was he when he passed away so this expression was not in the in the listening but I want to see if you guys got it so I'm getting some different numbers but mostly people say 95 95 95 let's see if you guys are right that is correct you guys are you guys are great no hurry oh who knew jr. Vivian Aziz great job Wang wonderful yes so he passed away so the reason I put passed away over there and I didn't say died is because you should expect these kinds of questions many times we don't use the same phrasing in the question that we use in the text okay so that's something that you need to get used to but it's the same main idea he passed away at the age of 95 in 1999 okay so please keep that in mind you guys are doing amazing amazing amazing ok now that we've gone all warmed up I'm going to give you a more difficult one are you ready for something more difficult and if you're just joining what we are doing right now is we are doing a listening practice and I am not showing you the text okay I am just reading it to you and you have to answer okay so the second one is one of my favorite subjects I could talk about this all day but I won't I promise just for the listening purpose here it goes I will read it two times Nutella is a famous chocolate hazelnut spread created by an Italian company called Ferrero Nutella has five main ingredients sugar and palm oil make up over 50% the spread is 13% hazelnut followed by cocoa solids and skimmed milk approximately 50 hazelnuts can be found in each jar of Nutella although delicious it's not very healthy a 2 tablespoon serving contains 200 calories and 21 grams of sugar ok I will read it again Nutella is a famous chocolate hazelnut spread created by an Italian company called Ferrero Nutella has 5 main ingredients sugar and palm oil make up over 50% the spread is 13% hazelnut followed by cocoa solids and skimmed milk approximately 50 hazelnuts can be found in each jar of Nutella although delicious it's not very healthy a 2 tablespoon serving contains 200 calories and 21 grams of sugar who's hungry no just me ok after ok so I am going to show you my questions right now and then see if you guys can write the answers in the comments please please do so my first question is around how many hazelnuts are in each jar and if you've noticed this one was a little bit more difficult I tried to read it a little faster and it has more details so I'm very curious if you guys got the answer ok so some people are writing let's see I'm seeing some 50s Mahmoud says 50 Vivian's is 50 KS is 50 let's see if you guys are right tada yes good job 50 hazelnuts approx so again here in the text I use approximately but I asked you in the question around how many that is again emphasizing that sometimes the wording will be different in the question and this is specially important in a question exams like the IELTS or the TOEFL they will ask you in different wording ok ready for the next one you guys are amazing ok not 50% so if you guys answer 50% that is not correct the answer is 50 hazelnuts the number is right but the percent is not correct ok my second question is what are the two main ingredients in Nutella what are the two main ingredients in Nutella let's see what you guys are answering the two main ingredients see if you guys remember [Music] somebody said sugar sugar and palm oil palm oil yeah that's let's see let's see yeah so you who you guys are correct sugar and palm oil are them two main ingredients of in Nutella now these are the most the first mention and and the most prominent and the third question hazelnut and Nutella let's see who gets this right it's not on my thing but I'm just curious if you guys remember let's see well while you guys are writing that I do want to tell you of a little tip and that I have to improve your listening and this is if you want more listening practice you could join for a free trial on audible and here you can find things like podcasts or audiobooks just a lot of resources that can really really really help you with your listening skills and they're doing a free trial right now and we're going to leave a link in the description so you can sign up it's it's actually very very useful because like I mentioned before there is a special skill that we develop when we listen without being able to see somebody so you can check for details so you can improve just the the the your oral skills without the context of what's happening without seeing what is going on so let me look to see if you guys have answered some people said 30 30 30 30 and unit was asking 13 yeah so that's one it's it's hard to hear it was 13% hazelnut 13 so not 30 but 13 but great job for a lot of you catching those numbers um okay well thank you guys very very much this was a really fun lesson yeah a petition now yes it is it is there's a free trial that you can join for so we're going to leave the the link in the in the description well thank you guys so much for watching you can do a lot of these just make sure that every time that you practice to do it to do it often try to do it if if you can't do it every day maybe do it every other day but make sure to make a habit out of it because that's the only way that I think you can improve again if you thought this lesson was useful please share it and like it any questions that you have that maybe I missed today we're going to answer later so make sure to leave them in the comments thank you again and I would like to thank all of you who are here Thank You Patricia thank you for a Thank You jr. thanks for answering and for practicing with us today Thank You Giselle Mahmoud thank you Luke and again if you have questions please please please write them down and we will answer thanks and have a great day

How to Listen for Inferences | Improve Your Listening Fluency

okay hello and welcome to our super awesome super super cool live lesson I hope you're doing well I hope you're having a wonderful day my name is you wana from interactive English and today I'm going to blow your mind hopefully because I am talking about something that's very important but it's not often taught and I think it should be taught more often and it is how to make inferences so right now I would like you in the comment I in the comment section I would like you to write down if you think you know what inferences are so please write those down so welcome welcome welcome if you're just joining we're talking about making inferences today so what what does it mean what does it mean to make inferences so if you were wondering why I'm talking about the subject well it's very important because inferences are making inferences what they are is clues kind of that we get it's just an idea or conclusion that we get from clues or evidence around us or it's really just an educated guess based on what you hear or what you see so those put together will lead you to make an inference okay so let's see I'm just hello Shanna welcome welcome welcome if you are just joining us write down where what's your name and where you're from [Music] so yeah just write that down let us know it's always fun to read but welcome if you're just joining so okay so talking about inferences and my question to you is why we should make inferences of course you need to know why is this important it's important because it really is a way to understand or to understand what your what you were it's it's a further way to understand what you are being presented with the information you're being presented so really it's it's you know this information it's there in front of you and you're just trying to kind of guess it a little bit more it's not really evident and that's what's very interesting about inferences and they're very very important part of learning a language of course so ok there you guys are I was wondering where everyone is welcome Giselle welcome Shanna Oh welcome welcome thank you and of course please write down where you're writing from so again we are talking about inferences and I want to talk about when when do we have the occasion to make these inferences or to make inferences in general well we do this when we receive information right so how do we receive information on any language really it's when we read something right or when we listen to something when we hear things that is when we receive information and this is also when we make inferences so there are two ways and we're going to practice making inferences in both of these ways today so I think it's going to be a lot of fun if you guys are ready we're going to start in one second we're gonna have some practice super fun super super cool okay welcome to Lisa welcome Jeanette I hope I'm saying it right welcome Casilla are you guys ready if you know about inferences and want to learn about interested inferences write it write it down and want to see it okay now I want to talk to you about a super fun tip I don't know why I keep saying super fun I think to me all English is super funds but this is a fun tip because this making emphasis is really a great pre reading activity and what I mean about pre reading is something to do before you read something so for example when you look at titles or you're looking at headlines and an article or a newspaper that's a really good way to determine what if this is going to be about whether it's a book or whether it's a book or a story or whatever it is that you're trying to read looking at the title is such a good way to infer what is it that you're going to read about and it's also a fun way to actually engage with what you're going to read it's fun to assume something and then when you read it you want to see oh was i right so it's it's really it's it makes things a little bit more interesting and a very good way to train your brain for these inferences also okay so that being said we're going to do a practice and I'm going to give you a title to look at and see if you can write down some of the emphases what do you think the story is going to be about so here it is David arrives home that's the title of the story we're going to read together so write down in the in the comments write down what what do you think this story is going to be about what what could it be about David arrives home David arrives home and then as I read it you can also always check yourself and see oh were you right was I right was I was I wrong what could it be about okay so let's let's see David enter the building soaking wet because he forgot his umbrella as he walked down the hallway he heard crying from his neighbor's apartment he could not understand how difficult it must be for Jim and Pam David had no idea what it was like to be

first-time parent okay so this is a reading and then I have some questions based on these I'm gonna read it one more time David enter the building soaking wet because he forgot his umbrella as he walked down the hallway he heard crying from his neighbor's apartment he could not understand how difficult it must be for Jim and Pam David had no idea what it was like to be first-time parents okay so hopefully you guys were reading this with me now I'm going to show you the questions and hopefully you can you can infer some information there's a lot to actually infer from this and I'll show you what I mean so here's the first question that I have what was the weather like outside so if you are paying attention I haven't been specific I didn't specify how the weather was like outside but I gave you some clues in the text that should tell you that information that is an inference so if you know the answer write it down in the comments right now okay so if you are unsure I'm going to help you and give you a clue here are some of the words I have made them bold so first of all we know he was soaking wet because he forgot his umbrella he forgot his umbrella so those are your clues okay so that means that that you should probably have guessed that it was rainy right so he was wet because it was raining outside and also he forgot his umbrella when do we use an umbrella oh when it's raining so those were the clues I should have told you what what the information was about yeah so very good yeah you guys are doing really really great and even using idioms good you hug those raining cats and dogs exactly very very good perfect now my second question is who was crying who was crying I want to see if you can remember who was crying so right now it's time for you to write down that answer who was crying and if you can't remember I will give you another clue of course in bold so he heard crying something about Jim and Pam and then something about first-time parents he had no idea what it was like to be first-time parents those are my clues so he heard crying Jim and Pam a couple and first-time parents okay so I hope I'm not giving it to making this too easy maybe I don't know you guys should write down okay you guys are doing amazing doing amazing but yes if you want your baby that was correct yes so so of course because they were parents and they were first-time parents their baby that was he was he or she was crying so that was the crying that David heard now this is a little bit more difficult but I think you guys can do it since you're doing so amazing and making inferences I want you to answer tell me what can we infer about David what is what information can we base what educated guess can we make based off of what we know from the story so far what what what can we infer about David I'll give you a clue if you don't know David had no idea what it was like to be first-time parents so what kind of information do we have about David that is not written here let's see if you guys are answering so again the clue here is David had no idea what it was like to be first-time parents and of course what you could infer is that he was either maybe he was single but that definitely he had no children right because he didn't know what it was like to be a parent which means he doesn't have children okay so that is the inference that we can make about David so if you guys answer that you guys are getting the hang of this it's very important like I said before I think the reason why inferences are so important is because communication happens not just through words right so when you talk to somebody when you have to listen when you have to read there is so much more that is being said in the way that the conversation is written or said that or or with visual cues or other information that is not specifically written so this is a very important skill that we need to master in order to fully understand the language so also if you were paying attention to the reading I was just I was just reading you there are some clues here like for example the Jim and Pam it really helps to know like Oh Jim and Pam like they're a couple Jim is a male named Pam is a female name these are cultural things that come up in a conversation that are important to know so you can make that inference so another fun tip is if you are having a hard time with this but in general it really really helps to make an image in your head so create this image in your head and it will help you kind of understand and determine why these things happen it helps you create a little bit of a sequence and it's just really a great way to to help you make inferences so that's another tip but I think you guys are doing really really good oh the names are confusing they're there they're very typical American names actually so it's good for you to learn them okay so now I have another inference practice and this practice is a listening one so I'm now going to show you the reading you just have to listen so you have to listen very carefully but first I'm going to show you the title just like I did last time so you could guess what this could be about and please write it in the comments here it is a day in the life of

Wes you want to repeat it louder oh let me do my West voice oh hey I didn't know you were back was said you wanna roll her eyes Wes got up and began walking toward the kitchen there was a faint sound from the TV go was quickly turned around to see what happened during the match really so you can hear that you want to ask still talking to herself okay so I'm going to read it one more time okay I know this was a little bit difficult maybe it was a little fast I'm going to read it one more time to make sure that you catch all of the details you want to walked into the house holding two heavy bags full of food Wes can you help me she said there was no response Wes his eyes were glued to the TV can you help me you want to repeat it still no response Wes you want a repeated louder oh hey I didn't know you were back Wes said you Anna rolled her eyes Wes got up and began walking toward the kitchen there was a faint sound from the TV go was quickly turned around to see what happened during the match really so you can hear that you wanna asked still talking to herself okay so so that was that was our listening I'm not going to show you the text but I'm going to share the question so the first question I have for you is where was you honor before arriving home what was I if you know the answer write it down okay let's see if you guys can can can get an idea where could I have been and if you don't know I'll give you a clue I'll read you the sentence again that I was talking about really it says you wanna walked into the house holding two heavy bags full of food two heavy bags full of food so why would I have come holding two heavy bags full of food where was I if you answered the grocery store the supermarket you are correct of course where would I come from of course I would come from the grocery store very good no question number two is what was on TV what could have been on TV that was so fascinating to us okay what was on TV there was a there was a very good clue in there it's actually a one-word clue and I will tell you right now it really is the word go so what what could have been the West was watching what was was watching write it down in the comments I'm curious to see if you guys are guessing it right or answering correctly that's right it was a soccer match or a football match however you want to call it that is whenever there's a goal there's goal and of course West loves soccer so that is what was on TV and question number three is what can we infer about wes's listening skills so this can be maybe a little bit more broader a little bit trickier but I will give you a clue so what can we guess about wes's listening skills let's see how you guys do I will read you a clue so first says oh hey I didn't know you were back after I kept asking him to help me and then another time when there was a faint sound from the TV a faint sound that a loud sound he heard goal and he quickly turned around to see what happened and he heard that so what do we know about his listening skills let's see what you guys are inferring even though I spoke three times and the second time there was a faint sound from the TV and he heard it very quickly okay so those are my clues so hopefully you answered something along the lines if you don't know what this means I the answer is like he has selective hearing and selective hearing just really means that he listens to what he wants to listen or he hears only what he wants to hear so this is a true story by the way well this is not a true story but this is how our life this is how our life goes many times I'll talk to us and he just doesn't hear me because he's so focused and something else that means you have selective hearing but of course when you hear what you want to hear that means there's nothing wrong with your hearing you just you're just not listening properly so if you hazzard anywhere anywhere anything like that you guys are doing you guys did amazing so I just wanted to say like this the reason why this is so important is because like I said there's so much more that's being said that's being communicated in written speech when we hear somebody or when we see something so it's very important to pay attention to these clues again thank you so much for joining us you guys are doing amazing yes exactly he uh-huh he is a bad boy yeah sure um what's emphasized that this story's not true well it's true sometimes and was of course loved sports so again thank you for joining us thank you so much thank you know T thank you go see I think you Lube not aha along Gisele or gazelle I don't know if I'm saying that's right Salwa jr. beshal Keira thank you thank you thank you thank you thank you I hope you have an amazing Saturday I hope your English just keeps getting better and better and thank you for watching us if you found this lesson interesting please like it and share it any questions that you have always write them we always answer and for more practice during our social media classes because it's always better to just keep practicing thank you guys so much have a great day bye

How to Listen to New Vocabulary & Understand the Meaning

Today is all about helping you practice and improve your listening skills. And you're going to do that to help you understand and build your vocabulary. So, this is very, very useful. And if this is your first time here, my name is Wes and this is Interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And as I said, today is going to be a little bit of a listening quiz, but it's a listening quiz. Whoops. I I messed up that slide, but it said to understand and new vocabulary. That's what it's all about. And I just love that picture. I thought it was pretty funny, so I put that in there. So, we're going to practice your listening skills today to help you understand new vocabulary. And I just want to give a quick shout out. Thank you. Hello, uh, Lai, Mary, Ira, Angela, um, Sia, Ernest.

It's great to see you guys. I'm happy you were joining me for today's lesson. I did have I don't know if you noticed I had a little small minor surgery a couple days ago, but that's not stopping me from doing this lesson. I wanted to help you guys practice your listening skills. So, it's we hear quite often people say like, you know, I I can I I have difficulty understanding TV, movies, perhaps fast conversations. And one of the problems is that you may come across a word that perhaps you don't know what this word means at all. Or maybe you just recognize it and you're a little bit familiar with it, but you you still don't know it that well. And when you start coming across those words in the middle of a conversation, it makes it a little more challenging to follow what is happening in the overall conversation. So today I wanted to practice trying to identify words that you may not know at all and and really try to understand what they mean based on everything that you're hearing. So specifically what we're talking about is this. When listening, it's important to be able to understand words that you don't know and you need to put these words in context. This is something that teachers, English teachers will tell students all the time. If you're listening, if you're reading a story and a student's like, "Well, I don't know this word." The teacher will say, "Try to put it in context." And context is talking about all all the words that are around this one word. Because if you understand the situation and you understand all of the other words, then probably you will be able to put the unknown word in context and understand the meaning. So that's what we're going to do today is I am going to have you listen to different sentences and I'm going to take one word and I want you to put that word in context. Now the words that I've chosen some of them are advanced words other words are they are not common words. The the reason is just the the reason I chose the word is just to practice this exercise. So I've chosen some words that I I would say you don't need to learn these vocabulary words. It's just to practice to see if you understand the meaning. So let's just go ahead and get into it. And of course, if you guys are with me right now, I want you to write the meaning of the word in the chat. Even if you're watching this later, it's interactive English. It's all about interaction. And I want you to use the comment section.

Use it like it's a piece of paper and write your answers in the comments. So, I'm going to tell you a sentence. All right? I just want you to listen carefully. That's all you need to do. Okay? Are you ready? All right. I'm going to say the sentence twice and then I will show you the word. All right, so here is the sentence. Just listen carefully. All right, here it is. Dark clouds surrounded us. It was a perilous journey and few survived. I'll read that again. Dark clouds surrounded us. It was a perilous journey and few survived. All right. So what I want to know is what does the word perilous mean? All right, maybe you know this word. All right, because this is a word you you might hear from time to time or maybe you might read it. So perhaps you already know. But just listening to what I said, what do you think is the meaning of this word? I will read it one more time for you. Ready? Dark clouds surrounded us. It was a perilous journey and few survived. Okay. So, what does this word mean? What do you think? Write it in the chat. Write the meaning of the word and and try to think about it. So, again, the the first steps I would take when you're listening to something is I I talked about a perilous journey. So, right then, you know, it's an adjective. It's describing this journey, this trip. So, then you need to understand everything around it. I start out talking about dark clouds. Okay. Dark clouds. Is that a friendly picture or is that maybe like okay it doesn't look good. And then at the end I say few survived. people survived the journey then yes.

All right. The next the next one is I want you to listen carefully. All right. I'll read it twice and then I'll show you the word. Are you ready? Um the next one is she's banned from the library because she's a biblio and she cannot be trusted. I'll read that again. She's banned from the library because she's a biblio and she cannot be trusted. All right, you're probably hearing this and you you probably know the word that I'm going to show you. And whoops, no, that's not the word. The word that I want to show you is biblio. So after listening to that, what do you think it means? What is a biblioppt?

Okay, I'll read it one more time and then I want you to write your answer. What do you think is the meaning of this word? She's banned from the library because she's a biblio and she cannot be trusted. All right. So, yes, I think one thing that that I think you know if you know different um prefixes and suffixes, some of you might see that word klept and you think, "Oh, I know what it means." A klep. So, klept is again if somebody's banned from the library, it just means they're banned. They cannot come to the library. They can't be trusted. Well, why? Because if somebody is klept, then it has to do with stealing. So, a biblio is someone who steals books. Excellent. Uh uh Katarina. Um Adravisic Albert. Uh perfect. Uh getting some great answers.

Hhabib. Yes, a thief is worked. But again, uh think about it in general. If you want to be more specific, a clipplept, a bibliolept, someone who steals books. All right. Excellent. So, this is what I want to practice today is just listening for something and then I will take one of the words and I want you to see if you can identify the meaning. All right. So, today, if you're just joining us, we are practicing listening skills and trying to identify new vocabulary. Are you ready? The next one is the following. Are you ready? Here, I want you to listen carefully. All right. Um, the baby defecated again. Whose turn is it?

All right. If I said, "Oh, the baby defecated again. Whose turn is it?" All right. So, just thinking of that example. All right. The baby defecated again. Whose turn is it? What do you think that word means? defecated. And again, I'm using this because my wife and I, yes, that is our baby girl. Um, Amelia, she is she is the love of our life. But if somebody were to say that, okay, oh, the baby defecated again. Whose turn is it? What do you guys think? Uh, I'm talking about this is a word that some of you may be familiar with already. All right. Um, Artm, my turn. Yes, I will. We will absolutely let you have a turn. So if somebody is talking about oh the baby defecated again to defecate because we're talking about a baby is just to poop or you could say to relieve oneself. There are many different phrases or words that you can use when talking about pooping and one of those is defecating. Um so perfect. Yes. Lolli Ulysa Junior. Um Manola. I'm eating bro. Sorry about that. Sorry if you're having uh some food. Uh Amakar. Yes, great answers. Thank you guys for answering. But to defecate means to poop. So, let's just move right along. All right, the next one I want you again listen carefully. All right, so the next one that I have for you is, you know, I have taught some recalcitrant students in my time. Some of them I tried to work through the issues and others I just didn't have the patient for patience for. All right, this is a little more challenging. I'll read that again. I have taught some recalcitrant students in my time. Some of them I tried to work through the issues and others I just didn't have the patience for.

So what what does it mean if I'm talking about the word recalcitrant? All right. What do you think that means? Uh I'll read it one more time. And this one I I do think is a little more challenging. All right. I want you to listen for it again. I have taught some recalcitrant students in my time. Some of them I tried to work through the issues and others I just didn't have the patience for. So if we're talking about somebody who is recalcitrant I think more or less all right um you can kind of get an idea that it's not a good thing. All right because you're talking about a teacher working through the issues and maybe some of them like yeah I don't want to deal with it. So we're talking about you could say a bad student a stubborn student. you could put it into context and you know that it's something that is negative. Now again if you wanted to take this word and say well this is a new word for me I know it's a bad word I know it doesn't mean something good that if somebody if you refer to them as recalcitrant but it means that somebody is defiant of authority it is a difficult person so this is a situation when you have a person in authority like in a classroom a teacher or perhaps at work a boss and you might have a recalcitrant employee somebody who defies authority and they are therefore difficult to deal with. So I've saw some great answers. Um Ahmad like disobedient. That's a good one. Angela rude. Chris rude. Perfect.

Um you could say fia stubborn. Perfect. I think many of you said um so you said like rude. Uh bad. Exactly. So I think all of those I it if you hear this then you would understand the meaning. Oh okay you're talking about a student that you know is not good. They have problems. But specifically again this is what the meaning of the word is. Boom right there is somebody who is defiant of authority recalcitrant. All right. So um that I I want to just let you guys know if you guys like what we do, if you enjoy our lessons, you can check out our Patreon page. We have some cool rewards there. It's just another great way to connect with us, to show us some love for for what we do here at Interactive English. I just threw a link there in the chat um if you want to go check that out.

All right, so let's let's continue as we go through these. They're going to become a little more difficult. All right, so the next one that I have for you, again, I want you to listen carefully. All right, listen carefully to this statement. Many of you compliment me for my lumphony. You can understand me, but you may have difficulty with TV shows or movies. All right, I'll read that again. Many of you compliment me for my limpony. You can understand me, but you may have difficulty with TV shows or movies. All right, I think you probably know. All right, the word that I want to know is what does it mean?

Lamprophanany. Now, this is not a common word. This is not a word that uh I'd say, "Oh, go out and learn this word and try to use it." This is this is specifically for this exercise to see if you can put this word in context. I will read it one more time. And this is true. A lot of you would would say this to me and you'd say, "Well, you don't say lampany, but you say many of you, you compliment me for my Lamprophanany. You can understand me, but you may have difficulty with TV shows or movies. So what do you think it means if I'm talking about lamprphanany? You compliment me for the on this on my lampany. But some of you may say, "Ah, but I have difficulty with TV shows or movies." So this is this is very uh I think very applicable because today we're practicing our listening skills.

All right. So um I think excellent. All right. See this is great practice for for some of the what you guys are putting down. I love some of these answers. Um like Yousef said eloquence uh hopu pronunciation coding is talking about articulating um gerous pronunciation. So yeah you you guys are on the right track. So if somebody is talking I'm talking about my lamprphanany it's talking about well two things loudness and clarity of voice. So I would say that all of those answers if you talked about enunciation the clarity of voice it does have to do with pronunciation the way that I speak and the way that I pronounce my words. So this is ex specifically what it is because I am kind of loud especially when I'm talking and giving these lessons. Loudness and clarity of voice is lampany. But many of you you're able to put it in context because of this situation. you compliment me and say, "Oh, Wes, I understand you, but when I'm listening to a TV show or movie, it may be a little more difficult." All right, excellent. Let's go to the next one. Are you ready? So, listen for the next one. Here it is. I want you to listen carefully. All right, if you're just joining us, we are practicing our listening skills and putting words into context to try and understand new vocabulary. So, listen carefully. And here we go. So, I'd say we could hear the halaloo in the third grade classroom next door. Perhaps the teacher was out of the room. I'll say it again. We could hear the halaloo in the third grade classroom next door. Perhaps the teacher was out of the room.

So, if somebody's saying this to you, all right, I I want to know what does it mean? Uh oh, wait, not this one. Here we go. Halaloo. All right. So, you heard that sentence. This is the word I came to over here. This is the word that I want you to identify. Halaloo. I will read it one more time. See if you can listen for that word. Put it into context of what's around the word. We could hear the halaloo in the third grade classroom next door. Perhaps the teacher was out of the room. All right. What do you think it means? Halaloo. Excellent. uh seeing some great answers. So if again you could put it into context, a third grade classroom, if the teacher's out of the room, well probably the students are going to be noisy. So a halaloo is referring to a loud noise, a lot of commotion. All right, the teacher's not there, so there is a lot of noise. Excellent. But I like the answers. Lucky lucky noise. Perfect.

Um yeah, Rodrigo, a racket, which is also a loud noise. Excellent. Um, Angela, Sarah, a fuss. Sure. So, all of those words are applicable. You can hear that and you understand the meaning of halaloo. Now, the next one. Are you ready? We're going to keep going. Listen carefully. What do you think? Um, this is a conversation between two people. All right. The first person says, "Why do you look so wobagon?" And the other person says, "Well, I just returned from my grandmother's funeral." Why do you look so wobagon? I just returned from my grandmother's funeral. What do you think it means if somebody is wobagon? All right, you you can I think the context is a little easy. So, I tried to choose words that I don't think you know, and this is not a common word whatsoever, but I tried to give you a little bit of an easier context to follow so you can say, "Oh, yes." I can listen to it and identify it. I'll read it again one more time. Why do you look so wobagon? Ah, I just returned from my grandmother's funeral. What do you think it means? Somebody is wobagon. Okay, so uh yes, excellent, you guys. You guys are rocking this. Putting these words into context. And again, this is great practice for your listening skills. So again, if we're talking about somebody who is wobagon, it's an adjective and it just means yeah, somebody is sad that they appear they look sad. All right? They they appear wobagon. Somebody who just returned from a funeral, they're going to look very sad. Their appearance, they're going to, oh, you know, it's not a good event. So I think if you said you know sama Ahmad dismal um you know El Mustafa sad perfect loi um melon uh you said a little distraught. Yes all of that works. All right somebody looks wobigon. All right they sad in appearance. Let's do another one. Are you ready? I want you to listen carefully to the following to this one.

Um oh oh I should tell you. All right, with this one, um, with this one, it's a little longer. I'm going to choose two words. Okay, I'm choosing two words that I want you to identify and I will show you um, both of those words as well. All right, are you ready? I want you to Which one did we just do? Uh, halaloo. No, we did wobagon. Okay, let's do the next one. All right, listen carefully. We're on number 20. My boss is a real kermagin. I felt I prepared adequately for my presentation, but my boss said I was a bunch I was saying a bunch of gobbledygy He yelled at me because he claimed I didn't make any sense. All right, I'm going to read it again. My boss is a real kerogen. I felt I prepared adequately for my presentation, but my boss said I was saying a bunch of gobbledyhook.

He yelled at me because he claimed I didn't make any sense. All right. So, there are two words that I want you to think about. All right. What do you think it means? What is a kermagen? gobbledyhook? What do you think? I will read that again because those are two words that again they're not very common words. It's not something these are not words that you're going to use every day, but it's good to listen for and see if you can put them into context. All right, I'll read it again. My boss is a real kerogen. I felt I prepared adequately for my presentation, but my boss said I was saying a bunch of gobbledyhook. He yelled at me because he claimed I didn't make any sense. So, in this one, I'm trying to make it a little more challenging to see if you can identify two meanings. All right. What do those words re mean right there? What is a kermagin? And what is gobbledyhook?

So, uh seeing some ideas like no idea. All right. Exactly. um picky. Okay, maybe so I I think you can say like some of it uh I think some of you are answering some and not the others. If we're saying my boss is a real kermagin, all right, he yelled at this person really kind of just you know maybe they got angry for no reason. So if somebody is a kermagin, they are a badtempered person and the they said that they didn't make any sense. He was saying a bunch of gobbledyhook. This is more like almost a bit of slang. If somebody's like if you're listening to somebody and it's just a bunch of gobbledyhook. Yes, it is unintelligible nonsense.

It doesn't make any sense. Um a kermagin is the son of a bee. Sure. Yeah. Uh many people might think yes that is a kmagin as well. Lai cranky is somebody who's bad temper. That works as well. Perfect. So again, somebody is a kermagin. They are badtempered. They easily lose their temper. And gobbledyhook is when you're talking about you're listening to somebody speak. If you're hearing something and it's like, I don't understand this. It's just a bunch of gobbledyhook. Yes, Albert. Like babbling. All right. Somebody's babbling. You can't you don't understand it. You could say it's just it's a bunch of gobbledyhook. Are you ready? All right. The next one. Again, I want you to listen. I'm going to take two words out of this and you need to try to identify those two words. Are you ready?

Listen carefully. Here we go. Even after observing the mayflies for hours, he was still flumxed by their behavior and their effiral lives meant he wouldn't have much longer to study this group. I'll say it one more time. Even after observing the mayflies for hours, he was still flumxed by their behavior and their effiral lives meant he wouldn't have much longer to study this group. Okay, so this I think it's a little more challenging. Can you identify the meaning of those two words? All right, flumixed and efferyl. All right, if you listen to that, what do you think is the meaning of those words? Let me I'm going to read it again. Are you ready? Listen carefully for those words. Um, I'd say even after observing the mayflies for hours, he was still flumxed by their behavior and their effeural lives meant he wouldn't have much longer to study this group. All right, so I chose that picture that that is a picture of a mayfly if you don't know. To be honest, I did not know what a mayfly was either. All right. So, if you're talking about um somebody, he was flumxed by their behavior. Excellent. See some good answers. Yes. Um Divianga Junior. Junior, you just rocked both of those. Excellent. So, he their effir he was flumxed by their behavior. He's like, hm, I'm a little flumxed by that. I just gave you a hint if somebody's flummixed. And the last part was their effiral lives meant he wouldn't have long to study the group. So in that case all right flumxed if somebody is flumxed they are confused they are perplexed all right so you might be flumxed by some situation you don't understand what's happening or why it's happening and if something is ephemeural it just means that it is lasting a short time very short-lived all right so we talk about their ephemeural lives because if you didn't know a mayfly it only a mayfly only lives for I I think a few days. So they have a very very short lifespan. So in that case that the person wouldn't have much time to study um what's happening with these mayflies. So I hope that again I put that reading up there so you can kind of read it and try to get idea as to the context the meaning

Um, but you somebody may hear it. You may hear it watching a movie. Repast is a word that I don't think is very common as well. So again, let me read it one more time. And now you know the words that I want you to identify. See if you can put them in context. Somebody would say, "What are you doing? I want you to stop lolly gagging and finish your chores. Then make sure you wash your hands before our repast." All right. So, I think the first one is you can kind of understand that. Um, what are you doing? I want you to stop lolly gagging and finish your chores. If you know that chores are things that you have to do around the home, then that's work you have to do. So if somebody's lolly gagging, yes, Mr. Reluctant, they're wasting time. Um, Ibrahim, yeah, you could say they're fooling around.

Alberto, waste time. Um, on acting goofy. Sure, they're lolly gagging. They're I I like to say the phrase dragging their feet. If somebody's dragging their feet, it means they are wasting time because they don't want to do something that they need to do. And they'd say, "Ah, you know, I'm really dragging my feet." But you could say more informal lolly gagging. And the next one I wanted to put in context. Make sure you wash your hands before our repast. When would people tell you to wash your hands? They would say to wash hands before you eat. So yes. Excellent. So to w to repast is talking about amhmad. Yes. A feast. It is talking about a meal. Some of you uh got that one as well. Uh adeistic. Perfect. So again, you guys were able to listen to those words. What are you doing? I want you to stop lolly gagging, wasting time, and finish your chores. Then make sure you wash your hands before our repast, which is our meal, which is dinner. I think most of the time repast is used to refer to dinner. And I think it's more of a I'm not positive. I think it's more of a religious word, maybe a religious context. I'm not sure about that. But again, it's it's not a very common word.

People would just say dinner, supper, a meal, a feast. There are many words that somebody would use. But the whole idea behind this is that if you are uh listening to a conversation, the next time you're watching a TV show or movie and you hear a word that maybe you are a little familiar with or maybe you don't know it all, just try to put it into context. Try to understand all the words that are around there. Put a picture in your head so that you know, okay, this is what the word means. Now, this is this is what I this is great practice for trying to continue doing this for actually improving your listening skills as well as maybe learning some new words along the way. So, I hope you guys enjoyed this listening practice uh and trying to identify new vocabulary words and put them in the context. If you like this lesson, please I would really appreciate it if you hit that like button down below. Stop lolly gagging.

Stop lolly gagging and go ahead and and hit that like button. And of course, I hope all of you enjoy your your repass tonight. I know that uh you know, I'm I'm trying to make sense. I'm I'm not trying to be I'm trying to remember the words that I I had from from this lesson. Um I'm trying not to speak a bunch of gobbledygook. All right. So I I'm I again I'm really glad that you guys hopefully you understand uh what I'm saying because of my lamp prophecy. All right, my annunciation, my voice. All right, that was a quick little review uh of some of the words from this lesson. Thank you guys. Thank you. Um Ira, uh Tactic, um Canana, sorry if I mispronounced names. Judith, uh, Saz, Rosal, Linda, Ulysa, Fulia, Mary, Junior, Artum, uh, Miss Reluctant. Thank you guys so much for joining me today. I hope you have a wonderful day. And also check out our social media classes.

We're active on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram. We try to be everywhere. All right? And we try to create a halaloo wherever we go and help you guys practice and improve your English skills. And as always, just write to us in the comments. We love hearing from you. Have a wonderful, wonderful day. And okay, that's enough. I've I'm I'm dragging this on. I will see you guys next time.

How to Overcome Your Anxiety and Fear of Speaking

Does alcohol help you speak a foreign language better? Yes! No! Maybe? I'll tell you the answer to that question in today's video. So let me tell you a little story about the first semester I taught at a university in Korea. So this was about my very first week, and the main class that we have is a speaking class. It's kind of like your homeroom class. These are the students that you teach every day and you really get to know them. So, at the end of that first week I had gone out to the convenient store to get something and when I was walking back, I noticed my speaking class was at a restaurant next to the convenient store.

So I saw them. They saw me. They were waving at me, so I went in to say hello. Now, these are university students so the table was just covered in these green Soju bottles. And Soju is...just the...probably the most popular alcoholic drink in Korea. I sat down and we started talking and... You know...they were a little more chatty. I think most of them had a little bit to drink. But the one person that really stood out was the girl to my left whose English name was Ellen. So Ellen was very shy and reserved. She really didn't speak that much in class. She only spoke when spoken to. So that night, I learned something. I learned that Ellen was by far the most competent speaker in the class.

She just kept talking. Talk, talk, talk, talk, talk, talk. In fact, she wouldn't stop talking. She was asking me about travel, what I thought about Korea, and even the other students were asking her questions about how to say things in English. But the thing is that night Ellen was pumped up on the liquid courage of Soju. That it had lowered her inhibitions...she did not care about making mistakes. She just wanted to speak. So one could probably come to the conclusion that alcohol helped her speaking. And yes. One could make that argument. However, it's not entirely true. The answer of really what was going on is a little more complex. And that's what I want to talk to you about.

First, in order to understand what was happening that night. We need to take a little more in-depth look at the speaking process. So within the circles of language learning, there is this theory called the Affective Filter Hypothesis, which was developed by this guy named Stephen Krashen. When you're learning a new language, you are receiving the information, and then you're producing what you know. But according to Krashen, there is this filter that we put up that can make this process a little more difficult. Because there are emotional factors that can affect our ability to learn. These are all negative factors that affect our ability to learn a language. Essentially, these factors raise our filter and can block out the information we're trying to take in.

And it can also block the language that we're trying to produce. Therefore, we need to lower our filters so that the message get through. That way we can learn more about a language and then we can produce more of it as well. So what do teachers do to lower a student's filter? Well, you hear all sorts of ideas. I'm sure a lot of students like that last one. Basically, we need a low stress environment like this one... Nice. But what if we can't all learn a language while at the beach? So how else can we lower our anxiety? I got an idea. Alcohol! So now you should have a better idea about how this is connected.

Drinking alcohol lowers people's anxiety. This lowers our filter, and we become more relaxed and comfortable when it comes to speaking. Even if we're speaking a foreign language. However, there are some serious drawbacks to drinking and learning. Let me give you three. Number one - any positive effects you feel alcohol is giving you from speaking is only temporary. And the last thing you want to do is to rely on alcohol to speak.

Number two - grammar and pronunciation mistakes that you make while drinking may become ingrained bad habits that you might continue to make when you become sober. Number three - drinking is just...it's not a very healthy activity. And the bottom line is that the seemingly positive effects that you think you might get from drinking alcohol are not due to alcohol whatsoever. They're due to the confidence in your own speaking ability. That means that everything that you need is already inside you. You just got to let it out. Here are four ways that you can lower your anxiety to help make you a more confident speaker.

Number one - don't expect perfection from yourself. You need to realize that you're going to make mistakes and that is perfectly okay. It's part of the language learning process. If you're speaking to somebody and they correct you, then try to keep that in mind and you move on. And if you're speaking to somebody and they don't understand you, then...you know, that's okay as well. It's going to happen. Just try to express your thoughts or your ideas in a different way.

Number two - don't let your nervousness make you even more nervous. Try to channel any nervousness into another emotion like excitement. Because every time that you speak you're getting to practice. You're getting to use the language because that's how you improve and continue learning. Number three - avoid translating all of your thoughts. Don't try to think of every single little word that you want to say before you actually speak. Just think of the idea of what you want to say, that's perfectly fine, but then just try and say it. And let it come out naturally and unrehearsed. Number four - identify what you think makes you anxious. Because when you have a clear understanding of what makes you anxious, then you have a better chance of reducing anxiety. So what you can do is just take a journal, you can write this information down, and then go back and reflect on why it's making you anxious and then it will help you in the future reduce that anxiety. Okay, I hope some of this information helps. And I hope it helps you become a better speaker. And become a better speaker without having to drink alcohol. In the comments below, let us know what challenges you face when it comes to speaking. This will help us understand where everybody is coming from, and it should also be interesting to read what challenges other people are going through. Thanks for joining us today. We'll see you next time.

How to Pronounce -ED Words Correctly | Speak English

today I am going to help you perfect your pronunciation by teaching you about IDI endings [Music] what's up everyone my name's Wes this is Interactive English which is where you want to be to practice and improve your English skills and today I'm gonna help you practice and improve your pronunciation by teaching you all about IDI endings now when you think about words with IDI endings for the most part we are talking about regular verbs in the past tense that's the majority of words that have these IDI endings however there are also adjectives that have IDI endings as well as past participles that have IDI endings as well but as we go through the lesson and I give you some examples and when we do the practice we're just gonna be using regular verbs in the simple past now you may be thinking to yourself why should I care about edie endings why does this matter why is this important the reason it's important is because it can be very confusing for non-native English speakers simply because there are three different pronunciations for edie ending words it can have a pronunciation like a T sound or a pronunciation like a D sound or an eID pronunciation those three you just need to know the rules and I'm gonna go over those rules with you today and you'll just start saying these words correctly because you'll know the rules and you've practice them again and again and again which is exactly what we're going to do today the first thing you need to be aware of is that the pronunciation that you use is going to be determined by the final consonant sound that comes before the ID that final consonant sound that comes before the e D that is going to determine whether you use the T or it once you know the final consonant sound you'll know which one to use don't worry we're gonna go over this in much greater detail it's also very very very important that you know the difference between voiceless and voiced sounds because in short if the final consonant sound is voiceless then the e D is going to have a sound that T sound if the final consonant sound is voiced then the e D is going to have to sound like that D sound and if the final consonant sound has that two or sound then you are going to pronounce the e D as it and you're going to add an extra syllable that it will be another syllable sorry I'm emphasizing these this too and did and it but but you you'll get the idea when we say these words you're going to hear them but only slightly not not as pronounced as I'm giving them to you right now first let's just start with the difference between voiceless and voiced sounds that's a good starting point now voiceless sound those are just sounds in which there is no vibration in the vocal cords voice sounds that means that there is a vibration in the vocal cords let's let's do an example and the way that you can tell if there's a vibration or not is just to take two of your fingers and put them right here put them on your vocal cords on your throat and you'll be able to feel that vibration so let's take two sounds the P sound and the B sound so the P sound that is voiceless and if you say that sound you are not going to feel a vibration the B sound that is a voiced sound when you say that sound you should feel a vibration but but but now let's say the sounds together and I want you to say them with me and and put your fingers there so that you can feel this vibration so you should feel that vibration when saying the B sound because it's voiced but there is no vibration with the P sound because it's voiceless so let's get into the rules when we're talking about voiceless sounds when that final consonant sound is voiceless then the IDI is going to be pronounced as alright that T sound when it's voiceless it's pronounced as two let's look at some voiceless sounds and as I say the words I want you to repeat after me so that you can prep as well and I'll try to emphasize that that edy sound a little bit so you can hear it more clearly so the first one is that P sound which we just practice hoped hoped we also have the F sound that is voiceless laughed laughed then there's the s sound that's kissed kissed danced danced fixed fixed notice the spelling because even though dance is spelled with a see that final consonant sound is still that's even with fixed it's spelled with an X but that final consonant sound X it still has that s sound fixed then there's the SH sound like washed washed and the Ch sound as in watched watched finally there is the Kuh sound like liked liked liked liked at the end of this lesson I will probably ask you if you liked the video so if the voiceless sounds have an e D with a 2 then the voiced sounds have an IDI with the so when you feel that vibration in your vocal chords then you know that e d should have a sound and this goes for all the other consonant sounds besides the ones that I just mentioned all the other consonant sounds are voiced so you are going to use a for the e d endings for example played played borrowed borrowed begged begged these sounds are going to have that sound that brings me to the final rule so if voiceless sounds have a 2 and voice sounds have a then you might be thinking well what if the final consonant sound has a sound in this case this when you will use the ED for an IDI ending and you're basically just going to add another syllable for example weighted it has that sound that's the final consonant sound to weighted blended blended has the dip as a final consonant sound so again we add that it and it becomes another syllable weighted blended weighted blended wanted ended it it it so now you know those rules that that's what you need to do you identify the final consonant sound and if it's voiceless you're gonna use the tip if it's voiced you're gonna use the dip and if it ends with a to order then that's when you'll use it a great question when thinking about IDI endings is what's the best way to practice that's that's a great question when it comes to practicing anything now if I just gave you a single individual word I think it should be a bit easy for you especially after going over those rules you should be able to look at the word and identify that final consonant sound so that you know whether you should use the or it for the IDI ending but let's just practice quickly I'm going to give you a word I want you to say the word out loud then I will say it and then even give you an example sentence so that you can hear how it's used in context are you ready let's begin called I called you yesterday needed I needed you yesterday where were you watched I watched all of the interactive English video lessons and that's what I called you about because I needed you to watch them with me that's a very modest example of using these IDI endings I think this probably was pretty easy for you I think you could identify that final consonant sound but I want to make it a little more challenging and this is where I think many learners make mistakes and that is just with with natural free-flowing conversations because when you're having a conversation you're not stopping to think about that final consonant sound and think well should I use it or it you're just going to say the word and just keep going with the conversation a great way to practice this is with reading now you can do this by just reading to yourself because you're saying the words in your head but I think a great way to practice is by reading out loud so that you're actually having to sound out each word and actually you can hear yourself saying these words so we are going to do that right now we are going to read a dialogue I am going to read A and I want you to read B however I don't want you just to read it I want you to speak out loud and actually practice your pronunciation and say these words because there are many many many IDI words in this dialogue are you ready I will say A and you will say B and we're just gonna go through this together we're gonna speak out loud let's begin you said you needed to talk to your boss about taking a vacation right well it rained hard yesterday maybe she worked from home you must be frustrated I wanted to take a vacation as well but I couldn't because my boss opened a new store great job I hope you said those IDI words correctly the goal is just to pretend like we're having a natural conversation and and not think too much about these IDI word endings but also save them correctly let's do it again and this time we're gonna switch I want you to read A and I am going to read B let's begin yeah I tried I waited for her after work but she never showed up true but the company changed its policy and I learned it's more difficult to take time off that's too bad I really enjoyed my last vacation and I had hoped I could take another before the year ended excellent well done well done I hope you enjoyed our dialogue I hope you were able to practice and try to just have a conversation and say those IDI endings correctly if you did if you participated in this lesson I want to know about it in the comments right the word speaking if you write that word just right speaking then I know that you were practicing your pronunciation that you were trying to improve your English skills that is what I want to see so write that in the comments if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button down below and be sure to check us out on patreon it's another great way to connect with us the link is in the description thank you so much for watching and I'll see you next time

How to Pronounce -ed Endings | Improve Your Pronunciation

hey all right hello and welcome good morning good afternoon or good evening good night I don't know whatever time of the day it is wherever you're at but today my name is Wes from interactive English and today I want to go over a fun pronunciation lesson with you about edie endings most specifically talking about verbs regular verbs that are ending with the e D so if you have any questions or comments write them in the chat and we will try to answer them alright so the first thing that you might be wondering is why the heck should I care about these two little letters well let me tell you the first reason is because well we you know we think you guys are really cool we want you to stay looking cool when you're speaking English and we don't want you to make these simple little mistakes where people are going to be like wait what what what did they just say and this is something that is applicable to all English learners whether you are a beginner learner an intermediate learner or an advanced learner this is when it comes to e d endings these are mistakes that I hear people make all the time and they're not like you know they're not like huge mistakes that look people are like well I just don't understand you it's more just small things that impede people's fluency and I know that people want to improve their pronunciation they might want to reduce their accent a little but the most important thing is that we communicate and communicate clearly and learning these edie endings and knowing how to use them and what the correct pronunciation is is just going to help you become a more capable and confident speaker and improve your overall fluency so again if you're just joining us right now please write any questions comments in the chat I'm going to go over a few different slides with you if you will I want to talk to you about the rules for edy endings because you know we must have rules and then I'm going to do show you some sentences we'll read those and then we're going to do it practice and you will need to engage and write your answers in the comments and then at the final at the end of the video or the end of the lesson I'm going to show you a couple of different ways that you can take what we've learned here today and continue practicing on your own so we're going to talk about the pronunciation of these IDI endings and because let's see let me go over again tell you give you an example of why this is important so for example I remember like like I said it's important for all students I remember teaching a level of advanced students and when you go over this information we would go over this information together and it you know talk about it practice it and everybody would do a really good job because we're focusing on the pronunciation the challenge is when you're just having a normal natural free-flowing conversation and you're not trying to think about the rules of pronunciation and you might make small mistakes so for example I remember speaking to somebody and they would say you know last night I walk it to the store and I understood what they were saying but again you kind of did that double take we're like wait a second did they just say walk it it's just mispronouncing that IDI ending which impedes fluency so let's get the ball rolling and begin again I know I'm going to reiterate if you're just joining us you know stick around we're talking about edie endings right any questions you have in the comments and if you guys haven't already and you're here and you found us please subscribe to our Channel and also a huge favor if you guys will you can share this video with your friends your family your boyfriend your girlfriend your grandparents you know who knows maybe they are your grandparents or on YouTube who knows so let's start out and talk about the rules of these edy endings okay so here we have a list of rules about how to determine and decide you know what type of edy ending you should use as well as the different sounds they should make so when you're talking about these regular verbs in the simple pass because they all end with Edie Edie Edie Edie you need to think about the final sound of the word more specifically the final consonant sound of the word forget about spelling it has nothing to do with spelling it's more about that final sound and that's going to help you determine the sound of the Edie alright is it going to have that T sound that to the D sound the DA or the ED sound the and if you're wondering again you can look right here to find all that information that I am talking about so it is all about the final sound of that word and then once you identify the final sound you'll know okay the Edie is going to have the T the D or the it'd so the first thing that we need to do is determine if that final sound is voiceless or if it's voiced now a lot of you some of you may be asking yourselves well what does it mean voiceless and voice and that is a good question so let's start and look at voiceless so voiceless means that there is no no vibration in the vocal cords and your vocal cords are right here okay that the sound is coming you know through your your vocal cords and then out your mouth and there is no vibration back and forth so one way to determine about whether there's a vibration or not is just to take you know your two fingers put them right here on your vocal cords and then if you're just talking maybe you're reading out loud saying anything you'll be able to feel a difference between some of the sounds you're making and the other sounds whether they're voiceless and you can't feel anything or they are voiced and you can feel that vibration so voiceless means there's no vibration some of the letters that that make this sound are the ones that I have again right there the letters P if you did that put plus sound you can put your fingers there and make the sound puh puh puh and you're not going to feel a vibration the letters K ku ku ku F s and X the six that sound those are all voiceless sounds that do not vibrate in your vocal cords so if you know that that is the final sound of the word and it is voiceless then that IDI is going to have the T sound okay the IDI is going to have the T sound so for example I gave you some words down there below as well as that beautiful lovely drawing right there showing that the sound is traveling up right through your mouth no vibration so looks look at like help alright the last sound the final sound is that P sound help so we know it's going to have the T and we can pronounce it helped helped alright I'm going to emphasize it a little and exaggerate it so you guys can hear helped the next one walk cook cook that K sound voiceless walked all right walked next one laugh that G H has the F sound again which is voiceless left left left and then the last one ooh kiss all right s voiceless kissed all right kissed so we know that these these verbs that I just show you helped walked laughed kissed they are all the final sound is voiceless so the IDI has that T sound all right so now again if you're just joining us or you're kind of tuning in hanging out you know we are working on voiced and voiceless sounds so if you have any questions write them in the chat and then we're going to do a practice so we just talked about voiceless sounds and that again has the T sound the IDI is going to have that T sound now if we're talking about voiced sounds right here it's basically it's just the opposite all right in the vocal chords right here you're going to feel that vibration with these sounds again look at that beautiful lovely picture that I put together down on the bottom there you can see the sound vibrating back and forth and this vibration in the vocal cords you can feel it if you put your fingers right here and we're going to look at those letters right here and make those sounds and you'll feel it so B is a voiced sound if you had buh-buh-buh g googa googa l so you can feel the difference if you have like the the L sound ooh you can feel that vibration and you compare it to the S which is voiceless whoo sounds a little crazy but you can really feel the difference these other letters n M those are also sounds that are voiced alright are V alright V and Z these are voice sounds which means if their voice then the e D is going to have the D sound okay so voiceless the T sound voiced the D sound so let's look at these examples so that first verb is you know rub rubbed all right B is the but it's voiced rubbed alright call called alright L is a voice sound so we use the D for the Edie called cleaned loved all right I'll say this again it rubbed called cleaned loved again we're talking about Edie sounds another thing that will help you guys practice if you want to turn this into another interactive activity you can just repeat the words that I'm saying so this becomes more shadowing you're listening to my pronunciation and then trying to say it exactly as I do all right rubbed called cleaned loved all right you should hear that D sound at the end of those regular verbs okay so we've talked about you know voiceless which has the T sound at the end and voiced which has the D sound okay there is one more sound that it can make alright and that is this one which is the it'd sound and this makes perfect sense as to why we have another final sound all right because when the final sound is a T or D it's going to have this eed sound all right and the reason is because we're already using that T and D sound for voiceless and voiced verbs all right so if we have we can't have two T sounds in a row so for example want ends with a T so the T sound so we're going to have it's going to have that it wanted we can't have the want to titta alright because T is a voiceless sound same with need its voice you can't have those 2d sounds in a row that needed it alright so that is why if it ends with a T or D sound it's going to have the it'd which is basically going to add one more syllable to the word and a syllable is just a unit of sound so all of these like want alright it's one syllable and we know this we can put our finger we want however many times your tin touches your hand that's a syllable that's a unit of sound so want Ted it adds an additional syllable that it wanted and this is actually a common thing this is where I would hear a lot of learners make a mistake they'll add an it to either a voiceless or voice sound when it's not needed and it's only necessary with the T or the D so we have these

you can hear that it it it it wanted needed blend though want it needed waited blend it ended all right all of those that did final sound because the verbs final sound is either a T or ad so we are just to review because we're talking about the IDI endings mostly with these are all simple past regular verbs we have the voiceless which is the T sound all right helped walked laughed kissed all right if the final sound is voiced where the IDI will have the D sound called cleaned loved and if the final sound ends with either T or D then it's going to have the ED sound wanted needed waited blended and did okay so those are the rules for determining the IDI pronunciation and I think they're pretty kind of straightforward it's really just knowing the difference between voiced and voiceless and we can use our vocal chords to decide that so let's look at some sentences because this is like I said before this is where I think a lot of learners have difficulty whereas we can do a practice and you're learning this and you know oh okay I understand the rules that makes sense it's fine I can listen for it and then I can say it the difficulty comes when you are actually again just having that normal conversation and you're not even thinking about pronunciation rules so I wanted to practice a little with these sentences so I have four sentences for you about that picture right here the beautiful sunset all right so these sentences are about the picture and I want you to look at the first one which is up there okay and there are three IDI words that I've highlighted in blue I want you to think about their ending and then I'm going to read the sentence and you can listen for it and then we'll kind of dissect each one and and talk about them a little bit so think about the final sound of those words after the rules that we just went over and think about the sounds alright and again if you're just joining us that's okay we're talking about edie endings and you can listen for that final sound it's either going to have a T sound a D sound or an eID sound okay so the first verbs alright I'll read the sentence so you can hear me we waited and watched as the Sun descended we waited and watched as the Sun descended so the first one wait it has that T sound so we know that it's going to the e D is going to be an it waited we waited and watched cha-cha-cha it's voice list so the e D is going to sound like a T watched we waited and watched as the Sun descended again the D is the final sound so it's going to have the it at the end descended all right we waited and watched as the Sun descended the next sentence what do you guys think all right there are three more words I want you to just think about the final sound and then you know what what is the you know what's the e D sound what sound is it going to make all right let me read it I'll read it for you then you can listen alright make sure you you've identified them correctly we marveled as it splashed into the ocean and then disappeared we marveled as it splashed into the ocean and then disappeared so the first word marvel little it's voiced the L sound so we use it D marveled we marveled as it splashed splashed that Shh is voiceless so we use the T sound we marveled as it splashed into the ocean and then disappeared disappeared with the D because R is the final sound and that is I can't hear you so yeah voiced it's a voice sound alright and then disappeared alright next sentence right here is where we are at we're talking about this sentence two words one of them is a verb the other is an adjective it's an e d adjective follows the same rules with adjectives there are a few exceptions which we will not get into right now but look at those words alright and think what is the ending alright listen to me say we enjoyed the

V and we were utterly amazed we enjoyed the view and we were utterly amazed so the first word enjoy and this is something that I didn't mention before oi oi is an actual it's a vowel sound so if the word ends in a vowel sound then we're going to Edie is going to have a D sound enjoyed we enjoyed the view and were utterly amazed the Z is voiced so it is the D sound we enjoyed the view and we were utterly amazed again if you guys have any questions just write them in the comments part of it alright and if you're just joining us welcome welcome we're going to do a practice here in a second with E D adjectives are adjectives herbs actually so let's look at the last sentence alright right here last sentence how would you say those two verbs alright how are you going to pronounce the e D alright the day ended and we traveled home okay and it ends with the D sound so we're going to have the it'd ended ended the day ended and we traveled l Lu is voiced we travelled home so again that's going to have the d traveled alright so that's a quick practice with those sentences and you know it's a good way to continue practicing to identify they not only identify the sounds but just keep practice saying them alright so before we do our practice I'm going to give you some words just to review it really depends on whether it's voiced or voiceless that final sound if it's voiceless it's going to have the T sound and remember we how do we determine that if there's vibration in the vocal cords no vibration it's voiceless and the T

it again a few times exercised yesterday we exercised and we went running alongside the river we exercised okay listen to that last sound alright is it TD or it exercised write them in the comments okay which sound do you hear exercised all right hopefully remember exercise even though it's spelled with an S it's the Z sound that it's voiced so because of that exercise you should have said D D is the answer all right exercised all right let's look at another one another one that we have for you right here let's see this word alright accepted what sound do you hear when I say this word accepted is that Edie does it have the T the D or the ED sound remember you want to identify the words final sound except what's the final sound it is a T so again if it's a T sound then the Edie accepted accepted will have that ed sound that is what you should write in the comments this is the answer accepted alright let's look at another one all right how about this word all right what is the final sound danced okay danced what is the final sound danced that you hear danced all right the Edie sound because again dance it ends at that S sound that's its voiceless so danced can you hear it it ends with this sound that T alright danced all right last night we danced all night you want and I danced at the club not true we watched a movie again with the T sound watched all right the next word let's go let's try this one how about hoped all right hoped what is the final sound you hear T D or it remember again the rules for this you have to think of the final sound don't worry about spelling don't you see that you know hoped all right it ends with the P sound which is voiceless so the P sound is voiceless which means you should in the comments write T hoped all right hoped again it'll help if you're you're somewhere and you want to practice just repeat the words after me hoped hoped all right it's going to help you remember this stuff next time you're speaking or reading and you'll start to you know become more proficient so next one all right I'm going to try and give you a more difficult one so look at this word all right what is the final sound tried tried remember I told you that try that I is the long I sound it's a vowel sound if it's a vowel sound alright the IDI is going to sound like tried alright tried whoops not the e the D alright tried alright this one this this regular verb in the simple past has the D sound at the end tried okay let's do another one how about um this word all right in the comments I want you to write is it TD or it visited visited in the comments right what is the final Esau visited do you hear that is the IDI do you hear the T sound the D sound or the it visited visited alright visited the final sound of the word is the T visit remember if it ends with the

T or D sound we're going to use the it so boom visit did okay hmm visit tid has that extra syllable at the end alright next one let's do this one okay we spurred whispered what is the final sound that you hear write it in the comments because we want you to make this interactive get some practice in there so this is good listening practice for you guys you want good speaking practice say the words after me say I'm out loud I don't care where you're at whispered whispered so again whisper or ends with the it's voiced so it's going to end whispered you should write D whispered alright the IDI has that D sound whispered heard whispered okay next one how about this one there we go switch it up don't let that Y fool you say the word alright say it without the e D and then that'll help you identify that final sound stay now how do you say it in the past does the e d have the t the D or the it'd write it in the comments stayed I'll say it stayed stayed stayed yesterday we stayed over at a friend's house we stayed it ends with a vowel sound that a that long a and remember that's a rule if it ends with that vowel sound it's going to have the e D is going to have the D sound stayed okay stayed next one let's do some more um next one I'm going to give you hmm so this word land alright you know if you're flying in an airplane room you're having a conversation you're using it in the past you're going to say this word landed mmm landed landed we landed at five o'clock we landed yesterday at five o'clock that's when our plane landed is it the t the D or the it don't be shy write them in the comments if you're just joining us we're doing a little practice right here with the e d the final II D sound I want you to write is do you hear that is that final sound is it a TD or it landed okay landed for this word you should write the it land did land ends with the D sound so we're going to add that it at the end land did landed our plane landed at five o'clock next one and this is like one I don't know why what it is about this one I commonly hear it mispronounced this is one this is a verb that people like to throw the wrong end on it walked all right walked it's not walk kid no no no no no no no no no walked all right we walked to the store we walked to the mall we walked downtown we walked to the movies what is the final sound you hear write it in the comments walked all right you should write final sound T sound walked all right walked walked walked you try saying it walked walked walked walked walked walked walked walked all right you're going to say that T sound at the end um let's do a few more how about

it's just that D sound at the end next um let's try this one alright worried worried I was worried about you what sound do you hear at the end write it in the comments I was worried about you I don't know why that just was okay worried you should write for this one worried whoops sorry the D sound at the end worried worried all right next one let's do one more and I'll give you guys some tips how about okay oh this one right here dropped all right I dropped the pen dropped what's the sound dropped all right do you hear the T the D or the it dropped okay you should write for this one the T sound dropped okay does that make sense so remember again there are three rules that you just need to remember and again if you're joining us a little late I'll go over those rules really quickly right now and then I want to tell you how you guys can do some self study on your own to continue practicing this so remember if the final sound we need to identify the final sound of the word if it's voiceless all right we're going to add the T dropped all right P is voiceless put put put dropped okay if it's a voice sound which means there is vibration in the vocal cords we're going to add a D sound okay call call the alright and then finally if the final sound is that T or D sound then we're going to add an eID to it you can look at those words again those are good examples and they're very common verbs wanted needed waited blended and did okay so those are the rules on and then you just need to internalize the information and what I mean by that is you really do need to practice on your own because that is going to help you alright you practice on your own and the more you do that the more you're listening to it the more you're saying it especially correctly you will internalize that information because the goal is to not think about these pronunciation rules the goal is just to speak and when you're having a conversation that you're pronouncing these words that end with Edie and you're using the correct pronunciation so the first way I would say that you guys could practice at home one easy way is just to listen to it alright and you could listen to a story whether it's a podcast in the simple past or even songs so for example here this website right here I kind of just did a google search and it says seven songs for teaching past simple it gives you the song alright even tells you some of the verbs that are in the past simple so this one expected alright closed and these are all pretty I think they're they're common songs I don't popular songs pop music not sure what you'd like to listen to but these are ways that you can continue to expose yourself to the correct pronunciation sing along with them here's a Katy Perry song planned all right this is another song wow this is pretty old from a while back torn but it has a lot of good ones you know showed all right adored changed crawled because when you're doing this you're just listening to it whether it's music whether it's TV whether it's movies it'll you're receiving the information all right and you're listening to it here's another song somebody that I used to know happened all right so this is one way that I would say that you guys can do it is just listening to a variety of things hopefully many of you already watching a lot of movies and English TV shows listening to music I think subtitles also help so again you can try to then identify those IDI words with the sounds that you're hearing and then once you start to internalize it practice practice practice you'll just start speaking correctly and saying the words correctly without even thinking about it another thing that you guys can do is okay reading all right read outloud this is a good way to practice actually speaking and trying to say these words correctly so I just did again google search for English paragraph simple past okay first one that came up here story is written in the past tense for ESL learners all right these are probably for some of you depending on your level they might be very basic stories but but that's okay because the idea the goal is to practice the simple past so what you can do is if you have a story such as this they've highlighted some of these verbs all right you can then look at the word think of the rule think of the pronunciation that you're going to reuse miss all right is voiceless so it's going to have the T sound missed all right and then just start reading I only missed the train by a few minutes I was annoyed if I had walked a bit further again now we're practicing the T sound and there's other stories down here below again some of these verbs are irregular but others are regular verbs in the simple past watched and this is just one source there's a bunch of different stories that you guys could probably find and come up with that is going to help you practice speaking when you read out loud then you are actually saying these words and you're saying them correctly so that when you're just having that informal conversation you're not thinking about pronunciation rules you're just speaking and because you've internalized all this information you're saying the words correctly so those are a couple different exercises and activities that you can do for self-study that will help you perfect this IDI pronunciation and again this is something that no matter what level you are that people tend to make sometimes very very very simple mistakes so even if you've already studied this even if all you've already learned these rules it's still good practice to review so that you don't make mistakes in the future so again if you have any questions thoughts ideas please write them in the comments and we will try to answer your questions if you haven't already subscribed to our channel you can also check us out on social media we're pretty active on Facebook Instagram Twitter and snapchat and thank you guys for for tuning in I really had

How to Pronounce 25 Famous Brand Names in English

Today we're going to talk about brands names and how to pronounce them. So, before we begin today's lesson, we'd like to remind you to subscribe to our channel for more video lessons on how you can practice and improve your English. So a while back we received a comment from somebody who asked I hope you guys can create a video that will teach us how to say some brands correctly. And that is exactly what we're going to do today. YAY! As always, we appreciate your feedback. And if you have any questions, we'll do our best to answer them. Hopefully with a video. So, what we're going to do today is we're going to go over 25 words.

25 brands that we're going to pronounce for you. But this pronunciation that we're doing is the American or English pronunciation of the brands. It's how native English speakers would say it. Keep in mind that a lot of these brands are not from English speaking countries. And that means that Americans like me will take the name and the pronunciation that it is intended to be and we will bastardize it and mispronounce it. And then it just becomes mainstream. It's important to note that even though we might not say the pronunciation the way it is intended to be said, people need to be able to understand and hear you and recognize what you're saying.

So that's why this is valuable. So we'll explain a little more as we go along. But right now, let's begin. Number 1 - IKEA I think that anybody who is not from Sweden possibly pronounces this wrong. Because in Sweden they say...if I... /Ikea/ Maybe I still might be mispronouncing it. But if you're in the US or Britain I think most people pronounce it IKEA and that's what they understand. IKEA Yea, get you some end tables and some of them five-dollar lamps, man. So if you were to say I'm going shopping today, I got this new stuff from... /Ikea/ People in America would be like... Where is that? Okay Number 2 - Nutella Correctly, it's Nutella and that's how I say it.

Because I love it and it's my favorite. But Americans like Wes will say... Nutella. It's similar, but... there's a little... Nutella is my favorite brand so far because of all the chocolate, of course. She even has a shirt. Number 3 - Coke Now this is perhaps one of the most famous brands in the world. And most of us, I think, know how to pronounce it. But make sure you are saying it with the long /o/ sound. Coke. We had a student a while back who pronounced it with the short /o/. And kept saying "Cock." Alright. That means something different. It is slang in English for... I remember he was telling us a story that he went out to a restaurant and the waitress asked him, "What would you like to drink?" And he said, "I would like some cock." And...it just...yea... In the end, he eventually did get his Coke.

So everything worked out and I'm pretty sure he's pronouncing it correctly now. This is...you know, it's a very innocent mistake. But... And this is how pronunciation can cause a lot of confusion among different people. Give me cock. Please give me cock. I want a cock. It's a... Coke. Number 4 - Tommy Hilfiger Because this is a name I think people may mispronounce the last... the last name. The first name I think is easy. Tommy. Everyone knows that. But Hilfiger might be a little more confusing. So that's how you pronounce it. Tommy Hilfiger.

Number 5 - Hyundai Or as I think a lot of Americans say /Hundye/ And this one, it's... Hyundai or Honda. Hyundai. This is a Korean brand. So again, it takes on a very different pronunciation. I'm not really sure why but That's just the way it is. Number 6 - Nike Now I've heard people say /nike/ before. They drop the /e/ which kind of makes sense if you think about it. It's what it looks like. It looks like. But it's not. It's actually Nike. From the old Greek goddess actually. Nike. And because it's an American company I guess this is the correct pronunciation. Looks like /nike/. But we say Nike. Number 7 - Adidas This is a German company.

And it's actually a portmanteau which is the combination of two words. So you have Adi, which is the nickname of Adolf and Das from Dassler. Adolf Dassler. Who is the person who started all of this. Adidas. So if you're looking for this shoe, it's Adidas. Number 8 - Sephora With this word just make sure you know that the PH makes an /f/ sound. Sephora. This is one of Ioana's favorite brands. Oh yea, I could live there.

Number 9 - Porsche So in the US, a lot of people either say Porsche or even shorten it and say Porsch. But apparently, the company even made a video as to how to pronounce this a while back. Porsche. Porsche. Porsche. Porsche. Porsche. Porsche.

I think in the US if you said you want to buy a Porsche, people would probably ask you what that is. So again, I think a lot of native English speakers would say Porsche or Porsch. We don't drive a Porsche. ...or a Porsch...or a Porsche.

Number 10 - Louis Vuitton And in French it's Louis Vuitton. I don't...I said it wrong. How is it? How does that go again? I don't know. Say it again. Vuitton. Okay. Louis Vuitton. But I would say Louis Vuitton. Because... But...I don't know French. American. I'm not French either so... Louis Vuitton. Anyway, it's Louis Vuitton. Yea. Many native English speakers would say Louis Vuitton. My very own Louis Vuitton.

Number 11 - Samsung It's a Korean company so I think the correct pronunciation technically would be Samsung. But a lot of people...native English speakers would say...pronounce it Sam and not Sam. So, they'd say Samsung. But if you did say Samsung, people will still know what you're talking about. What kind of phone do you have? I have a Samsung. What kind of phone do you have? I have an iPhone.

Number 12 - Versace Now, the correct pronunciation in Italian is Versace. But if you're talking to somebody who is a native English speaker and you want them to understand you, you'd say Versace. There you go. You got the /e/ at the end, Versace. Do you have a Versace? No. Too expensive. Number 13 is a car company and it is pronounced Chevrolet. I'm not really sure the history behind this word. The spelling is not necessarily like it sounds. Especially the T at the end. It's not pronounced, so we just say Chevrolet. Or a Chevy. Yea, or you could say Chevy for short. Not Chevrolet. In my broken down Chevrolet.

Number 14 - Stella Artois BEER! Or you could just... Yea, it's pretty good. You could just say Stella. But...I mean I think that's pretty close to the actual French pronunciation. Stella Artois. Yea, so Stella. Stella Artois. I'll have a Stella. So if you want a beer, it's a Stella Artois or a Stella. Stella Artois. Number 15 - Adobe So, this is a word that many of you might know from computers. And it's pronounced Adobe. So that first A is the schwa, that /uh/ sound. And the E at the end is the long /e/ sound. It's not /A/dobe. It's not /A/dobe. It's Adobe. Or Ado/bey/. Ado/bey/. Not /bey/, just Adobe. I can see people saying that. Please don't ignore me like I was just some update from Adobe.

Number 16 - Abercrombie & Fitch Now this is a really long name, so it's mispronounced many time. But that's the correct pronunciation. Actually, Wes I think says "Finch." But it's Abercrombie & Fitch. I used to but from now on... No more? The T is silent, so keep that in mind. In Fitch...Abercrombie & Fitch. Number 17 - Volkswagen This is a German car company so I think in German they would pronounce it Volkswagen. Is that pretty good? I think so. In the US, a lot of native English speakers would say Volkswagen. So you would hear that W sound in there. Volkswagen. Volkswagen. That's how they say it. What like the back of a Volkswagen? Volkswagen! Have you ever had one? No. I like the buggies...the old like...sixties.

Number 18 - Anthropologie Now, this is French sounding so I've heard people say Anthropologie. But it's Anthropologie. It's an American company. So it's Anthropologie. It just looks fancy. Do you shop there? No, it's so expensive. Like one thing is like $400. Number 19 - Huwawei This is a company from China. Whose pronunciation again... not like it sounds. I think a lot of people would say Huwawei. They would pronounce the H. Even though I think it might just be Huwawei. And I should probably know this because BOOM! I have a Huwawei. He's very proud of it. I am very proud of my Huwawei. Now let's see if they'll be able to pronounce it.

How would you pronounce this word? /How-wee/ /Hu-way/ /Hu-wi-wee/.../Hu-wi/ Yea this...this was okay...this was...it was... It...it does the job. Most of the time. Number 20 - Levi's This is actually another one of my favorite brands. Because they're classic jeans. And it just...they...fit really well. But it's not Levi or Levi Strauss. It's just Levi's. Girl you got to be right, killin' in your Levi's. High on your lovin's got me buzzin' like a streetlight.

Number 21 - for all you beer lover's out there - Budweiser. You can find it all over the world. But the correct pronunciation is Budweiser. Or I guess you could shorten and say Bud. Can I help you? Yes. I'd like a Budweiser please. Number 22 - H & M Now H & M is different in each country I think. So I know in Romania for example some people say H & M. Because... Do they? Yea. Yea. H & M in English, so if you want to find this store, and we all know we love H & M, because it's cheap and trendy. There you go. That's where you go. H & M. Just pronouncing the two letters as they are in the English alphabet. Yep. Number 23 - Jack Daniel's This is a whiskey brand.

So if you're out and you want to get some whiskey, it is pronounced Jack Daniel's. I know I've heard some people, depending on where they are, like... in East Asia...Daniel. But Daniel. Jack Daniel's. Or you could just say Jack. Yea, Jack and Coke. Jack and Coke. Or if you would like... Jack and Cock. No, you don't want to say Jack and Cock. Or if you'd like ice in the drink, you could say I'd like some Jack on the rocks. That's another expression for you. Ice...on the rocks. Two Jack Daniel's, one on the rocks, and a Heineken.

Now what we'd like you to do is write and tell us your favorite brand in the comments below. Tell us why you like it. How often you use it... Try to write as much as possible because that's another way of practicing your English. Also, we'd like you to share this video especially if you have heard others mispronounce any of these brands. Let's discuss and share. Thanks for watching, and we will see you next time. Bye!

How to Pronounce the R & L Sounds Like a Native Speaker

Let's get ready to rumble! Today, we're going to talk to you about how to make the R and L sounds. As well as practicing your listening and pronunciation. Welcome to our global classroom. Today, we have a pronunciation lesson for you. So please like the video if you enjoy learning about English pronunciation. Also, for additional practice you can join our social media classes, and there are links to them in the description below.

Now, I know a lot of learners have trouble with the R and L sounds. Keep in mind that I'll be going over the American pronunciation, and that's what we'll be talking about today. So let's start out by talking about how to make these sounds. But first, it would be useful if you did have a little mirror like this. And this is a helpful pronunciation tool when you want because you can look and see what's going on inside your mouth.

Now, if you don't have one, don't worry about it. That's okay. You are still going to be able to practice. Let's begin with the /r/ sound. In order to make this sound, we need to make sure that your tongue is in the right position. Number 1 - The tip of your tongue needs to be turned up. And it should not be touching the roof of your mouth. If your tongue is touching the roof of your mouth, then it's in the wrong position. So remember, the tongue is turned up, but not touching the roof of your mouth.

Number 2 - Your tongue needs to be in the back of your mouth. One way to do this is to smile when you're trying to make the sound because when you smile, it makes your tongue move slightly towards the back. So just smile when you make the sound. I know it looks crazy, but it helps. Number 3 - The sides of your tongue should be next to or in between your back teeth. So when you're making the sound, if you were to bite down slightly, you should be able to feel your teeth touching or hitting the sides of your tongue. Number 4 - The final way to check and make sure your tongue is in the right position is to breathe in. When you have your tongue in the position for the /r/ sound and you breathe in you should feel the air rushing over or along the top part of your mouth. Yeah, I feel it.

Let's practice with a few common words that have the /r/ sound. Now all of these words have the sound in the first or initial position. So I'm going to say the word and then all I want you to do is repeat. Excellent! You're doing great! Now, let's have a look at the /l/ sound. To make this sound, your tongue needs to be up against the back of your teeth.

Now the exact spot to put your tongue is on the bump or ridge that is behind your front teeth. I'd show you, but I'm not going to put the camera in my mouth. Number 2 - As you make the sound allow air to flow around your tongue and through your mouth. So as you're making the /l/ sound if you were to put your hand up to the front of your mouth, and make the sound. You should feel the warm air of your breath. It's hot. Number 3 - The final way to check and make sure your tongue is in the right position is to breathe in. When you breathe in, you should feel cool air along the sides of your tongue.

It's cool. Again, it helps if you have one of these mirrors so you can see what's going on. So let's practice saying some words with the /l/ sound in the first or initial position. Again, I will say the words and I just want you to repeat. Here we go! Hopefully, you have a better idea about how to make the R and L sounds. For more information about these two sounds as well as information about how to make any sound in American English, I'd recommend that you check out the University of Iowa's phonetic webpage. This is a great pronunciation resource. It shows you what's going on inside your mouth and gives you a great visual.

I will leave a link to the webpage in the description below. Okay, I think you're ready for some more practice with the R and L. What I'd like to practice first is your listening skills. And I want you to identify the sound that you hear. Is it the /r/ sound? Or is it the /l/ sound? And for this exercise, we're going to be using minimal pairs. These are two words that sound very similar except for one sound. So in this case, the different sound is going to be either the R or the L. Let me show you what I'm talking about. Here we have two words, and I want you to point to the word that you hear me say.

So, if say "Right," Then you will point here. I'll say each word twice, and then reveal the answer. So, let's get some new words up there. Okay. How did you do? For more practice, I'd recommend doing the exercise again and listening carefully to how I pronounce each word. Now that you've identified the sounds, let's practice your pronunciation. So for this next activity, I want to do an imitation exercise. So I'm going to say a sentence, and then I want you to repeat it exactly how I say it.

Let's begin! Great job saying those sentences! If you'd like more pronunciation practice, I'd recommend doing the activity again. And I will also put some more sentences in the description below that will help you practice the R and L sound. Please remember to subscribe to our channel if you'd like more lessons on how you can practice and improve your English skills. We'll see you next time!

How to Quickly & Effectively Build Your Vocabulary

all right so welcome welcome welcome if you are joining us in this live lesson or even if you are watching this in the future welcome we're glad to have you here we have an amazing incredible super fantastic trying to think of how many more adjectives I can use to describe this lesson we just have a really great lesson for you if you're joining us please write your name and tell us where you're from in the chat also like I said if you are watching this later again use the comment section write your name tell us where you're from we want to hear from you because we want you to interact this is interactive English and my name is Wes from interactive English awesome hello pearl from India excellent welcome and again we have a great lesson so let's just get right into it today we are going to talk about building vocabulary alright and how to build how to effectively build your vocabulary and do it quickly and this is something that I think many of us are working on we all would like to expand our vocabulary and improve our vocabulary because that just helps with fluency so again if you're just joining us in the chat write your name tell us where you're from Russia from Iraq welcome Brazil is here Frances here awesome excellent we're glad to have you Jordan living in Jordan and Mongolia we got people from everywhere that's awesome so as I said we are going to talk about how to effectively build your vocabulary and do this quickly all right and the reason I say quickly is not that you're going to do it faster but the key here is remember what you learn I think too often we learn new words and we learn 10 words and we forget six of them the next week so then really we've only learned four words but if we're able to remember everything that we are learning all of those words then that is going to help us build our vocabulary much quicker than most and the way we're gonna do this is right there we are going to learn phrases and not words okay I know we all study vocabulary we do it differently but today I want to focus on learning phrases and three things that you can do to effectively build your vocabulary so let's go ahead and take a look at different ways to enhance your vocabulary so if you are in the chat right now what I want you to do is tell me a vocabulary word or a phrase that you have recently learned okay I want you to tell me one that you've recently learned because if you're here if you're with us that means that you are studying English you are trying to improve your

English so I imagine that within the last week or within the last month you've learned some new word or phrase so write it in the chat let us know again if you're watching this later write it in the comment section tell us what word or words you have learned recently so here first before we talk about how to enhance our vocabulary we need to really understand well what is vocabulary vocabulary is all of the words that are known and used in a particular language I think one of the things that is difficult is that when we think of vocabulary I think a lot of times we think of just these single individual words and I think that makes sense why people think that way because when you learn a new word most of the times we go to the dictionary we want to know what that word means and it's a vocabulary word but vocabulary is not just a single word it is a collection of all the words so again in the chat hi new people are joining us right a word that you have learned recently what's a new vocabulary word or what's a new phrase or expression something that you've learned yesterday we have somebody yesterday I heard the new phrase take part take something apart yeah to disassemble something to take something apart excellent thank you Russia again right some other words in there what are some new things that you're learning I think again other people would like to know the new vocabulary that people are learning so the ways that we are going to enhance our vocabulary your vocabulary today how we're going to handset and you are going to learn new words and you are going to learn them quickly I want to talk about three things and they're right here in front of you collocation z' expressions and then this idea which I want to tell you about is called chunking and this is more of a way of studying vocabulary that I think will help you in the future especially if you are at an intermediate to advanced level this will be very useful in other words somebody wrote repercussion excellent awesome so we are learning all these new words and I want to start with collocation okay and I want to talk to you about that this is something that I think is becoming more popular in language learning okay so collocations are words that are frequently used together and I think people are using this more often in the classroom or studying a language because again it makes sense if words are frequently used together why would you just want to learn one individual word why not learn the words that usually go are frequently used with take and there's a whole bunch of them it's not just these I've just chosen three as an example so if you could think of any other collocation z' with take just write them in the chat let's see how many that we can come up with what are other things that people take and how do we use that verb let's look at half okay again you can have fun you can have breakfast you can have lunch you can have dinner you can also have a drink so the reason this is important is because nowadays instead of just teaching people one word of o Cabul a word like breakfast it's more important it's more helpful to teach the teach learners the words that go with that okay you have breakfast so that you're building your vocabulary you're learning two words instead of just one and they're associating breakfast with the verb have okay what did you have for breakfast all right other ones that we use make okay you can make a mistake you can make some noise you can also make a wish all right and do what are some things that you do you can do homework you can do business you can even do nothing or you could do your laundry all right there's a lot of different things that you can use with do so again if you have any if you can think of any right now just write them in the chat what are some things more things that you take what are some things that you have what are some things that you make and do and again if you're watching this later on write it in the comments we want you to be active active in our community in our classroom so please the more you write the better it's going to help you so okay we got an example tomorrow we will have a meeting please take note it exactly you can also have a meeting collocation or very important could also say get some rest excellent perfect great examples that you guys are giving so these are important because these are words that we use together and we use regularly we use them frequently all right so they are very useful when we're talking about building your vocabulary expanding your vocabulary and if you want you know collocations if you want to learn more about them just go into go to google and type collocation z' into the search English collocation z' and you will find a bunch of different webpages that list a lot of common ones in English and these are one good ones to study they're good ones to make flashcards out of again if you're just joining us we are talking about ways to improve and build your vocabulary and do it quickly so you can say hi say what's up in the chat and where you're joining us from let's look at the next one that I want to talk to you about which is OK expressions this is another good way to build your vocabulary alright so in the chat again I'm going to give you guys a little assignment with each one I want you to write what is your favorite English expression and an expression could be many different things it could be a saying it could be a proverb it could be an idiom those are all different types of expressions because what are we doing with expressions well we are expressing our thoughts and our opinions about something we are making them known so common expressions what your favorite expression somebody wrote what's up exactly that is one of my favorite expressions the way to say hello what's up everyone what's up if you're joining us in today the lesson right now write your name tell us where you're from in the chat so let's look at some of these expressions okay and again if you learn these expressions without focusing on the individual words it's going to help you with your fluency so again let's look at the first one it is just a saying When in Rome the the entire saying goes when in Rome do as the Romans do and this just basically means that if you are traveling somewhere for example if anybody some of you may be I think somebody's from Brazil all right if I go to Brazil all right then I should kind of try to do what other people in Brazil do I should eat at the same time that those people are eating I should eat the same things I should use the same form of Transportation okay you kind of try to do this not only to be polite but also to learn about different cultures so again I know one of you mentioned you're from Mongolia so if I go to Mongolia again I should learn about how people live and what they do and I should do this and if somebody asks like well why are you doing this yeah When in Rome you know When in Rome you need to do things the way that you should and this is a popular expression somebody's joining it excellent from I can't even pronounce that it kha'zix is that Calle Kazakhstan excellent awesome so my favorite idiom is struggle to get what you really deserve excellent awesome make sure take care you guys are writing some great examples of different idioms that people use so when in Rome is a popular saying the next one we're running late that's an idiom again I think many of you are studying idioms you're learning idioms because we use this in everyday English I think idioms are mostly important not really that you feeling like oh I need to use them it's more for your comprehension so if you're watching TV or movies or listening to a conversation then you understand what people are talking about the Rees I chose this one we're running late is because we posted on Facebook and Instagram and Twitter a question using this idiom about we're running late and mostly everybody didn't know it they got it incorrect so when if you're running late it means that you are running behind schedule so we were supposed to meet our friends at 7 o'clock but we were really going to get there at 7:30 so we were running late a lot of people in our question they thought it was getting late that just means it's getting later and the day the time this where there's smoke there's fire it basically means that if there is a issue a problem but the problem is kind of concealed it's hidden but you know it's there you could kind of say hey I see the smoke alright and if I see the smoke then there's probably a fire there there's probably a major problem that is taking place another one of mine another favorite one of mine is think outside the box you can see the picture there think outside the box means to be more creative to try to think in a new way and do different things to think outside the box this is a good expression that you can use and again you don't want to you don't want to just learn one word you want to learn the whole sentence the whole phrase the whole idiom the entire expression so that you can use this and not only that you will remember it we have somebody else mentioned another favorite clue love yourself first then everything will kind of everything is taking its correct place exactly everything will fall into place there are so many good idioms phrases expressions proverbs that are going to help you learn context and nuance and learn more about the culture as well so expressions are very very very I'm gonna add one more very important the last thing that I want to show you right now is this idea about how you can learn these vocabulary words how you can learn them and a good approach to do that and it is called chunking so here we have our next slide so what is chunking all right chunking is when you learn groups of words as one unit so you are taking a group of words and you are learning okay what does this group of words mean and then how can I use it with other words it's kind of similar to collocation z' all right we're collocations you're looking at words that are frequently used together this is kind of just expanding on that so look at the example look at the example that I have for you right here okay if you have a moment I was wondering if you'd like to grab some coffee if you have a moment I was wondering if you'd like to grab some coffee okay so some of you may be able to read that now okay I know what that means if I have time available this person wants to know if we can go get coffee okay instead of looking at this and trying to think of all right where what what are these exact words let's look at moment and look it up and find out that a moment means okay a short period of time instead of just looking for that one word we can look at the entire a phrase a unit of words for example I have if you have a moment so we can learn all of that together and know that okay when we're when we want to ask somebody do you have some time do you have a little time we could say if you have a moment all right if you have a moment could you help me with my homework if you have a moment I'd like you to go to a movie with me if you have a moment you know asking somebody do you have some time available all right and learning that one set because once you learn if you have a moment there are so many ways to complete that sentence if you have a moment then we can break the next chunk so that is one chunk if you have a moment now let's take the next chunk I was wondering all right I was wondering a great example if you have a moment can we catch up yes perfect all right I was wondering it means that you were thinking about something that you wanted to know all right this is often a polite way of asking a question if you want to be a little more polite like you know I was wondering could we go out for dinner tonight yeah wondering what was your plan for tomorrow alright I was wondering is a way of saying you know I was thinking about something and you're asking so again we can know we know that phrase if we know that phrase as one unit I was wondering we can then add a lot more onto it so instead of just won't learning one of the words we can learn the entire phrase as a unit and then we can add to it and this is what chunking is and if you you've seen it probably in phrase books so if you travel abroad they sell these books that you can learn quick phrases and that's typically what they do is use chunking they give you the first part of the phrase and then you need to learn the words that you can complete the phrase so for example if you're out at a restaurant you always would say hey I would like I would like Mvula I would like a drink I would like the steak I would like a hamburger okay but you learned that one phrase I would like then you can learn a lot you could there's so much more that you can add to it and then the last one in my example I said again like to grab some all right this means to grab some means that you want to go get something and usually that's something is a drink or some food all right would you like to grab some coffee would you like to grab something to eat all right if you want to grab something it's talking about this is a this is an idiom that you're talking about you want to get something okay so we can chunk these sentences we can take these long sentences and break them into different units and then we can add to that so this is the idea of chunking and it is a great way to study new vocabulary a great way to learn new sentences because if you learn a sentence you can take parts of it and then use that for other things so if you've joined us a little late we were talking about ways to enhance your vocabulary so to review again the ways that we discussed in this lesson that you should try to study in the future and use if you want to build your vocabulary effectively and quickly you can use collocations again this is a lot of words that we frequently use together with verbs like I said you can take a shower you can take a bath you can take a meeting expressions which would include idioms or proverbs or any sayings and then this idea the way that you can study these words is with chunking where you are not trying to learn too much at one time you are taking these individual units and you are learning those and then you can add to that as you go along so these are all very useful and effective ways to build and expand your vocabulary so the last thing I want to do is to thank you guys for watching and joining us we have some great comments like yeah I'd like to grab some ice cream yeah I'd like to grab some ice cream too it's hot here it's summertime I'm sure everybody would like to grab some ice cream excellent great use of that expression all right so thank you guys for joining us again please like and share the video if you feel like you've learned something new if you enjoy learning new vocabulary the other thing I want you to do is if you have any questions write them in the comments the video will be published soon or if you're watching this later at a later date write your questions in the comments we like to interact with you we like to hear what questions you have and this is this is very important I think for for interaction the other thing you can join our social media class on Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat we are posting new questions every day I saw one question that somebody had Romania asking about hey Marco what's up some vocabulary books out there honestly I feel like probably one of the best of resources for vocabulary at this point would be the internet because I don't know if you need to spend money on an actual vocabulary book I think a book that would tell you tips and ideas like what we're talking about today how to study vocabulary I think that would be useful but as for actually learning vocabulary I would just use resources online like I said you can go into Google right now and type in English idioms and you're gonna have a lot of different sites come up that you could then make flashcards and write those down you could type in English proverbs and it's going to give you a list of proverbs and what they mean you could also go to collocation English collocations and it will tell you a lot of different collocation z' that you should probably focus on and can study and also one thing that I wanted to mention go use the images if you go type in this and you go to images it's much better I think because it's going to give you color it's going to break it down it's easier to read it's more fun too so that would be my recommendation if you're trying to study and learn more vocabulary use the free resource which is the internet and and just type that stuff into Google so again thank you guys for joining us if you join a little late sorry we're gonna publish the video soon again please like and share help us spread the word all across the world we love interacting with you guys and we appreciate you being here with us thank you very much I hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and if you're watching this later I hope you have a wonderful day thank you thank you thank you and we will see you next time

How to Read New Vocabulary & Understand the Meaning

so in this lesson i want to talk to you about how you can use reading to build your vocabulary and build your vocabulary effectively that's coming up [Music] hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel that is just all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills so that you can reach your fluency goals and today i want to talk to you about well two very important things and that is reading and vocabulary and in this case it's kind of like one hand washes the other because what i want to talk to you about is telling you how you can use reading to build your vocabulary because to be perfectly honest i think reading is possibly one of the best ways that a learner can build their vocabulary learn new words and not only that remember the meaning of these words so i want to teach you how you can effectively use reading to build your vocabulary so i i think if you really consider what's going on it makes perfect sense that you can use reading to learn new words and phrases because well when you're reading you're just constantly looking at words and i think no matter what it is that you are reading if you are reading a newspaper or you're reading something online or you're reading a book i think it's very common that people are going to find words and phrases that they either don't know or maybe you're a little bit familiar with the meaning but maybe you've forgotten it so it's something you've seen before and you maybe just don't remember exactly what it means so when you find or come across a word that well you've never seen before or maybe you kind of know it i want to talk to you about what you need to do in order to understand the meaning as well as learn the meaning so that the next time you're reading and you come across that same word or phrase you feel comfortable you know what it means and you can just continue reading so let's begin with that idea which is when you're reading and you come across a new vocabulary word how do you understand the meaning and i want you to do three very simple things the first one is just well find a new word or phrase some word or phrase that you just don't know the next thing i want you to do is look for context clues and then the third thing very simple you're going to use those context clues to guess the meaning and if you don't know what context clues are they are hints that the author may give you to help you better understand an unknown or unusual word or phrase now these hints these context clues may be in the same sentence as the unknown vocabulary word or these clues may come in the sentence before or in the sentence after you may need to reread the sentence before the sentence after because that's going to help you better understand the situation it's going to help you better understand the context and when you understand the context then you can you can make a an appropriate guess as to what the meaning of this vocabulary word is

let's practice let me give you some examples and i'm going to show you a sentence with an unknown word and i want you to look for some context clues and look for these clues to help you make a guess and educated guess about what the meaning of the unknown word is so let's look at the first one he tried to catch his breath for a moment before attempting the arduous climb up the peak of the mountain so let's just say that arduous is a word that you you don't know you're not familiar with this word and you don't know what it means but you can use some context clues to help you to help you take a guess as to what the meaning is so do you see any context clues in there i i see two of them the first one that i would say is that you're somebody's trying to catch their breath and what that means is somebody's breathing heavily and they're probably breathing heavily they're trying to catch their breath because they've been climbing up a steep mountain which makes me think that this is okay this is challenging and then they're getting ready to go up the peak of the mountain they're going to climb the peak of the mountain which is the very top so probably it's not going to get any easier when you go up to the top of the mountain so i can use these context clues to to take a guess that the meaning of arduous is something that's difficult so you're saying that the climb up the mountain is a difficult one it's challenging it's arduous here's another example i'm always so busy with work taking care of the kids and running errands throughout the day whenever i have some down time i just like to relax with a good book so perhaps you don't know what the word downtime means and this is more of an informal expression but you can use some context clues to help you determine the meaning so there is a context clue in the sentence before and i would say that context clue is so busy somebody is talking about all these things that they have to do during the day work taking care of the kids running errands and then there's another context clue after the word which is relax it's talking about the way that this person relax so in that case since you understand the context you can guess that downtime is talking about a time when someone just relaxes and they are not active and not really trying to do much of anything and i think we all we all need to get a little downtime every now and then it's good in my down time i kind of like to just watch well maybe some tv i watch some shows on netflix that's what i do in my downtime and let's do one more okay and i could say the woman was flabbergasted how did her bed end up in the pool in this case perhaps you don't know what flabbergasted means so you can use some context clues to help you to help you understand the meaning and take a guess so the context clue would be her bed is in the pool all right so i want you to put that picture in your mind and picture that a bed is in the pool and you're probably thinking well that's a little strange that's not normal i would be very surprised if i found my bed in the pool so i can guess that the word flabbergasted means surprise somebody is surprised they're flabbergasted by something they see or perhaps by something that a person says now that we you've just read those sentences we've talked about the context clues and you now know the meaning of arduous downtime and flabbergasted hopefully the next time that you come across one of those words you you will remember the meaning and you have a better understanding because chances are the more that you read you will come across the same word again and again and that is a good thing repetition is your friend the more the more you get exposed to a word or phrase the more times that you see it the more likely you are to remember the meaning and that's what i want to talk to you about now is how can you effectively learn the meaning of these words so that the next time you you read them you just know the meaning and you can continue on reading my first suggestion is to start a vocabulary list you can use a notebook or you can use uh your computer you can use a document and when you come across a new vocabulary word write it down on your list and then write down the meaning as well because it's always good to review if you want to effectively build your vocabulary repetition is your friend the more that you are exposed to a word the more likely you are to remember the meaning so so start a vocabulary list that is going to help you remember all the new words and phrases that you find when you're reading the next suggestion that i have for you is to read books read stories and the reason why i would tell you to read stories is because you are more likely to come across the same word again and again throughout the story let me give you a couple examples uh before i read the harry potter series i had an english learner ask me they said what what does it mean if someone is non-plussed and this is an adjective that means somebody is well they're surprised they're confused they're unsure how to react and the reason why they were asking me this is because they they kept coming across that word throughout the story then a couple of years go by and i end up reading the harry potter series i read all the books and and yes i noticed that i noticed every time that jk rowling used the word none plus that is a good example of finding a word that you don't know you could write that in your vocabulary list but then as you continue reading the story you come across it again and again and again and as i told you repetition is your friend and by the end of the harry potter series i guarantee you are going to remember what it means if someone is nonplussed another example would be well in my own experience learning spanish because when i was learning spanish i was constantly reading because i was using it to build my vocabulary and one of the stories that i read was by isabel allende who is a famous author from chile and she wrote these stories for kind of teenagers and young adults but one of the stories um called city of the beast la ciudad de las vegas it was about it took place in the amazon rainforest and as i started the story i came across the word cascada and i at first i wasn't sure i had never seen this word before because when i was studying or taking classes it just never came up so i i put the word in context and i kind of guessed that okay it had something to do with water and based on the situation i guess that it was a waterfall i came across the word again and this time i did i looked it up because i wanted to make sure that my guess was correct and yes cascada means waterfall and then i continued reading and because the story takes place in the amazon rainforest i kept reading this word again and again and again and she used it throughout the story but by the end i had read this word so many times i i was very familiar with it it was i was comfortable with it and i was then able to put this word in my active memory and then over even a longer period of time i put it in my long-term memory so that whenever i'm reading and i come across this word i i just easily understand it or even when i hear it in conversation i know the meaning of this word so i hope that i have encouraged you to read more in english and use reading in order to build your vocabulary and let's let's put this into practice right now if you feel like sharing in the comments below let me know of a word that you have learned when you were reading i always love to hear from you guys sharing is caring let me know when you have used reading to build your vocabulary if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and i'll see you next time

How to Say Useful and Difficult Numbers in English

today I am going to talk to you about how to say difficult numbers in English [Music] welcome to today's lesson my name is West this is Interactive English which is the place that you want to be to practice and improve your English skills so in today's lesson I'm gonna talk to you about difficult numbers but I'm actually gonna talk about how to say these difficult numbers so if anything this this is more of a speaking lessons because it's speaking and using numbers so we're gonna look about a variety of different numbers and we are going to look at how to say these numbers how can you speak these numbers when you're having a conversation or if you're giving a presentation how should you say these numbers in English and when we do this I'm actually I actually want you guys to practice with me I'm going to ask you to participate and practice and actually try to say these numbers out loud but before we do that I want to hear from you guys so tell me your name in the chat if you're watching this later write your name tell me where you're from we just want to hear from you guys so Bassam Kiara Maureen Perri go see a junior bene Mildred welcome thank you guys for joining me today I hope your guys I hope you're ready to practice because like I said we're not only gonna look at the these different numbers but I actually want you guys to speak I want you to try to say these numbers and you know what they say practice makes perfect so before we start jumping into the numbers let's look at the types of numbers because there are two types of numbers that we need to be familiar with and those numbers are cardinal numbers and ordinal numbers now cardinal numbers which I think just about it many of you are familiar with are those are natural numbers used to to measure size maybe distance and they are they are so common and we use them all the time one two three four five six seven eight nine ten we use cardinal numbers regularly ordinal numbers are it we use them to tell us the the position of something in in order or in a list so something in order we use ordinal numbers now we did a lesson before on ordinal numbers which I will link for you down in the description and I will also put it up above and I highly recommend you check that out that whole lesson is about ordinal numbers so when we're talking about ordinal numbers we're talking about 1st 2nd 3rd 4th 5th 6th 7th 8th 9th 10th so those are the two types of numbers that we're gonna be dealing with today cardinal numbers and or no numbers now let's start out let's start out a little easy and first we're going to look at dates day and month so when we're talking about dates we use ordinal numbers we use ordinal numbers to say the date so for example I have that calendar right there we do not say march 21 in English you're going to use an ordinal number so we say March 21st that's very common in American English and in British English I think it's common to say 21st of March now I'm just giving you this as an example it's not a steady steadfast rule in American English people commonly say the month and then the ordinal number you might hear it the other way around again depending on the context it depends on the conversation but in American English it's a little more common to say March 21st March 22nd March 23rd March 24th and I think in British English it's slightly more common to say the ordinal number first of and then the month 21st of March 22nd of March 23rd of March 24th of March many people always some of the differences between British and American English this is just a slight difference but again you could use either one and people are going to understand you as long as you use the ordinal number now if we're talking about years this is it gets a little more tricky then because so many times when I've been teaching students and we're talking about something or even if they're if reading or discussing something and people get two a year you can always tell sometimes there's this quite there's this quick pause about oh wait wait wait how do I say this again how do I say this correctly so just to tell you to kind of talk about this if it's a three digit year all right there's two different ways you can say this you can say the first as a single digit and then the next two digits so in my example 786 we'd say the year 786 and I put an asterisk by this number because I think that's a little more common you say a single digit and then the next two digits I think that's a little more common the way of expressing a three-digit year but you can also say it as a whole number 912 you could say it as a whole number and that's absolutely fine so there's two different ways to say a three-digit number now if we're talking about a four digit year which i think is you know very common look right here we save them by two digits so the first two digits we say together and the second two digits we say together 1492 again I put an asterisk there because I think that's that's the most common way of saying this and right here 2012 now there are first hundred years of a new millennia you can you would use the whole number now if we get to down here so this is gonna go all the way up to 2099 and after two thousand ninety nine we get to 2100 and when we're talking about new centuries it's usually said the the whole number of hundreds so twenty one hundred and that sign of down here like we have 1700 we save the hundreds for new centuries 1819 hundred twenty two thousand because that's the new millennia and then we go to twenty one hundred and then after that we would go again back to the two digits 21:01 21:02 21:03 21:04 now you might be wondering Wes why are we talking about some of this because honestly twenty the year 2100 you know I can do the math I'm probably not going to make it to that year because it's it's it's still it's still 72 years away it's a long way off but again it's always good to know how to express these numbers especially in the past because we often talk about history and we talk about dates and it's important to know how to say these so again definitely keep in mind those first two with the asterisks right there if it's a four-digit year again two-digit two-digit 1492 now what I want to do we are now going to practice okay so I am going to give you some dates in some years and I want you to actually say these out loud if you want you can say them in your mind it's perfectly fine but I will give you a moment you can say the number and then I will say it and you can listen and and see if it's the same okay so let's practice saying some of these ready number one I want you look at number one how would you say number one okay how would you say this say it out loud all right most of us maybe maybe you're at home doesn't matter where you are just you can whisper it if you don't want people to hear you even if you're watching this later practice saying these numbers out loud that's the best way so number one July fourteenth two thousand eighteen again July 14th the ordinal number two thousand eighteen we'd say it as a whole number you could also if you want you could say July 14 2018 but I don't think that's his comment to say 2018 most of the time within that first hundred years of a new millennia we're trying to say the whole number July 14 2018 now number two how would you say number two all right I would say March 20th 1800 March 20th 1800 remember new centuries its wits of hundreds 1800 1900 all right 2100 2200 number three how would you say number three okay all right November 12 1978 November 12 1978 this is an amazing day in history okay this is in case you're wondering this is when I was born this is my birthday if you want to know how old I am you guys can do the math now number four how would you say number four okay go for it January 1st 999 January 1st 999 you could also say January 1st 999 and say it as a whole number that's okay as well January 1st 999 January 1st 999 okay so if you were actually speaking all right

I want you to write in the chat just write dates okay write dates and that way I know you speaking and actually practicing and participating in these lessons and even if you're watching this later in the comment right dates so I know that you guys are you're following along and participating in these lessons now I'm not going to get so much into time because we did a whole other lesson talking about time expressions which I think you guys should definitely check out if you haven't already seen it I will link it up here as well as put it in the description so we're not going to discuss too much with time now let's look at decimals okay so if we're talking about decimals and you see this a lot if you're you're discussing math something like that and you would say the numbers individually as cardinal numbers and the decimal point is just called point we just say point so first one four point eight using those cardinal numbers four point eight the next one 2.0 now this is a little different because you could also say two point zero but when you're talking about decimals if you have a zero you could also say oh that's actually very common I actually use Oh probably more than I say zero but that's just me so you could say 2.0 a lot of times when you hear versions or updates people will talk about oh this version 2.0 3.0 4.0 and they keep updating it so 2.0 the next one right here five point six five and then three point one one one we're just using those cardinal numbers that's for decimals if we're talking about fractions okay we're going to use cardinal numbers for the numerator which is where that X is up top and ordinal numbers for the denominator so cardinal numbers for the numerator and/or no ordinal numbers for the denominator all right so for that first one look at that one I could say one third or again if there's a one in the then I could just say a third remember the the three in since that's the denominator an ordinal number one third or a third now if we're talking about there there is not a one in the numerator three-fifths the the ordinal number it needs to be plural because there's more than one in the numerator three-fifths now down here a fourth or you could set one fourth or you could say a fourth you could also say $\frac{1}{4}$ $\frac{1}{4}$ $\frac{1}{4}$ for $\frac{1}{4}$ and right here down here again this is very common you could say $\frac{1}{2}$ you could say $\frac{1}{2}$ or you could just say $\frac{1}{2}$ and if it is more than if there's more than 1 in the numerator for example maybe it's 3 over 2 then we'd say three-halves because it would need to be plural so again let's practice speaking and actually saying some of these so let's practice speaking some decimals and fractions okay I'll give you a chance to say it and then I will say it and you can see if you did it right all right so number one how would you say number one say it out loud okay number one 4/5 4/5 remember there should be that S on the end because it is plural that or no number 4/5 number two how would you say it six point oh seven six point oh seven you could also say six point zero seven that's fine but I would tend to say six point oh seven number three all right say number three one eighth one eighth you could say an eighth if you want to just say it without the one one eighth or an eighth number four how would you say number four okay nine point eight four five seven we're just listing the cardinal numbers nine point eight four five seven and the last one number five how would you say five there's a there's there's different ways you could say it you could say three-fourths all right if it is again it needs to be plural three-fourths or you could say three-quarters again 3/4 3/4 all right if you got all of those correct all right I want you to hit that like button alright or write in the comments right like alright so I know that you got all of those right you were speaking and you were saying those numbers okay right write that in the chat the comments just say like alright so now I want to take a look at this is gonna be a little more fun I want to take a look at some confusing numbers and this is more of a pronunciation exercise so before we jump in Oh excellent I see you Farhat nods Maya bassam Ogden excellent thank you guys for participating in the lesson so confusing numbers it's more I think has to do with pronunciation because saying the numbers but often when you're talking about these cardinal numbers and people are saying them if they're talking about in amount or they're talking about a time they can get a little confusing so I want to look at some of these and we're gonna practice them as well I got a fun practice for you guys so the first one it's mostly dealing with actually teens and the tens of numbers so for example thirteen thirty thirteen thirty now one thing to listen for if these numbers might be confusing for you is in the thirty all right especially in American English we tend to use that flap T which sounds more like a D sound like a soft D sound so I'd say thirteen thirty all right I'm kind of emphasizing that so you can hear it a little better thirteen thirty same with the next one four forty fourteen forty fifteen fifty all right this one you don't hear that flap T really at all in fifty so you really need to listen for that in that long e sound fifteen fifty fifteen fifty and the last one 1990 1990 but when people are speaking I you know notice that I'm really emphasizing these numbers but when people are speaking especially maybe you're on the phone and somebody's throwing out these numbers and you can't hear them really well it's it's it can be confusing and trying to figure out wait a second did they say 19 or did they say 90 so we're gonna practice some of these right now and the way we're going to do this is I am going to say one of the numbers alright you are either going to move this way or you're going to move that way and then I will say another one and you will move again this way that way and then I'll say another one and ultimately you are going to end up in a city and then I want you to write down which city that you ended up in so let's look at the board this will make a little more sense okay so here you see different numbers 1330 so I'm gonna say the the red one I'm gonna say start with red and you're either going to move this way or you're gonna move that way depending on what you hear and then we'll be at the blue and I'll say another number and then also you're gonna move this way or this way and then down here at the green alright so I'm gonna say one number red and then a blue and then a green and each time you're gonna move to the left or the right and at the end you can see down here a list of cities you're gonna end up in a city and then I want you to write down which city did you end up in because you're supposed to just this is a listening exercise listen to which number I'm saying and then see where you ended up so for example if I if I say 30 and the next one 30 and then again I say 30 you're gonna be moving this a each time 30 30 30 and we'll end up in Cairo so that's where we'd end up and I wouldn't mind that because I really want to go to Egypt so are you ready here we go all right so we're we'll start really slow and then we'll go I'll get a little quicker so the first one all right red all right 13 13 now blue 30 30 now green 30 30 I'll say those again 13 30 30 right where which city where did you guys end up write that in the chat 13 30 30 okay what what do you which what are you guys hearing okay I'll say it one more time starting with the red 13 and then blue 30 green 30 which city did you guys end up in I see some different ones New York City but most of us it's Bangkok exactly if you ended up in Bangkok you are in the right place we're all there together I said 13 30 30 you should have ended up in Bangkok all right let's do it again ready um now let's do we're gonna start with the red 30 blue 13 green 13 all right thirty thirteen thirteen thirty 13 13 where did you guys end up all right 1330 no sorry 30 13 13 all right what you should have

where the place you should have ended up in is London all right I see many of you there with me yes 30 13 13 okay now that you know how to play this we're gonna do another one but this time I'm gonna say the three numbers and I'm gonna say them quickly all right I'm just gonna say them the three numbers quickly and you're gonna need to move to the left or the right except this time we're using either nineteen or we're using ninety okay so I'm just gonna say the three numbers consecutively listen and then tell me where did you guys end up all right ready the three numbers are nineteen nineteen ninety all right I'm saying try and say them a little quicker nineteen nineteen ninety all right where where did you guys end up which city are you in I'll say it one more time nineteen nineteen ninety let me know where did you guys end up some of you yes David fraud yeah I pass um Geronimo New York City excellent alright one more ok so again I'll say these numbers consecutively ninety nineteen ninety ninety nineteen ninety where did you end up I'll say it one more time ninety nineteen ninety I hope I hope that all of you ended up in Tokyo with me and Laura and David for at the Somme excellent so this is good way to practice again those listening skills and try to see if you can identify those confusing numbers because again it's always good practice because they're gonna be points where like I said you're on the phone or you're in some situation somebody's telling you a price and maybe you're like oh oh did they say 19 or did they say 90 because if you're talking about how much something cost that's a pretty big difference so let's now look at some big numbers and how we say big numbers and my first question to you and we're gonna practice speaking and listening is how would you say this number alright if I show you this number how would you say this number alright so let's look at we just need to break it down to say this number and you're talking about big numbers we use commas to separate the big numbers into smaller pieces and if you can think about it this way and think about okay if there's the comma this is what I'm talking about it helps us separate the numbers so let's let's start down far at the end there with our number 123 okay that first comma is talking about the thousand all right so we have seven hundred eighty nine thousand 123 okay now let's move to the next one million 456 million seven hundred eighty nine thousand one hundred twenty-three the next comma billion 123 billion 456 million seven hundred eighty nine thousand 123 that is how you would say this number where you use the commas to identify okay are we talking billions millions thousands and then just say the the whole number 123 billion 456 million seven hundred eighty nine thousand 123 you can try it say it really fast if you want to so what I want to do now is again we're gonna practice speaking some of these numbers and I want you to say these numbers right here so practice your speaking skills how would you say this number up here and then I'll say it okay that number is 115,000 forty-five now one thing that's a little different about this number is when you see that zero in there alright you're not going to say zero or uh or anything you kind of just you know kind of ignore it and skip over it 115,000 forty-five how about this next number right here I want you guys say this number here practice speaking what would you say so this number again they have those two commas in there 46 million 519 thousand 890 46 million five hundred nineteen thousand eight hundred ninety all right and this last one this bigger number here how would you say this one ready go so that number right there is seven hundred twelve billion thirty six million one hundred twelve thousand five hundred sixty-three seven hundred twelve billion thirty-six million one hundred twelve thousand five hundred sixty-three all right so if you were actually speaking I want you to write big numbers in the chat so I know oh okay you were speaking participating in the lesson alright so now that we were practicing some speaking alright I want to test your listening so in this next next part I'm gonna actually I'm gonna say the number and I want you to write down the number that you hear I'm gonna say a big number and I want you to write down what you guys hear okay so that's what I want to do for the next part practice your listening skills doing a lot of listening and speaking practice okay so the first number that I have for you is this one and I want you to write down in the chat or write it down in the comments if you're watching this later alright and that is four hundred thirteen thousand three hundred thirty four hundred thirteen thousand three hundred thirty four hundred thirteen thousand three hundred thirty okay when we're saying these big numbers we're just saying these are all these are all cardinal numbers alright four hundred all right excellent all right we got some good answers remember a difference 1330 all right so what you should answered is right here because whoops let me get up on the screen there four hundred thirteen thousand three hundred thirty excellent alright the next one alright write this in the chat all right this is good listening practice ready the next number next big number I have for you is 996 million five hundred fifty five thousand nine 996 million five hundred fifty five thousand nine alright remember I told you to kind of skip over those zeros in there keep that in mind nine hundred ninety-six million five hundred fifty-five thousand nine alright excellent glad all right perfect all right you getting some answers excellent what you guys thank you guys for answering what you should have written is this right whoops right here nine hundred ninety-six million five hundred fifty-five thousand nine all right or you can say n nine nine hundred nine hundred ninety-six million five hundred fifty five thousand and nine all right the next big number are you ready write it in the chat this is a big one it's biggie two hundred and eight billion ninety nine million one hundred thousand five hundred and seventeen two hundred and eight billion ninety nine million one hundred thousand five hundred and seventeen what what write that write that number down write this see if you guys can write that big number down two hundred and eight billion ninety nine million one hundred thousand five hundred and seventeen what do you guys think that is that is the biggest number of all of them that we've done alright excellent so what I hope you guys wrote what you should write is this 208 billion 99 million 100,000 517 okay so that is some good practice again listening for these big numbers and it's not often that you're gonna have you're gonna be talking about numbers and the billions but it's always good to practice and practice and practice alright so thank you guys so much for joining if you actually did this practice all right even now or later on in the comments I want you to write speaking so I know that you were actually participating and practicing your language skills and saying these numbers because that's what this lesson was all about is speaking and saying these difficult numbers when you are having a conversation or you know talking about numbers so thank you guys so much for your whoops joining me today please like and share this video tirana Bassam Geronimo Eduardo honest sim Miriam sumaya Rosa's thank you thank you thank you Junior Bogdan sorry if I'm missing people please again like and share write us comments we love hearing from you guys and as always thank you thank you thank you so much for watching and I'll see you next time

How to Speak Fast & Sound Natural - Copy My American Accent

teach you how to master connected speech so that you can speak fast and sound natural. Now, of course, the objective is not necessarily to speak fast, but if you're able to use some of the different parts of connected speech that we're going to go over, I think you'll be able to smoothly and seamlessly transition from one word to the next, from one sound to the next, and you will be able to speak a little faster, but it's also going to help you develop a nice rhythm and flow. And that is something else you're going to hear me talk about quite a bit as we go through the lesson. Now, this is a practice lesson. I want you to participate. I want you to say the sentences, the words out loud and just really try to develop those speaking skills as well as the your pronunciation skills. Now, one thing that people tell me quite often is that they listen to me, you can easily understand what I'm saying, but if you turn on a movie or a TV show, it becomes a little more difficult. So, not only is this going to help your speaking skills and developing a more natural way of speaking, but it's also going to help your listening comprehension skills as well. And you'll be able to understand, well, really why people sound the way they do.

So, we're going to look at this dialogue. These are some simple sentences. We're going to go through them one at a time. We're going to do a deep dive and I'm going to talk about everything that's going on and I want you to practice and you're going to say it with me and then we're going to say this dialogue together at the end. just I just want you to listen to me say this dialogue and then we'll get into it. So, this is how I this is how we're going to practice it. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. Did you buy something off of Amazon? I got a new phone because my old phone crapped out.

I'm gonna have to get a new phone as well. So, simple enough. You hear me say it and it's like, okay, I understand what's happening. And that's good. I want to make this easy because when you practice, I don't want you to read it. I want you to actually say it and and think about as though you're speaking because reading and speaking are two different things. Now, I mentioned that I'm going to talk about rhythm and flow and one key element of that is stress timing. So, in case you're unfamiliar with this, English is a stress time language, which means that the stress syllables or words are said at approximately regular intervals.

So, you have a simple question. What did you do last night? And I've broken it into those three different intervals. And I'm going to just go like, what did you do last night? this, you know that this is a stressed word or syllable. But you you can also hear that melody if I wanted to emphasize this. What did you do last night? What did you do last night? What did you do last night? I want you to say this with me. What did you do last night? One more time. What did you do last night? So, this is what I mean by stress timing. It is going to help you develop a more natural way of speaking because what often happens is people they're asking a question or they're they're speaking and you have these pauses in between words. It throws things off a little and you want to be able to move through it in a in a smooth way and this is going to help with that.

What did you do last night? So, you're going to see me do this. It's like I'm a conductor in an orchestra. Uh I normally I would clap but I'm holding this microphone right here. But I I am going to bring this back up. Stress timing. It's very useful. Now, I do want to say real quickly, if you are someone who would like to practice and improve your speaking skills, you can join my speaking course. Check out the link down below in the description. This is for intermediate to advanced English speakers. And it's all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, and speak naturally. what we do in the course. We warm up with connected speech pronunciation and then we move into our speaking topic, learn new vocabulary related to that topic, do different speaking activities.

So, this is only one element to that, but we do spend a fair amount of time at the beginning, like 15 minutes or so, talking about connected speech, some of the very same things we're going to look at in today's lesson. So, let's begin with our first sentence. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. What is going on? Let's break this down. So, I've been waiting around. Now, when I say waiting around, that T with the American accent, because I haven't mentioned I'm from the US, and when the T comes between two vowel sounds, you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T. It's going to sound like a soft D. Very common. And if you're trying to emulate the American accent, this is incredibly important, using the flap T. Words like water, you hear that soft D.

T to a glottle T. It's going to be a glottle stop. And if you're unfamiliar with a glottle stop, this is when your glauus closes. It blocks the flow of air. So instead of waiting, it may sound like waiting. Waiting. Waiting. This often occurs when you have the t followed by an N sound. So, I'm just going to say some words and uh I'm going to say them with a glottle stop. I just want you to repeat after me. Mountain, kitten, button, waiting. If you want a more example with that glottle stop, if you think of somebody saying uhoh, uhoh. Simple enough. That is a glottle stop. You can hear it closing. Uhoh. Uhoh. Wait in wait in. So this is a sound that is a little more difficult to make, but it is part uh you will hear it with the American accent. So when that t if the G gets dropped, I've um I've been uh I've been sitting around all day. I've been waiting for the bus. We're meeting at a cafe. So again, meeting, waiting, sitting. There are quite a few verbs that that end with a t sound. So in this case, waiting waiting and then I can link that final N sound with the vowel sound in a round. Linking often occurs. This is the most common part of connected speech and I think one of the most important parts as well if you want to smoothly transition from one sound to the next. Waiting around. Waiting around. Repeat after me. Waiting around. One more time. Waiting around. Now that final D in around I could link that with all waiting around all day. So this is very subtle. It's very soft and it is very slight. So again linking is we're going to end with that N D. Your tongue is going to be up top and then we're just going to release into the vowel sound in all waiting around all day. Now the next part for the male. Simple enough. For is a word that often gets reduced. Instead of for like the number for you may hear people pronounce it for. That vowel sound gets uh that vowel sound is going to change. The as I'm saying it right now. You could say the or 'the'. There are two different pronunciations, one strong, one weak. In this case, because the next word ends in a consonant sound, I'm going to use the weak form. The mail, the car, the book. This is something I think you know, we're going to use that schwa sound instead of the. So, this is what it's going to sound like. And I've put the the linking and the the phonetic spelling up top there. Hopefully, it makes it a little easier. I want to say it two times slowly, and I want you to repeat after me. Again, this is all about practicing your speaking skills.

And then we're going to say it one more time at a regular speed. Now, if you want to think about that stress timing, I've been waiting around for the I've been waiting around all day for the mail. And you can hear that rhythm and flow. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. And again, you don't have to emphasize it like that, but just be aware that the melody it exists. It is there even if it's very slight. So, let's say this two times slowly. Repeat after me or if you want a shadow, try to say it with me. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. Let's say it again. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. And I am emphasizing that melody, but let's speed it up again. That that rhythm and flow that those intervals are still there. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. I didn't tell you, but I wanted you to repeat after me one more time.

I've been waiting around all day for the mail. All right, try to say it with me. Ready? I've been waiting around all day for the mail. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. I think shadowing really helps especially if you're trying to maintain that same speed which is very useful because again we're talking about again not that you have to speak fast that is not necessarily the goal but if you're using these different parts of connected speech it's just going to make it that much easier. So, if you were practicing, let me know in the comments, in the chat. Just write the word speaking because I just love knowing that I'm not talking to myself and other people even though I can't hear you. You're practicing and saying these sentences with me. So, just let me know in the chat in the comments if you are participating. So, the next uh sentence is a question. Did you buy something off of Amazon? Did you buy something off of Amazon? The first thing I want to point out, off of, this is a non-standard form that just means the same as off or from. Did you buy something off Amazon? Did you buy something from Amazon? I say non-standard because I wanted to practice more linking. But if you're talking about purchasing something from a website, you may hear people use off of off of Amazon. I bought something off of eBay. I bought something off of the internet. So, we're going to use off of because I wanted to point that out, but also it allows us to practice more linking. So, let's look at what's going on with this sentence. Thank you guys for participating. Love it. So, did you I want to point out that assimilation may occur. This is another part of connected speech. It does not mean that it's always going to happen. You may hear somebody pronounce the two individual words. Did you? But the DNY uh assimilation these two sounds uh they become similar to one another. Now this is a specific part of assimila assimilation uh palletization and basically it's like those sounds are blending together and you're going to get more of a ch sound, but we'll have a look at that in just a minute. So did you buy something? Now even if we're talking about words that end in an ing, you could still drop the G. It may happen, but it doesn't always. So you might say something, but again, you could hear somebody say something and then off of Amazon. I can link that phrase together. This is a yes no question. So you're going to have a rising intonation at the end. Did you buy something off of Amazon? Did you buy something off of Amazon? So you can see that did you. This is how I'm trying to spell it to represent that something. But if you want to say something, it's fine. Again, I think it is a little more challenging to say the ing sound than just the N. And then off of am off of Amazon. We can link that phrase together. Off of Amazon. I want you to say that after me. Off of Amazon. That linking is very slight, but this is why when you first uh probably started learning English and and you heard it, I think this goes uh this is the same way it is for every language. The first time you hear it, it just sounds like one long continuous word because you're unsure of where those breaks are. And linking is what makes it challenging to identify those breaks because the sounds are running together. So, let's practice this question two times slowly and then two times faster. Again, if I wanted to emphasize that melody, that rhythm and flow. Did you buy something off of Amazon? Did you buy something off of Amazon? And you can hear those intervals. Hopefully, it's easy to to understand. Uh so, let's say it two times slowly. You can repeat after me or just shadow and try to say it with me.

Ready? Did you buy something off of Amazon? One more time. Did you buy something off of Amazon? Now, let's say it faster. And in this in this time you're going to hear that rising intonation. It is a yes no question. Ready? Did you buy something off of Amazon? Did you buy something off of Amazon? I think everybody's familiar with Amazon uh as far as uh purchasing things online. Did you buy something off of Amazon? Okay. So again, there's different things going on. It's a pretty simple and straightforward question, but let's continue. Let me know again if you're practicing. Just write speaking in the comments in the chat so that I know that you are practicing your speaking skills.

This is what it's all about. I don't want this just to be passive learning. I want to make it active learning as well. After all, this is interactive English. That way I can become your teacher. My name's Wes. for those of you who this this if this is your first time here and the channel's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. So that's a quick little quick little plug that I forgot to mention at the beginning. So the next sentence, somebody asks that question, did you buy something off of Amazon? And the person responds and says, I got a new phone because my old phone crapped out. Now crapped out, this is more American slang. And if some if you say that something crapped out, often it's used in the past because it's already happened, you're referring to some type of machine that basically either it's malfunction or it's broken altogether. So if you say your phone crapped out, it's not working. Yeah, my car crapped out, it's not working. Yeah, last week uh unfortunately our AC crapped out. So this is more American English saying something crapped out. I'm trying to throw a little vocabulary in there as we go through this. All right. Excellent. Love to see everybody participating. Keep it up. Keep it up. Just two more sentences to go through. So, I got a Now, I mentioned when the T comes between two vowel sounds with the American accent, you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T. I think a word that I always come back to is water.

Water. Water. That really, really empas. you can really grasp that flat t. Uh, so got a I'm going to link this phrase together. So I'm linking the flap t with the vowel sound uh got a. I got a new phone because can often I can reduce this. You don't have to. I think a lot of people when when I talk about reductions with because I know a lot of people are comfortable just saying because there's nothing wrong with it. It's perfectly fine. But for your listening comprehension, you may hear somebody reduce it and they'll just say cuz. So instead of because my old phone. Now elision is when sounds or syllables get removed.

Often this may happen with the T or D. So when the T or D comes between a two two consonant sounds, they may collide. So instead of old phone and you distinctly hear those two words that dalides old phone my old phone crapped out crapped out I can link it together the ed and crapped because the p sound is voiceless so the ed is more of a t and then I can link it without crapped out. Crapped out again it's very subtle very soft but hopefully you can hear it. Just repeat after me. Crapped out. crapped out. Okay. So, once again, we're gonna practice this and I've given you the phonetic spelling, everything that's going on. Uh, and if I wanted to show you that melody, I got a new phone because my old phone crapped out. I got a new phone because my old phone crapped out. And I'm trying to This is This is the stress right here. if I wanted to really emphasize I got a new phone because my old phone crapped out. And you could turn any sentence into basically a song.

So let's say this twice slowly and then two times at a faster speed. Whether you want to repeat after me or shadow, either one. I just want you to participate. That's what I want. That's all I want today. Okay. So let's say it twice slowly. I got a new phone because my old phone crapped out. One more time. I got a new phone because my old phone crapped out. Now, let's say it faster at more of a normal speed. Ready? I got a new phone cuz my old phone crapped out. One more time. I got a new phone cuz my old phone crapped out. Hopefully, as I'm saying this, it's easy to hear all of those different things going on, whether it's linking, reductions, elision in this case. So, let me know if you're participating.

It's just a matter of whether or not uh you can try to say it in the same way. That is really what shadowing is. You're trying to say the words, the sentences, the phrases in the exact same way, kind of like you're singing a song. So, I'm going to. So, going to the the first thing I want to mention is going to is often reduced to gonna. It is probably the most common reduction in English. You probably use it in just your everyday conversation because you hear it all the time. I'm going to go. I'm going to play. I'm going to walk. I'm going to exercise. Now, I will say if we have I'm gonna, you may hear people reduce it even further. This is something that I do, especially when I'm uh teaching and going through the course. Sometimes there's so much that I'm trying to cover. And I will reduce this even further. And it's going to sound like I'mma have to. I can reduce that to have to get a once again that t is going to become a flap t. And then I can link it with that vowel sound. Get a new phone as well. Phone as you can hear me like moving that final consonant sound over to the vowel sound in as phone as. So this is what this is what it's going to sound like. And I will say let's just look at that first part. And I want you to practice and and tell me what you think because I know a lot of people tell me it feels a little unnatural to say I'm gonna. I think people are very comfortable with I'm going to. It is commonly used.

If you I I think you should stay within your comfort zone because I'm gonna is very common. But just right now, for the sake of this lesson and participating in this activity, I want you to give it a try and just say, "I'm I'm" And then speed it up. gonna I'm so you what you might hear somebody in a movie, TV show, and this is why I think some people will say, "Oh, it's difficult to understand." They might say, "Look, I'm going to go to the store. I'm going to go to the park. I'm gonna go to the gym. I'm gonna go to the shop. I'm gonna I'm gonna I'm gonna eat dinner. I'm gonna I'm gonna I'm gonna So, what I'd like you just in the chat, let me know. Just say uh you know, give me you can give me a thumbs up if you feel like it was comfortable and it was okay saying I'm going to or a thumbs down if it felt like a little awkward and you just didn't feel comfortable."

So, even though I'm I'm giving you this now because this is just the way that you're going to hear me say it in uh in this dialogue. It's not something you have to do. I'm going to is very commonly used and it's perfectly fine. But you may hear somebody reduce it even further. I'm going to. So, give me a thumbs up if it's comfortable, thumbs down if you're like, h that's just weird and awkward and I don't want to do it. Um, have to have to. I mentioned get a new phone as well. So th this is the way I would say it slowly. I'm going to have to get a new phone as well. And you can hear that rhythm and flow. I'm going to have to get a new phone as well. I'm going to have to get a new phone as well. Now, of course, I I added have to in there just to have one reduction right after the other. Of of course, somebody could say, "I'm going to get a new phone as well." And you don't even need to use have to. In this case, maybe you're just trying to emphasize that, oh yeah, you too. This is something that you also have to do. But I just put it in there to make it a little more challenging as we go through. Say this sentence. One reduction right after the other can be a little bit of a little difficult. All right, I'm impressed you guys. I see all these thumbs up. Okay, that's that's good. I'm glad that uh it does feel comfortable. This is something that if you've been following the channel and watched some different videos, you when I talk about the American accent or connected speech or even do lessons like this, this is something that I've mentioned before. So, you're familiar with it.

So, let's say this twice slowly and then more at a normal speed. So, slowly I'm going to have I'm going to have to get a new phone as well. Sorry, I kind of botched that. I'm gonna have to get a new phone as well. Once again, I'm gonna have to get a new phone as well. Now, let's speed it up. Maybe try to shadow. Say it with me at the same time. Uh, I'm going to have to get a new phone as well. I'm going to have to get a new phone as well. And now I'm trying to say it like I'm getting into character because we're going to start that dialogue. I'm going to have to get a new phone as well.

I'm going to have to get a new phone as well. So, now that we've gone through each sentence and talked about everything that's going on, let's practice this together. And again, I want you to say this out loud. I will start out uh as A. I want you to start out as B. But one last time, I just want you to listen to the way that uh we're going to practice saying this dialogue. I'll just say all of it right now. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. Did you buy something off of Amazon? I got a new phone cuz my old phone cropped out. I'm going to have to get a new one as well. It does not take long to say. I just went right through it. Takes about six seconds. So, let's begin. I'm going to say A. I'll give you a moment to say your line, get into character, and then uh I just want you to say B. And then we're going to switch. Now again, I know that reading and speaking are two different things.

Of course, you don't have this memorized, even though they are simple sentences, and that's okay. But try to think about it. Think of it like as though you're saying it like we're actually having this conversation. So, you're not just reading it, but trying to say it out loud. So, let's begin. Ready? I'm going to A. I'm A. You're B. I've been waiting around all day for the mail. I got a new phone because my old phone cropped out. All right, good. And I realized in that case I did I did not end up reducing because to because so it depends on what you're comfortable with. It's not something that you'll you'll hear all the time. But yes, uh I I should have said like uh I got a new phone because my old phone crapped out.

So now let's switch. I want you to say A. I am going to say B. I trust that you are saying this with me. So, you can go ahead and begin right now. Did you buy something off of Amazon? I'm going to have to get a new phone as well. Okay, simple enough. This is a dialogue that you see these sentences, you hear them. It's easy to understand. All I wanted to do was really go through this and like I said, we're doing a deep dive talking about all the different things going on. So, when we isolate it in these different sentences, I think it's e it's easier, but to like as far as people saying like, well, movies, TV shows, it's more difficult to understand. Part of that is because it's just continuous. We're not you're not breaking it down sentence by sentence and taking time to see what's happening so that your comprehension is perfect.

You're just listening to people blah blah blah blah blah blah and they're just moving right through the dialogue or telling the story and then it does become a little more difficult for your your ears to process everything. But just being aware of some of this some of these things like did you people might say did you or I'm going to may sound more like I'm going to in general I think that is going to slowly help you improve your listening comprehension skills. So hopefully you enjoyed this master class and have a much better understanding of a connected speech and the different parts and what's going on. There is more to this and I promise in the future I I will do more lessons like this because well mostly because I like them. I think they're fun. I enjoy doing like these activities and having this dialogue.

And then once again if you are interested well not stress timing. This is also interesting and it helps develop that rhythm and flow. What I wanted to throw in real quickly at the end this last plug if you want to practice and improve your speaking skills check out that link down below in the description. and you can join my speaking course and the link will just take you to the course page so you can check out the class times and availability if this is something that that you would like to do. So I hope you enjoyed this lesson. is something that you would like to do be able to speak in a more natural way using that rhythm and flow and ultimately it is you're just going to be able to move right through the sentence a little faster and there's nothing wrong with that. It's just all about developing your overall fluency. So if you enjoyed the lesson let me know by hitting that like button. Uh, as always, I appreciate you being here and I will see you next time, well, very soon for another lesson.

How to Speak with Different American Accents

i want to talk to you about some different and well-known accents in the united states and as i present these accents i'm really going to be demonstrating the the stereotypical accent it's going to be very thick and that's just so you can easily hear the difference between a standard american accent and a regional accent i am actually an english teacher and i teach a lot about the american accent but i've had many learners ask me about specific accents so i thought this would be a good opportunity to talk a little bit about some of the accents you may hear if you are visiting the united states or even living in the united states and if you enjoy learning about the american accent please subscribe turn on notifications so that i can become your teacher my name is wes and that's what interactive english is all about just trying to help you reach your fluency goals and i i also have a speaking course available which i'll tell you a little bit about at the end of the lesson if you are an english learner who would like to practice and improve your speaking fluency i would highly recommend checking that out but i'll talk to you about that in just a little bit let's just go ahead and begin with the first accent that i want to talk to you about which is the new york accent or as some people might say in new york new york so the first thing that i want to tell you about this accent is that it's common people may drop the r's in some words especially when the r comes at the end of a word so just listen to the difference between a standard american accent and then a new york accent dropping the r before before here here water water so i'm dropping the r at the end of those words and you will also drop the r when it doesn't really come at the end but maybe the middle of a single syllable word like like the word park people might say park and even the word new york as you heard me pronounce it already new york something else i want to tell you about the new york accent is that when you have the a-l letter combination it may sound like awe and and this is very slight with some words so if i say the word talk in the new york accent talk and and it just gets stressed a little bit and it may be easier to to listen for if i were to give you a question so instead of saying what are you talking about with the accent what are you talking about what are you talking about something else i would say is that when it comes to accents in general i think reductions of all kinds are very common so in this sentence i'm reducing you to ya i'm using the the schwa sound that a sound so that it's not stressed and it would just sound like yeah which is pretty common in spoken english when you comes in the middle of a sentence or the middle of a clause so it would sound like what are you talking about what are you talking about this al combination is also true in words like call so with this one you can really tell the difference between where your tongue is at in your mouth because generally when you say call the tongue is going to come up to the top part of your mouth at the end of the word because it's a dark l and you'd hear that all sound at the end call but with the new york accent it would sound like call and your tongue is actually laying flat at the bottom of your mouth so again to to give you an example with the sentence i'll call you later i'll call you later once again i'm reducing you to yeah and then i'm dropping that r in later i'll call you later i'll call you later let's move a little further to the north and we'll talk about the boston accent this is another well-known accent that you may hear in well movies tv shows like uh the movie the departed great movie one kid with your old man one kid with your mother you're up a middle class during the weeks then you're dropping your eyes and you're hanging in the big bad salty projects and the boston accent actually shares some similarities with the the new york accent you're also gonna drop the r in in many words like the well the word car i think this is a word that's often used when talking about the boston accent and it's going to sound like car so what kind of car you drive did you find your car keys and when if somebody were to say the phrase cockeys and you are an english learner yeah it can be difficult to catch that that the r is getting dropped and somebody is talking about their car keys did you find your car keys with the boston accent that al people may also pronounce it more like an awe but i think with the boston accent often there's there's going to be an upward inflection at the end of sentences so if i were to say yeah i was talking with my friends we were talking about star wars and i tried to end those sentences with that upward inflection i like that phrase star wars dropping the r's in both of those words something else with the boston accent is the o r combination may also sound like awe and this is true even if you're talking about the conjunction or like chicken or beef chicken or beef cocoa pepsi and hopefully you can easily hear that and this is true when the or combination is in individual words like divorce divorce force false may the foss be with you okay we're talking about star wars so i'm just just imagining luke skywalker with a thick boston accent may the foss be with you you know me and the other jedi's we're gonna go down to the and grab some beers all right the that's that's more dialect the is uh it's short for package store which is just a liquor store where where people would buy alcohol the so let's uh let's go in a different direction and head down south and i want to talk to you about the southern drawl one of the main characteristics of the southern drawl is that it's going to sound a little slower and that's because people might drag out those vowel sounds and previously i did another lesson talking about the southern drawl i'll leave that up here in case you're interested but one reason why those vowel sounds are going to get dragged out is because people will take short vowel sounds and turn them into a diphthong in which you are combining two vowel sounds and the vowel sounds that people will combine are short vowel sounds with an off-glide schwa sound which is that uh so you have the verb have and it might sound like have so it sounds a little longer you can kind of hear that that schwa that uh sound on it have have y'all have a pen i need to write something down so hopefully you can hear that schwa sound half but i also said have a pen and that's another characteristic of the southern drawl is the mixing of vowel sounds especially the e and the so instead of saying pen it may sound like pin you all have a pin i need somebody to get me a pin okay so even get might sound like git but while we're in the south i also want to talk to you about the southern twang it's a little different than that southern drawl so with the southern twang i might think of places more like the florida panhandle or louisiana and it is going to be a little different than the southern drawl even though they share some of the same characteristics people are going to take short vowel sounds and turn it into a diphthong they're going to mix some of those same vowel sounds like get and get but i i would say that the southern drawl it's going to sound slower it's more rounded and like it's coming from the back of your your throat whereas the twang it's gonna sound more at a normal speed perhaps a bit sharper and really come through the nose it's going to sound more nasally so let me give you a sentence with the southern drawl and the southern twang just try to listen for the difference if i were to say with the southern drawl i can't wait to get me one of those and then with the twang i can't wait to get me one of those okay i was trying to say it more through my nose please if you're from the south please feel free to give me some notes down in the comments below but just trying to make a slight distinction between the southern drawl and the southern twang because if you're spending any time in the south you may hear a little bit of both and now let's move well let's go to the upper midwest because i want to talk to you about minnesota okay and even when i say the name of the state you should notice that long o sound minnesota and this is something that's distinct about the accent if i were just to say it with a standard uh american accent minnesota but with the minnesotan accent minnesota and you really have this pure o sound in many words so instead of boat boat soap soap and it's really it sounds a little like you're just stressing that o a little bit but you really have that pure o sound another thing about this accent if somebody were to have a very thick minnesota accent they may pronounce words that have a g as like egg so words the like flag may sound like flag or bag beg instead of saying put the soda in the bag you might hear put the soda in the bag all right now let's go let's go all the way out west to california and i want to talk to you about well this is more of a stereotypical californian valley accent again something you might hear in movies or tv shows and when it comes to this accent i actually think it's more about well the the way people are stress timing the language and what i would say is that people end up over stressing words that might have a slight stress and then de-stressing other words that that generally get reduced so let me let me give you an example just listen to the way i'm talking when i when i say the following today we're gonna go to the mall and i'm gonna go shopping with my friends and it's gonna be hella cool because everybody is going to be talking like me okay so i was really trying to over stress some of those words and then de-emphasize the words that are commonly reduced which is why you would really hear certain words and then everything else just gets run together and it sounds really fast uh something else about this accent which is more dialect would be the use of fillers such as the word like i was like and he was like and she was like i i used to live in california in the bay area and in the morning i would ride the bus to work and there would be high school students who would also take the same bus going to to school in the morning and i would hear some of their conversations and it was difficult for me to follow every other word was the word like and i like told him that i couldn't like come over and help him with his homework and he was like why you like promise me that that you'd like help me with this it's a very important project and after listening to this i was thinking what what are you guys talking about now to follow up on that this is i think a connected speech there are also pronunciation video lessons included in the course and i'll teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases so if you'd like to to sign up or learn more about the course just click on that link down below in the description and i just hope to speak to you soon so yeah y'all have a great day may the foss be with you okay i'm gonna i'm gonna stop doing these accents now i will see you next time so long

How to Speak with a Southern Accent | American English

welcome to today's lesson we're talking about the southern accent so the first thing that i want to say is that this is a very well-known and distinct accent i'm sure you may have heard it before my mom always said life was like a box of chocolates now before we begin i'd like to ask you please hit that like button subscribe to the channel turn on notifications so that i get to be your teacher throughout the lesson i i'm gonna try to break down the southern accent a little bit at a time and not all southern accents are the same most notably i think the south is known for either the southern drawl that that deep south accent there's also a southern twang which is a bit more nasally but i'm going to be talking more about that that deep south that southern drawl and it's not like you either have the accent or you don't there is a sliding scale the first thing that i think people think of when they think of that southern accent that southern drawl is how slow it is that it's a bit slower because that drawl is kind of when you drag out some of those sounds especially those vowel sounds all right there's really two things that are going on you're taking a pure vowel sound and you're turning it into a diphthong and you you may also be prolonging some of those stressed syllables so let's first talk about diphthongs because i think this is very important in understanding why the southern accent is a bit slower if you do not know what a diphthong is it is a sound formed by the combination of two vowels in a single syllable so i do not want to go into the weeds talking to you about diphthongs but here is an example of a diphthong and it's going to create that ow sound so you might see it with the combination of vowels like oh you in sound now in the south it's common to create diphthongs with the short vowel sounds and you're going to follow it with an off glide schwa sound so schwa is that a sound if we start with a and we have the word hat in the south i would say hayat i'm going to follow it with that off-glide schwa if i have the word pet pay it sit sit so again listen for that diphthong that short vowel sound followed by that that slight schwa sound hat pant sit so i i think this becomes well really noticeable when you hear people say like some very common words let's let's take the verb have it's a verb that you're going to use quite often just in everyday conversation but instead of saying have i would say have and you might hear somebody say y'all have a great day and it's part of southern hospitality and notice that i used y'all which is the contracted form of you all which is kind of like saying like you guys you're talking to a group of people now this is more southern dialect as opposed to accent and throughout the lesson i am going to throw in some southern dialect because i i think it'll help give you a better overall understanding of the southern accent now let's go back to talking about diphthongs because not all diphthongs in the south are going to be followed by that off-glide schwa sound so let's have a look at this word right here dog instead we're going to have a diphthong that that's going to sound more like ah dog dog dog all right you can you can kind of hear it stretching out a little bit with that diphthong dog dog in georgia there is a famous university the university of georgia their mascot is the bulldog and when talking about the university especially like the sports teams the they'll refer to them as the dogs and they'll even spell it d-a-w-g kind of capturing that southern accent that southern drawl dog so let's use some of these diphthongs in a sentence if i were to say i can't believe you guys have a dog i'll use that off-glide schwa in words like can't and have i'm going to change you guys to y'all and dog to dog and it's gonna sound like i can't believe y'all have a dog i can't believe y'all have a dog the other thing that you may have noticed is that when i said believe i'm kind of prolonging that stressed syllable that second syllable believe this is not something that's going to happen with every word i think it may happen more often with like two syllable words when the stress is on that first syllable you're gonna prolong it and then you're even going to weaken the unstressed syllable if you have the word like mama all right the stress is on the first syllable but if i were to say this with the southern accent prolong that first syllable mama mama all right it's much stronger than that second syllable now i think something that's even more important when talking about syllable stress which really doesn't have to do with making it sound slower but this is just something that that people do with the southern accent is that they will switch the stress to the first syllable i think there are some words that are fairly well known that people do this with but if you were to spend time there and just listen to the accent i think this is something you might pick up on so let's let's talk about some of those words that i think are a bit more well known so instead of july people say july you want to see my daddy for the first time ever on july 14th first syllable and you could hear the mixing of some of those vowel sounds something else which you may have heard which is also very common with the southern accent is the way i was pronouncing i so when you're pronouncing words like i and my you're not really going to use the long i sound it's going to sound more like ah i have an umbrella but my umbrella ain't opening so of course i and my are very common words so this might be something that's a little more easily noticeable another difference with the southern accent is the soft r that you might find at the end of some words especially when it follows a vowel sound like the word fire becomes fire last night my house was on fire thankfully we have insurance then i want to talk to you about words that end with llow there are not a lot of words out there but when you do have words like this instead of pronouncing it low you're going to hear people say la so yellow becomes yellow fellow becomes fella and and fellow is an informal word talking about like a man or a boy the fella that plays a guitar but it is a little more common in the south and people would pronounce it fella that fella's got a yellow hat that fella's got a yellow hat another thing i want to point out is i've used that reduction gotta instead of got a i just said gotta this is something else that i think is pretty common throughout the south gonna wanna have to gotta let me otta people are going to use reductions in spoken english and it's something that's pretty common throughout the united states in general but just yeah keep that in mind you're definitely going to hear this in the south and then i want to talk to you about something else that i think is it's well known in the south the way people speak part of that accent and that is they're going to drop the g at the end of ing words like those words in the continuous tense i'm just dusting above miss daisy again this is something that i think is pretty common throughout the united states in all u.s accents but uh in the south it is definitely something that people will do so uh i could say i was pitching a fit when the police came i was pitching a fit when the police came now to pitch a fit is a phrase that means to complain this is actually something that i use and i still use it i didn't even realize it was part of southern dialect but i guess it is i was pitching a fit when the police came i realized some of these example sentences are quite ridiculous i really just wanted you to hear the different parts of the southern accent so you can better understand why it is the way it is and i hope you could hear the difference when i would say the sentence more with a standard american accent and versus the southern accent that southern drawl so i thank you all for watching please hit that like button write to me down in the comments below i'd love to hear from you and i gotta get going so i'll see you next time so long

How to Start a Conversation | 3 Things You Need to Remember

If you want to have a meaningful conversation in English, then all you need to do is... Hey everyone, my name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today I want to talk to you about starting conversations in English and how to start a meaningful conversation. We get questions from learners all the time about, you know, what, what's the best way to start a conversation? What should I talk about? What should I ask? For example, I know many English learners, if they can't think of anything to say and they don't know what to talk about, then they may revert to a question like, well, well, how's the weather?

Let's talk about the weather because I can't think of anything else right now. And again, you can have a conversation and talk about the weather. Both of you know what it's like, but it may not be what you really want to discuss. And that's what I want to talk to you about in this lesson. How you can get to that point where you can have a meaningful conversation and you feel confident, you feel comfortable and you can keep the conversation going. So I'm going to give you three main suggestions throughout the lesson that's going to help you approach someone when you want to begin a conversation. So the first suggestion that I have for you is to put the conversation on the other person. Too often I think learners enter into a conversation, even native speakers do this and they worry too much about what they're going to say.

They're worried that they're going to say the wrong thing or perhaps they think that, well, what if I don't know enough information about this topic? So what I'm suggesting is just don't worry about all that. Just put the conversation on the other person so that they're doing most of the talking, especially at the beginning. And that will allow you a little more time to get comfortable, to get confident and then you can share your thoughts and opinions. I think this is actually a pretty easy thing to do because, well, let's be honest, many people like talking about themselves. If somebody is asking me questions then yeah I am going to share information with them because I do. I want to talk about the places I've been.

I want to talk about the things that I've done. So as you enter the conversation, try to keep that mindset that you are going to put the conversation on them. You're trying to get them to share more information with you and in doing so you will need to ask more questions. Make sure that you're going to ask open ended questions because that's going to allow people to share more about their thoughts, their opinions, their ideas. Because if you just ask close ended questions and they say yes or no, that's not going to help you keep the conversation going.

Now one thing you may be thinking is, okay, well where do I begin? What question could I ask to just about anybody to really get the ball rolling and start that conversation. So I think a general simple question that you can ask somebody is, well, what do you do after you introduce yourself? Hi, my name's Wes, nice to meet you. They introduce themselves. Then you can ask them, so what do you do? What do you do for a living? And that allows people to open up a little and that is a great starting point, especially if you just don't know person at all. So this is a great way to break the ice to start a conversation with somebody you don't know and it is a little meaningful because you are learning some important information about that person.

You are learning what they do for a living. Another way to put the conversation on another person is just to ask for some help or advice and two questions that you could use is do you know how to or would you happen to know? Those are questions that that you can use and are common when you want to ask for some help. And this really depends on the situation that you're in. Maybe you're at some event and you don't know where to go. This actually happened to me recently. I was attending a conference. There was going to be a meeting, but I didn't know how to get there. I didn't know what room I should be in.

I saw somebody else and because they had a name tag and I knew that she was also going to be at this meeting, so I just went up and I asked her some advice. I said, Hey, would you know how to get to this, this room? Where should we be? Unfortunately she didn't know either, but we were able to look for the meeting together and during this time we were having a conversation. I introduced myself, she introduced herself and we were able to talk a little bit about what we do, so it was an easy way to start that conversation. I needed help. I needed advice.

And it's also going to really help you connect with that other person. So for example, when you're trying to find a shared experience, consider your surroundings. Where are you? Because if you are at a party, a festival, an event, then that is an experience right there that you have in common with everyone else. So you could walk up to somebody and start the conversation and ask them, you know, I've never been to one of these things before. How about you? Or maybe you could ask a question, say, you know, so what brings you here? Why are you at this party? Why are you at this event? Who do you know that is a simple and easy way to start a conversation.

You can also consider the time of year what is happening around this time. Are there any holidays, festivals, because we all share those experiences. For example, if somebody is in the United States, then I could ask them, you know, do you have any plans for the 4th of July? Do you have any plans for Thanksgiving? Do you have any plans for New Year's? And this could easily be a shared experience that you have with another person if you also have plans for a time of year or if you're going to celebrate a certain holiday. So try to find some shared experiences because it's a way to have a more meaningful conversation, but it also gives you a lot more to talk about.

The next suggestion is to keep the conversation going. And this may actually be a challenging thing to do because if you start a conversation and you're talking to another person and you're asking questions and you're sharing your thoughts and opinions, but as time goes on, you may think, wow, I'm, I'm running out of things to say, I don't know what to talk about next. The one thing I will tell you is that you need to feel comfortable and confident when it comes to transitioning to a new topic because silence can be the killer of a conversation and you don't want that to happen. So try to keep the conversation going.

Try to perhaps find another shared experience and transition to a new topic. And there are a number of questions that you can use to do that. So let me give you some examples about how you could possibly transition to another topic. You could ask general questions about a person's life. What are you doing this weekend? What have you been up to lately? Or what have you been watching lately? People are watching something on Netflix or HBO. So this is another way to try and ask some questions and search for those shared experiences. You could go back to asking for advice. If there's something that you want to know that you need help with, you could just say, could you recommend, Hmm, could you recommend something and tell them why.

Tell them why you want some advice. Tell them why you want some help. Because in general, I think people like to give advice, they like to share their expertise and offer help when they can. It is a great way to transition to a new topic. One more way to keep the conversation going and transition to a new topic is think about what's happening in the world. Think of some things that you know about that's part of considering your surrounding. This is a great way to transition to another topic, but make sure that you are transitioning to topics that, that you know about, that you feel comfortable talking about and try to transition to that topic, that event, and continue finding shared experiences so you can keep the conversation going and make it meaningful. So let's practice this and we're going to do a role play.

I am going to introduce myself. I then want you to introduce yourself and then I'll ask you a question and I'll put a timer up there. So you know how long you have to speak. Are you ready? All right, let's begin with the introduction. Hey, how's it going? My name's Wes. It's very nice to meet you. So what do you do? Wow, I've always been so interested in learning more about that. What are some of the things that you like or even some of the things that you don't like about it. Really that, that's amazing. So did you hear what's going on with American politics? That's crazy. What do you think?

All right, so at the end there, I was just trying to transition to another topic and keep the conversation going, but you get the idea. So I hope these suggestions help you the next time you want to go in and start a meaningful conversation with another person. If you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button down below and write to us in the comments. Start a conversation with me with other people who are writing comments. That is a great way to practice your English. Thank you so much for watching and I'll see you next time.

How to Use Everyday Idioms | Bird's Eye View

We have an amazing view! And today, I'm going to talk to you about... So today I want to talk to you about an idiom and that idiom is a bird's eye view. So the meaning of this idiom is just a view of the surrounding area from an elevated position kind of like the perspective of a bird. Got to get a bird's eye view. So this is one of those English idioms whose meaning is pretty much exactly like it sounds.

Now, there are a couple different verbs that we commonly use with this idiom. For example, the verb "to be." So we could say that there "is a bird's eye view." So at the top of the mountain, there is a bird's eye view. We can also use it with the verb "have" when something "has a bird's eye view". And I could say that "Right now I have a bird's eye view of Budapest." We can also use it with "get". You hear this from time to time that when you go up to a certain building or mountain that you hope to "get a bird's eye view". So what I want you to do now is practice using the idiom "bird's eye view".

And I want you to write a sentence using this idiom in the comments below. And if you'd like some suggestions, you can write about a place in your city or country that has a "bird's eye view". How to Use Mixed Conditionals | Advanced English Grammar

hello and welcome to today's lesson and today we are going to have a very very useful lesson because we're going to talk about mixed conditionals that's coming up [Music] welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English which is the place that you want to be if you're looking to practice and improve your English skills and today it is a more of an advanced grammar lesson because we are going to be talking about mixed conditionals and I know that that this is something that that can be a challenge for for many learners who are trying to improve their English skills and really understand these conditional sentences and especially mixed conditionals can be very very confusing so we're really gonna have a look at them today and some of the different types of mixed conditionals but before we begin if you are joining us I want you to say what's up in the chat write your name tell me where you're joining us from and even if you're watching this later please just write your name in the chat say what's up we just love hearing from you guys so Christo saw ago SIA the myth Mandy Bruno welcome welcome welcome Thank You Andre hi welcome thank you guys for joining me today for this very about what mix conditionals are and show you the different types it's good to review and really understand well what are conditional sentences and how are they used and we did several lessons on conditional sentences on the zero conditional the first the second and the third and I will link those in the description and if you are watching this later I will put a card up there and I highly highly recommend that you check out those lessons because we give you more examples and really talk about how those sentences are used and talk a little more about the grammar in this lesson I'm going to quickly review those conditionals and then we're really gonna focus and talk more about the mixed conditionals and of course at the end all right I want you guys to get ready because we will practice using these conditionals we are going to practice using conditionals and I will want you to write to us in the comments and in the chat so again jr. Astana Fez Morocco Malcolm Patricia hello welcome thank you for joining me and now let's let's begin let's start talking about conditionals so let's first just quickly look well what are conditional sentences conditional sentences you have two parts all right you have an if clause when you think of conditional sentences we always think of them as if statements so you have an if clause which is the condition if you subscribe to our channel this is a dependent clause because it's not a complete sentence it's not a complete thought so if you subscribe to our channel well what what's the result what what happens because of that that is going to be our main Clause and that is if you subscribe to our channel you will learn English okay I'm really trying to promote promote ourselves right now so if you subscribe to our Channel that's our condition you will learn English that is going to be the result so that is a basic simple conditional sentence you have an if clause in the condition and your main clause in the result now one thing I want to tell you guys when we look through and and review these conditions the the 0 conditional the first the second and the third I think it's useful when when you're learning these I tell you you know pay attention to the grammar these conditionals are relatively rule-based so if you learn these rules then and and learned how they're used with the grammar you can use that to create more sentences so keep that in mind and I have put the grammar up there so you know how to create these sentences so you can use the grammar I know that when many people are learning English they want to learn rules they want to try to learn the rule because it's like okay now I understand this so with these conditionals it's okay you can you can they're fairly rule-based think about the grammar all right that's all I'm gonna say all right so let's look at the zero conditional and as we go through these you know practice writing some sentences go for it so first off I want to ask you do you guys know can you tell me how do you use the zero conditional the first conditional the second conditional and the third conditional can you tell me what are the situations in which we use those conditional sentences if you guys know write those in the chat I want to hear from you guys so let's talk about them right now so the zero conditional is used to talk about a general truth a scientific fact if you guys and have an example sentence please write them all right so my sentence which is a general truth it's for me it might not be for everybody but I might say you know if I read in the car I get sick I could even throw an adverb a frequency in there and say if I read in the car I always get sick this is true this is it stressin simple for the result okay so yes but no

used to talk about a hypothetical or an unlikely situation hypothetical or unlikely situation that ok it's it cannot happen it's not going to happen or there's it's it's really really unlikely that it's going to happen so often times when you hear a sentence with the second conditional somebody's maybe giving you advice and they would say they'd start out and say this if I were you okay if I were you all right I would you had use would plus the verb base verb if I were you I would hit that like button all right again I'm in English because it's not often alright if I were all right we're using the subjunctive in this case if I were you I would hit that like button okay it's a hypothetical situation because well I'm I'm not you okay I am not you so this is hypothetical alright so again oh somebody pointed out yes thank you for going out mistake this is a typo right here I just noticed that yes not if I were are you it should say if I were you ignore that article a in there again it's interesting I go through these slides again and again and again and I find some typos but sometimes I still miss them but thank you for pointing that out to me yes it should say if I were you I would hit that like button again all right think that keep that in mind that's what I would do if I were you second conditional now let's look at the third conditional it's used to talk about an imaginary or unreal situation in the past okay you should know okay with the third conditional both the condition and the result these both both of these things they happen in the past it's in the past and that's why you say it's imaginary it's unreal it's not possible because we can't change the past it's already happened so in the condition in my in my if clause I'm going to use the past perfect if I had studied okay if I had studied the result I'm going to use would have plus the past participle if I had studied I would have passed the exam okay if I had studied I would have passed the exam okay I didn't study in the past I didn't pass the exam in the past both of these things happen in the past it's imaginary it's unreal it didn't happen okay because I did not study which means I did not pass the exam so if I had studied I would have passed the exam so this is that is a quick review of the o the first the second and the third conditional and I would recommend again if you haven't seen our other video lessons on these conditionals you can check them out we go into a little more detail we give some more examples and I think it would really help and even if you feel comfortable with them it's always good to review so the way I would say now let's get into the mixed conditionals and I have 4 different types that I'm gonna go over sometimes people say oh there's more than four mixed conditionals other people say oh there's only two mix you know again don't don't get caught up with oh how many there are I'm gonna give you four examples all right and we're gonna go through these different ones now the reason why it's difficult and it's different is because when before we talked about the other conditionals I told you I said pay attention to the grammar you with those conditionals you can pay attention to the grammar you can see what's being used and and then try to make some more sentences and practice those with the mixed conditionals I would say it's the opposite do not focus on the grammar do not pay attention to the grammar and try to understand mixed conditionals based on the grammar okay I'm still gonna give it to you but I would say try not try not to think about it that way you have to kind of change the way that you're thinking about mixed conditionals in order to really understand so the tip that I have for you the two things that what I want you guys to focus on are these two things all right you need to try to imagine the situation and when things are happening imagine the sitchin situation and imagine when they are happening those are the two things that I think are really going to help you understand mix conditionals so don't focus so much on the grammar focus on the situation which is more like the main idea and focus on what when when is it happening is it happening in the past is it happening in the present or is it happening in the future okay so those that's my that's my tip for you as we go through these I'm gonna give you a couple different examples with this and I'm gonna try and show you what what I mean and we're gonna work backwards a little bit and when we do the practice then again that's gonna be good practice because I'm gonna give you a situation and you will need to write the sentence you will need to write the mix conditional all right so let's look at the first one for you so the mix conditional number one is this one is we're using mm-hmm it's used to talk about the present result of a past condition so in all of my examples here I'm always putting the condition first and then the result and I've color-coded these two so if it's red it's talking about the past if it's green present and purple which you will see in a moment we're talking about the future okay so these are color coded as well Reds the past green is the present so we're talking about a past condition if I had gotten the job all right we're using the past perfect if I had gotten the job what's the present result I would live in New York City we're using would plus the base verb all right if I had gotten the job I would live in New York City so again when I say think about the situation did I get the job no do I live in New York City now no okay but if I had gotten the job I would live in New York City so let me give you another way we can say that and I want you just to listen to me and hopefully this will make a little more sense okay he did not take care of himself he's sick now but if he had taken care of himself he wouldn't be sick so again the mix conditional is just another way of stating this situation right here if he had taken care of himself he wouldn't be sick all right I hope that makes sense if it does make sense boom hit that like button alright and feel free guys go feel free to practice you some sentences as you're going along and somebody that way if somebody's watching this if you're watching this later you can try to read some of these sentences but we will practice in just a moment the next mix conditional I want to show you is this one right here okay so this mix conditional is used to talk about the future result of a past condition so again it's color coded my condition in the past my result it's in the future so I'm going and this is where I say some people might combine they say oh you know you mix conditional one and two they're kind of the same thing well you know again I wanted to separate them because we're talking about this is a definite result in the future so my past condition if I had gotten the job my future result that's the past perfect my future result again plus the base verb I'd be moving to New York City next month okay now when we're talking about a knight give you a time indicator they might tell you okay that's the future next month that tells us the future if I say tomorrow or next week or next year or tonight that's going to tell you the future so that's one thing to keep in mind if I had gotten the job I'd be moving to New York City next month now if I were to ask you about the situation okay did I get the job no all right am I going to move to

New York City next month no again that's not going to happen but if I had gotten the job I'd be moving to New York City let's look at another example past condition future result right here so and and this is this is not true by the way but my past condition okay if Wes hadn't squandered all of his money he'd traveled to Brazil for his birthday okay my birthday it's in November keep that in mind it's in November it's in the future okay so we're talking about a future result if Wes hadn't squandered all his money he traveled to Brazil for his birthday and any of you who are out there if you're from Brazil I haven't been you want an I we we have not been we want to go we really want to visit Brazil I've heard a lot of many great things about Brazil and many other countries as well that we want to travel to but let's look at our situation down here so if I said

Wes lost all his money in Vegas okay again it happened in the past I lost it Wes lost all his money in Vegas he cannot go to Brazil for his birthday which is in November it's in the future so Wes lost all his money in Vegas he cannot go to Brazil for his birthday but if Wes hadn't squandered all of his money he'd travel to Brazil for his birthday so again think about the situation and then you could ask it you could say but and then reword it using the mix conditional okay Wes lost all his money Vegas he cannot go to Brazil for his birthday but if Wes hadn't squandered all of his money he'd traveled to Brazil for his birthday this is mixed conditional number 2 let's look at another one so I hope this one makes sense and then again it's going to be good to practice because I'm gonna give you the situation and then you guys need to think of the mix conditional the third one that I want to look at is this one it's used to talk about a past the past result of a present condition the the conditions in the present right now the result is in the past okay so let's look at our sentence right would have plus the past participle if I didn't have a bike I would have taken the bus so let me give you a situation to help you think about this maybe you're going to work and you ride you ride your bike and you get to work in the present and somebody says you know oh you know what you you rode your bike to work today why did why did you ride your bike you know and you could say well if I didn't have a bike I would have taken the bus if I didn't have a bike I would have taken us a ride so in the present she didn't have to work the past something that happened in the past she would have given us a ride so here's our situation and that's gonna help us understand the mix conditional she is working now all right in the present she's there right now she's working she's at work and because she's at work she could not give us a ride she couldn't give us a ride in the past it's already happened but if she didn't have to work she would have given us a ride okay so I hope that makes sense she's working now she could not give us a ride but if she didn't have to work she would have given us a ride it's the present condition it's the it's the past result of a present condition okay so let's look at the fourth one all right and again we will practice in just a moment this is always good practice and I know if you're joining us a little late you can you can go back through and and watch some of these I will review real quickly so the fourth one used to talk about the past result of a future condition okay so our condition it's in the future the result is in the past okay if he wasn't going to come to the wedding all right we would have invited someone else now right here you might be wondering you're like wait a second I thought you said the subjunctive we can if you really really want to be grammatically correct you can use the subjunctive but just so you know many people as think when when people are talking in colloquial speech oftentimes they break this rule and they don't use the subjunctive I would say if you want to get really formal then yes you could say that use the subjunctive if he weren't going to come to the wedding but I wanted to give you that example of both so we could say again in the simple past either way whether use the subjunctive or not we're using the simple past if he wasn't going to

have already been sent out so I'm saying a future condition if he wasn't going to come to the wedding something a past result because the invitations are already out we would have invited someone else let's look at another example using this one future condition if they weren't going to bring food tonight we would have made a reservation at the restaurant so in this case it's a future condition if we weren't going to if they weren't going to bring food tonight we would have made a reservation at the restaurant here's our situation they will bring food we didn't make a reservation that's what happened they will bring food and that means in the past we didn't make a reservation but if they weren't going to bring food tonight we would have made a reservation at the restaurant so I hope in looking at these situations that it's it's you can kind of work your way backwards you can look at the situation and that's going to help you reword it and use a mix conditional to basically express this same thing so let's let's we're going to practice

but before we practice all right I want to review that do a quick review of some of these mixed conditionals for those that may be joining and again it's always good to review so the first one that I talked about and we're going to I'm just gonna give you the situation and and show you this so again we're talking about the the present result of a past condition okay he did not take care of himself so he's sick now but our past condition if he had taken care of himself the present result he wouldn't be sick okay so this is the mixed conditional number one number two we could say the situation again Wes lost all his money in Vegas he cannot go to Brazil for his birthday the past condition if Wes hadn't squandered all of his money squandered his to lose and to lose it unwisely and to do something stupid if Wes hadn't squandered all of his money the future result he'd traveled to

Brazil for his birthday so we have a past condition and a future result mix conditional number three here's my situation she is working hard result alright it happened in the past mix conditional number four with the situation they will bring food we didn't make a reservation but if they if they weren't going to bring food tonight we would have made a reservation at the restaurant okay so that is a quick review of all of these and I know I know it's a lot to try and take in this information it's a lot to take in so it's good to practice them and learn them and and do it slowly it doesn't have to be very rushed so now let's practice what we've learned today so what I'm going to do is I'm going to give you a situation and I'm going to tell you whether the the condition is if it's a past condition if it's a present and if it's a future condition I'll also tell you the result if it's past present or future but I'm gonna give you the situation and I'll tell you the the condition the result later write it in the comments it's always great to practice and try to use the language okay so here's the first situation I have for you and I'm also I'm gonna give you a hint I will give you the grammar as we do this so the situation is I'm not a billionaire I did not stop working I want you to use we're talking about a present condition and a past result present condition and a pressed result okay what would you say I'm not a billionaire I did not stop working all right write the sentence I want you to write the sentence in the chat okay try and and again even if you're a little unsure just practice writing practice practice your skills it's always good so let me let me give you a little hint all right all right this this would be the grammar if you're confused like I'm not sure which grammar to use again the present condition use the simple past the past result we're going to use would have plus plus the past participle I'm not a billionaire I did not stop working but and then write our mix conditional so again we're just basically saying but and rewording this using a mix conditional in the simple past and would have plus the base verb okay okay close I think all right a lot of people thank you guys for the answers yes excellent so I think most of us got it remember that past result would be would have plus the base the would have plus the past participle here's the answer if I were a billionaire simple past all right I'm not a billionaire but if I were a billionaire past result I would have stopped working okay so basically I'm not a billionaire I did not stop working but if I were a billionaire I would have stopped working I would have stopped working in the past but not a billionaire I didn't stop working and even if I were I would not stop working I enjoy working with you guys I enjoy this too much okay so I hope that makes sense that we can use these situations to try and write the mix conditional let's look at the next one so here is our situation he ate breakfast alright happened in the past that's our past condition he ate breakfast so the present result he is not hungry now alright he ate breakfast he is not hungry now can you try try to change that or not yeah try to take that situation and write a mix conditional sentence okay write it in the chat or again even if you're watching this later interact with us participate write these sentences in the comments so here is your hint okay again pass condition the the condition we're gonna use the past perfect the present result we're gonna use would and the verb okay he ate breakfast he is not hungry now but what would you say what what conditional sentence what mix conditional could we use to represent that getting some good answers excellent thank you guys for writing answers I didn't Kiera Otto Annie thank you guys for participating Morello let's look at our answer all right he ate breakfast he is not hungry now but if he had not eaten breakfast he would be hungry now if he had not eaten breakfast we're using the past perfect he would be hungry now we're using would plus the base verb all right he would be I just added really in there but you could just say he would he would be hungry now or he he would be really hungry now or you can take out now he ate breakfast he is not hungry but if he had not eaten breakfast he would be really hungry alright that would be the past condition and the present result let's practice another one are you ready here is the situation okay this time it's a future condition and a past result she is not able to play in tomorrow's tournament I found a replacement she's not able to play in tomorrow's tournament so I found a replacement but how can we right how can we use this mix conditional to express this situation how can we say that write your answers write it in the chat write it in the comments all right what would you guys say she is not able to play in tomorrow's tournament I found a replacement let me give you what there it is there's your there's your grammar hint if you guys are looking for the grammar of what you would want to use remember the future condition you're going to use the simple past the past result would have plus the past participle okay what would you say how would you express this situation using this mixed conditional she is not able to play in tomorrow's tournament I found a replacement what do you guys think alright see if you can write that sentence if you are unsure and want to know the answers remember future conditions simple past press result would have plus the past participle so she's not able to play in the tomorrow's tournament I found a replacement but if she were able to play in tomorrow's tournament and again I went back I'm using that I used the subjunctive if she were able to play in tomorrow's tournament I would not have found a replacement okay we just reworded it we reworded this situation using the mix conditional she is not able to play in tomorrow's tournament so I found a replacement but if she were not able to play in tomorrow's tournament I would not found a replacement so again these mix conditionals I understand I know that they can be very challenging very confusing I would suggest go back rewatch it and think about the two things when you're trying to understand mix conditionals don't focus as much on the grammar focus more on the situation and when these things are happening alright are these things happening in the past are they happening in the present are they happening in the future I think that is the best way to understand these mixed conditionals this Gela Jawad arora ani mustafa a mono judy go xie thank you thank you thank you da da sorry if i miss some names i hope that you enjoyed the lesson I hope you found it may be a little easier let make it I hope I made it a little more easier to follow along and understand these mixed conditionals because like I said when you're talking about general conditionals they're rule-based you can kind of follow the grammar but mixed conditionals don't focus on the grammar focus on the situation focus on when they're happening if you have any questions please write them in the comments once this is this video is posted also please like and share this lesson with your friends and your classmates anybody you know who's trying to practice and improve their English because again this is definitely a more advanced grammar concept when we're talking about mixed conditionals and as always you can join our social media classes we always post questions to help you guys practice and improve your English skills thank you thank you thank you so much for being here and I will see you guys next time

How to Use Modal Verbs | Should - Could - Would

all right hello hello hello glad happy to be back hope you guys are having a wonderful day whenever you're watching this if you're watching this now as a live stream or even even if you're watching it later so what I'd like to do again just say hello in the comments let me know your name where are you joining us from and again even if you're watching this later write to us in the comments say what's up we love hearing from you guys so my name is Wes and from interactive English and every week we come out with new and different English lessons to help you guys practice and improve your skills and this week right now this lesson it's a fun lesson because I'm going to talk to you about modal verbs and this is actually a lesson that I think some any one of you asked me about it about a month or two ago about doing a lesson on modal verbs and I'm gonna talk to you about how to use them and when we use them and specifically I'm gonna focus on those right there should could and would so stay with us because I promise you will learn something new I got a bunch of questions for you and we're gonna practice using these modal verbs so what's up I julissa Vika sort of Gerry Oh Fred Marco hello hello how are you guys long good to see so many familiar faces today thanks for joining me hope you guys are having a wonderful day and again sorry if I don't if I miss some names sometimes not everything it just Scrolls so fast in the feed but I will try to say what's up to you guys I appreciate you being here so let's just let's just jump into it so we're gonna talk about modal verbs specifically these three right here should and would there's all types of modal verbs but I specifically for this lesson just want to look at those three and then we're gonna practice using them a little bit so let's start out with a basic and simple question answering this well what are modal verbs the reason I wanted to talk to you about modal verbs is because we use them all the time it is these are very these are words that are very common we use them a lot but we don't tend to focus on these words they don't they're not given a lot of emphasis and we use them for the mostly these four reasons right here to show likelihood about whether something is going to happen or it's not going to happen we can use it to show ability whether we are capable of doing something we also use it for permission whether it's okay to do something or an obligation which is basically saying that it's something that we must do that we should do it is important for us to do something and if you really want to think about it modal's really just give us more information about the main verb now look at I'm I'm very proud of that picture that I found right down there because I saw it and I was like wow this will be a great way to show how modal's work in a sentence and kind of how it's connected and kind of turns things forward in our heads so we understand what is being talked about so you basically have your subject followed by the modal verb followed by the main verb and it really takes us through that process of the sentence and the modal verb again it's just really giving more information about that main verb in the main verb you can see is that biggest part of the the biggest gear because it is it's probably the most important part of a sentence because it really gives meaning to the sentence and what we're trying to convey the message the thought the idea that we're trying to tell so modal verbs really help out the main verbs in that way now there are certain characteristics about modal verbs that we should be aware of which is more of the the grammar to show us how to use these modal verbs so let's look at the characteristics of a modal verb so first off is modal's they never never never never never never I'll say it one more time never change their form so we don't add we don't we don't conjugate a modal verb we don't add s we don't add an e D for the past we don't add an ING for the continuous so you can look down there typically the subject and verb have to agree for example I want he wants we add an S but if we're using a modal verb and we say like I should you just say he should the modal verb does not change a form we do not add an S to the modal verb I tried to put it down there in that example and basically put the S in red to show you don't use it along with an X so yes do not change the form of the modal verb the second thing to be aware of is that modal's are followed by the bare infinitive and you might be wondering well what is the bare infinitive so an infinitive verb is just 2 plus the base verb to go to dance to run to learn if it's the bare infinitive you're just it's without - there is no - so for example again you would just have the subject the modal and then the bare infinitive just the base verb he should go alright now this is something that I think would be more common that learners might make mistakes in their writing I think speaking people use it correctly but sometimes I think in writing people might make these small mistakes and they might use the infinitive and when they should just use the bare infinitive you would just say he should go there is no something that you absolutely have to do if you're using should it's maybe like mmm 75% to 90% of saying okay this is you know this is something that you probably should do it will benefit you you should exercise you should eat healthier all right it's also polite because if I just tell you do some exercise it's a little it comes off as a little rude it's a little strong so you can use that modal verb to make it a little more polite by just giving you know a recommendation you should do this you should do that so what I want you to do right now is share with us and tell us what do you think what should you do to improve your English skills I want to hear from you guys right now me what should you do to improve your English skills and I want you to give me give me a full sentence right down there in the chat and if you are watching this later again practice with us use the comments section like like it's a whiteboard and write the sentences in there and practice writing with us tell me what do you think what should you do to improve your English skills have some other people joining us maaan deep hello Ahmed how's it going hope you guys mohammad sorry if i mispronounce some names sue-shaun good to have you guys here with us great thank you so much for joining us junior Marco whereas you wanna you wanna is actually out right now so she's she's not in the chat it's it's just us right now maybe she'll be back next time so Aman oh hello Helen great to have you guys with us thanks for joining us we are talking if you're just joining us we are talking about modal verbs and how we use them and why we use them and we're talking about should could and would so right now I want you to tell me what should you do to improve your English skills this is good advice that we can all read and learn from each other and and hear what each other is doing to practice and improve our English skills so in the chat tell me what should you do to improve your skills we can also you should to ask a question all right so I say you know should we watch another lesson maybe that's something that you're thinking after this lesson should I watch another lesson or should I cook dinner or should I watch some TV we can use it to ask questions but in my opinion I think it's used commonly to ask rhetorical questions and rhetorical questions are questions that are not meant to be answered and the reason I say this is because think it's commonly used when people are talking to themselves when people are thinking to themselves I do this all the time when I'm thinking to myself should I do this should I do that I'm not really expecting anybody to respond and give me an answer it's just something I asked myself so I think commonly we would you should in this context when we're thinking to ourselves about what we should do or maybe something we should not do we can use it to ask questions the other thing down at the bottom we can you should to express things that are likely to happen for example he should be here by now where you're waiting for somebody to show up to arrive and you might say well he should be here by now it's likely going to happen last week we talked about time expressions and I will I'll leave a link to it I'll put a card up in case you missed last week's live lesson and would like to check out and learn more about some time expressions but I told you how we could use the simple present to talk about something that will happen in the immediate future like the the plane arrives Monday or the plane arrives at night it's the simple present we can also you should like this to talk about something that will happen the plane should arrive tomorrow now if you're using should it means like well maybe maybe it's not going to arrive it should arrive but maybe it won't but you're talking about something that's likely going to happen the movie should start the party should start at 9 o'clock that is a great example and a way that it's commonly used because people will schedule a party but sometimes they well most of the time they start later than people tell you so but somebody might say well yeah it should start at 9:00 and that way you know like okay it's probably not going to start at that time I should show up a little later so I don't get there too early so that is again how we can use shoulds let's see what you guys told us what are some things you should do I should wake up early you're late class it's okay that's a good example Anibal thanks for sharing with us yes I should follow you to improve my learning skills perfect excellent use of should and yes I think you should follow us follow us on social media too you can join our classes we're always putting up new information and posting questions for you guys to answer and practice so I should watch you more than one hour to learn some ahmed thank you for sharing a sentence with us you guys are very flattering right now thank you I really appreciate it Rocio said we should practice listening listening and talking by watching by watching English movies in order to improve our English yes that is something that everyone should do to improve their skills practice their listening practice speaking you can watch movies read books I think is another great thing great way to improve your skills and it is something that you should do now let's look at the next modal verb which is good so the first part I want to tell you about is we use could to suggest a possibility alright you could do this or you could do that and the sentence that I had for you is well we could eat Italian or Thai food you have two choices and you're basically saying you could do this or you could do that so it's used to talk about a possibility something that you you have the choice to do so I want you to use it again let's let's practice using it in this way I want you to tell me what you know what could you eat tomorrow what is it possible for you to eat tomorrow give me some choices you you could eat this or you could eat that alright let me let me I'd like to hear from you because it's interesting to know what foods everybody is eating from all around the world and plus I'm kind of as you can tell I'm getting a little hungry right now so food food is on my mind so in the comments in the chat tell me what could you eat what could you eat tomorrow for lunch for dinner you could give me a sentence I could eat this or that alright you're talking about a possibility something that is it possible for you to eat the next thing you can also we use could quite often to ask questions and to make a request when you're asking somebody to do something and we you would say for example I'd say Oh could you please write to us in the comments we always ask you guys to write to us in the comments you can make it a request and could you you could also say can but again I think could is just it's a little more polite to use the modal it just sounds a little softer it's a little more polite a little more genuine you say could you please write to us in the comments and yes that's something we always want you guys to do is yes could you please write to us in the comments could you please join our classes could you please you know help us share the videos help us spread the word and make this class as large as possible so you can use could to make a request a polite request something you want somebody to do so if you guys have questions for us if you would like to request something that is something that's a good way to practice it you guys could say could you please do this for example I know in some of our lessons especially at the beginning the music that we would add to the lessons it was a little too loud but and that would be a request some people have written to us and said you know for the future could you turn down the music a little bit because it's a bit too loud and that would be a polite request the last thing that we use could for is when we want to use the past tense of can and in this sense we're talking about inability something that you can do so for example maybe I would say oh I can run fast I was I can run fast and then I get older like I am right now and I could use this sentence and I'd say when I was younger I'm talking about a time in the past when I was younger I could run much faster alright I could run much faster I had that ability in the past alright I could run much faster excellent so let's see how we're practicing could and some sentences you Lisa said I could eat a sandwich at lunchtime yes that is a possibility Vivian I could eat mashed potatoes poached egg and a glass of apple juice as my breakfast that sounds like a very nice breakfast that is something you could do it is a possibility could you please mention my name Alamgir yes Almaguer Hussein all right sorry if I mispronounced your name but yes I I will mention your name that you asked you asked very politely and that's very nice Aziz I could eat potatoes and rice excellent I could eat jr. I could eat lasagna all right I could eat lasagna Amano I could eat chicken or meat again you have a choice so that's a possibility so perfect you guys using that perfectly Maalik yes could you please speak slowly I will try I will keep that in mind thank you you asked very nicely and I think when I get excited about something I tend to speak faster and faster so that's actually an interesting request because some people it's very interesting you usually I talk slower naturally that's just my speech and a lot of times people comment about that in on our video lessons and they're like you speak way too slow you speak you sound like a robot and then other people are like oh you're too fast so I'm trying to find that balance what's beneficial for everybody what would help you guys the best what's the best speed and it's always gonna change so again this is how we use could and let's look at the last one would alright we use would when we're asking questions and using who what where when why how we we you commonly hear would used with these W questions who what where when why how even though how is not a w but we use it all the time with these questions so for example I would ask you maybe a question what would you like to do today what would you like to do today that would be a question what would what would you like to do today and my question to you I have a question are well I didn't put today in there I said what would you like to do my question to you is what would you like to do what would you like to do tomorrow tomorrow is Sunday what would you like to do tomorrow let me know in the chat or if again if you're watching this later write to us in the comments right there it is write to us in the comments what would you like to do on Sunday what would you like to do tomorrow let us know give me an answer and again you're gonna respond I would like what I would like to go swimming I would like to read a book I would like to study more English with interactive English so let me know let's practice using it what would you like to do tomorrow on Sunday answer that question please could you please answer that question and in the chat we also use would as you can tell same with these other modal verbs to ask questions we use would to ask questions and again it's it's polite would you please help me I think this is a great phrase to learn would you please would you please any time that you want to be polite and it's very important if you're at school or for a job for work to use this phrase would you please and then you could ask somebody you know what what do you want them to do you're making your request you're asking a question would you please do this would you please do that it is a great great great great phrase to learn the last part down there this last one is a hypothetical situation if I were you I would do the practice at the end of the lesson that's what we are getting ready to do if I were you I would do the practice at the end of the lesson now you might be it's a hypothetical situation and you might be looking at that and you know that oh okay that is a conditional sentence so we you we do use would with conditionals with the second conditional and the third conditional truth be told we have some very very very super awesome lessons on conditionals and again I will put a card up so that if you haven't seen them you can check those out if we're talking about the second conditional like this one a hypothetical situation or even the third conditional which would be an unreal possibility you would use would so an example using the third conditional again the condition would be the past perfect okay if I had gotten up earlier today I would have started this live lesson sooner if I had gotten up earlier today I would have started this lesson sooner so again we're using would Plus have plus the past participle but again I don't want to get into the grammar you guys can check out that lesson a little later next there are two other instances that we used would you would use it to make a polite request because instead of saying I want I would like I think I would ask you guys to take I want and almost just get rid of it all right it's it's so much more polite it's it's so much better to just say I would like I would like and I think it you know even if you're talking to your friends your family your teachers at work it's so universal it's good just to say you know I would like I would like I would like of glass of water you're making a polite request and the last one is to show a wish or desire what would you like all right what what is your wish what is your desire I gave you that example sentence kind of comparing two things I would rather I would rather go on vacation than go to work I think most of us would most of you would agree with that sentence I would rather go on vacation than go to work it's showing a wish showing a desire in your answers because I want to read them to you would basically you telling me your desire I asked you what would you like to do tomorrow what would you like to do and your answers would be telling me a desire I would like to go swimming I would like to read a book I would like to travel to another city so let's see what you guys put what would you like to do tomorrow my said I would like to go shopping perfect again that's expressing a desire Zarqa said I would like to hang out with my friends tomorrow perfect Doni tomorrow I would like to go to church search excellent Apple I would like to I would say I would like to thank you for your great videos you are very welcome thank you for joining us we're glad to have you so let's see IMed would have to work in the morning okay I would say well again your especially your desire what would you like to do tomorrow you then say if you don't want to work I I would not like to work tomorrow because it's very boring okay Dalia I would like to go clothes shopping to buy a new red dress for my relative's wedding excellent perfect thank you for sharing with us and have fun at the wedding Frank if I were you I would cook lunch at home instead of going to the restaurant that is a great example of the second conditional and using would perfect so let's now have a look and do the practice so I'm gonna give you a sentence and if you can try to write the whole sentence and you are just going to fill in are you going to use should are you going to use could or are you going to use would how are you going to complete the sentence alright so I will read the sentence and I just want you to write your answer in the comments and if you're watching this later make it more interactive write to us write to us in those comments all right don't don't be shy so this is your first one right here and with this first one okay I want you to pay attention to how I'm saying this pay attention to my intonation and my tone okay so I would say you try to study a little bit each day you try to study a little bit each day how would you complete that sentence I want you to write your answers in the chat are you going to use should could or would you try to study a little bit each day and I asked you again think about how I'm saying that think about my tone and that's kind of a hint so everybody you guys perfect excellent excellent so yes it is a suggestion so I said you should try to study a little bit each day that is something that we suggest to you guys all the time to improve your skills if you can find five minutes a day ten minutes a day 20 minutes a day a little bit each day even if it's three days a week four days a week five days a week you should try to study a little bit each day it really helps now what if I changed my intonation and said mmm you two try to study a little bit each day so what would you think in that went if I change my intonation and I say well you mM try to study a little bit each day what what would I what could we use in that case alright if I set it with that tone and with that intonation so this is where you see a little bit of a difference if I said you mM try to study a little bit each day some of you you wrote it in there perfect excellent look at you guys in that case yes we would change it we would use could because it's talking about a possibility and my tone changed a little bit and I would say yeah you could try to study a little bit each day as though I'm I'm offering you a suggestion but something that's possible for you to do maybe you will do it maybe you won't but you could use could in that case so either should or could we could use that in this sentence but it changes the meaning depending on which one we want to say so I'm gonna just put should could and see does that fit alright so yes I could say a recommendation you should try to study a little bit each day as a possibility I'd say you could try to study what could you do you could try to study a little bit each day so that is a rather long explanation for this first question let's just move on so the next one I have for you is this question right here what do you guys think how would you complete boom this sentence make it there we go alright where hmm you like to go for dinner where mmm you like to go for dinner how are we going to complete that question what do you guys think Oh dosa hello hi you're just joining us we're practicing using these modal verbs should could and would if you guys just joined us hi Eduardo what's up glad to have you here so again write your answers in the chat how would you complete this question where mmm you like to go for dinner remember I told you that if we're talking about those questions who what where when why how we would use that with wood we often use it with wood where would you like to go for dinner so for this one we would put wood where would you like to go for dinner it's a common question that you might ask your friends your family members your husband your wife your boyfriend your girlfriend whoever where would you like to go for dinner let's look at this next question how about this one how would you guys say this oh if you got that last one right if you if you're getting these correct hit that hit that thumbs up button let me know that you guys are getting these correct and that you're able to follow this and it's pretty easy to follow so how would you complete this next sentence we get going we get going we get going we get going what would you use should could would to complete that sentence and everybody excellent yes you would say and this is a common phrase that if if you're leaving somewhere many people would say you know we should get going and again you're talking about in this case you're talking about something that is likely to happen something that's likely to happen we should we should get going it's getting late we should get going we should leave it's time to go we should get going it's a kind of a polite way to suggest that you know that it's time all right time to end the evening I should get going we should get going again you you could say it I guess as a possibility like hey you know well we could get going it's not it's not going to be you're not going to hear that too often I'm trying to think of a context that you might use that in but it's not something you would hear it's mostly yes we should get going what about this one right here how would you complete boom this sentence all right when I was a student I set my own schedule when I was a student I mmm set my own schedule are you going to use should could or would what do you guys think hi honey thanks for joining us excellent now nobody's ever nobody's ever late to class it is all good because this is going to get posted later and people you guys can watch this anytime you and even if you're out there now watching this later I want you to answer these questions write your answers in the comments it doesn't just have to be passive learning we want you to interact with us we want you to be engaged and it's a really good way to practice you can use the comments section use it as a whiteboard so what would you say to complete this sentence when I was a student I mmm set my own schedule excellent everybody again you're talking about the past tense of can and that first part is that that's your big hint when I was a student you're talking about a point in the past what did you have the ability to do I could set my own schedule that is an ability I had in the past so we're using it like can in the past tense let's try this one have a couple more for you boom how would you how would you complete this sentence I mmm like you to ask one more question I mmm like you to ask one more question should could or would which modal are you going to use to complete that sentence should could or would hi Carlos what's up thanks for joining us thanks for saying hello I hope you're having a good day so here is my question we're doing a practice with modal's and I just want you guys to write your answers in the chat and everybody is rocking this practice so yes you're basically it is a desire or a wish something that you're asking and you would say I would like remember I told you that's a great this is a great phrase to remember instead of I want I want I want I want no I would like I would like it is so much better to get in the habit of using this especially if you're just meeting people you want to be polite if you at work you want to be polite if you're at school you want to be polite so I would like and to meet that request yes

I will give you another another question all right so how would you fill out what about this one um BAM okay after this lesson alright after this lesson you mM share this video or join our social media classes what would you use you like how I'm I'm dropping all these subtle hints for everybody throughout the lesson it's a good way to practice so after this lesson you mmm share this video or join our social media classes which are right down here down there Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat or of course right here on YouTube how would you guys complete that sentence after this lesson you hmm share this video or join our social media classes so this one Wow okay yeah what I was going for many of you put should I guess you say I I guess you could say that because I'm giving you a thing I was actually I was actually going for more of a possibility of saying well you don't have to do this but you could so maybe my tone was incorrect when I was saying those but yeah you could say after this lesson you should share this video or join our social media classes but I wanted to actually go for after this lesson you hmm you could share this video or join our social media classes so either one of those is correct maybe I didn't give you the right intonation but I was going for could suggesting a possibility of something that could happen so again if you just joined us late I just want to review the modal verbs that we talked about we went over and should and the times that we you should to talk about an obligation or request something you should do we can use it to ask questions and I said it was mostly I mostly use it to ask rhetorical questions when I'm thinking to myself should I do this should I do that should I ask another question should I not and finally like that last one down there to express something that's likely going to happen he should be here by now next we talked about could and could express a possibility like that last one I was going for you could share this lesson or join our social media classes it's just to suggest a possibility you can make questions and make a request you can ask questions and make a request could you please do something could you please a great way another great phrase to remember to be very very polite and finally to use it in the past of can when I was younger I could run much faster and finally we talked about would with those questions who what where when why how what would you like to do what would you like to do where would you like to go why would you like to learn English and with questions just directly using the modal would you what would you please help me again that's another great way to be polite would you please anything do something would you please help me would you please write to us in the comments and a hypothetical situation if we're talking about conditionals if I were you I would mm I would watch another lesson all right we can also use would to make a request I would like a glass of water or to show a wish or desire something that you would like to do tomorrow I would like to relax and rest and just kick back and have a day and just chill out and do nothing that's what I would like to do so again thank you guys so much for joining us I hope that you learned something new if you did boom please hit that like button or share the video with others help us spread the word if you have any other questions or comments related to could should or would please write them in the comments and even if you're watching this later just tell us your name tell us where you're from answer these questions and interact with us again because this is it's interactive English and finally you can join our social media classes we're active on Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat and YouTube so again excellent junior Carlos Frank long Rosa thank you guys Marco Amano Donny Annabelle Dahlia sorry if I'm missing some names thank you guys thank you thank you thank you so much for joining us and as always you know we will see you very shortly we will see you next time have a great day enjoy the rest of your weekend and we'll see you later so long

How to Use Social Media to Learn English (Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, Snapchat)

just about all of us have it and pretty much all of us use it I'm talking about social media and what I want to tell you today is how you can use it to improve your English [Music] skills before we begin today's lesson I'd like to remind you to hit that subscribe button if you would like more lessons on how you can practice and improve your English when it comes to learning languages one thing that most teachers will tell students is to try and expose themselves to the language and there's a lot of different ways that students can get exposure usually I would tell students to watch TV movies listen to music read books classroom instruction is always very useful as well as using apps on a phone so there's so many different ways that students can get exposure to the language and another way that students can get a little more exposure is with social media and the reason that this is so important is because it's something that we're already using anyway so why not use that to complement our language instruction or basically anything else that we would like to learn more about there are so many resources out there on Facebook Instagram Twitter Snapchat and YouTube which is what we're watching right now that will help you learn and improve your English skills another reason that social media can be very useful is that we don't have to go very far to access it pretty much all of us are usually surrounded by either a computer or we have our phones on us and we are accessing social media it doesn't matter if we're on a bus or maybe waiting at the doctor's office or just sitting in bed people are on it all the time so why not use it to help complement your language skills so quickly I want to talk about three benefits of using social media to learn English the first benefit is time and flexibility because you get to choose when you want to do this I know some of us have very busy lives with work and family and there's not always time to go to class or even sit down and watch a movie or read a book so social media is something that is very quick and very useful that you can just take a few minutes out of your day to practice your English skills and that doesn't mean that every time you go on social media you have to use it to learn English it's a matter of exposure you can use it for rest and relaxation but there is value in following teachers there's value in following groups or accounts that are out there in using social media to help people practice and improve improve their English because that way you'll get a little exposure each and every day another benefit of using social media is that you actually get to produce the language it's not just passive language learning and what I mean by that is when you're watching TV or movies you are just sitting there you're just watching something and you're listening and you're receiving the information but with social media you can use comments you can write and actually produce the language you can write answers to questions you can write comments you can give feedback you can even ask questions so it's not just passive language learning you can turn it into something more and make it more of an active language learning environment a final reason why social media is useful is because it is primarily learner directed A learner directed approach is when Learners have ownership over the learning process in which they are more accountable and they're more active in what is going on and because of that there is value in what they're learning because they have more control over the process and as far as social media is concerned it is completely learner directed because you get to decide when you want to use it you get to decide how you want to use it whether it's on Facebook Twitter Youtube Instagram it doesn't matter you have complete control of this process and because you have more control of this process it might be good motivation because the motivation to do this is coming from within you so to sum things up social media is a great resource that is available to most of us I'm not telling you that you have to use it I'm just suggesting that it's useful if you're really looking to practice and improve your English skills now I should tell you it's not something that if you are at a beginner level that you can say well I'm going to use social media and then soon I'm going to be perfectly proficient in English that's not the case social media is really a way to complement the knowledge that you already have the skills that you already have it will complement the the English that you're learning in the classroom it'll complement the English that you are learning through self-study and in the end you'll just become more proficient and you will improve your language skills and if you're looking for some people to follow you could follow us if you want to we are active on these social media sites Facebook Instagram Twitter and Snapchat and typically we'll post a lot of information and questions to try and help you practice and improve your English now even if you don't want to follow us there are so many other teachers and accounts and groups out there that you can follow and we highly recommend that you do because this will help you get a little more exposure and it will all help you practice and improve your skills in the comments below we want you to write Which social media sites you like using and why and if you have any suggestions of teachers or groups or any accounts out there that would help other Learners practice their English skills this is very useful information and the more information we all have the better thanks for watching hope you enjoyed this video go use some social media and we'll see you next time become an active learner don't just rely on a lot of this passive learning yeah you want to use it for active or passive or blah blah blah blah I don't know what I'm talking about I don't know where I'm going with this

How to Use the 1st Conditional | Grammar Lesson

If you watch this lesson, you will learn how to use the first conditional. Just like that. Welcome. Today, I'm going to talk to you about the first conditional. Okay. Whoa, whoa, whoa. Save your applause for later. First, I want to run you to join our social media classes. Right there. Because it's just another great way to continue practicing your English skills. Okay. Now, on to business. So conditional sentences are "if: statements. And they're made up of two parts. The first part is the condition, and the second part is the result. So let's look at the first sentence that I said to you. If you watch this lesson, you will learn how to use the first conditional.

So the condition is also known as the "if" clause. It has a subject, and it has a verb. But it is not a complete sentence. We need a main clause in order to complete the sentence, and that is our result. Now, the result also has a subject and a verb. And it is also a complete sentence. And we put those together and then we have our "if" statement. See, you're learning already. Now, we use the first conditional to talk about real or possible situations that are likely going to happen. So here's another example of a sentence in the first conditional. So we have the condition, "If you study with us." That is the possible situation.

Followed by the result, "you will learn English." That's the likely outcome. And I think it's true. Now, keep in mind that in the result the subject will sometimes get contracted with the helping verb "will." So then we would have... Also, be mindful of the punctuation. Because if the condition comes before the result then we need a comma to separate the two clauses.

Now, if we switch those around and the result comes before the condition, then we don't need a comma. Now I'm going to get all grammar-ly - grammar - grammatical...I'm just making stuff up. But we're going to look at the grammar. So in the condition, which is our "if" clause, we are going to use the present simple. And with the result, the main clause, it is going to be in the future tense. This is a rule. Make sure you follow it. The "if" clause is in the present simple. The main clause is your future. I also think that we use "will" most of the time when we're talking about our result in the future.

Now, you can use "be going to," that's perfectly fine. I just don't think it's as common. But I think it's more common for people to use "will" because you're talking about a likely outcome in the future. Let's look at a couple of other examples using the first conditional. So here our condition, "If you win the match," is the possible situation. And our result, "I'll give you ten dollars," is a possible future outcome.

Now did you notice the punctuation in this sentence? The result, which is the main clause, comes before the condition, which is our "if" clause. So again when the result comes before the condition, there is no comma. Yeah, I definitely wouldn't want to go out in that. So as you can see, there are many different uses for the first conditional. And it is so important because we use it all the time. So let's look at a few more examples of the first conditional being used in different situations. If it takes forever, then I'll walk forever. If you stop, I'll autograph those. I'll go if you go. He'll get hurt if we don't find him.

Eddie if he drinks the water out of there, the tree is going to dry up. He'll die if he stays here. Now, let's practice using the first conditional. So, I'm going to show you a picture and I want you to think of a sentence describing this picture using the first conditional. I'll give you a few moments, and then I will tell you some of the sentences that I came up with to describe this picture.

Now, if you really want to go to the extra mile you can write your sentence in the comments, and then you get to practice writing the first conditional. All right. Here's the picture. Okay, so here are some of the sentences that I came up with. Or maybe said... We could also say... We could also say... Or... Or maybe you thought of this sentence. Perhaps you thought of another sentence, and that's perfectly fine. But let's do the activity again. I'm going to show you another picture, and this time I do want you to write your sentence in the comments and practice using the first conditional. If you need some examples, we just did that other activity.

You can go back and check out how I wrote those sentences. So I'm going to show you a different picture, and I want you to write your sentence using the first conditional. And write them in the comments, and I'm going to check them. If you need additional time to think of a sentence and write it, just pause the video. Now, before I show you the picture, please give this video a thumbs up if you feel like you've learned something new or enjoy practicing the first conditional with us. Also, once this video ends and you write your sentence, maybe you should go on and watch another lesson or two or three or four.

So, are you ready to write the first conditional? Here's the picture.

How to Use the 2nd Conditional | Useful Grammar Lesson

If I were you, I would watch this lesson. Because we're going to talk about the second conditional. And I am going to tell you how to use it, when to use it, why to use it. And...yeah, that's coming up. Welcome, welcome, welcome. Today, we are going to talk about the second conditional. But before we begin, I want to remind you to check out our social media classes because it is a great way to practice your English skills. If I were you, I'd check it out. See...we're using the second conditional already. So first of, let's talk a little bit about conditionals in general. And they're made up of two parts, which is a condition and a result.

So let's look back at that first sentence I said. Now, the condition is going to have a subject and a verb, but it's not a complete sentence. If I were you... That that doesn't mean anything. And that is why we need our results to complete the sentence. And this is our main clause. It also has a subject and a verb, and it could stand alone as an independent sentence. I would watch this lesson. And when we put this all together, the condition and the result, we have our second conditional.

Now, the reason it's the second conditional is because The second conditional talks about a hypothetical or an unreal situation. And it's the condition that tells us about this hypothetical or unreal situation. So let's get a little help from our friend Beyonce because she has an example. So this is our condition, and it is an unreal situation. Why? Because Beyonce...she's not a boy. At least I don't think she is. No, no she's not. It's not real. Here's another example of a hypothetical condition. So this condition is hypothetical. Do I have a million dollars? No Will I ever have a million dollars? Probably not. So it is hypothetical. It's probably not going to happen.

Now the result is going to tell us about the probable outcome from whatever hypothetical or unreal condition. So let's go back to Beyonce's example and have her complete the sentence. So she's talking about the outcome - what she would do if she were a boy. Now, what if we had a million dollars? How are we going to complete that sentence? Of course, there is a lot that I would do if I had a million dollars. So let's go back to that first sentence.

Now, when we're using the second conditional the condition is going to be in the simple past. With the result, we're going to use WOULD + BASE VERB. And this is a rule. The condition is going to be in the simple past, and the result we're going to use would plus the base verb. If I were you - in the simple past - I would watch this lesson. WOULD WATCH.

Now you're probably looking at the condition and thinking wait, wait, wait, wait. This is a little strange. Why are we using "were" with the subject "I"? This is because the second conditional is one of those times when we use the subjunctive in English. The challenge with this is that you often hear people speaking, especially native speakers, using, "If I was..." And they don't use the subjunctive. You might hear this in movies. You might hear it when you're watching TV. This is one of those grammar situations in which even a lot of native English speakers say it incorrectly. So if you want to use the correct grammar, use the subjunctive. If I were... Now you only have to worry about the subjunctive when we're using the verb TO BE.

All the other verbs in the simple past will not be affected. The challenge is that when we use the second conditional, were often using the verb TO BE. Also, keep in mind the punctuation. When the condition comes before the result, we need a comma to separate our "if" clause and our main clause. Now if we switch these around, and the result comes before the condition, then we don't need a comma. The last thing that I want you to know about the second conditional is that in the result, we can use could instead of would if we're talking about a present or future outcome. For example... So let's see some other examples of the second conditional being used in different situations.

If I were you, I would think about climbing on board. I wouldn't be your girl even if, even if you had a million dollars. If I jump, would I survive? What would you say if I took those words away? Now, let's practice what we've learned. So in the comments, I want you to complete the following sentence. What? What would you do? Let us know. Write it in the comments. I look forward to reading about this hypothetical situation because...

Let's face it. We're probably not going to win the lottery. Sorry. But you could still tell us what you would do. I hope that you enjoyed this lesson on the second conditional, and if you did please give this video a thumbs up. And you can go on check out some of our other video lessons so you can continue practicing your English. Thanks for watching, and we'll see you next time.

LESSON 367 OF 749

How to Use the Definite Article (THE) & Zero Article (X) | Grammar Lesson

All right, I think uh we are getting this show on the road. So, welcome. I hope uh you guys are having a great weekend. If you're watching this later in the future at some point, I just hope that you're having a good today. Let's just get right into it and show you what we will be talking about. So before we begin, as you join uh this live lesson, again, tell us your name, let us know, let us know where you're from. And also, if you're watching this later on in the future, again, use the comments, write your name, write a question, say hello, tell us where you are watching from, and just join the community because it's always good to continue practicing uh your writing, and it's a great way to communicate. So, today, as you can see, we are going to do a grammar lesson. Yes. Um, we're going to be doing a grammar lesson. Um, talking about articles. So, again, some people are joining us. Hello. Uh, Hajer from Malaysia. Awesome. Um, Estella Muhamad. Excellent. Awesome to have you. Glad you guys are with us. So as I said today we are going to talk about articles and I promise if you stick with us I will you will learn something that you did not know before because again this is something that articles we learn at probably a beginner level and we're constantly using them throughout English and there are some tricky rules to articles. Now there are three things that you should know about articles. So there are the definite article 'the'. There is also the indefinite article which is a and n. We are not going to talk about those today.

And then there is the zero article in which case we don't use anything at all. So today I'm just going to focus on the definite and zero article and when to use them and show you the difference between the two. And then at the end we are going to do a practice and I am going to see just how much you were paying attention. So again if you're just joining us say hello Eduardo from Brazil. Hope everything hope your summer's going well. Actually no wait in Brazil it's winter there. Getting my north and southern hemispheres mixed up. But anyway I hope everything's well. Hi from Sri Lanka. Excellent. Um, also if you guys want to be super super super helpful, you can share this video and tell others and bring more to our classroom so everybody can learn about articles. So again, today I'm going to talk to you about the difference between the definite article 'the' and the zero article, in which case we're not using anything. So, let's get into it and talk about when to use the definite article 'the'. Okay, so as you can see right here, we're talking about when to use the definite article 'the'. If you have any questions about this lesson in particular, write them in the comments. Just, you know, I'll I'll get to them. If it's not, if it's a separate question related to maybe pronunciation or something else, still write it and we will try to I will get to it at the end of the lesson. But right now, I want to focus on articles. So, when to use the. So, here's a fun little fact for you that according to the Oxford English corpus, 'the' is the most common word in English. That's probably not surprising or it shouldn't be surprising. Um, we use this word all the time and the Oxford English corpus is just a collection of basically the English language. It's a collection of English in books, in speeches, in writing. And 'the' is the most common word. So, you can see just how important it is. Now, we use the before singular and plural nouns. And this is the key thing when we want to talk about something specific. So the articles, we use them before nouns and it kind of shows the relationship uh of this noun and kind of gives us more information about the noun. So we're using 'the' when we're talking about something specific. So for example, let's look at this uh conversation down below. These two people talking and kind of these random sentences. The first one says the car is in the shop. So if I say the car, we basically know which car is being talked about. It could be my car, it could be my family's car, it could be my friend's car. But if I say the car, then basically we know which car is being discussed. It is specific. Now, if we look at the other use of the definite article, the car is in the shop. All right? Again, this is specific. We know what kind of shop we're talking about. Now, are we talking about a grocery store? No. Are we talking about a flower shop? No. If you're talking about a car that is in the shop, you should know that we're talking about the mechanic. The car is broken. Something is wrong with it. So, we took it to the shop. The next one is don't. Then the other person just responds out of nowhere and says, "Hey, don't buy the new iPhone." Um, again, you know, Yana has an iPhone. Many of us like iPhones. I have some Apple products. I'm not saying you shouldn't buy the new iPhone. If you want to, feel free. This is just an example. So, don't buy the new iPhone. There are many different iPhones, but we are talking specifically about the new one. The other thing to keep in mind here is new is an adjective that is modifying iPhone. We're talking about new a new iPhone and the comes before the adjective. The new iPhone, the big house, the purple cat. I don't know. All right. So, the will always come before the adjective. Again, if you're just joining us, say hello to us in the comments. Tell us your name, where you're from. Uh we are doing a lesson today on articles and then I am going to do a practice at the end. So it is very important that you guys practice what you learn and we will try to make this as active as possible. So please write to us in the comments um and let us know. So these are all ways that you are using the. So let's look at the zero article. All right. Uh let's switch here. So here we go. All right. The zero article is right here. we use it before plural or non-count nouns that are not specific. Okay? So, plural nouns, you know, that things that typically get an s added to the end of it. A non-count noun are nouns that that you can't count. basically like any liquid uh water, soda, tea, um or hair is also a non-count noun.

So, uh let's see. For example, I want you to try to use this in a sentence. Uh in one of them, I will ask you a question and I want you to answer it. Um what do you like to drink? All right. I want you to tell me what you like to drink. It is a non-count noun. Write it in the comments. Do not use an article. Okay? So, look at these examples. We here have again another weird little conversation here. Apples are good for your teeth. Apples is plural. All right. But we are talking is it specific? No. We are talking about it in a general sense. Do we know which apples we are talking about? No. All right, just apples in general could be red apples, could be green apples, any apple, they're good for your teeth. So, we do not use an article before the noun apples. All right, this is when the zero article comes into play. And then the next one, all right, I like to drink water. Again, water is a non-count noun. So again, we do not use an article in front of the noun water. Excellent. Uh, example sentence. Perfect. Uh, Eduardo, I like to drink coffee. I also like to drink coffee. I've probably had a little too much coffee today, but hey, you know, that's okay. It is what it is. Uh, another great sentence. I like to drink juice. Again, these are non-count nouns. Do not use an article. And this is the thing as as simple as this is right now, these are the common mistakes that whether you are a beginner learner or whether you are an advanced learner that you you would hear people make from time to time and they might use an article in front of a non-count noun because when you're having a conversation and when you're talking, you're not really thinking about, okay, wait, is this a is this a non-count noun? Should I use an article? Should I not use an article?

You're just going to say it. So these are good ways to just continuously practice and it's easy and then when you continue to use English in speaking and writing you will just be using it correctly because you've practiced these simple little things that we're doing today. All right. So let's look at the next part. I want to compare the two. I want to show you basically a little the difference between them.

Let's compare these. Okay. So here we have two sentences. One has the definite article 'the'. The other sentence has the zero article and there is nothing. So again it's a difference between whether something is specific or whether it is not specific. So let's look at these two sentences. The boys play soccer. Okay, it is specific. We know which boys we are talking about. We are talking about those boys right there. Okay, the boys play soccer. We know them or we can see them or we know about these boys and therefore it is specific and we use the definite article 'the'. Now, in the next sentence, we're using the zero article and we're just making a statement saying, "Well, boys play soccer." All right? We don't know which boys we're talking about. We just know that some boys play soccer. So, this is the difference between the definite and the zero article. All right? The definite is going to be specific. The zero article is just in general. And because of that, this picture down here, you can see we we can't really see the boys. We don't know them. And actually, the picture looks a bit funny because I don't know.

Uh, nobody really wears a hat like that when they play soccer. But you get the idea. Okay. Again, if you're just joining us, say hello to us in the chat. We are talking about articles, the definite article and the zero article. Now, what I want to do is go over some of the rules. All right. Now, I know what you're thinking. You're thinking, "Gosh, I don't like rules because it's just more things that we have to memorize, that we have to think about." So, rules, yeah, they can be problematic because it's just more information you have to learn. The good thing is however is that because there are certain rules to follow then you know what is correct and what is incorrect. It's just a matter of using them um correctly when you are speaking or when you are writing. Now, some of these rules, these are not all of the rules when it comes to the definite article and the zero article, but these are some of them that maybe you knew, maybe that you didn't know. So, we use the when we are talking about rivers. All right? Anytime you're talking about a river, we should use an article the. The Nile River, the Ganges River. All right? So, with rivers, we use the. We also use the the definite article when talking about oceans. The Pacific Ocean, the Atlantic Ocean. So, actually right now in the comments, let's do it. I want you to tell me a the name of a river in your country. Okay? Tell me the name of a river in your country and use the definite article 'the'. All right? It'll maybe I'll learn some new names of rivers. Uh, and if you are watching this later on, again, don't just sit there watching the video. Write, use the comments section. It's basically the same as a chat.

Write the name of the river in there. Say hello, say what's up, write a question, and we will get back to you. It doesn't matter whether it's tomorrow or a year from now. Just use the comments section. the chat, write the name of a river in your country. A famous river, a local river, it doesn't matter. All right? Just write the name and use the definite article 'the'. Okay? We also use the when we are talking about bridges. Um, perfect, Marcela. The river Amazonas. All right. Uh, excellent. Uh, we use the when we're talking about bridges. For example, this is where we used to live in San Francisco. And you have the famous Golden Gate Bridge. Um, the Amazon River. Excellent. Awesome. Uh, one of the most probably the most famous river in the world. Excellent. So, we use it with bridges. Um, also with regions. Okay. So, we're talking about you just gave some examples with the Amazon River. The Amazon is a region.

Okay. You can say it is an area that is defined. Um, so we can use the with the region. Um, the Everglades, which is in Florida, is another region. You can also use it when you're talking about regions such as on the coast, um the west coast, the east coast, maybe you're talking about a region in the southeast part of a country. So, anytime you are identifying a region, you would want to use the the definite article 'the'. Okay? The west coast, the east coast, the northwest, the northeast, the southwest. Use the with regions. If you're just joining us again, welcome. We're talking about articles. I know some of you probably join, you're like, "Articles? Oh, I'm out of here." No. Um, giving you some quick rules and tips of when to use the and when to use no article because again, some of these things, these little rules can be tricky. Um, the G the Ganga is the biggest river in India.

Excellent. Thank you. Um, again, this is all good practice. So finally we use the when we are talking about buildings. Okay, buildings or sites. All right. So for example in New York City, one of the most famous buildings in New York City is the Empire State Building. Also a very well-known landmark um in Paris is the Eiffel Tower. So you we use it with buildings, we use it um with landmarks. That is when we use the definite article 'the'. Now, no article. All right. I think I think learning 'the' is a little more easier. I think the no article becomes tricky because people just have a natural tendency to use the um instead of using no article. Hey, Ricardo, how's it going? Uh happy to have you with us again today. Excellent. So, we're talking about rules for articles.

Now, we use no article with names. Okay. I think when you become when you're more more advanced learners, I don't think they have an issue with this, but definitely when for more beginner and intermediate learners, I will often hear the with names all the time. Um, not so much with people like friends when they're talking about him, but when you're talking about somebody, for example, like in history, King George. All right. No article. It is the name of a person. Um or somebody famous uh the late Michael Jackson. Everybody mostly everybody knows who Michael Jackson is but again we would not use an article with the name of a person. The next one which is also confusing streets. Street names. We do not use the with street names. So, for example, Park Avenue um is a famous street that you would find in the US.

Main Street is a common name of a street that you will find. Again, let's you know, you do not use the with the names of streets. So, I want you again in the comments again, let's just practice. What is the name of a famous street in your city or town? What's the name of a famous street or a popular street in the downtown area? Um, you can just write a famous street is blah blah blah. All right. And remember, do not use an article. This is easy, but this is all good practice. Um, another great location. Exactly. We just said somebody said the Taj Mahal. Again, that is a landmark. We use the definite article 'the'. So, continuing with no articles, we don't use articles with names. We don't use articles with the names of streets, okay? We just say the street names. We also don't use it with languages, okay? We just say English or um I'm learning English. I'm learning Spanish. I'm learning Japanese. I'm learning Swahili. We do not use the with the languages. Okay. Also lakes. All right. So for example um Lake Tittikaka is a famous lake in Bolivia. No article with that. Lake Malawi uh famous lake in the country of Malawi. And again there is no article with lakes. Now there's little exception here. If you are talking about a group of lakes all right then you would use it uh an article. So for example you could say the great lakes. All right, lakes is plural and it's talking about a collection of lakes. In that case, you would use an article, but again, that is a rare exception.

Typically, with the names of lakes, we are not using an article. If you're just joining us, say what's up. Say hello to us in the comments. What's your name? Where are you joining us from? And stay with us. We are getting ready to do a quick practice. We're talking about articles, the definite article 'the' and the zero article. So finally we use no article with the names of mountains. All right. So think of famous mountains that around the world probably first one mount Everest. Okay. Uh everybody knows of Mount Everest and we don't use an article with Mount Everest. Also mount Mount Arangagwa uh which is the highest mountain in South America. Again no article with that. We have people joining us. Ah Turkey. Excellent.

Welcome. Glad to have you. So, these are not all the rules, but again, these are rules that you should be aware of. They exist when it comes to using articles. And again, with speaking, you you're just going to talk. You're probably not going to think about the rules. Um, with writing, you might be a little more conscious of it. But this this is a very simple lesson because I think all of you right watching this right now, you understand this like, oh, okay, we use art, we use the with the name of a river. Okay, we use no article with a name. The difference is once you get into that conversation, it becomes a whole new thing. And this is where people make small mistakes. So, it's good to just do a quick little practice, a quick little refresher, a little reminder as to when you should and should not use these.

are the rules. And now I would like to practice. Stephen, ah, could you speak a little slower? Yes, I will try. All right. Um, so let's practice again these rules. I want to go over quickly just to review in case you are now joining us that we use here is the again when to use the definite article. We use it with singular and plural nouns when we want to be specific. When you know what the noun that is being talked about, use the definite article 'the'. So, if I say, "Hey, let's go to the park." Then you should know which park I'm talking about because it is specific the park. If we're talking about zero articles, again, to review, we use those with plural and non-count nouns when we are not being specific. We are talking about things in general. Okay, I gave you those two example sentence. Um, apples are good for your health. We don't need the article. And I like to drink water. I just asked all of you a while back, what do you like to drink? It's a liquid. It's a non-count noun. It is not specific. So, you'd say, yes, I like to drink tea. I like to drink juice. I like to drink soda. I like to drink water. Okay. So now let's do our little practice. So I am going to give you all right a sentence right here. All right. And what I want you to do is I want you to write in the comments the answer. All right. I want you to write the or for no article you can just put an X. Now if you want to be uh you know go above and beyond and do a bit more practice then you can write the full sentence in the comments. Okay. Are you using no article or are you using the definite article 'the'? So this first sentence the first sentence we have is this. All right. Uh, look at m cats over there. Look at m cats over there. We are talking about the plural noun cats. Are we going to use the definite article the or the zero article? In which case, just write uh x and just put it in the chat. Again, if you are watching this later on, next week, in the future, next year, 10 years from now, you can still do this practice. Use the comment section that you see and just write the answer. Again, it's always good to produce the language and actually use it instead of just watching. All right, so we're getting some comments. Um, all right. All right.

So, again, we're talking about cats. Let me see. Um, in this situation, all right, I'm saying look at cats over there. All right, so putting this into context, you would think, well, we are looking at the cats. We can see the cats that we are talking about. In that case, it is specific. All right, so we would want to say this. Look at the cats over there. Look at the cats over there. It's specific. We know which cats we are talking about. All right, let's do another one. Okay, so the next one that I have for you guys and we'll see if we can make this fit is this question right here.

All right, let me change this around a little. So in this next sentence, all right, there are two that you need to fill in. All right, going to make them a little try to make them a little more difficult, a little more tricky as we go along. All right, so it is m doctors say drinking m soda is unhealthy. So there are two nouns. The first one is the plural noun doctors. Okay, the next one um is soda. All right, so before doctors, are we going to use the definite article 'the' or no article? All right, and then before the next one, soda, are we going to use again? Is it the or is it no article? All right, I'll give you just a moment. Again, write your answers in the comments if you're a quick typer. All right, go ahead and write the whole sentence if you can. Um, it makes it, you know, that's even better. If not, then just write either 'the' or an X.

The for definite and X for no article. So, let's see. What do you guys think? XX. It depends. Yes, it does depend. Yeah. Again, try to put it put it into context. See what you think about, you know, what if you're having this conversation. Again, I put all of it in quotes. So, it's kind of like, you know, we're having a conversation here. Um, if somebody was saying this to you, what what would it mostly be? All right. What are we talking about? What do you think? Doctor Doctors say drinking soda is unhealthy. All right. So, without further ado, let me tell you what it is. All right. So in this situation again we're talking about probably you know doctors in general because not often are you going to be talking about doctors in a specific sense of that oh you know the doctors you you um you see the group of doctors.

Typically you might talk about the doctor as in one person. So in this case we would be saying it would be the no article. Bam. Doctors say drinking. Again, no article. Soda is unhealthy. Soda is a non-count noun. It's just talking about in general what?

Something that doctors would tell you. All right. Doctors say drinking soda is unhealthy. We do not use an article before either of those nouns. Next one. Let's do this one. Let's see. Change it up on you a little bit. Or maybe not right here. What do you think? Okay. So, let me make sure this fits into There we go. That's a little better. So, we have Washington Boulevard is named after George Washington. All right. Again, there's two nouns.

Washington Boulevard. I'll give you a hint. It is a boulevard is a type of street. Okay. A boulevard. It's kind of a synonym again for for talking about a street. And George Washington. All right. A little American history question for you. George Washington is a person. He was a general during the Revolutionary War and the first president of the United States. So, what do you think? Again, we're talking Are you going to use again there's two nouns we're talking about? Washington Boulevard street and George Washington person. All right. M Washington Boulevard is named after M George Washington. Again, if you just joined us, we're doing a little practice with the definite article 'the' and the no article. All right, so just warm up those fingers and write the answers in the chat. Okay, what do you guys think? All right, so we are getting some answers.

All right, we had a one question. Somebody said I said the people or people. Which is correct? Again, it depends on the context. Um, both of them can be correct. If you're talking about people specifically, all right, the people are marching, then we know which people that we're talking about. We can see them or we know them personally. Um, if we say, you know, people like to travel, no article, we're just talking about people in general. All right, so this is where it can kind of be a little confusing. So, this next one. All right, let's go over this. Washington Boulevard. It is, like I said, it is a street. Do we use articles with street names? All right.

No. All right. We just say there is no article in front of Washington Boulevard. It is just Washington Boulevard is named after George Washington is a person. Do we use articles with people? No. All right. So this one again, Washington Boulevard is named after George Washington. All right. I think again this is where it becomes a little tricky. I think when to use the no article. I think oftentimes uh even advanced learners will you'll sometimes hear they'll throw an article in there um before a street name or um before maybe a mountain or something. And again, it's not going people will still understand what you're talking about, but these are little little um small mistakes that we can always correct. So, let's do another one. All right, I got a couple more for you. Um, here's one. All right. If you're just joining us, we're doing a little practice with the definite article 'the'

and the zero article. All right. Let me make this a little bigger. Voila. All right. So, we have Danube River flows into Black Sea. All right. So, we're talking about a river, a river in Europe. I'm using this because we live right next to uh this river. So, I almost gave you the answer. Um, and we're talking about uh C. All right. What do you think? We didn't necessarily talk. We talked about some bodies of water, whether we should use the definite article or no article. What do you think? All right. Danube River flows into Black Sea. All right. What are we going to use with this one? What do you think?

Again, if you're just joining us, don't be shy. Write your answers in the chat. Um, if you can write the whole sentence if there's time. So, we are talking about two nouns. The river. I just told you the river and we're talking about I'll just tell you the Black Sea. Okay. So again with these with rivers again we are going to use the definite article 'the'. The the Danube river flows into. Again when you're talking about oceans, we use the definite article 'the'. And when you're talking about seas, we also use the bodies of water, the Black Sea, the Mediterranean Sea. All right, we are going to use the definite article the. The Danube River flows into the Black Sea. Let's do another one. This one I think we can all relate to. How about this question right here? What do you guys think? Um, okay. Boom. All right. Let me make this a little bigger. All right. So we have m YouTube is great for learning m English. All right. Again in this sentence we have two nouns. Are we going to use the definite article the or we going to use no article? All right. Two nouns. We are talking uh we have the first noun YouTube um and the next noun English. It's a language. All right, we are all I'm teaching English. Some many of you some of you also teach English and some of you are learning English. All right, but that's why we're all here. So, what do you think again about um this one? YouTube is great for learning m English. All right, this one's a little tricky. Uh, I went over those rules, but I didn't probably get specific enough to to also make this an example, but this is again this is good practice. What do you think? Um, are we going to use definite article the or no article? So, we are talking about YouTube. Again, this is a name. All right. It's like it's like the name of uh thing I said with names we don't uh use an article.

All right. That includes you know the names of people. All right. The names of companies, the names of cities and the names of countries. All right. So with names we use no article. We would just say YouTube is great for learning again uh languages. No article is great for learning English. Okay. YouTube is great for learning English. I hope all of you feel that way because we're on YouTube right now. All right. Let's do one more. All right. One more right here. Uh the last one is this. And let me resize this a little bit for you. Uhhuh. Okay. So, we have M Mount Everest is m tallest mountain in world. All right. There are three nouns in this sentence. Mount Everest. We're talking about mountain and world. All right. What are we going to use? Are we which are we going to use the definite article 'the' or the no article? And you can just write an X.

All right. What do you guys think for this one? All right. Again, I'll give you a moment. Um, we're talking about there are three three nouns in this one. Mount Everest, mountain, and world. Okay. What do you think? M Mount Everest is m tallest mountain in m world. All right, getting some answers in here, which is great. Excellent. Excellent. Um all right, so uh let me go over this.

Let's do this one at a time. Again, if you're if you're watching this, if you if you're not live in the chat and you happen to be watching this later, again, use the comment section. Write these sentences in the comments. It's good to use the language and keep practicing. That is the best way to learn because then you're not only listening, you are actually producing and doing something. So, let's look at these one at a time. We're talking about Mount Everest. It is the name. It is a mountain. All right? With mountains, we do not use an article. All right? So, we just say Mount Everest. This one um I meant to point this out to you before we talking about tallest mountain. It is the superlative. Okay?

So when you're talking about superlatives, we would use the. You always use the with the superlative. The reason for this is because you are being specific. You are identifying something, one thing among all other things. All right? talking about Mount Everest. Among all the other mountains, it is the tallest. We're saying something specific about the mountain. So, the tallest mountain. All right. And finally, the last one. Again, we're talking about um the the noun world. How many worlds are out there that that you guys, you know, know about? How many? We we there's really just one. There's one Earth. There's one world that we are referring to. So it is the world. All right. Um because there's Mount Everest is here. So Mount Everest is the tallest mountain in the world. So I want to practice one more thing with the superlative. So again, I'm going to ask you guys a question. Um all right. Which type of pizza is the best? All right, I'm asking you a question. Just practicing using the superlative. Which type of pizza is the best? Write it in the chat. All right, or if you're watching this later, again, write it in the comments. Let us know which is the best. It's always good to practice using um these articles again with the superlative. You want to use the definite article the the best, the greatest, the fastest, the smartest, um the tallest. All right, so let's see. Um again, to review, the last thing I'd want to say is remember these are some of the rules that we went over. These are not all of the rules. There are more but it is good to keep these things in mind when you're talking about articles. Okay. So again that is basically that is all for our lesson today on the definite article 'the' and the zero article which is just no article. We will continue some of these uh lessons in the future and I might uh probably do another lesson on the indefinite article. Um a and an save that for another time. But these are it's great practice. These are small things that learners no matter which level you're at sometimes can confuse people and make some of these simple mistakes. All right.

So again, thank you guys so much for joining for joining us. Um, hope you enjoyed this lesson. If you're watching it later, please give us a thumbs up, write to us in the comments, write a question, write a comment, and we will respond and get back to you, okay? And if you want to be very helpful to us, share the video on Facebook, Twitter, um, whatever type of social media you might be using so we can spread the word and help others who are trying to practice and improve their English. All right, so thank you guys so much for joining us. Have a wonderful rest of the weekend. Um, so I will say Arena Eduardo, uh, FCAT, you said I am late.

I'm sorry. We're getting ready to wrap things up. Um, and again, just for food for thought, wrap things up means it is ending. But you will be able to watch the video um because it will be on uh our video list on our YouTube channel. So, thank you guys for joining us. We hope you have a wonderful weekend and we will see you next week. Next Saturday, we will do another live lesson. Not really sure what time just yet. Probably early afternoon. I will make a post on Facebook and Twitter. All right, Marcela, thank you. Um, Damoth, uh, I don't know the name. Target English spoken club. Awesome. Thanks for being here. Have a great weekend. We will see you guys next time. So long.

How to Use the Past Perfect | Advanced Grammar Lesson

hello and welcome oh I sounded like a newscaster um welcome everyone to listen today I hope everyone's doing really really well if you're just joining us I would like to welcome you from interactive English I hope you're having a wonderful day I'm having a really really nice day so today we are talking about something that's very useful as you may know we have twelve tenses 12 verb tenses in English and the past perfect is one of them and it's one of the more difficult ones because of all of these these different rules so that's what we're talking about today so if you've ever had any problems with it stick around because we are going to get it right so welcome welcome Bassam welcome Olga me welcome jaleesa Kira Lali Christian a lot hi everyone if you're just joining write down your name are you writing from so we get to know each other and get friendly because this is going to be a fun friendly lesson and we're going to learn and we'll know everything there is to know about the past perfect okay so I want to talk to you if if you haven't studied a lot of grammar or if you have and you just don't remember what is up with this tense I have a very very quick reminder of what is the past perfect so your brain can be enlightened and happy just like the little cartoon brain I have here in my picture so the past perfect we usually use of course it's a past tense so everything that we talked about in the past perfect has to do with the past and what it is is it really relates to a relationship that we have between two actions that happened in the past and the action that happened before the second action is the action in the past perfect so it's it means an activity that was completed before another one in the past and they're both done so right now we're in the present both activities are done completed finished what it is it really it's just a way a really specific way in English to show the relationship between these tenses so whenever we end up using the past perfect it means that that is the event that happened first so when you're using it in a sentence it's like saying look this is what happened first and then this other thing happened it's it just helps us be more specific so that's why I think this is a very very useful very useful lesson because English is kind of cool like that sometimes it allows you to convey a lot of information in just a little teeny-tiny tense if you get it right you will also sound a little I think you sound a little smarter too a little bit more fluent I think it's a it's it's kind of a very useful tense like that okay so when do we use this tense there's kind of two main times when we use it first when we're talking about a completed action before something that happened in the past like I mentioned or we can use it when we're talking about a duration something that kind of kept going but not continuous not not using the continuous tense just something that happened from like this time to this time and then it ended and then there was another event in the past that we are relating that to so please don't be confused I'm going to come back to this later I'm just kind of giving you an overview right now so what are we waiting for let's see what our tense looks like okay so I hope you guys like my timeline I'm very proud of it hi I love colors that I'm a very visual person and I or two because I think this really really helps with the past perfect so first of all as you can see my two axes what they represent is two events that happened in the past now we don't the events are not happening now okay so that as you can see my blue line is now these events already happened they're already completed they are finished they're done it's the first one the purple one is the one that happened first the green one is the one that happened after it as you can see the one that's closer to the present and the purple one is always going to be the past perfect always always always always it's the event that happened first that's when we use this tense so I have two sentences I'll read the first one he had studied English before he moved to London okay so we have this random person let's call him Jim because I've been watching The Office and it's in my mind so Jim Jim studied English first first event then he moved to London second event and now maybe he lives in London maybe he doesn't it doesn't matter it means that first he studied English and then he moved to London two events and we are learning about that relationship between the two of them he had studied English before he moved to London now I want to talk to you about how we are constructing it what how do we use it first of course you need a subject like he or Jim or whatever you want to say you wanna was a subject and then we need had had regardless of the the subject it's going to stay the same so whether I say I or he or you it's always going to be had and then we add the past participle in this case it's studied he had studied she had seen I had complained it's always going to you understand what it is and that it just shows the relationship between two tenses and one that happens earlier then we'll get to go then it makes sense okay let's see how let's see oh just one thing so I mentioned a few past participles before and here we have had studied head run or had never run now I want to actually do a very very quick quiz so I hope you guys are paying attention because past participle is so important in this lesson I'm going to quiz you on it so I hope you are ready and know your past participles they're super important okay so here's my quiz going to be longer but I want to explain it first I'm going to give you some verbs and then you have to actually write down the past participle so as an example I gave you here go and the past participle with the past perfect is had gone go had gone got it now I need you to write what is the past perfect of do let's see past perf perfect of do today had done had done good job so if you've written could had done then you are correct the next one is come let's see who gets it right come tada had come okay so if you guys insert head com great job wonderful work how about give we're getting a little bit more difficult maybe give let's see had given had given so if you answered had given you are you guys are doing great wonderful great job oops and the know it was on my screen I flashed it accidentally so I hope you know it but it was had known had known but you guys are doing amazing I see all these beautiful answers this is a great quiz now what I wanted to tell you is that if you didn't get these right or if you were thinking about them and you weren't sure about the answer I have some good / bad news the good news is that once you memorize these verbs then they're going to stay in your brain forever and the bad news is that you actually have to memorize them because the most common verbs in English are irregular so you just have to memorize them you have to memorize the the past and the past participle of these verbs and just kind of drill just say them again and again and again and make it a habit to just know them by heart so like I said this can be I think it's a good thing but also yeah it's just practice them and you'll know them so that's my not so fun tip but good good job you guys are doing great okay so coming back to when are we using the past perfect like I said it's a completed action before something in the past and here I have two sentences the first sentence is the movie had already started started when she got there just like I mentioned before first the movie started then she got there so you have that sequence of events and the press the past perfect is the one in purple just like before right head started when she got there now my second example I put it so that you see that it's not always going to be in a sentence you're not always going to have the past perfect show up before the other one sometimes it doesn't matter how what their order is in a sentence because the order of the events will be explained to you by the use of the past perfect so for example here we have she understood the movie because she had read the book so even though in our sentence we have genders to the movie first really the first event was she had read the book so obviously first she read the book then she saw the movie and she understood it and that's the order of the events so that's where the past perfect is going to be with the first event she had read the book okay so you you really have to pay attention and think about these but I think it's such a wonderful tool that you have your disposal is to use this past perfect and convey a lot of information in just one one tense it's kind of it's kind of wonderful okay and then another way to use it is like I mentioned before the duration before something in the past so if something happened happened happened happened for a long time and then another event happened that's when you can also use it so I'm giving them an example for me I had lived in California for 15 years before I moved back to Europe so the event that was continuous could like I had lived was a duration a period of time I lived in California I lived at the deadlift and then I moved to Europe and now I am here but I I don't have to be here because again these are completed actions okay so keep that in mind they have to be they're not related to the present they're in the past and my second sentence which is also it's also true which I'm sad about too is my grandmother was sad about selling the house because she had owned it for 17 years so that means that my grandmother owned the house for 70 years then she sold it and now it doesn't matter what happens now but those are the events she had owned it for seven years and then she was sad the past tense as you can see here shows up as a second action okay now very quickly I want to go over some adverbs because adverbs can be very very important with this test and I'm going to go over some common adverbs so you see them placed in the sentence so I have four that I'm going to talk to you about these are super common we see them all the time and they are the following the first one is just and just me is when something happened a short period of time before the other event so for example I have a sentence here I had just finished the project when the boss called me into his office which means I was working on my project I finished it and maybe like two minutes later my boss was like hey come into my office I have to talk to you about something so I just finished the project and you see this with this tense a lot I had just finished had just finished now another good one is yet and yet this means that something is expected to happen for example at the time of the deadline I hadn't finished my report yet I was expecting to finish it but I hadn't yet okay I hadn't finished my report yet already I think this one is probably the most common to be honest with all of these adverbs already is probably the most common something happened earlier so I had already eaten dinner by the time I Fred arrived so I II I ate dinner and then my friend arrived I already did it it's already completed so it happened early and still it means that something was not finished when we left for Paris we still hadn't booked a hotel room that means that when we left that action was not finished of booking a hotel room okay when we left for Paris we still hadn't booked a hotel room so just yet already and still are very very common adverbs that come with this tense we see them all the time okay now now you've kind of learned when to use this tense I will say this in if you hear people speaking and you'll try to listen for the past tense when especially when we're telling stories I think then it's a good time to listen for this tense sometimes you hear people not use it and let me explain why this is and they'll just replace it with the with the past with a simple past instead and let me explain why that is because especially when we're referring to time and we're a frank like storytelling or something we use before or after which are probably by far the most used time markers so if you have before or after if you use before after when you are relating to two events you kind of don't need to use the past perfect because you know which event happens first and which one happens later that's the whole point of the past perfect is to determine this relationship between these two events so you don't really need to use it can you use it yes you can and it's correct but you don't have to so if you look at my two sentences right here Wes had left before you wanna got home like we talked about earlier had left because it's our past perfect tense it is correct to use it he had left that action is finished and then I got home so he had left it's fine but we can also say Wes left before you wanna got home because we are already informing our listener we are informing them of the sequence of events we're telling them look he left before this other event before I got home so keep that in mind that you especially if you're just learning this if you're listening for it and you you don't hear people use it and you might wonder like why isn't this person using the past perfect well it may be because it's before or after and they've already specified it so keep that in mind okay

now that you know everything there is to know about the past perfect are you ready for a practice of course you are you guys are super students and you are going to do amazing so here is my practice okay so what I wanted to do in the comments right now I'm giving you two events and this is the order that the events are happening number one the first event is I left for work the second event is that the mailman knocked on the door what I want you to do is combine these sentences put them together using already and when okay put these sentences in one sentence put these events in one sentence together using already and when and obviously the past perfect okay so let's see how you guys are doing I want you to do it right now in the comments this is really good practice so the first event is I left for work the second event is the mailman knocked on the door let's see let's see how you guys are doing I love for work even number one which where is the past perfect go does it go with the first event or does it go with the second event did you guys pay attention do you remember what do you think okay so hopefully you answered I had already left for work when the mailman knocked on the door so let's talk about this if you if you were confused the first event like I told you was I left for work so that's where we use the past perfect I had already left I had already left for work and then the second we just used the the simple past when the mailman knocked on the door I had already left for work when the mailman knocked on the door so yeah you guys are doing really good exactly and you can even reverse it so I like what what some of you did when you wrote when the mailman knocked on the door I had already left for work that is also correct they can be reversed very good as long as you keep the past tense word the past perfect where it belongs okay ready for another one here he goes so you have two the same thing combine the two sentences and the events are in this order the first event everyone left the stadium the second event the soccer match ended so the first one what happen first is that everyone left the stadium what happened after is that the soccer match ended okay so keep that in mind when you combine your sentences and don't forget to use already and when okay so keep keep keep these events in mind I know a lot of you're probably thinking oh the the match ended and then everyone left no this is the other way first everyone left and then the soccer match ended so let's see how you guys are doing okay if you are still writing don't worry I'm sure you'll do great here is the correct sentence everyone had already left the stadium when the soccer match ended again we put the past perfect with the first event everyone had already left because that's the event that happened first maybe it was a bad game maybe the team was losing everyone was like we're out of here okay they had already left they went home they were I don't know where they were going but they had left the stadium when the soccer match ended there we go I

you guys are doing well this is this is a lot of fun and of course now we're doing an isolated exercise you may seem easy keep practicing it's I think the difficulties with this tense come up when you're kind of in a conversation it's hard to remember wait where do I use the past perfect the more you practice the easier it becomes so tell us something that's true for you I had never done the past four feet before I got this class sure I had never traveled abroad before I learned English exactly so those are very very good good sentences you guys are doing great now I'll give you an example sentence of why you could say this is just my example obviously your examples are going to be different because we have different experiences for me I had never had Ethiopian food before I moved to LA okay I had never had Ethiopian food okay I if you know me you know that I love you Theo pian food is my favorite food in the world and I had never had it I the first time I had it was in LA so that is my example sentence you're obviously going to have different ones you guys are doing amazing I love looking at all of these examples sentences great now another practice you also have to complete the sentence with your own words when I hmm someone else had already hmm okay so again if you can't think of something that actually happened to you make it up I don't mind I just I'm just here for the practice so make sure you practice it when I mmm someone else had already hmm okay keep in mind to use the correct past participle and there's an already in there so pay attention that should be a clue when I someone else had already what I'll show you mine and then my example sentence and while you guys are writing or what you think about it for example again I don't even think this is true I just I just this is just something I thought about when I called the restaurant someone else had already made a reservation maybe was a birthday party who knows but when I called the restaurant someone else had already made a reservation so they made a reservation first that was the first event and the second event is that I called a restaurant make sense you guys are doing you guys are doing great when I came home someone else had already been there exactly yes so you guys that that is amazing so you're doing I think you're doing really well I think something to keep in mind like I said with this tense is that is that it can get tricky when you're kind of telling a story and you don't remember but the more you practice the easier it will come to you I promise it's again like like I said before it's a test that when you use it correctly you sound more fluent you sound more professional I would say I think it just sounds a little better I've always thought oh this person really knows how to use their tenses when you when you use the past perfect correctly so please don't be afraid of it use it it's very very it just it's a good tense and it it gives us all this information in just one one tense so don't be afraid of it now that you're rock stars at it so I wanted to thank you everyone for watching thank you for participating you guys did a great job Giselle Christiana QRF Francisco jr. guys who think you thank you thank you for joining us today I hope you have a wonderful Saturday or just a great day in general if you found this lesson useful please like it and share join our social media classes we have a lot of really great questions a really great content out there and thank you see you guys next time

How to Use the Present Perfect | Advanced Grammar Lesson

hello hello hello welcome to another lesson have a very very very cool lesson for you today because it is something that is so so important because we use it all the time and what I'm talking about is this right here the present perfect so today I'm going to give you a lot of information about the present perfect and this is a really great lesson if you are a beginner learner or an advanced learner because I'm going to talk to you about some of the basics when it comes to the present perfect and so gonna go over how to use it and how to make the present perfect but if you're an advanced learner I'm also gonna go over some of the subtle nuances of the present perfect and and giving a more precise meaning because I'm gonna talk about a few of the differences between the present perfect and the simple past because I know many learners get confused about well when should I use the simple past and when should I use the present perfect so have a lot of information to go over with you guys about the present perfect and if you are joining us again just say hello what's up in the chat let me know where you are joining us from we got a lot of people in there already and even if you are watching this lesson later just say hello write it in the comments tell me your name tell me where you are from because we are also going to practice using the present perfect and you guys are gonna have to write your answers in the comments and again even if you're watching this next week next year practice practice with us use the present perfect use the comments section as like a whiteboard and write your sentences write your answers the common so Rosario jr. Adrian Vivian hello hello hello welcome thank you guys for joining us sorry if I miss some names it's just rolling through so let's first talk about when to use the present perfect because that's a good place to start so when do we use the present perfect what what are we talking about when we use this this grammar tense so we're talking about something that's happened in the past that's very important to know so the present perfect is talking about the past it's something that happened in the past but again the time is not always specified we don't know when this event happened in many cases and you know it doesn't matter the time is not that important and then the other thing this one right there that I always like to say is that the present perfect another thing that makes it a little unique is because it has a relationship with the present and that's how I was relationship a connection with something that is happening in the present and it could be based on you know that you're having a conversation in the present or it could be what you're actually talking about is relevant to the present so it's something in the past that has a relationship with the present so I have a question for you and then I'm gonna talk about some of these and I want you again to use the present perfect my question for you is that last one down there on the bottom what have you done lately okay what have you done lately write me a sentence a full sentence not just one word using the present perfect and answer that question what have you done lately again we're gonna practice all throughout the lesson and I want you guys to use the present perfect so here are these are a couple example sentences again using the present perfect and we're going to talk about like well how they relate to when we use it so the first one they finished the project okay so they have finished the project it's something that happened in the past we don't know when they finished the project because the time is not important and it has a relationship to the present because basically as of now in the present the project it's finished they finished it in the past and it's finished right now that's the relationship it has let's look at the next one she has bought a car okay so something that happened in the past the buying of the car and there is again there's no time we don't know when it happened and it has a relationship with the present because basically we're saying okay this information tells us that oh right now she still has a car she has a car she bought it in the past we don't know when and she still has it now she has bought a car so again we want you to practice using these we're gonna practice all throughout the lesson and write a sentence using the present perfect alright I've gone to the supermarket excellent I have finished reading a book perfect alright those are great examples of the present perfect so now let's let's again these are the times we use it alright this is kind of what it means to use the present perfect we're talking about the past times not important has a relationship with the present now here are some of the basics which I think many of you might already know but it's still important and that is how to construct the present perfect so when we are making the present perfect what is what what grammar are we using we have our subject and then the verb have and that is our helping verb it is our auxiliary verb our helping verb have or has it depends on the subject because this helping verb is going to be conjugated with the subject I have he has she has okay that is very important that is what we are going to conjugate so we have the subject our helping verb however has and then the past participle and some of you might be wondering what what the heck is the past participle well the past participle is just another verb form and in this case in the present perfect it is still it is our main verb it is the main verb in the sentence because this is the main action that is taking place so subject have have plus the past participle now when it comes to learning the past participles I think often people just try to memorize these you memorize memorize memorize many times I've seen so many different verb charts that have the simple tense the past tense and then the past participle so let's look at that first one I have been we're talking about the verb to be so in the present we'd have is are in the past was were past participle been so the past participle of the verb to be is been the next one gone simple pass go past went no that simple putt present sorry present is go past went past participle gone go went gone these are common just verb charts that people will make and they will study these and memorize the past participle if it is a regular verb like play pass the the past tense played Edie the past participle is also going to be Edie so for all those regular verbs that wear the past tense ends with an e d the past participle it is the same the only ones you really need to memorize are the e regular verbs and what makes this difficult especially because of English is that pretty much the most common verbs that we use are always irregular so like the verb to be like go like this one that one C all right present simple is C the past tense saw the past participle seen see saw seen okay so you just have to know that you have to memorize and study and learn those past participles and then you can start to construct the present perfect and again if you're just joining us we are talking about how to use the present perfect and when to use it and we are going to practice all throughout this lesson so if you're just joining us perfect timing so let's continue and let's let's actually write some sentences using the present perfect so remember this is how we are going to form our sentences the subject the helping verb and the main verb and the main verb is our past participle so I'm going to tell you four instances for four times that when we use the present perfect and again this is it's a bit of a brief overview of the present perfect because there's really just so much that we can talk about with the present perfect you we could do about ten lessons on it so I want to give you a brief overview and an important overview as to when we use it so first one we use the present perfect when we're talking about unfinished actions actions that that started in the past and they continue up until the present so these are things that have started in the past and they've continued that continue they continue and it's still happening today and that is the relationship with the present that we talked about before and when we are talking about this case right here number one we use we often use the words for and since because we're talking about a time period here something that started in the past continued to the present and to talk about that time period we use for and since so for example let's look at that first sentence well first I have a question for you which is right down there I want you to answer in the chat and tell me how long have you studied English how long have you studied English right a a full sentence using the present perfect answer that question how long have you studied English and even again if you're watching this later write it in the comments I have a lot of questions for you you can write all of them in the comments and then once it's all done just hit comment enter so we can see and share those comments with us so tell us how long have you studied English and in your answer I want you to use for or since okay I want you to tell me the time period using for or since so let's talk about foreign cents so that first example sentence we have lived in Europe for almost two years when we use for

we're talking about a duration of time for two years when I think of two years I can think of okay this is the starting point and this is the ending point it is a duration of time for two years for ten minutes for two weeks for 20 days these are all durations of time and we would use for with the present perfect I have lived and we have lived in Europe for almost two years and this is true we've lived in Europe for almost two years the next one which is also true and using since because when we use since we are talking about a point in time you're taking that point in time and saying ok since this point this has been this is something that has happened this is something that's been happening so I could say I have taught English since 2006 I've taught English since 2006 this is something that I could say to somebody else if they want to know about my job and my career and they're interested in my teaching career and I could tell them yeah I've taught English since 2006 this tells them that since that time since that point in time that year 2006 I have taught English so it's been Wow it's been 12 years 12 years and it's continued so this has been quite a you know quite a career at this so I could say I have taught English since 2006 so again you guys have written some great example sentence I have Vivian I have studied English for four months excellent I've studied English vallini I have studied English for two years Abu I've learned English let's say I have studied English for about 10 years perfect excellent so again we use for remember to talk about a duration of time if I give you a time frame and you can think okay I know how long this takes two weeks three weeks two years six months all right four is a duration of time since is a point in time since 2006 since last year since yesterday those are all points in time but when we use four and since with we use them with the present perfect to talk about this this is the meaning it's an unfinished action started in the past and has continued to the present now the next time we use the present perfect when we are talking about finished actions that have a result in the present and again that is the connection that relationship with the present the action is finished but it has a result that is still you know it's happening right now it is important now based on our conversation based on what we're talking about so to give you an example I want you guys to give me an example and answer that question right there in my speech bubble like I'm asking you have you bought anything all right have you bought anything and I want you to write a sentence using the present perfect answering that question have you bought anything so basically you'd be telling me again to construct it I plus the helping verb have plus the past participle bought what have you bought anything all right write your answer in the comments let me know so we're talking about these finished actions that again the result is in the present so for example this is well I hope this hasn't happened I hope many of you haven't had to say this I've lost my phone it's happened to us before and you might tell somebody I have lost my phone the action happened in the past it's finished it has a result in the present because basically right now you are saying you still don't have your phone it's lost it's gone I've lost my phone it happened in the past and in the present you still don't have it it's gone that is the result that we're talking about in the present the other thing I want you to notice with this one which again if we're talking about the subject and the helping verb have we can contract those and combine those for example I have I've we have we've he has keys so we can contract the helping verb with the subject when we are using the present perfect so I've lost my phone again happen in the past result in the present same with that next sentence nobody is home they must have gone shopping so you're wondering well where are these people what's going on they must have gone shopping the action they left in the past and the result is in the present because well maybe they're still shopping they're obviously not at home so they must have gone shopping they are still out they are away the result in the present again they are not there so again we would use gone have gone they must have gone shopping so the next one that well just it's an animal I've bought a new phone excellent I have bought a purse Kuang thank you for sharing with us Dominic I've bought a tablet perfect excellent great example sentence thank you guys for sharing and again if you're watching this later I want you to write a sentence in the comments I still want you to participate in this lesson the next one number three we use the present perfect when we're talking about a place that we have gone and we've returned and this is one of the most common times that we use the present perfect and remember I put the verb to be there because this is when we use this verb when we're talking about this the the present the past participle of the verb to be is been I have been we have been they have been you have been you're talking when you when you use this then you're talking about about this very thing a place that you've gone and then you've returned from that place and my question for you again in the chat in the comments I want you to just answer the question where have you been where have you been talk about a place that you have gone and then you've returned so in my example question right there again we're using it as a question so the helping verb comes before the subject has she been to what anywhere you could fill anywhere in that blank has she been to Italy has she been to Brazil has she been to China has she been to Vietnam you're talking about places that you go and then return and maybe my answer is she's been to Spain and again I have contracted the subject with the helping verb has she has she's she's been to Spain so this is like I said one of the most common ways that we use the present perfect when we're talking about places you've been and returned and and this is a very common question you would hear it all the time TV shows movies you you would say it use it if you're having a conversation and you want to know if somebody has visited and returned from this place have you been to what have you been to what and then you could tell them uh tell me about it I want to know more so with this with the with this use we are using the verb to be and the past participle is been have you been - hmm I have been - where I've been to Argentina I've been to the United States I have been to the Netherlands Mario thank you excellent I've been to the UK excellent sentence perfect I have been to Vietnam for Tet holiday perfect excellent thank you guys for sharing those sentences what else I've been to Australia many years ago and again if you're watching this later write those sentences in the comments practise using these these are such common ways that we use the present perfect now the last one that I'm gonna talk to you about number four all right when we use it and then afterwards I have some practice and this it's a little more advanced but I will explain it so we use the present perfect often when we use it with these adverbs of time and these adverbs of time that talk about a recent past or some a time period that is not very far away so it's something that is recent and there there are more than just these three I chose these three because I think that they are probably a little more common than some of the other ones so let's talk about these the first one is already so when we use already we're talking about something that happened sooner than you expected something happened sooner and again if you're watching this give throw some practice sentences down there in the chat so people can see how how we use these try to use these sentences and use the present perfect so already is talking about something happened sooner than expected I've seen it already we don't know what it is maybe I'm talking about a movie or a TV show or a concert I've seen it already it happened in in the past we don't know when maybe it wasn't expected and then you're just telling somebody in the present that will hey hey I've already seen it it happened I didn't plan for it to happen maybe it wasn't expected but it did so it already happened I've seen it already the other thing I want to tell you about this one is when we're talking about the adverb already adverbs can be tricky because you people always wonder about well where does it go does it go at the beginning of the sentence does it go in the middle does it go at the end and depending on the adverb some of them can go in different places some of them should only go in one when we're talking about already we can use already at the end of the sentence I've seen it already I've done it already I've been there already or we can use it between the helping verb and the main verb I've already seen it I've already done that I've already learned about the present perfect and now you're just reviewing which is perfect it's a great example so with already you can use it at the end or between the helping verb and the main verb and it's talking about something happens sooner than expected the next one right here just just is talking about something that happened a short time ago so it's in the very recent past it just happened a very short time has passed and basically you would have to put it into context just could be talking about a short time ago as in a few minutes it could be talking about a few hours it could even be talking about a few days it depends on the context but it is something that is the recent future you're not going to be are the recent past you're not going to use just for something that happened 10 years ago it's a short time ago and my example sentence we have just bought a kitten unfortunately that is not true it's just an example I know that you want to very much wants it to be true and we are thinking about it it is something that that we have talked about so I thought it'd be a good example we have just bought a kitten so if somebody says this then you know okay it's something recent maybe it's that same day maybe they're talking about the past week but you know that they have not had a kitten for a very long time we have just bought a kitten and just is one of those that we need to use it between the helping verb and the main verb that is where it belongs you can't put it at the end of the sentence you can't put it at the beginning of the sentence it needs to go there I have just bought I have just been I have just seen I have just played it goes between the helping verb and the past participle the next one down there the last one on the bottom yet so if you have this adverb of time yet you're talking about something that is expected to happen we use it a lot with questions and we use it with negative statements when you're talking about something that expected to happen but you're saying well it has not happened yet so I could say I haven't finished yet maybe I'm talking about a lesson an exam project something that you're telling someone else I haven't finished yet I have not finished yet and yet would go at the end of the sentence it yeah you and you can't use it anywhere else it must be at the end of the sentence I haven't been there yet I haven't seen it yet I haven't done it yet I haven't finished yet so these are three adverbs of time that we often use with the present perfect okay so let's look at this next part now what I want to talk to you about is compare the present perfect a little bit with the past simple and show you some of the small differences and this is a little more advanced but I think it will give you a little more context and understanding about how to be more precise in English and again with your overall comprehension so you can comprehend what the other person is saying so I've given you two sentences and I want you we're gonna look at these sentences and then I'm gonna tell you how they're different and one sentence is in the present perfect the other one is in the past simple so I could say I have lived in California since 2015 I have lived in California since 2015 if we say it in the past simple you're just saying I lived in California in 2015 now I want you to think right now what what's different what in the meaning what is different between these two sentences if somebody says this what what is clicking inside your head that gives you okay this is this means this and this means that so if we're talking about these two sentences all right I have lived in California since 2015 and I lived in California in 2015 here's the difference right here when we're talking remember when we use for and since with the present perfect we're talking about an action that started in the past and continues to the present so in that in that sentence with the present perfect I have lived in California since 2015 you still live there it means that you you move there in 2015 and you still live there now it is not finished you did not leave if we say it with the past simple I lived in California in 2015 if somebody tells me that then I think okay it's something that happened in the past it's finished I don't know where the person lives now but they don't live in California they don't live in this place anymore so that would be the difference between in this example between the present perfect and the past simple if somebody says I lived in California in 2015 they don't live there now let's look at another one in this these two sentences right now right here I haven't written the email maybe I put yet there maybe you want to use yet maybe you don't use yet it really doesn't matter all right I haven't written the email using the present perfect or I did not write the email one of them is present perfect the other one is the past simple so I want you to think to yourself again what is the difference in the meaning of these sentences I haven't written the email I did not write the email sometimes they may be used interchangeably and you may use them to mean the same thing but they have a subtle difference between them and that's really what we're getting at when I go over these with you and the difference between these is the following okay if we're using the present perfect especially if we say yet it gives you the the the idea it's telling you that okay you're probably going to do this thing soon if I say I haven't written the email it means okay it's not finished but you will do it at some point maybe you'll do it later that same day maybe you'll do it tomorrow and especially if you say yet if you put yet on the end it definitely means that you plan to do it it is expected that this will happen if we use this in the past simple I did not write the email again it tells me that all right this action it hasn't happened yet it's unfinished it's in the past but I don't know if you're going to do it in the future if somebody just says yeah I did not write the email I'd be thinking okay I know it's not done but I'm wondering are you going to do it are you not going to do it maybe it's not your responsibility to do it so this is a slight difference about showing what your intention is between the present perfect and the past simple if you're talking about something that you plan to do that you will likely do then it's better to use the present perfect I haven't done this and if you really want to tell them that you will do it then you put yet on the end there I haven't done this yet I haven't written the email yet something that you plan to do let's look at another example this one so this is a common one because again we're talking about a place places that we travel what is the difference between we we have been to Thailand and we went to Thailand now with these two sentences I think it is ok they are interchangeable if you're having a conversation people might use they might use the present perfect they might use the past simple we have been to Thailand we went to Thailand however there is a small small small subtle difference between these two and

I want to know think think to yourself right now I want you to think ok if somebody says this to you is there really some some deeper meaning to it we have been to Thailand we went to Thailand often it is interchangeable but the difference is this alright if you use the present perfect we have been to Thailand it makes me think ok in all likely you may return someday in the future we don't know when you may go back you may go back to Thailand someday we have been to Thailand I have been to the dentist I've been to New York City and I think ok probably in the future I may return back when you use the past simple it doesn't tell us that it doesn't give us that indication so we don't know it basically means maybe maybe you will maybe you won't you may not return if you say we went to Thailand and one thing I'll give you I'll give you something to think about and I didn't notice this until I started teaching about people that get older and I noticed this more with my grandparents as my grandparents when when I would talk to them they would always speak using the past simple and I don't think they knew this was going on it's just a small subtle change that happens in your mind and they would always talk using the past simple about places they had been they would say yeah we went there we went there because as you know they got older they were in their 80s and and even in their 90s at one point it was one of those things where they knew okay they were not going to go back they were not going to return so think about this if you are if you're ever around native English speakers that happen to be in their 80s or 90s try to try to pay attention to how they're using their sentences how they're constructing them and I noticed this with my grandparents that they would talk more and more using the past simple because they're talking about things that you know it weren't it wasn't going to happen again maybe because of their age especially if you're talking about long big trips or something like that so this is a small subtle difference between the press and in this case between the present perfect and the past simple another one look at these two sentences right here and think about this this is something maybe that your boss might tell you and they could ask you what either one of these what have you done today what did you do today what have you done today what did you do what have you done today question in the present perfect what did you do today question in the past simple they might depending on your meaning they might be interchangeable depending on how you want the person to answer but one difference between the two that you would think of is this if you ask somebody you know like what what have you done today basically I feel like you're what you're asking them to tell you about their accomplishments their results what are things that you have accomplished today what are some things that you got done if somebody asked you what did you do today then they're more talking about maybe activities activities that you completed in the past so again this is a small sub difference between the present perfect and the past perfect now let's practice a few of these right now I'm going to give you some questions and I just want you to write your answers in the chat or if you're watching this later write all these answers in the comments and it's like you're submitting those answers so let's look at that first one all right I'm gonna start out easy all right he has all the food I'm giving you the verb what is what is the what how would you complete that sentence basically I'm asking I've given you the main verb what is the past participle what is the past participle of eat eat ate mmm past participle write your answer in the chat I want you to know what what is how would you complete this sentence and again if you're watching this later write the sentence in the comments write a full sentence so I think many of you I saw many of you perfect excellent so the past participle of eat is eaten he has eaten all the food in this case we're talking about a finished action that has a result that's relevant in the present because the food is gone it's gone we don't there is no more he has eaten all the food let's look at another one similar to this one and try this on for size right here boom okay again I've given you the main verb I want you to tell me well what is the past participle how would you complete this sentence we have mmm construction on the house begin is the main verb what is the past participle of begin again these are irregular verbs so it is difficult it's a little more challenging you just have to memorize these how would you complete this sentence we have mmm construction on the house what is the past participle of begin alright so this is good this is good practice I noticed some of you remember the the the present simple begin the past simple began all right work began yesterday the past participle begun all right we have begun construction on the house have begun I have begun you have begun they have begun that is the past participle of the verb begin alright let's look at let's try this next one see how see how watch you guys how much you remember from this lesson boom alright let me shrink that down to you so you can so you can see it in this in this case I've given you a sentence in the present perfect which one are you going to use for or since I have worked at this company mmm five years remember I told you that the present perfect we use it when we're talking about something that has started in the past and it continues up until the present we use the present perfect and we often use it with either for or since but it's that time period that you have to think about which would tell you whether you should use for or since which one are you going to use to complete this sentence five years saw some your answers excellent and again if you're watching this later right the answers in the comment I have worked I've worked at this company for five years five years is talking about a duration of time you know exactly okay how long this time period is so we're going to use for let's try this next one right here so I am going to give you a situation and I want you to tell me are you going to use which one's better the present perfect or the past simple so again let me shrink this down so you guys can see it there we go all right which which meaning which meaning would be the the correct one the present perfect or the past simple so I'm giving the situation basically you don't drive the car all right you don't drive the car would you say in the present perfect I've driven this car since last year or would you use it in the past simple I drove this car last year again we went through those differences between the present perfect and the past simple so the the situation the meaning that I want to that I want to tell you is you don't drive the car all right which one are you going to use are you going to use the present perfect or are you going to use the past simple in this case all right excellent perfect so most of your answers yes before talking about that you don't drive the car it is finished it's finished you don't drive it anymore you're going to use the simple past I drove this car last year if you use the present perfect I said since last year it would mean that you're still driving it now let's try another one this one right here what do you think would you use boom present perfect or the simple past which one conveys the meaning all right he may call soon that is the situation that is the meaning that I want to convey he may call soon would you use would you would it be more appropriate to use the present perfect he hasn't called her or the simple past he did not call her but I want the meaning to convey I really want to convey well he may call soon what would you say to somebody he hasn't called her he did not call her and remember the meaning that we want to convey is again he may call soon write your answers in the chat and if you're watching this later write them in the comments I do I go through I check all the I check I check everybody's work all the time so remember I talking about he what you've learned today if this is the meaning you will probably go again would you use the present perfect I've been to New York City or would you use the simple past I went to New York City if you want to kind of convey that meaning to somebody else that hey you know you you'll probably do it again you'll probably go again you'll likely do this again someday in the future what would you use alright I think everybody I've been in New York City alright yes if we're talking again too if you want to show that you will probably do something again in the future then again you want to use the present perfect I have been to New York City in this case you could say if you're just having a conversation I went to New York City again these are pretty interchangeable the only slight difference is yeah it gives you a little more information saying that you will probably you may do this again in the future and the example that I gave you was thinking of people that are much older invariably they just start using the simple past more and more so to go back over we talked about today's lesson we were talking about just to review the present perfect and when to use the present perfect remember it is something that happens in the past time is not important and it has that relationship with the future that is the present perfect we construct the present perfect by using our subject the helping verb have so we're going to use have or has depending on the subject and then the past participle which is our main verb been gone played seen bought eaten those are all past participles and for the irregular ones again you just got to study them try to memorize them and we talked about four different times when we use the present perfect for unfinished actions started in the past continued to the present and we use for and since quite regularly in this situation you're talking about for is a duration of time we've lived in Europe for almost two years since you're giving that point in time I have taught English since 2006 the next one we've talked about actions that are finished but the result is in the present I've lost my phone the phone is gone it happened in the past the the result in the present you still don't have it same with that other example nobody is home they must have gone shopping the the the finished action you know they've gone shopping they're not there the result well they're still not there and I asked you guys have you bought anything you would be answering that sentence using that that type of use for the present perfect and the other one talking about regularly we use this all the time a place that you go and return I have been to she has been to he has been to and we use the verb to be and the past participle is been the other common use is with those adverbs of time I gave you three of them that I thought were very common already just and yet and again depending on the adverb it depends where in the sentence we can use it so you can practice those and again watch it again it'll help you learn and understand things just a little bit more so thank you guys so much for joining me to get it today thank you guys for watching if you're watching now or even if you're watching later please like this lesson if you have questions the video is going to be published write those questions to us in the comments we try to answer as many questions as we can because we love hearing from you guys and please write to us in the comments with questions statements anything you want to say and finally you can join our social media classes right down there I say their classes because we post a lot of in information a lot of questions to help you guys practice and improve your English skills we're on Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat and of course right here on YouTube so thank you guys for

How to Use the Word LIKE in English

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson which is both a grammar and vocabulary lesson and I'm gonna talk to you all about the word like alright so like like like like like this is a word that you will be seeing a lot of today so if u s-- is your first time here I want you to write your name in the comments say hello say hello in the chat I just want to hear from you because my name is Wes this is Interactive English and what we are all about if this channel is just trying to help you practice and improve your English skills and the reason that we're doing this the reason that we're talking about this word right here is because it is so important in in English this is a word that we use all the time whether you like it or not we use this word pretty much any time we're having a conversation you are going to hear this word being used and even though I think this you know many of you are already familiar with this word this is going to be a deep dive into how you use this word when you use this word and really trying to understand the different parts of speech because it is a very even though it's a simple word and that you can identify it it's good to know the subtle nuances and differences between whether it's used as a noun or whether it's used as a verb okay so let's just start out with with some fun facts about this word so the word like this word is used as seven different parts of speech that's right seven different parts of speech and I am going to talk to you about each one of them today and I'm going to ask you some questions as well so that you can kind you can practice along and interact with this lesson and practice with me that's what I want you guys to do the word is also according to the OEC which if you're not familiar with that that is the Oxford English corpus the word like is ranked number 54 as the most common word in English so that that just reinforces what I said a little while ago that this is a word that you are going to hear all the time so it's really important to know the difference is about when and how to use this word so let's just let's begin alright let's start with a question I'm gonna give you guys some questions throughout the lesson and I just want you to write your answer in the chat write your answer in the comments as well as participate in and write some sentences so that you can actually practice that's what these lessons are all about is actually practicing your English skill so how would you complete this sentence I really mmm eating pizza what do you think which word could possibly finish and complete that sentence I hope that all of you are thinking like exactly I really like eating pizza surprise could you believe it so let's talk about using like as a verb as as in that example that I just gave you now the question that I have for you which I would like you to answer I feel like as I go through this lesson I'm going to notice every time that I say the word like what I would like you to do is to answer the question try to use a full sentence and just practice using the word like so I would ask you the question what do you like to do on the weekends what do you like to do in that case in that question I'm asking about things that you take pleasure in because the first meaning of the word like as a verb is to take pleasure in something like that that question that I just gave you she really likes eating pizza all right this is probably one of the most common uses of like as a verb it's talking about the things you enjoy that you take pleasure in doing now notice that in that sentence she likes she really likes eating that is a gerund you like doing something now what makes this verb so special is that we can also follow it with the infinitive as well like as a verb that you can follow it with a gerund or you can follow it with the infinitive the meaning is the same she really likes eating pizza she really likes to eat pizza so this is one of those verbs you can use either the gerund or the infinitive the next one is talking about something you want but it's being polite and that's the key word and and it's often it's used as would like and I like I asked you guys I wanted to be like I said I would like you to write a sentence I would like you to answer that question right there so you want to be polite instead of saying want it's just more polite to say would like this is more this is partly cultural so this is a good thing to know if you are talking with a friend or something and you want something like oh I would like a glass of water or if you're out at a restaurant you might say like my example right there I would like oh my gosh and I made a mistake I would like the filet mignon not to alright there is not a preposition that should go there that should say that I would like the filet mignon so again if you're out at a restaurant or even a coffee shop I think it's a little more polite instead of saying want just say you know you know I would like I would like this thing it's very polite it's the right thing to do and the another use in the verb is saying to do well in now this in this case you're kind of talking about two things like I'd say look at let's just look at my example my shoes do not like the rain alright most people would think that either you're talking about enjoying something but in this case you're talking about how they perform my shoes do not like the rain perhaps your shoes are made of leather and they should not be outside in the rain maybe there's no tread on the bottom of your shoes and you're gonna you worry about slipping and falling or even maybe another example you could say oh my car my car does not like the snow which means that okay in cold weather and snowy weather maybe the car won't start maybe the car just has you have trouble getting through the snow and in that case you can say that if something doesn't perform well you'd say well it does not like this thing so that is another use like all right let's there are a few more things with the verb and then I'll read through them some of your examples the fourth one is this is more of a this is probably the newest meaning the latest meaning for a verb is to electronically register approval all right to like a video for example all right and I my example sentence I like it when I enjoy it I take pleasure I like it when people like our lessons when they hit the like button and they register their approval so again this is a meaning that 20 or 30 years ago before YouTube before Facebook we didn't use the word in this context but nowadays it's very common especially when you're talking about social media and liking a video or liking a comment and you are just saying yes I approve of this I agree with it and I do I hope you guys like my lessons I hope you enjoy our lessons and find them useful so please hit that like button like the videos yes and the last one again this is it's just a verb but it has five different meanings wait let me get in front there so you can leave anytime you like and in that phrase we're talking about like I'm using like again your preference what do you prefer you can leave anytime you like I could tell you that but I don't want you to leave I'm just giving you an example or I could say you know you can eat anything you like you can go any place you like so in this in this case it's often at the end you would find it at the end of a sentence and it's talking about like anywhere you like anything you like any place you like it's it's referring to your preference okay so let's let's look at some examples I I was asking you guys what do you like to do on the weekends alright yes Angela said I like watching soccer on TV perfect excellent Zaki said my brother likes shopping perfect my brother likes shopping the Jaron my brother likes to shop you can use either one let us what else sometimes my cellphone doesn't like working yes my cellphone also it doesn't like working either especially in cold weather it just doesn't turn on it's a there's a problem with that IRA I was always like video lessons us teacher thank you thank you I appreciate it I I'm happy I'm so glad to see a lot of the same names that are always back here writing comments love hearing from you guys it really makes me I don't know miss makes me I really like the community that we have been developing together Maria I like hanging out perfect let's see I like listening room I like listening to my favorite songs excellent so those are all great examples things that you enjoy doing that you take pleasure in probably the most common use of the verb now the last thing that I want to talk to you about when it comes to verbs that in most cases especially when you're talking about things that you enjoy like is considered a stative verb now stative verb is talking about just like a state some kind of feeling it's not an action and when we think about stative verbs if you look in most grammar books it would say that stative verbs are not used in the continuous tense with that like with that ing but alright there's always a but then you talk about exceptions you may hear this in just informal casual and colloquial speech and this is a way that the language is changing because in grammar books if you talk about something that you like to do or you like doing it wouldn't it they would say don't use it in the continuous tense but you might hear people use this if you're watching a TV show or a movie and I gave you some examples somebody would say you know oh you know I'm liking my odds instead of saying I like my odds and spoke in English somebody might be like I'm liking my odds all right there this is happening now or you could say and so example like enjoy like instead of how how do you enjoy your classes how are you liking your classes somebody might ask that question in the continuous tense even though it is a stative verb so that's just one thing I wanted to point out and this is similar with the verb love also it follows those same rules it should not be used in the continuous tense but you may hear people say oh you know I'm loving this and they would use it in the continuous tense the only time where it's a verb where I'd say that it is appropriate is if you talk about when it's you're registering your approval like there I said like again you could say you are liking many comments alright you are registering your approval for many comments in that case it is an action that is talking about an action so you could use that so I hope that makes sense that in most cases it's a state of verb you shouldn't use it in the continuous tense but you will hear people say this in spoken English from time to time alright so let's look at like now as a noun and my question for you I want you guys to tell me so I can know that if you hear that like oh there were a thousand likes that they're talking about those people's approval that they hit the like button and they say yes I enjoyed this video I enjoy what this person's doing so those are two different meanings for this noun what are your likes and talking about like video approval that the video received 1000 likes 1 million likes I hope that that you guys I hope that this video hopefully maybe it will get to 1000 likes that would be amazing I would love that so let me see if you guys have some examples for me talking about your likes and dislikes what are your likes so Kylie says on the weekend I like to hang out with my friends but in that case again it would be used as a verb and you'd say my likes are hanging out with my friends and family all right that is something that I enjoy lolly my likes include learning English swimming and watching TV perfect excellent as my my greatest like is interactive English thank you and hello from the Dominican Republic excellent love hearing people I used to live in the Dominican Republic just I lived in San Pedro democrates for a year and taught in an orphanage it was great experience beautiful country thank you for sharing that sentence Phu Liam I likes include and dipping nothing special okay that works Angela my likes include watching your videos and making some cookies ooh cookies that just sounds very good right now vada my likes include studying learning English and listening to music so in this case again you would often hear people refer to them as like my likes or your likes or his likes or her likes and they include these activities often I again on a side note I think of like people when they're you know maybe they sign up for some kind of dating online site or dating app and you're trying to match up with somebody and it's asking well what are the things that you like what are the things you dislike and you'd say oh my likes include these different activities perfect okay so let's do well a quick little thing lets you guys know if you guys do enjoy our content and you guys enjoy what we are doing you can check out our patreon page I will throw a link in the description we have some cool rewards up there and it's just another way to to kind of connect with us to show us some love I will put a link right there in the chat as well you can check that out let's go ahead and and do another question alright see if you can complete this sentence alright here it is how would you complete this question what does this look mmm which word could possibly complete that question so that it makes sense alright what does this look hmm alright if you're having trouble let me help you out the word I hope that all of you would say what does this look like surprise like is the answer to the question what does this look like and I don't know can you guys tell me what does that look like to you do you have any guesses alright so in this case we're talking about like being used as a preposition and there are again there are many different uses for like when we're talking about prepositions and my question for you that you can describe if I were to ask you okay who do you look like what do you think is and you could tell me you look like I look like my brother I look like my father I look like my mother or maybe there's some famous person out there some famous actor or actress that you look like so I want you to answer the question tell me who you look like and again practice using the word as a conjunction so in that case the first meaning is to resemble resembling something and I'd say wess looks like Dennis the Menace alright somebody it's a few people have told me this actually before Dennis the Menace is a cartoon character that you can see the image over there and they say oh yes you know you really you look a little like Dennis the Menace so I could say West resembles West looks like

Dennis the Menace that's who I look like I don't know if you agree or disagree you can tell me I always like like to think I look like Ryan Ryan Gosling I don't know if you'd know the famous actor but you can also use it as a preposition talking about similar characteristics he is sly like a fox this is an example of a simile when you're comparing two things that are are basically not the same you're comparing a person and a fox he is slide like a fox he is fast like a car he is strong like an ox so there are many different ways that we can use similes when we want to describe something and give a little more information also if we're talking about semanas you can use like or as those are the two common types of similes he is as sly as a fox or he is sly like a fox either way they mean the same thing but if you're using like it is a preposition the next one is if you're willing to do something and often I think we use it in the question and somebody might ask you know okay do you feel like watching a movie what do you feel like doing this weekend do you feel like doing this thing are you willing to do this activity and people would ask I think it's very common in in the United States and many Americans would say feel like doing something do you feel like doing this would you feel like doing that how do you feel would you feel like doing this thing so let's see this this is great use for prepositions all right there are four other ones all right so you can also use it as a preposition if you're talking about it approximately something I'd say well it cost like $50 all right approximately $50 it costs like that much you can use it to say like such as or for example I asked about you know do you feel like watching a movie if I say oh do you feel like watching Netflix what would you like to watch and I'd say well I would like to watch shows like peaky blinders I I just finished the season last night it just came out last week so I kind of binge watched it but I'd say ah I watched shows like peaky blinders I eat fruits like apples and bananas so whenever you're talking about some subject and then you're gonna give examples you would use like as a preposition to provide more information I watch movies like and then you name the list of movies that the ones that you enjoy and as it could be used to say as though there would be alright and in this case I give you the sentence like it looks like it's going to rain it looks like it's gonna rain and it looks as though it's going to rain and this is when you're kind of making a prediction about something well it looks like the the weather is going to do this it looks like the sports competition is going to end in this way something that you think will happen as though it we're going to happen you say well it looks like alright let's see some of your examples who do you look like Zakia says I look like an energetic person perfect Olivia like my like my mother my actress oh okay Simon Says my daughter looks like me perfect dual um new Yin my daughter looks like moku two people all right their daughter looks like them perfect um so so I look like myself sure exactly yeah you do look like yourself um what else any famous people in here anybody look like any celebrities or anything don't see too many and don't see any okay so again when you're talking about like who do you look like these are all examples of like being used as a preposition all right let's look at the next part of speech and that is like use as an adjective now this is probably a this is less common this usage and my question would be like which clothes of like color do you have so if you're saying that something is of like something you're talking about something that's similar or much the same so I'm talking about of light color of the same color in that case the usage again is not as common but it is something that you may hear and I could say the company responded in like fashion they responded the same way something happened and I'd say well they responded in like fashion they did the same thing that is a phrase in like fashion in the same way you may hear good to know good to learn always good for improving your fluency like oh you know they responded in like fashion they did the same thing corresponding if to things like course if multiple things correspond I could say the class will study astronomy physics and like sciences again it's used as an adjective to modify Sciences and we're talking about things that are corresponding to those other subjects the class will study astronomy physics and like Sciences other sciences that correspond with astronomy and physics so this would be like used as an adjective so let's see do you guys have any examples of clothes of light color do you have I think I I have clothes I guess my clothes of I guess I have meant a lot of blue clothes a lot of Navy my whole wardrobe is mostly Navy is pretty much what the colors that I I deal with let's see it's trying to see if we have any examples romasaa I like blue that is also one of my favorite colors about you I like red tie similar to this shirt okay perfect excellent so again you might hear it being used as an adjective talking about of like something alright of like color of like style this way something looks it's used as an adjective alright are you ready for another question Oh how would you complete this sentence which word should go in that blank stop acting mmm a spoiled brat does anybody have any idea which word could possibly go in there I think I've tried to make this as easy as possible and it should come to no surprise that the word that goes in there is like stop acting like a spoiled brat and the reason I wanted to give this is because this is an example of like being used as a conjunction so we've already talked about wow we've already gone through quite a few already like being used as a conjunction so I could ask you what did you feel like the last time you were sick now I want you to try and write a sentence using like as in conjunction and tell me what you felt like maybe you felt like somebody stepped on your head I don't know maybe you felt like somebody punched you in the stomach maybe you felt like you got hit by a car alright this there's there's a lot of different ways that it can be used but in that case it would be used as a conjunction what did you feel like the last time you were sick and in this case it means like would just mean like as if all right and you can use it in that sentence he acted like he was afraid of a little ray he acted as if he was afraid of a little rain maybe it started raining outside and somebody is gonna trying to run inside and like oh he acted like he was afraid of a little rain and maybe that person would say well it's because my shoes don't like rain I was I acted like I was afraid because my shoes don't like rain they don't perform well in the rain so again there's many different ways that you can use this word let's look at in in this other one in the same way if we're talking about it and that way as a conjunction the movie ended like you would expect in that case it is a conjunction you're talking about basically will in the same way that that you would anticipate that it would end that you would expect it ended like you you would expect or it ended like you would think and and that's a common collocation phrase that he would it it something ended like you expect you would expect alright the whether it's a movie a TV show sports match and it would end like you expect perfect so let's see how did you guys feel she eventually I felt as if under the rain I felt but you say I felt like like I was under the rain okay that would work Jessica I feel like I felt how did you feel si I felt like I was falling from an airplane ouch that that sounds like you were really sick then um Angela I felt like I was I felt like but remember you wouldn't even say like in this case I felt like I was you would need to say that that other phrase I felt like something you need that other clause there I felt like I was hmm something I felt like I was under a train I felt like I was falling from a plane let's see I felt like I felt like I was living dead okay alright those are good examples again you're using like as a conjunction now here comes like as an adverb alright in this case it's going to modify either the verb or even maybe an adjective and I could ask for example how long does it take you to get to the airport and I want you to try and use it like this nearly or approximately all right we're using it as an adverb and I'd say for me I'd say well the airport yeah it's more like 15 minutes away don't tell me in exact number just give me an approximation and use like the airport is a you know if somebody were to ask you hey is the airport an hour away and say well it's more like this far does it cost this much and say well it's more like this so often you would use it is more like in response to a question if somebody's asking about an amount a number and you say no no no it's more like this number so in this case I'm talking about time well it's more like 15 minutes you can also use it as an adverb to talk about a degree and in this case I don't think it's it's as common but you may still hear it I'd say well the boy was pretending to be very tough like and I would say in this case it's often more common in spoken English as opposed to written English when you want to describe somebody you know he he he entered the room all you know he entered the room all like nonchalantly like and you're you're describing somebody as with an adjective saying tough and then adding like to the end saying that they were like this thing to a certain degree all right he was acting all tough like she was being all you know silly like we there's so many different examples that you could go through but again this is not probably one of the more common uses as an advert alright let's look at some of the trends at the airport is like IRA so the airport is like 10 minutes away okay perfect site nearly approximately is more like two hours for me all right it's more like two hours let's see oh yeah it's more like one hour away due to traffic perfect so when you say something is more like and you give like a number in responding to a question then you're using like as an adverb the next one that I want to talk to you about is interjection and in this case it could be it's the part of speech could be also like an adverb but I wanted to separate it an interjection because this is something that people use quite often in spoken English I catch myself doing it from time to time and I could ask you a question which is kind of silly do you like use like like this and if I'm saying that do you like it's used as a filler alright it's just kind of a pause in the sentence a pause in the conversation it's it's meaningless it doesn't really have a meaning but to break down my question do you like I'd say do you like use like like this so do you like use like I'm talking about the word in that case so it's a noun and then I'd say well like this that should be the preposition do you use like like this so again it is as an interjection it's a meaningless filler to express maybe uncertainty a pause in the conversation or maybe to even to intensify an adjective so for example somebody's maybe telling a story and say oh and I was like oh my god I couldn't believe this or I could say well your comments are like amazing alright they're so amazing they're like amazing again I think it's more common depending on maybe even a certain age group I think younger people are more likely to use like as an interjection but if you guys are watching a TV show try to listen for this and see if you can identify like being used as an interjection and it's just a filler it's I think it's common when people are telling a story and they're talking about something and maybe they're just getting excited and it's just this pause this discourse marker and they use like as they use like as that filler as that interjection and I do I really do think your comments are like amazing and that's what I want you guys to do if you write to me in the comments because I I just love hearing from you guys I hope that this kind of shed some light on this word and the different ways in which it's used please if you enjoy our lesson again hit the like button I hope you I would like alright I'm just gonna do a little review I would like using it as a verb to be polite for you to like alright in the infinitive to register your approval this video because I hope the video receives 1,000 likes alright that is being used as a noun alright so write to us questions in the comments thank you guys for joining me check out our social media classes as well and yeah alright thank you guys once again hope you have a wonderful weekend just want to give some shout outs Thank You IRA Vlad Syed one perfect Mille um thank you for being here with me today enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you guys next time so long

How to Use the Word SO | Everything You Need to Know

All right, what's up everyone? Thank you so much for joining me. My name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which of course is the place that you guys want to be to practice and improve your English skills. So today I just I can't help but laugh because throughout this lesson I am going to be saying one word a lot. And I mean I will say it a lot a lot a lot. And I I want to quickly tell you about how this lesson came about. So I just said it again. I was trying to figure out, okay, what what can I do for a lesson? So I asked our patrons, well, what what do you guys want to learn? What lesson would you guys like to have? The first person who responds, that is the lesson that we will do this week. And I asked, well, tell us what what to do for today's live lesson. And Catherine responded and said, would she'd like to learn more about like, as, so, because, and then uses uh usage of so in general. And I started looking through it and I I told her that there are so many different ways to use the word so. And I thought that would be a good place to start and I wanted to talk to you about the different ways about how you can use the tiny word so. It is such an important word and that is what we're going to do today. I'm going to talk to you about all of the different ways that that you can use so. I wanted to give a quick shout out to everybody who's here joining me. Um hello Diva, Lolly, uh Brian, uh Bonnie, Ronaldo, Rosalinda. Welcome, welcome Bora. Olivia, Andre, Olivia, excellent.

Um Money Coxlin, thank you so much for the super chat. Awesome. Uh really appreciate it. And as we go through today's lesson, I'm going to talk to you about the different uses of so. I'm going to ask you guys to share some sentences so that you can practice using it and that other people when they're watching this, they can see other examples about how the word is used in context. And as I mentioned, we use this word a lot. I use it all the time. And that's why it's important to understand, well, what are the different ways that we can use it? Because some of these tiny little function words like so, it they they can be difficult and confusing because you hear them used in so many different context.

As we go through this, I want you to listen to how many times I say it because as I was putting this lesson together, I began to realize just how often I use this word and in all the different context. And I also have some some questions for you. I'm going to quiz you guys a bit test your knowledge about this word. So, this is going to be fun. Are you ready? The first one I'm I'm I'm going to start out with uh probably things that are a little more easier and then get into a little more challenging ways in which we use so. And the first ones are probably going to be names that are ways that you're a little more familiar with. So, the first one is just so plus an adjective and or or we can use so plus an adverb. There there are two different ways that I wanted to distinguish.

However, I I think they're very similar. I I I think they're just about interchangeable, but I just wanted to put them out there so you can see these. I just I said it again so that you so that you can see these. We can use it to as a degree as a degree adverb meaning to to such a great extent. All right? And and this one I'm going to explain this first sentence. All right? You're walking so slow. Now, you might see that and be like, well, wait a second. Shouldn't it be you're walking so slowly?

Grammatically speaking, yes, we should use slowly as an adverb. The reason I put this is because this is more common in colloquial speech. This is what most people would actually say.

If you're writing, you want to be a little more formal and you'd say you're walking slow slowly, but in everyday speech somebody would just be like, oh, you're walking so slow. You're doing something so slow. And that is more more so how they would use it to such a great extent. Um what I want you guys to do as you're as you're doing these, I want you guys to practice. Give me a sentence. Write something in the chat or if you're watching this later, write something in the comments. Use so plus an adjective or so plus an adverb. The next sentence I have for you is I always tell you guys, I'm so happy to see you. Happy again is an adjective so we're we're modifying I'm so happy. And again, like we use it as an intensifier for very. In this case, in my opinion, they're they're almost interchangeable as to like to such a great extent and very. They they almost mean the exact same thing.

But uh we can use it down here. The test was so easy. You're saying something was so easy or maybe something was so difficult. You're using it as a degree to say basically, yeah, you're saying very. And we always use it like this. Uh this is another great example. Instead of saying thank you very much, you might just say, "Oh, thank you so much." I always tell you guys, I think, uh, when you guys write us comments, because I love hearing from you, I'd say, "Thanks so much for your comment." I use that a lot. Thanks so much. All right. So, again, these are very common ways in which you will use so, and you will also hear it being used. So, plus an adjective, or so plus an adverb. So happy, so tired, so easy, so exciting. All right.

Um, All right, Catherine, great example. I'm so pleased, uh, if the connection doesn't fail. Giselle, you are so intelligent. Thank you, uh, Giselle. You are so awesome. All right. You guys are all, uh, so awesome. Uh, Shweta said, "I'm so excited." Rosalinda, "I'm so excited to be here." Exactly. Those are all some great examples. And very common examples of how we use so. So, so this is the first example I wanted to give you. So plus adjective, so plus adverb. The next one is so much and so many. Uh, I added a couple here. Uh, we use so before much and many, as well as little and few. Now, much and many, you know, the difference there is, remember we use many with countable items, we use much with non-countable.

I also, for all you grammar nerds out there, to I wanted to explain the difference between these first two sentences as to what as to what it is, much and many. And if, again, if you guys give me some practice sentences, give me some examples out there. Use so much or so many in a sentence. What do you guys think? I would say, in my example sentence, the puppy has so much energy. Energy is non-countable, so we're going to use so much. In this case, much is a determiner. Like I said, for all you grammar nerds out there, much is a determiner because it comes before the noun energy. So much energy.

In this case, there are not so many. Many would be considered a pronoun because we don't know we based on the context, we know the noun. I didn't give you enough information, but somebody might just respond, "Well, there there are not so many." For example, maybe I asked like, "Oh, you know, how how many chairs are in the room?" Chairs is countable, and I'd say, "Well, you know, there there's not so many." In that case, many is a pronoun because it's taking the place of chairs. We don't need to say chairs again. There are not so many. So again, in this case, much or many it would either be a determiner if it comes before the noun or it would be a pronoun if it's just substituting for something that was previously discussed.

So, that's a short quick little explanation about much or many, but we often use it with so much, so many. And again, in that case, it's almost again it's about a degree of extent. You're talking about very to such a great extent, so much, so many. We also I wanted to throw that in there with little or few. I don't think it's as common to use it with little or few. We use it regularly with much or many, so much, so many, but you can also use it with little or few. Often, I might give students an assignment, all right, and say, "I want you guys to write a paper." And after 30 minutes pass, I would walk around and maybe they don't write anything. I'd be like, "Oh my gosh, you've written so little. You've written so little." And again, in this case, it would be a pronoun because we're probably just talking about the words, how many words, right?

They've written so little. Or you could say the store carries so few products. Remember, few we use with countable items, few products. There are The store carries so few products, all right? Um excellent. Here's a Buddha, he earns so much money making these videos. Well, I don't know if you're talking about me, maybe some other people. Um But Trisha, great There's so much money in my pocket. Great example, all right? Um Perfect, all right? You have so many students. Yes, we do have so many amazing, wonderful students and we hope you guys will share these videos with others so that we can build our global class classroom and keep expanding and get so many more students to join us.

All right. Now let's let's switch it up, all right? I'm going to continue telling you more ways to use so, but first I have a question for you, a little bit of a quiz. I want you to write your answer in the chat or in the comments. Are you ready? It's a fill-in-the-blank. You are all amazing, all right? This is This is difficult. It's not multiple choice. So what what would you say? What word should go in that blank? You are all amazing. Okay? How how would you complete that sentence? We We We just talked about it. What What would you use, all right? So again, amazing, this is an adjective. So what would you use before that adjective, all right, to say like to to such a great extent, all right?

Yes, yes, yes, you guys Oh my gosh, you guys are so amazing, you're so intelligent. Everybody got the answer correct and that answer is so. You are all so amazing, all right? That happens to be our topic, too. And I wanted to again like give you a heads-up about this. If you want to check us out on Patreon, if you like what we do and want to connect with us more, check us out on Patreon. I will leave a link in the description because probably in the future if I can't think of lessons to do, I'm just going to ask our patrons and say, "What do you guys want to learn?" And we will do a lesson about that, like today's lesson about so.

So, let's continue. I want to talk about now. I want to talk about so as a conjunction, all right? And there are two different conjunctions. This is the most common. We we learn this, uh, I think at beginner levels of English when you want to combine two sentences to form a compound sentence, and you would use a conjunction and or but or so. And when we use so, it's used to say that something is why something else is happening. You have a cause, and then there's a result. It's raining outside, so we will reschedule the match. We combine those two independent clauses to create a compound sentence using the conjunction so. And I want you guys again, let's let's practice, all right?

Give me you use it as a conjunction and give me a compound sentence using so to talk about why something else happens. It's raining outside, so we will reschedule the match. It's a very common way that we use so. This is another one which I use all the time. It's also considered a conjunction. It's used at the start of a sentence to connect with something that has previously happened. Again, it's it's like you're you're you're connecting it with another idea. In this case, I gave you this example. So, we're not going to play soccer. If somebody were to say that first example sentence, it's raining outside, so we will reschedule the match. The other person might respond here and say, So, we're not going to play soccer?

It's not necessary to say so, but we often use it like that at the front of a sentence to connect with something that was previously said or something that previously happened. And I want to give you guys a challenge right now because this is I use it like this quite often. I use so at the beginning of a sentence to connect it with an idea or talking point that was previously mentioned. And as you guys if you guys watch our videos, I I want you to think think about how many times you hear me say so at the beginning of a sentence or even if you're watching a TV show or movie, see if you can catch on to that. How many times so is used at the beginning of the sentence. And when it is used like that, it's used as a discourse marker.

Now, you might be thinking, well, what the heck is a discourse marker? I'm going to talk to you about that right now. So, as a discourse marker. But a discourse marker is a word or phrase that goes at the beginning of a sentence and the purpose, the reason of it is just to organize discourse. It's to organize the communication that's happening. And other examples of a discourse marker would be words like um uh-huh, okay, there there are many different examples of discourse markers that people would use at the beginning of a sentence to help organize it. For example, we used to have a student. They learned the word actually. And what they would do is he would put it at the beginning of so many sentences. He would use it as a discourse marker. And it was a little strange because we don't we don't usually use the word actually as a discourse marker.

And we'd have a conversation I'd be like, "Oh, you know, what are you having for lunch?" And they'd be like, "Actually, I'm going to have tuna fish." And I would think it's a little strange. I was like, "Why are you using actually?" But in this case, they used it as a discourse marker. So again, it's used as a conjunction at the start of a sentence to connect with something previously happened. Often you might find it with questions. Uh for example, somebody might say, "Well, so what are we going to do now?" All right? So, what are we going to do now? It's not necessary, but it just helps organize the communication. And you would hear so at the beginning. Or somebody might say, instead of saying, "Let's meet tomorrow morning." they'd be like, "You know, so let's meet tomorrow morning." So, let's meet tomorrow morning is a common example of how you would use so. I use it a lot like this.

And I don't even know about it. I'm not even aware about it. And keep in mind, all right? It's important to note this is This is with spoken English. You're not going to use so as a discourse marker in your writing. It's going to sound strange. It's going to look weird. You You're not going to write down, "So, what are we going to do tomorrow?" You would just write the question, "What are we going to do tomorrow?" But this Keep in mind, this is mostly for spoken English when you're going to hear so at the beginning of a sentence uh used as a discourse marker. Um let's look at some of those other examples you guys wrote. I asked for some uh compound sentences. And we have Dimitar wrote, "The weather was so clear and so nice. I went home to learn English." Okay, yes, great use uh with the adjectives.

Um it's cold outside, so we will stay home. Perfect, good example, Olivia. Uh I'm not feeling so well today, so I'll stay home. Laura, excellent, thank you. Uh perfect, all right. The weather is bad, so I will go to the theater instead of walking. Excellent, perfect, great example. So again, we often use it as a conjunction to combine those ideas. As a discourse marker, it's still considered a conjunction, but again, this is mostly with spoken English, and that's my challenge to you guys. The next time you're watching a movie or listening um to a podcast or whatever it is, see if you can identify when somebody uses so as a discourse marker at the beginning of a sentence.

All right, are you Are you ready for your next question? All right. It's a very very very difficult question, all right? I don't know if you guys are going to get this answer, all right? The question is this again, "Mm, are you going to like this lesson?" It's a question that I would ask you. My questions are very uh you know, I I like to insinuate things. I like to throw out suggestions in these questions. How would you complete that sentence, that question? How would you complete the question? What word would I use at the beginning of this sentence if I were going to ask you, and I'd say, "Mm, mm, are you going to like this lesson?" What what word What what word could possibly go at the beginning of that sentence? Yes. All right, thank you. Yes, Lolly Olivia, Breanna, Giselle. Sun ra- Sunrise Sun, perfect. Yes.

long distances. The purpose I wear the purpose of wearing glasses is so that I can see long distances. All right, I want you again practice. Give us some example sentences. Use so that in the comments, all right? Even if you're watching this later, write some example sentences. Give me an example sentence with so that. I wear glasses so that I can see long distances. Um the other example, again, he worked late so that he wouldn't have to come in over the weekend. He worked late um so that he wouldn't have to come in over the weekend. So, that is what will be possible. He's working late so that he wouldn't have to come in over the weekend. That is now possible. So we There it is, that discourse marker. So we use so with the that clause to show the purpose of something will happen. Again, it's technically it's a conjunction so that. And we talked about that clauses before and oftentimes you can just eliminate that all together. You don't even have to say it. So in that first example, I wear glasses so that I can see long distances, I could just get rid of that and say, I wear glasses so I can see long distances. That is perfectly acceptable, all right? Perfect. Um So try again. Give me Give me some of those example sentences in the comments, in the chat, if you guys can think of something, all right? Um I Yes, awesome. I I practice so that I can perform well. You practice English so that you can perform well. You can practice anything so that you perform well. Perfect, all right?

Um I'm watching this lesson so that I can improve my English. Excellent. Perfect. Great example, Jessel. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you for sharing with us. So so that And I'm just Every time I say so now, I stop and I think about it because I've just I'm saying it a lot. The next one I want to talk about is using so instead of object clauses. And in this case, there are some verbs that we use it with. It's used with some verbs instead of repeating object clauses. And these are the main verbs that we would use it with. When you're talking about the verbs think, believe, or hope. And I gave you some examples down there.

For So So for example, somebody might ask the question, is that the right time? Is that the right time? And you just say, "I think so." I think so. You don't have to repeat the object clause. You don't have to say, "I think that's the right time." You could say that, it's perfectly fine. But if you want to make it easier, simpler, faster, and be more proficient and fluent, most people would just say, "Yeah, I think so." Is that the right time? I think so. What about this? Is that the Is this the correct answer? I believe so. Again, you don't have to say, "I believe this is the correct answer." You can just say, "I believe so." Will she win the match?

I hope so. It's very common to use it with these verbs: think, believe, hope. I think so, I believe so, I hope so. We can use so instead of the object clauses. Again, this is something that I would challenge you to listen for. Instead of thinking, "Well, I have to go out and start using this right away." You can, I always encourage you to practice, but see first if you can identify it when you're listening to TV show or a movie or listening to a podcast. See if you can identify these different ways that so is used, but it's used instead of object clauses. I also want to ask. Yes, you can also use it in the negative, like Henry just did. I don't think so. All right? If you want to say, "No, I don't think so." Um let's look at some so phrases. All right? These are four different phrases or yeah, words that you would use so with. For example, so am I, so do I. It's basically you're saying like as well, too. Um I'm learning English. So am I. All right? You don't have to say I'm learning English too, I'm learning English as well. You just say, "Yeah, so am I." Or if somebody, you know, says like, "Well, we have a cat." So do we. All right, these are other common ways that in everyday conversation when you are discussing something with a person and you're talking about like, "Oh, you know, I'm going to watch this movie." You're like, "Oh, yeah, so am I." Or I have uh I have this thing. So do we. All right, we use this a lot. So am I, so do uh so do I. And again, we can switch out I with any subject pronoun. So So so are you, so are we, so are they, so do they.

Um we use it, but it's often I think used with I because you're typically just having a conversation with another person talking about yourself. Uh the next one in this I'll tell you I I I am not a fan of this word. I don't like this word, but so-so. If somebody says so-so, it just means it's not good, it's not bad. The reason I don't like it as a teacher is because students will learn this word. And often when, you know, teacher you're asking student question questions, you want them to give nice long detailed answers. I always tell students give details, details, details to practice your English skills and to be thinking of different words that you can use, more dynamic words. So-so is one of the most boring words that or phrases that I can think of. But often I would ask students about, you know, "How was lunch?" And they'd say, "You know, today's lunch, it was so-so." "How was the movie?" "It was so-so." "What do you think of the lesson?" "The lesson's so-so." All right, and everybody would just say everything becomes so-so because they don't really want to think of different words and it's easy just to say, "Well, so-so. It wasn't good. It wasn't bad." This is just for you to know, but again, I don't encourage you to use this.

I would rather you guys use different words that are more dynamic, more interesting instead of just saying, "So-so." This is another good phrase, so far. And what I'd want you guys to do, give me an example sentence right now. And often it's going to go at the beginning. You're going to say, "So far, something has happened. So far, you've answered the questions correctly. So far, up until now." I want you to give me an example sentence in the chat, in the comments using so far. All right? And again, the other thing, we often would use it with the present perfect because you're talking about something that maybe started in the past and it has a relationship with now. So far, we have what? Okay? Up until now. So, give us give me some example sentences. Try to use that in the chat because, you know, I want you guys to interact with us.

This is interactive English. And the other phrase, that last phrase down there, that I wanted to tell you is just is that so. I didn't give an example because you'd have to put it into context, but all you need to know is that somebody, if they ask, if they say, "Wow, is that so?" It's just an expression of surprise or amazement or disbelief. Or again, you're kind of acknowledging that you are a little surprised. It doesn't mean that you were just like, "Wow, that is very surprising." It's just kind of like a little bit of acknowledging where like like wow, really? Is that so? Um So, you might tell me like wow, you know, I speak five languages. I say, "Wow, is that so?" All right. So, if somebody says, "Is that so?" it's just a way of expressing surprise. All right.

Uh let's look at some sentences. So far, I have You could say to do it so far, I have been learning English up until now. So far, I've been watching this. Yes, exactly. Um So, what el- There it is again. So, what else do we have here? Um Uh so far, you have arrived to class. All right. So far, you say like So far, I have attended all of these live lessons. You could say that up until now, I have attended. So far, I have attended all of these live lessons. Again, we often use so far with the present perfect. All right. Are you ready for another question?

Another quiz question. This one, I promise you, is so difficult. All right. I'll be so amazed if you get this this one. All right. You ready? Here's your next one. Whoops. Wait, let me move it out of the way here. There we go. Whoop. All right. I would say this, we want you to subscribe to our email list that we can interact with you. We can send you some emails. And again, I like to make all these suggestions during these lessons because if you want to subscribe to our email list, you can check out There is a link in the comments. Uh in the description, and you can access the secret fluency lesson. Subscribe to our email list.

We'll send you some emails, updates, interact with you. And you can also complete this sentence. We want you to subscribe to our email list that we can interact with you. Yes, everybody, great great job, uh Alaviv, Asif, Molly, Dimenson, Gertrudis, Rosalinda, yes. So that, all right? We want you to subscribe to our email list so that we can interact with you. Again, we're using it with a that clause, all right? I want to take a quick moment, all right? Just in case In case some of you join late or again, it's always good to review what we've learned because in this case, there are so many different ways that we can use the word so. And there are actually a few more ways that we can use it. I wanted to cover these are the ones that I thought were the most important and the most common, because the lesson I didn't want the lesson to go on for hours and hours. All right, remember, the first way we talked about we use so with an adjective or so with an adverb, and this is to express degree, to such a great extent or like just as interchangeable with the word very. For example, I am so happy that you guys joined me for this lesson today. We also use it with the words much and many. It's very common to say so much or so many, all right? For example, we have so many different students from all over the world who join us for these lessons. So many. We also use so as a conjunction, commonly to combine two independent clauses to make a compound sentence. It's raining outside, so we will reschedule the match. It's saying, you know, why something else will happen.

I also mentioned that here, again, even though it's a conjunction, it's used as a discourse marker and we put so at the beginning of a sentence to connect with something else that that previously happened that that we're talking about, we're having a conversation and we would use it that way. And again, as you're watching future lessons, see if you can identify how often I say it. I use it a lot and this is mostly with spoken English. We put that so at the beginning. And be careful if you want to go out and use this. You I don't want you to say it in front of every single sentence that you say. It's not necessary, but as you're able to identify it, you're going to see how people naturally use it in conversation and then you'll start to be able to do that as well. We also use so as that that clause to say that the purpose of something or something that will be possible. I told you guys that I wear glasses so that I can see long distances. I wanted you asked you guys subscribe to our email list so that we can interact with you guys more often via email. We also use so instead of saying the object clauses and I told you, remember these three verbs, keep those verbs in mind. I think so. I believe so. I hope so. Those are very common responses to different questions. And then we talked about these different so phrases. So am I, so do I. I told you to avoid so-so and yes, I still think that. We practice using so far, which means up until now. And then again, you could just say, "Is that so?" when you want to express a surprise. I know that this was a lot of information to go through and if you ever want, please, you can always review, watch these lessons again. I always encourage you guys to rewatch things, even that even if you've already learned it because it's it just benefits you, your overall fluency, and you'll probably maybe you'll probably learn something new that you didn't know already.

So, I hope that you enjoyed this lesson. I hope that you found it useful. I would ask you guys, please hit that like button if you feel like you've learned something new about the word so, and also share it with with anybody that you know who's trying to improve their English skills. We would really appreciate it. We want you to share these lessons so that we can grow our classroom with even more and more students. And remember, you can join our social media classes, which are up here, right here. All right? We're active on Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram. You can join our classes so that you can learn more English. We post a lot of questions all the time for you guys to answer. So, I want to So, I want to give you guys a big, big thank you. I thank you so much for joining me today.

Thank you, Ronaldo, Olivia, Rosalinda, Franco, um Molly, Alavi, thank you guys so much for joining this me. I really appreciate you guys being here, and please write to us in the comments if you have any questions or just to say hello, and I will probably say, "Thank you so much for your comment." because I just like to say so a lot, and I use it a lot, and I realized that after doing this lesson. So, Sanja Bec, Kim, thank you thank you thank you. Diva, hope you guys have a wonderful day and I will see you next time. So long. So long. That's another great expression.

How to Use the Word OF

hey everyone what's up welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English and if this is your first time here the channel it's all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and especially if this is your first time here please let me know say hello write your name tell me where you're from in the chat or in the comments if you happen to be watching this later so thank you guys so much for joining me today I have I guess it's more of a grammar lesson that we're gonna talk about because I am going this lesson well it's all about one word and that word is of alright of is it's a preposition and according to Oxford English corpus it is the fourth most common word in the English language so this is a word that you are going to read all of the time you are going to hear it all the time and if you're having a conversation you are probably going to be using this word quite often so it is a very important word which is part of the reason why I put the little crown on top of it is one of the the kings of English or maybe you could say of is the queen of English either one so hello I just want to give some shout outs hello to Gibson Louisa Aiden good to see you lolli welcome Mary Alana Turin Michelle Leonardo thank you guys for joining me so today's lesson it's I it is very important because like I told you this is a very common word it's a very common preposition now before we start talking about this I want you to know that I'm gonna go through and talk about specific times when you would use this preposition and I give you some examples now you could think of these as rules but instead I think that if you really want to learn prepositions and improve your English I think this is a good way to practice and kind of familiarize yourself with certain times when you should use this word but overall I think the absolute best way to learn prepositions is to do more reading more listening and get more exposure to the language and try to learn them naturally because you will start to absorb this information the more you read the more you listen and then the next time you have a conversation you are going to start using these prepositions correctly I of course I think it's okay if you want to learn some rules like you use the preposition in when talking about certain parts of the day in the morning in the evening in the afternoon I think that's perfectly fine that's perfectly okay but in general more reading more listening I think that helps and again you're gonna get that today because I'm gonna talk all about these different times when you should use of and I would encourage you to participate as we go through these certain well rules if you will I try to write some sentences write them in the chat practice your English skills I always encourage you guys to practice as much as you can so let's start with the first one so you would use of if you are showing possession or origin an origin is basically just saying where something comes from for example if somebody were to say a friend of mine all right that's more a possession a friend of mine or like origin the colors of the rainbow the colors of the rainbow now let's get a little more advanced all right and talk about that first one a friend of mine because you might be thinking why why not say my friend so you could say wes is my friend or wes is a friend of mine both of them have the same meaning it means the exact same thing now one slight difference and this is this is my well I think it's my opinion as to how it might be slightly different is that I think when you say my friend and you put that adjective pronoun before friend my friend that possessive pronoun sorry I think it shows that you have a real really a closer relationship if you say a friend of mine it might be a little bit of a looser relationship but again either one is okay but to give you an example I think this is where somebody might ask a question maybe they would say hey is is is he a friend of yours maybe they're mad at this person they're like wait is this your friend is he a friend of yours or is she a friend of yours and in that case they're using of I think in part because you're you're leaving it open to have a looser relationship but that's one little one little difference between saying my friend or a friend of mine but in general both of them are perfectly okay now you would also use of if you are using it afterwards expressing an amount or a number so I want to start with that last one 20 20 20 kilos of Nutella my wife she loves Nutella and I'm sure she wishes she could have 20 kilos of Nutella I also enjoy it so I would ask you what would you like to have 20 kilos of or what would you like to have any amount of and just write that in the chat or write that in the comments and practice using of when talking about an amount 20 kilos of Nutella 20 pounds of something so it depends whether you're using the metric system or not but after any amount or

and I'm actually getting to that one right now because we use of when talking about like quantifiers like that example that I just read four cups of coffee when you have certain nouns that are non count you cannot count these 1 2 3 4 5 like rice that first one you would use a quantifier or a container either one so you could say a bag of rice or a box of chocolates I could say that this this is my class of learners you guys are all learning English so you could use a quantifier or container when talking about these non count nouns and that is another common that is a very common example as when you would use of like a bag of rice a cup a cup of coffee a liter of milk perfect excellent thank you guys for for providing these examples so I hope that even if you're watching this later I hope people continue to read the chat because this is a great way for you guys to help teach each other and give some examples so we also use of when talking about well expressions that are showing the position of something so if you're if you're trying to point something out and say well where something is and say oh it's the the top of his head or you might say something is something is on the back of your shirt you don't know what it is it's on the back of your shirt that is the position or like a very common one if you're talking about the line and you you need to get to the front of the line or maybe if you arrive late and somebody could tell you like oh you got to go to the back of the line the position of where something is and you're talking about the position in relation to this other thing like the the top of your head or the back of your shirt that is what you're talking about so excellent yes this is the class of interactive English you could say yes I'm right in front of you yeah that is that's very true right now you guys are in front of me and I am in front of all of you so when you're talking about position another example of when you use of you are also going to use of to describe a characteristic so in this case let me just and then you could give me an example the look of a criminal the sound of an angel the personality of a tree so instead of telling somebody you could say you have the look of a criminal you're describing this the way they look their characteristic you could also say you look like a criminal and again if you are the difference between those if somebody says oh you look like a criminal I think in that case the verb is one of the the main parts of that statement that look is what you're focusing on in this case if you saying if you change it to a noun and talk about the look you have the look of a criminal in that case I think you're highlighting criminal a little bit more like oh you have the look of a criminal arm instead of saying you sound like an angel you have the sound of an angel you you your song your your music oh it's the sound of an angel you're kind of highlighting that noun the angel so again you can tell me what do I have I have the look of what practice write it down the the look of something and the last one which somebody was asking personality of a tree so in this case if you I think when people use it in this sense they often use it to say something negative about another person and it's kind of a way of insulting somebody they and you don't have to say tree you could say that off you know this person they have the personality of a tree kind of like trying to say that that this person is boring that they're not very active and they're not fun to be around but you might hear somebody say this that oh they if they want to make fun or say something bad about this person though they have the personality of something else that they think is very boring so in that last example it's kind of a way to kind of insult somebody and say something bad about them in case in case you're wondering if somebody said Wes you sound like an angel I have the sound of an angel thank you I appreciate that let's see I have the look of an officer okay all right I have the look of a doctor really uh okay I guess I'll take that as a compliment I hope doctors they look friendly they look nice so again in this case to describe a characteristic you would use of you're also going to use it if you refer to a particular date and this is a very common example as to when you would use this preposition so for the first one the 12th of November that is a very important date that is what is a very important date can you guess guess what day that is the 12th of November but we're referring to that particular date you're going to use of the fourth of July that is a holiday in the United States that is when they celebrate Independence Day it is the fourth of July or if you're referring to a part of the month for example like that last one when I talked about the end of the month or the beginning of the month the middle of the month that is a more of a time period but you are also going to refer to this moment so yes you could say today is the the 20 23rd remember the the ordinal number 23rd of May that is today's date excellent great example the 23rd of May but I am a little more partial I really like the 12th of November that's that's a that's a great day yes Oh somebody get the 12th of November that's my birthday obviously Kira is your birthday today happy birthday Kieran excellent so if you're just joining us we're talking about different times when you would use let's see when you you would also use of when talking about saying that something is made of something or having something for example you'd say oh like my my necklace is made of gold it's made of this this this thing this metal or I don't know I just put that in there I thought of the story that you I can't even think of Lord of the Rings and they're talking about Mordor the Land of Fire alright it's having this thing the Land of Fire or you could say a woman of great beauty again I think probably a more common way to say this would be just to describe somebody and say oh she is a beautiful woman but this is another way I think that you can it means the same thing but it allows you I think to be a little more colorful with language and use it in a variety of ways so you could refer to somebody using of like a woman of great beauty she has great beauty let's look at the next one so we're going to use of when you would connect adjectives or verbs with certain nouns now this one is extremely common and there is no general rule except I'm just kind of making this statement again this is when I think you really just need more reading and you start to see these adjectives that are followed by the preposition for example you are tired of doing something I'm tired of running or maybe your say I'm tired of learning English I don't know I hope not but you are tired of doing something and in that case you're going to follow that adjective with the preposition of and there are many adjectives and verbs that are like this you could say again very common you are afraid of something I am I am a little afraid of spiders I have just a little bit of arachnophobia and or you could be accused of a crime or as a verb to accuse someone of some crime or maybe you could say that you are fond of something or fond of one so in this case there are many adjectives and verbs out there that you are going to follow with the preposition of and other examples will fall in this category so this is a very broad category but it's still important to know now I'm tired of this quarantine that's good example excellent um I think many people are there you are full of enjoyment alright yeah actually I got that ones coming up a little later too perfect I'm sick and tired of politics excellent example Thank You Aidan excellent the the next one let's talk about we we use them after adjectives that judge a person's behavior so this could also fall under the last one that we just talked about certain adjectives and you follow them follow these adjectives or verbs with the preposition up but in this case it's specifically talking about you are judging the way that somebody acts or the way they behave and this is a very common expression if somebody does something nice you might say wow that's that's so thoughtful of you so that is a great expression to learn if you want to thank someone and you want to show some appreciation you could say that's that's so thoughtful of you great expression using of you're judging their behavior they are thoughtful or if somebody's not very nice and you want to say that they're rude they're you could say that's rude of you it's rude of you to do something all right you're saying that this this person's behavior it's rude of it's rude of him it's rude of her so you're talking about that person or that last expression again I wanted to combine that because that adverb and adjective awfully nice that is a common collocation those words are frequently used together and you could say that it is awfully nice of you again if you're just showing appreciation you could say wow that's that's awfully nice of you you guys you enjoy these lessons you hit that like button I could say wow that's that's awfully nice of you to hit that like button I really appreciate it I think it's very thoughtful of you okay I'm not gonna say it's rude of you if you don't it's okay that's perfectly fine but just to give you some examples of when you would use it in this way and those are some good ones the thoughtful of you awfully nice of you uh maybe throw sounds some of those examples I like that if you want to say it's awfully nice of someone to do what all right let's look about the the next one is you would use the preposition of when you're talking about the well of the word about about something or it's relating to something so let's look at these examples again I wanted to throw in a common expression so I don't know if you've ever heard of the phrase speak of the devil so what this means it's an expression that when you are talking about another person and then that person suddenly appears that's when you could use this expression and say Oh speak of the devil this person just arrived we were just talking about you or you could use it when you're talking about like about this person and you'd say well speaking of wess and then you would give some information about me or something that you know speaking of this person but I want to teach you that common expression speak of the devil speak of that I'm gonna write it down for you and throw it in the chat it's an expression so that when talking so it's kind of saying a person when talking about a person they suddenly appear excellent and the other one when you want to give an example of relating to something else like maybe you're talking about the advantage of something the the advantage that is related to learning English is this the advantage of learning English or the disadvantage of something so in that case I think those are very common expressions would use of the advantage of something or the disadvantage of something so in that case it's more of or relating to UM think of the devil or the devil is here alright yeah so again it when you say speak of the devil it's not really something mean like the devil like a bad let's look at the next part we also use of when you are saying that something is done to this other thing or group for example this is a great example at the beginning well it's not a good thing the destruction of the rainforest the destruction done to the rainforest so you would use it when to when you want to say that something is done to something else the destruction of the rainforests the oppression of minorities the firing of employees so in all of those instances you could kind of think of of as something is done to something else or someone else excellent uh REO thank you great class perfect thank you I appreciate it Maria yes you enjoy this class I'm glad I'm glad that you guys are enjoying this lesson that's all about one word it's really just this one word but it's a very important word let's continue that you would use of if you want to say something or someone is you have felt or experienced by someone else and in this case I just used the word others so you're talking about you want to earn the respect of others you want to earn the respect of your colleagues or you want to earn the respect of your boss so that's a common phrase that you would use it to earn the respect of someone else or in this case if you're talking about somebody who is feeling some something like the suffering of others the suffering of others another example when you would use of again let's keep moving along uh right here when comparing now I I think not always but I think of superlatives for the most part you're using these superlatives superlatives is when that's when you are comparing three or more things you're you're basically comparing everything in which case you're talking about the best of all the worst of all so those are some common phrases that you may hear if you want to describe something and say wow this it's the best of all or maybe it is the worst of all you're going to use of or when comparing like making a comparison of all the YouTube teachers then you could say something of all the YouTube teachers wes is the best I don't know no all right I don't I want to be a little more humble okay so there are actually many great YouTube teachers out there and I hope that you guys get a little variety go go check out everybody it's great I think I think there's so many of us that do things a little differently I don't think one person is the best I think everybody just has different styles and different lessons so let's look at the next part right here when saying time now this is very American I'm not going to say that I no if this is common in British English I don't really think so and I don't I don't think it's it's not overwhelmingly common in the US but when talking about time people might use the word of and say something like it's five of five and if you say a five a five it means it's five minutes before that the top of this hour so five of five is really 455 or maybe you might say it's ten minutes of - in which case it's 150 it's 10 minutes before - so in this case of means like before so again this is more I think common in the United States but even even still I don't really use this when talking about time I don't I don't use it often but it's something that you may hear if you are living in the US or traveling to the US or maybe even watching a TV show or movie and somebody says the time if they say of they're talking about its before before this and typically they're going to use it when talking about just before like you'd use it with minutes of like five or ten maybe twenty but really this is just those two mostly with five or ten like oh it's it's five of three you're not going to use it with talking about like oh it's thirty minutes before this time that's a little strange so if you do you if you do hear this most often people are gonna use it when talking about five minutes or ten minutes before this time I hope that makes sense alright uh the next one next time that used one it's one minute of seven ok good example you could say that yes it's a minute of seven but it does work most most commonly people would talk about five ten minutes and it's a very informal casual expression you are also going to use of if somebody wants to express loss or they're showing some loss that they are suffering or enduring maybe you are deprived of something that you cannot have this thing and you might be deprived of TV right now many people somebody was saying they were sick and tired of this quarantine right now many people are deprived of going outside and just doing normal activities we are deprived of this we it's a way of expressing loss or you might you could use it say you were robbed of something you were robbed of money or you could use it when talking about like you were robbed of maybe like I was robbed of this new job that you didn't get the job you lost out on it and you're saying oh I was I was robbed of this new position I should have got it it was mine so it doesn't always have to refer to money in that case but those are some common expressions you are deprived of something or you were robbed of something and then we could use it with some certain idiomatic expressions as well if somebody were to say something like I'm a man of my word if somebody uses this expression it means that you are a person that does what they say you do the things that you say you will do and somebody you're basically if you're asking somebody to trust you they believe me you can trust me I'll do what I say I'm going to do I'm a man of my word I'm a man of my word there will be a new video lesson for you guys this next Tuesday I promise believe me I'm a man of my word you could use it also I think you could say a woman of my word too if you're a woman that's perfectly fine but with that a geomatic expression you would use of or in the nick of time and if somebody says if you don't know what this means in the nick of time it means that the you need to accomplish something and it's getting very close to the end and at the last minute you succeed you accomplish your goal and you could say that we made in the nick of time so perhaps you have to get to some kind of meeting or an appointment and you get there five minutes of seven o'clock right before then I made it in the nick of time right at the last minute I think a good way to think of this idiom is thinking about sports if somebody's playing a sports game and they're running out of time and then one of the team scores in the nick of time they score in the nick of time hello so ray how are you thank you good to hear from you so these are again these are all different kind of rules that you guidelines I would say that you can follow when to use this word when to use the word of because it is such an important word and I hope this helps a little bit I do want to let you guys know if you guys like what we do and want to show us some love you can there we go I'll get in the frame support interactive English we have channel memberships patreon there are some cool rewards and there are links to that down below in the description if you want to check that out so again this is a very common preposition the I hope that that this was easy to follow and understand because I don't expect you to memorize all of these different rules or that I've talked about today I just I would encourage you to get more reading more listening you're going to see this word being used a lot and then it's just you're gonna start to understand it naturally especially when talking about those adjectives that are followed by the preposition of some are very common you're tired of something you're afraid of something you're scared of something but other ones they they can be a little trickier so I hope you guys enjoyed this lesson if you did hit that like button down below always write to me in the comments because I just love hearing from you and just to give some shout outs thank you for joining me a 10 Demetri I appear in the nick of time yeah I do sometimes I get there right at the last minute and he's like ah it made it just in the nick of time a sleepwalker Mary thank you guys for being here Louisa Ramsar a great see you Poonam xialu abdul-rahman Susi I'm sorry I can't measure his sweet dough hey soos I couldn't see that name it went away but thank you REO neckla Rita Francisco Gertrudis thank you guys hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you guys next time so long

How to Use the Zero Conditional | English Grammar Lesson

Today, I'm going to talk to you about the zero conditional. They're basically "if" statements. Now, before we begin this super, awesome, amazing, and incredible grammar lesson, I want to remind you to join our social media classes because it's another great way to practice your English. In this lesson, I want to talk to you about zero conditionals, which are basically "if" statements. Now, an "if" statement has two parts. It has a condition and a result. The condition is going to be your "if" clause. It has a subject and a verb but it is not a full sentence. It's not a complete thought. So for example, if I say... Does that mean anything to you? No.

It's not a complete thought. If I say this, you'll just be like well... What? What? I need to know more. What...what happens if you use the bathroom? And that is the result. So we need the result to complete the sentence, and this is our main clause. Now the result, the main clause, it also has a subject and a verb. But the main clause could stand alone as its own sentence. So let's complete the sentence with the result. So I would say...

Now, this is the zero conditional because it's talking about a general truth. And I hope you believe me when I say that. It's true. I do. I wash my hands. Now notice that with the zero conditional both the condition and the result are in the present simple. So when we use the zero conditional to talk about a general truth, we're using the present simple in both the condition and the result. And this is a rule, and it makes perfect sense. Why? Because we're talking about routines, habits, rituals that we do on a daily basis. It's a general truth. Also, pay close attention to the punctuation that we're using. So if our condition, our "if" clause comes first, then we need a comma to separate the "if" clause from the main clause.

Now if we switch these around, the comma disappears. If the main clause is first, then you don't need a comma. No comma. So when we're talking about the zero conditional, if the first word of the sentence is "if," then you're going to need a comma. Let's look at a couple of other examples of some general truths. So who knows. Perhaps this is a general truth and someone is allergic to tomatoes. But remember both the condition and the result use the present simple. Here's another general truth.

Now notice in this sentence, our main clause (our result) comes first. So there is no comma. We also use the zero conditional to say scientific facts. Present simple. Present simple. And a comma separating the condition from the result. In this sentence, our result (water boils) comes before the condition, so there is no comma. We can make another sentence with this video and say...

Now, this is not a scientific fact. It is my opinion. But even though it is my opinion, it's still a general truth. It is a general truth for me. And yeah, it's true. If you boil broccoli, I do, I think it tastes terrible. Let's see how else the zero conditional is used in context. If someone doesn't treat you the way you deserve, then they don't deserve to have you. If it hits you, is it my point or yours? If the machine breaks down, we break down. If the water bill is too high, we all get grounded. If that boy is still walking, it's because you let him go.

Now, it is time to practice. In the comments, I want you to write a sentence using the zero conditional. Now you can write something that is a general truth. Or you could write a scientific fact. Just remember the rules. Both the condition and the result need to be in the present simple. If the condition comes before the result, please don't forget the comma. I will look through your sentences, and I will give you some feedback. It's a general truth. As well as a sentence using the zero conditional. Thanks for watching. Please give this video a thumbs up if you feel a little more comfortable using the zero conditional. Make sure that you practice using it, and we will see you next time.

How to Write Formal & Informal Messages

okay so should be starting momentarily so welcome welcome welcome to another super awesome live lesson that we got planned for you today so if you are joining us again just tell us your name tell me where you are from what are you doing today just tell me anything about yourself and if you happen to be watching this later then I hope that you're also having a wonderful week in again write something in the comments tell us hello talk to us so today all right what we are going to do is talk about this all right writing formal and informal emails out I said emails even though this applies to much more than emails this is going to be useful for any type of writing in English that you may be doing whether it is emails or academic writing at a university this is going to be useful all right this is also super important though because I know a lot of people see writing and they think well you know writing that's not a big deal but it is actually a huge deal so I think many people are comfortable with writing informal messages we do that all the time with our friends on the cell phone the problem is really the formal writing and this is what trips people up and this is also when I say it is so important because the formal writing is really where you need to know the information where you need to know how to use the language because when you're doing formal writing those are typically those are important times you're applying for a job you are applying for admissions to university you are asking somebody to write a letter of recommendation for you so these are important messages that you want to write so it is important that you know how to do formal writing so we're getting some people hello hello hello sorry if i mispronounce names i've a shake hello anwar from kuwait awesome from the philippines excellent fabio Brazil but in Scotland right now perfect thank you guys for joining again we're gonna talk a little bit about formal and informal writing and again this is so important because many of you are using writing to communicate maybe with school with jobs you were using it to send emails which is why I have that up there so the first thing I want to go over and talk to you about are some tips for formal writing okay so some of this you're probably looking at it and think well okay this is this is pretty obvious stuff but you would be amazed at when I was at my old school before and I would get emails from people that were applying for a teaching position and I would look through it and you would be amazed at some of the informal use of the language that they would use and it just didn't seem very professional and because of that you know people will judge you based on that so it's very important that you know again some tips that if you want to write a formal message if you want to write a formal essay you really need to know the the language that you should be using hello from Damascus Syria is awesome Syria awesome thanks for joining us if you guys want again if you know people that maybe have trouble with their writing please share this video right now share this live stream so we can spread the word to help people become better writers so the first tip that I have for you up there is just be polite when in doubt be polite so you need to know who you're writing to and if you're not sure if you're using polite language or if you think maybe you should be more polite just go ahead and be more polite don't you know it's better to be more polite than less polite because again when you send somebody a message if you send them a formal email for example and they respond to you and a bit more of a friendly tone then then you know where you stand then you can respond back to them maybe in a little more friendly manner but if you send somebody an informal email and they respond back to you with a formal message then it could be a little awkward because then they're kind of telling you like hey this is not the relationship that we have right now Marcella hello from Brazil welcome awesome so again if you're joining us in the chat tell me your name where are you joining us from I just want to hear from you the next one and this is this is so important and this is one of my pet peeves please please please I'm going to add one more please no reductions all right we're like gonna and wanna those are not words so if you're writing a message on your phone to your friend okay whatever that that's fine I know people want to make their messages shorter and it's faster it's easier that is okay the problem is when people start using the language like that and then it comes time to write an essay or complete their cover letter for a job they sometimes they don't distinguish between the informal writing of the telephone or the cell phone with the formal writing of university for example and they will put that in their papers and again gonna and want it those are not English words so please in the chat right now I want to ask you instead of writing gonna or wanna what should you write I want you right now also in the comments throw an emoji in there let me know how you're feeling try to capture that with an emoji there's actually a lot of interesting TED Talks out there about how people are using emojis and how it's kind of changing the way we communicate to some extent because they're used a lot but again in formal writing if you are writing to somebody about a job position or if you are writing an essay in your university class do not use an emoji and these are silly little things that you might be thinking like well of course I'm not going to use an emoji again when I was working at my old school in California I would receive I was one who was I was hiring and some of the teachers and sometimes I would still I would receive emails from other native speakers who are emailing me about jobs and they're using an emoji in and again to me it just didn't seem super professional to be doing that so again if you're you're you're not gonna write somebody about a job and say hey you know I think I would be great for the new position wink that makes no sense again that people are just might see that and then be like okay delete I don't need to read any more about this message I don't need to look at your CV so again in formal writing emoji free and don't use an emoji but if you want to again Marcel also know it's you throw an emoji in the chat that's perfectly fine that is okay the other thing the last thing is to avoid using idioms idioms again are definitely more colloquial more for speaking it's not something that you're typically going to use frequently in writing even kind of when you're doing informal writing to a friend so especially in academic writing or formal writing avoid using idioms that's all so let me give you an example of what not to do and I want to go through this with you this email right here as an example of what you should not write and again as far as I know this was a true email because I just went on Google and Google bad email etiquette and you find so many different emails of people doing things incorrectly so I want you to look at this email and I want you to tell me what do you think are some of the problems what are the problems with this email right here and write it in the chat so I am going to make a list of your suggestions let's move this down here okay what are the problems what are some of the things that you see wrong with this email hello from Mexico awesome thanks for joining us again we're we're talking about informal informal writing so take a look at this email what are some issues that you see does anything stick out of you is like okay yeah you should not write that this is an email example of somebody inquiring about a job about a position so what are some things that you see that are wrong or that they should not use in this

email so again yeah a lot of the first thing exactly they're using a smiley face at the end again we just told you no emojis because in this let's see I'm gonna add that down here to our list again no emojis alright anything else if there's something else just put it down there and I'll write it on our list no emoji so Sam at the end of the email smiley face again I'm thinking no I don't care if you are smiling I am NOT going to hire you okay perfect again spelling mistakes if you're inquiring about a job or if you're writing something that's formal usually like I said formal writing you're doing something very important it's about a job it's about an application you want to make sure it's professional if you're writing your CV your resume no spelling mistakes so perfect somebody had mentioned that there is a spelling mistake wondering right here should be wondering let me know capital all right spelling mistakes make sure that the spelling is correct anything else there is another shorthand in there which I it is a big pet peeve of mine there's any Oh exactly on more said it yes thank you all right again why Oh you you is a word the letter U is not a word but these are again things that you would see all the time all right instead of the letter you write why oh you okay when I was teaching I taught about five six years ago in Namibia I was teaching at a high school and this was an issue that a lot of the students in high school had there the were very comfortable with the the SMS language and they still would use that in their writing if I were to say you know write something about their favorite topic your hometown whatever the assignment was and instead of writing y-o-u people would just write the letter U and it was an ongoing battle throughout the entire year of trying to really kind of retrain people and say look you know you can't use this in your writing you know you use it when you're writing an SMS or that's fine but whatever you want to do that's your that's your that that's your business you can do what you want to do but not in your academic writing anything else that you see that is incorrect we have another one yes another spelling mistake Fabio good a good good eye all right email is spelled wrong they also misspelled that so instead of make sure again check your spelling they spelled this all right email should be of course email all right there was I think oh another thing that you see again look at how it's written again to me this was actually one of the first things that I noticed when I saw it okay they wrote the email in all capital letters all right that that's just again it's bad etiquette that's bad form there's no reason to leave the caps lock key on when you are writing a formal message asking somebody about a job okay so I'm gonna put down here that's the last thing I'm gonna add all right do not capitalize all letters all right and the same thing goes for like writing a message with only lowercase red letters you want to write proper English so again starting a first sentence use a capital letter if you're talking about a proper noun use a capital letter but you don't need to write it for the whole email also word use that's a great somebody just mentioned clipped again it is much better I was wondering if somebody was gonna say that instead of clipped just the language that you use attached is a much more common word it's a much better word if you're talking about adding something like your resume or some other document to an email so instead of saying clipped it is attached alright and again this is something that you even see on the emails it's it's an attachment is what you are adding so these are some common mistakes and again silly mistakes that people make and not just language learners the native English speakers make these mistakes all the time and it's just something that people really need to look for and understand so also on or a good point again in formal versus formal look at how we start out he said hello all right that that's a bit informal also the closing take care if you're inquiring about a job you'd want to be a little more formal and that is what we are going to next which is alright formal versus informal greeting so in the chat if you're joining us if you're here now I want you to tell me what kind of formal greeting do you like to use now there are many different situations some of us prefer one style over the other I've listed some different styles for you so basically I've given you some formal greetings and tried to tell you when you would use those so let's go through those one at a time if you're joining us in the chat just write down what kind of formal greeting do you like to use or what kind of informal greeting do you like to use so the first one dear sir or madam we use this when we don't know the person that we're talking to that you're sending somebody a message and it may be a man it may be a woman so dear sir or madam if you do know the name of the person I would recommend using it so in the next one we have dear mr. Smith or you could say dear Miss Smith alright if you know the person's surname go ahead and write it I think that's better and also if the person has a title so professor Wright that in there dear professor Davis if somebody is a doctor use that title it is more polite it's more formal it's more respectful to the person you are writing to and the final one again is when you're writing to an unknown person or group you can say to whom it may concern now this can be interchangeable with dear sir or madam but I always I would use to whom it may concern for example if somebody wants me to write them a letter of recommendation I will I don't know if that person who's getting it is somebody in human resources or maybe it's somebody who is the hiring supervisor so sometimes I'll just write to whom it may concern also pay close attention to the the way it's written all of those words should be capitalized and it should be followed by a colon all right if you're going to use to whom it may concern today some people might say this is a little old this is a little outdated we don't really use that as much again you could use other formal greetings like dear hiring manager dear Personnel Manager if you know who that email or who that letter is going to some informal greetings we all know those hey hello what's up that is my personal favorite one I use that one all the time what's up I say that often at the beginning of our video lessons because again it's a little more informal but these are some formal ways that you can greet somebody and start the conversation again if you're just joining us in the chat let us know where your name where you're joining us from we want to hear from you so let's look at some closings right now okay so I've given this this is in two parts alright so formal ending statement and then a formal closing so an ending statement is kind of like your last sentence of the letter the last sentence of the email these are two of those two of my favorites that I like to use you could use I look forward to hearing from you especially if you want the person to respond to your request or if you're asking somebody a favor or you're asking them that you want something you could say you know thank you for your consideration all right thank you for considering my request you can also use them together thank you for your consideration I look forward to hearing from you boom closing all right since your closing we have a question somebody Fobo asked could I use hi instead of hey yeah for an informal greeting hi is perfectly fine you could just say hi how's it going that is okay and like I said when you're writing a message it's better to be formal and then if that person responds back to you and they say hi then okay and write back and then you know that you can just have a friendly informal conversation with them that's perfectly fine so some formal closings again there's a lot of different ones sincerely best regards that's kind of my go to my favorite respectfully and we use those to close it out so best regards and then write your name informal closings I think many of you are familiar with those later ciao cheers thanks some of them I think like thanks you could use informal writing I don't think people are gonna get upset or think anything about that but in my opinion I think it is still a little more informal and when in doubt always be a little more formal okay so these are just some quick tips suggestions to help you become a better writer because at some point in there where you are right now or in the future you are going to be putting together your resume or CV maybe in English you are going to be writing emails in English to somebody who might be your professor your boss a colleague somebody in another business sector and you want to be polite and you need to know how to communicate with that person so what I want you to do is for your hopefully you were able to learn a little more about it Ayana has a grammar question if you can write the grammar question in the comments and I will get back to you if you have any questions again you guys could write those in the comments and I will respond to you or you can write to us on Facebook Instagram Twitter snapchat we are all over social media and please please if you found this video lesson useful share it with people you know okay thank you very much I hope you guys enjoy rest of your weekend and make sure you do the homework and we will see you next time all right so long

How to pronounce the longest word in English #interactiveenglish #shorts

so I don't know why people are always mispronouncing this word all right it's not that difficult pneumonoultramicroscopic silico volcanoconiosis so we're talking about the lung disease but for some reason it's people have trouble with it so I'll say it slowly pneumonoultramicroscopic silico volcanoconiosis all right that that stress is on that second to last syllable all right so now I I hope I've cleared up any confusion when it comes to pronouncing this word

IDENTIFY THE MAIN IDEA | Practice Your Listening Skills

yes okay I think we're live still trying to navigate the system hello and welcome trying to find my chat here so I can say hello to you people welcome welcome welcome to our super duper duper super awesome lesson today I love listening lessons and that's what we are doing so welcome I'd like to welcome everyone thank you for hanging out in the chat let's see who am i saying hi to lolly SDB by Shweta today we are going to have a really cool lesson about listening for main ideas listening for main ideas so again I'd like to welcome everyone Molly Junie ho jasira edita Joe Suez sorry I am misprouncing everyone's names I sure I'm sure I am because I it's it happens I hope you guys are doing well if you're just joining us please write down what is your name and where are you joining us from because it's so fun for everyone to see where everyone else is from even if you are doing this later if you're watching it at a later time please also introduce yourself tell us where you're from and become part of our global community of students which we love we are in the chat so if you're wondering who's writing what's going on it's him so today like I mentioned before I have a really cool lesson and I think listening lessons are they can be a little bit challenging but they're one of the best ways to improve your your your English because you don't have visual cues to help you which makes it harder which is good it challenges you makes things more difficult so we've established listening is super important but why is the main idea important what about the main idea why why should we be even worrying about this thing well let me tell you first of all you can't get anywhere without in in general without figuring out the main idea and this is something that they teach us in school this is something that we are faced with over and over and over again all the time we have to extrapolate the main idea out of something we hear news reports we hear you know something on TV we want to explain the plot of a movie music school at work we always have to you know mention what the main idea is and we have to do this and I will tell you this as an English teacher even working with adults over the years I have seen so many students get the main idea either wrong or just go on forever and it's actually not a lot of people get it right even though we it is important and we work with these every day so please pay attention and keep practicing because it's such a useful skill the main idea also gives us the ability to understand something so when you are able to you know convey the main idea in one sentence which is usually how long it takes it doesn't take more than that that means you've understood whatever it is that you're talking about the lecture the conversation the discussion and when you're able to understand something that's a way for you to check yourself so the main idea it is uber important I can describe how important it is and we're going to practice it today okay wonderful so there we go the tip so it's going to be a lot of fun I have to just trying to learn the system sorry about that okay how once we I mean how do we figure it out right how can we identify it I think the first thing you should do is ask yourself what is the topic what is this about what am i hearing about what am I looking at here what am I trying to deal with what is it that the topic is and usually the topic is like one word and it's what is this related to what is being said about this person thing or idea that is the second part of identifying the main idea so first of all what is the topic and then what is it that it said usually a main idea of something will not just be like I don't know flowers it will say something about flowers it will say you know flowers are beautiful I don't know but there's usually a statement that goes with it I keep trying to think of the main ideas that are in this practice so I'm trying not to give you guys any hints but there's usually something being said and that's the important part and of course something that will help you that should help you even today in our practice is is there any of certain information being repeated meaning do you hear something more than once because if you do that should give you a big clue that that is the main idea many times naturally we want to emphasize what is important so we save more than once whether it's a news report like I said or or if it's some a lecture that you go to university and the professors saying it if he's saying it more than once you should pay attention okay if the information is being repeated it's a good clue now like I said before main ideas are are there you know that they can be a little bit challenging which is why I'm going to do this practice we have a few different texts today we have and what we're going to do is I have a few different practices I'm going to read to you kind of a news report and I want you to extrapolate them an idea now I will read each report twice and I for the first one there's no text on the screen so you can't follow so you have to really listen and when you do please make sure that you pay attention for these cues are you going to hear something twice are you going to what is the topic pay attention to that what is being said about that topic pay attention to that too and and listen and then I will read it to you one more time and then you will have a choice of finding the main idea okay I hope you guys are ready I'm going to be checking with you make sure you write your answer in the comments whether you write it now or later okay so there you go it's my listening cue here is the first listening women are on the rise in Spanish politics Spain's newly formed government consists of eleven women and six men the newly elected socialist Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez has put women in some of the biggest position in his cabinet including head of defense economy education and finance Spain now has the highest proportion of women in top government position than anyone else in Europe in a televised statement mr. Sanchez said his new government consisted of people who want to move to Spain forward who want to move Spain forward sorry he said all are highly qualified and bring a vocation for public service and reflect the best of Spain they are open to the world but anchored in the European Union okay how is that so I'm going to read it one more time that was our first listening I'm going to read it one more time but because I'm nice I will give you the question so I'm going to read it one more time and leave the question on the screen so you can actually see it while I read it this makes things a little bit helpful okay so here's your choice okay is it a mr. Sanchez wants a new political position is it be mr. Sanchez appointed a majority of women and some of the highest positions of his cabinet or see mr. Sanchez once Spain to leave the European Union okay I'm reading it one more time women are on the rise in Spanish politics Spain's newly formed government consists of eleven women and six men the newly elected socialist Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez has put women in some of the biggest position in his cabinet including head of defense economy education and finance Spain now has the highest proportion of women in top government position than anywhere else in Europe in a televised statement mr. Sanchez said his new government consisted of people who wanted to move Spain forward he said all are highly qualified and bring a vocation for public service and reflect the best of Spain they're open to the world but anchored in the European Union okay so those are I hope that I think this was a little bit easier because I let you guys cheat a little bit by looking at the text while I read it so right now please write down your answer you can of course obviously write a B or C it's probably the quickest way to do it and if you're watching this later write it down later but please participate write it down because it helps you it helps you figure out if you got the right answer or not which which is really really helpful so hopefully here you are paying attention to the information that was being repeated even if there were other words used and also what was the topic about okay I threw some to try to try to throw you off track but I think you guys I see a lot of good answers so yeah you got it right I see a lot of bees of bees and that is of course the right answer oops mr. Sanchez did appoint a majority of women and some of the highest positions of his cabinet now you may have noticed that I've changed some of the wording because that is how main ideas work and also how you will see these questions on standardized tests like the IELTS or the TOEFL they will not give you the same words that they use in the text of course so you have to be able to recognize synonyms and you have to be able to say the main idea in other words okay that's very important so those of you who got it it is B he does not want a new political position that had nothing to do with it and then I did mention the European Union but he did not say that he wants Spain to leave the European Union so you have to make sure if you got it wrong no worries we have other practices okay they are coming up so oops so a new ones coming up I hope you're ready for this one I think it's a little bit more challenging since you guys are doing so well here it goes earth is losing wildlife at a faster rate than any time in history according to the New Living Planet report from the World Wildlife Fund fund the global wildlife population shrank by 60 percent between 1970 and 2014 the WWF warned that earth is losing biodiversity at a rate seen only during mass extinctions researchers say that most of the decline in our animal population is because of the exploding human consumption there are more and more humans on this planet we are eating more overfishing cutting down trees for beef production consuming more and using more energy and natural resources this has resulted in a massive loss of habitat for animals so I think this one was shorter but the vocabulary was a little bit more difficult okay so um what I'm going to say because again I'm feeling nice I'm going to give you a quick tip many times the main idea is going to be especially in English this is not true for other languages but just because of the the nature of English it's a very straightforward language many times the main idea is going to be in the first sentence many times it won't and that's my hand okay now like I said I'm feeling nice so I'm going to give you the questions to look at again so you guys can follow as I read here are the questions I'm not going to read them well I will actually Oh so is it our planet is losing biodiversity at an incredibly fast rate there are too many people on the planet or humans are eating too many animals okay so while I read for the second time make sure to try to follow what is the main idea here goes earth is losing wildlife at a faster rate at any time in history according to the New Living Planet report from the World Wildlife Fund the global wildlife population shrank by 60 percent between 1970 and 2014 the WWF warned that Earth is losing biodiversity at a rate seen only during mass extinctions researchers state that most of the decline in our animal population is because of exploding human consumption there are more and more humans on this planet we are eating more overfishing cutting down trees for beef production consuming more and using more energy and natural resources this has resulted in a massive loss of habitat for animals ok now I've seen some answers there some really good answers I just wanted to while you guys are writing them again now you can do it now or later also for the people who are watching this later there might be just because some other answers are correct doesn't mean that that is the main idea so please make sure that the main eye is the most important idea even though there could be other answers that are true okay and that's another trick that they could throw at you when you take these standardized tests they're asking you pay attention to the question right what is the main idea and I see a lot of really good answers if you guys answered a our planet is losing biodiversity at an incredibly fast rate you are correct it is also talking about how human are eating too many animals it didn't say that there are too many people on the planet but it's inferred those are correct but it is they're not the main idea okay so hopefully you guys got it again I use synonyms I use synonyms biodiversity a wildlife those are some synonyms so how are you guys doing show me and show me with an emoji I show me if you guys are doing well so far are you are you enjoying this cuz it's about to get tough I'm so excited I love giving challenging questions to everyone okay so here is the third one I hope you are ready for this one by the way I will not show you the questions so you have to listen carefully each time okay scientists have revealed that air pollution may be responsible for a significant reduction in cognitive performance research conducted for the World Health Organization in China showed that the pollution the air pollution was responsible for notable Falls in the students test scores for language and arithmetic the Chinese study is called the impact of exposure to air pollution on cognitive performance the study took place over a period of four years researchers analyzed verbal and arithmetic tests taken by 20,000 people of all ages researchers discovered that the longer people were exposed to polluted air the greater was the damage to their intelligence for those aged over 60 this could be the equivalent of several years of lost education so this one was a little slightly shorter but I am making it more difficult behind not giving you the question this time okay so you gotta listen to it one more time pay attention to the cues the topic is the idea being repeated what is the first sentence a and so on listen and I will read it one more time scientists have revealed that air pollution may be responsible for a significant reduction in cognitive performance research conducted for the World Health Organization in China show that air pollution was responsible for notable Falls in student test scores for languages and arithmetic the Chinese study is called the impact of exposure to air pollution on cognitive performance the study took place over a period of four years researchers analyzed verbal and arithmetic tests taken by 20,000 people of all ages researchers discovered that the longer people were exposed to polluted air the greater was the damage to their intelligence for those aged over 60 this could be the equivalent of several years of lost education okay so here are the questions so this is when you guys would write the answers down a B or C a States is it is the main idea Chinese students took a large number of standardized tests on the drawbacks of air pollution is it B air pollution causes respiratory issues in older populations or is it C according to some studies air pollution may be responsible for a significant reduction in intelligence so which one is the main idea I've thrown in a bunch of keywords here that showed up in the text in the end listening I'm sorry so hopefully you guys are able to kind of recognize those and be able to write down what is the main idea based on those okay so we have some C's we have you guys are doing really well and if you answered C you are correct according to some studies air pollution may be responsible for a significant reduction in intelligence so you guys are obviously not affected by air pollution because you are doing amazing so good job give yourself you know a clap a pat on the back and and if you guys don't know we are now on patreon so if you like what we do please go ahead and follow us there because we have some really really cool rewards and yeah if you like what we do just click the link on in the description and the other thing I was going to say because you guys have been doing so well if you got these answers right if you're doing really well give this video a thumbs up give it a like so I know if you got the answers right okay but I see a lot of really good answers so I think I'm going to see a lot of likes and because I feel like maybe it's a little bit easy maybe this was a little too easy for you guys so for the next one I will make it even harder and what I'm going to do is I'm going to give you the listening this time but I will not give you a choice of main idea so for the next one you have to come up with the main idea so it means that you have to listen and write your own sentence that you think is most important so this is not what you get to choose you get to write your own so of course we're going to have some different answers that's okay as long as the main idea is kind of similar so your sentences may differ but it they shouldn't differ too much because there is one main idea okay so pay attention pay close attention I'm going to read it two times but there will be nothing on the screen to help you here it goes okay black fly a new airborne vehicle was unveiled by maker opener in California on Thursday it is the brainchild of Google co-founder Larry Page and it could go on sale next year black flies designers say can travel for up to 40 kilometres at a speed of a hundred kilometers per hour it will eventually cost the same as a typical sports utility car even though it will take to the skies drivers or pilots will not need a pilot's license to get behind the controls critics say the term car is somewhat of a misnomer is it has no wheels and cannot be driven on roads a more accurate description would be a person carrying drone the vehicle can only carry one person and is powered by eight propellers for the front of the car and for the back company CEO Marcus Lang said opener is reenergize in the art of flight with a safe and affordable flying vehicle that can free its operators from the everyday restrictions of ground transportation okay so now we're getting into the future kind of so again pay attention here I I was trying to make it a little bit harder so I did take out the first sentence so if you're looking for that clue it is not there kind of but the main idea is inside the text okay so again I will read one more time and what you have to do is write down the main idea again this is going to be a full sentence write that down in the comments if you're watching us now or even later if you're looking at this later black fly a new airborne vehicle was unveiled by maker opener in California on Thursday it is the brainchild of Google co-founder Larry Page and it could go on sale next year black flies designers say that it can travel for up to 40 kilometers at a speed of a hundred kilometers per hour it will eventually cause the same as a typical sports utility car even though it will take to the skies drivers or pilots will not need a pilot's license to get behind the controls critics say the term car is somewhat of a misnomer as it has no wheels and cannot be driven on roads a more accurate description would be a person carrying drow the vehicle can only carry one person and is powered by eight propellers for the front of the car and four at the back company CEO Markus link said opener is re-energizing the art of flight with a safe and affordable flying vehicle that can free its operators from the everyday restrictions of ground transportation okay so that is that is it right now please write down your sentences which you think are the main idea we might have some differing sentences that's okay I just want to see what you guys think is the main idea of the text okay so I see some answers black flies a new invented vehicle something about the advertisement of publicity a black fly one of the new vehicles is amazing fast as a plane is very safe it's going to be something it will be neighbor on a few new years and it will swap with a car so the answer I have here again and your answers could say part of this answer or just some of it mine is kind of a broad abroad main idea and it says humanity humanity is set to enter a new era of transport as a flying car could go on sale next year so I would say the key the key words in the sentence our flying car and new different type of transportation because that was mentioned a few times in the text so yes flying car is of course important but new different type of transportation is also important because obviously we haven't really had any flying cars so far so it will it's more accessible so you should have mentioned I think those two things now if you mention anything about humanity or anything like that that's not that important but those two things you should have mentioned okay I like how ways yes

I'm helping you guys out there yes so some yes so you guys you guys did mention some really good ideas it's like a drone again keep in mind that in the main idea you do not need to mention details so you don't need to mention any numbers or any like anything like propellers or anything like that no details just what is the main thing that somebody can get from the text in one sentence okay so as you see this got a little bit more difficult we're going to do another one now and it is similar so I'm going to read you the text and you have to give me the main idea again the answers may differ but pay attention to the information that is repeated more than once because that is your clue right there here it goes American Michele Meyers 45 said that in 2015 she went to bed with a blinding headache and woke up with a British accent the accent has remained with her ever since she said it was hard because I was really struggling I have come to terms with the fact that I might sound like this forever I realize it's part of me now for an accent syndrome or FAS is a disorder that typically occurs after strokes of or traumatic brain injuries that damage the language center of our brain it varies in the degree to which it affects someone's language and accent the condition was first documented in 1907 by French neurologist Pierre Murray it is a relatively rare condition and only about 60 cases of FAS have been documented over the past century one of these was a Japanese stroke patient who woke up sound in Korean even though he had never been to Korea okay so I'm going to read it just like like last time one more time as I am reading it I would I would maybe write down the main idea and because you know it will be fresh in your mind

American Michele Meyers 45 said that in 2015 she went to bed with a blinding headache and woke up with a British accent the accent has remained with her ever since she said it was hard because I was really struggling I've come to terms with the fact that I might sound like this forever I realize it's part of me now foreign accent syndrome or FAS is a disorder that typically occurs after strokes or traumatic brain injuries the damaged the language center of the brain it varies in the degree to which it affects someone's language and accent the condition was first documented in 1907 by French neurologist Pierre Murray it is a relatively rare condition and only about 60 cases of FAS have been documented over the past century one of these was a Japanese stroke patient who woke up sounding sounding Korean even though he had never been to Korea okay so I see some answers over there that are actually there they're pretty good yeah so you guys are getting them are getting them them them right yeah so if you answered something like an American an American woman was diagnosed with a rare FAS something like that then Hugh got it right that it has something to do with that so or that American woman woke up with a British accent or anything like that those would have been correct okay so anything like that is is correct again I am reading these if you are finding these challenging don't worry this is this is what we're practicing I'm reading these at a normal speed and that's what makes it challenging of course and you don't have the text in front of you but that is part of the exercise it's a listening exercise so that's why I'm doing this but you guys are doing a great job I'm seeing some really really great great answers okay here goes the next one okay we just have we just have I think this one I don't know I think it's equally challenging so I'm going to read it and you guys can write down I would suggest maybe listen the first time just listen and then the second time I read it tried to write the sentence here it goes Alan Robert 56 was handed a 20-week prison prison sentence on Friday and was suspended for two years for scrambling up London's 201 meter heron tower mr. Robert dubbed the French spider-man was also handed a seven thousand dollar fine for disruption and for causing a large-scale emergency response hundreds of people stopped in the street to watch him climb building and the number of emergency services were called using his usual climbing method mr. Robert ascended the london tower using only his bare hands he never uses ropes or other safety equipment he has been banned from climbing any building in the UK okay he's been banned from climbing any building in the UK again this one was shorter I think it's a little bit easier actually but again while I say it try to write the main idea if you're finding this to go really fast you can always pause it and listen to it again and then try to see if you get the main idea okay here I'm going to read it one more time pay close attention Alan Robert 56 was handed a 20-week prison sentence on Friday and was suspended for two years for climbing up London's 201 meter heron tower mr. Robert dub the French spider-man was also handed a seven thousand dollar fine for disruption and for causing a large-scale emergency response hundreds of people stopped in the street to watch him climb the building and the number of emergency services were called using his usual climbing method mr.

Robert ascended a London tower using only his bare hands he never uses ropes or other safety equipment he's been banned from climbing any building in the UK okay so I hope that I hope that you found this a little bit easier um I am going to give you guys a few seconds to write down the answers right now so again if you're watching it now write down your comments right now with what you think is the main idea if you're watching it later write it down later but write it down because it's a good practice again you should be paying attention to information that was repeated or a way to summarize the entire conversation the entire report so I see some good answers Robert was punished for climbing the London Tower he was banned from climbing any building in the UK some answers in French that I don't fully understand but

I kind of get the gist was climbing a London with bare hands so these are these are I think you guys are getting the some of the main ideas some of the gist so hopefully your answered looked similar to mine which states that a French stuntman who specializes in scaling skyscrapers has been banned from climbing any building in the UK now again your answers could look a little bit different but they should have the information that you know this climber person has been banned and cannot scale any more buildings in in the UK and that he's French because I did mention that a couple times so you could have called him the French Spider Man you could have used that into into the description into your sorry main ideas so you could have done any of that I think overall you guys are really doing really well you came up with really good sentences remember they don't have to you look exactly like mine as long as they have those keywords that we're looking for well I hope you guys enjoyed enjoyed our lesson I hope you you found the challenging even if just a little bit because I was trying to challenge you and and I hope that you found this useful remember main ideas are very important everyone we use them all the time and listening practices are always a little bit difficult so if you found it too difficult don't worry I would say listen to these again and then it just write it down later too because this is how you practice I'd like to thank you for joining us today if you've enjoyed this lesson please like it please share it with anyone who you think needs some extra listening practice if you have any questions for us write down write them down in the comments we always answer and also join us on Facebook join us on Instagram because we have some great other activities that we post on there so thank you guys I hope you have a great Saturday and you know I will see you guys next time you guys rock by the way I've seen some wonderful answers Thank You Ian thank you wilderness thank you Anna Thank You AVI thank you des Monson um Sun - a sing Victor think you think you thank you you guys are the best and you know have a great day go enjoy yourself you've studied some English reward yourself thank you and I'll see you next time

IDIOMS to Express Hope & Inspiration | Vocabulary Lesson

if you'd like to express hope and inspiration then this lesson is for you hey everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I want to talk to you about some idioms that you can use to help give other people some hope and inspiration especially if they've been feeling a little down and just need that extra encouragement to get through some situation in life so the first idiom that I have for you is keep your chin up so this idiom means that you want to encourage someone to you know stay positive if they are going through a difficult situation you want them to keep their chin up and though this idiom comes from what when people feel a little sad typically their head might be down so you're telling them you're basically saying you know keep your chin up you know things are going to get better and you just want to give them that little bit of encouragement to stay positive in some difficult situation keep your chin up often I think it's use as a standalone statement it's kind of like you're giving somebody a command and saying hey you know keep your chin up alright things are gonna get better stay positive keep your chin up anyway keep your chin up you keep looking and good things will happen [Music] you work on that for you just keep your chin up the next idiom is you know hang in there and this idiom it also means to you to encourage someone to keep trying especially when they are going through some difficult situation too to keep trying don't give up just just hang in there you can do it when I think of somebody using like hang in there I think that that person is doing something that they're actually doing some kind of work or activity and they're actually they're doing something that they don't want to do and they are having to endure this thing so you may hear this used again is just a standalone statement somebody saying you know just just hang in there you can do it or they might say you know I need you to hang in there especially if they are encouraging you to finish because maybe you're working together and you're like you know I need you to hang in there or maybe you're talking about yourself and you're telling somebody and they're listening to your problems and you'd say you know I'm just having a tough time hanging in there and then the other person might tell you you know it stay positive keep your chin up so again these are very useful idioms to offer that hope and inspiration have a plan and I am going to save our jobs hang in there please just hang in there a little longer okay it's okay feel just hang in there next is the expression break a leg and this is used just to tell somebody good luck so instead of saying good luck you can just replace it with this idiom and say break a leg so you would often hear it right before somebody is getting ready to do something such as a performance and instead of saying good luck you say break a leg they're getting ready to start the competition could be a sport competition and academic competition and before they begin you could say hey break a leg you could even use it together with good luck and say you know good luck break a leg I believe in you I want to give you that that that hope so just go out there do your best break a leg grab your scripts people we open in 20 minutes break a leg Serkis floor on a wire no wider than a human know if he's time Oh break leg then we have in the bag and if you say that something is in the bag it means that that you are sure of success or are you are sure of accomplishing something you are you're very confident in something and you might hear somebody say just a general statement like hey it's in the bag when giving somebody a little bit of hope or inspiration I think this idiom could be used to offer some reassurance to somebody who may not be confident about what's going to happen and you tell them you know don't worry I think you can do it you know that it's in the bag you're going to have success it's in the bag don't worry this is in the bag I've got him dead to rights fingerprints witnesses it's in the bag the next idiom and it's also a very popular expression and that is sky's the limit and if somebody says you know the sky's the limit then it just means that there is no limit to your success to your aspirations and this is a great way to offer someone some inspiration by telling them you know to keep going that they can continuously grow and develop and succeed and you you can express that by saying you know sky's the limit for example I could try to offer you some inspiration if you're you're having some difficulty and tell you you know just just keep going I hope you keep learning with us throughout this year there's so much that you can achieve and accomplish and grow the sky's the limit well I turn this one into a functioning boyfriend your birthday Big Dawg it's okay I'm good come on this guy's the limit dream big my boy then we have the idiom the world is your oyster and again I think this is often used as a standalone statement and somebody would just tell another person the world is your oyster and what it means is that that this person the person that you're telling this to will have many different opportunities to do things in their life or their career there are so many choices that they will have you could tell them the world is your oyster often I think it's used when you're somebody is talking to a younger person that they have their whole life ahead of them and they can do all these different things and you can express that by telling them you know the world is your oyster you have so many options so many choices take advantage of it the world is your oyster I'm telling you kids from now on the world is your oyster I could do anything all bets are off or old is my oyster you're a beautiful young girl world is your oyster next is the idiom and this is one of my favorites and that is light at the end of the tunnel and somebody would say this when they want to express that things the situation is going to improve or it is going to end especially if it is a difficult or challenging situation it will improve or it's going to end that is the light at the end of the tunnel so think about the exact meaning of what this would say so if you are in a tunnel it's very dark it's a little scary nobody wants to be there you are looking for your way out of this tunnel and then you see this light up ahead and you know that that it's going to end or things are going to improve that is what will basically again what it means light at the end of the tunnel and the reason why I really like this idiom is because I think you could use it in in any situation no matter how bad or horrible it is you can always try to find some sort of light at the end of the tunnel and it's a great way to offer somebody that hope the light at the end of the tunnel but I finally feel like I'm in a place where I can see the light at the end of the tunnel this is just my luck finally catch a break at the office finally see some light at the end of the tunnel and when gone then we have the statement there's plenty of fish in the sea now this is a statement that's used for a specific situation because what it means is that you are basically telling somebody who has ended their relationship that they should stay positive and that things are going to be ok because there are plenty of other people out there that they can have another romantic relationship with so I think you would hear this idiom or even use this idiom often when somebody has ended their relationship and you're trying to reassure them that hey things are gonna be ok don't worry about it you will meet somebody else there's plenty of fish in the sea now you could also say just to throw in a little bit of grammar there are plenty of fish in the sea because fish can be both singular and plural so no matter what the meaning is still the same there are plenty of fish in the sea or you're trying to reassure somebody else there's plenty of fish in the sea point is you're the best guy I know you'll get over her plenty of other fish in the sea another sign from the universe that I'll never find love hey come on there's plenty of fish in the sea then we have to look on the bright side and if somebody says this it means that you should be cheerful and positive even though some kind of bad situation has occurred and usually when somebody tells you you know look on the bright side they will then tell you something to stay positive about or something that is you know good news or cheerful even though there's been some terrible situation so let me give you an example say that somebody has lost their job alright that's terrible that's a bad situation and somebody might be you know pretty sad or down about that and you want to give them a little bit of inspiration so you tell them hey look on the bright side and when you say this to your friend you need to tell them why they should be cheerful so in this case maybe you say hey you know look on the bright side you have always wanted to move to this other place but you couldn't do that the job was keeping you here now you're free so look on the bright side you can move to this other place try to find a new job it's what you've always talked about doing look on the bright side now look on the bright side I mean this you won't have to live with this ugly chair don't cry look on the bright side we get to see our lives flash before our eyes if all our hair falls off our wives won't want us anymore but there you go look on the bright side then we have the idiom pull yourself together and this is this is an idiom that means that you need to gain control over your emotions and you need to start acting normal again and behaving normal so I think often it may be used as like a command somebody telling you you know pull yourself together you need to pull yourself together if something happens and you are angry or you are frantic and you start you know you start panicking then that is when another person could tell you hey you know pull yourself together you know start behaving normal so that you can solve this problem or you could even use it and talk about yourself and you're telling someone you know I need to I need to pull myself together I need to get it together and start behaving normal so that I can solve this problem and get my life in order I need to pull myself together situation worse drink is to pull myself together next is fingers crossed and this just means that you are telling somebody that you hope that they will achieve something that will happen in the future or something successful will come to pass and that you've got your fingers crossed so you can say this to somebody else if they are telling you the things that they want to do that they want to accomplish and you should say you know fingers crossed I believe in you I'm hoping for you or you could say that about yourself that you wish something will happen in the future that that would be good for you and you're trying to kind of express a little bit of hope in your own situation and you could say you know I've got my fingers crossed I I have now I lost my job I tried to look on the bright side I have moved to this other place I have applied for a new job and I'm waiting to hear back from them god I've got my fingers crossed good luck on your tenure of you make me proud fingers crossed I thought you were that interview fingers crossed okay well let's just say this is gonna be great fingers crossed then we have blessing in disguise and this just describes a situation that appears bad at first but actually turns out to be pretty good and often I think it's used to reflect back on a past situation because something was bad and then since then you know some good things happen so when you think back about that first bad situation you could refer to it and say you know it was a blessing in disguise let me give you an example and we'll stick with that same story all right somebody loses their job and they try to look on the bright side and they move to a place that they've always wanted to live they they applied for a new job kept their fingers crossed and and got that new job and then let you know maybe they met the love of their life and they got married and they had a family and then when they think back about that initial situation all right they lost their job and you know they could say hey it was a blessing in disguise so quite often you may use it to reflect back on a past situation or you could also use it if you're you know you're trying to give somebody hope and inspiration who is actually in a bad situation now and you try to reassure them and say hey you know hey maybe it's a blessing in disguise that even though there there's just this terrible situation now in the future there will be some good that may come out of it it's a blessing in disguise I got fired from running the sweetums foundation thanks to me sorry again hey blessing in disguise I took a job at this accounting firm so you see George the whole incident was a god blessing yeah I mean a blessing in disguise yeah I'm saying is maybe this is a blessing in disguise please I don't know what the father is what so now I want to do a quick review as I offer you an inspirational message okay so I would tell you I know that learning English can be challenging and difficult but I want you to keep your chin up because even though it may feel that you're not making any type of progress whatsoever and that you're not improving you really are you need to take comfort in the fact that your skills are getting better and better each and every day that you practice so there is a light at the end of the tunnel and that light is English fluency so keep doing what you're doing keep watching our video lessons keep practicing a little bit each and every day write to us in the comments I want you to just hang in there and keep working hard and don't give up because the to be perfectly honest when it comes to learning another language there is so much that it will help you with about whether it's getting a job meeting other people there's so many ways that languages can help us learn and grow sky's the limit I hope you enjoyed this lesson learn some new idioms as well as feel a little more inspired perhaps after my message all right if you did then hit that like button down below let me know thank you guys so much for watching and I'll see you next time

IELTS Listening Practice for Advanced Learners

hello and welcome to today's lesson in case this happens to be your first time watching one of our videos on this channel my name is wes the channel interactive english it's all about just trying to help you improve your english skills we with vocabulary grammar pronunciation and today we're actually going to do an activity to help you practice your listening skills so even though you are practicing your listening skills right now just listening to me speak we're gonna make it uh this is going to be an active speak a listening exercise and when i say it's going to be an active listening exercise that really means that well i you are going to need to participate you will need to actually will answer some of these questions because we're going to be discussing this is going to be an ielts listening practice many of you have asked me uh about the ielts and i think even if you're not planning to take the ielts it is a test this this lesson will help you it's still going to help you practice your listening skills which is the most important thing but in case you are unfamiliar with the ielts and you don't know what it is or you have not heard of it it is an english proficiency exam that is used by academic institutions or even some professional organizations and they may ask people to present an ielts score so that they can kind of get an idea about your english proficiency so when you go and you take the ielts exam there are different sections there you take a there's a listening portion a reading a writing and a speaking part of the ielts today we're going to be working on well practicing your listening skills and what i've done is i've taken part of a listen of a ielts practice exam and we're going to look at that today and that's what we're going to practice and we're only going to do one part of it because usually each part of the ielts it takes some time but i really wanted to do just do one part and kind of examine and then go over the answers so this is a good way to practice your listening skills and that's why i said it's going to be more of an active active listening exercise okay so the way that i what the first thing i would say about the ielts is that so many of you like what do i need to do to get a good score how do i how do i improve this is very well this is a very simple explanation of my opinion of what you can do to succeed what would help you and i would say that you would study the test and this is not something i would recommend if you just want to improve your overall english but if you are focused on getting the best score that you can on the ielts you need to study the test and what i mean by that is understand what the test is about understand what they're going to test you on and how they're going to test you because the more you know about the exam i think the more comfortable you're going to feel when you go in there and you're getting ready to take it and if you feel more comfortable you feel more confident well then chances are you're going to get a better score the other thing that i'd say number two understand the directions so when it comes to the ielts listening the one thing i told you to maybe for this uh lesson it'd be helpful if you had a pen and a paper so that you could write stuff down because we're you're only going to be able to listen to it one time and that's what we're going to do today i just want to i'm going to say the passage one time and you have to write down the answers so you need to know that it's good to know that make sure you understand that before taking the ielts before you go in there i'm not kidding when before when i would teach the ielts and i would do some practice with the students and i would have a class of students and we would do this and i would tell them the i would read the instructions the same way that they would do when you go to take the aisles you're gonna we're gonna you're gonna hear this one time and i would play the audio for the class and almost always after it was finished somebody would raise their hand and say are we going to listen to it again we'd be like no no no no one time that's all you that's all you get when you're taking the aisle so that's all i'm going to give you guys and then the other thing just like anything else practice practice practice some more the more you practice again it's just going to help you build your confidence it's going to help you feel a little more comfortable when you go in there because i think any time somebody goes takes and takes an exam it's not it's an environment that's full of anxiety it's not like you're you're in the most comfortable place a lot of times people are nervous but the more i think you practice then the less nervous you will be and like i said that goes for anything like if you're getting ready to give a presentation the more you practice giving that presentation chances are you're going to do a better job giving it when the time has come so i told you we're going to do two parts to this let's look at the first part right here so i apologize i could not really i can't really make this bigger so what they would tell you this is just one section of the ielts this is for questions 11 to 15. so i am going to read the 1990s number 13 the park still uses what a children's play area a petting zoo or two of the early rides number 14 the hurricane roller coaster is what tall and made of wood designed for smaller children very fast and exciting and number 15 the rides with a height limit are coated yellow blue or black so this is the uh practice part and that's a great question uh Lavinia asked what's a roller coaster so again when you're taking this exam it's useful if you're reading through it that you know the vocabulary that may not be the case all depending on what kind of questions they ask you but a roller coaster is when if you go to an amusement park the roller coaster is the one that you get on and it'll kind of go up slowly up up up it's like you're on like a little well you're on a track and i don't want to say it's a train but kind of like similar to that and you go up up up up and then you go around and around and you're kind of going all over so you're you're on a track the same way that a train is on a track and you just go really fast and it typically takes you up and then down and then sometimes you'll spin around um very very common rides at an amusement park so now that we've read these questions we're gonna go through this i told you it's an active listening exercise i want you to participate try to write this down and then we'll go through them because i'm not gonna go through um i'm not gonna stop um and then go through each one um one at a time so are you ready so as i'm reading just follow along um the one thing i will say that with many of these listening exercises they typically go in chronological order which means that question number 11 you're gonna hear that first and then you'll hear number 12 13 14 15. that may not always be the case but more often than not um it's gonna cut just go in order so not to confuse you too much all right let's see um wait wait wait says 11 is hey how do you know i haven't started reading yet okay um so just listen to me read it i'm going to read it one time and then we'll go through um and talk about the answers so this is good little practice are you ready well even yes you're ready excellent so let's begin morning everyone we're very pleased to have you here at lunar realm for our september celebration day we have many smaller celebrations throughout the year for different events i think it was five at last count but the september celebration is a special day to honor the park's development from tiny beginnings to the huge enterprise it is today it's our most significant annual event come into the visitor center now over here you can see a picture of the original park when it was under construction the land was donated to the city in 1955 by then mayor matthew harticore it was donated in 1955 by then mayor matthew hartaker but the park itself wasn't developed until 1979. and you'll notice it wasn't very big at the time there um then there was huge growth in the 1990s and we're still growing today in the beginning there were only a few small rides in the park there were lots of other attractions in those days including an adventure playground for younger kids the kids love the petting zoo with its farm animals and in fact that's the only attraction that has survived until now we've still kept two of the original rides as an exhibit but they're not working in any working order anymore we're now one of the biggest amusement parks in the country we've got an amazing range of amusement rides here 43 in total this year i think we're the most i think we're most famous for our roller coasters aren't we i guess we'll all you all heard about the hurricane that's the oldest and our most uh famous one some of our visitors think it's not fast enough but to be truly exciting um it's not fast enough to be truly exciting but we love it because it's the highest wooden roller coaster in the country then we have the bobcat that one's a bit gentler for our younger visitors and for the truly adventurous the scream machine hurls you upside down and backwards at huge speeds it's too much for me it's important to remember that all of our rides have age guidelines and to help you there's a color system if the sign for a ride is yellow it means it's suitable for all ages although we do recommend that parents and older siblings go with very young children blue means that children younger than 14 can ride only if an adult accompanies them and black well this means that you must be at least 110 centimeters tall to ride regardless of age we should say that no rides are really suitable for children younger than 18 months but we do have a special section for parents with babies okay i see all these like these everybody's just going through throwing them in there all right that's fine um i hope that uh you guys were able to follow along it wasn't too difficult to understand well my speech i'm sorry if i fumbled that a little bit fumbled it means that uh it wasn't completely like clear and succinct because i did um i i did miss speak on a couple of times but i apologize for that so let's go now and and look at questions 11 to 15. so let's start with 11. all right so you guys i know you're throwing in a bunch of them right now look at let's focus on 11 right now the september celebration day is held what which one is it is it a b or c all right what do you what do you guys think and again this is why i said it helps if you had like uh have a pen and paper that you can write this down and then go back um instead of trying to uh kind of right do it from your recollection all right so leonardo lost my focus during the reading yes that does happen um so we have Lavinia says c um he was says c okay the the correct answer i'm going to read the part which has the answer and then i'll tell you guys what it is so number 11 when they're talking about the september celebration day is hell it says the september celebration is a special day to honor the park's development from tiny beginnings to the huge enterprise it is today that is your answer which means that it's c to uh the correct answer is c right there to remember the history of the park because they talk about from the tiny beginnings to the huge enterprise it is today and this is something that they do with these ielts exams and many other listening tests you're not going to hear the word like word for word from what you listen to to what the answer is what they'll end up doing is that they'll say the they'll say the answer but they'll they'll give it to you in a different way so what you heard me say it's similar to c but it's just worded differently and i think that's pretty common the next one this is a little more specific you need to listen for it but then understand the information they give you around it the park was first built in what i talked about um you heard me mention sorry if you guys did not get that one i know it can be a little difficult that's why you got to kind of write them down as you go along and listen to it the park was first built when all right i talked about all of those three of those years and a little bit uh around them 1955 1979 the 1990s all right so i'm seeing some answers between a one for b um the correct answer well let me read it to you the part where you and then just so you know so it's clearly i think it's easier when i actually highlight specifically uh tell you where it is so it said remember the land was donated to the city in 1955 by the then mayor matthew hardicore but the park itself wasn't developed until 1979 the answer is b 1979 that is when the park was developed so again they're talking about the difference between developed and built so in 1955 they got the land for the park but actually it was not construction did not start it was not built or developed until 1979 again they're just using different words number 13 the park still uses what did you guys hear that one which there are different things uh that it mentioned about the park but they said that one thing is still in use today do you remember what that one thing uh what that was let me read you that part and uh what does it mean develop to develop this means like to to build to construct something so in this case when you're talking about like uh like a home or a building develop build construct they're all uh synonyms so number 13 let's uh let me read it and then tell you i think you guys probably got that one so said the kids love the petting zoo with its farm animals and in fact that's the only attraction to have survived until now so the petting zoo has survived which means they still use it the answer is b number 14 we mentioned uh talked a little bit about roller coasters they're on those tracks i think they're a lot of fun if we go to an amusement park the hurricane roller coaster is what which what did you hear uh i mentioned the names of a few different roller coasters but you should have been really listening for um the hurricane and got that information about it let me read you the part about the hurricane and then again once you hear me read it say it again and you're listening for it i think it becomes a little more evident the hurricane that's our oldest and most famous one some of the visitors think it's not fast enough to be truly exciting but we love it because it's the highest wooden roller coaster in the country so it's the highest wooden roller coaster in the country that means that a it is tall and made of wood and then number 15 we i talked about those three different colors and gave some information about them the ride with a height limit are the rides with the height limit are coated with what uh which of those colors yellow blue or black if you're unsure or you didn't hear that i'll read um let me read or let me tell you that part you can listen for this well and i'm just giving you the answer it said um when i was telling you this and black well that means that you must be at least 110 centimeters tall to ride regardless of age so that is the only one that has a height restriction the answer to that one is c black alright i think you guys got that one excellent excellent good job good job um so let's look at the next part again i chose this because i was hoping that it would be a little easier um to follow along some of the other ones are like a dialogue a discussion conversation between two people and that would have been a little stranger for me to read to do different voices i wasn't gonna try that um this is also kind of a continuation of talking about this um this this park and you have questions 16 to 20 again what they would tell you is that the the test would give you time to look at this right here so that you're a little familiar with what you're trying to listen for so it's talking about food options chinese etc at the food court hamburger sandwiches etc at what so you see that at and then you should know that you're listening for some type of place or location special events parade starts at noon on the um what and then it's run by the final year high school students so it's like they're giving you just this list of information about the parade the concert there's going to be information about that it's at the amphitheater the theme what's the theme of the concert starts at seven o'clock and safety and security there are ten centers in the park children ask uh any staff member for help ask the security team at the what so again you can kind of focus on that if you hopefully you have like a pen or a paper or something that you can write down 16 17 18 19 20 as you're listening to me tell you the information so i'm going to tell you i'm going to say it one time and then we're going to look at it each one individually all right are you ready here we go so here we are all right now listen and answer the question 16 to 20.

this year the theme is hollywood and it's all about classic style and old films the concert starts at 7 pm but try to arrive by 6 45 now i know you're all eager to get out there and have fun but before you go i'm just going to tell you some information about safety and security if anyone needs medical attention we have help available you can see on the map that next to the visitor center which is where we are now of course uh you can see this red dot yes so that is so that is one of our 10 first aid centers if you get hurt all you need to do is ask a member of staff to direct you towards the nearest one and kids remember if something happens you get lost and you can't find your parents please tell someone who works at the park just look for someone dressed in the lunar realm colors and they will assist you and for anyone who's uh who has a problem of any sort you can come and talk to a member of our security team at any one of the main guard stations those are the blue dots here on the map don't forget to take a copy of the map so this was a little more difficult because you actually had to to this is where you would have to write things it's not just answering a b c so let's look at uh the food options all right number 16 okay so we know that italian chinese uh that food is available at the food court hamburgers and sandwiches can you guys tell me where were those available let me read it back to you what you heard and then i think oh okay you'll know what the answer is so remember i said if you want hamburgers sandwiches that sort of thing you can find food stands everywhere so we're talking about um a place like a location the food court has italian and chinese the other place uh the answer to 16 the only thing food stands it says if you want that sort of thing food stands everywhere so in this case i know so uh sleep are you put everywhere i think technically they want to hear those food stands that's where um that's specifically where those hamburgers and sandwiches are located special events we talked about the parade i gave you some information it starts at noon and on the what so where is it that the the parade is um i think in this uh when i was telling you i was talking about where you could you could get a good view the first is the afternoon parade it kicks off at noon so arrive a bit early if you want a good view the best place to see it is along the main street so the answer to number 7 uh 17 you hear that phrase yes exactly lolly on the main street um right here they when when i was looking at this i think they would accept like if it's capital letters like it's a it's a the name of the street or even if it's lowercase uh it seems like they would accept either one but the answer is main street and the concert number 18. i gave you some information it was at the amphitheater and then we talked uh i mentioned the theme too hopefully you caught that when you were listening to it so let me read the part in the um well in the information where it is so talking about the concert says the concert features singing and dancing costumes and lights and there's a different theme each year this year the theme is hollywood and it's all about classic style and old films so the answer to that excellent you guys you guys got that one hollywood um talking about the film industry it's assuming that well you'd be able to listen to it but that most people would probably be familiar with this word anyway and they might know a little bit about it that hollywood is related to movies and films and then finally the safety and security ten centers in the park so what kind of uh centers are in the park and there are 10 of them so hopefully you heard that and you would have been able to write it down so again it gets a little it does get more challenging as you go through this we did that first part that was a b and c and now you're actually having to listen for it and then write in the missing information so let me read the part and then i'll give you the answer i see some of you got it already it says uh can you can you see this red dot yes so that is one of our 10 first aid centers if you get hurt all you need to do is ask a member of staff to direct you toward the nearest one so at the park there are 10 first aid centers you guys rock that one i don't think whether you used a hyphen um in between i don't think they would count uh count off for that typically uh this i would say it's most the time you would hyphenate it because it's a in this case it's like a compound adjective it's an adjective before uh centers so it's describing the center as a first aid center um i think quite often you would find it hyphenated but anyway first aid that's the correct answer and then whoops i almost just gave you the answer to the last one it said ask the security team at the what because it said children can ask staff members for help um ask the security team at the do you remember do you remember um the last one let me kind of read it for you it said okay said it for anyone who has a problem of any sort you can come and talk to a member of our security team at any one of the many guard stations those are the blue dots here on the map so the last answer to number 20 was at the guard stations so this again it's this is um it's not an official one this is taken from the official ielts site which i've linked down in the description if you happen to be taking the ielts i would definitely go check out that link they do have a practice exam up there this is where this information comes from we just looked at a small part right now just to kind of uh well to to let you get a little familiar with what is on the test especially the the listening portion of this so you guys i i don't know whether you thought that was easy or difficult looking at what they had up there i think this was probably i think i gave you some of the easier parts of the listening because it was multiple choice you're listening specific information and you're just listening to me talk about some information instead of this back and forth dialogue which i think may be a little more challenging for some people so i hope that again you found it useful even if you're not taking the ielts it's always good to get listening practice it's always good to make it like an active listening practice such as the one that we're doing today this is interactive english it's all about being interactive and actually having you guys participate and and try to answer these questions i i know some of you said uh it's pretty difficult i i think you know that that makes sense this is a challenging exam it is very difficult the reason i told you that people would take the ielts is if they want to maybe go to university in well the united states many of those universities if you are coming from another country they might ask you for like the ielts exam or the toefl and that allows them to make a judgment about your english proficiency to know whether or not you could survive uh academically i think that most i think commonly it's mostly used for academic institutions like universities so i hope you guys enjoyed the lesson just wanted to let you guys know if you love what we do want to show us some love sponsor support the channel with a membership or on patreon uh i saw some members and patrons here with me today takayau lali iwa um so good to see you guys thank you guys uh and next week i will as always be back for another another saturday live lesson with you guys here i hope you have uh well enjoy the rest of your weekend thank you guys for joining just to give some shout outs because i haven't really said many names today um sleepwalker danica julio ragad stellamares um cassius tessie i'm glad it was useful ten kretika uh good to see you again la coselli uh it's a kyle thanks for joining yes yeah it is the ielts is definitely uh i'd say well it's a difficult exam and there's a range of scores it is very difficult i think to get a very very high score on the ielts um michelle leonardo lucy marikash uh juliana good to see you uh all right i'm gonna i'm gonna wrap things up enjoy the rest of your weekend i will see you guys next time so long

IMPROVE YOUR LISTENING | Check out these summer songs...

today i want to talk to you about music that is all related to the summer that's coming up [Music] hey everyone my name is wes from interactiveenglishvideos.com and this channel is all about helping you practice and improve your english and today is a lesson to help you improve your listening skills because many of you out there will ask me questions like oh i need to improve my listening and i really enjoy listening to music so what are some different songs that that i should listen to and that is a really difficult question to answer because it's different for everyone so what i want to do in this lesson is really get a little more specific to help you with your comprehension because i want to talk to you about some songs that you can listen to that are all uh related to summer and i think because of that it will be helpful in that you don't need to listen to the song and then try to figure out what's it about what's the main idea i'm already giving that to you i'm telling you that these songs are about summer and the things you do during the summer the activities the people that you're with and because you already know that then when you listen to these songs you can just try to listen for key details and try to identify the important information so that you can easily follow along in what the song is saying so these are all songs that are i tried to find some that are a bit different uh in their style but i also wanted to try and find some that i think might be a little easier for you to comprehend and finally before we begin i want to let you know that i will put links to all of these songs down in the description below i will put a link to the to the official video if you just want to listen to the song and i will also put a link to the karaoke version so that you can listen and read along read the lyrics for even better comprehension so check those out they will be down in the description the first song that i have for you is summer of 69 by brian adams and this is a little bit more of a rock song and just looking at the title summer of 69 they're talking about the year 1969 now this this song is not from 1969 it is from it's from later than that it's a song from the 80s and what it is is this person is looking back on this summer from 1969 when they were younger and the things that they like to do for example in the song he says uh me me and some guys from school we we had a band and we tried real hard so in that case he's talking about well they played in a band they just enjoyed the summer and as you're listening to the song see if you can try to identify some of the different things that he's talking about some of those activities from this summer in 69.

[Applause] then we have and this is probably one of my favorite songs from the list and that is schools out by alice cooper so this is well the the song is about just what the title title is school is out because i think many especially when you're younger i think many of us associate summer with well no school and the song is about just how excited and happy students are on that very last day and then school is out and summer vacation begins and even in in the song you can hear they hear them talking about no more pencils no more books no more teachers dirty looks so school is out uh yeah it's it's a great song i i remember it very well when when school would end and this is a song that my friends and i would listen to because we were also we were excited that school was out and summer vacation was about to begin then we have summer nights by olivia newton-john now this is a song that's more about a summer fling and if you don't know what a fling is it's talking about a temporary romance mostly that would happen during the summertime so i think some of you may also be familiar with this song because it is part of the movie grease which which was very popular so summer nights is also uh it's it's a little different because you are getting two different perspectives so olivia newton john is singing the perspective of the girls the way that she viewed the summer and uh john travolta would sing from the perspective of the boys and how how they viewed the summer so there is that back and forth as you're listening to the song where she is singing and then he is singing but that it's basically talking about their their summer fling and the time that they spent together during the summer summer nights

[Music] next is summertime by dj jazzy jeff and the fresh prince and this is it's more of a like a rap hip-hop song it is from i think back in the 80s and you may notice the fresh prince because that is will smith who who was uh singing before he became a very famous actor and what this song is about is they are just reminiscing about the the summer and how much fun it was and the different activities they would do from playing basketball to having barbecues and just spending time with friends so this song is going to be maybe a little faster so it might be more suited for advanced listeners but i do think they speak clearly throughout the song and it is possible to follow along with what they're saying so as you're listening to it again try to see if you can follow along the story that they're telling about summer and the different things that they did summertime [Music] then we have summer breeze by seals and crofts and this is uh more of a like easy listening it's an older song from the 70s but i think it in this case it's i think it'd be easier to follow because they don't speak very fast and i think there's a lot of repetition in this for example like the title summer breeze a breeze is like a very light wind and i think when well when i hear this word i do i think about the summer because even right now you can see the the leaves are blowing around there is a slight breeze some parts are maybe a little confusing because part of the chorus is they say summer breeze makes me feel fine blowing through the jasmine of my mind i'm not really sure what that's talking about blowing through the jasmine of my mind i think it's more just talking about how it just summer uh this summer breeze it makes people feel a little more calm a little more relaxed their worries kind of just just get blown away by the summer breeze but listen to it identify some of those details and then see what how you would interpret this song and what they're talking about that summer breeze [Music] then we have long hot summer by keith urban and i chose this song it's it's a different style it's more of a country song and it's also i think he he speaks a little slower so i think it would be easy to follow now this song is another romance song talking about a summer relationship but also about travel because i think many of us associate summer with with traveling and in the song he's talking about going on uh road trips and and really just just traveling anywhere and being a little bit carefree possibly because of that summer breeze so well in the song he even says it's going to be a long hot summer we should be together with your feet up on the dashboard now and your feet up on the dashboard he's talking about the the dashboard of the car and they just you just get in the car you go you start traveling because it's summer and just have some fun it's gonna be a long hot summer so check that song out again they're all down in the description and i think that when you listen to these songs now that you know they're all about the summer and the activities and the people that you spend time with i think that should make it a little easier for you to follow so if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching enjoy the summer and i will see you next time

IN / ON / AT - How do I use prepositions of place?

hmm which preposition should we use to complete this sentence in on or at actually you could use any of them all of them are correct it really just depends on the context and that's what i want to do in today's lesson i want to break it down for you so that you easily understand how to use each of these prepositions when talking about place and i'm also going to give you a little bit of a mini quiz at the end to see how much you've learned my name is wes the channel is interactive english and this is the place that you want to be if you'd like to improve your english fluency so if that's what you'd like to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that way i can become your teacher also if you'd like to get a pdf copy of today's lesson just click on the link down below in the description so let's begin with in and when you're thinking about n think about an enclosed space that you are surrounded on all sides and i want to give you some more general ideas as to when you would use this preposition so you will use in to talk about locations within a larger area how many people live in this town you'll use in with a car taxi or van if i were to say hey we're waiting in the car it's used to talk about workplaces or industries if someone asks where do you work i work in human resources or i work in fashion and if you've seen many of my video lessons you know i absolutely do not work in fashion it's my yeah my fashion's pretty bad you would use in with water let's all get in the pool or the expression there's plenty of fish in the sea so again we're talking about the sea we're talking about water and you would use this expression to say that well if somebody's single and they're looking to have a relationship and find a partner you're saying this to to encourage them to keep looking that there's somebody out there for them don't give up hope there's plenty of fish in the sea we use this preposition with class i'm having trouble paying attention in class i'm enclosed in this space and we also use it with printed materials if you don't know the meaning of a word you can look it up in the dictionary and you can think about it that well that word it's surrounded by other pages so it's in the dictionary so just keep these in mind when you're thinking about in and now let's talk about on and when you will use this preposition and when it comes to on i want you to think about a surface that something is attached to or touching something else so we use on to refer to the position of something on any surface your coffee is on the table i found some money on the sidewalk it's used to talk about a floor in a building i work on the seventh floor it also describes the position along a road or river or by the sea or a lake i could say the car is on the road the boat is on the river again it's on that surface or or i could even say i grew up on the east coast so i'm talking about the coast where i grew up on that surface and i would say on the east coast so when you're talking about the coast east west use on now the next few are technically not on the surface but i i still want you to use on so we're going to use it when talking about being on public transit like a bus or a plane i'm on a bus heading downtown or i'm on a plane to chicago and i know this can be a little tricky because we use in with a car like you're surrounded you're enclosed so one way to think about it is that you're going to use in with with smaller vehicles and you'll use on with larger modes of transportation but again there's always exceptions because you're still going to use on with a bike or motorcycle on a bike or on a motorcycle we use the preposition on with left or right my house is on the left oh no no sorry it's on the right and we'll use this preposition with media as well did you see the new show on netflix or you may be watching this lesson on youtube so just just keep all of this in mind when it comes to using on so now let's talk about at and when to use this preposition and and when you think about at i want you to think of a point a specific location or position so of course we're going to use at when we're referring to the position or location as a point i could say there's a package at the front door we use it to refer to an address i live at 44 main street and and this can be a little confusing because if we're just talking about the street then we'll use on i live on main street on that surface but if i give the specific location 44 main street well now we're talking about a point so we're going to use at we use this preposition to refer to most shops or public places and and in this case i want you to think about a larger point so i i could say i'm shopping at the mall and you would use at even if you are in the mall because if somebody were to ask you like hey where are you they're they're typically asking about your location so that's why you would use at and say i'm shopping at the mall we use it to refer to group activities i could ask you how many people were at your party we also use it with school or university i studied at a top-notch university and that's not really true i studied at a party school but you get the point with either of those we're going to use at and we use this preposition with work or home i could really say that right now i'm working at home so this should give you a better idea as to when you would use at now let's go back to our original sentence and i told you that all three prepositions are correct it really just depends on the context so if i say i'm in the lake well that just means that i'm physically in the water i'm surrounded by the water if i were to say i'm on the lake well now i'm talking about the surface so it really implies that i'm probably on a boat and i'm out on the water and i'm on the lake and if i were to say i'm at the lake well now i'm talking about a specific location even though it's a larger area if somebody were to ask where are you then i would say i'm at the lake because we're talking about location and right now i want to test your knowledge i have a little mini quiz for you i'm going to give you a sentence and i want you to think well which preposition best completes it in on or at i'll give you a moment to think about it and then i'll tell you the answer so your first sentence is i found a mistake the first page which preposition would you use the answer is on so in this case we're talking about the surface of the page on the first page i found a mistake on the first page so so just keep this in mind if we're talking about a page we're going to use on and that is a little tricky because remember we're going to use in when talking about printed materials like a book so something is on a page but in a book here's your next sentence she felt proud um the end of her month-long journey what do you think the correct answer is at she felt proud at the end of her month-long journey because we're talking about that that point that location she's at the end of her journey and these are really common phrases with at if we're talking about well at the beginning of something or at the end of something then there's this sentence there are no public toilets um the city center the correct answer is in there are no public toilets in the city center we're going to use in because we're talking about a location within a larger area

here's a question for you do you have anything um your pockets i i think you know this the correct answer is in do you have anything in your pockets we're talking about an enclosed area here's another one we wanted to sit the front of the plane i'm trying to trick you a little bit but the correct answer is at we wanted to sit at the front of the plane i told you that with public transit you're going to use on on a plane but in this case we're talking about a specific location on a plane so in that case we're going to use at at the front of the plane how about this one please refer to the graph um the slide the correct answer is on please refer to the graph on the slide so once again we're talking about the surface of something on a page on a slide so how'd you do on the quiz i want you to be honest let me know down in the comments because i just love hearing from you so i really hope you have a better understanding of these prepositions and and i do not expect you to memorize all of this i just want you to understand it get a feel for it so that way the next time when when you're speaking or writing you are just naturally going to use the correct preposition if you enjoyed today's lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

IT DOESN'T DO IT JUSTICE. (Advanced C2 Phrase) #interactiveenglish #shorts

the Grand Canyon is brehtaking pictures don't do it justice to do someone or something Justice and this just means to be accurate or fair by representing someone or something as that person or thing truly is it doesn't do any justice I'll tell you that you always said you like mine I love your nose it's real big up there so this phrase is often used in the negative and with the pronoun it doesn't do it justice so it's like I'm I'm talking about a situation and then saying that it's just not an accurate representation the book is so much better than the movie the movie doesn't do it justice or

hello and welcome to today's lesson in which case we are going to talk about idioms and learning different idioms which are very common in just casual conversation especially in places like the United States which is where I am from so if you enjoy building your vocabulary Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English in case this is your first time here and it's all about just trying to help you reach your fluency goals and if this is your first time here let me know write your name in the chat or the comments tell me where you're from because I just love to hear from you so before we get into the lesson I just want to let you know that if you want to practice and improve your speaking abilities build your confidence you can join my speaking course there is a link down in the description in you can also use the code speak20 to get twenty dollars off the course fee and actually all of the idioms that we're going to talk about in today's lesson are part of the course because each week There's a different speaking topic we learn vocabulary sometimes idioms related to that topic and then practice using them using different engaging speaking activities so check out that link below if you'd like to learn more about the course as well as class times and availability just wanted to to let you go know right at the beginning so um let's let's get into it with our first question because this is going to be a quiz lesson and I want you to participate in the lesson this is interactive English so I want you to write your answers in the comments in the chat and just practice and see how much you know when it comes to these different idioms so the first part of this is I'm giving you part of the idiom as well as the meaning so there are the blank spaces those are different words so this idiom means to try to be cheerful or think positively about a bad situation and you're going to say um side and this is actually I think a pretty common idiom you may have heard of it before I tried to choose ones that I think are pretty relevant in just casual conversation you're talking to someone a friend a family member you may end up using these idioms so the first one again there's three missing words in this I think starting out this way it may be a little easier for you which is good and then we'll get a little more difficult so I see some great answers in there uh great job uh Rafaela vincias Angela Eva I'll try to throw out some uh shout outs as we go through this to look on the bright side you're trying to be cheerful think positively look on the bright side I most of the time you're going to use this in a conversation you're talking to someone else and you're suggesting that they try to be cheerful and you're the one telling them hey look on the bright side it's not so bad try to look on the bright side I'm trying to give you some context down here the one thing that I would add is that when you use this idiom you're going to then tell the person why they should be cheerful so if we're having a conversation and I tell you hey look on the bright side I need to follow it with more information and actually tell you why you should stay positive or be cheerful so keep that in mind when you're using this idiom that you're going to then follow it with the reasons why they should stay positive and why the this other person should look on the bright side excellent I think you guys rock that one perfect the next one this it's not as much of an idiom this is a phrase a phrasal verb combined with something else I'll just I'll add that right now uh it means to pay a bill such as a meal or drinks at a bar I want to emphasize the drinks at the bar part of this so you're going to um up the um how are you going to complete this phrase there are two missing words to um up the um I will go ahead and say there are a couple of different phrases you could use the one that I'm looking for that last word it's not the check or it's not the bill okay so you could say that you could use check or Bill I chose another one that I think is a little more difficult it's not as commonly used but the key word in there would be drinks at the bar I want to emphasize that part I see a lot of people throwing in bill which again that that works but instead of using bill or check if we're talking about drinks at a bar specifically drinks at a bar we could use the word tab to pick up the tab all right saw a few correct answers in there yes uh Vidya Rafaela excellent takayo good to see you good to see so many uh uh speak up students in here excellent um and galpao how are you good to see you so again keep in mind there's nothing wrong with saying to pick up the check or to pick up the bill when you pick something up it just means you're paying for it the phrasal verb pickup has multiple meanings many of them one of them is to pay for something so in this case if you're talking about uh a meal at a restaurant I think in that case it's more common to say you're going to pick up the bill or pick up the check if we're talking about drinks at a bar you may use tab instead to pick up the tab so I wanted to give you this one

because it may be new it's great to learn new phrases that have the same meaning pick up the tab pick up the check pick up the bill those are all perfect those are great ones to use and I think again everybody I saw a lot of bills and some checks in there but this is hopefully this is new then we have this next idiom right here and I want you to keep in mind the picture so the home um it's referring to the last part of something that is being done and I appreciate those Thumbs Up In Hearts as I see you flying up here I like it nice so that's the meaning the last part of something that is being done but this idiom actually comes from horse racing which is hence the picture that I'm using so think about a horse race when you're when the horses are entering that last part of the race the announcer May use this idiom and say were the home um how would you complete a this idiom any any guesses if you know again I want you to participate in the lesson write your answers in the chat in the comments I haven't seen any we're not talking about a home run again this is not that that's more baseball this is it comes from horse racing we're I don't I was about to say it I kind of giving it away but let me go ahead and tell you we're talking about the last part of something being done you're in the home stretch so as the horses would come around the announcer might say oh we're in the home stretch we're at the end of the race but you could use this in a variety of contexts if you're talking about a work project this example sentence down here the project is almost done we're in the home stretch so really the last part of anything that you're doing if you want to say that okay we're almost finished it's near the end you could say that you're in the home stretch and you're really going to use this as a fixed phrase you're going to use that preposition in in the home stretch we're now in the home stretch so once again if this idiom is new that's great I always hope that you can learn something new from these lessons and if you did learn something new please hit that like button I'd appreciate it then I have one more like this and then we're going to switch it up a little and do things differently so this idiom is used with the verb to be so I'm going ahead and putting that out there to be for something you're unable to think of anything to say you're just speechless and typically you would use this when you are shocked you're surprised and you don't know what to say and you would tell someone I am you're using that verb to be I am um for um three missing words in here I think this one is pretty commonly used especially if you want to emphasize that you have nothing to say and you're just show saw so shocked or surprised sorry I think I didn't uh call coming in I don't know if that appeared up here but you would say I saw a correct answer yes um Rafaela Eva uh Dimitri remelia I think first to answer whoops not that one you're at a loss for words to be at a loss for words you're unable to think of anything to say you're speechless so right down here I told you oh I can't believe it you're so surprised you're shocked I am at a loss for words you're using it with the verb to be the next one the way that I want to do this one I am going to give you a picture and I want you to see if you can guess what the idiom is and use that picture to guess the idiom so I I really tried to track down some images that perfectly fit this idiom so that you could look at it think about what's happening and then tell me what the idiom is so this one I would say is very specific so probably is not commonly used as some of the others like saying you're at a loss for words but in case you want a little bit of a hint I'll give it to you right now okay whoops no no sorry I gave you the answer and then I want you to see if you could tell me what it means all right so yeah I see some and so I don't know why it wasn't picking up great job yes Rafaela Julia um somebody takayo you're in the doghouse so that is the idiom now if you're in the doghouse it's not a good situation think about what do you think it means has a negative connotation so what this means is a bad situation because somebody is angry at you think about this example down here it hasn't happened but if I said I forgot my wife's birthday so if she is angry at me then I am in the doghouse and generally speaking you would use this idiom when talking about your partner your significant other if they if this they are upset at you then you oh you know right now I'm in the doghouse my wife my husband they're upset they're angry with me for some reason I'm in the doghouse you could use it when talking about other family members or even friends as well but I think most of the time it's used when talking about a significant other and when they're angry you then you could say well I'm in the doghouse I'm in trouble and then you have to do something in order to get out of the doghouse the next one what do you think this actually I I think is a pretty pretty good picture that again what you just guess the idiot see if you can guess it and then we'll talk about the meaning I'll give you an example sentence and I think this is a good one this is commonly used so think about that picture those two people what is happening what are they trying to do they have looks like this rope and they have I don't want to give too much of it away they have each each person has an end of the Rope what are they doing with those ends great job nice uh Vidya Tanya we're talking about the idiom to make ends meet and what this refers to is you have just enough money to live on and survive So you you're earning enough money to pay your bills to buy food but still it's a little difficult and you could say that you're making ends meet or this example my family is struggling to make ends meet I have gone ahead and highlighted the word um struggling because I think this is a common collocation that you're struggling to make ends meet or you could use it with an adverb barely making ends meet well we're just barely making ends meet or we're struggling to make ends meet this is a good uh again good idiom that you can use casual conversation talking about the basically the financial situation of another person or group of people to make ends meet the next one this one it's a little more difficult so you have this person talking and this other person is listening intently and you can see that speech bubble there and they're just hanging on to it and that's a little bit of a hint what what phrase could you use that this picture is describing right here you're listening carefully you're in you're listening intently if you have any guesses let me know write your answer in the chat in the comments because I just want you to participate and hopefully maybe this one will be new for some of you that person I I told you the word they're they're hanging on so in this case we could say that they are hanging on someone's every word your listening very carefully you could say I know see some people saying like I'm all ears like yes you're listening you're paying attention that again that's what it means in this case when you're hanging on someone's every word you're really listening carefully but the one thing that I want to add to this is that admiration and respect so the example sentence throughout the lecture I was hanging on his every word in this context this situation I admire the speaker I really respect the speaker and I am hanging on their every word I'm so captivated by what this other person is saying one thing I'll add when I've taught this idiom before and I say yes it means to listen carefully and people may give an example and they may talk about well and then an announcement at the airport and they'd say oh I was hanging on um this person's every word in that situation I would say no no in that case you're just listening carefully when you use this phrase it really it really implies like admiration respect because if you're at an airport or a train station wherever and you're listening carefully to an announcement it's just some information you need to know it's not like you admire or respect the other person who's making the announcement so in that case you would not use this phrase but if you really have a level of respect and admiration and you're captivated by what this other person is saying then you could say oh I was hanging on this person's every word I hope I hope that you are hanging on my every word as I teach you these different idioms that's what I hope but that's another example uh as to how you could use this phrase all right now we're we're switching things up uh again I'm giving you the idiom in this case there are four words and I'm giving you the meaning and I want you to tell me what what idiom you think it is so the the the meaning of this is to decide what to do when you know what is happening rather than planning in advance there are four words blanks what idiom would you use that has this meaning you're talking about planning um scheduling you know what you're going to do you're deciding what to do what has happened um when you know what's happening rather than planning in advance what do you think I see Angela all of us are hanging ones today I appreciate that thank you very much so like go with the flow yeah that that kind of works but going with the flow it really implies like look you really don't care what happens and you're just gonna kind of just you know do whatever uh maybe somebody else wants to do in this case you're you really you're thinking about okay this is what I know what's going to happen and now we're going to do this so you're not going to have that set plan and in that case excellent Takaya rafella I figured both of you would get this we've talked about this before great job Dimitri lynel Angela we're talking about um well you guys already got it I was going to give you this extra hint and give you the first letter of each word but now that you can see people writing in the chat we're talking about the idiom to play it by ear this is one that I like to use mostly because I I think this is how I like to do things especially when I'm traveling sometimes I like to have an idea of a plan but if you know depending on what happens whether it's with the weather or something else or I like to be able to change that so once I find out what's happening then we can do something else and we can decide what to do then and I would say yeah let's just play it by ear I think that's a great statement phrase that you could use if somebody's asking you hey what do you think we should do should we make a plan what do you think about this idea and you could tell somebody look I just you know let's just play it by ear let's see what happens and then we'll decide what we're going to do we don't need a set plan let's just play it by ear excellent the next one I should move through these a bit quicker to give you those hints because I think people got that one uh pretty easily and maybe this next one as well not known or popular with many people so generally speaking you're going to use this idiom when referring to a place it's not known by many people it's not visited by many people and you're talking about the place and you could use this idiom to describe it and say well this place is really um I'll go ahead and give you the words before everybody starts answering so there are four words the first letter of each word is right here now there are two different idioms they're not really different uh that may have the same meaning it's really taking that last word and you could change it to another word either one is correct and I'll tell you in just a moment I I just chose this one because if I were using this idiom this is the one that that I would say great job uh noria Whitney Amelia Rafaela see ya perfect I I said P so off the beaten path this beach is certainly off the beaten path you can see that it's a nice secluded beach it's not visited by many people it's off the beaten path some of you had mentioned off the beat in track same meaning it it's either one is okay I don't know why I think I just tend to use path if I'm referring to a place and saying wow like I can you recommend some place that's off the beaten path and there are not a lot of tourists like where where could I go but you could also say off the Beaten Track both of them are okay but I think this is a great idiom to use in the context of traveling because when I talk to people maybe they're from another country and I would say look if I come visit your country or city where would you suggest that I go and I would like to go somewhere that's uh you know a little off the beaten path that it's not known by many people but generally speaking this idiom does have a positive connotation you're referring to a place that is nice that others would want to visit but people just don't know about it's like a it's a secret all right and this next one this one may be a little more difficult I feel like when I say that that's when people everybody knows the answer so there are three words I've given you uh the words the the letters uh that each word has as well as the meaning to try extremely hard to help or please someone what is what idiom could you use that has this meaning to try extremely hard to help or please someone this is what you are doing and I think again this is a useful one you would use this conversation back and forth with someone else especially when you're trying to emphasize that you're you're trying hard to help this other person I'll give you the first letter of each each word even though I saw the correct answer in there already but I will let you know in just a moment so you're helping someone else and you generally you would use this when you're letting them know that you're helping them great job romelia uh

Portos nice Nora we're talking about to bend over backwards you're bending over backwards to help someone I've been bending over backwards to help you the one thing I'd add to this is that often you're going to follow this with that preposition two and then whatever that something is I've been bending over backwards to help you do something I've been bending over backwards to teach you something I've been bending over backwards to and then you may follow it with that extra information but in this case when you're using this and you're telling this to someone else you're emphasizing that they you've just been you know trying extremely hard to help someone or please someone you're bending over backwards so there I tried to keep the number of idioms in this lesson to a reasonable amount so there were 10 of them and you can look at them right here here is a little bit of review hopefully you knew some of these already I also hope that some of them may be new or that you at least learned one new thing and if you did you can let me know by hitting that like button it also tells me that I should do some more of these lessons in the future now I would like to find out how you did so I'm going to add a quick little question for all of you to answer how did you do on the idiom quiz and I'll give you a few different choices um I rocked it

let's see 100 uh um I did okay and let's add another option I really need to practice more all right so there's that pole that I put there again I'm kind of curious to gauge how difficult or easy this quiz was for you so let me know right there how did you do on the quiz just to remind you one last time if you would like to practice and improve your speaking skills check out that link down in the description below you can use that code speak20 to get 20 off but this course it's for intermediate to Advanced speakers but it's all about helping you practice and improve your skills build your confidence and build your vocabulary along the way like I said these idioms are actually idioms that are taken from this course and there's a lot others as well so I also want to say a thank you to the members that I've seen in here other students from speak up rafella to Kayo good to see you other people that I always see in these chats Manuel Julia umphal nice to see you all Ava Miss thank you guys for participating in the lesson that's what these live lessons are all about giving you an opportunity to practice with me and let's just get a look quick look at the results so it seems like uh it's a little bit mixed about a quarter of you said you rocked it and then the third said they did okay and then 43 right now I need uh I really need to practice more so again that's great if you learn some new idioms again these are pretty common and just casual conversation especially in the United States I'm adding that because I'm from the US and when I started teaching English I realized then just how often I use so many different idioms just in back and forth conversation so these are not ones that you need to try to force into the conversation but if you're in a certain situation they they really work well and sound natural when you can you know tell somebody hey I want you to look on the bright side and then tell them why they should stay positive or right now before I should have used it before and saying we're in the home stretch right now we're definitely at the end or talking about travel what do you want to do let's just play it by ear these are great idioms to know so thank you again for joining me today I hope you have a wonderful rest of the day and of course I will see you soon in another lesson so

Idioms for Everyday Conversation (develop your speaking fluency)

Welcome to today's lesson and we are going to learn some idioms for everyday conversation and this is a quiz lesson. So I want you to participate. Write your answers in the chat or in the comments if you're watching this later. And if you are someone who likes building your vocabulary and learning idioms to just improve your speaking fluency, please hit that subscribe button, turn on notifications. then I can become your teacher. For those of you who don't know me, my name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And the other thing before we start this little quiz, if you would like to download and get access to the lesson notes that you see right here, you can join our community. And there is a link down below in the description if that is something that you're interested in. I'll send you lesson updates, new course information, as well as just some useful resources from time to time. I'll go ahead and throw that down there in the chat. But check out that link down in the description. If you are already a part of our email community, then just check your inbox. I have already sent them to you or they should be arriving soon. Now, as we go through the lesson, I I see so many familiar faces in the chat, which is great. I am going to try to give some shout outs here and there as we go through this, but let's go ahead and start with the first one. I'm trying to to make it a little easier. So, in this case, I'm giving you part of the idiom. You can see it bolded right there, but there's just one word missing. So, I want you to complete the idiom. Which word is missing? I can't believe she said that. It was really below the M. So, you can see what's bolded there. Below the M. What word is missing? How would you complete that idiom? And then we'll talk about the meaning so that you have a better understanding. But the key word in there, I think, is like, well, that first sentence as far as trying to figure out the meaning. Something was said. This person can't believe it. They were surprised. Maybe they were offended. And you could say, "Wow, that was really below the correct answer is below the belt." Nice. Uh, Ricardo Juliet allowed. Perfect. This is a remark uh that is really insulting or unfair. And if you want to say that, you know, it was not necessary. It was uncalled for. That was an unfair remark, you could say. Yeah, that was just below the belt. It wasn't it wasn't the right thing to do. It was just too insulting.

It was below the belt. Excellent. The next one, and I again, my goal is as we go through these, I think they'll get a little more difficult, but I just hope that you learn a few new idioms. That would be the goal. So, you can see this picture right here, somebody cleaning the carpet. And let's pretend that I am telling this person, hey, you know, you can get that stain out, but you may need to give it a little m grease. So, this is a phrase. It's an idiom, and we're talking about m grease. Two words. So, what adjective would come before the noun grease? And then we'll talk a little bit about the meaning. So, you can get that stain out, but you may need to give it a little m grease.

And as I see you guys are rocking this. You guys are on on fire. Today, we're talking about elbow grease. Nice. Uh, Lai Angela. Perfect. yama elbow grease. It's a lot of physical effort, especially when cleaning. Now, there are other situations that you could use this and talking about elbow grease apart from cleaning. Maybe you're trying to to fix something and you really just have to give it a lot of physical effort to uh you know turn this so that you can tighten the screw. You got to give it a little elbow grease. This is a again useful phrase when talking about that you just got to work a little harder and give it a little elbow grease. I would even say that is a bit of a collocation with this phrase to give something a little elbow grease. Well done. The next one, this is uh maybe it's a little bit too much of a hint with the the picture there. If you notice or you can recognize these different people, I I think also the the sentence will also give it away. And another one gone. And another one gone. Another one bites the And I'm trying not to sing it because you may recognize those four people. They're from the famous music group Queen. And this is a song and this is part of the song. And another one gone. And another one gone.

Another one bites the what and and then we'll talk about what it means. So I think this is one that you've probably have heard. I This is a very well-known song. I imagine you've heard this song possibly in a movie or TV show. And I see some really uh great answers in there. Another one bites the dust. That is the noun we were looking for. Excellent, Suma, Ricardo.

So it could be like killed or even in this case somebody's falling. But if you say something it it would be a euphemism in this case. And I would say that if you're talking about another person, another human, it would sound a bit cold and callous to say somebody bit the dust. If you're going to use this to refer to something being killed, maybe you could use it talking about an insect or a spider or something, a mosquito. You this mosquito bit you and you smacked at your arm and it bit the dust. So, I feel like if you're going to use this to talk about being killed, keep that in mind. I don't think it's often used to refer to other people um in that context.

The next one, this one I think is maybe a little more difficult. At least I when I every time I say that, that's when I see all the correct answers every time. Boom, boom, boom, boom. For now, let's put a m in it will come back to your idea later. So hopefully just hearing the sentence, it can jog your memory as to okay, I think this is the idiom. I've bolded it for you. Put a m in it. And the second part of the sentence would be a little bit of a hint as far as the meaning is concerned. For now, let's put a m in it. We'll come back to your idea later on.

Which noun are you going to complete this idiom? And I see some answers. No, not a table. Even though Okay, we'll I'll talk about that. Not put a sock in it. If somebody tells you put a sock in it, it's kind of like telling you, "Hey, be quiet. Uh don't don't say anything or like shut up. I haven't seen it." Again, everybody just try think about it. Throw your answers. Don't worry if you make a mistake. I would just This is all about practicing. It's interactive English. I want you to participate in the lesson. Not put a lid in it. A lid would technically go on something, but for now, let's put a m in it will come back to your idea later on. And the key part of this as far as trying to figure out the meaning would be to come back to something. So, in this case, it's not like you're upset. It's like, okay, let's we we'll we'll we're not going to talk about this now. We'll come back to it. I haven't seen it. So, all right. Maybe this is Oh, Arminda, you nailed it. Put a pin in it. For now, let's put a pin in it. We'll come back to your idea later on. So, to put a pin in it or this. Generally, what happens is you're talking about something and that's why you're going to use it or this and say, "Okay, let's put a pin in it and maybe then we'll come back to it later on." you're taking a break from discussing some topic and you're going to resume later. So, you would put a pin in it. Now, I I said I'd come back to the word table because that is another idiom to table something and you could say the same something similar like for now let's table this discussion and we'll come back to your idea later on. It would have a similar meaning. So to table something is to put it off and deal with it later. Talk about it later and to put a pin in it or put a pin in this. We're going to take a break from discussing something and then we will come back to it later on. Put a pin in it. All right. Then maybe this one's new. That's good. I love it.

I like it when if if this is new, you can let me know. Now, I'm going to switch gears, and this time I'm giving you a picture, and I just want you to try to guess the idiom, and I will give you a hint because I'll show you the meaning in just a moment, and then I'll I'll tell you the idiom. But can you use this picture, think about what's going on, and what idiom could it possibly be? You see this? This looks like it has to do with fishing. And I think once you see this is a little more challenging. I think once you see the answer then it it'll definitely make sense. But let me go ahead and give you the meaning. And we're talking about when you are free from blame or from an annoying obligation.

I see some people like fish out of water. That that's a good guess. That is another expression. If somebody feels like a fish out of water though, it means they feel uncomfortable in some new or different environment. So, we're talking about a different meaning here. If you're free from blame or from an annoying obligation, you are close and some other ones. Uh, gifty. Excellent. Yes. Um, Angela, you are off the hook. to be off the hook. I saw some with get. I I wouldn't use it with get off the hook. Typically, you're going to hear people use this with the verb to be and say somebody is off the hook. If you are supposed to go with me to some party and maybe you don't want to go and I say, "Okay, look, you don't have to go with me. You're off the hook. You're free from this annoying obligation.

You're off the hook." Or again, if somebody's not going to get blamed for something, it's like, okay, yeah, you're you're off the hook or you're not going to get punished uh for this thing. All right, let's let's keep going. Here we go. The next one. This is definitely, I think, a little more challenging looking at this picture. What do you think? Can you guess what idiom what's happening? You see this foot these people standing on this white line. What would you say? I will give you the meaning and hopefully it may make it a little easier to do what you are expected to do without causing trouble for anyone. To do what you're expected to do without causing trouble for anyone. That is the meaning of this idiom. And in this case, you are trying to do what? And now I think again people are you're able to look at the picture and come up with the correct answer, which is to tow the

However, there is a body part that is part of the idiom which is very relevant when talking about a giraffe like this one. And I tried to find a picture that I don't know really makes it easier possibly to identify that body part. And let me give you the meaning because yeah, it's a little more difficult just looking at that picture. I just thought it was funny to bravely say or do something that might be criticized or might turn out to be wrong. to bravely say or do something that might be criticized or might turn out to be wrong. What are you doing? And this is something you may do for another person.

Trying to help another person even though you might be criticized. You're trying to help another person even though you might be wrong. And the key word uh the word that I was talking about the body part is neck because I see that as a like couple of answers. But what what idiom that has the word neck has this meaning? So if somebody I see like is breathing down your neck. No, it's more like somebody's like looking over you making sure you're doing what you you're supposed to be doing. Excellent. Lai, you nailed it. We're talking about the idiom to stick your neck out. And if you're sticking your neck out, you're basically putting yourself out there to be criticized and you might be wrong. And you may stick your neck out for another person, trying to help them. You're trying to stick up for this person, and you stick your neck out. And think about it as far as the meaning of what's what's going on. You stick your neck out. It's kind of a dangerous situation that you you could have problems. You could get in trouble when you stick your neck out.

The next one, another fun animal one, which maybe this one is a little easier than the giraffe one in sticking your neck out. There's definitely uh a body part that I think you can identify with this picture and then try to think about what idiom it is, especially when it means to be waiting eagerly to hear about something. So if you're waiting eagerly to hear about something, you could say this idiom. Often I feel like this idiom is used in response to someone who wants to tell you something like, "Oh, guess what happened? You couldn't believe what happened." Really, I want you to listen closely. And then you could tell this person what and say this statement.

Nice. Well done. Uh Helen Eloa, we're talking about to be all ears. And the statement that that you would then say is I'm all ears. If I have something really important to tell you, I say, "Oh, just listen. Just hear what I have to say." Okay, I'm all ears. Tell me what's going on. I'm all ears. This part is going to be a little more challenging because now I'm giving you the meaning and I want you to tell me the idiom. And we're going to again walk through this slowly because I'll give you the meaning and then I'll show you the picture which is kind of related to the idiom and then I'll tell you what the answer is. So I've blurred out this first picture even though maybe you can guess what it is. Perhaps I think it's easy because I know what the picture is before I blurred it out. But this idiom means to be wellprepared or well organized for something that is going to happen. And those of you who have taken my speak up course, this is one that we've talked about before previously, I feel like in the last couple of courses, I see some uh some names, some people, Raphaela or Melinda, Pressures on what what idiom is this. well prepared or well organized for something that is going to happen. And a key word here I believe would be organized. So here is the picture and I think now it probably would become a little easier. I already see a couple of answers in the comments there. Uh nice. Yes, Sid. Uh, there's another name. I can't pronounce it, but yeah, you you guys got it. Neil, we're talking about the idiom to get your ducks in a row. Or you could use it with the verb have. Either one. To ha to get your ducks in a row or have your ducks in a row refers to being really well organized, well planned, and you have everything in order, and you're just ready for what's going to happen in the future, and you're you're going to get your ducks in a row. Here's the next one. And I do think this one is a a little more challenging. I think probably it's more common to hear an idiom like to get your ducks in a row because we often have conversations about the need to be organized. This one's rather specific. We're talking about changing the rules while someone is trying to do something in order to make it more difficult for them. So if you have these rules or conditions that you're trying to follow and then all of a sudden those rules or conditions are changed in order to make it more difficult to complete your task or do whatever it is that you need to do. You could say that this person or organization or institution keeps what?

And that is the idiom. They're changing the rules or conditions. Here is the picture. I know it's blurred out, but you can see this like a soccer goal. And the word that would be a part of this is not necessarily the goal in its entirety, but what about what the sides? What would you call those? Those would be the goalposts. And if you are going to move the goalpost, then that means you're changing the rules while someone is trying to do something in order to make it more difficult. So, it's a little bit more of a descriptive idiom if you want to say, "Hey, I'm trying to do this, but this, you know, my my boss or my supervisor just keeps moving the goalpost and they're changing the requirements or rules and making it a little more difficult. They're moving the goalpost, which is true. If you're trying to score and somebody's moving the goalpost, it's going to make it more difficult to score as well."

You're doing or to do something without worrying about the risk or negative results. I see some answers. Yes, great job. Uh Julia Ava, we're talking about to throw caution to the wind. When you throw caution to the wind, you're going to do something without worrying about the risk or negative results. Now, as far as the way you may have heard this being used, this is just my opinion. I feel like a lot of times it might be used kind of in the negative when you're telling someone, "Hey, don't take a risk. you should worry about the outcome and the results. Don't throw caution to the win. So, in that case, I'm kind of using it to say the opposite with the negative.

Don't throw caution to the win. Don't do anything without uh you know, you should worry about the risk or the negative results in in that context. All right. Here is another one that I think I even though I tried to blur it out. I probably you can kind of see the picture talk about what it is to be directly involved in or affected by something especially financially. You're involved in it. You're affected by this. You you have some financial interest in this thing. You could say that you have what. And I gave you a little bit of a hint there by using the verb have. And here is the picture in case you're wondering. Maybe this picture is not going to help you too much, but there's a word, a specific word in there that is part of this idiom. And I'll go ahead and tell you the word. You can see this picture. We're talking about skin.

This is a picture somebody uh their back you can see their skin and they're you're directly involved in or affected by something especially financially and you could say that you have skin in the game to have skin in the game. It's an informal way of saying you are really involved in whatever it is that you're going to be affected by this outcome. And like I said, financially would be like investing in some company and you have skin in the game. If the company does well, then you're going to make money. If the company goes out of business, you're going to lose everything and you have skin in the game. All right. So, this is a review of the idioms. There are 12 idioms that we talked about in this lesson. You can see all of them right here. This is a way to build your vocabulary, improve your speaking fluency. Right now, let's just quickly go through and do a little bit of review just to to remind you of the meaning one more time. So, if we say that something is below the belt, it's referring to something that was said. It was insulting. It was unfair. It was below the belt. If we talk about giving something a little elbow grease, we're talking about physical effort. And generally, you would use this in the context of cleaning something. And you need to give it a little bit of elbow grease. To bite the dust, it has a few different meanings, but if you say someone or something bites the dust or bit the dust in the past tense, to fall or come to an end or to be killed. Then we have this one. We talked about putting a pin in it. Maybe this is a this one was a little more challenging.

If you put a pin in it, you're basically saying, "Well, like this would be more in the context of a conversation with another person or a group of people. You're sharing ideas. You're talking about something. Look, we'll come back to that later. For now, let's just put a pin in it and then we'll resume discussing this later on." Off the hook means that you are free from blame or some annoying obligation. I gave you that example. You don't have to go to the party with me. I know you're busy. You don't want to go. You're off the hook. We also have this one to tow the line, which again, I think is rather specific.

You're just basically saying that you're trying to just do what's expected of you. You don't want to cause any trouble. You're trying to tow the line. The next one we talked about was to stick your neck out. To bravely say or do something in which you might be criticized or even you might be wrong and you're sticking your neck out possibly to help someone else out and you're sticking your neck out. Then we have to be all ears. I told you that mostly you might hear this sentence if somebody's asking you, hey, oh listen, I got to tell you something. And you just want to say, look, I'm all ears. I'm I'm eagerly waiting to hear about what you have to say. I'm all ears.

to have or get your ducks in a row. You just want to be prepared and well organized for something that may happen in the future. I think this one's useful and common to have your ducks in a row. to move the goalpost when you're changing the rules or conditions just to make something a little more difficult and you're moving the goalpost. And I know we just looked at these recently to throw caution to the wind. You're just doing something without worrying about the risk or negative results. I mentioned that often you may end up using this in like the negative saying, "Hey, don't throw caution to the wind. You should be careful. Don't throw caution to the wind." and the one that we just looked at to have skin in the game. You're directly involved or affected by something, especially financially. So hopefully one or more of these idioms is new and you learn something new and you can listen for them. If you're watching a TV show or movie, of course, I want to know how you did and I'm going to write this in the chat. You can tell me how you did on the quiz. I'm always interested. How did you do on the quiz? And you could say, I rocked it. And we'll do like a little emoji. 100. Okay. With a smile or I really need to do my homework. And uh we'll did some books there. Okay. So, what do you think? Um All right. What do you How did I How do I start the poll? Um not allowing me.

Oh, maybe I have to I didn't not get any correct. Maybe that is why. and then I can start it. No, it's not letting me start this poll for some reason. Okay, I apologize about that.

Well, you can let me know in the comments how you did uh on this quiz lesson. And remember, if you want to get the lesson notes, check out the description down below. Once again, I'll go ahead and throw that in the chat right there. Thanks so much for joining me today. Raphaela Lai, great to see you. Suma, Sid, everybody, thank you for joining and participating in the lesson. And I will be back soon for another lesson in the future. Have a great day.

If I Had Known This... I Would Sound Fluent in English!

mixed conditionals this is Advanced grammar and these sentences can be a little tricky so I'm going to go through them slowly give you a lot of different examples and hopefully by the end of the lesson you're going to have a much better understanding as to how you can use these useful sentences and if you would like to get the lesson notes click on the link down in the description that way you can review and you'll have them and you can just continue to improve your grammar skills so what conditional sentences simply put this is when we have an if clause which is our condition and a main clause which is our result if you subscribe to the channel you will reach your fluency goals this is a conditional sentence and yes I I think it's true I hope that you subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English and yeah that's what it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so before we get into the mixed conditionals I I want to go over all of the conditional forms so let's start with the zero conditional this is used to talk about General truths the condition we're going to use the present simple and the result we're also going to use the present simple if you touch fire you get burned if I drink coffee at night I can't sleep this is true for me or I could say meet me here if we get separated in this case notice that I'm putting the result before the condition and I'm not using a comma Now the first conditional is used to talk about a possible or likely situation in the future with the condition we're going to use the present simple and the result we're going to use the future if we work hard we will finish on time if you build it he will come this is a famous line from the movie Field of Dreams if you build it you will come and what was that if you teach it they will hit the like button I I hope that's true that if I teach this lesson you will hit the like button I could also say the ship will sink if we don't fix the hole again in this case I'm putting the result before the condition now with the second conditional we're going to use this to talk about a hypothetical or unlikely situation with the condition we're using the past simple and the result we're going to use would plus the verb if I were you I would hit the like button that is another suggestive hint using the second conditional or if I were a boy I would listen to her you may recognize this sentence because this is one of the lines from Beyonce's song If I Were a Boy If I Were a Boy if you want to listen to the second conditional check out this song it is full of sentences using the second conditional now I I could also say I would buy a new car if I won the lottery and yes I think I would buy a new car if I won the lottery the third conditional we're going to use this to talk about an imaginary or unreal situation in the past so for the condition we're going to use the past perfect the result we're going to use would have plus the past participle here are some example sentences if I had studied I would have passed the exam I I could also say if I had known I would have told you and then if we put the result before the condition I could say he would have come if you had invited him so let's get into the main event mixed conditionals these are a combination of two types of conditional patterns I just went over all of the different patterns but usually this is a combination of the second and third conditionals so there there are two main types of mixed conditionals but within each type there is some another version that's closely related mix conditional number one we're going to use this to talk about an unreal past condition and its probable result in the present so the past condition we're going to use the past perfect this is like the past condition in the third conditional plus the present result in which case we're going to use would plus the verb this is the result in the second conditional so here's an example if you had checked the map we would not be lost now I added a little more information hoping that that may give you a better sense of not only what's happening but when it's happening so I I could say say if you had checked the map when we stopped for gas we would not be lost right now so I'm adding right now to emphasize that this is the present and I provided you a little timeline down below again to try to to help you get a better understanding not only of what's going on but when it's going on so our unreal past condition would be that well you check the map and then the present result would be like well we wouldn't be lost and I can capture that with that sentence if you had checked the map we would not be lost let's look at some more example sentences I could say if you had taken the train you would be here past condition present result or if I had eaten dinner I wouldn't be hungry and yeah generally that's true if I had eaten dinner I wouldn't be hungry right now in the present and I could also take that present result and put it before the past condition when I say I would have a new car if I had won the lottery and yes I would have a new car if I had won the lottery but I did not win the lottery so of course I do not have a new car I want to quiz you real quickly because it's just fun I want you to participate in the lesson you can write this down on your own think about it in your head or even write it in the comments section I always love seeing people participate in these lessons because yeah after all this is interactive English so how would you complete this sentence right here using this mixed conditional you wouldn't feel sick and I want you to use the word medicine so the first thing you need to decide is whether or not the first part of that sentence is our past condition or present result just looking at the grammar I'm sure you know that the first part is talking about the present result you wouldn't feel sick right now so we need to come up with our past condition and you're going to use the past perfect so to complete this sentence I would say you wouldn't feel sick if you had taken the medicine we're talking about an unreal past condition and the probable result in the present you wouldn't feel sick if you had taken the medicine I want to move into the next part of this mixed conditional and

I'm calling it mixed conditional 1B because it has some similarities and really what we're talking about is an unreal past condition and its probable result in the future so we're still going to use the past condition with the past perfect but this time we're going to talk about a future result and we're going to use would Plus plus b plus the verb and ing so as an example I could say if I had taken the job I'd be moving to New York next month I'm talking about a result in the future and again you can check out that timeline down below hopefully it'll give you a better sense of what's going on let's compare the two because you could use the same grammar when talking about either a present or future result it really just depends on the verb because you're going to use the continuous tense with action verbs not stative verbs so look at the sentence with a present result uh if I said if I had finished high school I would be a college student now I'm not really going to change this sentence right here and provide a future result because the verb to be is a stative verb now the other sentence that could have a present or future result I'm using would plus be plus the verb and ing if she had said yes that is my past condition I would be getting married now I could say I would be getting married right now to talk about this specific point in time or I could say I would be getting married next month and talk about that future result so in this case I could use that grammar to either talk about a present result or a future result so they are a little similar which is why I labeled them mixed conditional one and mixed conditional 1B now let's have a look at mixed conditional number two and we're going to use this to talk about a hypothetical situation and it's probable but unreal past result so the hypothetical condition I'm going to use the past simple this is the condition in the second conditional plus the past unreal result in which case I'm using would have Plus the past participle which is the result in the third conditional let's look at the sentence if I were afraid of snakes I would not have gone camping you can look at the Timeline to give you a better understanding that hypothetical condition if I were afraid of snakes

what is the past but unreal result I would not have gone camping in this case you know that the speaker is not afraid of snakes therefore this person did go camping they were just commenting on this hypothetical situation and what would be the past result let's look at some more examples if she weren't injured she would have played it's a hypothetical situation because we know that she is injured or I could say if they were slackers they wouldn't have finished the project slacker is an informal noun referring to a lazy person once again hypothetical condition past unreal result and if I take the result and put it before the condition in that case I could say I would have answered the phone if I wasn't in an important meeting once again I want to quiz you on this mixed conditional and I want you to complete the sentence using the phrase so busy and then follow that with I would have gone with you to the movie you can think about it or write it in the comments how would you complete this Mixed conditional the first thing you should do is identify whether or not that second part of the sentence is talking about the condition or the result just based on the grammar you know that we're talking about that past unreal result I would have gone with you to the movie so you know that the first part of the sentence is our hypothetical condition and we're going to use the past simple to say if I wasn't so busy I would have gone with you to the movie now let's have a look at mixed conditional 2B again there are some similarities this is used to talk about a hypothetical future situation and it's probable but unreal past result so we're using a hypothetical condition in the future we're going to use the past continuous plus that past unreal result in which case we're using would have plus the past participle look at this sentence right here if my friend wasn't preparing a big dinner for tonight I would have cooked something for myself so the hypothetical future condition would be that my friend is not preparing dinner if my friend wasn't preparing a big dinner for tonight and then that unreal past result is that well I would have cooked something for myself if my friend wasn't preparing a big dinner for tonight I would have cooked something for myself let's compare the two so that you have a better understanding of the difference which is a hypothetical condition in the present using the past simple and a hypothetical condition in the future using the past continuous and keep in mind we're going to use the continuous tense with those action verbs not state of verbs so look at that sentence that hypothetical condition in the present if she wasn't afraid of flying she wouldn't have traveled by train that condition in the present to be afraid of something it's a state of verb I'm not going to change this and provide a hypothetical future condition it would just seem really awkward but that next one with the hypothetical condition in the future if my parents weren't coming this weekend I would have planned something special so I'm using that past continuous to talk about a future condition now I know I've given you a lot of information to take in but I want to see how much you remember I have a little mini quiz for you and I'm going to give you a situation and I want you to give me a mixed conditional that basically has the same meaning so here's your first one I do not trust him therefore I did not hire him for the job take this situation and give me a sentence that is a mixed conditional and it has the same meaning so with this situation there are two parts there is a hypothetical condition and a past unreal result so the hypothetical condition if I trusted him plus my past unreal result I would have hired him for the job if I had trusted him I would have hired him for the job try the next one here is your situation he did not take care of himself therefore he is sick right now how can we change this situation to a mixed conditional that has the same meaning if we break this into two parts we have a past condition and a present result if he had taken care of himself he would not be sick right now here's the next one he will not go to Mexico with us next month because he wasted his bonus gambling in Las Vegas change this sentence to a mixed conditional in this case we have a past condition if he hadn't wasted his bonus gambling in Las Vegas followed by a future result he would be going to Mexico with us next month I have another one for you here is the situation I am not going on a business trip next week therefore I accepted a new assignment at work change this situation to a mixed conditional sentence that has the same meaning here we have a hypothetical future condition followed by a past unreal result if I were going on a business trip next week I would not have accepted a new assignment at work well done I hope you did well on this mini quiz you can let me know how you did down in the comments and I know mixed conditionals can be a little tricky but I think the more you look at some of these sentences think about what's happening and when it's happening it'll make more and more sense if you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

If You ACE This Quiz, Your English is Excellent!

and ace this quiz, then your English is excellent. And this is something I really do believe that if you're able to ace this, then okay, you are well on your way to fluency. You have a high level of proficiency. And the first thing I want to mention is that if you would like to get these lesson notes that you see right next to me, click on the link down in the description, join my email community. If you're already a part of it, then I have sent them to you because if you are someone who enjoys, you know, improving your overall English fluency skills, then check out uh that link down below. Also, please subscribe to the channel. Uh my name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English, and that's what it's all about, trying to help you develop and reach those fluency goals.

So, let's just go ahead and jump into it. This is a quiz lesson, so of course, I want you to participate. I don't want you I don't want you to just sit there and look along. I mean, that's okay, but I want you to write your answers in the chat, in the comments. I That's what I want to see. I want to see this is active learning. So, I'm giving you two sentences right here. The first one, I haven't seen such a beautiful sunset in years. I want you to use the word ever and complete this sentence down here, which is going to have a very similar meaning to the first one. So, these two sentences are going to have a similar meaning. And I want you to figure out, okay, how can I complete this sentence using the word ever so that it really just has the same meaning as, well, I haven't seen such a beautiful sunset in years. I'll give you a moment to think about it and then I'll tell you. And really what we're doing here, I love these exercises because you're exercising your vocabulary muscles, but also thinking about the grammar because you want to make sure that well if the first sentence is, for example, if it's in the past, then the next one's going to be in the past. So you really do have to think about the grammar involved when you make these changes. So the first sentence, I haven't seen such a beautiful sunset in years. You're admiring this sunset. And I'm starting out the sentence. It's the So, think about a superlative. All right, a superlative, which in that case, we're using the word most. And what is the adjective in the first sentence? Beautiful. It's the most beautiful what? What are we talking about? Well, we're talking about a sunset. So, it's the most beautiful sunset that I've ever seen in years. I mean, you could put in years if you want to be specific. I think in general, uh, people might say, "Well, it's the most beautiful sunset I've ever seen, but this is what we call a transformation." And you find these type of these types of activities on proficiency exams all the time. And you need to rewrite the sentence so that it has a very similar meaning. And the reason why that you find them on these proficiency exams is because, like I said, it's testing both your vocabulary and grammar. You need to think about the grammar. I said we're using a superlative. The most beautiful sunset. In this case, we're using the pre the present perfect. So, we're going to use it down here. I've ever seen. It's the most beautiful sunset I've ever seen in years. So, again, this is the exercise that I want to do. I want you to change these sentences and they would call them keyword transformations because I'm going to give you the key word. I'm going to give you the word that I want you to use when you change these sentences. And as we go through this, I'll try to give some shout outs here and there. It's going to be a little more challenging because you're you'd have to write a bit more, but also there may be more than one answer.

I'll go ahead and tell you that right now. Just because I have a response, that doesn't mean it it's the only one. There may be multiple ways of completing the sentence. So, what do you think about this right here? We couldn't understand what he was trying to say. We couldn't understand what he was trying to say. There's your key word sense. I want you to use that word and complete this sentence right here. We couldn't what he was trying to say. I I'm we're starting out at I think maybe this is a little more intermediate uh at this point and I will try to make them a little more difficult. Uh I don't want to make them crazy difficult but I want to make it a little more challenging as we go through this. So I mentioned the vocabulary and in this case thinking you you see that word sense then you would really need to understand a phrase or collocation in this case to make sense saying that something makes sense or it doesn't make sense or in this case we couldn't make sense but this is when the grammar comes into play because we're going to follow that with a preposition. So I see a lot of you know great answers people say make sense but specifically if I want to get technical and a lot of you also put this you follow that preposition to make sense of something. So it is important to have that of in order to correctly complete the sentence so so that the sentence actually makes sense. So you would say we couldn't make sense of what of what he was trying to say. and you're you're talking about making sense of something. So, that is the phrase that you need to be aware of in in when it comes to this question.

So, great job. I saw a lot of uh excellent answers there. Well done. Um Ava, Julia, nice. So, she regrets not speaking up during the meeting. Simple sentence. I think you understand it. Easy to follow. I want you to change that sentence so that it has a similar meaning and I want you to use wishes. Use that word in this sentence down here. She m during the meeting. So it's like I feel like the more that I talk the more I end up giving it away. Uh when I would like to give you some time to think about okay, how is the sentence structured? what what words am I going to use to correctly complete the sentence? Is the verb changing? Uh so again, you got to keep in mind the grammar plus that vocabulary. So using the word wishes, I I think that just thinking about this second sentence that you understand.

Okay, that's going to follow our subject. She wishes. She wishes. You know what? You could follow it with a that clause. A lot of times that may be omitted. So, she wishes she during the meeting. So, we're talking about not speaking up. In this case, when we're changing that, the grammar is going to change a little bit. She wishes she in this case had done something. So, it's a conditional sentence where you're expressing like, okay, this didn't happen. I wish that it did happen, but she wishes she had spoken up during the meeting. To speak up, in case you're unfamiliar with that phrasal verb, it means to just say something out loud, uh, expressing your thoughts, your opinion, idea, and you're not going to be shy, and you're going to speak up.

So, when we change this sentence, you want to use that the the past perfect. She wishes she had spoken up during the meeting. Great job. I saw a lot of uh other great answers. Nice Lai, good to see you. Um here we go. Mama, excellent. Good to see you here. Awesome. Here we go. Let's keep moving along because I actually have quite a few that uh I want to get through. The results were completely different from what we expected. Once again, this is a sentence. just you you understand the meaning and I want you to use the word turned and rewrite the sentence or come up with a new sentence essentially that has a similar meaning. The results m completely different from what we expected. So these first few I'm only you know you only have to think of a few words maybe and then like I said it's going to get a little more challenging or at least I think it will as we go through this. So, how would you rewrite this? You know, rewrite the sentence down here using the our keyword turned. The the vocabulary that you would need to know is actually a phrasal verb and it is a phrasal verb with the main verb would be turn. And it refers to the end result. something turns out to be some way. In that case, we're we're using that phrasal verb I just told you, turned out. So, the results turned out because we're talking about the past. And then there is still something missing in there. All right, we need an infinitive. And in this case, our infinitive, the results turned out to be completely different from what we expected. Trying to think the results turned out completely different. I you could actually if you did not use that infinitive the results turned out completely different from what we expected actually that that would also work as well. So like I like I mentioned there may be more than one way to complete these sentences which is why again I love these transformations because it really gets you thinking about the grammar and the vocabulary. But for for my response right here, the results turned out to be completely different from what we expected. Let's keep uh let's keep challenging you with some more of these transformations. I love I love seeing everybody participate. Again, if you're if you're sitting there just watching this, I don't want you to watch it passively, you know, just try try to write some of these. Put them in the chat and uh write them in the comments if you're watching this later. I I love it when people are participating.

The manager said it was her assistant who made the mistake. The manager said it was her assistant who made the mistake. I want you to use the word blamed and come up with a new sentence that has a similar meaning. The manager the mistake. I think that you in looking at this, I think you can kind of start piecing it together, the verb that you're going to use and then the uh indirect object. But there there are some, you know, some small function words in there that you need to keep in mind because part of this exercise is all about accuracy. You want to make sure that you're using all the the words necessary to actually make a complete sentence.

So, the manager said it was her assistant who made the mistake. The manager, we're going to follow it with basically giving you the verb blamed. So, you blame someone. So, in this case, the manager blamed her assistant, but then we need you would blame someone for something. The manager blamed her assistant for the mistake. And what I was getting at when I was giving you that rather long explanation was was keeping in mind that word for and instead of omitting it. So these are the small tricky things when it comes to these exercises that people may not think about in the moment, but then once I show you the sentence and the answer, I think everybody's like, "Oh, yes, of course. The manager blamed her assistant for the mistake." All right. Well done.

now. Uh love always love hearing from you guys. So, what do you think? Yeah, like this that little hundred would do. So, he is too young to understand the situation. You you understand you understand the sentence. I want you to use the word enough in this sentence down here. He to understand the situation. This again is I I feel like again once you see it it's easy but trying to think of these is is challen it's a thinking exercise and I I've already told you several times already. I love these exercises cuz it gets you thinking. That's what it's all about. He's too young to understand the situation. He to understand the situation. The tricky thing here is that we're kind of saying the opposite. So, someone's too young.

And in that case, the opposite would say would be saying that someone is not old enough. So again, we're we're talking about the saying somebody's too young, but now it's going to be the negative. He isn't old enough to understand the situation. And you've said is not old enough. That works. Well done. Uh Anisha, uh Rachel, perfect. So again, think about that that distinction with these two phrases. if somebody is too young versus not old enough. Very they're similar, two different ways, simple sentences that are easy to understand. And hopefully that it it clicks now that you see the two sentences. He is he's too young to understand the situation. He isn't old enough to understand the situation.

What do you think now? I feel like it's getting a little more difficult or starting to get a little more difficult or tricky. He broke his leg, so he didn't take part in the race. He broke his leg, so he didn't take part in the race. I want you to come up with a new sentence that begins with the word breaking and using the word prevented. So that once again, the two sentences have a similar meaning. What do you think? He broke his leg, so he didn't take part in the race. We're starting the sentence out with a jarn. You see that? Uh, ing breaking. So, what are we talking about? Breaking what?

Not I don't know why I just thought about the show breaking bad. But of course, that's not even part of it. Breaking his leg. Then what was the situation? All right. What was the result from that? That's when our key word comes into play. Breaking his leg prevented. Who are we talking about? This is a This is a man because you can see we're talking about he, but we're not going to use he. It prevented him from doing something. Whoops. Sorry about that. Kind of went back the wrong way. Uh, breaking his leg prevented him from taking part in the race. The other thing that I I want you to keep in mind when you use that verb to prevent, you're often going to follow it with from. To prevent someone from plus the jarn, to prevent someone from doing something. Um my um wife prevented me from making a mistake. So, prevent someone from doing breaking his leg prevented him from taking part in the race. So, we're going to use take part, but we need to use the garant taking part in the race. Again, now that we're discussing it and kind of breaking it down, I just hope that it makes uh a little more sense. And if it does, you know, hit that hit that hundred right there so I know, okay, you guys, you're getting it. Um, what do you think about this one? I'm sure she didn't mean to offend you. So, this is our sentence. I want you to use the word intention. And how would you fill in the next sentence? I'm sure she m And then we're going to end it with the word you. So, I I told you that it's going to get a little more challenging. For the most part, I think it's getting more challenging because you have to think of more words that are involved in completing the sentence down here that I'm giving you. I'm sure she didn't mean to offend you.

So, when using intention, there is a verb that's often used with this. I guess you could say um it is a verb noun collocation. I'm sure she had no intention. So you may have intention to do something or have no intention to do something especially when talking about the negative. So I'm giving you that first part now. I'm sure she had no intention. And then what are we going to follow intention with? There is another uh we wouldn't say I'm sure she had no intention. You of course we're still missing some words in there. She had no intention. I'll go ahead and mention of doing something. So, we're going to follow it with of plus the gerant. I see some answers of no intention to do something.

Um, in that case, again, you have no intention of offending you because like I said, we're using the jiren. Like, I have no intention of working this weekend. I have no intention of buying a new car. So keep that in mind if you want to express that. Well, you're not going to do something. You could do that using that phrase, no intention of doing something. I I was trying to think of an example uh with you, but I want you I was going to say, oh, maybe you have no intention of answering the next question, but I want you to answer the next question. But that would be another example. you have no intention of doing something. Keep that phrase in mind. It's very useful.

It's helpful. One that you can use just casually when expressing the this idea that okay, I have no plans to do this. I have no intention of doing it. I wasn't expecting to enjoy the concert so much. I wasn't expecting to enjoy the concert so much. I want you to use the word surprised and complete the sentence down below. I love it. Mind blown. Perfect. Love it. Love blowing those minds. I I enjoyed the concert. So I I think again because of the keyword, you can start piecing the the first part of the sentence. you know that the sentence above we're talking about the the past. This has already happened.

We postponed the meeting because the director was away. I want you to use the word do. And this this may be a well again I don't want to give it away. So Satish you love the teaching grant. I'm I'm happy to hear that. Thank you very much. I appreciate I appreciate the compliment. I have no intention of quitting uh this this these video lessons and I'm always going to come out uh with new lessons each week because I just love uh I love help being here with you guys helping you practice and improve your English. We postponed the meeting because the director was away. So, we're really changing the well the structure a bit. So, the meeting again, we're talking about the past.

This has already happened. Our main verb up here, postponed. It's already in the past. So, the meeting was postponed. And then now think about why. And this is where our key word comes in. The meeting was postponed. I I think I see everybody uh I think you guys rock that. Due to is yeah the other phrase due to something. So the meeting was postponed due to you would need to put in in in this case the first sentence who who are we talking about? We're talking about the director. So the meeting was postponed due to the director's absence. So keep that in mind. due to something happened due to something else. Uh, another great phrase to use. Uh, Scotty, welcome. Thank you for becoming a member, joining our community. Love it.

So, both of these sentences very similar. We postponed the meeting because the director was away and the meeting was postponed due to the director's absence. Uh, again, I think a lot of you you you guys rock that one. That was good. I found out about the change because you told me. I I only found out about the change because you told me. I want you to use the word have down here in this sentence right here. Had m found out about the change. This is a little This is definitely a little trickier and I feel like every time I say that everybody just you you all know the answer and I I get all these answers that are correct. So think about the conditional. That's a little bit of a hint as well as inversion.

And I don't want to go too much into the weeds, but that is why we're starting out the sentence right now. had had the what? I'm waiting to see if I uh get get any responses before I start giving hints. So, I only found out about the change because you told me. So, you told me something. But if I were reflecting on this as a conditional and then saying, "Well, had you all right, now I'm giving you a little bit of a clue. Had you what? Now you told me about this. But had you not then is it making a little more sense now? Had had you not told me something then I what? And now we're able to use have when we're talking about the the result in this case. So I mentioned that that word in inversion.

Had you not told me, I wouldn't have found out about the change. Would not have found out. And that is referring to the result. We're using uh would plus have plus the past participle. And with with that inversion again, I could say if you uh if you had not told me, I I wouldn't have found out about the change, but we're we're just um inverting it. So, we're starting out with the verb. Had you not told me this, it is a little more, I guess you could say. It's a little more formal. It's not a structure that you're going to come across uh all the time or use all the time in spoken English, but I think it's good when, you know, for emphasis, for effect. Had you not told me, I wouldn't have found out about the change.

They they say the new CEO has transformed the business. I want you to use the word credited and I'm only giving you two words with the with the new sentence that you're going to create the business. So if somebody is just commenting, oh they say the new CEO has transformed the business. What sentence can we create down here new sentence using the word credited that has a very similar meaning? I want you to write your answers in the comments in the chat. I want you to participate. Okay? That's what that's what this is all about. That's what interactive English is all about. So, we're talking about what's our subject in this case? If you're trying to think of our our new sentence, we're talking about the CEO.

So, the CEO, we're talking about someone may be credited again, credited with something. So, this is when you're talking about credited and we're going to follow that with with plus the the gerund. So the new the or I guess you could say yeah the CEO or the new CEO is credited with something happening credited with plus that Jiren transforming the business. The new CEO is credited with transforming the business has very similar meaning to our first sentence up there. They say the new CEO has transformed the business. As we've gone, as we go through these, my my hope is that even if you did not get every single word that I put up there, that once you see the sentence, that it makes sense that both of them are very similar. um and and you understand the grammar and the structure as well as the vocabulary and how things may change like the preposition that you may follow it with or ajoin. So, what I would like to do, and this is complete, this is unofficial. Okay? Completely unofficial. I want you to let me know how you did. You can let me know how you did in the comments. Um, I if I were to put people in terms levels, I said if you ace it, then your English is excellent. I think that's true. I feel like if you got most of them, then yeah, your English is excellent. You have a high level of proficiency. So, of course, these are Cambridge's levels. A1, A2, B1, B2, C1, C2. And this is very unofficial. Like I said, depending on how many you got. If you got 11 or 12, then okay, C2, uh, 9, 10, C1. What do you think? How did you do on the quiz?

Thank you all for being here today. Um, Marama, it's great to see you. Uh, again, Julia, Lai, um, Alexander, trying to just give some quick shoutouts. Ava, Angela, um, Aperna, hope you, uh, I hope you all have a wonderful rest of the day. And of course, I will see you very soon for another lesson in the future.

If You Want to Succeed at Work, Learn These English Idioms

I want to help you develop your vocabulary skills and teach you some useful idioms that can help you grow your career. These are These are phrases that you will absolutely hear and can use in a work context, especially because in places like the United States, I think business and the work environment, it is a little more casual, which means that idioms are still commonplace when people communicate. So, this is a It's a quiz lesson. Of course, I want you to participate. Write your answers in the chat, in the comments, just so I know that you're you're actively thinking about this vocabulary and hopefully learning new things. I guarantee, I know I say this a lot, but I guarantee that you're going to learn something new.

And if you enjoy building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way I can become your teacher. My name is West. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So, let's start with our first question. All right, let's just jump right into it. phrase that I want to highlight and teach you, and I've given you the meaning down below. For those of you who have seen these lessons, you're familiar with the process. Uh you you know what to do. She didn't tell me she was leaving, but when I saw her packing her desk, I started to what? To piece together separate bits of information to see a larger pattern or reach a logical conclusion. What are you doing in in that sense? She didn't tell me she was leaving, but when I saw her packing her desk, I started to what?

Now, I see it. Put two and two together. That is a great idiom, and that actually that works. That's not the one That's not the one that I'm looking for, though, in case some of you are thinking, "Okay, uh I I like that idiom. I've taught it before. You put two and two together. You see something and then you're like, "Oh, I know what happened." happened. Um it will work in this context. So, that's a great response, but can you think of a different a different idiom that has this meaning? Love those hearts. Thank you. Keep them coming. I love it. I love it. Um start to well, I guess if you know, you could be pissed off or upset if somebody's leaving and you're not if you don't like your job. So, we're we're piecing these bits of information together. And I think this is a common idiom that probably I don't know. I'm going to say probably you're familiar with it. So, in this case, what you could say is you are start you started to connect the dots. And you have this information like, "Okay, I I think I know what's going on." You are connecting the dots. Very similar to the idiom to put two and two together. So, when you connect the dots, again, here's the meaning to piece together separate bits of information to see the larger pattern or to reach a a logical conclusion. And you are connecting the dots. There are because I like to help you supercharge your vocabulary, not just build your vocabulary, we're going to supercharge it. Here are some common collocations with this idiom. And these are some verb idiom collocations. If like we just used in our example, you started to connect the dots. And you Okay, I think I know what's happening. Or you begin to connect the dots.

Perhaps you're trying to connect the dots and you're trying to understand what what to do with the information you're given. Um or you're helping someone connect the dots. Or maybe you fail to connect the dots and understand and see exactly what is happening. These are some useful verb idiom collocations with the phrase connect the dots. Now, if you are wanting to improve your speaking skills and you're not sure how to do it and you're trying to figure out how to connect the dots so that that that can be possible. I want to give a quick mention and let you know you can join my speaking course. This is a course for intermediate to advanced speakers. It's all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, speak naturally.

Check out the link down below in the description if you want to learn more about the course or just check out class times and availability. So, if you want to speak with me, you can check out that link down below. Always see some students in here as well like Takayo, great to see you. Let's just keep going. Move on to our next question. The board of directors finally what? for the merger to proceed. So, in this case, the board of directors is giving formal permission for a project or action to begin. What What idiom are you going to use in this case? And I really do think this is very common in a work context when you're giving that formal permission for somebody to do something especially if you're like waiting around like you know, can can we can this happen? Can we proceed? And then you are finally given the the what? Any any guesses? Write your answers in the comments in the chat.

like in this example as a noun, the city council has given the green light to the new um to the new shopping center. All right? And you're given the green light. If we're using it as a verb phrase, my boss is going to green-light the project any day now. Same meaning, just different parts of speech, so it's always good to kind of get a feel for how some of these idioms are used in context, but how we can play around with them as far as parts of speech go. Here is the next one. What do you think? I'd love to something about how you managed to transition from law into tech. We're making a transition from one thing into another thing. This means to talk to someone in order to get their expert advice, opinions, or information about a subject they know well. What do you think?

Write your answers in the chat, in the comments. And of course, I'm going to try to give you some extra information. And I know I said this for the last one, but you could also use this in other situations as well. You will use this casually with another person when you want to get their advice or know what they think about something. Generally, you would say this to somebody who maybe they know more than you do. They maybe they know more than you do. It doesn't have to be an expert, but maybe they have experience. this is when I I feel like you probably have heard of many of these. I don't know if you actively use them. That's the goal over time, but it's always good to to get review. But I imagine, especially if you get a lot of exposure to the English language, you've come across this before to pick someone's brain. To pick your brain means to talk to someone in order to get their advice, opinion, information about a subject that they know well. So, if I want to ask for your advice about I don't know. You're something this is your career, this is your job. I might say, "Look, you know, I'm I'm trying to get some information. I'd love to pick your brain." Or can I just pick your brain and and ask you a few questions about whatever topic it is. So, when you want to pick someone's brain, you are implying that this other person actually knows quite a lot about whatever it is you're going to be asking about. That they are, you know, someone who is informed when you are picking someone's brain. Here, you know, I like to share these fun little comics with you. I need to pick your brain, Wilkins, and pass off your ideas as my own. Something that might happen in a work situation. Your colleague wants to pick your brain, and then they're going to steal your thunder and take your ideas and present it as their own. To pick your brain. If you're not familiar with this idiom, it's a good one to keep in mind because I think there are a variety of situations in which you can actually use it. Instead of telling someone, "Look, can I get your advice?" You could say to them, "Look, can I pick your brain? I'd like to know and understand more about something. I just want to pick your brain." Here is the next question. I need to the contractors to make sure the renovation is finished by Friday. What are you doing in this situation? The the meaning is to remain fully informed, organized, and in control of a situation or a person's progress. And you are making sure that things are getting done, that things are on schedule, and you're trying to control and manage the situation. What phrase can we use? I need to I almost said the first verb. Maybe I'll give you the verb in just a moment. But, I need to the contractors to make sure the renovation is finished by Friday. I was about to say stay. So, that is the first That is the verb. That's a little hint as far as this expression goes. I need to what? So, the meaning it is similar to kind of like supervise. It's not always interchangeable, but it's kind of on the right track. So, instead of supervising them, which is more like you are fully in control. In this case, it's not like you're fully in control, but maybe you're the one paying for it, and you want to make sure the work is getting done. And in that case, you are going to stay on top of the contractors to make sure the renovation is finished by Friday. Are we on schedule? Is everything, you know, going well? What do What else do you need to do?

Are we going to finish by Friday? And you're just staying on top of the contractors. So, this is a great idiom that you can use in this context so you can stay on top of something or stay on top of someone. I wanted to to make that clear. So, the nuance, it implies this proactive, vigilant attitude. So, it really has, I think, more of a positive connotation. If you stay on top of someone, uh it could be more negative in that context because it's like you're you're on that verge of micromanagement. And micromanaging someone, nobody likes that. That does have more of a negative connotation. So, here are a couple of examples. If you stay on top of something, you need to stay on top of this merger to make sure there is a smooth transition.

You're staying on top of this activity. And you want to make sure it gets done. Staying on top of someone, right here, parents stay on top of their kids to make sure they do their homework. It has a positive connotation. I think if you were staying on top of your children, making sure they are doing, you know, what they need to do, and they're you know, they are responsible for that, and you're staying on top of them. So, you could stay on top of something or someone. Here's the next one. She's a great candidate. She over 10 years of international experience to This means I've separated the the phrase. So maybe that it's probably going to make it a little more challenging.

So when you bring something to the table, then you are providing skills, attributes, resources to a group. You could use it in a work context. So you can use it in other contexts outside of work, but this is an idiom. I think more American American idiom bringing something to the table. All right, let's continue with the next Well, here's a again just a fun little joke. What do you bring to the table? And he puts his gut up there. I don't know why. I thought it was funny. So I thought I'd share it with you. But that's that's what this person brings to the table. Here is the next one.

Before quitting my job to start a business, I had to mhm for several months. I think this is another I guess it is it's an idiom. It's a binomial pair if I want to be precise. And another one that I feel like you would use at work, but also in other context as well. When you are carefully considering the advantages, the pros, and okay, never mind. Um, and disadvantages, the cons of a decision. I'm laughing because I've kind of given you part of the answer in the meaning, and I don't know if I realized that as I was putting it together, but it's okay. Before quitting my job start a business, I had to mhm for several months.

What are you doing in this case when you're considering advantages and disadvantages? Um, Miranda, excellent. You are of course, we're going to use the verb weigh in case you're unfamiliar. Pros and cons, that is the binomial pair, and you can use it with the verb weigh. When you are weighing the pros and cons, you are considering the advantages and disadvantages of a decision. So, any whether it's work related or anything in life, if there's an important decision, you need to weigh the pros and the cons, and think okay, is this the right thing to do? Is it not the right thing to do? And when you weigh the pros and the cons, then hopefully it's going to help you make the right decision.

I don't need the details, just give me the what? We're talking about the most important point or the fundamental reality of a situation. What What idiom are we going to use in that context? This one might be It might be a little trickier, and perhaps there's more than one that you could use in this context. I don't know if you hear like Luca in the background, but that's actually why I had to start the lesson. I'm I got to go on babysitting duty, my my afternoon commitment. Anyway, I don't need the details, just give me the mhm. Now, there are actually two different meanings for this idiom. I'll go ahead and give you the answer, the bottom line. So, the bottom line can refer to this one, which this one certainly work work related when talking about the final total of an account or balance, and you're talking about the bottom line. What is the company's bottom line?

How will this new regulation affect our bottom line? This is a work idiom when talking about a company's bottom line. We're talking about the money. But you could use it in this case talking about the most important point or reality of a situation. What is the bottom line? I need I need the details. I don't need the details, just give me the bottom line. You could use it in that context as well. Here is the next question. While the director is away, the assistant manager will be what? We're referring to the person in a position of authority who makes the important decisions. Which person are we referring to in this case? Or what is this person They're They're going to be doing what? Because I'm leading into it with the verb to be.

The manager will be doing what? They're going to be making the decisions because they are now in the position of authority in this case I I'm not I like that idiom and that would work holding down the fort if somebody's going to hold down the fort then they are going to be in charge that works in this context. That's not the one that I'm thinking of though. But this is why I like these activities it's getting the vocabulary juices flowing and thinking about okay what are some that work? Think about that when talking about decisions. Who when somebody's making the decisions they're going to be doing what? Maybe this is a new idiom for you maybe not but in this case you could say the person who is going to be calling the shots. To call the shots refers to the person who well is in a position authority and is going to be making the decisions. I was trying to put emphasis on decisions because that that's really like shots in this case you're calling the shots. Shots would be like decisions.

You are you know making the decisions calling the shots and deciding what to do based on whatever situation. So whoever is in charge whether in a work situation somebody's calling the shots or even at home within the family and somebody's going to take control and you know whatever whatever activity this person's going to be calling the shots. Uh one to give you a little nuance this is often used when there is a question of power or who is really in charge and you might ask this question who is calling the shots? Who is person that is in control and making the actual final decisions. And maybe you want to know and you can use this question right here, who is calling the shots? I want to know who's in charge ultimately and who is calling the shots.

A good leader needs to be able to see the mhm while their team handles the specifics. Common idiom. I think you've probably have heard it before. We're talking about the entire perspective on a situation or issue rather than just the small details. So, I I think the meaning it really explains what it is. Not the details, but the entire perspective. And instead of saying the entire perspective, you could just use this idiom which I think is more commonly used uh and you're talking about a good leader needs to be able to see the the big picture. I think this is often used in work. You hear it movies, TV shows. So, there are a variety of different situations in which you could talk about the big picture. Especially if somebody has a problem or there's an issue and like like we need to we need to look at the big picture or we need to try to see the big picture in order to figure out what to do next and then you can maybe weigh the pros and the cons in order to make the right decision because you are ultimately the person who is calling the shots. And this going to keep using some of these different idioms and review them. Uh hopefully that makes it a little easier to understand them. So, here are some common collocations with the the big picture. You are going to look at the big picture or maybe you see the big picture. Those are very common verbs with this idiom. You could also lose sight of the big picture. And in that case, you're maybe too focused on the details and you lose sight of the big picture.

Or maybe you just tell somebody or a group of people, we really need to focus on the big picture and make sure we see the entire perspective. Uh I know you said the entire picture, you could say the entire picture as well. I I feel like just as colloquially, I think people are more often going to use big picture when when talking about the entire perspective and you need to see the big picture. The contract was rejected and now we are at mhm in the negotiations. You're at the very beginning of a process usually because a previous attempt failed. So, there are probably there may be a couple of different idioms that you could use in this context, but you're talking about the beginning of a process because some previous attempt failed. So, now we are at what? What what idiom are you going to use to complete uh this sentence with? So, one keyword in there is at. Uh I'd say uh because there are some other expressions idioms that you could use like for example to go back to the drawing board. That would work, but it's not the one we're looking for because I would say now we have to go back to the drawing board in the negotiation. Sorry. In this case, a keyword is at. So, go back to the drawing board works, but it's not going to be able to you're not going to fit that into this blank. The idiom that I'm talking about is square one. You could go back to square one or if you say you are at square one, you're just saying we're at the beginning.

And now we're at square one and in the negotiations. We are right back at the beginning. So, when you're at square one, you're at the beginning typically because some other process failed and then you have to go back to the beginning. You're back at square one or you have to go back to the drawing board, another idiom that has the the same meaning and you have to start all over. Um we have to go back to square one and in this case, if you're using back, you could also go back to the drawing board. So, this usually the one I would say, I'm trying to think if I would make the distinction with go back to the drawing board, probably both of them. I think carry this tone of frustration or dismay because you're just having to start over again. You tried once already, it didn't work and then you're like, "Okay, now we got to go back to the drawing board." or now we're back at square one.

And the there is this sense of frustration because you have to start over. Just keep that in mind. You have to of the company's press release to see that they are actually worried. And that that's a key part of this in trying to figure out this idiom. You want to see that they are actually worried. And maybe you wouldn't notice if you just read through it quickly. So, in this case we're talking about finding a meaning in something said or written that is not explicitly stated. It's not stated directly like, "Hey, we're really worried." You really have to do what? So, that you can see that oh, they're actually worried. This is maybe not a good situation. And in that case, you are having to All right, excellent.

I see one answer. Yes. To read between the lines. Whenever you are doing this, you have some information and you're able to understand what is not directly stated. And that's I know they say in the meaning like a hidden meaning, but basically you're they're not stating it explicitly and you're able to read between the lines to understand, okay, this is the actual situation that's going on whenever you're talking about reading between the lines. Great idiom. I like this one. I don't know why. I just like it. Here is a fun little This was like a joke. I feel like it's very juvenile. I feel like when I was in middle school, people would you go up to you know, your friend and joke around and say, "Hey, can you read between the lines?" As far as the three fingers, you take two of them down and then the one in between is the middle finger and it's like yeah, one juvenile joke that reminded me of middle school. So, I thought

I thought child childishly I would share it with all of you. Here is the next one. We tried social media ads, but they didn't really mm on our sales numbers. So, you're trying something, trying to use these ads, but they didn't what? They didn't make a noticeable or significant difference. So, we're talking sales number like I'm going to give you a hint. Try to move the social We tried social media ads, but they really didn't what? This is This is my hint, believe it or not. Me doing this with my hand. We're talking about what? You're making a noticeable or significant difference. In this case, we're saying it did not happen.

So this to give you a little nuance very common this is very common in corporate business speak because we're really talking about a measurable impact. Some policy or some new features or you try a new approach. Uh and you can say, "Oh, is it is it going to move the needle? Is it going to make an impact? Is it going to move the needle?" Great use of it with a question if you're in a meeting and you want to know somebody has an idea and you say, "Well, is it going to work? Do you think that's really going to move the needle? It's going to make us more money?" So, good one to keep in mind. Here are the there are 12 of them that we went through today. Hopefully as we went through some of these different ones and you were able to figure them out. You're able to connect the dots between the example sentence and the meaning and figure it out. And I trust that you're going to keep building your vocabulary and that you're really going to stay on top of this because you want to develop your fluency goals and bottom line is that these these idi- they are important as far as your listening comprehension goes cuz you'll hear them, but it's always fun to be able to use them in conversation, too. They're very descriptive. They're very precise. And you're going to be able to keep developing your skills. You're not going to go back to square one because I think you're able to see the value. You're able to see the big picture when it comes to developing your overall English skills. And I hope I hope that you feel I bring a lot to the table to help you along with your journey. I'm just keep you trying to use them in context just to give you a little bit of review, but if you enjoyed the lesson and you learned something new you can let me know hitting that like button, uh subscribing to the channel. LESSON 387 OF 749

Important Christmas Vocabulary | English Cultural Lesson

hello and welcome welcome to our super holiday extravaganza listen at least that's how I like to look at it because this is a super fun lesson about the holidays that are coming up so again welcome to our two-hour lesson and this is a beautiful afternoon and I am here today to do a mix between a culture lesson and also vocabulary / idiom lesson so we're putting it all in one and we're talking about one of my favorite holidays of the year a super super super love Christmas and the holidays around this time of year it's December everyone is joyful their lights outside everywhere and my birthday is coming up too so I love love love this time of year so thank you again for joining my name is you wanna how are you guys doing today why are you writing from please let me know and also can you please write now tell me what is your favorite holiday midnight in Indonesia wow you are up late thank you thank you for staying up with us Afghanistan Japan India Turkey a beautiful beautiful community we have here I am very thankful for you guys and oh thank you thank you for my birthday thank you Lata so thank you guys for joining and today we are talking about the holidays and about Christmas now this lesson is like I said it's a mix between culture and vocabulary and idioms so I think we could all share about our own cultures and I can talk about Christmas and the holidays and I love to hear about your own cultures so please let me know in the comments what are is your favorite holiday if it's from if it's Christmas if it's not it doesn't matter I really really would like to know so please write it in the comments and also if you are just just joining write down where you're from it's really nice to see where everyone is coming from so again we have india brazil afghanistan christmas is coming o Durga Puja very nice so please write down what your favourite holiday is and what you do for this holiday wonderful so I'm going to start one of my favorite holidays if we're sharing like I said it's Christmas and everyone keeps talking about how magical this time of year is and we say this for different reasons because Christmas is a mix of so many different holidays and it's changed throughout the years okay so we have Diwali Christmas yeah it's just it's many many people like Christmas for the reason for so many reasons so let me tell you a little bit about what Christmas the definition kind of what it is today and how it got here so Christmas originally is supposed to celebrate the birth of Christ so it's a Christian holiday however I think it's also a cultural holiday which means the many people who maybe are not Christian celebrated every year and I think throughout the world more and more people celebrate Christmas regardless of their religious belief simply because this time of year a lot of people tend to get together with their families and it's it's more it's more than just a religious holiday so if you celebrate Christmas let me know I'm very curious to see how many of us here celebrated my favorite holiday is my birthday Marcos I am just and I love my birthday I was telling Wes my husband that this year for my birthday I want to have a birthday week not a birthday day so we'll see how that works so I definitely understand yes oh please right yes I ate we had a lot of students before who celebrated aid it's a lovely holiday from what I was told it's so great to see how many different holidays we have here okay wonderful so like I said Christmas was supposed to to celebrate the birth of Christ but it kind of is a lot more than that in the sense that over the years the timing of it which is at the end of the year it coincided with all these other holidays so all of these celebrations kind of got together in this in Christmas so there was the winter solstice the Yule the koleida which is where the Christmas Carol custom came from so there the Christmas tree I think is it's a whole other different tradition so out of these different celebrations throughout the world we have kind of appropriated Christmas and we have now we have things like decorations and we have a tree and we have carols and lights and so many things that we do with Christmas so it's it's a so about so much more ok so if you're just joining us thank you so much for joining oh my gosh I'm making sad mother yes um I might we'll see we'll see either that's all try hold we'll see if we can do that that's a Romanian it's a Romanian food and it's delicious for the holidays okay so why do I keep saying the holidays now I I really want to address this because when you are watching movies or when you are hearing things in the radio or in the news many many times people will refer to this time of the year as the holidays now this is not a holiday that you take like if you go on vacation to the beach or something or to Greece or some some something like that the holidays is a specific time of the year and you see it a lot expressed especially in the US and Canada because of the different holidays is Christmas probably if I were to choose it would be Christmas I love it I love everything about it I do decorations every year and I completely I love the food and the drinks and the lights and everything that is about Christmas so if you guys have a favorite holiday and what you are doing for this holiday please write it down it's so much fun to share ok so my next expression is a white Kris so if you ever hear about a white Christmas it means a Christmas with snow when there is snow on the ground everything is covered in snow there's a song about it which I will not sing because my singing voice will scare most of you away and I don't want that so I will not sing so I'm just going to tell you about it there's a there's a song and many many people want a white Christmas and other people try to stay as far away as possible from my white Christmas um so my question to you is do you like snow this time of year and if you would if you celebrate Christmas do you like a white Christmas and why do you like the cold or maybe do you just want to go somewhere on the beach so please write that down Thanksgiving yeah very nice carols yeah there's so many there's so many different ways to celebrate and they're all fun Thanksgiving is another really really good one because of all the food okay this is something that I think is very useful to know many people see this arrangement of flowers and they don't know what to call it it's on our doors many people put it on on the on their doors around this time of the year it usually has things like like flowers or leaves or stems or things like that but we call it a wreath okay it's a wreath that is the name of it so if you if you guys did not know this is the name of it they're very beautiful I've seen so many wonderful wreaths and they're just make your house very very festive ready for the holidays very typical Oh wonderful lights and Lantern Diwali is so nice it's so great to hear about how what other people do on on different holidays it's really wonderful so thank you guys for mentioning it right so the southern hemisphere doesn't have a white Christmas and I'm curious if they would like a white Christmas or if they're happy without it okay now the holiday spirit the holiday spirit we talked about the holiday spirit when we try to talk about the general feeling of the holidays of gosh you see it in movies you hear it on TV you practically cannot go into a store without listening to music around this time and it's just supposedly it's a good feeling about the holidays it's a warm feeling that you have people tend to be more thankful people think to appreciate hopefully the people in their lives more so we kind of get a little bit more cheery and happy like this little snowman that I have here so for example for me I love I love love love buying Christmas gifts for my family and my friends so shopping for tips Christmas gifts puts me in the holiday spirit it makes me very very happy so if you guys are joining please write down right now we're talking about if you like snow this time of the year and if you like a white Christmas so that's what I would really like to know personally I love snow I was born in the winter so I think that it's the best time of the year like I said and I would love if there was snow however right now it's a little bit of a warm winter where we are so I am I don't think that we are probably going to get snow sadly but I would love if we had snow some people hate snow my mother for example who hates snow so she's very happy that she doesn't have snow okay now we're getting somewhere okay so actually this is something that not a lot of people know even in the u.s. if you ask them Holly about Holly and mistletoe people will think it's the same plant and they will kind of probably refer to the second plant right here they will think that is holly or mistletoe and it's they would think it's interchangeable but it's not these are two different Christmas plants and mistletoe I remember reading became a symbol of Christmas because it's an evergreen plant and stays alive throughout all the seasons so it was a very special plant and Holly it just looks very very festive so mistletoe I want to see if you guys know about the mistletoe it has a special tradition and you can definitely see it a lot in movies they always talk about doing something under the mistletoe do you guys know what you are supposed to do if you are under a plant of mistletoe let's see does anyone know if you if you know please write it down in the comments and I will I will show you okay so mistletoe is actually associated with kissing so if you sit under the if you're under the mistletoe with someone you should kiss them so it's this is a it has a romantic connotation so if you are under mistletoe with somebody you love or you like that's a really good time to let them know or to just kiss them so a good expression you can tell someone is you know met me meet me under the mistletoe so my question to you guys is if you could kiss a famous person under the mistletoe who would it be if you could kiss a famous person under the mistletoe who would it be so think of all the famous people that you know and like if you could kiss them okay just one person just choose one who would it be I think I will choose I think I'll choose my husband West who is not famous but but still I think he would be my choice okay and if he's not available than probably Ryan Gosling okay moving on moving on um-hmm Santa Claus okay so please guys write write down who you yeah I want to see nobody's answering who would you choose so please let us know if you could kiss a famous person under the mistletoe who who would it be okay now let's talk is St. Nicholas and he also goes by the different derivations like Saint Nick or Father Christmas I think in like Dodger was Sinterklaas or something so it was a combination of these different figures in Christian history so it is a bunch of very important historical figures that kind of got put together or some of them were made up and it became one and he is now Santa Claus but yes good good good good good good answer okay okay now before I tell you about eggnog I want to know if you have a special holiday drink in your country so for whatever holiday that you love that you like to celebrate with your family with your friends do you have a special drink and if yes please write it down because it is so much fun to read about it oh yes Baba well yes and that's that reminds me of the French which is poppin' oils so there's so many different and of course that translates to Father Christmas so there's so many different names that I think Santa goes by and it's so funny to look at all of them okay so if you guys have a special drink for the holidays for your favorite holiday in your country please write it down it's I'm very curious to know I wrote here about eggnog there are other special drinks like mulled wine which is warm wine with spices depending where what country you're from but eggnog is a very it's it's I think you find it a lot in Canada and the United States it's this drink made with milk and cream and sugar and eggs and then at the end not always but most of the time they add like brandy or rum or bourbon some kind of alcohol and you drink it I think it's drunk it's drunk like hot and cold yeah but when it's really cold outside you're drinking warm and when it's I don't know when it's not like when I was living in LA everyone was drinking cold eggnog um so I wanted to see if you guys have a special drink or if you've ever tried eggnog okay if you've ever tried it and if you have if you like it or not I haven't tried it for the longest time and I didn't know how to feel about it it's um a lot of people are split because it's very rich so some people think it's a little too rich when I tried it I loved it I loved it so much I love eggnog but I'm curious if you like it if you've ever tried it red wine very nice so we have tea Irish cream yeah so we have there are a lot of different special drinks for different holidays and eggnog is of one that I don't think people drink outside of the Christmas holiday or maybe New Year's in Canada or the US now they put it in lattes cut up like you know they have gingerbread lattes they definitely have eggnog latte is or they make desserts of different kinds okay so my next question because I'm about to talk about gifts okay my next question to you guys is what kind of gift do you like to receive now I mentioned it to you guys that I love giving gifts which is very true but I also like to receive gift so if you're like me you know let us know what kind of gifts would you like to receive and if you are wondering why on earth by putting socks up on the screen and how is this related to gift well let me tell you this is a stocking it's not a sock or a glove or anything like that it's called a stocking and it's an empty sock like a big sock maybe like this and it's hung by the fireplace and it is filled with little gifts and I read a few legends about it on how this this became a Christmas tradition but basically it has something to do with some balls of gold and for little girls or something there is no such a set story there's a few different ones circulating but the idea is that if you were a good boy or girl or an adult of course if you are a good person you get some little gifts in your stocking and if you are not good if you didn't behave you will get a lump of coal okay so nobody ever ever ever ever wants to get a lump of coal in their stocking and it actually doesn't really happen I don't think parents ever really put coals in in their in their kids talking I think it's it's regarded as a little bit cruel so nobody really does it so most people put little gifts in the stockings so let's see if you guys answered why are you hanging stockings on it's by the fireplace it's up it's a very good place to put the stockings so let's see I'm kinda going through your through your answers right now to see what kind of gift you like to receive let's see money money is a great gift you can use it to buy anything you want so very good iPhone 10 yeah that's a very good one so it's pricey but it's also it's very nice yes chocolates yes chocolates are never a that idea you could always get chocolates yeah candy chocolates perfect Lady Godiva yes so a lot of really really good gift ideas you guys Wes I know you're watching so you could take some notes so just just again repeating so chocolate is the main one yeah okay drop the knife hands okay stocking stuffers this is an expression it's an idiom what's not an idiom it's an expression and stocking stuffers or gifts that you put in the stockings but if you don't just refer to them you don't have to put a stocking stuffer in a stocking it's just a small small gift so for example small toys you can put in a stocking chocolate little candies things like that you can always put them in in a stocking so we can say the small toys for example make great stocking stuffers stuffers for your kids or for your nieces and nephews and things like that so please if you have bitcoins yeah if you guys are writing if you guys are watching thank you for watching and please let us know what kind of gifts do you like to receive this is a lot of fun because it gives me ideas for the gifts this year and also I think it gives everyone else ideas like

English books yes Mentos that's right English books are great gifts okay so yes please share the PS4 there's a lot of stuff that I don't know about but yeah those are great great ideas for gifts thank you for sharing that okay now an ornament is a decoration it's these little things that we hang and that we put up in the tree those are decoration those are ornaments we put you they're usually made from glass or wood or metal or ceramics many times they're very nicely decorated very ornamental we call them ornaments so that this is what we call them they're sometimes they're easily breakable but they're very very pretty and we I forgive their history but this is again they're used for the tree mostly traveling to USA yeah that's a good Christmas gift nice you guys have great ideas for gifts I love it traveling chocolates diamonds there we go yes diamonds do fit well in stockings great ideas PS for English books you we should all go shopping together this is great we could all use bitcoins or the money that we receive okay so my next my next topic is Christmas bells and of course you all know what bells are but if you've ever I mean of course a very famous song is jingle bells and there's other songs about Christmas that involve bells and if you're ever wondering like why are Christmas and bells associated it's because the whole concept was associated with the church bells so whenever you had Christmas service on the day of Christmas and the day the Christmas Eve the day before Christmas the bells would would have a special sound and they were just different and also I think in doing Victorian times they were used to play carols they became very fashionable as an instrument so now we see them on wreaths we see them as ornaments we see them kind of everywhere there will be Christmas bells so they are tied together but the reason I'm telling you about Christmas bells is because I want to tell you about this very nice expression - it's called with bells on and it just means very enthusiastically so usually it's an answer so if somebody makes you an invitation to go somewhere you will say that you're going somewhere with bells on like you will very very happily go that you're very excited about this opportunity and you cannot wait to go okay so my example here is if it's a child asks mom will you come to my Christmas play at school and the mom says of course I will be there with bells on so anything that you're very excited to say - to go - you can say with bells on so I'll be there with bells on and that's a good sentence to remember if somebody invites you to their party or if somebody asks you to go under the mistletoe with them you can say yes I'll be there with bells on to show that you're very excited very good Christmas bells yes they're beautiful thank you exactly so that is that is the the bells okay let's see okay my next question for you guys thank you so much for answering all of these it's great that you guys are thoughts on giving me all of these ideas for gifts they're amazing Oh somebody was asking about bells and whistles yes so bells and whistles means with with everything so it means like a very decked out very ornate or just very put together or but just very great or some very big or something that's definitely not simple or or I don't know modest if something has all the bells and whistles like a car it has the newest technology it has everything you want a card to do and maybe some things you didn't think a car could do like oh gosh I haven't had a car in a while but you know like warming seat up and I don't know surround sound and all of that so it's just something that is not simple that is just very extravagant maybe a little bit those are bells and whistles okay my next question for you guys is what activities what activities do you like to do with groups of people okay so for example with your family and friends what are some activities that you like to do with your family what are some things you like to do with your friends do you like to go to the movies do you like to some active play games like board games those are just different things that we do with our families or friends so what activities do you like to do with groups of people sumika the expression with bells on is not only suitable for Christmas you can use it at any time and you can say I'll be there with bells on and people will understand that you are just excited to be there okay so the reason I was telling you about so about about the activities you like to do with people is because we're going to talk about the more the merrier in a second but what does merry mean merry means cheerful now if you could use bells on any time of the year this one I guess you can use any time of the year but you really just use it or you really just hear it around Christmas it just means cheerful happy but I just don't see people say I feel merry like it doesn't really it's not it's not really used outside of the Christmas context not too much so and of course we can say Merry Christmas and it means happy Christmas it's just cheerful and that is the meaning of this word but you have to be careful because it's usually just used around Christmas now the expression the more the merrier means if you the more people you have the better time you will have so that's what that means let's see what do you guys do with your families and friends visiting grandfather their homes yeah very good talking to my friends for a long time yes it's really nice to just very good to shoot the breeze with family just hang out watching TV talking so in that case maybe you can save them more the merrier the more family members you have over the merrier time you will have right so it's it will be it will be great and many times you will just give this answer like somebody asks can I invite my friend to dinner you will just say sure the more the merrier it's an expression that you can use any time of the year and like of any party any event any kind of invitation you could always say the more the merrier it doesn't it it doesn't have to be only used around Christmastime let's see thank you guys again for joining we are talking about things that we are doing things that we like to do activities with our family or friends with groups of people okay now if you read a Christmas carol you might know about a Scrooge if you don't know about him you might have heard the expression don't be a Scrooge it's not something that we want to be Scrooge he was he was a selfish person he hated spending any kind of money so a Scrooge Scrooge because now we use it as a Scrooge is just a person who just hates giving spending they just hate being nice to people so but it mainly has to do with spending money or giving money okay so if somebody is telling you to not be a Scrooge they mean don't don't like try to save all your money and not give him away and those kinds of things so I wanted to ask you what is the opposite of being a Scrooge if being screwed is selfish and somebody who doesn't like spending money and they just like holding all of their money and maybe counting it see how I'm doing like creepily if this is what a being of Scrooge's then what is the opposite of a Scrooge so what let's talk about a synonym yes spendthrift yeah maybe so what is the opposite of a scrooge somebody maybe who is very giving or who likes to give and likes to help and yeah very good extravagant sure what is the opposite of a Scrooge so that is my question first question and second is our us crew um okay um again around the holidays we hear don't be a Scrooge this holiday season and please don't be a Scrooge you know get presents for your family donate there's so many charities we hear this advice a lot yes you are right generous kind those are very very good opposite of being a Scrooge very good okay now something you may have heard is the holiday blues or the post holiday blues and this is a good idiom to know in English when we talk about getting the blues we're talking about being sad so why would somebody feel sad around the holidays what do you guys think why would somebody feel sad about the holidays I just talked about mmm you go outside there's lights everywhere there's music in the stores there are ornaments everyone's giving gifts so why would somebody be sad why do you guys think somebody could be sad this time of the year because it is a thing the holiday blues so if while what you guys are typing that I'm going to tell you about what to beat the holiday blues is and it just means to try to find a way around being sad so find ways to to not be sad and so let's see okay sickness yeah is this a very good reason many people get sick this time of the year so so yes exactly another reason that I found it seems like a lot of people may be oh gosh the weather has a lot to do with it I was just talking to my husband earlier today like sometimes it seems like it's always cloudy so it can get it can mess with your mood the time change a lot of maybe an increased alcohol consumption eating too much eating things that are not very good for you like cookies or a lot of sugar lack of sleep because we go to maybe more events and parties and meet up with family and there's a lot of stuff to do no exercise because of time or because of the weather stress who do I buy this for and what do

I give my grandmother what do I get my mother and what if they're hated and oh my god I have to fly and I have to catch my flight so it can be very very stressful so a lot of people sometimes get very sad so I wanted to see if you guys know other reasons where somebody may be sad right they're living exactly very goodly reasons if you live away from from your loved ones it's a wonderful it's it's it's a really sad situation but it's a great reason why somebody would get the holiday blues or they miss their loved ones or their homesick very very good points you guys are giving wonderful answers thank you so much so that's let's see now I'm talking about another expression this is one of my favorites because it's so cute good things come in small packages good things come in small packages and it just means that something doesn't need to be big in order to be good this reminds me of another English expression which says you know don't judge a book by its cover and again these expressions always mean don't just look at the surface level but something can be good even if it's small and of course it's related to gift-giving so I love including it here so for example I have a little conversation here between a child and his grandma and the child says oh I hate being so short and the grandma says you shouldn't good things come in small packages so it's one of its it's a really good expression they I think you should know when you could always use when it comes to anything really it doesn't just have to do with crisp with Christmas or gifts or things like that it can be with personality it can be with achievements it can be with anything that emphasizes quality over quantity okay so that is the main idea of this of this one oh my gosh okay so I'm just going to review very very quickly because we're nearing the end I'm going to review some of the expressions that we talked about today we talked about Christmas and we talked about the holidays and we shared what are some of our favorite holidays so thank you for that we talked about the white Christmas and if we prefer snow or not we talked about a wreath and what it is and we only see this around Christmastime we talked about how we feel and what is holiday spirit then we talked about who we'd like to kiss under the mistletoe and the difference between Holly and mistletoe there to decorate a decorative plans that we see around these holidays and they're different and we want to kiss someone under the mistletoe so if you guys want to add there we go you would kiss Jimmy Fallon nice thank you thank you for sharing so my question was yes if you if you would like if you could kiss any famous person under the mistletoe who would you choose who would you kiss okay it's a good question I'm very curious and okay so there's Santa Claus sure if you wanted to kiss Santa you can but we talked about him and where he lives and he that he was father Christmas and his name is a combination of so many different figures we talked about the drinks we like to drink like tea in this case it's eggnog and it's a very creamy rich drink with many times with rum or brandy or bourbon added to it about our favorite gifts and what we like to receive in our stockings and stocking stuffers that are tiny tiny gifts ornaments that we put in our tree Christmas bells and to be somewhere with bells on which is you're very happy to be there we talked about merry and when you have a lot of people over and you like a lot of people you say the more the merrier and again this is not just a Christmas expression you can say this at any time and the advice is to not be a Scrooge although some people are Scrooge's but during the holiday season the advice is always not to be a Scrooge we talked about beating the holiday blues so to beat the holiday blues is to find ways to not be sad during the holidays so let's see and then we talked about how good things come in small packages which means that you can have something good that is very very small it doesn't have to be big okay so I found this picture of a squirrel wearing like Christmasy hat and a little scarf and holding a gift and I just thought it was too cute not to share it with you guys so that's the only reason for this picture I just love it I think it's so cute and of course I want to wish you all a very Merry Christmas Happy Holidays thank you so much for learning with us I hope that you get all the gifts that you would like to get if you don't it's okay remember the best gift that we can get is the love from our family and friends and the loved ones so at least that's what I believe although I still want the gifts but anyway we're moving on so thank you guys Merry Christmas and Happy Holidays thank you for watching our video if you thought it was fun or interesting or if you loved Christmas please like please share this lesson write questions in the comments even if I haven't seen them we'll answer them later and join our social media classes we have a lot of fun putting questions together for you guys so please join thank you so so much again and I hope you have a wonderful holidays and have a good weekend have a good Saturday thank you so much for joining us

Important Phrasal Verbs for When You Get Sick

I want to teach you some phrasal verbs that you need to know if you get sick that's coming up hey everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I have a very important lesson for you because I think just about all of us we like to travel and if you are traveling in another country it's a there's a pretty good chance you may be speaking English and if you get sick and you go to the doctor then you you will need to explain to them in English what is happening so I'm going to teach you some common phrasal verbs that you can use if you are talking to a doctor a friend a family member and you're trying to explain to them how you feel if you're sick or maybe you think that you're getting sick so the first phrasal verb that I have for you is a three word phrasal verb and it is come down with and you'd say that you are coming down with something and this means that you are starting to become ill usually with a particular disease that is not too serious so overwhelmingly I think you would use this phrasal verb when perhaps talking about a cold and you'd say that I think I'm starting to come down with a cold or maybe you you feel really sick and you go to the doctor and you say I think I think I came down with the flu or maybe you just don't know why you were sick or you don't know what you have and you could say well I I'm just I'm coming down with something I don't know what it is but I'm going to go to the doctor and I'm going to tell them look I think I'm coming down with something I need your help so to come down with means that you are starting to get ill and again it's usually something that is not too serious to come down with coming down with a cold yeah Peters come down with something thinks they've caught it from the rats then we have the phrasal verb burn-up and when you're talking about sickness burn-up means that you are just you you're very hot and typically this is because you have a fever so perhaps somebody comes to you and they say wow you know I'm you know I think I might have a fever this is when you might you could put your hand on their forehead and feel it and if they if it feels very hot you would tell them you'd say well you're you're burning up you definitely have a fever because you're burning up you're burning up let's stick with the preposition up right now and this next phrasal verb I I think is very common it's something that happens to all of us and I don't think anybody likes it and that is to throw up and when someone throws up it just means that they vomit so if you go to the doctor and you want to tell them that you are sick and that you vomited you could just say yeah you know last night I threw up I don't know what's wrong I I definitely think I'm coming down with something but if you throw up then then you just vomit another phrasal verb that is somewhat related but it is definitely different and that is cough up and when you cough something up it's talking about well liquid that maybe in your lungs and and you're just coughing and you might cough something up so wait if you have a severe cold I think it's quite possible that you would cough some of that stuff up in your lungs and it's not a very pleasant feeling and then you'd want to spit it out if you are coughing up something like mucus if you are coughing up something like blood then that may be very serious and you would definitely want to go to the doctor and tell them you know I'm coughing up blood what what do you think the problem is cough up I think I'm going to call up a furball No you should quit that's bad for you you hear what I just said I saw you cuff of one another phrasal verb with up is puff and this just means that that you're describing something that is starting to swell or enlarge and you could say that it is puffing up maybe if you are like me and you get bad allergies then you might maybe your cheeks would start to puff up or your your eyes could puff up a little bit and they can start to swell and this phrasal verb I really do think if you have allergies and you have a reaction to something there is a possibility that something will start to puff up so if you want to describe it and say that something is swelling it is enlarging you can say that it's puffing up my old face could pop up ankles will swirl eyes will puff up I look just like the Pillsbury Doughboy then we have another phrasal four herp using the preposition up and that is flare up and if you say that something flares up or it is flaring up then you're talking about a condition that has returned and usually if somebody has a condition it may go away over time but then it returns it comes back and you could then say well it's starting to flare up and especially if it's noticeable if you can see this and maybe you're talking about your skin you could say well you know something happens I have this condition and it's starting to flare up again and perhaps you need to go to the doctor and get some medication because your your condition it's starting to flare up I mean I think my symptoms are flaring up yeah but most of the time it won't even be an issue it only really flares up during periods of great stress would you rather me say hey guys my irritable bowel syndrome is flaring up the next phrasal verb is break out and this just means to start suddenly and often I think again you probably would be furring - something that that's going on with your skin that you can actually see but maybe you don't know what it is and you would go to the doctor and just tell them like look i i'm just i just started to break out i don't know what's going on i I don't know how to describe it I don't know what it is it happens suddenly I just started breaking out and perhaps it could be an allergic reaction to something maybe maybe it was something you ate and then suddenly you just started breaking up next is actually well this this is a good frizzle verb when you think about sickness and and that is fight off because this is something that we all want to do we want to fight off a cold because we want to stay healthy so to fight something off just means that you are trying to resist this this disease this illness and you are fighting it off maybe you are eating really healthy you're getting a lot of vitamin C and because of that you can say well I'm just I'm trying to fight trying to fight something off so I think most of the time people would use this phrasal verb if they are starting to feel a little sick and that's when people kind of spring into action and then they try to fight off the illness but why do you need the meds if you're not sick to fight off the cold symptoms that my healthy body is exhibiting I can fight off whatever stupid illness this pizza may or may not have had all right I'm in perfect control of my body we usual brain to fight off rabies then we have get over which well this one - this is a another positive phrasal verb when you think about sickness because when you get over something it means that you have recovered from this illness or disease and you got over it so when you get over something then you you are starting to feel healthy again because you have recovered from this sickness and I think it's quite common to use this when talking about well a cold and you could say I was starting to come down with a cold but I was really trying to fight it off and I got a little sick but because I was fighting it off over it really quickly and that is good news if you get over a cold or any illness for that matter Sheldon you don't get over the flu in half an hour I'm just getting over a cold I finally got over my seasickness next is the phrasal verb pass out and if somebody passes out then it just means that they lose consciousness and they're well there are many reasons why a person might pass out but it could happen if you are severely sick and you are just you have a really bad fever your your head is burning up you can't fight it off any longer and you're so tired and you might just pass out and you become unconscious so to pass out is to become unconscious I'm get sick and God's I'd pass out I'm fine just pass out sometimes did you not listen to my messages I told you I got locked in a storage room I know I got sick and passed out then if we want to say the opposite of pass out we can use well one of three phrasal verbs come to come around or come round and all of them they mean the same thing it just means to regain consciousness so if you are really sick you're burning up and then you pass out a little later on you you might come to and regain consciousness and hopefully whatever sickness you have you will get over it quickly and as always I will just try to continue using these phrasal verbs again and again because I think that will just help you better understand their meaning then we have put on and this just means to receive some medical treatment but I think there is more of a specific use because you would talk about it when you go to the doctor and they tell you they say ok you this is what you need to take and then later on you might tell somebody else well the doctor put me on this medication the doctor put me on whatever it is they tell you that you need to take so they would put you on some medication and in that case they are giving you medical treatment to put on but my doctor put me right on a new round of chemo which is why I have been seen tired lately doctors put me on medication to stop the seizures did they put you on medication better medical marijuana it's genius now I know sickness it is a very serious topic but I I want to end it on a lighter note so I could say that I hope that all of you learn some new phrasal verbs and that they may help you now or in the future if you have to go to the doctor and try to explain what's going on if you enjoyed this lesson and you did learn something new please hit that like button and as always thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time

Important Phrasal Verbs for Work and School

in today's lesson I am going to be teaching you different phrasal verbs now phrasal verbs are are challenging for a couple of different reasons first it's usually that preposition that follows the verb that can confuse people and trip them up from time to time they're also challenging because phrasal verbs can have more than one meaning but what I want to do we found that the best way to teach phrasal verbs is to learn phrasal verbs related to a topic so in today's lesson I'm going to teach you phrasal verbs that are related to work or school so I'm going to tell you the phrasal verb I'll give you the meaning as well as some example sentences and then I'll show you some video clips so that you can see how these phrasal verbs are used in context are you ready the first phrasal verb that I want to talk to you about that is related to work or school is hand in and when you hand something in it just means that you are or giving something to a person of authority another phrasal verb that has the same same meaning is turn in you can hand in a paper or you can turn in a paper or if we're talking about work maybe you have a a really important assignment that you have to do and you're going to hand in the assignment to your boss or supervisor or you could turn it into them as well these reports you handed in it's almost as if you have no business training at all anyone failing to turn in any homework assignment will be penalized one point off their final grade I would love to do that thank you so much except I've already turned in my report the next phrasal verb is hand out and when you hand something out you you are giving it to different people in a group so for example maybe a teacher will hand out the homework or maybe if you're in a meeting at work the person conducting the meeting will hand out the report so that everybody can follow along you are handing something out now you can hand in something you can also hand out something but if you're talking about giving something to different people in a group we would only use hand out you hand something out they should hand out candy at Thanksgiving I am handing out pieces of paper on which you will draw one human butt the next phrasal verb is look through and when you look through something that you are just looking at a a paper a document a report you're looking at it quickly mostly to find information that you need to look through something so I could ask a friend or a colleague if I want them to check an email or a report to see if they can find any mistakes I'd say hey you know can you look through this and tell me if you find any mistakes can you look through this and and tell me if I need to change anything look through look through the um was looking through the Panama papers I looked for your stupid book and then we have a phrasal verb with with a pretty similar meaning and that is look over and when you look something over you are just examining it and you're usually doing this quickly and often you might hear it with work and you might look over someone's work you're kind of reading the document or report in its entirety you are looking it over perhaps to familiarize yourself you need to understand this information but you don't have a lot of time so you're just you're going to look it over one difference I think between look through and look over is when you look through something you're really talking about reading something whereas look over it could be talking about reading something it could be talking about something that you've created something that you've made and you just want to examine it so that is one difference between those two phrasal verbs I was just looking over the paperwork I found a little hiccup listen do you get a chance to look over that contract for me listen Marty needs me to look over this work then we have lay off and to lay someone off because you're talking about a person is to end someone's employment usually because there's just not enough work for them to do you lay people off you're not going to lay off stuff I'll have to lay off about 100 people you don't understand it laid me off another great work phrasal verb is to take on and when I think about this to to take on means to to get more work or more responsibility and I think it's often used with that word responsibility people take on more responsibility so whether you're talking about school or work if you are going to perhaps help out your teacher or your boss or supervisor and say yes yes I can do more I can take on more responsibility take on just us to talk about me taking on more creative assignments I can't take on any more social issues right now Ezra is taking on these big responsibilities then we have knockoff now this phrasal verb I'll go ahead and tell you it's a bit more informal it's more casual and you you may not hear it as often so to relevant to school as well and that is burn out and I think this is a phrasal verb that that you might hear more often people burn out and when you burn out it just means that you are unable to continue working because you you have just work too much you are completely exhausted you can't continue you can't do more and you could tell someone you know I I'm I just burned out I couldn't work anymore I burned out I couldn't study anymore I burned out I hope that you are not working too hard and get burned out higher patient load parents got divorced I'm really burned out sooner or later you want to know your problem America you work too hard you get burned down now let's go over a few phrasal verbs that that have the word work in it and the first one that I have for you is work on and when you work on something it just means that you are spending time creating or improving something so for example at school you might work on an essay you need to finish the essay so you're going to spend some time working on it or maybe at work you're going to work on a project you're working with a group of people and you guys are working on it because you need to improve it or maybe it's something you need to create to work on something just to point out real quickly uh some of these phrasal verbs can be used in other contexts if you're talking about improving something for example in sports somebody might say you know I really need to work on my game I need to improve my skills at this sport so again it's great to learn the meaning related to a specific category that it's commonly used in but then you can also use it in other situations as well your mother thinks I'm working on the car why don't you have everybody work on their expense reports more homework we're just working on this map then we have work out to work something out this phrasal verb has several different meanings that that are relevant to work or school so so I'm going to go over all of them with you the first meaning is is to solve a problem and you could say you know we need to work this out we need to solve this problem and find a resolution to work something out it can also mean to to be successful or or to have a particular end so for example you might hear the phrase well if things don't work out if things don't end the way we want them to if things don't work out then we have to do something else or maybe somebody might tell you that something was successful and they'd be like you know in the end everything worked out the last few weeks at work have been very stressful I've been working on a major project but in the end everything worked out everything will work out for us so I missed the old place but I'll tell you what it's good to be back yeah it all worked out in the end everything's back to normal the next meaning would be to to deal with a problem but but to agree on something so you you need to agree on the details you need to agree on some kind of an arrangement and people might use it like well let's we need to work out the details before we proceed we really need to work out the details or maybe at your job you have to work on a project work on with some some colleagues that maybe you know they're not nice people you're not friends with them but you need to work out your differences in order to proceed you need to come to some sort of agreement and solve the problem work out your differences in order to be successful finally this phrasal verb has another meaning which which can be related to to work I suppose and that just means to add up to a certain amount so maybe as far as work goes you're comparing two different services and you're thinking okay this is how much this cost this is how much this costs and in the end this one works out to be more expensive so we're gonna go with the other one I think it's time that we work out our differences yeah the next work phrasal verb is to work through and this just means to deal with a problem an issue a challenge by thinking about it or by talking about it so if there is a problem that you're presented with and you might say okay we we need to work this through we need to to work this through and think about this problem so that we can solve it it's a little similar to work out in the sense of solving a problem and you work out your differences you could also work through your differences and in that case it has the same meaning but work through is something that you can do on your own you can work through a problem on your own and try to solve it and work through it we can either talk about our issues or work through our problems you see Bonnie helped me work through my issues now this phrasal verb also has another meaning which would just be to to continue working you were just working continuously from this time till until you finish or well you just have to work you have so much of it and you would say you know I just had to work through the evening or maybe you had to work through the weekend and you had to keep working because you had so much work and hopefully you won't get burned out thanks for working through lunch so when I have to work through a weekend she switches with me then we have fall off and when you call something off you are you're deciding that hey this is n't going to happen I am going to put a stop to this or maybe there is some problem or some issue with the timing and and something has to be canceled for example a meeting that is something that that might be called off because people can't attend or or just the timing doesn't work out and they might say yeah think slack off they don't really work hard and even though it's not a good thing I think in all honesty we've all we've all slacked off from time to time it's happened there are times when we haven't wanted to work very hard and and maybe we slack off maybe I've been slacking off a little bit but Tessa took two weeks off when Jon Snow died in Game of Thrones you can't afford to be late again I know see out here has been giving Wilhelm the impression that I've been slacking off next we have a three-word phrasal verb and that is fill in for and when you fill in for someone you are just taking their place and taking on their responsibilities while this person is away you are filling in for them so as far as school goes a teacher might fill in for another teacher and they may teach the class or work you may fill in for your colleague and help out on this project and fill in for this person and because they're away on vacation or you know hopefully you don't have to fill in for them because they got laid off or maybe they got burned out and and you really you'd have to fill in for them if that's the case either way I think you'll be able to work through it even if you have to work through the weekend because I believe in you and in the end things will work out and I'm just going to keep using these phrasal verbs again and again and again because that's the best way for you to remember them thanks for filling in for Kirsten shows up soon this is Joe Corelli filling in for Catherine Duke I'm filling for him as food Chelsea reporter next we have run by and that is just to tell someone your ideas so that they can give you their opinion you run something by someone so perhaps your teacher might say hey before you turn this in I want you to run it by one of the other students so they can look it over and see if they find any mistakes or if there's anything you want to change or maybe your boss might say hey before you submit the report run it by one of your colleagues run it by them first get their opinion and then you can turn it into me I will go craft an apology run it by me first let me run this by it because you're sharp guy then we have Branch out and and this is a great phrasal verb especially related to work because it's talking about doing something that that is related to something you've done in the past but then doing things new or different or or heading in a different direction so for example I mentioned this phrasal verb at the beginning I'm trying to teach you these phrasal verbs related to school and related to work but you can use them in other situations and I hope that after you learn the meaning you can Branch out and use them in a different way and take this in a different direction so as far as work goes companies might have some product or or some service but they may want to go in another Direction they may want to Branch out and try something new Branch out you seem to want to Branch out what's stopping you you know I'm just at a place where I want to Branch out and explore new opportunities the next phrasal verb is sort out and this phrasal verb has two meanings the first one is to do whatever it is necessary to solve a problem disagreement or or some situation we need to sort things out in this case it has the same meaning as work out to solve a problem we have to work out our differences we have to sort out our differences we have to solve this problem the phrasal verb also means to to organize things just to become more organized and this I I'm I'm guilty of this if I have a desk sometimes it gets pretty chaotic so I have to sort things out from time to time I need to sort out my desk and just organize things oh it's a fight well with that sorted out I'm happy to answer your question Bernadette so there you have it we we've covered quite a few different phrasal verbs today hopefully some of them you are already familiar with and it was a bit of review for you and I hope you learned some new phrasal verbs as well that's it for today but please feel free to look over these phrasal verbs one more time and keep reviewing them and examine them closely and that's just going to help you work on building your vocabulary and that was a needless emphasis but I just want to tell you that's how common these phrasal verbs are we use them all the time but I don't want you to get burned out don't get burned out keep working hard but don't get burnt out all right I'll see you next

Important Travel Idioms So You Don't Miss the Boat

- Today we're talking about travel idioms. That's coming up. Today's lesson's particularly useful and fun because it involves traveling, and if you like traveling, I think you're going to really enjoy these idioms. Now a lot of these idioms have to do with traveling. They're related to traveling, or things that are connected to traveling, but you can use them in everyday situations, which makes it even better. In today's lesson I'm going to give you some new idioms. I will explain to you what they mean and how they're used, and I'll give you an example sentence. So stick around, and let's learn something new. Our first idiom is bad news travels fast.

And sadly, this is not a great idiom because it has kind of a bad connotation. We are talking about bad news, and it really means what it sounds like, that bad news circulates quickly. - I guess bad news travels fast. - Bad news travels fast with us demons. We all like a good laugh. - So when something bad happens, a lot of people hear about it very, very quickly, and that is when we use this idiom, bad news travels fast. When Pam failed art school, everyone knew about it the next day. I guess bad news travels fast.

Our next idiom is mile a minute, or a mile a minute. You could hear it both ways. This idiom means that something is happening at a very rapid pace, or just very, very quickly. I hear this idiom a lot with talking or thinking, so when we're talking about somebody doing something a mile a minute, it has to do usually like, oh your mind is going a mile a minute, or she's talking or he's talking a mile a minute. - My mind was racing a mile a minute. - These are very, very common situations where you will find that idiom. When I found out I got accepted into UCLA, my mind was going a mile a minute.

The next idiom is off the beaten track, and this refers to a little-known location or a place that not a lot of people know about. It's off the beaten track. The beaten track refers to a pathway that people have made by walking on it consistently, so if something is off the beaten track, it means that it is away. It's not something that a lot of people know about, or it's not a place that a lot of people go to. My favorite restaurant is a tiny Indian place down the street. It's really off the beaten track.

Our next travel idiom is hit the road, and this one just means to set out on a journey, so basically to begin your journey or your trip, to hit the road. It's 10:00 a.m., we're all packed, let's hit the road. The next travel idiom is jump on the bandwagon. And if you've never heard this idiom before, you might be a little confused. What could this mean? Jump, bandwagon? What is going on? And it means to join an activity that has become popular. So it's like you're also joining with everyone else. - No I'm not. I'm hopping on the bandwagon. - You could jump on the bandwagon when you're you know joining a new fashion trend, or maybe if you're buying the newest phone, or shoes, or whatever it is, you can always say you're jumping on the bandwagon.

After the keto diet became popular, many jumped on the bandwagon. I personally don't like the keto diet because you don't get to eat sweets. What kind of life is that? The next idiom is in the same boat. And don't worry if you don't like the sea or being in a boat, this has nothing to do with that. It means to be in the same circumstances or situation as others. And many times I feel like when we're talking about being in the same boat, we're talking about kind of like a, kind of a difficult situation. So that's the context that it's usually used in. So you're talking, oh I'm in the same boat as you.

It kinda has to do with a difficult circumstance. I'm so tired, I only slept two hours last night. I'm in the same boat. I stayed up all night to study for the physics exam. Our next idiom is to travel light. And this actually has a similar meaning to what it sounds like because when you travel light, you travel without a lot of luggage. It's light, it's not heavy. Not the light that you get from the sun, but the light when you lift something it's not heavy. So you travel light, you travel without carrying a lot of heavy stuff. As much as I like to travel light, I always end up with a suitcase that's too full.

The next idiom is missed the boat. I know, another boat idiom, but again, it has nothing to do with a boat, or sea, or anything like that. To miss the boat means to miss an opportunity. And it also many times has the implication of that maybe you might not get another one like this one. - You're just a little bit worried that you may have missed the boat. - I call you miss because you seem to have missed the boat completely on this one. - So if you miss the boat on something, or you miss the boat, it just means you missed it, it's gone, your opportunity is bye-bye. He missed the boat when he didn't apply for the job in time.

The next idiom is train of thought and the train of thought refers to the sequence of thoughts in your mind, especially if it's something that's long or complicated. - Sorry, I lost my train of thought. Isn't he dreamy? (guitar thrums) - [Man] You're talking to one of the three men in the western hemisphere following that train of thought. (audience laughs) - Now many times when we talk about a train of thought, we talk about it being interrupted. And it has to do with losing your train of thought, so when you lose it, it's usually because you were interrupted by someone or something. I completely lost my train of thought when the doorbell rang.

The next idiom is right up my alley, or right up your alley, or right up someone's alley. And we use this idiom to describe something that is exactly how we want it or that is exactly the way we like it, or that's something that we're passionate about. So it's a good idiom, because if something is right up your alley, it means that it aligns with your interests and your passions and something that you really, really enjoy. So for me, anything that has to do with like cats, or chocolate, that would be right up my alley. The cat cafe has Nutella cappuccinos and kittens. That's right up my alley. Okay, well now that you've heard the idioms, it is time to practice them.

So I have some questions for you that I want answered in the comments. So tell me, what's something that's right up your alley? Or, have you ever missed the boat on something? Something big, I hope not. Or do you have a favorite place that's off the beaten track? I'd love to know. Make sure that when you answer these questions, answer in full sentences, and I'd love to read your answers. As you know, idioms are an amazing way to improve your English fluency, and if you're serious about it, check out our secret lesson. The link is in the description. And if you enjoyed this lesson, please like it and share it with all of your friends.

Thanks for watching, and I'll see you next time. Bye. Bye. Bye. Okay, I'm done.

LESSON 391 OF 749

Impressive B2 Vocab That Makes You Stand Out

Let's learn some B2 vocabulary to help you supercharge your fluency. And now let's turn our attention to some useful B2 adverbs like simultaneously. This refers to something that is happening or being done at exactly the same time. It really has the same meaning as the phrase at the same time. Perhaps it's a little more formal, maybe even more precise, if you say something is happening simultaneously.

And this little bastard hacks into anything that's on the digital network. That means every cell phone, satellite, ATM machine, and computer.

Simultaneously. Then there's the adverb preferably. This is used to indicate that one choice or way of doing something is more desired or liked than others. And often you're going to use this at the beginning of a phrase and then add a condition. And there are some common prepositions that follow this adverb. Maybe you uh want to do something preferably in some location or you're asked to submit something preferably by some deadline or maybe you want something preferably with certain features. You're one of those millennials that thinks they can get whatever they want whenever they want. Preferably with free shipping. All I want is to clear this furniture. Preferably in silence. Then there's eagerly. This means that you are doing something with a lot of excitement, interest, and enthusiasm because you just want you want this thing to happen. And there are some common adverb verb collocations like to eagerly await or to eagerly anticipate or maybe even to eagerly accept something.

All his adoring subjects equally awaiting his return. Willingly. I like this adverb. It means that you are doing something because you want to do it and you're happy to do it and not forced to do it.

You see, master, every man has a price he willingly accept.

*He lives right here in Greendale. Willingly? Why? Next is patiently. It is an incredibly important word. It means you are able to wait for a long time and accept difficulties without getting angry or upset. And a very common collocation with this adverb is to wait patiently.

Day after day she hung from her web and waited patiently for an idea to come to her. And so, after waiting patiently to be relevant again, our heroic narrator steps back into his leading role.

These are incredibly useful words. Try to listen for them. Preferably, try to actively use them. They're really going to help you get your point across as well as sound more natural.

Improve Your Listening Skills to Effectively Learn English | Live-Lesson

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is wes and this is interactive english the channel that is all about just trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today we're going to work on your listening because when you're learning a language listening is very important so we're going to practice our listening skills and i'm going to have you listen to a couple of different sentences a couple of stories and we're going to use that to help you improve just your overall language skills which is why i titled listen and learn but i don't know why i chose uh just like a stream there i think of nature you can listen to the sounds of the water and i i think it's a bit relaxing and i think when you're listening you want to you want to be relaxed you want to be able to concentrate on what you hear the other person saying so that you can identify different things which is what we're going to talk about in this lesson we're going to work on identifying well learning new vocabulary and just when you hear a word that you don't know and trying to put that word in context and understand the meaning of that word we're also going to practice just identifying the main idea making sure you comprehend most of the most of what you hear we're going to talk about key details as well as making inferences and if you don't know what uh inferences are it's when you're using the information that you know in order to infer other information for example if i say that my wife just walked in and she's carrying an umbrella that's wet then you when you hear that an umbrella that's wet you can infer that it's probably raining outside so when you listen to information you want to be able to infer other information which it just goes back to your overall comprehension so before we start i just want to give some shout outs uh hello saw some members with me lolly good to see you rod vip um glad glad that you guys are here uh monica steve alyssa uh yamila alana salam great heba sees so many familiar names i love it so let's start we're going to start with something that is a little easier and then it'll get more difficult actually it'll get much more difficult which uh i i just hope that you are ready to listen so if you're with me right now in the chat i'd encourage you to try and write you listen to uh what i tell you try to write your answers in the chat even if you're watching this later just listen try to write your answers in the comment participate in the lesson that that's what interactive english is all about so let's start with um let's start with trying to if you have if you encounter a new vocabulary word and you want to be able to put that word in context so i'm just going to give you um a simple sentence and i want you to listen to it and then i want you to tell me what this word means okay so for example i want you to listen uh right now okay the teacher chided me for texting in class that is the sentence the teacher chided me for texting in class and i want you to tell me what does it mean to chide to chide someone so the sentence that i gave you and maybe you know this word um maybe you don't and this is what this is when listening helps that you can think about this word and hopefully the more you listen to it and read it and you encounter this word you'll be able to use it and make it part of your uh vocabulary the teacher chided me for texting in class all right excellent so yes uh sarah lali great so here is the sentence and i'll give you the meaning so the teacher chided me for texting in class to chide someone it means to scold or reprimand angrily so in this case uh if you are i know some people some of you out there are teachers um we love hearing from other uh teachers other english teachers if someone if a student is texting in class it doesn't make me feel good it probably doesn't make most teachers feel good and you might say something to that student and tell them to put their phone away so in this case if you chide someone they probably did something wrong and you're speaking a little angrily to them so now that you know that if if you are chiding someone that you are talking them to them in a way that you are a little angry you're upset with this person and you're like no no don't do that don't do that now that you know the meaning of that word let's use it and we'll make an inference okay so i'm going to give you another sentence and i i'll well let me tell you the sentence and then i'll tell you what i want you to do so again just listen to what i'm going to say say mom chided us for playing baseball inside the house mom chided us for playing baseball inside the house my question to you is well why why would why might she do that why might the mother chide the children for playing baseball inside the house and in this case i'm asking you to to

of great answers um the house is small maybe you break some glass playing these games are not inside so here is the sentence i said mom chided us for playing baseball inside the house i told you there are many different there are many things that you can infer about this for me when i would think about this i would think well something could break maybe a window or perhaps maybe the maybe they did break a window and that is why they are being chided or perhaps it happened in the past but uh playing baseball inside the house yes something could definitely break so now i those are really that's kind of just like a warm-up that i wanted to give you that you hear me say these simple sentences and just you're maybe trying to learn a new word and try to figure out the meaning by putting it in context and then we use that word to make an inference about some of the other information that that you hear so now we're going to get into we're going to go from easy to definitely more difficult what i'm going to do now is i am going to give you a story i'm going to tell you a story and i just want you to listen to it just relax and just think about what i'm saying and it may help to put a picture in your mind if you are if you're able to put a picture in your mind that does help follow along with the story especially when you need to recall the information because we're gonna we're i'm gonna read this to you and then we're gonna practice uh key details the main idea um new vocabulary we're gonna do a little bit of everything so this is a longer story i'm gonna read it

i'll read it twice and then i have five questions for you about this story all right so again if you uh are just joining us right now we are practicing uh our listening skills and i'm gonna you're gonna listen to me tell you a story and then i'm gonna i'm gonna ask you some questions about what you heard so this is really just practicing seeing how much information you remember how much you understood you comprehended and then how much you can retain so let's go over here and again uh i'll read it to you i just want you to listen carefully okay so here is the the story my friend dave traveled to the big apple for the weekend to attend his friend's bachelor party he promised that he would write me a postcard i never got one i saw a day five days after he returned from his trip i noticed his hand was in a cast when i asked what happened he said he fell down the day before he flew out and he hadn't been able to use his hand jokingly i asked about the postcard he told me that he wrote one but it must have gotten lost in the mail i suspected that dave was not telling the truth after all he is a southpaw okay all right that was uh a lot of information that i just threw at you um i don't think the story may be too difficult to follow along but i will read it one more time and then we're gonna go through and uh um i will ask you five questions about this story right here are you ready all right listen carefully i'll read it again my friend dave traveled to the big apple for the weekend to attend his friend's bachelor party he promised that he would write me a postcard i never got one i saw dave five days after he returned from his trip i noticed his hand was in a cast when i asked what happened he said he fell down the day before he flew out and he hadn't been able to use his hand jokingly i asked about the postcard he told me he wrote one but it must have gotten lost in the mail i suspected that dave was not telling the truth after all he is a southpaw okay so let's start out um with uh maybe as more of a simple question that i i hope that you would be able to get so the first question that i have for you and again i'm i'm not going to show you the question just listen to it and see if you can an answer all right so the first question i have from you for you is what city did dave visit so this was at the very start of the story um i talked about my my friend dave uh was going on this trip and what city did dave visit and this is definitely a little more challenging because not only i did not say the specific name of the city it's more of a nickname and you really have to know that nickname and then you can identify the city so yes i i said the big apple you're right the big apple is another name it's a nickname for new york city so this is where my friend dave traveled all right what city did dave visit dave went to the big apple which is new york city so really technically you would say that the answer is new york city okay the next question that i have for you is what event may dave attend in the future so we're talking again about uh my friend dave i gave you some information about this situation he's in new york city the big apple based on what you know what you listen to what event may he go to in the future dave may go to this it's it's a big event that somebody would have and it's going to happen in the future all right he didn't do it now i gave you the information that you could infer okay this is probably what he's going to do all right so this is again this is a good example because i think many of you uh are saying bachelor party bachelor party is what i want you to use to infer what event he will go to in the future so we're talking about the future from now um dave's come back from the bachelor party if somebody goes to a bachelor party if you know what that is what event might they go to in the future uh yes exactly uh fulia rahel i think now that uh hopefully now that i explained that a little bit more it makes sense i told you he was in new york for a bachelor party so if that's the situation in the future dave is likely to go to his friend's wedding so if you don't in this case you need to know what a bachelor party is and if you don't know what a bachelor party is um and i don't know if it's in um if all countries have it but in like the united states before someone gets married um the bride or the groom maybe the groom would have a bachelor party and his close friends will get together and they go have this party maybe in another place and perhaps the wife might have a bachelorette party so because of that you know that it's a bachelor party in the future dave will likely go to his friend's wedding all right so we know he's in new york he's at a bachelor party um and dave was supposed to do something uh while he was there now i told you that dave hurt his hand so this is definitely more detail when dave and i met so i'm telling you this story about dave and i when dave and i met after his trip how many days had it been since he hurt his hand all right how many days had it been so dave hurt his hand and then some of these things happen i saw dave when he got back from his trip how many days had it been since he hurt his hand so in this case you really need to think about uh there was some specific information that i gave you but then you need to think about the situation like the the bachelor party all right i'll tell you right now five five is not the answer all right remember i'm saying how many days had it been since he hurt his hand when he first hurt his hand and then how many days is it so the correct answer would be i'd say about seven or eight okay and the reason why i say that is because remember in the story we're talking about he said he hurt his hand the day before leaving for a weekend bachelor trip all right um so for example wait a second i want to make sure all right so i said that he he's gone for the weekend which is two days and i said i saw dave five days after he got back so he returned from the trip and then five days passed and then that's when i saw him so you could say five plus two seven works if you want to count the same day that he hurt his hand then you could say eight so i'd say seven or eight days would be the correct answer and this was difficult because you had to remember the five days after he got back it's a weekend bachelor trip bachelor party our trip so that's two days and then he hurt his hand the day before so that was definitely um a little more difficult all right the next question um i apologize if some of these are a little difficult but again this is this is good practice all right now my next question very simple straightforward dave was going to send me a postcard he didn't send it all right was i angry about the postcard was i angry about that that i didn't get a postcard and which word did you hear that tells you the answer to this all right so first like do you think was was i angry that my friend dave did not send me a postcard on his trip to new york city the big apple and what word did you hear that tells you either yes or no all right and this is when i want you to i'm trying to think if you can identify the specific word that you um that you heard and maybe again this is a lot to take in but oh okay so most of you know that yes no the answer is no i was not angry about this um uh jennifer it was a very close guess excellent um shaya yes the key word that i want you to focus on was that i don't know if you remember specifically the sentence said jokingly i asked about the postcard so jokingly was the word it's an adverb it means you're kind of you're just joking around i'm teasing like hey why didn't you send me my postcard um that was the word that kind of tells you that i was not upset it's it's not serious i was not angry about that i didn't get a postcard jokingly was the key word all right and then the last one which i think is certainly going to be maybe a little more challenging and i didn't say this which hand did dave injure and how do you know so i talk about dave's dave's hand well i didn't say which hand was in a cast a cast if you didn't if you don't know what a cast is if you perhaps hurt your arm and you break it and they put that uh mold around your arm so you can't move it in this case if it's a hand maybe if somebody maybe they break their wrist maybe they would the doctor would put a cast around your hand and you just can't move it um and that's what a cast is so which which hand which handed did dave break and how do you know this how do you know that it was either the left or the right hand and maybe you're just taking a guess you have a 50 50 chance and i see some people putting left hand some people putting right hand but but wait if why why are you coming up with these answers are you just guessing that that's okay if you are um the answer that the key word is the word southpaw and if you don't know what a southpaw is the what it means originally was talking about somebody who boxes left-handed or in baseball somebody who throws left-handed but you could use it as an informal term to talk about somebody who just does something left-handed so i said that uh i knew dave was lying or i suspected he was lying um after all he is a southpaw so dave is left-handed all right dave if dave hurt his left hand and his his hands in a cast which means he can't write he's not able to write a postcard which is why i said i suspected that he is lying because he's a southpaw he's not able to write he broke his left hand all right yes so southpaw is an informal word that means um that just somebody's left-handed and in case you didn't know something fun fact about me is that i people tend to be more formal they use more advanced vocabulary and because of that i think it makes listening more of a challenge so this i'm gonna read this speech and then i have five more questions for you okay um and this is going to be difficult i'll just go ahead and tell you that right now uh but listen carefully and then we'll talk about these questions again i will read it twice so right now i just want you to take a deep breath relax and listen to this speech okay ready here we go i am not included within the pale of this glorious anniversary your high independence only reveals the immeasurable distance between us the blessings in which you this day rejoice are not enjoyed in common the rich inheritance of justice liberty prosperity and independence bequeathed by your fathers is shared by you not by me the sunlight that brought life and healing to you has brought stripes and death to me this fourth of july is yours not mine you may rejoice i must mourn to drag a man in fetters into the grand illuminated temple of liberty and call upon him to joy join you in joyous anthems were inhumane inhuman mockery and sacrilegious irony do you mean citizens to mock me by asking me to speak today all right so again that is a speech it was from uh it was from a long time ago and i will read it again and just try to listen and if it is very difficult try to try to get the main idea don't think that you need to try and listen to all every single word and catch all of the details try to get the main idea i'm going to read it one more time this is a speech and later on i'll tell you more about this speech and where it came from so it says i'm not included within this within the pale of this glorious anniversary your high independence only reveals the immeasurable distance between us the blessings in which you this day rejoice are not enjoyed in common the rich inheritance of justice liberty prosperity and independence bequeathed by your fathers is shared by you not by me the sunlight that brought life and healing to you has brought stripes and death to me this fourth of july is yours not mine you may rejoice i must mourn to drag a man in fetters into the grand illuminated temple of liberty and call upon him to join in this in the joyous anthems where inhuman mockery and sacrilegious irony do you mean citizens to mock me by asking me to speak today so uh like i said this is definitely this is definitely challenging all right the first question that i have for you is hopefully maybe is a little easier hopefully you can get it is which holiday is being celebrated so in this speech this person is giving he's talking about a holiday uh that's being celebrated what holiday is it uh let's start out and see if you can identify that there was um i mentioned a date in there that would hopefully tell you a little bit more about um what i'm talking about what holiday i'm talking about there are some key words in there such as anniversary i give you the date i actually did a whole uh lesson on this day uh not too long ago i did it last month uh maybe that gives you so uh excellent uh lolly reuben uh jennifer yamila uh dairy naima the fourth of july is the the holiday that this person is referring to so in in this i mentioned the fourth of july this celebration remember they said that this celebration it's yours it's not mine so the next question after listening to that um i want you to think about the main idea and in this speech this person says the immeasurable distance between us all right he's talking about this holiday it shows the immeasurable distance between us who is us what two groups of people is he referring to what do you think this is talking about the fourth of july it's independence day and this is a speech from a long time ago and in the speech and toward the beginning he talked about the immeasurable distance between us the distance between us who is us what two groups what two groups of people do you think this person is referring to and as we go through this i think it's going to help you start to comprehend the a little more about the main idea and the situation and what this speech was talking about so let me know um if you you have any guesses so we're talking about the fourth of july this is um it's a it's a holiday it's independence day celebrated in the united states so again let's start putting this uh see what you can infer i i said the speech was from a long time ago a long time ago in the united states they're celebrating independence day so it's after 1776 um but it's still a time period where they're talking about the immeasurable distance between two people you guys are some of you are getting close uh lourdes shaya excellent you got it um so what we're talking about is in this case um it's talking about the distance between white people and black people so again this is going to help you understand the speech a little bit more about what this person is talking about and trying to think about who this person is so he's talking about the the country wants to celebrate but they're still an immeasurable distance between uh white people and black people and how and why they should be celebrating so the next question that i have for you is um in this story in this speech he he says the word bequeathed and i want you to think well what does bequeath mean so i'll read the the part of it uh to help you understand it a little bit more so it's just identifying this word bequeathed and i want to ask you what do you think that word means in the story um or in the speech he says the rich inheritance of justice liberty prosperity and independence bequeathed by your fathers is shared by you not by me so justice liberty prosperity and independence bequeathed by your fathers is shared by you and not by me what do you think it means um the guy the people responsible for the declaration of independence um they gave independence was bequeath was given to these people which in this case uh white people not shared by me so automatically you know that uh the person who wrote this speech is black and i will tell you who it is in just a moment i have some more a couple more questions and this might be a little easier the phrase to drag a man in fetters refers to what heinous act so he uses the phrase to drag a man in fetters what heinous act does this what is this talking about and right now you can probably guess we're talking about the united states a long time ago a distance between black and white what heinous act was taking place in the united states a long time ago and this is another again learning new words if you don't know what the word heinous means put it in context we're talking about a situation that what do you think is it a good situation or a bad situation hopefully you know okay this is this is a bad situation it's not something that's good so if i'm talking about a heinous act heinous means that it is terrible it is despicable it is something that is just awful all right so what act were we talking about to drag a man in fetters i think is the the phrase that i think really where they're discussing this act directly uh so yes adriana eric uh we're talking about slavery and the so to drag a man in fetters fetters is talking about something that keeps you locked up and in this case i thinking of like chains somebody is chained up um and it's referring to the act of slavery and i i used an image of abraham lincoln there he was the president um during this time in which they had the civil war and slavery was uh slavery ended so in this case the heinous act we're talking about slavery now the last question that i have for you want to uh listen uh for this is this is definitely a little more difficult it says why why does this person and the person who gave the speech is frederick douglass frederick douglass just to give you a little more information about him um he escaped slavery and he became a prominent figure speaking out against slavery and he did a lot of writing too and wrote books that were just talking about why we should get rid of slavery we should abolish slavery and we don't need it so he lived through this he was a slave he escaped slavery and he became a prominent person speaking out against slavery and in this case this is his speech and my question is why is it sacrilegious irony for frederick douglass to join in the celebration why in his words he says that this is sacrilegious irony if he were to join in this celebration why does he say that why does he say that it is sacrilegious irony and again we let's put these words into context all right because maybe you're thinking well i don't know sacrilegious irony what does that mean um if you don't know what sacrilegious means if something is um sacrilegious it means that it is disrespectful so something that is sacrilegious it's something you should not do all right irony is talking about having the opposite effect so in this case why do you think he says it's sacrilegious irony if he were to celebrate so think about what's going on they're celebrating independence day in the united states and he's talking about the irony of this situation that you want everybody to celebrate independence but but black people are not free they're they're they're still slavery and this is the irony of all of this and he's basically saying well why should i celebrate there's a picture of frederick douglass why should i join this celebration what what do i have to celebrate because the slavery still exists in this country and there are so many people that are not free that do not have the same freedoms that white people are celebrating on the fourth of july so this is why i'd say you know he's being asked to celebrate the freedom which he does not have that that he does not share with everyone else and he refers to it as sacrilegious irony the name of the speech in case you want to look it up um it's frederick douglass and the name of the speech where is it i had it here it says uh the the title of the speech is what to a slave is the 4th of july so it's what to a slave is the 4th of july is this speech i told you it was definitely more advanced because speeches are more formal they're using more advanced vocabulary but hopefully you were able as we went through the questions to comprehend it a little bit better and i would encourage you afterwards go back and listen to it again and now that you know the answers to see if when you're listening to it if you can identify all of this information again so this is the way that we were listening and learning and improving your skills and again if you guys do if you like what we do here at interactive english you can sponsor and support our channel there are youtube memberships uh patreon we offer different rewards and there are links in the description saw some members uh people uh patrons here today like lolly and rod um so what i hope what i hope that again that you guys can gain from this is that you're just able to practice these skills to again learn new vocabulary and try to put it in context that you can try to remember and identify key details and recall that information as well as make inferences and take the information that you hear the information that you have and try to think about okay well what else is going on what other information can i infer based on the present situation it's always good practice i'm really happy that you guys join me today i hope you found it useful if you did please go ahead hit that like button that way i know okay you maybe you learned something today or you found that this was useful and helpful so thank you guys uh lolly uh so lee english with jerry sarah

Improve Your Listening to Easily Understand Fast Speakers

So many of you out there tell me, "I want to improve my listening skills. What should I listen to?" If it's you, raise your hand. Okay, almost everyone. So, I want to help you discover what you should listen to in order to help you improve your skills the most so that you can easily understand native English speakers. That's coming up. Hey everyone, my name is Wes. This is interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today, I want to help you improve your listening fluency. And this lesson is going to be done in three parts. We're going to go through variety, speed, and exposure. And by the end of this lesson, I hope that you have some new ideas that you can use to improve your listening. So, let's begin with variety. And I think the beauty of learning English or any other language for that matter is that there are so many different options that are out there and available to you for you to improve your listening skills. So I want to start out with a simple question and that is what are you listening to?

For example, a long time ago when I started learning Spanish, I decided that I wanted to practice my listening skills and I was going to listen to music. I was going to do this every day. I never really stopped to think that, well, is this really the best way to do it? I put all of my eggs in that one basket and I would listen to music every day and it's good, but that it's not always relevant when you want to be able to do things like listen to other conversations or even listen to movies or TV shows. And that's what I want to talk to you about right now. I want to go through a variety of different options that are available to you to improve your listening. Let's begin with well TV and movies. There is so much out there and the real benefit to this is that you get to listen to natural conversation the way that people would talk to each other out on the street or casually with friends. Something else you can do is listen to educational videos just like this one. Right now you are learning English while listening to English. And I think this is a really great option because when you watch videos like this, I think people's speech, it's very clear and it's a little easier to follow and understand. Let's continue talking about different ways to practice your listening. And my next suggestion is well just have a conversation. Talk to your teacher, your friend, your classmate. And the benefit is that you get that face-to-face interaction and it's also more active listening because you are required to listen to them and then respond. Now, so far I've talked about TV, movies, educational videos and conversations. And with each of those you are able to see someone and you can follow visual cues which makes it easier to understand. So, my next suggestions are going to be a little more challenging because you really just have to listen. And this is great for intermediate to advanced learners. For example, you can listen to a podcast.

These have become so popular nowadays and there are podcasts on a variety of different topics as well. But this is another great way for you to listen to natural conversations and discussions. Another thing you can do is listen to an audio book. And this is great because well books they have a beginning, a middle, and an end. And it is a wonderful way to practice putting pictures in your mind and see if you can create that story and bring it to life.

Another thing that you can do is listen to music. This is a great way to try and understand the the rhythm and flow of speech. And it's also very relaxing. I think anytime when you can try to learn and and feel relaxed, that is a huge benefit. And finally, you can listen to the radio. And I think this is a great option because, well, it really has everything that we just talked about. You can listen to interviews on the radio. You can listen to different sports broadcast. And of course, you can listen to music when you're listening to the radio. And it also provides a lot of flexibility. You can just jump right in and out of it.

It's not like uh uh an audio book where you need to start at the beginning. You can just turn on the radio, start listening, and then when you have to do something else, just turn it off and you have that flexibility. So, now that I've given you a variety of different options when it comes to listening, let's talk about speed. And I have another question for you. And that is when you are listening to something, is it too fast? If you're listening to a TV show or a song, do you feel like it's just too fast for you to understand? And the reason why I'm asking you this is because you need to consider your level as an English learner. And more specifically, I would say you need to think about your level as a listener because when you are talking about the different English skills, listening, speaking, reading, writing, you're not always going to be at the same level. For example, listening is the most challenging language skill for me. I've always had trouble with listening and my level is a bit lower.

For example, there some of you out there might tell me, you know, Wes, I like your videos, but you speak so slow. Or others might say, well, you're you're speaking way too fast. YouTube allows you to control the speed. So, if you think I'm just speaking too slowly, then you can just speed things up so that you feel like you are listening at at a comfortable level. Or if you think that I'm speaking too fast, then you can slow things down. And again, you want to find a a speed that you are comfortable and that you understand at least 80%. And not only with YouTube, you can do this. There are many media players out there such as VC and they let you control the speed of a TV show or a movie, but you should really take control of that speed and and slow things down or speed things up so that you find your level. Find where you are comfortable because that is just going to help you improve the most especially over the long run. Slow and steady wins the race. Now let's talk about exposure. And another well another question that well I would ask you in general would be like how much time do you spend listening to English? How much exposure to the language do you get? Now I think many people out there myself included we we like to multitask. And uh often people may think, well, I'm going to listen to English while I do something else at the same time. I'm going to listen to an audio book while I cook dinner or I'm going to listen to a podcast in the shower. I I it's always great to get exposure to the language, but I think it's so much better if you can get quality exposure and just be able to give all of your focus and concentration to whatever it is you are listening to. And that's what you should strive for. You should strive to get more quality exposure. If you are listening to a podcast, only concentrate on that podcast. If you're listening to an audio book, only focus on that audiobook. If you are listening to a video lesson like this one, I just want you to focus on this lesson. Wait a sec. Are you Are you doing other things right now? I I hope not. I want you to stop. Stop whatever it is you're doing. And I want you to focus on what I'm about to say. You need to get more quality exposure. And the more quality time that you can make for it, the faster you're going to improve. So, now that we've talked about the variety of options that you have when it comes to practicing your listening skills, we talked about speed and and the need to consider your level as a learner. And we've also discussed the the exposure that quality exposure that you need to get. I want to offer some suggestions for all different types of learners out there. For example, if you are a beginner learner with either very little time or you have a lot of time, the most important thing that you need to focus on would be the speed. Whether you are listening to an audio book or a podcast or a video lesson, really think about controlling that speed. and you need to slow things down because slow and steady wins the race. If you are an intermediate learner and you don't have that much time throughout the day, then I think the best thing that you could do would be to listen to these video lessons because they they're very short. You it doesn't take as much time, but you also get to control that speed and really put it where you think it needs to be. And if you want to really challenge yourself, then turn on the radio. Jump into some radio broadcasts.

Try to challenge yourself. You're not going to be able to control the speed, but radio it, it's a great option for somebody who may not be able to listen for a long time if you just have these short periods throughout the day. I think movies and TV shows are also good for intermediate learners with more time because you get to listen to that natural conversation which is always beneficial. If you are an advanced learner who who doesn't have a lot of time throughout the day, just a few moments here and there, then I think educational videos that's a great option. You can try to make the speed a little faster and challenge yourself.

get that face-to-face interaction, that active listening practice and and respond to what other people are saying. You could also listen to music. That's a great option. But because you are an advanced learner, I would still say that you really need to focus on the music. Don't listen to music while you're doing other things. try to to get that quality exposure. Listen to the song and see if you understand well what what is it that the person is singing about. See if you understand the song completely. And then if you are an advanced learner who has more time throughout the day, then I I think you should do all of them. The more the better. But the one suggestion that I would make is try try listening to a podcast. Think about what you're interested in and find a podcast about that topic. and listen to it and try to follow along. If you want to increase the speed and challenge yourself, that's great as long as you understand at least 80%. So, I hope that you now have a better idea of of what you can listen to and how you can listen to it in order to improve your listening skills. If you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button. And as always, thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next

Improve Your Speaking Fluency | 11 Ways to Get More Practice

today I want to talk to you about how to get more speaking practice that's coming up hey everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills today we're we're focusing on the practice part of it because I want to talk to you about eleven different ways that I think will help you practice your speaking so many of you out there ask me and you say I really want to improve my speaking skills but I don't know what to do so in this lesson I hope to give you some different ideas and suggestions that you can use to try to practice your speaking skills so you can improve your overall English fluency the first one that I have for you and I know this may not be for everyone is just to speak with your significant other speak with your husband your wife your boyfriend or girlfriend in English especially if you are married to or you are seeing somebody who is a native English speaker now again I know this may not apply to many of you but in that case I would say you know love can be a great motivator maybe you want to meet somebody from the United States or the United Kingdom or Australia or Canada and and get to know this person and you would try to develop and create a relationship in English now speaking to a significant other I understand that may not apply to many of you out there but something that you can do which I think is I think this is the best way to get speaking practice is to take some online classes and if you can do that every single day then you are really putting yourself in a position to become fluent faster and that brings me to a great opportunity that I wanted to share with you and that is the link go to language sprint in lingo des was kind enough to sponsor this lesson and it really connects well with the topic of practicing your speaking skills because when you sign up for the lingo to language sprint you will be able to practice speaking every single day first you should know that the classes they're very affordable the lessons cost less than 8 euro also if you successfully complete the language sprint then you will be able to get 100 percent cash back if you don't already know about lingo de it is an online language school where you can take classes in English business English Spanish German French and I've also taken classes with lingo de I took some Spanish lessons and for me it was perfect because I got to speak with a native speaker also I could take classes whenever I wanted to now if you want to practice your speaking skills as much as you possibly can that is why lingo des offers the language spread and there are two different options you can take the super sprint in which you'll take 30 classes each month for three months and if you successfully complete the super sprint then you will be eligible to get 100 percent cash back you can also take the sprint in which you would take 15 lessons a month for three months and if you successfully complete the sprint then you'll be eligible for 50 percent cash back you can start signing up for the language sprint now which will begin on April 8th and lasts until July 6th once you sign up you will pay a 49 euro deposit but you can use the voucher code join 15 and you will get 10 euro off your deposit so if you really want to practice your speaking every day just click on the link in the description you'll find out more information about the language sprint especially how to get that 100 percent cashback and remember use that voucher code join 15 to get your discount so let's get back to our list and the next suggestion that I have for you is to join a speaking community or a speaking Club so think about your city your town and there might be a group of people who come together in order to practice speaking English for example I've had learners tell me that they have joined Toastmasters and Toastmasters it is an international organization to promote public speaking so in this case you're not just speaking one-on-one with another person you would be speaking in front of a group of people which it can be challenging but it's still good practice now if you're thinking well okay there is no speaking organization in my city or town then my next suggestion would be to create one go out there and create a speaking Club because if you want to practice your speaking skills I guarantee you there is another person or group of people that live close to you who also want to practice their speaking so you can go on Facebook and create an English speaking group for people who live in your town or you can put up flyers at a coffee shop and try to find those people so that you can come together and practice your speaking skills now once you have your speaking club another great way to practice is to do a role play and the reason why I'm would actually end up talking to myself and having this back and forth conversation and in role-playing as though I were in a kitchen and I was having a conversation with somebody about well what do I like to cook what kind of food do I need and in doing that I would discover words that that I didn't know how to say in Spanish and this was actually really helpful because I felt a little more prepared for a conversation that I knew I would have in the future so doing a roleplay with yourself and speaking out loud is a great way to get some practice and actually discover some words that you still need to learn the next suggestion that I have for you is to do a language exchange just go online and google the words English language exchange and you are going to find many different sites that you can sign up and try to find a speaking partner and they will help teach you English and you will teach them your native language this is a good option if you don't have the resources to take online classes but it could be a little more challenging to try and find someone and work out the time in order to meet online but I still suggest you check it out google those words English language exchange and see what you come up with now so far everything that I have talked to you about it involves another person you need another person to actually speak with so let's now talk about some things that you can do on your own and one thing that I think is very useful it's very important and it's very simple and that is just to talk to yourself I mentioned before about that doing a role play and kind of having a conversation with yourself that's not what I want to talk to you about right now because when I say talk to yourself I want you to think of it like you are giving a presentation because if you are going to give a presentation at school or work whether the presentation is in English or even your native language I think it's quite common for people to practice and they actually say the presentation out loud some people might like to practice in front of a mirror when I practice giving a presentation I don't know why I like to walk around a room and I just walk around and I practice saying the presentation out loud so in that case you need to think of a topic you need to think about something that you can talk about and give a nice long answer so perhaps you want to relate it to something that you do and somebody says okay I want you to tell me what you do what is your job and you can give a very detailed and specific answer talking about all the different things that you do at your job and try to speak for several minutes so I think one thing that could help would be to think of serious topics because that's going to allow you to give a longer answer as though you were giving a presentation so you could talk about a topic like well how should the world deal with climate change or maybe you could think about well what are the advantages and disadvantages to using social media and when you take those more serious topics and try to give a presentation that is another great way to practice your speaking skills see how long you can talk for and again the same way with the roleplay you are likely to discover new words and phrases that that you need to learn in order to have that conversation if you want to make it even better and this is something that that I would do is then record yourself giving this presentation and speaking in English the reason why I think it's very useful is because then you can watch it again and try to to see where your mistakes are figure out where okay you had this long awkward pause because you couldn't think of anything else to say it's also a great way to evaluate your overall fluency so that you can have a more natural discussion whenever you're you're having a conversation about this topic now my next suggestion which actually is closely related to your fluency and the way that you're speaking is to practice shadowing and if you don't know what shadowing is it is a technique that I primarily is used to help people practice their pronunciation and intonation and emphasis and what you do is you listen to somebody speak and then you say the exact same thing that they do and you try to say it in the exact same way you listen to it and then you repeat you listen and then repeat and you can do this with movies TV shows famous speeches there are many different ways that you can practice shadowing I've had learners tell me they've tried to practice shadowing with me they listen to my lessons and then they try to repeat the information and say it the exact same way that I do so shadowing is a great way to practice your speaking because you need to say this out loud and you also get to work on the those three things that I mentioned your pronunciation your intonation and your emphasis another suggestion which well it's very similar to shadowing but I'm going to put it on its own and that is singing sing to yourself so if you are singing with the song then that would be an example of shadowing you're trying to sing the song in the exact same way as the person you're listening to but you can also when you learn the words to a song you can do this on your own as well you can sing in the car you can sing in the shower and actually practice your speaking skills because I know you're not having a conversation you're not speaking to somebody else but anytime words are coming out of your mouth and you are practicing saying words and phrases and and trying to understand what it is that you were saying that is going to help your overall speaking skills another way to practice your speaking skills and I think this one is a fun one and that is well to talk to your phone on many people's phones nowadays you can ask questions and get answers and that is what I think is the most valuable thing this is a great way specifically to practice asking questions let me give you an example hey

Siri hey Siri Siri Siri you're embarrassing me what's going on with you hey Siri okay Siri can you tell me what's what's the weather like right now can you tell me what is the best place to practice and improve your English skills Siri I don't see anything about interactive English on here what's going on so as you can see you can play around with this have some fun ask a bunch of different questions and I think it also is useful for practicing your pronunciation to actually see if if Siri understands what you're saying so my final suggestion and this is something I want you to do right now and that is have a conversation with me I want you to speak to me I'm going to ask you a few different questions and I want you to say your answer out loud and I will give you a little bit of time to respond are you ready so I could ask you well where do you plan to go on your next vacation oh wow what do you want to do there Wow very cool can I come alright I hope you said yes to that last one but again this it's all about practicing your speaking skills and just having the words come out of your mouth so if you did this and you actually practice speaking and had a conversation with me I want to know about it in the comments right the word speaking that way I know that you are serious about improving your speaking skills if you enjoyed this lesson and found some of these suggestions useful please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time Siri what are you doing later can you tell me what what do you think of my shirt [Music]

gonna wanna cuz gotta give me lemmy okay it may sound a little strange saying one right after the other but those are some very common reductions in spoken english and today we're gonna practice speaking using reductions and i just used one then we're gonna practice speaking because you are gonna speak with me and if you want to practice and improve your speaking skills please subscribe turn on notifications so that i can become your english teacher my name is wes and that's what interactive english is all about just trying to help you improve and feel a little more confident speaking english so basically we use reductions in order to say more in a shorter amount of time and therefore phrases like going to will get reduced to gonna want to wanna because is often reduced to just cuz got to gotta give me gimme and let me let me now i want to start out by saying that this is not something you have to do you do not have to speak using reductions i do think it really does help with your listening comprehension and i also believe that as far as speaking goes it will help you develop a more natural way of speaking because these reductions are like i said they're so common in spoken english so the way i want to begin and we'll practice with just a few simple everyday sentences and this is going to be more of a listen and repeat i'm going to say a sentence two times i'll say it slowly the first time and then the second time i'll just say it at a natural speed and for both of them just listen and repeat are you ready i'm gonna get some rest i'm gonna get some rest do you wanna eat out tonight do you wanna eat out tonight

i know cause i've been following the news i know cause i've been following the news i gotta go to the bathroom i gotta go to the bathroom it's a very very common and very useful statement right there could you please give me a hand could you please give me a hand let me think about it let me think about it so i hope that you were saying those sentences out loud using those reductions and now i want to practice with the dialogue i just used another one i want to practice with a dialogue but before we say this dialogue i want to make a quick announcement because if you really do want to practice and improve your speaking skills and actually use some of these reductions well then you can join my speaking course just click on the link down in the description and when you do there is a special discount just for you the course is all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally to help you speak confidently each week there are different speaking topics we do engaging speaking activities i help you build your vocabulary and and all of it is to give you more confidence when you're having a conversation to help you speak clearly each lesson we warm up with pronunciation connected speech and there are also pronunciation video lessons included in the course which not only helps you speak clearly but i also think it's great for your listening comprehension and when it comes to speaking naturally you will learn some of the the language nuances when to use certain words and phrases will practice using idioms as well as talk about different ways to express some very common ideas so if you want to practice and improve your speaking click on the link down below in the description if you'd like to join or learn more about the course and i just hope to speak to you soon so let's get back to our speaking practice because you and me we're gonna say a dialogue we're gonna practice a dialogue and this is something you gotta do okay i'm just you you notice how often i use these reductions we're gonna say a dialogue and you gotta do it i told you they're very common in spoken english so this first time i'm i'm just going to say the dialogue i just want you to listen and i'm gonna say it naturally so this is the speed that i want you to keep are you ready here's the dialogue i'm gonna go to the store cause we're out of a few things do you wanna go with me sure i also gotta get a few things but are you to drive or do you want to walk i think i'm going to drive because i want to get back home okay let me get ready i'll be quick no problem let me know when you're ready i'm going to wait outside just give me five minutes i've got to change my clothes so you heard me say this dialogue using those reductions and you also heard the speed that that i was speaking at and right now i want to practice together and we're going to say the dialogue i am going to say a and then you will say b and then afterwards we'll switch so i'm a you're b let's begin i'm going to go to the store because we're out of a few things do you want to go with me i think i'm going to drive because i want to get back home no problem let me know when you're ready i'm going to wait outside okay excellent so now i want to switch and this time i want you to say a and i will say b so you can begin right now sure i also got to get a few things but are you going to drive or do you want to walk okay let me get ready i'll be quick just give me five minutes i gotta change my clothes all right so i hope that you were speaking with me and if you were i i really want to know so in the comments just write speaking if you were practicing and using these reductions because like i said it's very common in spoken english and it's great practice just to feel a little more comfortable using these reductions in everyday conversation if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button and remember if you want to join my speaking course click on that link down below because i want to speak with you all right keep using these reductions because i want to speak with you yes that's true thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Innuendos in English | Examples to Improve Your Comprehension

Hey everyone, welcome to Interactive English. My name is Wes. I almost forgot what I was going to say just for a second. Uh, this channel, it's all about just trying to help you practice and improve your English. If you are new here, I definitely want to hear from you. Write your name in the chat or if you're watching this later, write your name in the comments. Tell me where you're from. Always love hearing from new people. Today's lesson is I'd say it's a little more of an advanced lesson. Uh, and we're not what we're going to talk about, we're going to talk about innuendos and trying to be able to understand them and identify innuendos.

This is something that I think is more common just in general conversational English. It's not very it's pretty informal actually. So, what I want to do is we'll teach you what this means. If somebody is going to make uh an innuendo, try to think about how you can identify them. And I'm going to give you a bunch of different examples to help you understand. So, I hope that by the end of this lesson, you you'll have a better understanding of what an innuendo is and when people might be making them and when you might hear them if you're watching a TV show or a movie. Before we jump into it, I just want to give a quick hello to some of Wow, so many members uh patrons here. Hello, Lai Takayo. Uh good to see you. Yasher, uh welcome.

Uh Ali, Maddi, Jacqueline, uh Amiable, language learner, AMS, Anna, great to have you guys here. Uh Neckla, how are you? Good to see so many familiar faces. the sleepwalker. Uh, as we go through this again, I'm going to maybe ask you guys some questions and you guys again can put your answers in the chat. Um, if you do have some questions, I may try to get to them uh as we go through this. But let's begin just talking about what is an innuendo. And right here, I'm giving you the the definition. This is from Cambridge dictionary. I'm going to give you a couple of them and hopefully it'll help you help you help you understand what it is. So, I'll just read this. It says uh what are innuendos? The making of a remark or remarks that suggests something sexual or something unpleasant, but do not refer to it directly. So, you're making a remark or you're saying a comment and what you say it's not you're not speaking directly about this thing. You're saying it indirectly and it's kind of you're you're suggesting something. You're insinuating it. It could be something sexual. It could be something uh unpleasant. So, innuendos typically uh are not a good thing. Sometimes people might say them to be mean. Sometimes they might say them trying to be funny. And again, I'll give you some examples. And I'm sure that even if you don't really know what an innuendo is, I'm guessing that you have come across it. And maybe you did not know that you were coming across it, but that is when I'm going to give you some of these examples. So, let me give you another meaning of innuendo. This is from Cambridge dictionary. I like using Cambridge here. This is from Collins. I like this meaning as well, which is why uh I've put it up here. An innuendo is an indirect remark, gesture, or reference, usually implying something derogatory, an insinuation. Derogatory is just something that's not nice, something that's mean. So again, we're talking about a comment that somebody might say, or maybe they make a gesture or they do something to imply something mean or rude and they they're insinuating something. And again, sometimes uh it it can definitely be sexual. So, let me uh let me give you guys uh some let's get into the example part of this. So, one way to identify an innuendo right there, this phrase right here, sometime, not always, but sometimes people will say, "Oh, you know what I mean? You know what I mean?" And when they do this, uh, typically they'll say the innuendo and then maybe they'll say that they'll ask that question like, "Oh, you know what I mean?" And in this case, it's a rhetorical question, which a rhetorical question is it's a question you're not supposed to answer. And this way, again, they're kind of asking you, they say the innuendo, they're not saying it directly, and they're asking like, "Oh, do you understand what I'm talking about?" You know what I mean? So for example, here is this um I found a way to get some extra help on the tomorrow's exam. You know what I mean?

So right now again think about that situation. What do you think the person is trying to insinuate? What are they trying to imply? Again I told you innuendos it's not typically a good thing. Uh, but maybe you and I were having this conversation and I say this to you and I say, "Wow, hey, I found a way to get some extra help on tomorrow's exam." You know what I mean? So, what what do you think? What do you think this innuendo is referring to? I'm not directly saying it. I'm saying it indirectly. What do you What do you guys think? Let me uh No. Uh, yeah. Okay. Uh, Pulk uh, Pulkit. Uh, sorry I've mispronounced names. Uh, Nil Nilma. Uh, Lai. Yeah. So, again, I put the the quotes there. Um, extra help. That should also tell you when people use those air quotes or maybe in conversation, what they'll do is they'll kind of emphasize that like, "Oh, I found a way to get some extra help on tomorrow's exam." You know what I mean?

So again, that air quotes is also an identifier saying that you you know something you should focus on this. It's not what I'm trying to say. So like you guys uh like you guys just mentioned, excellent in the chat. They're talking about uh cheating. So there there would be this picture to show you what's going on. So if somebody's talking about extra help on tomorrow's exam, you know what I mean? they're really implying that they have found a way to cheat on the exam or they're again you're doing something unethical. So in this case, you're not really saying something mean, but you're saying something that well, it's wrong. You're you're going to do something wrong. You this person is going to cheat. And again, that you know what I mean is one way to identify that somebody maybe they just said an innuendo.

Here's another example. Uh Dave has been spending a lot of time with Kim if you know what I mean. So remember in the first one the identifier I gave you the question like you know what I mean. Somebody might ask it as a question. They may also include it in this statement right here. If you know what I mean. Uh that's another way that people would ask this. They'll say the innuendo and then they'll add if you know what I mean. And again, that's one way to identify that that somebody is saying uh an innuendo. All right. So again, in this case, in this situation, what do you think is the innuendo? What is what if I tell you this? What am I trying to insinuate? What am I implying? Dave has been spending a lot of time with Kim, if you know what I mean. Sometimes people would say it like with a kind of a childish smi smile. Um, okay. What do you think? Um, please say my name. Faten. There you go. Uh, yes. Suana. Um, Henry Nilma Sleepwalker. Yeah, you guys get the idea. In this case, uh, Dave and Kim are spending a lot of time together. They're getting friendly perhaps. Maybe um, they like each other. They're going to get romantically involved. Excellent. I like that. Uh, David says hanky panky. Yeah, maybe there's a little hanky panky going on. Um, some romance. And yes, I'll put that I put the kiss there as something to say that you're you're implying that there is some type of romantic relationship going on with Dave or Kim or maybe the situation that Dave really loves Kim or Kim really loves Dave or they both just love each other um and they're spending a lot of time with each other if you know what I mean.

[snorts] So again, this kind of leads us into the notion of sexual innuendos because I would say this is actually a collocation. When you're talking about innuendos, often people are making some type of sexual innuendo, referencing something that is ro romantic all the way to referencing something that is really lewd and inappropriate and maybe even disgusting. So sexual innuendos can can come across a wide spectrum. Uh but again typically people would use them either you could use them to be demeaning and offensive and you could also maybe use them to be funny or humorous. Sometimes uh again depending on the situation, the context like I said it could be highly inappropriate or perhaps it could be just a little bit of humorous. In this case, this is not something that I think is really scandalous or something. Perhaps people are gossiping. Oh, Dave has been spending a lot of time with Kim, if you know what I mean. [gasps] Let me give you another example. I love this example. Okay, I love this example. I've when I've taught uh innuendos before, I've used this. It's perfect. Okay, and it's an example of a sexual innuendo. So, here is an article. It's actually a real article. Um, and I'll read it and it's full of well innuendos. So, here is the article and we're going to follow up on this. So, it says, "Congratulations, George Brownidge for pleasing 15 women for an entire day. We were all exhausted and very satisfied and we look forward to next year. We all thank you." And you see a picture. There's George right there. Big smile on his face. Now, I'm sure when you read that article, like I just said, something probably comes to mind, like you're like, "Wow, that's a little uh that's a little crazy, a little interesting." This again, this is a real article. Um, and I'll show you why. I I know this that it is a real article. So, again, uh, if you're just joining us, we're talking about innuendos, identifying them, trying to understand them. Um, and this is not something that I'm telling you you should try to use inuendos in in conversation. Really depends on the the situation, but this is something that you will hear um especially on like TV or in TV shows or movies. Uh, it's something that happens. So, in this case, uh, George Brun for pleasing 15 women for an entire day. We were all exhausted and very satisfied. We look forward to next year. We all thank you. The reason why I said that, you know, this is real because this was in the newspaper and then later on the newspaper had to issue an apology and they put up this apology uh message right here, our sincere apology to George Brownidge and staff. Our intentions were to thank him for a generous holiday shopping trip which he arranged. This annual tradition is much appreciated. any inappropriate innuendos were unintentional and we take full responsibility for the ad that appeared in yesterday's paper. So, of course, when somebody read that article, the first one that I just showed you, it seems very strange, pretty inappropriate. And I think when people read that, they they maybe they were laughing. They saw that and that that's why the next day the paper had to come out with this apology saying like uhoh we we did not mean to say that we're talking about a shopping trip that this guy I guess he might be the boss of the company George Brownidge arranged for his staff of employees. Um, but again, if you look at the innuendo, let's look at the innuendos from the original article where they're talking about this is where it gets a little confusing for pleasing 15 women. So, if you're pleasing somebody, it makes somebody happy, but also pleasing somebody is also used uh sexually like uh after when talking about sex and somebody is pleased, they're happy, they're satisfied. So this is a verb to please someone that can be used in that context. So again, it's an innuendo. It makes people think of something else.

Like George, wow, 15 women. And again, it does not help that somebody says, "We were all exhausted. They were very tired and they were very satisfied." Again, also words that somebody may think of something sexual was happening um and that happened for the entire day. Now, what I do think could happen, I think maybe somebody at the newspaper, perhaps it was somebody young and immature and they wrote this intentionally trying to be funny and maybe somebody got upset and because of that they had to issue an apology. So again, maybe it was an accident, maybe it was not an accident, but this is a great example of an innuendo where you're saying something, not directly, but it makes you think that something sexual was going on. Yes, it definitely makes me think, Angela, that this guy, George Brunwitch, is definitely a playboy. Uh, so again, I like this example when trying to teach innuendos. Um because typically innuendos it could be an accident but I think often they're they're not really accidents. You're trying to you say them to be funny or again maybe there people say them to be offensive and demeaning.

The other examples that I want to give you to help you understand and I told you before at the beginning that you have probably if you watch TV shows or movies you have probably encountered or heard a lot of different innuendos. Maybe you were able to identify them and understand them. Maybe not. The reason why I say they're pretty popular is because you find them in movies all the time, especially children's movies. And you might think that's a little strange because you're talking, well, wait a second, children's movies, they're meant for children. Why would you put a sexual innuendo in a children's movie? And I put these companies up here like whether it's Disney or DreamWorks, Columbia, 20th Century Fox, Pixar. Um, I think the reason why they do this is because they they want to make movies entertaining for everyone. It's meant for children, but I think companies might feel comfortable putting an innuendo in there because many of the children are not going to understand. And the adults will understand the innuendo and for them maybe they think it's funny. And therefore then the movie is entertaining for everyone. It's good for children.

It's good for adults. And typically these sexual innuendos that they put in there, they're not like meant to be like really offensive or demeaning. They try to put them in there maybe a little innocent, but again, an adult would pick up on this. They would understand the reference, the innuendo, and they would then enjoy the movie as well. So, let me give you some examples of innuendos that you would find in some of these movies for children. So, the first one is from the movie Aladdin. And in one part of Aladdin, uh the quote is down there. He says, "I thought the earth wasn't supposed to move until the honeymoon." All right. So, what do you think? What do you guys think that he's referring to saying, "I thought the earth wasn't supposed to move until the honeymoon." If you're not sure, so in this situation, I guess the earth is shaking and moving. Um, a honeymoon is talking about after uh a couple gets married, they get married and then they go on their honeymoon. Typically a honeymoon, people would travel to some nice location. Uh it's kind of like a vacation, but it's a vacation for newlyweds. When people get married, they go on their honeymoon. So they're talking about when when people would go on their honeymoon. Uh sometimes uh I don't know nowadays, it really just depends. That's when people would consummate the marriage and the couple would have sex. And that's what it's referring to is that this uh this newly wed couple having sex and the earth is shaking. So again, this is an example of a sexual innuendo in the movie Aladdin, which uh is a Disney movie. And again, it's a movie that's meant for children.

And again, I think if a child were to hear that, they they probably wouldn't get it. Uh when they're, "Oh, I thought the earth wasn't supposed to shake and move until the honeymoon." They're trying to be funny. And adults might find this humorous. Another example, this one is from Toy Story, which I think Toy Story, I think it's Pixar. You guys can correct me if I'm wrong. So, in this situation, I've given you the situation down here. Buzz Lightyear, one of the main characters in the movie Toy Story. In in this part of the movie, I guess he sees the the cowgirl, Jesse, another main character, uh, in the movie.

And when he sees her, the wings pop up on the side. And that again is another sexual innuendo. In this case, it's not something he says.

Remember the Collins uh dictionary mentioned that an innuendo could be a remark like a comment, but it could also be a gesture. So, this is more of a gesture that the wings pop up. And what that's telling uh the viewer again that this that Buzz Lightyear, he's excited. He's getting aroused. He is attracted to Jesse the cowgirl that he sees her and he's like, "Oh my gosh, she's so beautiful. She's so amazing." And his wings pop up. So again, this is another example of a gesture that children probably would not pick up on, but adults when they see this, they think it's funny, they think it's humorous. Um and therefore again um maybe the the movie might be a little uh maybe more enjoyable for an adult that these movies are both for children and for adults and typically a lot of these movies yeah you can find quite a few uh sexual innuendos in these movies. So yes, they are referring to like I said Yar uh Anna Henry. Yes, like an erection that Buzz Lightyear is getting excited. He he's very much in love with Jesse the cowgirl. Then we have here's another example. So again, I hope this makes it a little easier for you to understand. And I told you if you're watching TV shows or movies, you will come across these quite often. Um not just in kids movies, but just in general, sitcoms, anything you might be watching. Uh this is from the movie Cars and the situation is Lightning McQueen gets flashed by two enthusiastic fans who beam their headlights uh at her. So I don't I haven't really I haven't seen this movie. I don't know who makes the movie Cars. Um not sure if that might be DreamWorks. Uh so but in this case again so Lightning McQueen I think is a very uh famous car and these other two cars that you see in that picture are flashing their lights. McQueen's very famous. They're flashing their lights. Uh they're fans so you know they're fans. So the innuendo is again they're flashing their lights. You would need to know what the the meaning of to flash someone is. So again, adults would see this and they would think, "Oh, this is funny." So right now, I would tell you, do you know what it means to flash? If you're saying that uh it's an informal phrase, uh flashing is when uh a woman would lift up her shirt and reveal her breast to either a group of people or maybe one other person. Some typically it might be done in a car. You're driving past the car and the woman would lift up her shirt. That is called flashing. So, if you didn't know that, maybe you learned some new expression today to flash someone. It's very informal, but in this case, again, they're making that reference, that innuendo that they're flashing their headlights. So, that's what they're going with to flash like they like again like they're lifting up their shirt and revealing their breast. in this case, the two headlights. So again, this is another example of a sexual innuendo. I don't think children are going to pick up on that, but adults would and they would maybe think it's funny or humorous. Uh let's look at the next one. Got another example from Frozen. Okay, so I think this is a very popular movie, very common movie. Um I'm going to get this wrong probably. You guys, how do you not know? Frozen. Frozen is uh Disney, I think. Frozen. Is Frozen Disney? Yes. Okay. Yes. All right. My wife just clarified. Yes. Frozen. Disney. Um and in this situation, uh you have Kristoff and Anna. That Kristoff is Anna is talking about her um her fiance Hans and they just met. And Kristoff is saying like, "Really? Do you really know this guy? you just got you just got engaged after one day. You don't really know him. So, he's quizzing her on how much she knows about him. And he's asking these questions like, "Oh, what are what's his favorite food? What color are his eyes?" And then he asks her about like uh how big uh how big are his feet? And she answers like foot size doesn't matter. That is another sexual innuendo like oh like what's what's his foot size? And she's like, "Oh, foot size doesn't matter." Again, it's a sexual innuendo in reference to the size of his you know what. All right, I don't need to to tell you, but it's referencing again the size and she's saying like, "Oh, size doesn't matter. Size is not important." So, again, it's a sexual innuendo in reference to Hans's, you know what? But again, the way that they do this in this situation where they're talking back and forth and he says, "What about foot size?" She's like, "Oh, foot size doesn't matter." Adults are going to pick up on that. And it's funny. It is humorous. If you actually go and watch this clip in the movie, I think you could type in like on YouTube um Frozen foot size and you would you'd be able to watch this clip where he's quizzing her and it is it's funny, but children are not going to pick up on this. This is a very uh it's a very subtle sexual innuendo. And that's what I would say in these movies that are meant for children. you're gonna find a lot of them, but they're very subtle. Um, [snorts] so I hope that I hope that you guys were able to follow and understand the different innuendos that we just went through because I think this is good for your comprehension. I told you in movies and TV shows, you're going to hear this a lot. One thing to keep an eye out for would be that phrase, if somebody does ask, you know what I mean? Then typically they just said some type of innuendo.

Maybe it was offensive. Maybe it was inappropriate. guys enjoyed this lesson on innuendos. I want to do more on this. Maybe I will follow up and talk about innuendos in a future lesson because I think they're fun. It's very important. It's about well I don't say very important but it's more like conversational English but also a bit cultural as well because you learn about culture and typically what people might think is funny or humorous or how how people try to be funny or humorous. So if you guys did like the lesson please hit that like button while you guys are here. Please go ahead hit that like button. I really appreciate it.

If you want to even go a step further, show us a little love and support. Down below in the description, there are links if you want to become a YouTube member or a patron. It was great seeing so many members uh in these live lessons. Uh Tako Li, uh so many people. good to see you. Um [clears throat] when I said Stefan was right. Excellent. Excellent. It's good able to identify these. Uh, great to see so many members and patrons here. Um, it does help support what we do if you guys want to show us a little love. But, uh, again, I think this is something I do want to follow up on in the future because I think these lessons uh, from what I hear from you guys, I think you find them interesting. And I told you if you're watching even a TV show like Friends, they are going to use innuendos when because mostly to be funny in that situation. So keep that in mind for your listening. Uh again, I don't expect you guys to try and go out and just start saying innuendos left and right. Um but it's definitely good for your comprehension. And then the more you're if you can easily identify these innuendos and you really understand them, then I think that's when you could go out and perhaps try to use them in your conversations as well. And if you want, you could follow it with that. Yeah. You know what I mean? You know what I mean? They've been spending a lot of time together if you know what I mean. All right, so thank you guys for joining me. Uh, give out some shout outs. Uh, Aitni, Regina, Lai, uh, Pulkit, good to see you guys. Suana, um, I can't pronounce your name. Giovanni, uh, Yashar, Mamemed, Mi, uh, hello, Marcio, Takayo, thanks for joining us. Uh, Nissa Zenat. Um, Kon, can't pronounce it. Sorry. Aana, hope you guys learned something new. Uh, Maresa, hi. I just saw you. Excellent. [gasps] I hope you learned something new. I hope this was easy to understand and follow. And again, maybe I think in the future I'll try to follow up with another lesson talking about innuendos. Have a wonderful day. Enjoy the rest of your weekend. And I

Intermediate Listening & Speaking Activity | Describe Words Around the Home

Welcome to our global classroom. Are you ready for a new lesson? It's time for describing nouns. Today, we will describe nouns around the house. This lesson is intended to practice your listening and speaking. These nouns are at an intermediate level. However, we encourage all learners to participate in this activity. Only by practicing can you improve your spoken English. For this activity, Wes will describe six different nouns to you. You will have ten seconds to guess and say the answer. Each of these nouns is something you can find around the house. Remember, this activity is meant to help you improve your listening and speaking skills. This is why we ask you to speak out loud. Don't be shy!

So, let's look at an example before we start. Wes will describe a word to me, and I will get the answer. Here's the word. Are you ready for this? Bring it on. Okay. Here we go. This is something that houses have a lot of. This is something that's made of glass. And you can look through and you can see what's happening outside. What do you think this is? That's a window. Nice. Good job. Thank you. Now that you know how the activity is done, let's begin. Wes will describe a word to you, and you will try to give that noun. Remember to say your answers out loud. After we finished all the six words, I will go over the answers with you.

Ready? Let's get the clock going. So this is a piece of furniture that people would sit at. It's where they would do a lot of their work. So if you have an office in the home, you would go in there and work. And you would sit at your... So this is a part of the home where you would park your car. A lot of times people would also store stuff in this area. They would have tools, maybe a ladder. It's a room where people would hang out with their family, their friends. They would play games. They would watch TV. It's a place to relax in with a sofa, a chair.

What area of the home do you think I'm talking about? This is a very important item in the home. It's on the bed. It's very soft. People use it to sleep on. They rest their head on this. It is one of my favorite items. So if a home has two floors, you would walk up these to get to the second floor. You can go up them. You can go down them. Let me give you an example. Part of the home you would find in the kitchen. It's where you would put your dishes when you want to wash them. You would also find this in the bathroom when you wash your hands.

What do you call this thing where there's running water? I hope you are able to give an answer to all of those. If you would like to try this exercise again before I give you the answers, you can pause the video and go back to the start of the activity. Now, before I reveal the answers to you, I'm going to replay some of the key words that Wes used in describing these nouns. So this is a piece of furniture that people would sit at. It's where they would do a lot of their work. A desk is where people do their work. So this is a part of the home where you would park your car.

A garage is a place where you park your car. It's a room where people would hang out with their family, their friends. They would play games. They would watch TV. Families spend time together in a living room. That's the answer. It's very soft. People use it to sleep on. The thing that you sleep on is a pillow. Pillow is the answer. You can go up them. You can go down them. You go up and down on stairs. Stairs is the answer. It's where you would put your dishes when you want to wash them. People wash their dishes in a sink Sink is the answer we're looking for. That was fun right? Now, we're going to switch roles, and it's your turn.

I'll show you two nouns and you will need to describe them to Wes. He will then try to get the words you are describing. Make sure to speak up, use complete sentences, be creative, and have fun. Are you ready? Here's your first word. I know what you're describing. It's a microwave. Ready for the second word? Here it is. I know. That's the shower. Good job today! We hope you enjoyed this activity. If you did, please give us a LIKE down below. Remember, practice makes perfect. Thank you for watching, and we'll see you later.

Intermediate to Advanced Grammar (B1 - C2) + Lesson Notes

hello and welcome to today's lesson I have well I think this is a fun interactive quiz lesson and we're going to be talking about grammar all right so this I say B1 to C2 which is more intermediate to Advanced and that's what these questions are some of the grammar questions are a little easier and then some of them can be a bit trickier but as we go through the lesson I think it will get a little more difficult and of course because this is interactive English I would love it if you participate in the lesson write your answers in the chat or write your answers in the comments because yeah that's what it's all about trying to help you improve your English fluency my name is Wes and that is what the channel is all about and if you would like to get a copy of the lesson notes these slides that you see right here next to me click on the link down in the description I'll also add it right there in the chat and that again it just helps you continue to practice continue to review so let's just go ahead and jump into it with our first question which uh we're going to start out with some multiple choice questions like I said I think it'll begin a little easier and then I'll try to make it a bit more challenging so the first one is I've been studying English 10 years so you gotta well what what word goes in that blank I'm only giving you two choices a four or B sense I've been studying English um 10 years we're talking about the present perfect continuous however the real the key in this one is 10 years and if we're talking about 10 years we're talking about a duration of time you guys are rocking this I'll just give a few shout outs great job Lolly Fernando Nessie Danny the answer is a four I've been studying English for 10 years and I just mentioned that the key part of this is that phrase 10 years and the reason for that is because well when you're talking about a duration of time that is when you're going to use four when you're talking about a point in time that is when you'll use since now both of these words for and since they are indicators that you're going to use the present perfect but remember four duration of time since point in time excellent all right what do you think about this one did you remember um the door there are three choices locking to lock or lock think about the context imagine if I were asking you this question what do you think you would hear hey did you remember the door how would you best complete that sentence and this one I feel like is a little trickier and the reason for that we're talking uh really highlighting the difference between gerunds and infinitives so I'm already kind of narrowing it down for you Jaron would be locking the infinitive to lock and I see varying answers in here so that's good I get hopefully my goal for each of these lessons is that you learn something new so the answer is B to lock did you remember to lock the door now let me put this in context for you so when when talking about gerund infinitive oftentimes verbs may only be followed by one or the other there are some verbs like remember forget stop that you may follow with a gerund or infinitive but the meaning is slightly different so if we say remember plus 2 plus the base verb which is remember to lock we're referring to well not forgetting to do something you didn't forget to do this if you have remember plus the gerund well then you're just thinking about this past action so because of that you you could use either one but let's go back to the context if I were to ask you a question I would say hey did you remember to lock the door did you remember to do this thing if you were to follow it with a gerund it would sound a little like again you're thinking about this moment like oh yeah yesterday I remember locking the door it was a magical moment it was a special time and again you're thinking about that past action which is why it would seem a little again confusing in that context locking a door is very it's quick it's not something you're really going to think about or discuss with others like Hey do you remember locking the door yesterday like that was a great time so in this context you're somebody's asking you this question they're really going to use the the infinitive did you remember to lock the door did you remember to do this thing so hopefully that makes a little more sense the distinction between uh those two different meanings remember to lock or remember locking next we have this one you don't want me to quit creating English lessons hmm just keep in mind this is a question you see the question mark there at the end you don't want me to quit creating English lessons um like I I would ask you this question and what we're what we're talking about are tag questions and we'll talk well I'll show you the difference in just a moment again I see some varying answers um but great job excellent uh Fernando J Victor uh gossoren Kong uh Lolly nice you don't want me to quit creating English lessons do you so this is a tag question in which you have a statement that's going to be positive or negative followed by a tag that's also going to be positive or negative so in general here is the basic structure if you have a positive statement you're going to follow that with a negative tag you have money don't you if you have a negative statement you're going to follow that with a positive tag you don't have money do you so going back to our example you don't want me to create you don't want me to quit creating English lessons we have a negative statement therefore we'll follow that with a positive tag do you the next question the next multiple choice question that I have for you it well there is a raccoon always goes through our garbage which word is going to follow raccoon I I know with the picture there it may be a little challenging to see the the sentence and the choices there is a raccoon always goes through our garbage are you gonna follow that with who that or which of these words would you use to best complete the sentence who that or which there is a raccoon always goes through our garbage great job Rose Marco Lolly well done video the the answer is B that there is a raccoon that always goes through our garbage now let me break it down for you uh with this next part right here so in general we're talking about relative clauses and you're going to use that when referring to people animals or things which when referring to animals or things and who when referring to people now that which and who are actually those are relative pronouns so those are nouns but they're going to come at the beginning of the Clause the relative clause now the Clause can be one of these two right here you have a restrictive clause in which you need this information to understand the sentence and and what's being said a non-restrictive clause means that you have this extra information but it's not necessary if you take it out of the sentence you people would still understand what it is you're trying to say typically with those non-restrictive Clauses you know that they're they are there because the the commas so with restrictive Clauses you're going to use that or who within non-restrictive Clauses you could either use which or who so let's break it down we've talked about those relative pronouns and the restrictive or non-restrictive Clauses let's look at our sentence so there is a raccoon we're talking about an animal okay raccoons are animals that always goes through our garbage this information is necessary in order like what we're trying to say about the raccoon we need this information this is a restrictive Clause so those are the two things I want you to keep in mind animal restrictive Clause so now let's go back over here and if we're talking about animals they're at the beginning the relative pronoun that you would use okay it's that or which but then when we go down here and okay it's a restrictive Clause we can use that or who so that tells you the correct answer is that we're talking about a restrictive Clause we're referring to an animal so we're going to use that excellent uh hopefully again just looking at that that it makes a bit more sense now I again I say hopefully trying to make it a little more challenging perhaps maybe you find this part uh maybe even easier I'm not going to give you uh any options a b or c I just want you to complete the sentence and really what you're going to fill in is the missing part of speech so the first one the the first part is blank it's an interjection and Then followed with I can't believe I got all those multiple choice questions right 100 percent so which word are you going to use to complete this sentence but the missing part of speech is an interjection and they're probably I mean there could be several words that you could put in there that are interjections but there's one in particular that I'm thinking of right now and that's what I want you to try to guess which one which word am I thinking of that really fits this context um I can't believe I got all those multiple choice questions right so actually I know maybe some of you are trying to that think about some words that you could put in there or phrases like I said there there is more than one but the the answer what I was going for is just you know that surprise like amazement like wow that is what I was thinking so great job Bella Lolly um why me gelsaren some of you again you put oh my God like that that also works if somebody is amazed and surprised and they say it and the key thing that you would see it like an interjection is that exclamation mark like wow and that tells us you're putting some emphasis on this and the emotion into the language but you could say yeah my gosh oh my god there are several of them but interjections are well these are words that are used to express emotion hence that exclamation mark that you're saying it a little louder and it's more expressive it's all it's often followed by an exclamation point and these are just some examples oh wow oops and we use these all the time I think in just general well throughout the day when things are happening yeah you make a mistake oops and it's something you hear the next one maybe this is a little trickier this weekend we're gonna go swimming the lake and the sentence is missing a preposition this weekend we're gonna go swimming the lake I think I actually use this as an example in a previous lesson in which I was talking about the prepositions in on at so right there I'm kind of giving you part you're you're going to use in for an enclosed space you're surrounded on all sides you can go swimming in a lake you can go swimming in a pool I'll come back to this if we're talking about surfaces then you'll use on it's attached to or touching something and then you you're going to use at for a point when we're referring to a location or a position so the with this sentence I said well in or at could work but the difference would be like are you talking about will being surrounded by the water or are you referring to the location so if somebody's talking to you and just talking about hey what we're going to do this weekend you're probably not at the lake right at that moment so in that case you're you're likely referring to the location where are you going where are you going to be we're going to go swimming at the lake we're going to go swimming at the pool if you were in a situation where you and I are right next to the lake and the lake is right there you could use in and say hey we're going to go swimming in the lake and it's right in front of us we're we're already at this location so in that situation it you probably would use in but just in general when somebody says like hey this weekend it makes me think of well what are they planning to do where are they planning to go which comes back to that keyword location so like you know where are you I'm at the lake this weekend we're going to go swimming at the lake so hopefully that makes a little more sense as to why I used at as the correct answer here's the next one and let's see uh I'm confident that I'm going to win even though she me twice before it's missing a verb which verb would you use to complete the sentence but not only that which verb tense are you going to use so really two things to take into consideration the verb that you would use but also the verb tense and I'm kind of trying to give you some some hints here and I guess if you're talking about again like a match I put the picture of Chess up there so let's let's just pretend that that this is what we're referring to I'm confident that I'm going to win even though she um me twice before what do you think I see a lot of people you got that that verb correct you guys are you you're you're on onto something with the verb but the verb tense okay all right uh excellent I see well some just some spell let me let's go ahead and look at the answer and I'll I'll walk you through my thought process so the correct answer would be has beaten I'm confident that I'm going I'm confident that I'm gonna win even though she's beaten me twice before so the other person this she has you know she has one and so beat would be the verb that that I was going for you could use other ones like maybe some other verbs but I feel like in this context in this situation the verb to beat would be the one that you would often hear or use now going back to the verb tense has beaten because I saw people using beat in a variety of different ways like beat or Beats uh you're going to use the present perfect let me tell you why because you use this tense we're talking about uh something like in the past that is related or or continue to the present in this case with the present perfect I like to say it has a relationship with the present so look at this timeline down here and I've on the other side is the present now so they will play today there's going to be another chess match today but in the past she she won the first time you can see that then she won the second time now those two events have a relationship with right now like we're having this conversation and that's why I would use the present perfect and you can see that with this sentence I'm confident that I'm gonna win right that tells us okay there's you know there's going to be a match today and then I'm following it even though now I'm referring to these things that have happened already in the past even though she's beaten me twice before confident that I'm gonna win even though she's beaten me twice before so that is why I would use the present perfect here's the next one and I do think this one is a bit more challenging but we'll see I think you guys I'm always impressed with with your grammar skills and your knowledge so there are two missing parts to this it begins with a conjunction do you hit the like button you write to me in the comments as well what words or phrases would you fill in there and that they're they're connected um do you hit the like button you write to me in the comments as well as I mentioned I definitely do think this one is a little trickier it's probably these are probably conjunctions that you do not use as often as others however it's good to know and like I said with these lessons I always hope that perhaps you you learn something new so the correct answer great job Julia we're going for not only and but not only do you hit the like button but you write to me in the comments as well you can see the how suggestive I am with some of these examples like hey yeah go ahead hit the like button I really appreciate it and of course I always love hearing uh from people in the comments and I hope you do I hope you write to me in the comments let me know how you did once the the quiz is over how did you do so we're talking about a correlative conjunction and correlative conjunctions are used to illustrate how two words are phrases within a sentence relate to each other you know they're they're correlated correlative conjunctions always come in pairs so in this case I told you the conjunctions you know they're they're related they're together not only but also in this case I didn't really have to use also because I used as well at the end of the sentence so also is something that you may include or you may not put it in there but you're going to use this really to emphasize that hey okay this is true but something else is also true and you're just giving it a little emphasis so now that you know what correlative conjunctions are let's just look at the sentence again not only do you hit the like button this is something true that you do at least I hope but you also do this other thing that's true which is writing to me in the comments again very suggestive with these examples so I now want to move into something that I think is a even more challenging but I'll try to start out with some easier sentences and then get a little more difficult and I'm talking about sentence Transformations and what we're going to do is I want you to complete the second sentence so that it has the same meaning as the first it's as simple as that we have two sentences they're different but they have the same meaning so let me show you what I mean by this in case you've you haven't done sentence Transformations before so my grandfather built the house I want you to write another sentence or think of another sentence that means the same thing except I want you to use the word by the word by is going to come in this sentence and that is like a key word uh hint or example like they're referred to as keyword Transformations where I'm giving you the one or two words that I want you to use to put you on the right path in order to complete the write another sentence that has the same meaning so my grandfather built the house I'm asking you to use buy and really what I wanted to get you thinking about it well the difference between active and passive so this is an active sentence my grandfather built the house if we change it and make it a passive sentence well that is when we're going to use the word by and I think I think a lot of you you caught on to that so the answer was yeah the house was built by my grandfather so with the differences again the active the subject my grandfather is doing the action my grandfather built the house if we change that and make it a passive sentence what we're doing is we're taking the object and moving it to the front then we're going to use the verb to be plus the past participle now built it's in the past tense so that's why I'm using was here was the past participle is built by the the person doing the action by my grandfather the house was built by my grandfather the next one maybe this is a again a little trickier that shirt is too small for you this is something that I feel like my wife may tell me from time to time it's like hey Wes yeah that that shirt is too small for you so I want you to write another sentence that has the same meaning except I would like you to use the word big in your sentence that shirt is too small for you what sentence could you use and include the word big that has the same meaning you're talking to someone else and say hey I think that that shirt is too small for you what would you use and there's really one phrase that I wanted to get at when we're talking about big and yeah I think you guys um got it great job Fernando uh uh anko Nguyen Jocelyn so the sentence that we could change this to is that shirt is not big enough for you so let's just start with the phrase big enough if something is big enough it means it is sufficient it fits if we're talking about clothes it's big enough now because we said it's too small then you would want to use the negative it's not big enough so if something is not big enough it is not sufficient it does not fit it's too small that shirt is not big enough for you or that shirt is too small for you have this both have the same meaning then we have the next one right here you didn't pass the exam because you didn't study when when I was a high school student even in University I would hear this from time to time somebody would tell me that sentence you didn't pass the exam because you didn't study or I might hear this other sentence down below it would have the same meaning except I I would I'm giving you the beginning of the sentence if you I would like you to start the sentence with that phrase if you write a sentence with the same meaning you didn't pass the exam because you didn't study so just looking at the you see that first word if that should start ringing some bells that oh this is a conditional sentence and then you need to think about well which kind of conditional am I going to use the first conditional the second conditional or the third conditional and we're talking about a situation that's already happened it's you know I ca you can't change this it's already happened so it's almost like it's an imaginary situation in which case then you would use the third conditional and I see some of you wrote you got it you you guys nailed it so if you had studied you would have passed the exam that is a sentence in the third conditional we have a condition in which we're using the past perfect if you had studied followed by a result in which case we use would Plus have plus the past participle you would have passed the exam if you had studied you would have passed the exam so that I hopefully I think that that one was a little easier in terms of you know having that first part that if and get you thinking of uh conditionals here's one that again I think is maybe a little more challenging both job applicants are strong and equally good and I want you to rewrite the sentence well same meaning but use their and hardly and actually these sentences as far as the words that are being used you're going to use very different words but it's expressing the same idea and that's what the sentence

Transformations are all about so you have this simple sentence that you I think it's easy to understand somebody says Hey both job applicants are strong and equally good how could we say the same thing using there and hardly all right excellent I see one good answer I can't sorry I can't pronounce the name but yeah um nice Fernando Victor I think yeah you guys are on the right track Jocelyn so maybe this wasn't as difficult as I thought it might be there is hardly any difference between the two applicants and I know some of you are writing um candidates which again is fine if we're talking about somebody applying for a job an applicant a candidate but yeah you could say yeah there's hardly any difference between the two applicants both of them are strong they're equally good there's hardly any difference so and this I I try to give you a variety of different grammar Concepts and really challenge you in different ways some of them were definitely easier than others that's why I said it def it falls within that intermediate to Advanced category so if you enjoyed the lesson please I always appreciate it if you hit that like button and of course yeah write to me in the comments I am curious to know how did you do on the quiz did you get most of them right did you find it challenging and these are lessons that I want to continue doing in the past because I think it's great to do this and really make it an interactive lesson in which you can participate and actually practice your grammar skills so thank you so much for joining me today great to see some familiar names and faces well faces I'm kind of just looking at the little avatars but Lolly um Victor Victor uh takayo good to see you um where are we at uh it's kind of lost the thing Vicky Gustav good that you you guys were able to make it um again I I really appreciate you guys joining me I hope you continue to practice and improve each week and of course I will be back for another lesson real soon because like I said you know you don't want me just to quit making these English lessons do you and I hope the answer is yes no keep going keep going that's what I plan to do so I hope you have a wonderful

Key Word Transformation Quiz | How to change sentences?

so if you really want to improve your English fluency this lesson will help you do just that because I am really going to test your knowledge of English today because we are going to talk about sentence transformations so I want to begin by just kind of letting you know well what what does this mean so if we're talking about sentence transformations basically you're just to transform it means to change so you're taking one sentence and then you are changing it to another sentence but they have the same meaning so that's what I mean when I talk about okay we're gonna do sentence transformations and see if we can change sentences to different sentences with the same meaning so if that sounds confusing let me write it right here for you so you have to rewrite the sentence so that both sentences have the same meaning there are other words that you can use that describe this for example some people might say like key word transformations and what that means is that they give you a sentence and then they give you one word and you have to use that word to rewrite another sentence with the same meaning we're gonna practice this in a variety of different ways but the reason why I say this is a good test of your fluency because you are you are exercising so many different language muscles up there when you are trying to change the sentence to another one with the same meaning you have to think about the grammar you have to think about vocabulary and you're really putting it all together so again it is a great exercise it's a great practice and that's why I think they're using this more and more on proficiency tests such as the TOEFL or the IELTS so so in if you guys are joining me today those of you who are with me in the chat I am going to ask you some questions and we are actually going to change some sentences to different sentences with the same meaning and even if you are watching this later I want you to participate I want you to interact with this lesson and write your write your answers in the just use it like it is a piece of paper okay so let's let's begin alright this is the first one we're gonna start it's gonna be start a little easy and then it'll get more and more difficult as we go along so the first one that I have for you is this sentence right here so on the top I've given you the sentence now down here I've given you part of a sentence and I want you to complete it so that they have basically the same meanings so I'd say you know he was responsible for painting the fence all right think about what that means if it helps put it put a picture in your mind he was responsible for painting the fence now we're going to transform that we're going to change that into a new sentence with the same meaning painting the fence was his hmm what what would you put in there I'll go ahead and give you a hint we're talking about just one word it's really just one word to use to complete that sentence and just want to give some shoutouts to people that are yes participating getting it getting the correct answer thank you yes love music Jotham art perfect lolly yes so we're taking the word responsible and we're changing it to a different part of speech so instead of he was responsible for painting the fence all right we're going to say that painting the fence was his responsibility we are changing it from the adjective responsible he was responsible for doing something to the noun it is his responsibility so I hope you can see those two sentences right there they basically mean that they mean the same thing so that is what we're doing today and we're transforming we are changing sentences so that they have the same meaning all right so if you're just joining us this is this is the quiz this is how I'm going to quiz you today which is going to help you improve your fluency here is the next one all right there's nothing better than hot chocolate on a cold day I thought this because it is getting winter it's getting a little cooler outside which makes me think of hot alright there's nothing better than hot chocolate on a cold day so then I would change the sentence I've given you part of it hot chocolate on a cold day is I almost gave you the answer I almost told you what the answer is all right what do you think how would you complete the sentence so that it has the same meaning now one thing I would say there are there may be more want more than one way to do this there may be more than one way but the idea is that I'm trying to give you enough information so that you are able to track down the answer that I'm looking for all right so let's see yes excellent Aziza Savior Vanessa Kiko so we're taking it you know from the comparative there's nothing better than hot chocolate on cold that you just saying hot chocolate on a cold day is the best all right there is nothing better than it so if there's nothing better than it when then we know well this is the best hot chocolate on a cold day is the best excellent perfect the next one are you guys ready so now I think we've warmed up a little you know what I want you to do and like I said they're gonna get a little more difficult some of these can actually be very challenging all right I think this one should be okay so the first part is I asked Wes what he ate for breakfast I asked Westwood he ate for breakfast all right we're going to transform that we're gonna change that to the one down here I asked Wes all right and this is a direct quote what hmm for breakfast so this is an example we are changing it from indirect speech I asked Westwood e8 for breakfast to direct speech which is why I have it in that whoops those quotes down there I asked Wes what hmm for breakfast what do you think all right how would you transform that change that sentence so it has the same meaning and this is something that that you would do in grammar class all the time changing from direct speech to in direct speech or changing from direct to indirect and vice versa so yes you would say I asked west let's see some answers yes she'll Leonardo perfect okay there's what did remember since it is a direct quote alright it's almost like you are asking Wes so what is the question that you would say you wouldn't say you know what does he because again it is a direct quote so you'd want to say you know I asked Wes what did you eat for breakfast because the first one indirect I asked Wes what he ate for breakfast alright we're changing that direct so what is the exact question I asked Wes question what did you eat for breakfast alright so that is something that's again maybe it's a little tricky but remember keep in mind when you're changing it from direct or indirect to direct be careful be careful of that pronoun especially in that question because I'm just asking well what did you eat for breakfast alright I am talking to Wes which may be a little weird because in the example it's like I'm talking to myself alright so let's look at this one all right okay you can miss class if you have a good reason alright now the next one I that whole top line that is a blank I don't know if you can see it so you can miss class if you have a good reason we're going to change that sentence to another one which will be mmm unless you have an excuse so what would you want to say all right so in this case again this is why it really helps your fluency because you've got to think about the grammar but you also may need to make sure that you understand the vocabulary because that is that's going to influence the meaning the words that you're going to use alright so we're gonna take the first sentence you can miss class if you have a good and then the next one is the blank hmm unless you have an excuse all right so seeing some answers yes truth amarte hamza perfect allison excellent andrey so you're just going to say the opposite if we're talking about you have any an excuse then you would say well you can't miss class unless you have an excuse both of these sentences they mean the same thing so you could use either one really whichever one that you want alright so let's look at the next one now this is just like the first part alright now we're going to transform them a little differently but before we do I just want to let you guys know again if you guys like what we do if you want to connect us if you want to show us some love here at interactive English you can check out our patreon page we offer some cool rewards and again it's another way to connect with us practice your English improve your English skills there is a link down below in the description and I'm just gonna throw one right there in the chat but again if you don't want to become a patron it's okay I just want to make sure that you are here with us every Saturday to practice and improve your English so I said with this one now we're gonna change it this is going to be more of a keyword transformation because what I'm going to do is I'm going to give you the sentence and then I will give you the word a word that I want you to use to complete the next sentence are you ready so the first one again just this is a little bit of a warm-up to show you what I mean all right so she regrets not taking the job all right now I want you to change the sentence but use the word had so down here where it says she wishes mmm the job I want you to use the word had to complete that sentence this would be more of a key word transformation because I'm giving you that keyword which has had which you must use to complete the sentence what do you guys think alright so again if you guys anybody who's just joining us now we are doing sentence transformations changing sentences so that you have two sentences with the same meaning and this is a great way to practice your English alright so again be careful I'm some of you I see a lot of those answers you're missing a word alright you're missing you're missing something yes we have perfect Ricardo excellent Hamza Oscar yes so she regrets not taking the job I want you to use hat she wishes she had taken the job some of you were putting like oh she wishes she had the job in that sense um I would say again you want to be a little more accurate we're using taking she regrets not taking the job so you'd say she wishes she had taken the job she will she wanted she wants the job she's thinking back and like ah I wish I had taken that job I should have taken that job alright so now you know how this is going to work let's do the next one are you ready so I didn't stretch so I pulled a muscle all right

said if I mmm and then you would end the sentence with pulled a muscle alright so like I said this is a great way to practice many different things you're practicing your vocabulary and your grammar because if you see you see that if that if statement all right now you should probably know this is a hint it's a conditional sentence alright we're talking about a conditional sentence so I want you to use that keyword wouldn't have or I wouldn't have to complete that sentence what do you guys think all right write your answers in the chat if you're watching this later write your answers in the comments just yeah participate practice see how well you do all right so I didn't stretch so I pulled the muscle and I want you to change that if I mmm and then pulled a muscle all right um all right some of you uh let's see answers if I mm no again remember we're think about this is a sentence this is the third conditional yes Armen excellent because there's there's actually quite a bit of information missing because again you have the condition which is the if statement and then the result which is where you're going to have that wouldn't have all right if I didn't stress I didn't stretch so I pulled a muscle if you want to rewrite that using the third conditional all right if I had stretched because again you didn't do that in the past if I had stretch I wouldn't have pulled a muscle all right so in that case again they didn't stretch so they did pull a muscle so again writing this in the third conditional if I had stretched I wouldn't have pulled a muscle again that condition is going to have had stretched the past perfect and then in the results you're going to have would Plus have plus the past participle all right those are just grammar rules when you're following when you're trying to write these conditional sentences so I hope that makes sense all right then next one that I have for you is this one I think this one may be a little easier all right so he can't wait to go on vacation all right the key word that I want you to use is Ford and I've given you part of the sentence he on vacation what do you think how would you I want you to use that key word to rewrite the sentence so that it has the same meaning as he can't wait to go on vacation what would you guys say I think this one yeah I think it should be I think it maybe a little bit here so again write your answers write them in the chat I want you to interact participate in the lesson even if you're watching this later so seeing some good answers yes we have Oscar let's see mmm I guess you there are a couple different ways you could say this now if I wanted to get very picky and technical alright this is the answer all right he looks forward to going on vacation remember you look forward to doing something you need to follow it with that jaren I look forward to playing I look forward to dancing to running and in this case he looks forward to going on vacation some of you put he is looking forward you could say that it means the same thing but if you're writing it like this remember you want that subject to agree with the verb he looks so make sure that S is at the end he looks forward to going on vacation something that you are excited about doing in the future all right let's do another one are you ready here we go this I will be very impressed if you get this one this one is a bit challenging so West almost always does live lessons every Saturday all right that's true I try to Wes almost always does live lessons every Saturday all right I want you to use the word ever alright and the the part of the sentence that I gave you Wes mmm a Saturday live lesson so this one is very difficult and I will give you a hint in just a moment because that is the word you need to use ever Wes hmm a Saturday live lesson so the key with this one and I so Steve are like Oh wash this is difficult yes these sentences this is challenging like I said you really have to exercise your muscles but it's great practice a great way to test again your knowledge of fluency being able to change sentences or say things that you know have the same meaning but say them in a different way now the the hint that I'll give you for this one is think of the first part almost always that is your hint almost always what is the opposite of almost always alright and then try to go from there so again remember some of you are saying never remember ever I want you to use ever never is different that's a different word alright so instead of Wes almost always does a live lesson every Saturday remember almost always the opposite of almost always do you have any ideas yes I uh al roses are Olly roses you got it but you're missing a verb you're still missing the verb hardly ever alright so instead of West almost it almost always does a live lesson every Saturday I could change and say well Wes hardly ever misses a Saturday live lesson so again you want to use again you need to use a different verb misses in order to complete that thought so that it means the same thing Wes hardly ever misses a Saturday live lesson this one was a lot more challenging it was more difficult all right so we're gonna again continue this we're gonna try it another way so what I want to do now is I'm going to give you a sentence and the key word and I just want you to rewrite the whole sentence I'm not gonna give you any part of the sentence whatsoever so I will give you part of it all right I will give you the key word and then I want you to see if you can rewrite the sentence so that it has the same meaning let's start with this one I think this might be a little easier so if somebody says you know when when did you start studying English what is a another question you could ask very similar that again this is something that I would ask a student just one - you know learn more about them when did you start studying English or I could ask them how long hmm that is the keyword that is your key word or words that I want you to use and and I think you know at this point again I capitalized the age so you know that that is going to go at the beginning of the sentence all right so what question would you ask somebody that pretty much means the same thing when did you start studying English I see some excellent answers yes I love music Kiko bye sue on Anna so actually where is it okay I think most of you have got it it's just going really quickly now how long have you been studying English this is a question all right in the past continuous something that started in the past and has continued to now and will continue in the future like how long have you been studying English so those are two different ways that you could ask that question and you get the same information when did you start studying English oh ten years ago how long have you been studying English I've been studying English for 10 years so you get that you get the same information two different ways to go about it are you ready the next one my father took this picture my father took this picture what do you think all right my father took this picture and I want you to use the word was this is it's a little more challenging and I will give you a hint because I'm feeling in a very generous mood right now and I want to try and lead you to the right answer so the hint that I will give you is this is an active sentence alright this is an active sentence my father took the picture all right the subject is doing the action alright my father the subject took the verb the picture is our object it is an active sentence so I think many yes excellent we Maybelle Kiko Hwan Shilpa yes so we're changing it from an active sentence to a passive sentence and remember when you change it to a passive sentence you're taking the object this picture you're moving it to the front of the sentence so you would say this picture was taken I'm going to use the verb to be plus the past participle by whoever the subject is this picture was taken by my father all right excellent are you ready are you ready for another one again another sentence transformation just see you know try to rewrite the the sentence I think III think that you should be able to get this one I don't think it's too difficult so here's the situation I arrived late to the restaurant everyone had finished eating so I wrote this that is two simple sentences all right I want you to write one sentence and use that key word those key words by the time actually that key phrase I want you to use by the time and write one sentence which is going to be a complex sentence so those two simple sentences has the same meaning I arrived late to the restaurant everyone had finished eating what would you say all right I want you to use that phrase write me one sentence that has the same meaning as that all right what do you think what would you write and I again I think I've given you enough information I think many of you couldn't get this uh exactly yes this is good I think for a lot of you who are here like a bit good good typing practice too because you guys are having to write write a little bit more than you usually do during some of these lessons but yes excellent so you're going to take that phrase by the time and let's just say you know you can put it at the beginning of the sentence or you could put it in the middle of sentence that is your dependent clause and you would say by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone had finished eating all right by the time I arrived in the simple past and your main your main clause that independent clause everyone had finished eating that is a time when you would use the past perfect by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone had finished eating all right so this is you know again the reason for doing these sentence transformations is to just to practice your overall fluency skills because you got to think about grammar you got to think about vocabulary and some of them can be tricky some of them I think are tricky even for native English speakers this can be a real challenge so I hope that you guys did well kind of ran through those a lot quicker than I thought we would today but I really appreciate you guys being here with me again if you want to join our community and subscribe to our email list I will leave a link right here in the chat there's also one down below in the description and this is when we will give you some lesson updates we'll talk to you we'll send you some information about useful resources we will give you access there is a secret fluency lesson which we will also send you so just kind of keep you updated again closer contact with us if you want to email so thank you guys so much for joining me today I appreciate you being here please hit the like button if you enjoyed the lesson and this was some good practice I hope I hope that it was I hope that it was challenging for you because I think often we do some of these lessons and I think they can be some of them are a little easier sometimes so I hope that this was a little bit of you know something for everyone that some of these sentences you could do and others were a lot more difficult and challenging so please let me know hit that like button you can write to us in the comments because we love hearing from you and check us out on Facebook Instagram Twitter again another way we ask questions you can kind of just you know just hang out with us alright so thank you guys for being here give some quick shout outs again Julio Andre Michele Angela Lally Giovanna love music I don't yet I have to say goodbye sorry Daniel thank you guys for joining me I hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you guys next time because I am here almost I'm almost always here on Saturdays I hardly ever miss a live lesson so I will see you guys then so long

LEARN -ED & -ING ADJECTIVE ENDINGS | Advanced Grammar Lesson

all right what is up everybody I hope you're having a wonderful Saturday or if you are watching this at another time I hope you're having a wonderful day so as people join on to this lesson today I have a super super fun grammar lesson for you now I know what you're thinking probably like grammar really now it is you know I know it may sometimes not be the most exciting thing but it is very very important and besides we are going to do a practice today as well so I'm not only gonna tell you some information about grammar and how to use it and when to use it but then we are going to practice your skills as well so if you are just joining us please in the in the chat write your name tell us where you are joining us from I'd like to hear from you guys and see who is with us today so write your name tell us where you are joining us from and we will get this show on the road so we are going to be doing talking about this today we're going to be talking about adjectives the wonderful world of adjectives I'm going to be telling you the difference between edie adjectives and ing adjectives um great everybody's talking amir hi what's up arnold schwarzenegger is with a sweet [Music] Vishal how are you I am doing excellent how are you guys doing from India from Syria Eric on from Turkey excellent great to have you guys with us so we're gonna be talking about these adjectives and then I am gonna do a practice with you guys and test your knowledge so you guys can write those answers in the comments so we're talking about these II D and ing adjectives you can see some examples that I put up there frightened amusing boring confused these are adjectives that we use all the time hello from France how are you guys I hope you guys are having a great weekend and glad to have you here so let's start talking about first you know well first why is this important why do you all need to know this information if you're here it is because you are maybe learning English or more interested you're interested in improving your English skills so this is important because edie adjectives and ing adjectives it's something that learners can confuse and it doesn't matter which level you are if you are a beginner learner if you're an intermediate learner if you are an advanced learner I've heard mistakes made with these all the time across all levels and it still people understand what you're trying to say but it can really it can really change things that it can really change the meaning so the second reason is that these rules what I'm getting ready to tell you about the IDI adjectives and ing adjectives is that they're straightforward a lot of times with grammar that you have these rules and then they come back and say well wait there's some exceptions to the rules and it can be really annoying and confusing which are 2 ing adjectives but with this it is pretty straightforward you just need to understand basically how to use them and when we use them and then it's perfect you won't make these mistakes again so we have people from Ecuador Brazil fallen angel excellent glad to have Marco what's up I hope you're doing well good to see all of you to have you here so we're talking about these adjectives today the other reason it's important is because we use these adjectives all the time you know we use these adjectives to describe people places and things so these are very important words to learn for your overall fluency so that you can improve your English skills enhance your English skills so that you're not making these small simple mistakes because like I said right there a mistake with between an IDI and an ING adjective can really change the meaning so for example you see my emoji friend right down there at the bottom if you tell somebody I'm bored it is very very different than saying I'm boring all right those are two completely different meanings and to be honest you don't want to tell people that you're boring because then they probably won't want to hang out with you so it is very important that you understand the difference and that you use these correctly so let's move on and again just a quick little refresher because most of you that are with us that watch our lessons I think you're a more intermediate to advanced learners so you guys have studied grammar before you've learned about adjectives but this is just a quick little review about what are adjectives alright we use them to describe nouns to describe people places or things and they can be in one of two places they can come before the noun which in that example I gave you we watched an exciting movie it describes movie and it comes before the noun or we can adjectives can follow linking verbs and the most common linking verb that it will follow is the verb to be now when we're talking about Edie and ing adjectives most of the time they are following a linking verb and most of the time it is the verb to be okay so when we're using these adjectives they're following the linking verb as that example the movie is exciting okay permanent States it's used to describe how we feel in that moment okay so it's describing emotions and our feelings so what I want you to do is tell me how do you feel right now all right use an IDI adjective alright how do you feel I feel alright I am alright use an IDI adjective tell us how you feel in the chat right now and practice this you can see the examples right here again with my emoji friend she is tired alright he's exhausted they're fatigued we are exasperated okay this is all these are all meanings these IDI adjectives talking about if you're sleepy if you're low on energy okay these are all describing how we feel okay at that moment and it's all temporary all right tired exhausted fatigued exasperated these are all IDI adjectives and we use them to describe how we feel if you're just joining us again let us know your name in the comments Estela hi how are you right now your board ok your board hopefully not watching this but because maybe just the day in general I hope so so we're talking about these IDI and ing adjectives and then I am going to quiz your knowledge and we're gonna you're gonna write your answers in the chat so I feel enjoyed you just say like I feel maybe not enjoyed you would say more like you feel great you feel good trying to think of an IDI adjective you usually enjoy something or you enjoy doing something so you'd want to say like you know I feel good I feel great not in that context so again that's great though keep writing again guys this is the best way to practice alright tell me how you feel right write in the comments you know how do you feel today alright I am give me an e d adjective

I'm tired I'm confused I'm bored I'm exhausted I'm excited alright so this is e d adjectives remember describing emotions and feelings that are temporary okay they're talking about people alright the way people feel alright now ing adjectives alright these adjectives can do one of two things alright and the first one is what confuses people a little bit alright it can describe the characteristic of a person alright it's not a temporary feeling you're describing their characteristics and this is what I said at the beginning when I showed you if you say I'm bored it's different than saying I'm boring alright if you say I'm boring then you're describing your characteristic as being boring that you are a boring person and you don't want to say that so ing adjectives can describe a carrot mystic or it can describe a thing or situation that can cause a feeling where you're talking about a thing like an event or a movie or situation maybe a party or something and it talks about how you feel about that so let me ask you a question in the comments all right I want you guys to write how do you feel about Saturdays today is Saturday all right how do you feel about Saturdays all right Saturdays are what give me an ing adjective to describe Saturdays okay this is good practice because again Saturday is you know it's a day so we'd say it's a thing all right how would you describe it which aing adjectives would you use to describe Saturday I personally I love Saturdays I think they are amazing that is how I would describe Saturdays but look at these other examples again right here in my lovely lovely graphic the movie how we can describe the the movie in different types of movies we could say the movie is amazing okay ing adjectives it's describing the movie the movie is frightening again an ing adjectives the movie is boring that's one that we commonly hear bored and boring all the time so these are all ing adjectives that are used to describe again characteristics things or situations Saturday is always boring like other days why Saturday is great I saw a film last night that was boring okay a lot of a lot of boring stuff going on I know I don't know why it's the fall out here I don't know if you guys have anything exciting going on in your lives because tomorrow you want an i we are going to run a marathon all right and that is very exciting but I am also I am worried all right that IDI adjective for you I'm worried Saturdays are exciting because I don't work and I do interesting things perfect okay so again write in the comments tell me how you feel about Saturdays and also if you're watching this later write these sentences practice using them in the comments we like hearing from you guys it's always good to practice what you're learning so if you're just joining us again we're talking about ing verse IDI adjectives now alright let's practice and see what you guys know alright I have seven questions for you alright and I want you to write your answers in the comments or in the chat so the first one I did for you alright sometimes I find English grammar alright what are we going to use are we going to use the IDI confused or the ing confusing how do we finish that sentence alright I want you to write the answer in the chat right now if you're in there don't be shy alright don't worry about getting it wrong alright what do you think sometimes I find English grammar are we going to use the IDI adjective or the ing confused or confusing alright we're getting some answers in there excellent Luis Ricardo I'm excited because I'm learning so much with your video classes awesome thank you very much we are happy that you are learning a lot we're really excited to build this community and have these classes so getting some answers in here alright so sometimes I find English grammar we are talking about grammar now that is a thing so we would use the ing adjectives are sometimes I find English grammar confusing alright ding-ding-ding-ding excellent alright so we use the ing ing adjectives to complete this sentence now the next one that I have for you I have a few of these and again I want you to write your answers in the comments here's the next question boom okay she's of her job so she's looking for

Ricardo one thing Saturdays are excited Saturdays are exciting we want to use the ing with that one because we are talking about a thing Saturdays are exciting so what about this one some of his comments were insulted or insulting I got some good answers in there excellent excellent yes we are talking about remember in this one we're talking about comment okay comments is not a the way somebody feels it is a thing it is a noun so the comments are insulting some of his comments were insulting that is the correct the ing to complete the sentence

let's do another one got a few more for you a few more practice questions for you see if I can trick you on one of these okay so I don't want to get stuck talking to him because he's so hmm what are we gonna say II D or ing bored or boring what are we talking about here write your answers in the comments would it be right say some of them felt insulted yes that is correct because you are talking about how they feel they are insulted they felt insulted yes so I don't want to get stuck stuck talking to him because he's so all right we've got some good answers in here excellent remember we are talking about a characteristic in this example it's his characteristic we're talking about a guy's characteristic and four characteristics we use the ing all right you could also put it into context because you don't want to get stuck talking to somebody which means you don't want to be around this person for a long time because they're boring and because they're boring you might get bored and that is the way you would feel so the next one um this one's gonna be a double one for you so you're gonna have to type a little more I got two more questions boom alright let me make this a little bigger all right I'm I'm that you won't think my writing is all right what are we going to use if you guys are just joining us we are talking about the difference we are practicing IDI and ing adjectives so I want you guys to write your answers in the chat I'm giving you a little quiz here to see how much you know and if you're watching this later again write the answers in the comments just use the comment section like it's a chat it's a great way to practice so I'm that you won't think my writing is okay so getting double look at you guys alright excellent so everybody is doing really well the first part of this we are talking about I'm the way I feel so it's a I'm worried okay I'm worried that you won't think my writing is now in the next one we're talking about the writing all right writing is a noun it is a thing which means we're going to use the ing that my writing is interesting I'm worried that you won't think my writing is interesting okay so this might be something people worry about alright so great job let's do another one one more and see if you guys can get this one ready here is your question right there see if you can fill let me there we go okay my exam results were so I was a bit how are we going to complete that sentence what are we going to use are we going to use the IDI or ing with each of those okay my exam results were so I was a bit alright how are we going to complete those write your answers in the comments okay so if you're joining us again welcome um kind of doing a little bit of a quiz for you guys see how much you know about Edie and ing adjectives okay so we're getting some good answers in there excellent alright thank you guys G alright so yes we're talking about the exam results alright that is a thing so we are going to use the ing my exam results were disappointing so I was a bit alright we're talking about how I felt and it's a temporary feeling it's not permanent so I felt a bit shocked alright my exam results were disappointing so I was a bit shocked excellent you guys Wow you know I can't I can't trick I can't trip you guys up today you guys did amazing so remember again this is something that is pretty straightforward that we use the IDI adjectives to describe how we feel about something and it's a temporary feeling all right we use these adjectives often after a linking verb the verb to be alright the movie was boring I am confused alright and ing adjectives again that describes either a characteristic or a thing or a situation alright so thank you guys thank you thank you for joining us today again please like and share this video lesson if you liked it if you enjoyed it if you got some good practice because that is the way again you can minimize your mistakes as you move forward if you have any questions write them in the comments this video will get published later so please please please please write us some questions we always try to respond and answer questions that you may have and again you can join us on social media were right down there on these different platforms Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat and of course YouTube right here so thank you guys so much thank you Ishmael Thank You Nancy Marco it's great to see you again pearl thanks you amano thank you guys thanks for coming Arnold Joshua Gothia and maybe I'm mispronouncing some of these names correctly so I apologize about that if you have any questions again write them in the comments for us we love hearing from you guys thanks for joining us we will be back next week for another live lesson so we hope to see you then all right enjoy the rest of the weekend

LEARN ALL 12 VERB TENSES IN ENGLISH

Hello. What's up everyone? My name is Wes and in case this is your first time here at Interactive English, we are all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today, this is a lesson that many people have requested us to do. We are going to talk about all 12 verb tenses. That's right. I am going to cover all 12 verb tenses in this lesson. But not only that, I want you guys to practice your skills, which is what this is all about. So, I want you to write sentences throughout this lesson. Write sentences in the chat and practice these verb tenses. And even if you are watching this later, I want you to use the comment section as though it were a piece of paper and write sentences there. And always practice, practice, practice, practice. That is what these interactive lessons are all about. So, I want to give quick shout out. Hello Lai, Luna, Susanna, Min, Yelvin, Sed, Angela, welcome. Thank you for joining me today. I will give some more shoutouts throughout the lesson, especially as you guys are writing your sentences. So, let's just let's just begin. All right, there are 12 different verb tenses that we're going to talk about today. So, you may think, well, how did we get to 12? Well, there are four aspects in which you were talking about the simple, the progressive, the perfect or the perfect progressive. Now, you may hear some people refer to the progressive as continuous, they mean the same thing. Either one, whether you want to say the the progressive tense or continuous, either one is okay. So, we have those four aspects and then the three main tenses which I think everyone is familiar with, the past, the present, and the future. And when we multiply four * 3, we get 12. We get 12 different verb tenses. Now, I I gave you this just as a reference. I use the verb uh the base verb go to go. And I conjugated it using those four different aspects and those three main tenses. I'm not going to go over this chart with you. This is again just for you to kind of look at and and examine because we are going to talk about each and every one of these verb tenses. And what I'm going to do is I I'm going to tell you how we like when the verb tense is used. I'm going to ask you a question and then I'm going to give you some example sentences showing you again how to use this verb tense. Some common ways in which the verb tenses are used. And again, I want you guys to write in the chat so that anybody watching this, they can see all of these wonderful examples of these verb tenses being used. The other thing I would say is that I am going to try and start, it's going to start with the easiest tenses and then kind of work your way up to the more difficult ones.

So these are it's almost like this is the order in which learners would learn these verb tenses. Now there are different ways I in different orders in which somebody may learn it but just in general these are the ones that I think are the most I guess the most valuable. I I've ordered them in terms of importance and priority. Okay. So here we go. Let's go. We're going to start with the present simple. Okay, which is generally used to describe actions in the present that are either habitual or factual. All right. So just keep that in mind. Present simple. And I've given you a question that I want you to answer and I want you to write a complete sentence.

All right? For all of these questions, please write in complete sentences. Okay? So my question is, how often do you study English? How often do you study English? Write your answer in the chat or if you're watching it later, write that in the comments. And I'm going to keep a lookout for for some of those comments right there. Okay. Um, ready? So, how often do you study English? Here are some example sentences that that I would give you. Okay, right here. So, I I would say the following. All right. I we usually play soccer when you're talking about those adverbs of frequency. Always, usually, sometimes, rarely, never. It's often used in the present simple. Okay? We usually play soccer. We play. I could say another one like nobody stands up to her. I wanted to throw that three word that that phrasal verb in there. Um, stand up to someone. If you stand up to someone, it means you are you are kind of you're you're kind of fighting back. You're you're sticking up for yourself.

Usually, you would stand up to a bully. So, you could say like, you know, nobody stands up to her and nobody stands. Remember, subjectverb agreement. Then I throw a question in there. A question using the present simple. Do you enjoy watching YouTube would be just again a question. Now keep in mind in this case watching. All right, this is not the continuous tense. Watching is a gerund. All right, you enjoy doing something. So watching is not a verb. It's not in the it's it's actually a gerund. So keep that in mind if you're wondering like, wait, why is there an ing in there? And then my final sentence, again, just I don't know, pick on myself. Uh sometimes Wes doesn't like broccoli. It's true. I know I'm sure many of you are broccoli lovers out there.

I don't want to offend you, but yes, I am not a fan of broccoli. Mostly I wanted to share that image down there, which I I found as part of a meme because it looks like this piece of broccoli is giving someone the finger and the meme would be like, you know, f you too, broccoli. So again, some some examples in the using the present simple. Thank you. Um, Angela, I study English every day. All right. Uh, say, I watch your live your live lessons whenever you hold them. Perfect. Um, let's see. Angel, I enjoy watching interactive English on YouTube. Thank you, Angel. We really appreciate that. Um, Yelvin, a sentence in the the present simple. I don't like broccoli either. Excellent. All right. Great minds think alike. All right, so I Elma, I study English every day. Perfect.

Okay, again, these are examples in the present simple. I think this should be pretty easy. Again, it's going to get more difficult because some of the verb tenses we don't often use. Present simple. We use all the time. So, let's continue moving right along. Let's look at the past simple. All right. This is used to describe a finish action in the past. The action is complete. The action is finished. So, here's a here's a question. So, to elicit a variety of different answers. I this is a common question somebody might ask and I would ask you, you know, well, hey, what did you do yesterday? Did is in the past tense.

What did you do yesterday? Again, I'm identifying a lot of time with the past. you will have those time expressions, those time words like yesterday, last night, last year, and that will tell you, okay, the past, the past simple. So, just tell me, write to me in the chat, what did you do yesterday? Tell me. complete sentence. That's always important. I always want you guys to practice fully write a complete sentence. So, some of my example sentences would be right here. Okay? I'd say she traveled to Italy a long time ago. So again, I'm I'm referencing the past with a long time ago. If I say she traveled to Italy, it's she's already been there and she returned. She's she's already done there. It's a finished action. She traveled to Italy. I bought some wet wipes yesterday. All right, that's a true story right there. So again, yesterday I'm indicating the time that's in the past. Bought is an irregular verb. So, I buy in the present simple. I bought I bought some wet wipes yesterday. They weren't for me. They were for our little our little baby girl, uh, Amelia. But yes, I bought some white wet wipes yesterday. The next one, um, this is a question that I I I think is great because if you did not do something, and maybe you should you should have done it in the past, but you didn't do it, like for example, call someone. Somebody might say, "Hey, why didn't you call?" In this case, somebody should have called in the past. It did not happen. So, you might say, "Why didn't you call? Why didn't you come? Why didn't you join us?" All right. So, in that case, something did not happen, but maybe it should have. Uh, and then we could say, "Wes lived in South Korea for 3 years." Another true story. There's a picture of me with some of my students at the university. Uh, and I lived in South Korea for three years. Anyango to anybody out there who is in Korea watching right now. Uh, so let's uh look at some sentences. All right. Uh, what did you do yesterday? That was my question to you, Albert. I managed to create a file that I I need to analyze the data. Excellent. All right. You managed to do something. Yesterday, Estella, yesterday I played soccer and spent time with my friends. Perfect. Um, Kia, uh, Nuen, sorry if I mispronounced names. I learned English yesterday. Past simple. Um, perfect. Lai, yesterday I didn't cook broccoli. Good, good, good on you. Awesome. So, again, past simple, you're going to either use the uh regular past, which would be that ed ending like traveled, or irregular. Um there are many many irregular verbs like bought or went. Um and those you just have to memorize. They're very common.

So the next tense that I want to look at um is one that is very common, very useful, and it's also talking about the past, which is why we're going to do it next. And that is the present perfect. So even if you see that word present perfect, it's not just talking about the present. It's really referring to something in the past, but it has a connection with the present. And that's what I would say. It talks about an action in the past at an unspecified time. We don't know when this happened, which has a connection with the present, a connection to the present. And I'll give you an example to uh show you a little bit more about that in just a moment. So my question to you in the present perfect, what incredible places have you visited? We are always trying to uh you know learn about some new and cool and amazing places. So that's what I that's really why I wanted to ask you tell me so that maybe we know where to travel on our next vacation. What incredible places have you visited? Give me uh you know again practice using the present perfect. You could say I have been. I have visited. I have gone to. There are many different ways that you could answer this question and and talk about some of these incredible places. So, let's look at some example sentences. Okay, so present perfect. All right, she has played piano for six years. Again, look at how it's constructed. You're going to use the helping verb have plus the past participle has played. She has played piano for six years. Now what this tells us when you see for and since those are are two words that are going to indicate okay I think I might use the present perfect. She has played piano for six years. She started in the past six years ago and is playing today. That is the connection to the present because she is still playing piano today. The lesson has already begun. Okay. The lesson began in the past, but it's still happening right now. It has a connection with the present. But if you're just joining us, thank you. We are talking about all 12 verb tenses. Please stick around, join, and practice your English skills. And the other question that I have, again, just to give you a question, an example of a question in the present perfect somebody might ask you, hey, where have you been? implying the more recent past it's not really in this case this question would be implying something in the recent past but not a very specified time hey where have you been and I could say Wes Wes has been to China again I didn't tell you when because it's unspecified, but Wes has been to China. All right, present perfect. There's a picture of me in front of the forbidden city with Chairman Mao staring over my shoulder.

Now, one thing that I wanted to point out because a lot of times that that people get confused with these verb tenses is when to use one over the other and what is the difference? When should I use the past simple and when should I use the present perfect? Because I gave you that example. Remember I said Wes lived in South Korea for uh 3 years. And I told you when you see for and it's talking about a period of time, often we use that with the present perfect. So you might be thinking, well, why did you use the past simple then and not the present perfect? Well, one difference is that if I say Wes has Wes lived in South Korea for three years, it means it happened in the past. It's finished. I lived in South Korea, but I don't live there now. If I use the present perfect and say Wes has lived in South Korea for three years, then that means that I still live there now. So that is one difference between the past simple and the present perfect. If it's the past simple, it's finished. It's completed. Remember the present perfect, it has that connection with the present. Started in the past, but it's still happening now. like she has played piano for six years. So keep that in mind when you're thinking about oh what's the difference between these um somebody some other places again tell me where you guys have been Maggie says I have been to Japan um this summer it was an amazing experience uh keep in mind I'd say again when you throw that time in there this summer uh oftentimes it would then be used with the past simple because you're specifying the time uh like I went to Japan this uh this past summer would be a common way. And remember have been uh when you're using the present perfect often we refer to that unspecified time. We we don't know exactly when it happened. Um somebody says I have studied English lai for two years. Perfect. Um uh Tamar, I've eaten lunch. Okay. All right. Yes, that is the present perfect. We don't know when you ate lunch, but yes. Um I have been busy with work, Alberto. Perfect. Uh somebody said where was it? Um uh let's see. I have been to Turkey. It's a wonderful country site. Great example. Present perfect. Again, it's unspecified. We don't know when. And yes, Turkey is on the list. We really want to visit Turkey. Um there are I think we could find some good flights to Istanbul. So yes, that's on the list. Good idea. Um so after the present perfect, let's move on. We're going to make it. It's going to get a little more challenging, a little more difficult.

This one, I think, is pretty easy, pretty straightforward. Future simple. Okay, it describes actions that will happen in the future. And usually it expresses some kind of fact or certainty because you're talking about something that will happen that you think will happen. You are certain about it. So again, a common question I will ask you, you know, what what will you eat tomorrow? All right, I'm kind of curious. I've already told you that, you know, I don't like broccoli, but I want to know what do you guys like? What will you eat tomorrow? Tell me, you know, express certainty and use the future simple. What will you eat tomorrow? That is my question for you guys. Write it in the chat and practice using the future simple. So, here are my examples that I have for you.

So, I could say again, it will rain all this week. In this case, you are expressing that certainty talking about something that will happen in the future. that we use it with that uh modal will. I will plus the base verb will rain. In the next sentence, I said, you know, more something stating a fact. If I'm saying, well, hey, the door won't open. All right, it will not open. Again, that's the negative. In this case, you're saying something won't happen in the future. it's not going open. And somebody might just express a fact and say, "Hey, the door won't open. It's stuck. The door won't open." Um, and then the next one, we will we will rock you. Okay, bonus points. Who, which group sings that song? We will. We will rock you. I'm not going to try and sing the sing it for you because I'm a terrible singer and I don't want you guys to leave, but bonus points. Who sings that? We will. We will rock you.

And my last question for you right down there, will you join our community? Our email list? Our community. Will you join? If you don't already know about it, you can join our email list, access the secret fluency lesson, get some useful and free resources as well as the latest updates. Let me throw a link in there just in case. So again, that that's my question to you. Will

will you join our our our community? Make that connection with us. That's what we want. If you haven't joined it already, please do so. So, let's look at again. I want to go back and read some sentences. Yes, Mimo, Geraldo, Paul, uh, Lai. Perfect.

Queen. Yes, queen is my we will, we will rock you question. Perfect. Goia. Excellent. Um, so what will you eat tomorrow? Uh, Benny, Gerald said, uh, Hardo said, "I'll eat pizza." Perfect. Benny said, "I will eat a sandwich." Excellent. Perfect. What will you do? Uh, Roma said, "I will eat vegetables." That is a great way to stay healthy. I think I should eat vegetables uh tomorrow. Maybe I will. I don't know. We'll see. Uh there's a little uncertainty in that. Maybe. So, we've talked about the future. Again, I think it's common. We use it all the time. You understand it. Let's look at the present progressive. And remember I said progressive. Some people might say continuous present progressive present continuous. It means the same thing. But what it does mean is it refers to an action that is happening right now. It is not complete. It is happening now.

Now, now, now. So, I would ask you, my question to you that I want you to answer, write it in the chat or write it in the comments if you're watching this later on. Where are you sitting or standing right now? You guys are at home watching this. Maybe you're on a bus. Maybe you're standing in a metro. I That's I don't know. But that was my question. I want to know where where are you right now? Where are you sitting right now or where are you standing right now? I'm asking you about now. So, you are going to answer using the present progressive. And if you want to see the present progressive in action and know how to answer it, check this out. The phone is ringing. ringing. You see that ing on the end of ringing because that is how we express that something is happening now. And that's that's a common sentence you might hear somebody say like, hey, you know, somebody's phone is ringing. The phone is ringing. Somebody needs to answer it. Um, this is another sentence. The ants are marching one by one. Harrah, hurrah. We've been watching a lot of um just nursery rhymes lately with our little girl and that was just in my mind. The ants are marching one by one. Um but again, present progressive that is what the ants are doing right now. Or a common question that that somebody might ask you which you know is just hey what what are you doing? What are you doing? Maybe you're doing something that you should not be doing and somebody say, "What are you doing?" Or maybe you're again you're talking to somebody on the phone and they just want to know like you know what are you doing right now? What are you doing?

Common question. because we used to live in the San Francisco Bay area. I would use we are standing. So again, keep in mind the the way that you form the present progressive. The helping verb to be plus the base verb plus that ing is ringing are marching are standing. Okay. Um so I had asked you guys um where you know where are you guys right now? So let me see where are you guys. Um Ricardo I'm just laying on my bed. Perfect. Um, Tintan, I'm lying on my bed right now while watching your video. Excellent. Um, was I'm having dinner and watching your live lesson. Excellent. Um, I'm Gonzalo, I'm sitting in a chair having breakfast. Awesome.

This is this is so cool. Like just everybody's connected right now at this moment. Angela, I'm standing in my room right now. Perfect. Okay, again, using that present progressive, it's talking about now. Now, now, now, now, now. All right. So if the present progressive is talking about uh the present now let's look at the past progressive or the past continuous as some might call it. It refers to a continuous refers to continuous actions at a specific time in the past. That's one way we use it. Or it's talking about a continuous action that were happening when another event occurred. And I will give you some examples uh talking about those. And I would ask you my question. All right.

Again, in this case, I'm asking about a specific time. What were you doing yesterday at 6:00 p.m.? So yesterday, it's talking about the past. 6 p.m. That's a specific time. What action were you doing yesterday at 6 p.m.? I want you to write a sentence, an example using the past progressive. Now, what were you doing yesterday at 6 p.m.? Remember that. Now, let's look at my examples. Again, we're going to form this the same way as the present uh progressive. The past progressive, you're using the helping verb to be plus the main verb plus ing. The only difference is is again, we're talking about the past. So, the verb to be is going to be in the past. Last week, this is true. Last week, we were visiting Slovenia. It was with my family. We were visiting Slovenia. Again, we were the subject and verb must agree visiting. I got to put that ing on there. And last week, that is the time I'm talking about that specific time. So again, you can refer to like yesterday at this specific time, you could say last week. Last year, I was doing this certain thing.

Okay? You can use the past progressive. Now, if we're talking about when when we're talking about a continuous action, when another action occurs like this next example, when I started the lesson, people were talking in the chat. So, that is my other point in time. When I started the lesson, that is a point in time. What was happening at that time? People were talking in the chat. That was the continuous action as I started the lesson. People were talking in the chat. Okay. And I could say that

In this photo I was laughing with our baby girl. We put her in front of the mirror and she just likes to look at me and her her she likes to look at herself and just laugh. So makes me laugh too. So we were all laughing. Now let's look at again. I asked you what you were doing yesterday at 6:00 p.m. Okay, let's see what what kind of responses. I'm just going to read a few of them. Um Hong says or Hang Trong, I was driving um I was driving and I felt over last month. I'm not sure you could say. Yeah, I was driving yesterday at 6 p.m. Um em I was driving to my home. Perfect. Um I was in church a church meeting.

Remember you in that case that's the past simple. Remember past possessive um you could say I was meeting with people from my church. In that case that's the past progressive was meeting. Um Romesa I yesterday I was studying. Perfect. Uh Lelele I was practicing English. It's 6 p.m. practicing English again. Perfect. Remember the verb to be plus that ing past progressive. Now, let's look at the future progressive. Now, we're getting into verb forms that are a little less common. You know, we talked about some of the main verb forms. Present simple, uh, past simple, present perfect, present progressive, past progressive. Those are ones that you are going to use, you know, anytime you're speaking English. They are so common. Now, we're going to get into ones that are not as common and they may be a little more difficult, the grammar. So, the future progressive, it's basically the opposite of the past progressive, but we're talking about the future. Refers to continuous actions at a specific time in the future. All right? At a specific time or actions that will be happening when another event occurs. And my question to you, I couldn't think of any other question. It's just a yes or no question. Will you be joining our community? Remember I gave you uh I I gave you our uh our link to join our community. I'm going to give it to you again. Boom. There it is. Just in case you missed it the first time. Uh and I can say, you know, hey, will you be joining our community? I also wanted to use it um because that is a question that somebody might ask using the future progressive like for dinner. Will you be joining us for dinner? Will you be joining us for this? Will you be joining us for that? That is a common question that you might hear somebody using the future progressive. So, when we're talking about the future progressive, there's a couple of different parts to it because again, we're talking about the future. So, we're going to use will.

Okay? And after will, we follow it with the base verb. So, in this case, the progressive uses the helping verb to be. So, will be. You're always going to have that will be plus the main verb plus ing. Now, the first one, maybe it's a little trickier because I put it in the negative. I'd say, you know, I won't be sleeping soundly later tonight. I'm talking about a point a time in the future later tonight. And I'd say, you know, I won't be sleeping soundly later tonight. Usually because our our little girl wakes up quite often wanting, you know, wanting something to eat. She's just a little baby. But I could tell you, you know, I won't be sleeping soundly later tonight. Now, the next one, by the end of the year, this is when we're talking about that other point in time. Another by the end of the year, that is my point in time.

You will be speaking fluently. I think that you guys practice you, you know, you you practice with us, you work hard, by the end of the year, you will be speaking fluently. There is that form for you will be speaking. another point I I would say with some of these, like uh even that second one, um, I could say, you know, at this time next week, again, point in the future. At this time next week, I'll be doing another live lesson. True story. All right. At this time next week, next Saturday, I'll be doing another live lesson, and I hope you can join me for that lesson. So, we you often find the future progressive with a lot of these um these time phrases. by the end of next year. At this time next week, you're specifying that time and then talking about something that will be happening. All right. At this time next week, I'll be doing another live lesson and I really hope uh I'll I'll see you guys. Um so some of you said to answer it was a yes no question. It was closed in question, but Hong said yes, I will be joining your community. Thank you. Thank you for joining our community. Um let's see some other examples. Um, Lolly, at this time next year, I'll be improving my English. Excellent. I hope you will be improving your English with us. All right, Nelly, next week I'll be watching your live lesson. Perfect. I look forward to seeing you next week. Um, so again, those are some great examples of using the future progressive. Okay, here we go. All right. Present perfect progressive refers to actions that started in the past and have continued to the present. So I think uh before the present perfect, it has that connection with the present. When we're talking about the present perfect progressive, it's a continuous action. That is the key thing. It's an action that has continued to the present and will likely continue into the future. I will add that I will add that to this meaning. So it continues to the present and will likely continue into the future. And I could ask you um again a question using the present perfect progressive.

How have you been spending your free time? And in this case I'm talking about the more recent future. And you can use these words those words like lately or recently. When you see those words, often times you may you think of the perfect tense. Like, oh, I need to use the perfect tense. So, you could use that in your response. what? I've been doing what? Recently,

I've been doing what? All right. Let me know in the chat. That's my question. How have you been spending your free time? All right. What have you been doing? Uh, let's look at some examples. Okay. So, I'd say, I've been waiting for hours. All right, present perfect progressive. I've been waiting for hours. And this is another case where it's like, well, how do I know when should I use the present perfect or when should I use the present perfect progressive? In some cases, it has a very similar meaning, but sometimes there's just a small little nuance, the difference. So, for example, maybe let's say you're waiting for a bus and you're telling somebody, well, in the present perfect, I've waited for hours. Okay, that's perfectly fine. I've waited for hours. I think it's a little more appropriate and specific. This is where we get into like fluency of really expressing these small nuances that that people would use the present perfect progressive more often. I have been waiting for hours because it's continued up until the present and it's an action that will likely continue into the future. It makes me think like uh you know if somebody says I've waited for hours. It makes me think well perhaps the bus has now arrived. Perhaps like you've waited for hours and now the bus is here and you're going to get on it. Again, there's not enough information.

We don't know. I'm just talking about how we're you interpret some of these nuances between these verb tenses. But if you use I've been waiting for hours, that tells me, okay, if you're waiting for a bus, the bus is not here yet and you're probably going to keep waiting. If we want to use it for a question, has it been raining all day? All right. Again, has it been raining all day? You don't know if this is something that started in the past, has continued to the present, and will continue into the future. I forgot to mention mention the construction. So, remember, we're talking about the present perfect. So, we're using have. We're talking about the progressive. So, we're we're using the past participle of the verb to be.

So, I have been the verb and ing. Okay. So, again, as we get into these more challenging verb tenses, the grammar does become a little trickier. So, again, you're using I have, he has, the past participle of the verb to be, which is been, have been, has been, and then the verb plus ing. I've been waiting or a question. Has it been raining? I hope uh that that that is easy to follow. And my last example, again, just using us as an example, I could say we've been teaching on YouTube for 2 and 1/2 years. That's true. We started the channel in February of 2017. So, I could say as of now, we've been teaching on YouTube for 2 and 1/2 years. And because I'm using the present progressive, it's continued up until now, and it's going to continue into the future. Um especially because I told you that we will we will do another live at this time next week. I will be doing another live lesson. So it will continue into the future. Um so let's look at some of your examples. Okay. I had asked you guys the question um you know what what have you how have you been spending your free time? Okay. And somebody said um Estella I've been spending my free time watching your videos. Thank you Estella. Excellent.

Um, I've been, uh, Esther, I've been trying for months to win the race. Okay, maybe. Yeah, you're involved in some kind of race competition. I've been trying to do this for months. Um, uh, Zakiya said he has been writing a poem for five hours. Perfect. Okay. Present perfect progressive. started in the past, continues to the future, and will likely continue um into uh into the future. All right, continues to the present and will continue in the future. Em uh wait a second, I lost it. I've been teaching biology for 26 years. Again, when you see that for for and since, often times you use the perfect tense. Okay? Uh even though that's not always the case, but again when you talk about for a duration of time or since a specific time, you often use it with a perfect tense. Um he has been shafy. He has been working for eight years.

Excellent. You guys are rocking these examples. Perfect. So um I also wanted to tell you guys again if you guys like what we do here at Interactive English, want to show us some love, want to show us some support, you can check out our Patreon page. I will leave a link in the description down below and I will also leave a link right here in the chat if you guys want to check that out. It's another good way to connect with us. We have some cool rewards up there. Um, and again, yeah, feel free check that out.

Now, we're we're going to get into more verb tenses that are more difficult and probably, you know, less commonly used. Even though you will you may hear this uh when you're watching a TV show, watching a movie, I'm not I'm not telling you that you should not use these, but this is a little more advanced grammar um these verb tenses. So, we're talking about the past perfect. And the past perfect, again, the perfect tense, it refers to two actions in the past and shows that one happened before the other. So remember the present perfect again we're talking about an action in the past that has a connection to the present. The past perfect is an action in the past that has a connection with another action in the past. So for example uh again my question this is not a good question. I just couldn't think of anything but it said okay before you left the house this morning what had you eaten? All right, left for work. So the event that happened before is the one in which you will use the past perfect. And again the past perfect tense we're talking about the helping verb uh or have. All right? And the past which is had plus the past participle. So had plus the past participle had left. Um, now again, if you're talking about some of the differences between past perfect and past simple, now if we change that to the past simple and I said, when you knocked on the door, I left for work. That makes me think, well, that those two things happened at about the same time. Right when you knocked on the door, I left for work. But in this case, that's not that's not what we want to explain. You want to say that this thing happened before. I had already left for work. I could say she felt great yesterday. That is my point in the past because she had slept well the night before. Again, she felt great yesterday.

What happened before that? That's my past perfect. She had slept well the night before. And then this last one. All right. I just look ridiculous. I thought I'd share that with you. When this picture was taken. All right. Uh that at that point in the past, I had not fixed my hair. I hadn't fixed my hair. You can use that contraction. Had not hadn't. I hadn't fixed my hair. Okay. Um, let's see what else. Um, do you have any others? I asked you guys about eating uh before you left the house. Anything? Uh, tomorrow I had already eaten a fried egg before my mom came home. All right, perfect. Again, you're talking about those two points in the past. And remember, the one that happened the earliest, the one that came before, that is the past perfect. That's the one that you want to use the past perfect with.

Let's look at the next verb tense, which is the past perfect progressive. Okay, now we're now we're really getting into it. So remember, two events in the past, but the one continued to that other event. All right? Uh, so I could ask you a question. Had you been waiting long before this lesson started? Okay. So again, give me an answer in the past perfect using the past perfect progressive. I had been waiting for what what amount of time before the lesson started. So again, you often find the past progressive with these other um dependent clauses. When you talk about well, before, after, while there's usually a dependent clause which is going to tell you the that one point in the past and then you will refer to the next thing. So for example, when you interrupted our conversation, that is something that happened in the past.

Interrupted. When you interrupted our conversation, again, that's the dependent clause. what had h what was happening before it and continued. I he had been talking nonstop. All right, that's just an example. Hopefully, maybe you can put a picture in your mind too thinking about some situation. You know, when you interrupted our conversation, he had been talking nonstop. Okay, he started in the past and continued up until the point when you interrupted the conversation. Past perfect progressive. When I started this lesson, people had been talking in the chat for several minutes. All right. When I when I started this lesson, that's my point. In the past, people had been talking in the chat for several minutes. They started several minutes beforehand and continued to the point that I started the lesson.

So again, it's easy. Try to think about it like a timeline. Again, past, perfect, progressive. two points in the past, one continues up until the other one. Um, all right. Uh, Kareem said, "I had been waiting for a while when this lesson started." Okay. Sorry to keep you waiting, Karen. Um, Ka said, "I had been waiting for 10 minutes before the lesson started." Excellent. Excellent use of the past perfect progressive had been. Main verb ing. Now, let's look at the future perfect. Okay, the these are these are tenses that are are not as common. Um, but the future perfect refers to two actions in the future and shows that one happened before the other. So the the idea is the same as the past perfect except we're taking the two events and we're moving them to the future. So for example, um my question to you and I want you to answer using the future perfect. What will you have accomplished before this weekend is over? Right now, I think for most of you, it's Saturday. It's still Saturday, but before the weekend is over. All right, on Sunday, what will you have accomplished? Okay, so that is my point in the future is before the weekend's over. Now, I'm asking you about an action before that. What will you have accomplished before the weekend is over? That's my question. Write your answer in the chat or the comments using the future perfect. So, here are some other examples. Um, I started out with a question right here. Will you have eaten when we meet? Will you have eaten when we meet later this evening? So, perhaps we're we're having a conversation. I am going to meet you later tonight. And maybe I want to know, hey, should we go get dinner? So, I might ask you, hey, you know, will you have eaten when we meet later this evening? later this evening is the point in time in the future. And will you have eaten?

That would have happened before. Uh will will you have I'm sorry, can't even speak anymore. Will you have eaten when we meet later this evening? So, um again, future perfect uh we have that we're using the future will. All right? plus that have because we're talking about the um perfect tense will have plus the past participle. If you're wondering about how this is construction, will have plus the past participle. Will have eaten, will have gone, will have danced, will have played. And my other example, by the time you go to bed tomorrow, tomorrow night, by the time you go to bed, I will have changed several diapers. Many of you know we have a little baby girl, so this is a true story. I will have changed several diapers. And that is just a goofy picture of me holding up some diapers. And those are not the diapers that we use. We don't use those diapers, of course. That's just an illustration. Um so again, I asked you guys the question, um what will you have accomplished before the weekend is over? Um so yeah mono check check one saying I will you would say I will have read the book before my vacation um before my vacation ends. All right I will have read a book before my vacation ends. That's what uh that's the the the correct construction you want. So, Lai, I will uh I will have I will have done remember the past participle. I will have done my homework before Tuesday. Before Tuesday arrives, I will have done my homework. All right. Um I Mrs. Reluctant. I will not have accomplished much. Okay, I like I appreciate your candor. That is a great example sentence. Thank you for sharing with us. I will not have accomplished much. It's a direct answer to that question. Let's look at the the next one, the future perfect progressive. It refers to an action that will start in the future and continue to another point in the future. Again, we're talking about those two actions in the future, but one's going to continue to the other one. It has that relationship, that connection with the future action. And once again, this is definitely more advanced grammar, the future perfect progressive uh because we again we use them a lot with those those um those dependent clauses before, after, when, while, by the time like my question, by the end of the month, how long will you have been living in your place? I want you to practice using this tense. Now, it doesn't have to be exactly the end of the month. You can talk about the end of the year, the end of the month, like I will have been living here for how long. Okay? I just want you to practice. So again, I'm talking about how long will you have been living in your place? If you live in an apartment, if you live in a home, you know, by the end of some time. All right? How long will you have been living there?

All right? Try to give me a sentence in the chat in the comments using the future perfect progressive and answering that question. By the end of some time, I will have been living here for what whatever amount. All right, that would be the correct construction of that sentence. Here are some more examples. All right. that should I'm sorry, that's a typo. Once it should say once it gets to 4:30. All right. I It's almost 4:30 for me right now. Right now, it's 4:19, but once it gets to 4:30 p.m., I will have been working for 6 and a half hours. All right, 4 4:30 is in the future. We're not there yet. But the other point, I will have been working. Okay, because I'm working now. I'm going to continue working. Uh if it gets to that point and I'm still working, I would I will have been working for six and a half hours.

Saturdays are kind of a busy day for me. I know many of for many of you it's the weekend for me. It's a bit of a busy day. And then the last one by 2067. All right, that is that point way in the future. All right, we will have been teaching on YouTube for 50 years. That will be our golden anniversary 2067. We will have been teaching on YouTube for 50 years. And I hope all of you will still be studying with us in 2067. Don't know if I'll make it there because in 2067 I will be 89 years old. All right. Um that's that's a that's a long ways uh from now. So let me see. Do you guys have any examples um about where you will? Diama says, "Um, by the end of the month, I will have been living where I am now for my whole life." All right. I will have been living here for my entire life. Okay.

Excellent. Um, Saddam, Saddam, uh, by the end of this month, I will have been living here for two months. Excellent. Great use of the future perfect progressive. Uh, Rohan, by the end of the year, I'll have been living here for 16 years. Excellent. Uh, Ramasa, by the end of this month, I will have been playing games for one for one hour. Okay. Uh, say, um, where is it? Where'd it go? Um, I will have been living in my place for three years by the end of this month. Excellent. Great use of the future perfect. So, whoa. That that we we covered a lot today. Those are all 12 verb tenses. I hope that the lesson was easy to follow, easy to understand. I hope you got some good practice in because that's what we want. I want you guys to interact with our lessons and practice and practice and practice especially because next week we are going to do a live lesson which is going to be a quiz. And guess what that quiz will be about? Yes, it will be about the 12 verb tenses. So now that you have learned the verb tenses, next week I am going to do a quiz live lesson using these different verb tenses. So, I hope that you will join me for that. Thank you guys so much for watching uh this lesson. I hope that you learned something new. Please, if you haven't, usually I ask you guys already, hit that like button if you enjoy learning with us and and enjoy what we do here at Interactive English. Show us some love. Hit that like button. Write to us in the comments. We love hearing from you guys. And uh again, you can check us out on social media. We are on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram. It is another way to connect with all of us.

Thank you guys so much. Thank you uh Romesa uh Oda Bet Angela Diamansan Rasa Lai Christina Saz Camila. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. Uh I hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend. Have a wonderful day and I will see you next time. So long.

LEARN ANIMAL VOCABULARY AT THE ZOO

Today's lesson is all about animals. Yea, that's a dog. I don't know why I showed that to you, but... he was pretty cute. We're not just going to tell you about the animals, we are going to try to show them to you. And what better place to teach you about animals than going to the zoo? These guys are emus and they're quite big. Ostrich Otter Wes: Are they a couple, you think? Are they making out? Ioana: Possibly. I was just attacked by a butterfly. That is an alligator. Iguana This is an Argentine horn frog, that looks a little like a pile of poop. This is a marmoset. It's really cute.

So cute, they're so cute! This kind of snake is called an anaconda. They're huge. This little guy is a clown fish. This guy who looks a little angry is an eel. Stingray Wes in the background: It thinks you have something for him These are bats. These are called children. They can be very dangerous. This guy right there is a swan. He's a black swan. This guy is a kangaroo. Look at him! Wallaby He's a peacock. Polar bears Seals Goats Penguins These guys are lemurs Lions This guy right here is a hyena. This is a gorilla. This is a giraffe. These guys are meerkats. Rhinoceros These are flamingos. They are pink and noisy, apparently.

Where else can you go to find animals? The zoo cafe! He's a gecko. That's what I wanted! He has the cat, you have the gecko. This is a little turtle, a little baby turtle. He doesn't move much. Guinea pig Animals everywhere This is a parrot. I'm visibly stressed. This guy does not want to be quiet. It's a bunny. Ioana in the background: Look at the ears! Why are they so lopsided? Tea, cappuccino, lizard. Only at the Zoo Cafe I hope you enjoyed the video about the animals at the zoo. If you like the video, please give us a thumbs up. Also remember to subscribe to our channel for more videos to practice and improve your English.

And finally, in the comments below, we want you to tell us about your favorite animal or you can tell us about an animal that is common where you live. We just want to hear from you. Thank you and we'll see you next time. Bye!

LEARN SUBJECT-VERB AGREEMENT | Advanced Grammar

so today I am going to talk to you about a very useful way that you can improve your grammar skills that's coming up [Music] welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English which is the place that you want to be if you are looking to practice and improve your English skills and today I'm gonna talk to you about ways that you can improve your grammar and this is relevant if you are a beginner learner of English and it is relevant if you are advanced in your English skills this is very useful and what I want to talk to you about is this we're going to discuss subject and verb agreement now the reason this is useful for everyone is because well we use this all the time if we are speaking and we are writing you have a you have a verb and they must agree with each other it is very very very important now Before we jump into this lesson I'd like to hear from all of you guys I'd like you to write your name in the chat in the comments tell me where you're from I just love hearing from all of you welcome to sell a mono lot. you lisa farhat Valentina excellent glad to have you guys with me today and let's just get right into it we're talking about subject and verb agreement so we're gonna start out a little simple and then we're gonna get a little more difficult because this is not this is not just a simple subject okay this is something that that's can be very easy it can also be very difficult and I'm gonna scatter some tips in there and then at the end we are going to practice what we've learned today so I hope you guys are ready so let's just start out with basic subject verb agreement now subject-verb agreement if we have one subject or one pronoun then we are talking about a using a singular verb so for example when you think of one subject when you think of one pronoun think of he/she/it and if the verb is go he goes she goes it goes goes would be our singular verb all right now if we're talking about a subject that is two or more nouns or pronouns then we're gonna use a plural verb and when I think of two or more subjects think of like we or they we go they go so go in the present simple that would be our plural verb now I know what you're thinking like oh okay I know this this is easy I promise you it is gonna get a little trickier because again when it comes to subjects and verbs it can get a little confusing sometimes so let's talk about I'm gonna go show you some of the different ways in which we use subject and verb agreement and then like I said we are going to practice so let's start by looking at this right here which is connected nouns or pronouns now for subjects of two or more nouns and pronouns connected by and you need to use the plural verb and this is simple this is because you have one subject and another subject that's two or more so for example I have some example sentences here for you guys Wes and Jana are awesome English teachers yes Wes is a subject and you wanna another subject so we're going to use the plural form are Wes and you want to are awesome English teachers we are also very modest too so the next sentence dogs and cats are great pets we have different subjects connected by and we use the plural form easy enough let's continue now for subjects of two or more singular nouns or pronouns connected by or or nor use the singular verb okay so here is another example sentence for you guys Wes or you wanna teaches the live lesson so each week Wes aurilla wanna teaches the live lesson not both of us we're talking about Wes a singular subject you wanna or you wanna a singular subject so we're going to use a singular verb or and it's the same with nor now the one thing I want to tell you about or and nor is that to me it sometimes is a little awkward when you have this is the subject like Wes or you wanna many times it's used with an indefinite pronoun either or neither okay so you would say like either Wes or you wanna neither Wes nor you wanna we are going to talk about those indefinite pronouns a little later but I think that's a little more common if you are writing or if you are speaking English but keep this in mind okay if you have a singular noun or pronoun and we're using or or nor it's going to be a singular verb okay let's look at compound subjects so a compound subject is talking about you know you have different subjects one of the subjects might be singular one of the subjects might be plural so when both a singular and plural noun or pronoun are joined by or or nor the verb should agree with the subject that is near to the verb I'm gonna say that again because this is when it can get tricky and more advanced and more difficult the verb should agree with the subject that is nearer the verb even if you add those indefinite pronouns before it's still the same neither Wes nor the students play video games neither the students nor Wes okay neither Wes nor the students play video games I think I may have misspoken or neither the students nor Wes plays video games okay it doesn't matter you're going the verb should agree with the subject that is nearer with the subject that is closest now let me this is where it can get confusing but I want to also clear things up a little bit because I think it's useful if you are writing or even if you're speaking and you're using or or nor and you have a compound subject I think it's easier to just put the plural subject at the end put the plural subject second make that one closest to the verb and I think it just sounds more natural and you're gonna just you you will eliminate some awkwardness with whenever if you are writing or even if you're speaking if you just go ahead and put the plural subject closest to the verb because when we're talking about compound you're using or nor your listing different subjects and I think the mind when you have multiple subjects it automatically wants to gravitate towards a plural verb so I think just to eliminate awkwardness go ahead and put the plural nearest to the verb I think that is perfectly fine okay now let's continue talking about compound subjects this can also be tricky okay when it describes a single person or thing use a singular verb so sometimes when we're talking about common compound subjects we're still talking about one thing or one person and in this case you want to use the singular verb here's a perfect these are two perfect examples so spaghetti and meatballs when you think of spaghetti and meatballs you know most people don't think of them as separate things you think of it as one meal one dish spaghetti and meatballs is my favorite meal okay spaghetti and meatballs that's our compound subject now here's another one and this one I'm talking about one person all right my beautiful wife and my best friend this is Johanna my beautiful wife and my bet my beautiful wife and best friend loves to travel so this here I know this can be a little challenging because maybe you don't know the context but I'm telling you I'm talking about the same person and if I'm talking about the same person then we are going to use the singular verb my beautiful wife and best friend loves to travel now if your beautiful wife and best friend are two different people then that changes that changes the verb then you would use a plural verb but in this case I'm talking about you Anna my beautiful wife and best friend okay so let's let's let's quickly look at a tip alright a subject and verb tip that I think is useful and very relevant to you guys and that tip is keep subject verb agreement in mind when you are speaking so when I say this I don't mean that when you're having a conversation you're probably not going to stop and think okay well here's my subject here's my verb am I saying it correctly all right what I say keep it in mind is that these are the times when people make simple mistakes with subject verb agreement even advanced learners I will hear them say something just in conversation and they'd be like oh he go or she do and I know what they're trying to say it doesn't impede my understanding of what they want to say but I still understand that is like okay that's a small mistake so you need to keep that in mind because this is when people again when speaking and they're going fast and you don't have time to stop and reflect on the grammar that you're using they make some common simple mistakes and the best way to eliminate those mistakes is again just to practice practice and practice and expose yourself to the language and the more you expose yourself to the language and you hear or you read the grammar being used correctly then you will start using that grammar correctly then when you are producing the language in speaking and writing all right so again if you're just joining us we are talking about subject verb agreement and I'm going over some of the different ways in which we use subject verb agreement so let's continue next I want to talk about this right here which is information that is between the subject and the verb so you could have a phrase or clause most likely an adjective phrase or clause between the subject and verb but that does not change the number of the subject it doesn't matter alright the subject and verb must agree doesn't matter what comes in between them so Wes who loves to eat cookies alright that that's true needs to cut back on the sweets okay so here is information between the subject Wes and the verb needs but it doesn't change the number it's still a singular subject so we're going to use the singular verb needs now let's look at what I was mentioned what I mentioned before which is singular indefinite pronouns and again this is when it can get a little trickier and this is where we just need more practice and practice and practice because these singular indefinite pronouns right here will take singular verbs each either neither no 1 anybody anyone something someone everyone everyone everything there are more of these I just didn't include all of them because I didn't want to clutter up the screen but singular indefinite pronouns they take on a singular verb so here's my example sentence we hope that everyone hits the thumbs up button all right if you know subject and verb agreement so even right now if you are watching this I want you to hit that like button hit that thumbs up button if you understand subject verb agreement and and this is easy to follow because I hope this is easy for you to follow and understand and that's going to help you in the future because like I said subject verb agreement is a lot it's not just a small simple subject there's a lot of information and it's always good to practice and practice and practice so please hit that like button so I know that mmm ok you guys are following what I'm saying you understand the information so singular indefinite pronouns they take that singular verb now if we're talking about plural indefinite pronouns then they take a plural verb and here are some of those some of the most common ones right here so several few both many if you just use these words as your pronoun they are going to take a plural verb perfect example sentence which is something you might hear and movies or on TV many have tried and few have succeeded now all I have right there is the pronoun many I don't know I you can assume it's talking about people but you don't have to say that many people have tried and few people have succeeded so when we use those plural pronouns many few we're going to use the plural verb have okay many have few have and I just love that picture down there I don't know why I just thought it was very funny okay so now let's talk about some indefinite pronouns that can be either plural or singular and again this is where it gets a little more advanced because the some of these pronouns like these five right here depending on how they're used they may be singular or they may be plural so we have five of them some any none all most often when you see these it's going to be followed by of some of hmm none of em most of em hmm and then that's going to help us determine whether we're going to use a singular verb or a plural verb because if what follows all right if it's uncountable then we are going to use a singular verb if it's followed by a countable noun then we're gonna use a plural verb so here are some examples for you and I just said some of the water is on the table okay some of the water water is uncountable so I use the singular verb is some of the plates are on the table plates are countable so we're gonna use the plural for verb are alright so this is another time where it gets a little tricky and you just have to be aware that okay is the noun uncountable or is it countable so let's look at tip number two the next tip I want to tell you is if you're looking at this if you're watching this saying well what is the best way to improve subject-verb agreement then I would tell you this right here read read and read some more reading is so so so so so important when it comes to improving your grammar skills because you are actually seeing the correct grammar you are seeing it used correctly all right and that is so important so I would always encourage you that if you are looking to improve your grammar skills especially subject verb agreement read because even like they say I'll tell you something in marketing they say that people need to see something over 10 times before it starts influencing the way they think and I think that's the same with language if you study a grammar concept or you study subject verb once you might think oh I understand this but that doesn't mean that you're going to remember it so if you read if you expose yourself to the language and you see how the grammar is used correctly if you're talking about these indefinite pronouns if you're taught if you're talking about the singular pronouns the plural pronouns it's the information is going to start seeping in your brain and then the next time you are having a conversation or the next time you are writing an email you'll just start using it correctly so read read and read some more now let's continue and talk about some other ways that we can use subject verb agreement and then we're gonna practice all right so let's talk about this right here which are inverted subjects so if we're talking about inverted subjects we're starting the sentence with there or sometimes if we're using a question you might say how many or how much and the reason I say it's inverted is because in the in this case the verb comes before the subject alright but the verb must still the the the subject must agree with the verb so let's look at and I just love that picture so I could say there is a kitten at the door all right and we're using there when we use there it's just basically saying something exists so there is a kitten at the door kitten is singular it's a singular subject so we're unit we're going to use the singular verb is is a kitten now if there's more than one I could say there are cats at the door cats plural so we use the plural verb are okay so in this case nothing changes you just need to be aware that the singular verb singular subjects go with singular nouns plural subjects go with plural nouns let's look at collective nouns so these are nouns that imply more than one person but it takes a sit takes a singular verb and these aren't all of them these are just some there are there are more collective nouns but if I'm talking about the noun group okay just the meaning of the word group you think of there it's talking about more than one however group is a collective noun that takes on a singular verb group jury crowd team okay if we can still make these collective nouns plural by adding an S and so if we said groups then we'd have a plural verb okay but just that collective noun group it's going to take on the singular verb and I gave that example sentence the team plays in the world cup so I'm talking about team that is a collective noun even though the team it consists of maybe many different people but in this case we're going to use the singular verb the team plays in the world cup and I imagine some of you right now are out there watching the world cup and cheering for your team and I don't even want to talk about the US and there old cup very disappointed not in it obviously but let's move on so the next one I want to talk to you about is when we are using number of okay so if we say learned okay so here is my first question and I want you to write the answer in the chat or write the answer in the comments even if you're watching this lesson later on I want you to use the comment section as like your piece of paper write the answers all of them and then you can hit comment at the end so that way I know that you were participating that you were interacting with the lesson so here's the first question right here everybody hmm to answer this question okay I gave you the verb to need I gave you the infinitive form of the verb and I want you to write are we going to use the singular verb or the plural verb everybody mmm to answer this question what do you guys think all right I see a lot of great answers in there so yes you would say we would say oh all right a slight answer I had chosen the wrong one let me change this real quick so again if we're talking about this one here we go everyone everybody needs to answer this question all right I had the wrong slide up there before so this is the singular this is a singular indefinite pronoun everybody so it takes on the singular verb needs everybody needs to answer this question next all right there hmm a group of people in the elevator there hmm a group of people in the elevator all right so this is this is you know we're talking about an inverted subjects so what do you think again all right there mmm a group of people in the elevator all right I'm trying I'm starting a little easier and then it's gonna get a little little more difficult okay a little more difficult so all right there mmm a group of people in the elevator I think most of you got this again it's an inverted subject but we're also talking about that collective noun inverted subject with a singular collective noun group there is a group of people in the elevator and again we can take you could take people out of there you don't even you might not even need it there is a group in the elevator all right there is a group of people in the elevator group is a singular is a singular collective noun so we're going to use is the next question I have for you is this one peanut butter and jelly mmm the best peanut butter and jelly the best now this is I'm gonna give you a hint I want you to use that picture you know keep that picture in mind when you are answering this question okay this is kind of a cultural question as well because this right here is a very American thing so how would you say that peanut butter and jelly mmm the best keep that picture in mind when you are answering this question all right so I think this one could be a little confusing I wanted to give you that hint all right about keep that picture in mind because the reason I told you that is because I'm trying to talk about a compound subject that a compound subject peanut-butter-and-jelly that's describing a singular thing all right in America it's a very American thing we talk about peanut butter and jelly sometimes people will shorten it and say PB&J all right you'd say PB&J is the best all right it is a singular thing like spaghetti and meatballs many of you may not know that because again this is a very American thing a peanut butter and jelly sandwich is what it's talking about a sandwich peanut butter and jelly is the best because usually we don't just eat peanut butter and jelly separate its together it's on a sandwich alright next question okay is this one right here the number of changes to the law mmm staggering the number of changes to the law mmm staggering okay what do you guys think the number of changes to the law mmm staggering we just talked about that at the end remember that rule we said the number of vs. a number of so hopefully you told me if you said remember the number of goes with a singular verb the number of changes to the law is staggering the number of Changez is staggering okay so again this is excellent excellent practice for you guys and that is the best way when you are practicing and learning subject verb agreement as well as any other grammar application and I think these lessons are very useful because they're they're a bit longer and we can go into a little more detail when we're talking about certain subjects like this subject verb agreement now I have a question for all of you and that is what do you think is most difficult when it comes to English grammar I want you guys to write that in the comments okay write to us in the comments we want to hear from you what do you think is most difficult when it comes to English grammar because maybe we'll make a lesson about it in the future all right so I hope you guys enjoyed this lesson I hope that you found it useful if you did please hit that like button please share this video with others that are learning and want to practice and improve their English skills and again if there are other questions that you have please write those in the comments and as always be sure to join our social media classes so thank you so much you Lissa Amano Rosa Helena Bassam it's great to have you guys I'm happy you joined us Giselle thank you thank you thank you Robson for joining us I hope that you found this lesson useful and as always we will be back next Saturday for another awesome live lesson hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you next time bye

LEARN THE FUTURE TENSE | Will + (Be) Going To

all right hello hello hello what's up hope you're having a good Saturday a good weekend and if you're watching this some other time just hope you're having a good day so today we have a super special lesson for you I know I say that every time but this time I really mean it because we are going to talk to you about the future so this is it's a good time for this lesson because we just started a new year and I think many of us are thinking about the future the things that we want to do the things that we're planning so it's very relevant for this time of year and if you are joining us please in the chat say hello let me know where you're joining us from one hello good to have you here Isabella Shahan Jace hello denisa from Romania excellent we have people from all over the world good to have you guys here again today we're going to talk about right here the future and I know what you might be thinking maybe you're thinking well the future I know how to talk about the future we'll be going to I guarantee you stick around we are going to talk about some things that you probably haven't learned and things that even if you have learned them maybe you're not using them as often as you should because you just need more practice with it so as we go through each of these parts each part of this lesson I am gonna have you guys practice I'm going to ask you to write sentences and talk about the future tell me about your future who else Katya Mohammed great to have you guys long hello hello if I miss some of your comments I apologize but I'm going to try and and acknowledge these as we go through so again you're just joining us we are going to talk about the future so let's begin so first I want to look at this right here which is grammar the grammar and I know you're thinking gosh oh no more grammar I'm not going to get into the nitty bitty details of the grammar I'm mostly going to talk to you about these different tenses and when we use them so if we're talking about the future forms right here you can see them right along this side there are four different forms the simple future tense the future continuous the future perfect the future perfect continuous those are the four four forms that I'm going to go through each one and kind of tell you when to use them and we'll practice using them but we can also use this is very important because we use these all the time right down here we can use the simple present and the present continuous to talk about the future and we use those all the time so let's start talking about it so hello mohit pun hunka Pankaj George excellent Nordine great to have you guys here hope you're having a wonderful day and if you're just joining us again say what's up in the chat and even if you're watching this later on just write your name tell me where you're from we like hearing from you guys so first let's let's start out with something a bit easy which I think you guys are very familiar with and that is the simple future form using will alright so when we're using will you're just going to use the subject will plus the base verb alright and we use this all the time - for example we use this like the first one to make predictions okay like maybe we'll say I think it'll rain tomorrow and usually that prediction is about you know maybe 50% alright we're not completely sure we're talking about you know a prediction what we think will happen I think it'll rain tomorrow we so use this and this is important right here right this one a spontaneous decision now I know that many times will ask questions and your choices will or be going to when it's a spontaneous decision you just want to use will will will will will so for example I gave you that example there's a knock on the door and you would say I'll get it alright I will get it because when you're using going to we'll talk about in the set that in just a moment it's more of a plan something you have decided to do alright nobody knows that that somebody's going to knock on the door or maybe they don't know that the phone is going to ring it's a spontaneous decision so we are going to use will I'll get it in the chat in the comments I have a question for you using will I want you to tell me um what will what will you do tomorrow all right let's practice using these already so give me give me a sentence a full sentence all right what will you do tomorrow all right what will you do tomorrow let everybody know let each other know what what's going on in our lives what will you do tomorrow tomorrow tomorrow is Sunday I'll be teaching well I'll teach a class tomorrow all right I'm going I will teach a class tomorrow on Sunday yes so let us know what will you do tomorrow let us know in the chat also if you're watching this later use the comments use it as a whiteboard if participate you know answer these questions and just write your answers in the comments what will you do tomorrow it's also used will is used right here to express want or willingness willingness to do something so somebody might tell you yeah I will help you with the project all right willingness to do this I'll help you with the project I'll help you with your homework I'll help want to use will not or won't it's the same it's interchangeable it's up to you usually when speaking a lot of people will just use contractions because it just makes things simpler he won't eat his vegetables and I put that sentence in there for me because that describes me that yeah I don't eat as many vegetables as I should but that is one of my new year's resolutions I'm hoping that I will eat more vegetables this year all right so those are the times that we use will making prediction spontaneous decisions you're expressing some willingness and maybe to refuse something talk about something you will not do I won't do this I won't do that okay so now let's look at B going to write here okay so we use B going to also it's the same like will you can make predictions accept would be going to a slight difference and again this is just a very slight nuance might be something that is a like prediction something that is likely to happen I think it's going to rain tomorrow maybe around you know you're 75 percent confident in that you really think it's going to rain a likely prediction but for will and B going to you can use both of them to make predictions but we also use B going to to talk about plans all right what it what are you going to do remember that with B going to the only thing that is going to be conjugated is the verb to be so with our subject I am going to he she it is going to they are going to that's the only thing we're going to conjugate is the verb to be so now let's let's practice this one okay so I want you to tell me again talk about plans something that you're planning to do it's not a spontaneous decision I want you to tell me what are you going to do next week what are you going to do next week and I want you to write that in the comments all right so tell me what are you going to do next week talk about something that's a plan all right something that you know is going to happen and one thing I would say about will and B going to that I think most when most students when most learners they study these I think most people have a tendency to just use will because it's easier it's easier to remember and I think people tend to over rely on will but it is good to switch it up we talk about the future all the time it's good to try and use both of them especially that's why I want to go over these so you know when it's more appropriate to use will and when it's more appropriate to use be going to so be going to again they're good it's good to talk about plans I am for example I'm going to the doctor's next week that is a plan you know it's going to happen you are talking about something you are to do so again if you're just joining us we're talking about the future and how to use and discuss the future and I'm asking you guys to practice with us so if you guys are just joining us hello and welcome and write your responses in the comments so I asked you tell me what are you going to do next week and I want you to use that and write a whole sentence I'm going to go trekking next week excellent thank you thank you I'm going to study more next week all right perfect all right I'm going to visit a friend in the countryside excellent I'm going to go to the dentist nice with the negative somebody asked about the negative you would just use with not I am NOT going to and the negative I didn't put an example on there it would go in between the verb to be and going to I'm not going to do this I'm not going to the doctors next week would be the negative form the last thing I want to tell you about going to is the pronunciation tip all right when it's followed by the base verb okay it can be reduced to gonna alright so for example look at that sentence I'm going to the doctors next week we cannot reduce that going to because it's not followed by a verb you can't say I'm gonna do the doctors no no no no no it has to be followed by a base verb if we want to reduce this when we're speaking so you could say I'm going to go to the doctors all right and then reduce it I'm gonna go the doctors okay so that is a pronunciation tip we can reduce it with gonna and remember this is a this is a pet peeve of mine something that I'm always trying to tell people to do this is for speaking alright try not to write these reductions this is just for speaking and for your listening practice it's always good just use it for speaking if you can so excellent thank you guys for writing all those sentences now let's continue and talk about getting into a little more advanced grammar and because it's a little more advanced it's not as common so we use will and be going to all the time to talk about the future but we also use some of these other forms like this the future continuous and we use the future continuous to talk about an unfinished action at some point in the future and I tried to give you this it's right down here yes right down there that little arrow so it gives you maybe a little bit of a visual that you have now and then you have that future action marked with the X and those arrows kind of showing that it that it's continuous okay it's an unfinished action and typically you're talking about you know at some point again at some point in the future so for example that first sentence alright I'll be doing my homework later this evening I'll be doing my homework later this evening in all of these examples I'm giving you a time expression so and I'm giving you these time expressions so you know how it's connected so I'll be doing my homework later this evening usually in a conversation somebody might just ask you you know what are you doing later what are you doing later this evening and then you would just respond with the future continuous you don't have to say the time Express the time expression again you would just say

I'll be doing my homework okay so my question to you and I want you guys to practice the future continuous and when I mean future continuous I didn't explain the grammar I'm talking about all right you're you're using will all right plus the verb to be all right plus the base verb and the ing I will be mmm all right he is all right I'll be doing homework so for example future continuous with will I will be what all right that the verb base verb plus the ing I will be doing I will be running I will be dancing I will be singing so in the chat I have a question for you what what are you doing later this evening what are you doing later this evening that is your point in time this evening okay what action is going to be is going to happen this evening at that time all right so write your answers in the chat again sometimes I'll be keeping learning again remember you just want the base verb in the ing I'll be learning English boom alright done I'll be meeting my teacher this evening perfect excellent thank you guys so again write to it write it in the chat share with us again it's always good to practice here is another example again I'm giving you the time expression this summer so that is our point in the future this summer will be relaxing on a beach in Thailand that is our continuous action as much as I wish that were true I can't say that we will be in a be on a beach in Thailand this summer I would like to be on a beach in Thailand this summer but just as an example I could say this summer will be relaxing on a beach in Thailand and that could be a response to a question you know what what are you doing this summer well this summer will be relaxing on a beach in Thailand again if we want to use a week the same be going to with the future continuous we're using the subject the verb to be going to he he is going to and then again we need that base verb to be be and then work and the ing he is going to be working his butt off before leaving for vacation so before leaving for vacation that is our point in the future all right he is going to be working his butt off so you knew you need be going to plus the verb to be alright our helping verb plus the base verb plus ing I am going to be working I'm going to be running I am going to be dancing I am going to be teaching tomorrow night I'm going to be teaching English tomorrow night alright so again this is the future continued tenuous talking about some point in the future all right excellent so in summer it will be raining in Thailand yeah all right yes all right maybe it probably maybe it will be raining in Thailand I will be applying for a new job next week excellent all right they'll be moving into a new house this year great great great sentences thank you guys writing this is good practice to be using this so this is when we use the future continuous now let's look at the future perfect okay I'm going to start out by telling you that these next two the future perfect and the future perfect continuous they're not super common we don't use these forms all the time I'm trying to think if I had to think of the last time I used the future perfect or the future perfect continuous it may it may have been last week or last month it's not something that we use often but it is good to learn because this will help us with your fluency as well as with listening if you are listening to music or TV it gives you a better understanding of the situation and what's happening so we use the future perfect to talk about a completed action in the future all right and it is important to note right here okay it is often used with a time expression because when we're talking about the perfect tense we're talking about a some point I like to say it has a relationship with another point and that other point could be in the future the past but it's these two different time periods two different points in time that some sort of relationship so this is often used with a time expression so let's look at that first example sentence by September alright she will have been with the company for six years we're talking about a duration of time here for six years so by September that's our our point in the future what will what will she have completed she will have been with the company for six years okay so you could say again talk about some point in the future what action will you have completed all right by this time I will have done this okay I will have all right plus the past participle I will have done I will have gone I will have run there's a lot of different options so let's practice this again in the chat or even if you're watching this later write your answer in the comments write to us let us know my question to you is by next by the end of this month alright by the end of this month tell me something you will have done okay by the end of this month I will have what okay let me know write your answer so I'm giving you your point in the future by the end of this month alright now tell me about a future action that you will have completed between now and the end of this month by the end of this month I will have bought a car or something like that okay there's a lot of different examples something that you will have completed so tell me right right an example sentence in the comments and I will look through them so what will you have done by the end of this month and that other sentence for example by the time all right we will have finished eating by the time you arrive by the time is a adverb phrase of time and when we see by the time you should think perfect tense all right we're using the perfect tense so in the future by the time you arrive that's our point in the future okay well what will have been completed we will have finished eating by the time you arrive we will have finished eating that is our finished our completed action and then last one if it like the little book says exam at the end of the week okay so that is our point in time all right what will have been completed by then I will have finished the book by then all right so if somebody says all your exams at the end of the week well I will have finished the book by then I will have finished it's going to be completed so again I'm just trying to give you those time expressions to make it a little easier to follow when we're talking about the action that will be completed in the future so let's look and see some of your examples so lots of excellent by the end of this by the end of this lesson I will have learnt the future perfect continuous condition yes okay by the end of this month I will have finished my upper intermediate level perfect by the end of this month I will have finished enjoying my vacation okay good example sentence Mike I will have done all my exams by the end of this month excellent you guys you've got it so you're talking about that point in the future what will have been finished by that time so again this is this is great practice now let's look at the next part which is something that is probably even less commonly used which is the future perfect continuous I've talked to other you know English instructors and you have this debate about oh should we even teach the future perfect continuous because we never really use it I I do think it is worth teaching I don't think people have to spend a ton of time on it because again it's not common it's not common that we use this tenses but just so you know what it is we use the future perfect tense is kind of like we are projecting ourselves into the future and then we're looking back at some unfinished action alright so hopefully maybe this little timeline down there will help you out so it's like you have your future action that big X we're projecting ourselves even further into the future all right and then we're kind of looking back at this unfinished action so for example that first example sentence when it gets to midnight maybe I'm thinking to myself like gosh when it gets to midnight I will have been waiting here for two hours so in this situation I'm waiting for somebody I'm waiting a long time and I'm thinking wow when it when it gets to midnight when it reaches midnight that's the point that I'm projecting myself towards to when it gets to midnight what's the unfinished action I will have been waiting here for two hours and we're talking about an action again it's continuous it started in the past it continued to this point in the future and when it gets to that projected point it will likely continue after that so I will have been waiting another good one and this is going to be our practice so by 2019 okay which is we're going to that point in the future 2019 all right I will have been studying English for five years so my question to you is by 2019 how long how long will you have been studying English alright how long will you have been studying English okay you are you started in the past you're studying now and when it gets to 2019 hopefully many of you or all of you will still be studying and practicing and improving your English skills so in the chat try you use this one see if you can practice using the future perfect continue by 2019 how long will will you have been studying English again very easy I will have been studying English for how long how many years how many months give us a time and even if you're watching this again like I said later on practice using practice writing these sentence in the comments treat it like a piece of paper like a whiteboard and just write those comments in there and practice these sentences it is good practice so again let me know how long you will have been studying English by 2019 I want to hear from you guys we've got some good excellent you guys have been writing some awesome example sentences so by 2018 I will have been studying English for three years perfect excellent by 2018 I will have been studying English for the rest of my life okay Hey practice makes perfect it's always good to keep practicing I think we are all lifelong learners by 2019 I will have been studying my English skills for one day more because I'll be done practicing all right well maybe by 2015 I will have been calling my wife maybe it's something you're always doing I will have been studying English for three months okay so again you're talking about that duration of time maybe three months to think about years because 2019 is twelve months from now you would have been studying longer than just three months because three months would have been that would be October of this come this year so it's always good it's a little more difficult to kind of grasp the future perfect continuous but it's good to practice so let's talk about something that is more common when we're using the future tense and that is the present simple I know that when most of you think about the present simple tense you're probably thinking about daily routines habits and yes that's something that we use the present the simple present with those things that you do all the time we also use it to talk about scheduled events all right to talk about scheduled event there should be an S on the end of event there so we use the present the simple present to talk about scheduled events these are things that there is a schedule there is a time some sort of timeframe involved and we're talking about it and we're using the simple present so for example look at that first example her plane arrives that is going to happen next week and I want you to use the simple present all right again you're talking about an event okay it could be a class it could be maybe a train or a bus that you're getting on or a party that you're going to use the simple present right an example sentence and talk about an event that is scheduled for sometime next week next Monday next Tuesday next Wednesday next Thursday next Friday okay so in the chat try practice using the simple present and talk about some scheduled event for next week again this is very very common we use this all the time when we're talking about these events the last thing I want to say about this is when we're talking about a scheduled event it's usually in the near term we're talking about something in the near future either later that same day either the next day or the next week could be something in the same month but you're typically talking about something in the the near future when you're talking about this scheduled event you're not going to talk about something 10 20 30 years that's going to happen so it's commonly used when we're talking about that so next Monday school begins again so exactly yeah school begins next Monday perfect excellent example sentence so again thank you guys if you're joining us we're talking about the future and different ways that we can talk about the future so school begins next Monday thank you for sharing with us Katya excellent let's look at this last one that I want to show you about which we use quite regularly as well and that is the present continuous again we're talking about a continuous action and we're talking about we use the present continuous to talk about planned arrangements all right for a future time so this is something in the future and this is a planned arrangement one thing that's different about this I would say is that when you're talking about a planned arrangement it's usually someone's planned arrangement okay something that someone has planned so again this is different from the simple present because we're talking about an event alright we're not talking about something that some of the is going to do because that would be their plans we're talking about with the simple present an event that's going to take place a party a trip or something like that with the planned arrangements with the present continuous it's more of you know something that somebody's doing so for example he is leaving work early tomorrow that is something that he has planned alright he's leaving work early tomorrow if we use the simple present in that he leaves work early that would make you think it's something he does every day if we use the present continuous alright he's leaving work early even if we don't even if we take out tomorrow and say yeah he's leaving work early it makes you think that okay it's something that hey that's going to happen but it's not something that's regular it's not something that happens all the time so he's leaving work early tomorrow the same with that other one I've given you that time expression to help you maybe make a little more sense if we're talking about a business trip that is coming up you can say yeah we're staying at a hotel alright we're staying in a hotel during next week's business trip all right usually in a conversation you already know the time that we're talking about you're talking about a business trip in the future a business trips next week and somebody might ask like oh well were you staying we're staying at a hotel you're talking about the trip that'll happen next week but you're going to use the present continuous we're staying at a hotel next we're staying in a hotel during next week's business trip and again sticking with next week maybe you're talking about your friend's wedding or something you say next week they're getting married on a beach in Thailand all right it's winter you know where my mind is right now it is on a beach in Thailand that would be nice but if somebody's asking about your friend's wedding they say Oh where's the wedding say oh they're getting married on a beach they're getting married on a beach they're getting married on a beach in Thailand again you're using the present continuous to talk about this Planned arrangement in the future okay this planned arrangement in the future some more acceptance more example sentences from you guys excellent we're leaving town we're leaving town this next year yeah that's great that's a good example sentence we're leaving town this next year you are leaving alright you are heading out of town so this is great this is great practice

I appreciate all your comments let's do you know if you've joined us a little late do a quick little review of what we talked about today we talked about we started easy to talk about the when to use will alright which is to make future make predictions spontaneous decision that is the key one right there that is definitely different than be going to when you're talking about spontaneous decision use will will will will will we also use it to express want or willingness or maybe to refuse something something that we are not going to do or will not do we won't do this for B going to we use it to make we can also use it to make predictions that are more likely going to happen but we're also use it to talk about plans again to something that you plan to do in the future alright I gave you that example sentence next week I'm going to the doctor's okay future continuous we're talking about an unfinished action at some point in the future okay you're talking about some point in the future I asked you guys what you will be doing later this evening and you gave me some excellent responses the future perfect is used to talk about a completed action in the future okay so if we said again for example by the time when we see by the time we think perfect tense all right we will have we will have finished eating by the time you arrived when you get there what what action is completed you finished eating the future perfect continuous again I said this is not very common we don't use this as much because we're using it to project ourselves into the future and then look back at some unfinished action and I asked you guys by 2019 how long will you have been studying English and you could have sinned you could have said I will have been studying English for five years ten years two years three years however long and that is often used with a time expression we use the future oftentimes to talk about scheduled events things that are scheduled events in the near term we could use the simple present to talk about these future events and for the present continuous we would use that to talk about planned arrangements that somebody might have all right so I said you know he's leaving he's leaving work early tomorrow we're staying at a hotel we're using the present continuous to talk about those future arrangements I know this was a lot to go over today I'm so happy you guys were we're joining were able to join me today and participate and like I said hopefully even if you're watching this later I hope you were writing some of those sentences it's always good to get practice and make it a more active lesson so please if you enjoyed this lesson hit that like button share it with your friends your classmates family members anybody you know who is trying to improve their English skills and as always if you have other questions or comments that I wasn't able to get to just write them write them in the comment section once the video is published and I'll try and get back to you and finally check out our social media classes do to do to do to do to do right down there Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat and right here on YouTube we're always putting up lessons to help you guys practice and improve your English skills so Katia denisa Dennis Edmund Adam thank you guys thank you thank you thank you Adrian great to have you here thanks so much for joining us Patricia long there's just so many of you in here right now it's excellent I'm so happy to see this class getting larger and larger and larger each week so I hope you guys have a wonderful weekend a great day and we will see you guys next time so long

LISTENING & SPEAKING ACTIVITY | Speak English on Your Own

Alright today, we have a super fun activity for you. It is a listening and speaking activity. That's coming up. So today's lesson, which is more of an activity, is going to help you guys practice your listening and speaking skills. So what I have for you is I have two different stories And what we'll do is I'm going to read one of the stories I will read it two times You will need to listen to the story and try to remember as many details as you can. After I read it twice, then I want you to pause the video and try to say it back and practice your speaking skills and see what you remember.

In order to help you remember, I'm going to put some clues up on the screen that you can use to try to remember those details and say them out loud when you repeat it. so I'm going to say the story twice and a helpful hint is As you're listening to these stories, try to put pictures in your mind Try to to imagine what it is that you are hearing because that's just going to help you remember. So Ioana is here. She is going to do the activity with you and listen to the stories as well and then try to remember the details So after you guys practice your speaking skills, and try to remember, You can see if it's the same as Ioana and if she remembers everything about my beautiful stories.

I'm nervous. Are you ready? I'm nervous because my listening skills are not the best. I'm more of a visual learner. And these stories are... Well the first one's okay, the first one's normal... The other one's maybe a little weird. Ok, I'm excited kind of. The first story is a little... it's a little longer, but I think it's It's okay. There's not as many... there's not too many details in it. Okay, so This is just the story again not about any person, but alright ready. Mm-hm. I All right, you got that Again, all right, you guys got all that ready? Here we go. I Okay, alright So I feel like this this could be a little easy for you because I feel like you can make some connections to some of the stuff that was being mentioned All right. so now what I want you guys to do is to pause the video and use these clues that you see up on the screen to Remember the story and try to repeat it And say as much as you can. Alright? Now that you have said the story and used those details, let's see how much Ioana remembers from this story. So... I feel like I forgot the middle All right the details, okay. Are you ready? Mm-hmm? So your story is about the summer time you're saying that you love the summer time And your favorite activity in the summer time is running along the beach And after that in the after that you come have a breakfast of toast and fruit and eggs whilst you read the newspaper Which is you like reading about politics

Now the errands that you do... that's the tricky part. The errands I thought were going to the Library and the farmers market, I think And something about going by the Golden Gate Park I'm very bad at this and at the end oh and then at the end you were talking about how you have a lot of free time in the summer because You are a teacher where you teach children, I mean you'll come back to your teaching job in the fall... teaching children. Yeah, this little inference at the end is Well yea- like the I went running along the beach running alongside the beach in the morning yeah, you got it: eating eggs and toast and fruit for breakfast and Local politics Local politics in which city in San Francisco? Yeah, Golden Gate Park. Yeah And I go walk through Golden Gate Park on the way back home in the afternoon. That's what I missed. Yeah Yeah, but that was pretty good... cause that was a little bit of a longer story. So hope you guys got all of that as well. That was good. Good job. Thank you. Now here is the second story which is a lot weirder, so Hopefully try to try to follow along as best as you can, Listen for the details and again try to create a picture in your mind. That might help you remember some of this. It does help. Are you ready? Okay, so here is my second story. All right ready? What image are you gonna put for this story? I don't know. I don't know... Use those images. I try, but... I'll read it one more time. This is a true story Ready?

Okay. All right, so Hopefully you can remember some of that weird crazy dream and now I want you to pause the video Use the details that are up there to try and retell the story with as many details as you can. Alright? I hope you guys were able to remember some of those details, remember some of that weird information, and now we're gonna see how much Ioana remembers using some of these clues. And the clues aren't super detailed, but hopefully... Are you ready? Yes. Here you go. Thank you. So Wes had a dream that he lived in Brazil and his job was as an uber driver and he picked up a passenger with with a purple and pink ski mask and He took him to the zoo The first animal he saw there, oh he fed he fed sushi to a polar bear and Then he helped a giraffe with

Bye!

LISTEN & LEARN | Build Vocabulary, Identify Key Details, Make Inferences

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is wes and this is interactive english the channel that is all about just trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today we're going to work on your listening because when you're learning a language listening is very important so we're gonna practice our listening skills and i'm going to have you listen to a couple of different sentences a couple of stories and we're going to use that to help you improve just your overall language skills which is why i titled listen and learn and we're going to work on identifying well learning new vocabulary and just when you hear a word that you don't know and trying to put that word in context and understand the meaning of that word we're also going to practice uh just identifying the main idea making sure you comprehend most of the most of what you hear we're gonna talk about key details as well as making inferences and if you don't know what uh inferences are it's when you're using the information that you know in order to infer other information for example if i say that my wife just walked in and she's carrying an umbrella that's wet then you when you hear that an umbrella that's wet you can infer that it's probably raining outside we're going to start with something that is a little easier and then it'll get more difficult actually it'll get much more difficult which uh i i just hope that you are ready to listen let's start with trying to if you have if you encounter a new vocabulary word and you want to be able to put that word in context so i'm just going to give you a simple sentence and i want you to listen to it and then i want you to tell me what this word means the teacher chided me for texting in class that is the sentence the teacher chided me for texting in class and i want you to tell me what does it mean to chide to chide someone the more you listen to it and read it and you encounter this word you'll be able to use it and make it part of your vocabulary here is the sentence and i'll give you the meaning so the teacher chided me for texting in class to chide someone it means to scold or reprimand angrily

now that you know that if if you are chiding someone that you are talking them to them in a way that you are a little angry you're upset with this person and you're like no no don't do that don't do that now that you know the meaning of that word let's use it and we'll make an inference okay so i'm going to give you another sentence and i i'll well let me tell you the sentence and then i'll tell you what i want you to do so again just listen to what i'm going to say say mom chided us for playing baseball inside the house mom chided us for playing baseball inside the house my question to you is well why why would why might she do that why might the mother chide the children for playing baseball inside the house and in this case i'm asking you to to make an inference and i want you to think about the other things that are going on or things that could happen so you know the situation mom chided us for playing baseball inside the house but why that is my question why do you think this is happening there is no wrong or right answer it's kind of just trying to get you thinking in a different way um because you're not only when you're listening you're listening to the information but you want to be able to comprehend more than just directly what somebody is saying so here is the sentence i said mom chided us for playing baseball inside the house i told you there are many different there are many things that you can infer about this for me when i would think about this i would think well something could break maybe a window or perhaps maybe the maybe they did break a window and that is why they are being chided or perhaps it happened in the past but uh playing baseball inside the house yes something could definitely break that's kind of just like a warm-up that i wanted to give you that you hear me say these simple sentences and just you're maybe trying to learn a new word and try to figure out the meaning by putting it in context and then we use that word to make an inference uh about some of the other information that that you hear so now we're going to get into we're going to go from easy to definitely more difficult what i'm going to do now is i am going to give you a story i'm going to tell you a story and i just want you to listen to it and just think about what i'm saying and it may help to put a picture in your mind i'm going to read this to you and then we're gonna practice uh key details the main idea um new vocabulary we're gonna do a little bit of everything so this is a longer story i'm gonna read it i'll read it twice and then i have five questions for you about this story uh i'll read it to you i just want you to listen carefully okay so here is the the story my friend dave traveled to the big apple for the weekend to attend his friend's bachelor party he promised that he would write me a postcard i never got one i saw a day five days after he returned from his trip i noticed his hand was in a cast when i asked what happened he said he fell down the day before he flew out and he hadn't been able to use his hand jokingly i asked about the postcard he told me that he wrote one but it must have gotten lost in the mail

i suspected that dave was not telling the truth after all he is a southpaw okay all right that was uh a lot of information that i just threw at you um i don't think the story may be too difficult to follow along but i will read it one more time and then we're gonna go through and i will ask you five questions about this story right here are you ready all right listen carefully i'll read it again my friend dave traveled to the big apple for the weekend to attend his friend's bachelor party he promised that he would write me a postcard i never got one i saw dave five days after he returned from his trip i noticed his hand was in a cast when i asked what happened he said he fell down the day before he flew out and he hadn't been able to use his hand jokingly i asked about the postcard he told me he wrote one but it must have gotten lost in the mail i suspected that dave was not telling the truth after all he is a southpaw so the first question that i have for you and again i'm i'm not going to show you the question just listen to it what city did dave visit so this was at the very start of the story um i talked about my my friend dave uh was going on this trip and what city did dave visit i did not say the specific name of the city it's more of a nickname the big apple is another name it's a nickname for new york city so this is where my friend dave traveled all right i gave you some information about this situation he's in new york city the big apple based on what you know what you listen to what event may he go to in the future dave may go to this it's it's a big event that somebody would have and it's going to happen in the future i gave you the information that you could infer okay this is probably what he's going to do bachelor party is what i want you to use to infer what event he will go to in the future dave is likely to go to his friend's wedding so if you don't you in this case you need to know what a bachelor party is and if you don't know what a bachelor party is before someone gets married um the bride or the groom maybe the groom would have a bachelor party and his close friends will get together and they go have this party maybe in another place in the future dave will likely go to his friend's wedding i told you that dave hurt his hand so this is definitely more detail when dave and i met so i'm telling you the story about dave and i when dave and i met after his trip how many days had it been since he hurt his hand so dave hurt his hand and then some of these things happen i saw dave when he got back from his trip how many days had it been since he hurt his hand so in this case you really need to think about uh there is some specific information that i gave you but then you need to think about the situation like the the bachelor party so the correct answer would see i'd say about seven or eight okay and the reason why i say that is because remember in the story we're talking about he said he hurt his hand the day before leaving i said that he he's gone for the weekend which is two days and i said i saw dave five days after he got back so he returned from the trip and then five days passed and then that's when i saw him so you could say five plus two seven works if you want to count the same day that he hurt his hand then you could say eight so that was definitely um a little more difficult all right the next question dave was going to send me a postcard he didn't send it all right was i angry about the postcard do you think was was i angry that my friend dave did not send me a postcard on his trip to new york city the big apple and what word did you hear that tells you either yes or no the key word that i want you to focus on was that i don't know if you remember specifically the sentence said jokingly i asked about the postcard so jokingly was the word it's an adverb it means you're kind of you're just joking around i'm teasing like hey why didn't you send me my postcard um that was the word that kind of tells you that i was not upset all right and then the last one which i think is certainly going to be maybe a little more challenging and i didn't say this which hand did dave injure and how do you know so i talk about dave's um dave's hand well i didn't say which hand was in a cast a cast if you didn't if you don't know what a cast is if you perhaps hurt your arm and you break it and they put that uh mold around your arm so you can't move it in this case if it's a hand maybe if somebody um maybe they break their wrist maybe they would the doctor would put a cast around your hand and you just can't move it and that's what a cast is the the key word is the word southpaw and if you don't know what a southpaw is the what it means originally was talking about somebody who boxes left-handed or in baseball somebody who throws left-handed but you could use it as an informal term to talk about somebody who just does something left-handed so i said that uh i knew dave was lying or i suspected he was lying um after all he is a southpaw so dave is left-handed all right dave if dave hurt his left hand and his his hands in a cast which means he can't write because he's a southpaw he's not able to write he broke uh his left hand and in case you didn't know something fun fact about me is that i i am a southpaw i'm actually uh i'm

LIVE ENGLISH LESSON | Q&A with Wes, Ioana, and Emi

hey what's up welcome to today's English lesson and if this is your first time here at interactive English we're all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills and this is a great opportunity for you to ask some questions and even if you're watching this a little later it's great for your listening skills to practice those listening skills and see if you can follow along in our conversation and again even later if you want to know the question to something in English write it in the comments write to us in the comments cuz we just love hearing from you guys so today we have a special Q&A that we are going to do and we are going to take your questions and guess who's going to join us hello hello so I just want to give a quick shout out to some of the people who are here with us

Ahmad iris odd lolly Irene Joe Thoth devika sorry if I mispronounced some name's Dave Elizabeth hi hi hi hello what we want to do is this is just a general Q&A and this is kind of our introduction this is our little daughter Emmie and she is making her interactive English debut and what we want to do is just take some of your questions so if you guys have specific questions when it comes to like vocabulary pronunciation grammar even about us feel free to ask we will try to answer those questions so yeah you guys hi everyone it's nice to see everyone here this one is being so we're gonna we're gonna take your questions as long as a little Emmie will allow so one thing I do want to tell you guys if you guys are looking for ways to connect us connect with us if you haven't done so already you can join our email list we will send you some lesson updates some useful resources from time to time as well as access to the secret fluency lesson and I will just go ahead and throw a link right there in the chat but it is another it's another good way to connect with us we're trying to connect with as many of you as possible and we've been able to do that and we feel very fortunate so let's just get to some of the questions here we have time ask us how many children do you have just this one oh just little Emmie right now so that's something again we're still you know figuring things out maybe in the future who knows we may have a brother or sister we'll see but we just have the the one right near now dude let's see I mean you're so oh thank you so much Lucretia thank you I would say again if you're like some of the questions try to keep them as specific as possible if it's very broad it might be difficult to answer I know if they've said how to use a period so in English you would in American English you would say a period British English they would call it a full stop and it just goes simply put at the end of a statement you say something for example about yourself my name is Wes it's a complete thought full sentence period at the end let's see somebody was asking how he or she is I'm guessing she you guys meant how old is she oh yeah she turned six months about two weeks ago so she is up she's rolling around and just I think on the brink of starting to crawl and that's a good expression actually if you are on the brink of something it basically means that you're about to do something you're about to start doing something you are on the break let's see Lucy asked what are your plans for interactive English so I'd say right now with the channel our goal is to keep to stick we've been doing two lessons a week four since we started this channel two years ago and we want to keep doing that lessons Tuesday live lessons Saturday it's a difficult pace to keep up with but that's what we want to do with the channel and then outside of the channel do you want to tell about the courses maybe yeah we're we're working on a couple courses for you guys hopefully they'll come out soon we've had we've been working on this for a while we just had a little roadblock on the way so that slowed us down but we are working and we are going to come out with some courses we have some vocabulary yeah we're gonna start with a vocabulary course to help you build and grow your vocabulary because most of I think more vocabulary lessons are have been pretty popular and people have enjoyed learning about academic vocabulary advanced words slang expressions idioms so it's going to be it's going to encompass all of those things and that's going to be our first course and then we'll come out with others in the future about you know speaking or you know we'll figure it out let's see again trying to okay well Lévesque city says how how can I fluently speak English that is a good question that I think many people ask and I think it's normal again I think a big thing is just to me you practice consistently and you practice regularly I'd also say you practice all the skills reading writing listening and speaking and just get as much exposure to the language as you can and that's why I said like even a lesson like this where we're taking questions you're still practicing your listening skills and I think it's great because I think for us people will tell me like I understand what you say but then when I'm listening to a movie or something it's yeah I don't understand it and that's because it probably is too fast it may be a little above your listening level after teaching English for so many years my speech has just slowed down a little bit not only that but I think I also really try to articulate and enunciate everything that I say and really speak clearly and that's just a part of teaching English let's see you can shout out if you see a question that you see the best way to remember vocabulary oh that's a good question yes that I think what what I would recommend would be you know you're not just learning the word and learning the meaning but then associating it to something else so for example for me I'm a visual learner I it really helps me to see things so if I learn a new word especially a noun and then I can see a picture of that that that's gonna help me put that into my active memory and and latch on to it a little more or even if it's a word that you just can't really find a picture maybe it's an advanced word if you can figure it think of a sentence a way that you would use it and and again put a picture in your mind that way or you're relating it in that case you're relating it back to your own experience when you try to put the word in context and that would be the another great way would be learning how the word is used in context not just learning the meaning of the word but trying to understand sentences that use the word so that you have a better idea of okay what what this means for example I'd say if somebody said can I see one of the words so when I was studying for the jury like I remember you you have these really long long lists of words do you have to know and one of them was pulchritude and I was like what is this word who you were to Kokura tude and it means beauty apparently and I remember thinking my association with it it's that it's the ugliest word to describe beauty so it's been I forgot most of the words and there how do you remember it yeah so if you make associations in your mind it will help and just keep using them kind of keep bringing them back definitely that's good pulchritude all right that'd be interesting because I would have been interested to know what what kind of context is used and is it often used to talk about art or structures or I think [Music] it's it's not really that all right Shenzhou I was both my girlfriend and we are loyal fans thank you excellent thank you guys we're just again we've we've developed this community and we're so grateful for it we have put out a question a while back on our community page about how many people have seen like what number of lessons and I was surprised that so many of you said you've seen more than 50 of our lessons out there which is amazing yeah we're super thankful says where do you live so we're from the United States we met when we lived in California in San Francisco right now we live in Hungary so we live in Budapest we're in Europe and we go back to the US from time to time so let's see what else [Music] I see it says how can I know whether or not the word is being used if I see it in a book do you mean I guess if you're using the word correctly or is it commonly used maybe remember that thing on Google if you google the word because I said maybe this word is not being used too often if you google the word there's a it's like a little chart when you hit more yeah definition and then it shows you like over the years how common the usage of the word yeah because some words like I said like they're from you know Shakespeare or something not all of them are being used today and if you speak like that nobody's going to understand you which is a problem I think is really useful because you mentioned Google they keep I think improving so if you were to Google a word and say meaning it will tell you the meaning and it does it gives you that graph as to know if it's if it's used a lot or if it's not used at all and even now I think it's just I think they changed this in the last few months if you google the word and right pronunciation mm-hmm it actually will come up and you can listen to the word with the American pronunciation or the British pronunciation so there are some really great you resources just googling things like google words the meaning google the pronunciation sabine because that's a good pronunciation question how do you pronounce that you can go I think in America americans would use either or either and I think a lot of it depends on which part of the country you're from I myself I feel like which one do you use either or either either either yeah I feel like I use either more but I feel like I might say either from time to time as well so you could you could use both and I think again people are gonna understand the what you're trying to say let's see I don't know that's a good question so what is it how could I overcome my speaking problem just off so I again I think if speaking is a challenge I think again it's easy to say well you should practice speaking I think that does help like if you don't have somebody to speak to we've talked about ideas and lessons before about even if it's just singing out loud talking to yourself in the mirror but also if the problem somebody asked us a question recently saying that when they actually try to have the conversation that's when they're having trouble speaking and it's almost like they just had so much anxiety that it was blocking them from expressing their thoughts and opinions and then it becomes a separate issue about trying to lower your anxiety so that you can more easily eunuch eight yeah I would say I think with all of that just like you know a lot of people have a fear of public speaking and they you know you can get yourself to do it but what what does help in those moments is practice and practice like a million times and the more you practice the easier is going to be and I think it applies to speaking anything even a conversation yeah the more you practice like you said even if it's in the mirror every it's about yourself even it's in the car even if it's like on your walk to school to work if you speak a little bit out loud it makes a huge difference than just thinking it yeah and I was actually just gonna say like in in I think it is yeah it's better to speak it out loud but I was gonna say I used to do that thinking about these conversations when I was learning Spanish I would kind of like put myself in a conversation and think about what somebody would ask me and what I would say and again I would probably make mistakes maybe using the wrong words but I felt like I was kind of preparing myself for when I did have that conversation and at least when somebody would ask me those words then I could at least say things immediately and respond quickly without having to think and be like what's happening and like I said I think I was probably making mistakes but I was just I was ready to start speaking and answering and responding to this person so I think it does help to just even think about these things to yourself Linnea ask how can i improve my listening skills so listening I mean there's thankful you because we have the Internet there's so much that we can listen to I would say if you want to make it you make it as challenge and grow as easy as you want but if you want to make it challenging like you really have a problem listening to things maybe listen to podcasts or something where you don't see the person speak or if you want to make it easier on yourself and you have a hard time understanding people like when you watch anything even on YouTube you can turn on the captions and you can follow along and see the words how they correspond to the writing because that does help because when we speak we you know shove things together we say things linked all the time and we don't always enunciate like West's yeah I feel like yes I feel like I'm probably very much easier to understand and listening to some song but I was also gonna say about listening like make sure you're listening at your level to and if things are a bit too fast try to slow it down listen to something else YouTube is a great place for that because some people even have told me they're like oh you're speaking too fast try to slow it down YouTube allows you to control the speed of speech so you can go down to the settings and set it to set for somebody to speak faster you can set it so that they'll speak slower and if you're listening at your level then that's just going to improve your comprehension so if you're listening to something like a YouTube video that you don't understand change the speed and see if it improves your comprehension I think I'm too late you're never too late don't worry about I won't ask your child's name yes her name is Amelia mm-hmm we can call her Amelie whatever yes there's a lot of different nicknames I've been calling her Emmy yeah Emmy for sure somebody said Oh Napoleon high from Costa Rica Pura Vida nice excellent I used to live in Costa Rica San Jose near Park a la Savannah anybody out there who's been to Costa Rica or lives there which one I missed it I think we I'll do this one Mohammad asks like how do you pronounce the before s or like is it for before a consonant R after s was the was the I again I say the like it's an unstressed word I say it with the schwa pretty much all the time so the weather was the weather how was the weather how was the weather would be how I pronounce that I know before a consonant people would say thee instead but I tend to say the in just casual English so I wanted to answer - yeah and because it's it's a she said that she has a daughter or he sorry and then to how to teach it here to your kid I what I tried to do because I wanted me to speak both Romanian and English for now and then hopefully in the future Spanish is I say a lot of the things that I just talked to her I mean she's six months old so she doesn't speak back she doesn't come back to me but I'll say it in English and Romanian all the time just what I'm doing or so I would say that a good way to do it would just be to start speaking to your baby in English if you try to even now even if they're six months old or however and just describe what you're doing that's what and there's so much good stuff out there for children to learn English too like you can yeah play things but I think though what you can do just personally just speak with that I would say yeah don't don't underestimate the power of listening I know there's a famous baby's learned person within like the the circles for a linguist learning English stephen krashen and a lot of what he talks about is just getting exposure through listening that you I think his one of his ideas is that basically you could probably learn a language just from listening I even though yeah I know most people think I have to speak I have to speak speaking is great because that's the best way that's the most common way we communicate but especially when I think you're talking about young children reading stories to them is a great way for both you to practice as well as get some listening exposure if you're talking about trying to teach another language in English to Nursery Rhymes there are so many Nursery Rhymes that she's been watching on YouTube I'll tell you a little baby bum and she loves it I think mostly because of the visuals but it's very easy to follow they say the same words over and over and over and it's very simple and basic and they do the action with so that's important too it's this TPR thing total physical response where you do what you hear so I think they can register that to where they're talking about like head shoulders knees and toes and they always point to all of these so that's those are some some some useful tips that is that is huge don't underestimate the power of listening and nursery rhymes are great I think even for adults even though it's not the the most it's not the best thing to listen to I think it's useful and I could I think it goes back to one reason as to why children learn faster than adults not just because of their age but because of the type of content they're learning which would be like Nursery Rhymes pretty good yes thank you which

which accent is acceptable in TOEFL British or American um honestly I don't think as far as any of these exams I think TOEFL is so IELTS is from Cambridge which is British TOEFL comes from an organization called ETS which is an American organization but I think when they're evaluating your speaking skills I don't think that that's part of it whether they're checking as to whether you have a British accent or an American accent I really don't think that matters I think that would just be your personal preference as to which kind of accent you would like to have if that's even important to you maybe it doesn't really matter to you and that's okay so I wouldn't worry about it as far as these exams are concerned oh there's a question for you what was it I said one Carlos how many languages do you speak so I speak English and Romanian and then speak some other stuff I speak a little bit of Spanish I understand French and Italian and a little bit of Portuguese a little bit not that's all I think yeah Romanian is I think rooted in a lot of Romance languages so I think it's kind of easy you pick up languages quickly I think it's for me I think it takes a long time I have to put in a little more work

let's see this is a more of a business question I like it ROM asked like how to describe educational details in an interview so I think again this is a case where if you're getting ready to go for a job interview practice practice practice go over those questions in your mind and think about your answers so that you are ready to talk about them I think if you're talking about your educational experience what I would recommend is talk about things in you could go through chronological order and which is like the time order start with your university experience then did you get some advanced degrees and then maybe you had some other supplementary education afterwards but I'd also try to make sure to always connect it to the type of job that you're applying for so for example if you're applying for an engineering job there's no reason to talk about the history classes that you took in University make sure it's related to whatever it is that you're interviewing for and really try to connect that I think that's an important thing so let's see oh it's easy to understand you guys excellent thank you let's see we're talking I'm trying to get some different questions just ha so do you speak Spanish si yo hablo Paquito de espana pero hace mucho tiempo que no habla ro y por ESO yo creo que me male or Adaro muchos palabras illa llah gramatica en este momento may imagine ok as they Ori bleh alright so it's just basically that's some that's a little Spanish out there for any of you Spanish speakers just trying to say yeah it's been a long time since I've practiced but I've lived in a few different spanish-speaking countries so I've had a lot of exposure but I think with anything whenever you're learning a language it's always important to keep practicing as much as you can to keep those skills active which one how'd you learn more than one language okay go for it yeah no I like it because I sometimes I feel like people think oh I'm sorry did you say what you're talking about that son santosh us Center just how to learn more than one language and I the reason I like it is because I hear a lot of complaints like oh I'm already struggling with English like it's so difficult how could I learn another language and I think actually a learning more than one language helps you helps you learn another so like the more languages you speak I think the easier it becomes to learn other languages and I just say just go for it just start the easiest depends on what the easiest skill for you is for me it's listening so that's why i like watching things in the language to like and you know in spanish I'll watch movies or when I was younger so novellas and whatnot but um yeah I think that's true if you listening to music like they say once you get one language once you get another second language under your belt which is another idiom expression if something's under your belt means you've learned it you know it then I think other languages it becomes easier so when he asked quick question well right what do you use more jot down or write down and why I think again both of them have the same meaning it's a phrasal verb I'd say write down is probably more common I think it's a little more formal jot down I think of something you're it's informal but it's also I think I associate there's a speed with it too that you need to write something down quickly so it's like oh why don't you jot this down real quick so I think that's also related to speed the speed in which you would write something jot down what were you trying to answer that question nice so she's kind of developing her her language skills at this moment she's really discovered her voice in the morning let's see somebody is how to improve your accent Oh how to improve your accent I always say financially sustainable what and and that's why we're creating courses and actually maybe trying to build a school in the future and and we're still figuring out how we're gonna do that but right now yeah I think it is kind of a part-time job so let's see some English what's the difference between a quit and pardon so I'm gonna give you that answer and I would still recommend like take it with a grain of salt maybe that would be good ones to Google just to make sure but when I think if somebody is acquitted and basically that it's saying that somebody was charged with a crime and maybe they go to jail but they were acquitted because it was they weren't they weren't the ones who committed the crime so it was discovered that they didn't do the crime so they were acquitted of this crime when you're pardoned that's kind of a term again I think you hear if you pay attention to American politics somebody has done something some kind of crime or wrongdoing and you might get a pardon from the president in which case they say hey I forgive you of this crime even though you did commit it and you can get out of jail so that's kind of the two difference between a quit and pardon so let's see is there yeah somebody said is about an app to learn conversation Isaiah says hollow is an app where anybody can make conversation with native speakers I have actually I've inner I've done some interviews with those guys who have created the hollow app I haven't used it myself I know they're trying to grow and develop that app but I'm curious again if you guys have had experience was with it you know let me know put it out there I think you guys are also a great resource for each other if you have questions and somebody else knows the answer or they know of some kind of group or app or some way to improve their skills I think it's always great when people are sharing information let's see the Canadian accent pretty similar to American yeah I think the Canadian accent it's very similar I think there's a few words that are pronounced a bit differently but for the most part the accents are fairly similar I'm in Haiti my name is a Moe's hey what's up Amos in Haiti how are you I think somebody went back and asked if we're planning on moving to the u.s. yeah that's a good question we don't everything our future plans right now are up in the air and if you don't know that expression that's an idiom if things are up in the air it basically means that things have not been decided or a plan is not made just yet so you could say yeah our plans are up in the air and that's what it is our plans are up in the air we don't know we may move back to the u.s. at some point we'll see as she gets older there's a lot of things to take into consideration at this point let's see when yes we yes we will continue doing advanced lessons especially advanced vocabulary lessons we try to mix up our lessons as much as possible by doing some like advanced vocabulary lessons and then advanced grammar and then do something that's more on the beginner intermediate scale because we want to make this channel kind of for as many people as possible so we've done some lessons that I know are a bit easier for people or talked about words that most people are familiar with for example we did like the most common academic words and so many people were coming like these words are so easy and part of what I'm thinking is like well yeah they're the most common academic words of course like more more people are gonna be familiar with them and the idea was just to let people know okay these are some of the academic words that people use most often and all of those words that we talked about I want to do more lessons like that they're taken from the academic word list and if you haven't heard of the academic word list it is a list of the most common academic words in English and this person I forget where they're from I don't know if they're from Australia or New Zealand they put this together and they put compiled a huge list of words so you guys can check that out mmm what's the meaning of I shudder to think phrase if you shudder to think of something so to shudder is kind of to be scared or afraid so if somebody shudders to think something it basically means you don't want to think about this thing that it's something that's not good so you might shudder to think about it let's see thank you is Union hitch says is our idioms important and why that really depends I think it depends on what your learning goals are if you're learning English for academic purposes if you're gonna be take go get your masters maybe idioms might be less important because you're not going to use idioms in your academic writing if you're if you're just learning English for for travel and general conversation then it might be a little more interesting for you to learn because when we're having general conversation I've even stopped myself throughout this discussion and told you a few idioms that I just said when when I just threw them out there so it really depends on what you want to learn I think if you're watching TV or movies which is more general and casual you will hear idioms being used from time to time I think the the most important thing with idioms and it's the same with slang I know people have really really enjoyed our slang lessons and I think that's great but I the the most of the biggest reason why we do that is more for your comprehension not for you to really just go out and start using those words because slang really depends on where you're from where you live your age there's so many different factors but it's more for your comprehension so that if you hear it when you're watching a TV show or movie then you just understand you know what it means and you can follow along with the conversation what is the best way to improve punctuation Paul I would say read read and read some more the more you read then you're just gonna see how punctuation is used correctly whether they're using where they're using commas whether they're using a full stop a question mark an exclamation mark the reading is the best way to improve your punctuation reading is a great way to improve your vocabulary your fluency everything your grammar read read read read I always recommend that can you teach us more idioms yes Angela we will have more idiom lessons in the future and again that's why we're putting together this vocabulary course it's going to be a huge course that we're going to teach a lot of different vocabulary words from academic English advanced words idioms slang expressions it's going to be all of them so can you please demonstrate using ain't so basically rody ain't has different meanings I think the most common one it'd be like it'd be like you're contracting am not and this is something I grew up in the southeast part of the United States in the south which is a place where you might hear ain't being used and somebody would say instead of I'm not instead of contracting I am and saying I'm not going to do this I'm not gonna do this they might say they would contract am NOT and say yeah

I ain't gonna do this I ain't gonna do this they're contracting em and not so that's probably I think the more common way in which this word is used but again that's not I don't even know if ain't is technically a word I think you'd have to look up I'm sure it's in some online dictionaries now because so many people know about it but I don't know if it's considered slang or what it is at this point I'm says what is to meet someone halfway so that is an expression if you meet somebody halfway it makes me think that you're trying to negotiate with somebody you're trying to reach an agreement and you say you want this and the other person wants this and you'd say hey let's meet halfway let's meet in the middle and then we come to an agreement we compromise and that's what it means when somebody says hey let's let's meet halfway so it's talking about different things that you you want and somebody else that wants and you're gonna meet in the middle alright so again I just want to thank you guys for for joining us on these lessons we really appreciate it if you guys do like what we do then again another way to connect check out our patreon page if you want to help support our channel support these free English lessons helped us grow we do offer some cool rewards again I'll throw a link right there in the chat so you guys can go check that out it's another great way to connect with us so thank you guys so much for joining me I'm sorry if I didn't answer some of your questions or all of them please write them in the comments those of you who have been following our channel we try to respond to everybody just about anybody so write your questions in the comments we'll try to get back to you if anything if we can't answer it sometimes we are just quickly if it's a long answer I will direct you to a site that you can read that will give you the answer so thank you guys so much for joining us today we really appreciate your comments your feedback

it's just what it's what makes this community so special so I hope you guys have a wonderful day and we will see you next time for another live lesson so long

LIVE ENGLISH Q&A ANSWERING YOUR QUESTIONS

what's up everyone welcome my name is Wes this is interactive English which of course is the place that you want to be to practice and improve your English skills thank you thank you thank you guys so much for joining me for this special Q&A so I am going to be taking some of your questions but we will do that just a little later on because we are going to do a live English Q&A with yours truly all right so if you guys have some questions I will take those but in just a little bit I have a few other things that that I'd like to go over with you but I just want to give a quick shout out and acknowledge some of you are here so thank you Loi Manipur little Little Pon Andre B abro Anna hello hello nazim Olivia vathi Luda ishana kashana sorry if I mispronounce names but thank you guys so much for joining me Rosalinda hello if you are joining just say what's up in the chat because I I just love hearing from you guys even if you're watching this Q&A later on write your name in the comments say hello say what's up we love meeting new people from all over the world and it's just been such a great community so thank you guys so much for joining us and I do have some questions for you guys too because I I do want to practice so save your questions for right now I will get to those but first I have some questions from some patrons that I want to answer because I asked them I said what do you guys what questions do you guys have and I will make some slides and answer those so the first question that I want to talk about is from Katherine she said I would like to understand better the uses of as and because to give reasons uh she felt like maybe she was overusing as so I want to discuss this all right because as because in since all three of those are conjunctions that we can use to talk connect a result and a reason so they're used to introduce a subordinate clause and they like I said they help connect results and a reason and I I tried to color code these for you so that result is that that pink pinkish color and then we have our conjunction and reason that is purple that is our subordinate clause so the result is an independent clause I watch interactive English that is a complete thought and then the subordinate clause it's giving us the reason because I want to achieve English fluency we can combine those into one sentence I watch interactive English because I want to achieve English fluency okay so the these are different conjunctions you can use and I want to talk about each one and why they use them so I'm also going to give you an informal explanation as to why so the most common one by far the most common one is because and think of it this way because it's the cool conjunction everybody loves because because it puts the focus on the reason all right we are we are emphasizing and focusing that reason and that that is when that's why we use because because it's that's its only function too all right one reason why it's so much more popular is because as in since they have other functions besides being conjunctions they can be adverbs they can be prepositions but we know because all right because is our friend because it's just a conjunction right now give me some example sentences if you guys are in the chat write some sentences using because give me talk about a a result and connect it to a reason I gave you that first example here are some other examples you could say you know a question are you upset because I'm late remember because I'm late that is the focus that's our subordinating conjunction that's our subordinating clause are you upset because I'm late and then someone say well you know I'm late because I forgot to set the alarm because I forgot to set the alarm again that is our reason and then you could say you know because you're late we can start the sentence with it because you're late I'm giving giving you an extra assignment because you're late I'm giving you an extra assignment so we often overwhelmingly use because to to connect a result and a reason all right um all right thank thank you so much LLY that's such a great compliment you love my lessons because they're always interesting we try I try to make them interesting the other thing I want to tell you about because very cool pronunciation tip all right often times many native speakers will just pronounce it as cuz it just gets reduced in order to speak quicker and more efficiently and they just say cuz so I'll I'll say those sentences again and and just shorten it so I'd say you know are you upset because I'm late that would be a way that that many people would pronounce it are you upset because I'm late no I'm late because I forgot to set my alarm or you can say you know cuz you're late I'm giving you an extra assignment so again instead of because many people might just say cuz all right cuz cuz cuz um all right uh Alisa I was waiting I was waiting I was waiting for you because I wanted to learn Perfect all right um nazim I want trying to make a name for itself sin really wants to be like because but it's failing miserably all right because I'd say but since is not doing a good job because all right there's this is my reason because because the word because is an absolute rock star everybody loves the word because and and since you know it's it's just an afterthought at times we use it in just casual conversation you might find it in conversation when people are speaking but it's mostly an afterthought this was a great question I love this question from Katherine because again I'm just I'm now going to notice every time I say because because I use since often I think I use Sy you know regularly especially if I'm writing an email and I would notice that I use it a lot even though when I was researching this and looking this up and trying to figure okay how am I going to present it I was surprised to find that okay they were like yeah since you know not many people use it it's an afterthought stick with because so just personally I I end up I use sin especially in conversation but just so you know it's not very common so here are some examples you know you could say you know since you forgot my birthday you have to sing me a song or you know

let's let's be nice to each other since we have to work together you might say let's be civil since we have to work together you can take because and just plug it in there and it's fine all right and that's what most people would do most people would use because instead of those sentences so now let's get to the last one as all right so I I'm sorry if you can't see it very well I tried to color coordinate it uh with purple but that that yeah it's kind of light so as is not very popular in fact it is not popular at all all right so if if this is to give you an example this would be the conjunction that has to eat alone at lunch because you know as does not have many friends you know because is the cool kid all right as you know as just is a bit of a loner all right sometimes as it's used in formal situations in formal speech but it is just not common in spoken English now I can definitely say that about american English I really I don't use as at all if I'm talking about uh you know connecting it uh result and a reason now the here's some examples just so you know you know I didn't buy the painting as it was quite expensive okay again you're connecting that it's still a subordinating conjunction in this case um as it was quite expensive or you could say you know as we all know each other let's just start the meeting we don't need to introduce one another uh as we know each other let's just start the meeting but again I would avoid using as because again because it's just not very common all right just stick with because I don't know about British English maybe in some formal situations perhaps in British English it might be a little more common but I definitely know in American English we don't use as uh quite often actually when I was looking this up they they I saw some examples and most of it was in literature from like books that were over a hundred years old so it's not common especially in informal and Casual English so that's something to keep in mind all right um so let's look at so this was a review remember because or or since they conjunctions connecting result with reason use because stick with because all right so this is something that I would like to do and continue doing again um for for patrons I'm going to try and do it once a month if you guys have a question all right I will make slides and answer those questions and if you want to check us out on patreon I will leave a link in the description uh it's another great way to connect with us and we have some cool rewards kind of like this one I I'll just make some slides and answer your questions so the next question was from Dany all right Danny had a question um he was asking about giving a lesson talking about regarding concerning in terms of a and how to use these and this this can be very challenging and this can be a bit tricky so these this is what I want to talk to you about next regarding concerning in terms of with regard to so these all these all of these function as prepositions and they're often used at the beginning of a sentence and it's just used to indicate the subject that you're either speaking about or the subject that you're writing about so let me give you some examples I'm I'm going to give you some examples but I also want to show you a cool resource and this is going to help you understand if you have any questions about how often are words used or if there's a phrase and you want to use okay should I use this phrase or should I use this phrase so the uses of words and phrases you can check the Google engram viewer and I'm going to show you this in just a moment so this is an online search engine that can chart word frequency ques it charts it from printed sources between 1500 and 2008 so if anything it just gives you an idea as to what's what's what's more common than others which phrase is more commonly used so first let's look at regarding and concerning they're they're basically interchangeable as I said it's used to indicate the subject like what you're going to talk about so for example I say you know if I was somebody's boss I say you know regarding your raise we first need to complete a review of your work per uh performance so regarding we're talking about the raise that is the subject regarding your raise we first need to complete a review of your work performance and then you could say Okay use it concerning your work performance we found a few red flags that prohibit you from receiving a raise and if you don't know red flags that's a great informal expression it means basically warnings all right there are some problems so concerning your work performance we found a few problems that prohibit you from getting a raise regarding and concerning they're they're very interchangeable and let me show you just how uh interchangeable they are so let's check out let me see if this works let's look at the engram viewer all right so hopefully you guys can see this and see what I'm looking at so I just typed in uh these two phrases right here concerning your question all right and then I put a comma in there and then regarding your question and I wanted to see how Whi which one is used more often and you can see from this they're very similar all right concerning your question regarding your question the reason that I didn't just put in concerning and regarding is because concerning also has another meaning it means that you're worrying about something so I did not want to uh include that I wanted to know again that specific meaning for this you're you're talking about some subject concerning your question regarding your question um so we can also put in something like this all right uh if somebody says you know I have a question concerning or I have a question regarding let's put that in there all right so let's change this um so I'm going to put a question concerning all right comma a question regarding because you can put that in like I have a question concerning Do you have a question concerning do you have a question regarding let's see how often these are used okay again as it shows you can see it over the years all right people use uh a question concerning I have a question concerning is a bit more common than a question regarding but again they're very very similar I was surprised because personally I think I use regarding more often than concerning but either one they're both FES so this is again a great resource if you want to know how frequent different phrases are being used or different words but again it needs to be specific so let's check out the next one in terms of and with regard to this is basically talking about something specific but you're talking about it in relation to something else so for example check out these sentences we give our customers the absolute best in terms of quality and cost that's my specific all right we give them the absolute best in relation to this other thing in relation to Quality and cost in terms of in terms of quality and cost the these are also interchangeable with regard to we do our best with regard to customer service we do our best with regard to customer service so again if we want to look and see you know well which is more common what what do people use let's go back to our engram viewer and you can see I just put those in in terms of is right here all right this is the big one boom many people use it with regard to is not is not as common so most people if you're talking about which one to use in terms of would be much more common uh commonly used than with regard to however I I think both of them are okay they're going you're going to people will understand you it's not a problem if you want to use one over the other it's not like using as it's not like using as as a conjunction which you rarely ever find and you Pro you may not find it so again either one of these would be okay so I wanted to answer those questions uh from our patrons and this is I want to do a Q&A every month and now I want to if you guys have questions write those to me in the chat and I will I will try to go through and answer some of them the only thing I would ask you is try to make the questions very specific if you have a specific like how do you pronounce this word or what does this mean or is this sentence correct something very specific uh so that I can do this and try to answer those questions now if I can't I'll try to find the information for you because again I do not know every single thing about the English language it's always changing it's always growing and that's something I think is is great about English I am learning something new every day and I hope you guys are learning something new as well and then you can share that with each other so um how do you pronounce the word uh sentence so sentence has two syllables sentence all right I think that stress sentence the stress would think it would be on the first syllable sentence all right so that that's a perfect question some people would ask questions like tell me the all 12 verb tenses and it's like that's just too much so if you guys have some questions um uh right now write those in the chat and I'll just run through and try to talk to you a little bit about it but I'm so happy you you guys are joining me um again like sand great that's a very general question sand please tell me how to speak English fluently that is what so many of you want to learn again I will give you my quick explanation try to get as much exposure to the language as you can and what I mean exposure is like it's like you're creating an English bubble so that you are surrounded by English you are reading English you are listening to English you are speaking in English and you have so much exposure you start thinking in English and if you are in another country that we're English is not uh the language that is being spoken try to make an effort to surround yourself uh by English and do a little bit each day try to read a little each day try to listen to some music each day start watching a TV show in in English try to make an exercise to where maybe you're cooking lunch or maybe you're making lunch or cooking dinner and say okay while I'm doing this I am going to think in English and really start training those muscles muscles and that's going to help you achieve fluency so whoa okay um let's see uh what's the difference between tall and long so again if you're talking about tall you're talking about the height all right how high is something that is a tall building long would be an adjective describing the length all right we traveled a long way you traveled a far distance um all right Jalissa how do you say Cooperative all right so again uh Cooperative I would say some people I'm trying to think of British Cooperative they might say that o sound more in that first syllable Cooperative but I'd say Cooperative that stresses on that second syllable Cooper Cooperative cooperative and again that you have like an unstressed syllable in there it's kind of like saying Wednesday you don't hear that NES Wednesday Cooperative I don't think you know people aren't going to say Cooperative uh Cooperative so good question um greetings from Toronto yes greetings Amy hello uh exactly keep uh visit on time so I can speak well yes exactly thank you for listening to our video again if you guys are listening that really if you're listening a little bit even you're listening to these lessons right now that helps you especially because so many people say I can understand your speech I've been teaching uh for about 15 years and I think I just end up speaking slower this is my natural speech I don't sometimes people are like why don't you speak faster and it's like well this is the way I talk right now and I I think it works out um what's the difference between freedom and liberty uh I think again I I think in some cases freedom and liberty they can be interchangeable I I think freedom is more all-encompassing it's it's definitely much more common all right just let's I'm I'm kind of curious now so let's go back over to our uh where is it where is it where is it where is it um I'm going to go back over to our engram viewer freedom and liberty let's put those in let's see what it says uh I imagine freedom is much more common noun than Liberty freedom and liberty uh Yes actually yeah it's it's used much more often when I think of uh Freedom you can be talking about I think a lot more things in general Liberty I think of something more related to your freedom in the country political Freedom something with governance um you want to have Li so boom all right um is there any difference between outskirts and suburbs um I I would say yes and no all right the location is the same if you're talking about the outskirts of the city uh the suburbs of the city suburbs suburbs is the outskirts okay the difference is when you say suburbs I know what you're talking about it's not the countryside it's not the same as the countryside I I think of the suburb as a residential area where there are homes maybe there's a shopping mall but you're not going to have tall buildings that are downtown in a city now if you say outskirts then I know you're talking about outside the city but I don't know exactly what the area is maybe it's the suburbs maybe it's the countryside I really don't know you're talking about the outskirts so keep that in mind they're talking about the same location but suburbs would be more specific because then I have an idea of the area that you're talking about uh let's see um how do you pronounce uh sheep and ship all right that's a good one sheep and ship uh those are two um you have that short I sound uh ship and versus the long e sound sheep all right sheep and ship and we did a another pronunciation lesson where we talked about minimal Pairs and trying to identify certain certain vowel sounds certain consonant sounds that and we did some activities I don't know if you didn't see someone I'm looking it up right now because I want to link that for you guys and I'll put that in the chat but it takes some time to load is it so again ship is that um is that the the short I sound ship uh and sheep is the long e sound so let me see where is it um I'll pull that up none iation okay and I will link that in the description in just a moment okay so you guys I I highly recommend um who asked that question I highly recommend you you check that out um it it'll really help you okay somebody said uh how can I sound like an American I think one of the great things um if you're trying to speak English with a certain accent I like an American accent or a British accent I would try and say imitate the accent that you wish to hear or listen to the accent that you wish to hear so the more you surround yourself by with an American accent then you're you're going to start picking up American pronunciation the way that we pronounce certain words tomato instead of tomato so it's just these small things but I'd say surround yourself by American English and that is the best way to kind of start internalizing that accent all right how to pronounce uh antibiotics all right antibiotics so it him antibiotics so that stresses on that bi antibiotics all right antibiotics I don't again I think maybe British English might be a little different pronunciation um but in American English antibiotics um let's look so here is let me give this for you guys here is the minimal pair for pronunciation uh I do some activities in this lesson as well which I think I I thought it was really cool I was very proud of myself for this lesson so I'll link it right here soon as this loads copy and boom it's going in the chat right now uh you guys can check that out that pronunciation lesson uh Juan hello Wes how are you I am very good Juan thank you so much for asking um so let's see what other questions I know I'm getting behind sorry if I'm skipping around um want to talk to you uh yeah Ira linking words is very difficult yes this is something that's very common um talking about linking words connected speech and I think in the future we're trying to put together a lesson uh that talks all about that uh francesco says yes practice every day practice makes perfect again you need to practice practice practice and I think it's good to mix it up somebody else asked about how to become fluent in English it's good to have passive learning and active learning when it's active what I mean by that is that you have to respond right now I I tune I do lessons and I ask you guys to interact and write stuff in the chat that would be an active exercise you have to respond passive would be you're just doing this thing for for entertainment for for your own Leisure and you don't have to do anything so for example listening to music music would be just a passive exercise you don't have to summarize it you don't have to give another response you're just listening to it for your enjoyment watching TV watching a movie so I think it's good to mix it up between passive exercises and active exercises to continually practice practice practice um so actually than might and may I that's another one I want to address in an actual lesson in the future so I'm to stick with that um and but that is that is a good question all right um but I think often times again most native speakers might and may we we use them uh interchangeably uh and I don't think people are going to um say too much about it if you're you know switching them up like uh I may go outside today I might go outside today I think is fine um is it possible to speak like a native um yeah absolutely I think again some people are gifted with languages and pronunciation others are not I know that when I try to speak Spanish I think I definitely have a thick accent but again the more you're exposed to the language the more you are practicing and speaking the language and get comfortable with it I think your accent will tend to diminish it might not completely go away and that is fine that is perfectly okay but it'll tend to diminish over time uh let's see I heard another one uh David says here and here those are homonyms all right so for example here I'm talking about I am here right now or here like you're listening to something so again homonyms are words that different meaning same pronunciation so again they're they're great to learn um so that you recognize them but the best way to do it you really have to put it into context um let's see what do we have here ah okay how do you pronounce uh it depends so close all right if you're talking about close the door c o l c l o e close the door all right that also sounds like clothes like what you're wearing so that is the same pronunciation close the door or I'm wearing clothes if you're talking about proximity somebody is close then that would be a different uh that would be a different pronunciation like oh you're standing very close all right so it's a difference between that close all right that final s sound close and close all right close the door I'm wearing clothes and you're standing close uh what else do we have all right can you suggest a good book all right I say this to Learners all the time um read at your level all right don't try to read something that that's super difficult if you can just try to read just above your level so that you don't have to run to the dictionary if you think that you are still at a beginner to intermediate level read children's books I think it's fine you can get through that you'll still learn new words and you'll maybe uh you're not going to have to go to the dictionary every time the other thing is read something that you're interested in it you know I could tell you to read about sports maybe you're not interested in that so that's not going to help you find something that you are interested in whether it's Fashion sports food and and find reading about that because that's going to keep you engaged in what you're reading you're going to want to learn more information about that uh I think it's great to always use English to learn something else so if you're interested in food watch a TV show about food and that way you're learning something about food while you're learning English as well or when you're reading something about food you're learning while you're learning English as well so um please make a video homonyms yes uh maybe that's a that could be a good live lesson in the future what's your favorite song um it really switches I don't know if I have a favorite song as I do like a genre for example I'll go through a period where I listen to like a lot of rock and roll and I'll listen to uh more like rock like lead Zeppelin Rolling Stones and then depending on where I maybe if I go on vacation to the beach I'm listening to Ree and then I'm listening to Bob Marley so a lot of it depends on the location where I'm at and what I'm doing would be my my musical preference if I'm running I like to listen to something like upbeat I might listen to some pop uh to to really to really get me going oh that's a great reading story somebody just s The Little Prince yes that's another great story not too not at a very high level um but that's another one that that could be a good reading recommendation Little Prince um how do you pronounce whole and whole again homonyms same pronunciation whole w h o l e and whole uh h o l e whole I ate the whole I ate the whole pie all right you ate all of it or I need to dig a hole pronunciation is the same um you guys are very welcome I know some of you thank you thank you guys for joining us I I love the community that we've been creating I love before these lessons start I see all of you guys chatting like where you're from what are you doing what's your name um and and that's great because this is what we want to do and just build the community and you guys interact with each other and can communicate and ask questions and in the future when we start doing we're going to start doing some online classes that is going to be a mix of videos and live lessons and we really want to form a community when we do those classes so Olivia have you ever been um to Ukraine no unfortunately I have not and we're we're pretty close right now because we live in Budapest it's on our list it is on our list to visit um but right now especially with the little one uh little Amelia we don't have as much time to travel uh but in the future we we want to travel a lot more especially with her cuz I think travel is such a great way to get exposure and to learn about other languages to learn other cultures and it really broadens your your view of the world I think it's such a good thing and I commend you guys that you guys are here you're trying to learn English and you're learning about culture you're learning another language it really changes like again it's like creating a new personality you're really changing yourself um so what else do we have again somebody said yes there and there again those are homonyms t h r e and t h i r u h the possessive u h h e l l o u h h e l l o Ty I'm from Indonesia what's up thanks for thanks for checking out today's lesson um Sava ask u h m i a m how much time should I spend regularly to learn English um that's a good question I think what I would say is try to learn a little each day some people I I've met students before and they would come and ask me they say do you think I could learn English in three months if I study for 10 hours a day can I learn in three months and Studies have shown that if you there there gets to be a point where if you're studying so much a day you're not able to absorb all the information because language learning it's I I always say it's a marathon it's not a Sprint it's it's a long it's a long-term activity and I think I know everybody has a busy life people are working um you're you're in school you have other things going on in life you can't take four hours five hours to study English each day so even if you could set aside 10 minutes 10 minutes each day to try and do something I think it really helps and then then it goes back to okay how am I going to schedule those 10 minutes try to do something different spend 10 minutes one day reading spend 10 minutes another day watching videos online spend 10 minutes another day studying a grammar concept and spend 10 minutes another day just trying to think in English and you can do that from anywhere if you're riding the bus going somewhere and say okay I'm going to think I used to do this all the time when I would I after work when I lived in California I would walk home sometimes it would be it and it was like a 40-minute walk I just enjoyed walking it kind of just calmed me down it was a little like meditative but while I was walking I would try to to you know tell myself okay I'm going to spend the next 10 minutes just thinking in Spanish and everything that I was looking at I I was describing in Spanish I was trying to think about my day what do I need to do when I get home and I I was just trying to focus on thinking in Spanish and I was making mistakes because I was talking to myself but that was okay I was still practicing I was producing the lens language so there's many great things that you guys can do um when it and it doesn't take a long time too so um thank you guys did you visit India no again it's on our list um Yana's sister was just in India she was telling us all about it and it really we really really want to go u h d e a m e n o h the cry may be crying yes I don't know if you guys could hear yes she was she was crying just a second ago um but we will we will give her a kiss from all of you thank you um maeta says how do you announce okay those are good words some math words I think you made a comment about this u h e a r l i e r u m and I was going to make a note for it so we have quadrilateral all right quadrilateral and parallelogram quadrilateral and parallelogram so parallel u h then you have that schah parallelogram parallelogram five syllables p a r p a r a l l e l o g r a m and quadrilateral quadrilateral u m w a i t I'm trying there we go quadrilateral five syllables again quadrilateral parallelogram so yes and if you want you can if you want to hear me say that again you could watch the review later and and just keep listening to it again because again that's the best way to do it you if you want to practice your pronunciation do shadowing listen to somebody say it and then try to repeat it and then try to say it at the exact same same time and just again mimic that voice it's called the imitation technique and you're basically mimicking what somebody else says so again thank you guys so much for joining me this is something I I hope to do every month and just answer your questions and if you want to become a patron and I'll make some slides u h f o r f o r your questions and actually u h m a k e i t a part of the lesson you can check out our patreon page the link is in the description but thank you thank you thank you u h f o r joining me today please if you enjoy this like and share this lesson write us questions we love hearing from you guys and I just want to give a shout out to you guys that are here still u h V J A n d r e E s t h e r thank you so much for joining at Kamar Rosalinda star night u m n e o l i n thank you guys for being here today L o i I really appreciate it little little little p e o n thank you Olivia ashes yeah all right I hope you guys enjoy the rest of your day wherever you are in the world whatever time it is have a wonderful day u m t h a n k you I r a j e l l e u h M o h i t a l a the list just goes on

LIVE: Q&A with Interactive English + Big Announcement

so blue it is very blue what's up everyone welcome to this live lesson which is more of a Q&A and hopefully yeah hopefully you guys can tell us if it's really if it's working or not and you can hear us because this this is the first time that actually the both of us have done a live lesson together so this this is a first of many so if you're joining us again write your name say hello in the chat we want to hear from you guys even if you're watching this later write your name tell us where you're from we we just just love hearing from all of you guys so today we're gonna do a bit of a more of a Q&A type thing and just talk to you a little bit about ourselves talk about some future plans plus a big announcement so hello we got some people Christelle sod sekime hello welcome we will probably tell you the big announcement in about what 10 15 minutes we want to give more people time to join the lesson because I know it's it's kind of growing but hello Mohammed Mildred Mustapha ah sorry sorry if we miss some of your names but we'll try to acknowledge everyone but if you guys have some questions write them in the comments especially if they're questions about us questions about English questions about us yeah but we're going to answer a lot of questions about us I think today definitely yeah probably like maybe not really specific grammar questions or anything but it's just general a general question about learning English or if you want to know about us please ask that in the the comments and we will try and get back there yes start writing them and then as you guys as you ride them we're gonna go through them and try to kind of get a way to answer them so yeah so to to give you let's should we give an introduction kind of because I know some of you we've I've already done one lesson and we've talked about ourselves and how we met but we kind of want to give a little recap so do you want to tell us about ladies first yeah yeah yeah so I mean we're obviously our channel is called interactive English because we are English teachers if you are wondering why we're doing this is because both of us are English teachers I started teaching English in 2011 so a while back and I I'm not if you were wondering about me I've mentioned this in a few previous videos but if you're just meeting me hi my name is Jana but I'm not a native English speaker I learned English when I was very tiny you're basically a native speaker yeah I mean I mean I'm at that level but I was born in Romania and then moved to the US when I was 15 and have lived there for fifteen years so half my life there but I already spoke English before so and we met at his teachers at a at a school in in California somebody had asked we were working at the same school yeah so new yen asked what state do you guys live in that's a good question cuz right now we were from the US we're from California which is where we met but right now we actually live in Budapest Hungary so we're not living in the United States at the moment but we I'd say we are from California yeah so you you've mentioned how you got there to give you a little more information about me about myself I've been teaching for about since 2006 so it's been 12 years now he's older you guys that's a little it's a little older so I I started teaching I've taught in several different countries South Korea Namibia the Dominican Republic hello to anybody out there if you guys are from Korea the dr or namibia and then afterwards I moved to California to to get my masters and I my master's in teaching English to speakers of other languages and while I was there that's when we were working at the same language school and that very tiny language we met so I'd say we're from California but right now we live in in Budapest yeah so and and since then like what what we've been in Budapest and we've been working on this yeah so if you guys yeah if you guys know us if you guys have joined these live lessons before let us know hit that like button we like like getting those likes yeah so let's talk we want to talk about before we before we jump into the big announcement sorry I made the face because I'm holding a cat and she blob word all over me we have a visitor right now right here she's just sitting in my lap but she was drooling please somebody else okay I'm gonna address a couple of these comments where are you guys we're in Budapest Hungary right now Melissa asks I appreciate learning of course I understand you're fast speaking excellent that's good listening practice a lot yeah a lot of people I think because we're English teachers we may speak a little slower but I always think we we always hear people say I completely understand you guys but it's more difficult to understand a movie or TV and I think that's because we do maybe speak a little bit slower but I think that shows you that's a good good thing to do is to keep listening at your level and always challenge yourself with TV and movies but if you guys can understand everything that we say that's awesome yeah I also think many times in movies and TV they do tend to because it's it's now we're staying very very busy with this I mean I mean we love you too hello from France Giselle English is so easy to understand excellent anybody who had asked Oh Polly said the big announcement is your marriage close we actually we got married we're married we are married we've been married for about a year and a half we got married last March of 2017 we got married in New York City it was a very very small ceremony very nice but yes we we are married so yeah somebody asked me and do we speak Hungarian actually no it is a challenging language right now because I would say I'm trying to learn Romanian that's another good segue we can talk about some of the languages that we know and speak so I feel like I'm proficient in Spanish my Korean is basic it used to be better but then when I moved I stopped using it as much and now I'm really focused and learning some more Romanian and trying to improve my skills in that language so if you are learning

English with us and you're trying to learn a language I understand what you're going through and the challenges and the frustrations and just the time and the dedication that it takes to improve your skills so what about I know you speak more languages well I was going to say one cool thing about you know learning a second language is that the more languages you learn the easier it becomes to learn other languages because you kind of your brain just opens up and and it's very very nice way to absorb and your language plus since it's really good a brain development so it really helps our minds so if you're wondering like oh I'm having trouble with English like why I don't want to learn another language do it do it even if it's just in the beginning stages because it's always nice to it always helps and somebody had actually commented before is when they were they were learning English in another language and they were saying they were having difficulty because they keep confusing the two and I responded and said like you know that's that's absolutely okay and that happens all the time and I actually think it's a good thing because it shows that you're trying to focus and concentrate on those two languages yeah thanking in in the other languages which is what we all want right is you want to think in English when you're speaking English you want to think in Spanish when speaking Spanish and so on yeah and you're kind of exercising that muscle to start trying to transition over to whatever target language you're trying to learn and practice and so I think it's a good thing but that happens to me a lot with Romanian we were just in Romania and I mean trying to speak Romanian I automatically sometimes I just switched to Spanish and I just start throwing words out it's like wait a second here yeah yeah so that's it's again it's natural but again try to learn as many languages as you guys can so hello just Gibson see if you just and what's up jasira hello hello thank you guys for for joining us so today we're just having a little bit of a conversation and Q&A so this is good listening practice and should we go ahead and share yeah the big news that we have that we wanted to tell all of you guys which is you can you can me yeah yeah you let it let everybody know some of you might be able to guess we got a cat no no it's not our announcement yes our big big big big announcement it's super life-changing if you guys are following us for a while and you know we got married last year now we have another life kind of changing announcement is that we are pregnant we're having our first babies so yeah this is a big big life-changing event we're very excited we're super excited what else it just so when you're due in January yeah so our baby is going to be a January baby just like its mama um like mom I should say because it's a little girl so we're we're very excited yeah thank you guys thank you jr. thank you Gibson Mildred thank you guys so much we really appreciate it thank you all of I mean we just were thankful for all of your guys love and support whose baby I was so yeah this is it's it's really it is really life-changing I think because we you know just a lot going on now a lot that we need to think about a lot that we need to do and carry yeah it's a little bit it is it is very frightening too and a good frightening I should say but yeah and it may change a little bit about what's going on with our lessons here and how regularly we can do it but but that's okay I think that's just it's part of life I think in the future we would like to make this more of a full-time job if possible and we're gonna come out with some some courses and maybe do some classes for for listening and thinking in English we have we have a lot of things we would like to do it's just finding the time to do everything which i think which i think is everybody's problem out there is like so much that you to do that you want to accomplish and just finding the time to do it and you know now we're gonna have another a family member who's going to join us on on this adventure so that is the big news that we wanted to share with you guys and thank you guys so much for yeah for all of those wishes a little maybe a little yeah a little interactive English teacher so somebody said to it I missed who it is but to to help to make our baby speak French that's actually well not French but we do want our baby to speak well we're going to so obviously we're going to start with English and Romanian and I want Spanish to spend it like honestly we wouldn't we want our child to get exposure to as many languages olive as possible because I think there is such a value in learning another language and when you do it as a child I think it's just it's that much better to start younger somebody asked you ns is this your first baby yes this is our first child so there's going to be a big learning curve I think for us we have no idea yes we do want to teach our little girl as many different languages as possible so that is something that is a priority but was the same for us yeah we'll start with English and Romanian and then we'll see from there depends where we end up living - I think what other language somebody we're kind of looking through more questions do you want your baby to be a girl or a boy it honestly doesn't matter I mean we know what it is but it wouldn't have mattered either way as long as it's a healthy human being I think with both you yeah really happy but I think she wanted a girl and I did want a girl um yeah so yes may ask yourself is it a girl yes yes yes she's a girl so I'm very happy I would have been happy either way yeah yeah aurorus have you been to Brazil no we have not been to Brazil very sadly want to go always wanted to go actually I was there very shortly oh you when I traveled to foz de iguazu on the Brazilian side only there for one day but but really I haven't but we want to so when we do go to Brazil though it's gonna be the family be all events yeah be all of us do we Mildred s do we know the name yet we can't agree well no not that we can't agree we just haven't finalized yeah we haven't found the name they would've like okay we're in love with was tossing around some ideas still for the name so the name five months four months to this side yeah we still have some time but probably the next time you see this we still won't have a name and mine somebody asked which country were from Adi said are you both Marion yes we are from the United States from California somebody else asked where we live now right now we do live in Hungary I mean she has two homes yeah from Myanmar welcome to me yes we would love to visit me and Mark the food we've tried some food at different restaurants when we were in the US and the food we've tried is amazing so I definitely really really want to visit so shared with you guys that big news if you guys have any other questions or comments about us or about learning English or another thing why we have all of you guys here that we always want to know are you know what are the the types of lessons that you guys want to learn more of we try to cover a variety between like grammar and listening and pronunciation vocabulary and some are more popular than others but you know let us know to what what you guys are interested in learning more whether it's what do you feel like you're missing medium at phrasal verbs we're trying to do also more actual activities that to get you guys speaking do we have any Hungarian friends Aryan friends while we're here yeah you do a lot of suggestions actually thanks for your suggestions I'm gonna look through them and see if it feels right I go a lot by feeling these days does it feel right mm-hmm so I want to learn daily conversation and slang okay yeah that's something that's actually kind of a new type of series we're starting with yes general conversation similar to at a normal pace yeah similar what well kind of we're doing a general conversation today but actually just choosing a topic and talking about it phrasal verbs idioms expressions thanks for letting us know little peony sorry if i mispronounce names I mean is that please introduce a book for conversation I'm not sure exactly if if what you're talking about like a conversation book if you're one book that we have which we would use for like speaking classes it was called compelling conversations so it basically just gives you a topic and a list of many many many different questions that you could practice answering so I don't know if you're a teacher and you're looking for a book that's gonna help you just for speaking or something it's called compelling conversations it's a good book a bunch of questions Jr wants to learn more vocabulary we have some more of those lessons on the way more conversations Eduardo excellent we will try to hit up on all of this but right now like I think our plan is to continue doing we have our Tuesday lessons that we always try to do and then the Saturday live lessons which we will continue we're going to be traveling some next month so probably during that time we may not do the Saturday live lessons while we're gone a few weeks but otherwise we're gonna to try and maintain that schedule doing Tuesday normal lessons and then Saturday live lessons so almost a lot of questions like maybe what a podcast somebody asked oh that's something yeah he's very excited he's recently gotten into podcasts so he listens to them on his runs yeah I I get all these ideas and see people doing it's like oh we should do that oh yes let's do that but actually she's like wait slow down there's no time yeah because we're all over the place sometimes but we did think about maybe in the future we would like to actually start a podcast and in the podcast like it may be something next year because like I said we're right now we're working on some online courses that we want to run out there for you guys we're working on some other classes that would be more live street life classes and the idea for a podcast that we might do something that is more more conversational yeah of us just talking about our lives and certain topics that you guys could get to know us a little better and would be great for listening and not necessarily a podcast about you know specifically learning English that would be more about our YouTube channel and the podcast would be kind of more about us and just talking about a lot of different topics I think so Kim asked if we enjoy our jobs yeah of course absolutely we love teaching also I believe that all teachers love teaching most most teachers because usually it's not something that's a profession that you go in it for the money yeah it's just usually you do something because you really like to do it I've always thought like especially because I know some people some of you out there are probably our English teachers as well and I've

so interested in it that you want to learn more that you want to share with the students and then you want to continue learning that's super important and and you you're passionate about seeing other people learn and improve their skills because I've always thought to myself that as soon as I stopped caring about students or my job or learning then that that's the point where I need to find a different job a different profession because if you stop caring and you don't have any passion for the work then I think then that's the time to like start looking for something else to do I think Adi was asking our favorite pieces of literature so right now most of the things we're reading are are just I've been reading a lot of more like just business development books marketing like trying to think how we can grow interactive English as an actual school because we've we've kind of built this audience on on YouTube and Facebook and Twitter which if you guys have not checked us out on Instagram you to our Twitter Facebook we post questions it's a good it's another good way to practice yeah but yeah so now that we've developed all of these different you know this this audience about actually kind of putting up a school around it so that's something where you just ER asked if we have ever tasted Indian food Oh have we well I don't know I mean we haven't been to India but we've loved Indian food that you can find in other countries like here or the US and yeah it's like on my favorites Faizal asked what the relationship between you two so if you guys don't know we did an introduction at the beginning my name is Wes my name is you wanna we are we are married and we are English teachers and the big news is we are having a baby this January so just to recap yeah mister joining a little later so we're trying to sift through your through your messages Milagros were you living now right now we had mentioned we're living in Hungary me the address I love your name but even though we're from California that's where we met but we're in right now Jackie Thank You Jackie we really appreciate it thank you so Oh more unique actually Sushma to shock Ahmad more unique adjectives yes we're doing more lessons on advanced vocabulary lessons for advanced adjectives nouns verbs that's another series we definitely want to continue and keep teaching you guys Oh Nadia asked if we're going to make a video about the vocabulary of young parents and everything about babies I was actually thinking about that would that be interesting to you guys would you be interested in such a video i I think we should do I was gonna say you pray you guys probably will see some or baby related lessons or something I mean there's so much I'm learning it's like a whole new other world yeah so I think that would be useful for a lot of our our viewers to also learn like how do you call these things in English because it's it's kind of a it's a whole other language at times it seems yeah yeah of the raw man how can I improve my English using movies okay I was gonna I was just gonna say like a big way to do it first of all I mean obviously yes watch something in English maybe something at your level like don't do something that's too too difficult to understand like there's some movies that are highly conversational that and fast that can be maybe too hard or their movie that are movies that are way too easy like all these action movies and where you don't have enough conversation so you want something in the middle but also to put on the subtitles the English subtitles and follow along I think what really helps is many times if we're not used to listening angle to English and the pronunciation of a word when you hear it said by somebody native and in a sentence because it changes is different than what you expected so it's really useful to hear it in like a long sentence or in a paragraph because people native speakers shorten these all the time and we link words differently and the intonation is different so yeah it expose yourself to as much content as you possibly can that's what I was gonna say I think like when it when you think about learning with with movies and TV or music a lot of times its passive learning and the reason I say it's passive is because the we're just watching it or listening to it for fun and for our leisure and we don't have to do anything we don't have to respond to it and it's good to get that exposure especially if it's just something you enjoy if you want to make it more active and challenge yourself then you can give yourself some type of assignment that you need to do so if you're watching for example a TV show like friends and you say okay I'm gonna watch friends for this 25-minute show and I'm gonna see if I can identify some different idioms or phrasal verbs then you make an inactive exercise and you give yourself something to do and you're giving yourself something to listen for so it depends on what you want to do with it if and I'd say try and use it for both because the more exposure the better you don't always have to make music or TV or movies and active exercise and and just use it for just pure pleasure and and just is language exposure so there's different ways you can use it if you want it to just be more passive learning or active learning and we always encourage both I was going to say if you're looking for something more challenging like if you if you're advanced and they're looking for okay like how can I train my listening if you're looking for a show to watch I recommend Gilmore Girls because it is so fast they even said that when they did that like you it's it's faster than than a regular TV show that the the characters speak really really fast so that's a really good way to train yours but that's really advanced so if you're wondering and there's a lot of pop culture I think your the office fans yes yes somebody else has about like improve listening and reading and somebody asked you listening is connected to speaking I would say yes all of those all of the language those are connected when you think listening and and speaking and reading and writing and as well as thinking because that's kind of at the center of all of this so again I think sometimes people think that oh if I want to improve my speaking skills I only I just have to speak and it's not true yeah you can improve your speaking skills if you're improving your listening skills and your reading skills and building your vocabulary it's all going to help you the next time you try to speak and have a conversation because you'll be able to use more words you'll be able to use correct grammar so all of it is connected yes thank you for saying we resemble Jim and Pam you were watching the office last night actually watch it too much I've seen we've seen this series like seven eight times we I wanted to be a Halloween costume but this guy because we met in the office we did we met at work yeah yeah so but yeah he didn't listen um sir so can you suggest some movies to increase okay honestly I think I think any when people asks for recommendations for movies or books the one thing I always suggest is do something find something that you like yeah you're interested in because I might give you a suggestion and say hey watch a documentary and some people are like gosh I really don't like documentaries so I don't think that really would help you so if you're interested and whether it's sports or fashion or thing I am or yeah anything like see if you can find something that or fantasy like Harry Potter find something that you're interested in I think that's going to help you the most because it's going to keep you engaged in what you're doing and that's that's very important so any I think any movie that as long as the topic is something you're interested in it's going to help you and then again it's up to you if you want to make it a little more active and turn on the subtitles and try to identify words you don't know or or grammar or anything like that so you teach us more advanced words yes we will continue teaching more advanced so a couple English a couple questions about fluency and I'll tell you my advice like how do I become more fluent or can you become fluent without moving to the u.s. it's very these are very good questions by the way I will say maybe to look at fluency as a process and not as an end result because it's not like okay like I hit this point and then I'm fluent it's just something that you can always work on and yeah of course absolutely Giselle you can definitely become fluent without moving to the US I know so many people in that are my friends in Romania that are that are fluent they've never stepped foot you know in in the US or or other places it's just about practice so what what you need to do is is I think a daily practice and the reason I say that is because with languages we if we if we kind of leave like I used to be almost fluent in Italian at some point and I stopped for many many years and then I kind of forgot it all so that it happens like that with languages um so I think if you if you if you challenge yourself to practice something every day or often enough I think that you can get there but give yourself time and be kind to yourself don't put that pressure like I need to know this this this I think that harms your progress sometimes I was gonna say cuz that's a common question that we get and I think it's a misconception that people think oh I need to go to the United States or the UK I think the most important thing like you said is practice and exposure is exposing your system language speed and

I think that's the reason why many people go abroad is to get that exposure so that when they go to the grocery store or when they're on the bus or wherever it is they're constantly hearing like English and nowadays especially with technology I mean think about now you guys have been watching us listening to English for the last half hour and you understand it's possible to get that exposure without going to traveling to the United States or the UK I think it's always good if you can go to some places and travel and get that exposure not only for the exposure but then you get to learn about the country and the culture and I think culture is also tied into language quite a bit that's important which is important but I think in general you can absolutely learn somebody else who's taken high hopes next week some tips back yeah good luck if you guys are getting ready to take IELTS or TOEFL the one thing I'd say especially if it's getting soon just make sure that you're familiar with the the exam before I'm at exactly like because it's it's fairly specific the types of you know the the reading sections on these exams what you're gonna do and then the questions you might get the listening just make sure you're familiar with the format and I saw somebody ask I don't know if is the same person but asking about like why they can't improve their writing score because it's always 6.5 I was going to say they have a very specific formula for the IELTS they you kind of need to follow and the best way to prepare for it honestly is write as many essays as you can in the time time yourself no no no I was gonna say not only writing but reading because you guys you can go online and find like the questions that they would ask you for IELTS tests and then online they'd also give you like here is the ideal answer mm-hmm and read what those answers are because then that's gonna kind of show you the style like what they're looking for and I think if you can read those responds read those answers then that's gonna help you to when it comes time to writing because you'll be more familiar with and I'm gonna tell you what I tell all my students they don't care about what your reasons are for something they just care that you give reasons that support your argument that and and because so they don't care your position like they're logical you agree with uniforms or not or whatever they don't care they really don't care they just care like if you don't why you don't and for those reasons to make sense okay so we gonna we have to go we

kind of got a jet because we are going to try and film two lessons today this afternoon right are likewise and we're starting to lose some sunlight so just to recap big news we're having a baby in January so we're very excited about that and we thank you guys for all of the congratulations thank you so much yeah being here for being a part of our community we really appreciate it if you guys like our lessons and like what we do please hit that like button write us comments because we always love hearing from you guys and we will have a lesson for you on Tuesday and then be back next Saturday for another live lesson and we'll see what the topic is so thank you guys for joining us hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and we'll see sure your day and you completely lose your head lose your head this means to lose control and not act calmly because you're upset you're angry and often you're going to use this idiom when talking about troubling situation you try new tactics this late with this much at stake and everyone loses their heads now this idiom may sound similar to another idiom lose your mind but that has a slightly different meaning if you lose your mind you become mentally ill you become crazy so I want you to be able to differentiate between those two idioms lose your head lose your mind sometimes I truly fear that time losing my mind and then you know what you're KN for a loop

LOVE VOCABULARY | Words and phrases you need to know advanced phrases for the language of love. I think this is fitting seeing that it is Valentine's Day and I wish you all a happy Valentine's Day. But if you are someone who enjoys learning new phrases, building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications, that way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English and it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. For those of you who have joined these lessons before, I think you already know that. Now, I say the less the the phrases are advanced, even though I'm sure you're familiar with some of them. They're very common, especially I think when it comes to love. That's a pretty popular topic. But my goal with all of these lessons is that you learn something new. And I'm confident that you're going to learn something new in this lesson right here. And of course, if you want to download these notes that are right next to me, you can join our community and you will get a copy of these notes. If you've if you're already a part of our community, check your inbox there. Uh there is an email waiting for you with these lesson notes. I'll go ahead and throw it in the chat right here, but check out that link down below in the description. So, without further ado, let's jump into the lesson. And of course, I want you to participate. This is interactive English after all. Write your answer in the chat or write them in the comments if you're watching this later. I always love seeing people write their answer in the comments. Use it like a piece of paper as you're taking this mini quiz about these advanced phrases. So, this I want you to fill in the blank. There are two missing words because we're talking about a phrase. I have a mm you.

What phrase could complete this sentence? Now there there may be more than one phrase, but let me make it a little more specific. And the meaning of this phrase is it refers to a strong but temporary feeling of liking someone. And that is the key word. I think temporary is the key word when it comes to this phrase. I have a m you I almost said the second part of this which I I think would have given it away and excellent. I see some great answers. Perfect. Uh Julia. Uh who else do we have? Keva. Nice. I have a crush on you. So if you have a crush on someone, I've given you the meaning right down there below. You have a strong but temporary feeling of liking someone. Keep in mind that you could also say that someone is your crush or his crush or her crush, which is the the a person with whom someone temporarily loves. So think about this situation. I would say I have a crush on her or she is my crush. So it could be used both ways, but this the meaning is the same. Often I feel like people are going to say that you have a crush on someone and that is a I think a common phrase when talking about dating especially when we're younger and I think we always Yeah, there are people that we have a crush on. What do you think about this one? She did not she did not know that she had a again there are two missing words. This is a common collocation. These words are frequently used together.

And you I I imagine you've heard of this before watching a TV show or movie. This is something that comes up especially around Valentine's Day. Think about the picture. She's holding this. Let's say it's a letter. Even though I don't think if you look closely, it doesn't look like a letter. or it looks like some type of uh notice or announcement, but you would say that somebody has a what is the missing noun? Great job, uh Lai Julia Al. Secret admirer, Manuel. Good. So, a secret admirer, in case this is the first time you're hearing about this noun, is a person who is romantically attracted to someone else, but they they show it in a secret way. They don't want to reveal their identity. So they may do this and express their feelings by giving gifts or writing letters. And you have a secret admirer.

Then we have this question. This is I think a little more challenging because it's the title of a song by John Paul Young who sang this song in 1978. Great year. It was the year I was born. So if you want to know how old I am, you just got to do the math. But the the song would you would say this phrase which is quite common everywhere I look around every side and every sound. I don't want to sing the whole song. I'm a terrible singer and I don't want to do that to you. But what what expression? I'll say it's an expression because it's one that someone would say when they're commenting about the atmosphere or the environment. Any guesses? This is again the title of a song by John Paul Young. It's a it basically is a sentence that you would just use and you would say I don't have hear in in a movie or TV show. It was quite popular at the time. How about this one there? I blanked out a few different words. So, it says, "Every girl wants a knight in shining armor to m her murm. A fairy tale ending can exist if you believe." I think this it seems like this was part of a kind of like a a card. Now, I've I've gone ahead and given you a a knight in shining armor. This is a phrase that you could use to refer to someone who would t usually be a man who saves or helps someone else, usually a woman in this case from a difficult or dangerous situation. So you could say, "Oh, he is my knight in shining armor, like my hero, somebody who helped me uh rescued me." And again, you could use this generally today to talk about, I don't know, maybe somebody helps you with a project at work and like, "Oh my gosh, you saved me. You're my knight and shining armor." But that is not the word that I want or the phrase that I want you to complete. I wanted to go ahead and give that to you. But your knight in shining armor to m her m her what? Here's a hint. And maybe now this this may make it a little too easy, but this is an idiom in English that you could use to I what I don't want to give it away, but you see these two images right here. You see the the broom and then this person's feet. So you could try to piece together the idiom every girl wants a knight in shining armor to anybody the answer to sweep her off her feet. So in this case, if you sweep someone off their feet, it's an idiom that means that you you make suddenly or suddenly become very attracted to someone in a romantic way to sweep someone off their feet. So that is again an idiom you may hear from time to time, especially nowadays, this time of year, Valentine's, you turn on the TV, a lot of shows are related to that, movies. So you may hear definitely some of these advanced phrases. This one bonus points if you can name that movie. I love you. Now this is not I don't expect you to you could give me the quote from the movie but the idea is insert nickname here. I want you to let's all think of different romantic nicknames that you could have that you may have for someone you love. What are some things that you could call the person, your partner, your spouse, your wife, your husband? What are some nicknames that you could give them? So, there is no wrong answer. This is just trying to get the vocabulary juices flowing. I'm going to give you some of them, but there are others that that you could use as well. And I think some are more common than others. I love you.

Now, in the movie, there's a specific word that um he uses, Tom Cruz, right there. And I'm sure some of you probably recognize it. Maybe you've seen it. I see some uh good answers in there as far as sweetheart, honey, uh bae, sweetie. Nice. So, here again, there for this one, there's no wrong answer. These are just some different romantic nicknames that someone may have for their partner. In the movie, the the the thing that they kind of joke about was that he always says like, "Oh, I love you, babe. I love you, babe." And this movie, Jerry McGuire, uh, in case you haven't seen it, but again, I wrote put some down here as far as babe, darling, sweetheart, honey, sugar, boo, doll, handsome, baby. There there are many of them. Now, one thing I would say is that these are nicknames for your partner, your husband, your wife, your boyfriend, your girlfriend, somebody who you are in a relationship with. Do not use these with a colleague or a friend. It could be very awkward. These are romantic nicknames. And again, it depends on who your partner is. Some people may not like a nickname. So just because you are seeing somebody does not mean that you are always going to use one of these nicknames. Just keep that in mind. As far as which ones are more common, I want to give you a little bit of a reference. Here is engram viewer. Comparing the frequency of darling, sweetheart, babe, and boo. Just those in particular. And as you can see, darling, I think is a little more commonly used.

Now, this may not be entirely accurate because I think sweetheart, babe, boo, those are definitely nicknames. Darling could be used in other context as well. For example, I grew up in the south and it would not be uncommon if I'm at a restaurant and I don't know, a waitress comes up and says, "Hey, what can I get you, darling?" And they use this just casually with, you know, a customer. So some of the other ones I didn't include like honey for example then you would have people you would have it referring to honey as well as like the food or sugar things like that. So I didn't include those but just as a reference you can see darling is pretty popular as well as sweetheart.

Now, I I wanted to kind of walk you through a situation with these fill-in- thelanks, and I was trying to think of like, okay, who could I use, and I didn't I I figured I'd just use my my my wife, and I just use myself as an example to talk about some of these different idioms and expressions and phrases. So I would say when we first met we really what there are three words in this phrase. It means to like someone and become friendly immediately. So when my wife and I first met, we really what I thought this was going to be a little more challenging, but you guys seem to have gone right through it.

Well done. uh um Manuel Ava Kev Julia to hit it off. So if you're talking about two people that become friendly immediately, you could say they hit it off. Now this could be used in more of a romantic context. You go out on a date with someone. Oh, we really hit it off. Or you could use it just to talk about a friend. It doesn't even have to be a romantic relationship that you meet someone for the first time. you're out somewhere and wow, we became friends immediately. We really hit it off. So, it could be used either way. Just keep in mind, but it's a good phrase when talking about becoming close and friendly immediately. And that's the key word. You you have this quick connection.

The next one, I would try to m her at work. Now, this is a verb that you're often going to follow with this preposition in this context. Now, I'm giving you the dictionary meaning down here. I would maybe I would disagree slightly with the meaning and I'll talk about that when I I give you the answer, but what would you say? So, again, I I I met her. we we work together and maybe to show that I'm maybe a little interested that we're friendly and I would try to her at work. What phrase could we use to complete this? So in this context, well done u pela flirt with to flirt with someone. So this is a little more friendly. Now I told you that this is the dictionary definition down here. The one thing that I would disagree with necessarily. It says like you're sexually attracted maybe a little bit, but really I think flirt is it can be more of an innocent word to show that you kind of like someone, you enjoy spending time with them, and maybe there could be the possibility of a romantic relationship. I think sexually is a a little bit of a strong word. And then it says, "Although not seriously, I feel like when you're talking about flirting with someone, the it's implied that you kind of, you know, you you're interested in this person. You like them, and maybe, yeah, you want to date with you want to date with them." One thing I want you to keep in mind with this, I'm using it as a verb to flirt with someone, but we could also use this as a noun and an adjective. I thought I would go ahead and give you the rest of the words in the word family. And as an example as to how they're used in context, here are some news headlines like to flirt, how to flirt using your body language, or referring to someone as a flirt. Dear Abby, would he cheat or is he just a flirt? And then as an adjective, saying that someone is flirtatious. Blind date. I got friendly, flirtatious vibes for the first for a first date. So those are some examples as to how you would use these different parts of speech in context. But this is a again a word that I think uh is is quite common. All right. Shortly after I fell in love. So we met each other at work. we would, you know, flirt with each other and then I could say shortly after I fell in love. I think part of the the a hint with this one is looking at that verb to fall and then the final part of this sentence in love. This is another idiom that again a love idiom when talking about love and relationships.

And you would say someone would fall m in love. And great job. I think you guys know this. I'm sure you've heard of it. Ava Vidya Julia. To fall head over heels in love. You fall suddenly and deeply in love with someone. It's really just a way of emphasizing that you are you have fallen in love with this person. Oh, I fell head over heels in love. and you're adding that emphasis. Eventually, this is a this one's maybe a little more challenging. I'll be impressed if uh if you get this one. Eventually, I was able to m her and we got married in New York City. And this is true. This is one of the pictures from uh our uh wedding day, March 6th, 2017. The anniversary is coming up. So, this is not a phrase.

It's just a there's a verb that's missing. So eventually I was able to m her and we got married in New York City. Now I see that many people when you probably think uh the the word marriage, you think of that verb to propose. But keep in mind if you're going to use the verb propose, you're going to follow that with to. You propose to someone. So in this case it wouldn't really work. So instead of propose uh again I was trying to yes I think little uh bit of a spelling but yes I think some of Taylor via the the answer is to woo someone to woo. W it basically means to you gain the love of someone especially with the view of marriage. So if you are trying to woo someone, you're trying to you know have this person fall head over heels in love with you with the idea that you will marry this person and you are trying to woo this person. It is not the most common verb in the world. Maybe it's new, which again, that's great. The idea with this lesson, these lessons, is that hopefully you always learn something new. So again, if you It's a very precise verb. Somebody's trying to woo someone else, get them to fall in love, and then you will eventually marry this person, to woo someone. And then this picture we just uh you can see we just finished that half marathon right there. So after we got married I could say now I refer to her as my what once again this is there are other sure there I think there are probably numerous words that you could use to fill in this blank right here. I'll try to give you a hint that it's an idiom that we're looking for. So again, I know I see like, you know, soulmate, life partner. Sure, that would work. That would complete the sentence, but I'm specifically referring to an idiom that you would use when talking about your partner. And you would refer to this person informally as your what. I think this is an idiom that you may have heard before. Uh again, if you're someone who watches a lot of TV or watches many movies in English, you like the the romantic comedies, those romcoms, you would say that you would refer to someone. Oh, I haven't seen the answer. I'm going to go ahead and tell you guys better half. So, if you talk about someone's better half that you're basically referring to your partner, your wife, your husband, uh, and it's like you're kind of saying that, you know, you are one half of the relationship. And it's kind of a compliment saying, well, this is the better half. This is my better half. Uh, my my partner, my wife, my husband. And you could use this informally if you're introducing, you know, if I'm introducing my wife to a group of people, I say, "Oh, I'd like you to meet my my better half." Uh, and you could then use this idiom.

So, those are some that I thought I would just use giving as an example my own relationship. It's a true love story, Romeo and Juliet type of stuff. But, uh, let's look at the next part. Now, I want to go through these quickly. I am giving you a picture and I want you to tell me what phrase do you think of? What am I showing you? Again, these are phrases. Some are more difficult than others. This, I think, is a little easier, but there's one specific thing that I wanted to point out. Of course, you know that those are flowers. But if we wanted to quantify those flowers, what quantifier am I going to use? Well done, Lai Manuel. A bouquet of flowers.

A small bunch of arranged flowers is a bouquet of flowers. Keep in mind this word was borrowed from French. French. So the pronunciation bouquet. A bouquet of flowers. Nice. This one maybe you'll get this, maybe you won't. So if you're familiar with the TV show Friends, you see the character Joey. That was one of the catchphrases from this show, How You Doing. And he would say this when I guess what what was he doing when he would say this catchphrase like to another uh another girl like hey you know how you doing? I tried to it was difficult to actually find a picture that I feel adequately captures this phrase. So it this one may definitely be a little more challenging.

But in this case, he is saying this to show that, oh, I'm interested in you. I like you. I want to take you out on a date. So, in that case, you could say that he was hitting on someone. I again, I apologize. It's probably not the best picture to try to elicit that phrase, but to hit on someone, this is a phrasal verb that means that someone is making sexual advances towards someone and they're hitting on you. And this could be if you're out at a bar, some guy is telling you, "Oh, you're so beautiful. I really like that. You're the most, you know, you have beautiful eyes. You're the most beautiful person in this bar. Can I buy you a drink?" and this person is just hitting on you and they're making these sexual advances. So, this is a phrasal verb you can listen for and use um if you see somebody doing this thing. The next one, again, it's not a phrase, it's just one verb, but I think the picture gives it away. I think it makes sense that uh you see this person playing music for these two ladies and what verb really captures that what is happening in that case. Excellent. Good job la keva to serenade someone. If you are serenading someone, you are singing or playing music for someone, especially a man who who plays for a woman he loves. I think the stereotype of someone serenading another person would be uh at nighttime the guy is playing music and she is up looking out the window of her home or apartment and trying to serenade this person and impress her. Uh so that one I think uh you know capture captures that verb well.

This is one that well I'll see what you guys come up with and then I'll I'll tell you a little bit more. So there's one thing in particular that I I want to think about like what I don't want to give it away. So just looking at the this picture what are those what are those people having? They are having a what? And I tried to, you know, put it right in the center there. They are dating. They're out on a date. Sure. But think about the the light. What kind of dinner is that? I mean, you know, it looks like the sun is setting. They have those candles. It's a romantic date. It is.

But I think what I was going for was a candle lit dinner. Well done, Lilly. Great job. So this is a meal which again illuminated by a candle to create a romantic mood. Now you could say candle lit dinner or candle light dinner. Both of them are okay. But it's really trying to set this romantic mood. If you are having a candle lit dinner, a lot of times you go to a fancy like nice restaurants, it can especially ones that try to be a little more romantic. It can be a little dim, but there are candles on the table and that is the mood that they're going for that you're going to have this candle lit dinner and it's going to be romantic.

This I thought was funny. If you want a good laugh, this is a candle lit dinner American style. You can see those McDonald's uh it looks like those are chicken burgers with the candle right there on the iPhone. This is the American uh candle lit dinner I think in in many households nowadays. How about uh this one? Once again, this is just one word. It's a verb. Looking at that picture, what verb comes to mind? And I think this is one that's more common. So I wouldn't say this is necessarily an advanced verb, but one that I think is descriptive and that you should know and you should be able to use when talking about someone or describing what's happening, especially if they look like this and they're doing this. So the verb that we're talking about um is Wow, nice. Good job, guys.

Everybody, to blush. If someone is blushing, and you might often use it in the continuous tense to talk about right now, at this moment, someone is blushing, they just become a little pink or red in the face, either because they're shy or they're embarrassed or maybe they have a crush on someone and that person found out and they're like, "Oh, no, no." and you just get red in the face and you'd say someone is blushing. It's a useful word. So, here is a little review some of the the phrases that we talked about in this lesson. It's a mix of idioms, expressions, phrasal verbs, and I think again they're very useful in this context of love and relationships which is I think helpful um with uh Valentine's Day. These are words that you may come across. So, of course, right now, if I can if I can get this working, I want to know how you did on the quiz. So, I'm going to put this in the chat right quickly, right? Real quick, and you can tell me, well, how did you do? That's my question for you. How did you do on the quiz? Um, I love it. Let's say that would be 100%. Um, I'm flirting with the quiz would be maybe let's say that's 50%, trying to get a little review with these questions. And uh, what's another option that uh, I could use? Um, all right. If I were to say love is not in the air and that would be maybe you need a little more work on some of these 25%. Okay, so there's a poll. Let me know how you did. Which one? If you say I love it, that mean that tells me that you did a great job.

You got most of them correct. Or if you were just flirting with the quiz, you know, you're getting friendly 50%. And then if you say love is not in the air, then I know, okay, you learn maybe a lot of new words and phrases, and that's good, too. You're building your vocabulary. And of course, if you enjoy these quiz lessons, if you did learn something new, I would love it. I would be, you know, head over heels in love with you all hitting the like button. That tells me that you enjoy these vocabulary lessons. You're learning new words and phrases, which is the goal after all to continue building your vocabulary.

So, let's see what are the the results are, I think, a little mixed. Um, that's good after 20 votes or so. So, I hope you guys have a wonderful rest of the day. Always write to me in the comments. Uh, I love hearing from you. And of course, I will be back uh at some point in the near future with another lesson to help you reach your fluency goals. Thanks for joining me. And

Learn & Practice English with Listening Games | Fun Activity for Learners

Right now, we are on a road trip. Let me...oh I can't turn it around. We're on a road trip, and we are going to play a game. A road trip game. You can do this at any time if you have to practice your English with your friends, do this game. Wes, what is this game? Wes is driving. The game is...I think usually 20 questions, but we're just going to do it with 10. We're doing 10 questions. Each of us is doing a person and a place. So basically, we are thinking...one of us is thinking of a person or a place. And the other person has to guess in 10 questions.

Ten...I can't do because I'm holding phone. But in 10 questions, they have to guess what the other person is thinking about by asking questions. You can only ask YES or NO questions. You can only ask yes or no questions. And if you want to do a final guess and you guess it wrong before your 10 questions, then you are out of the game, I guess. It's kind of hard to lose this game. It's not hard to lose. I've lost before. What do you mean, "if you're out of the game?" What happens then? Nothing...I guess. Do you have to get out of the car? No, you don't have to get out of the car. Okay, so I think we're ready.

We both have our... We each have one person in one place that we thought about so we're going to start. So listen in and see if you can guess with us, okay Are you ready? You want to go first or... Like me too...you want me to ask me questions first. I'll ask you, sure. Okay, so Wes is asking me questions, okay. This is the person or the place? Is this your first question? No. I'm asking which one so I kind of have a better idea. This is my place. Okay. Is it...is it a place that's in Europe? No. No. Is it in North America? Yes, so that's questions...two questions so far.

Is it...is it man-made? Is it a tourist attraction? It can be. Okay, how many is that? Three. Is it a city? Yes. That's four. Have we been to this city this year? No...yes. Yes? Yes, that's five. Is it...is the Statue of Liberty there? Yes. That's six. It's the Empire State Building there? Yes. That's seven. Is it called the Big Apple? Yes. That's eight. I wonder what it could be. Is it New York City? It is New York City. There we go. He got it. How do you feel? Do you feel like a champion? No, not really. Okay...okay, okay so it's your turn. So let's do the person. Okay. The person I'm thinking about. Okay. Is it somebody that we know personally?

Nope. Is it somebody who's alive today? Nope. Is it like a famous historical figure? Nope. What? Is it like... Why does it have to be a historical figure? I don't know. I just thought you'd choose somebody who's a historical figure. So a dead person. Is it a singer? It was a singer. Obviously. Yes. Was he a male? Yes. Okay, was he a famous...was he American? Yes. Was he famous in like the 80s and 90s? Yes What number am I on? You're on seven. You got three more question. Okay, did he sing Thriller? Yes. What am I on? What number? Eight. Okay... Did he also sing Billie Jean? Yes. Who are you thinking of? Elvis Presley?

I...no, no. Is he Michael Jackson? Yes. You got it. Yay, I got it. So then, I will guess your person. So you have to give my person, okay. Okay. Go ahead. You ready? Is this person alive? I think so. I don't know. What do you mean you don't know? I don't know. I have to check. Can I switch my person? No, I'll try and guess it. It's very bad that I don't know. That's also revealing. It's also very bad that I don't know. I...I think I should know this. Is this person... I don't...he might not... Is this person American? No. I mean...no. I might have to choose another person. Is this...is this person...

Is is this person a historical figure? No. Is this person an actor? Nope. Is this person a singer? No. What question am I on? I didn't count. Let's just say two. No...I would say four. Is this person... Oh, this is very bad. Is this person in politics? No. Maybe it's too hard. I can choose another one. Wait, wait, wait...is this person... It is a it is a real person, yeah? Yes, of course. Is this person from somewhere in Europe? No. Somewhere in South America? Yes. Not a singer. Not an actor. Not a politician. Not a historical figure. Is this person...and somebody everyone would know? Yep. Is this person a famous criminal?

No. Wait, what number are you on...like eight? Like four. No. It's...no. Is this person from Brazil? No. From Argentina? Yes. Come on. Oh, it's a...it's a woman. No. Dude, you're like question number ten. Is this person an athlete? Yes. Oh, okay. Maradona? Yes...that was was like 15 questions. But is he alive or no? I think he's alive, yeah. I wasn't sure. I'm going to edit that out so it looks like... I figured. So it looks like five questions. Yeah, sure. No, I thought I...I thought I said athlete. No, you didn't. Okay, so this is your place. Yeah, yeah...location...place. Okay, so is this place... ...in Europe? Nope. Is it in North America? Yes. It's like our two continents.

North America. Is it... ...in the United States? Yes. Is it in California? Nope. It's not in California? No. Is it like a small place? No. It's pretty...it's pretty big. Is it as big as a state? No. Okay. Is it as big as a city? It's in a state. Yeah, possibly. Yeah. That's like six. I don't know. So, it's a city I'm guessing. Nope. That was a question, wasn't it? No, it wasn't. You said it's as big as a city. Yeah. But not a city. Not a city. What? It's a place. Is it in New York? Nope. Is it like a body of water or something? No. I don't... I don't know.

What do you think? I don't know. I'm out of questions. We're fairly close to it now. I don't know. Or we were close to it. I give up. It's pretty grand. How is the Grand Canyon as big as a city? The Grand Canyon I think is bigger than a city. The Grand Canyon is huge. What, you don't think so? We were there last year. I know. Why are you so sad that you didn't get it? I didn't get it. What does that mean? I'm pulling the car over. You've got to get out. What? Why? No. Hope you guys were better than I was at this game and were able to guess...

...to guess the places and the people correctly. Since we are on a road trip now, we want to know where you'd like to go or where you like to travel. Let us know in the comments. See you next time. Bye. And safe travels.

LESSON 413 OF 749

Learn All 12 Verb Tenses + Mini-quiz | Grammar You Need to Know

right now i want to teach you all 12 english verb tenses and then i'm going to give you a quiz to see how much you've learned and how much you remember so let's first talk about well how do we get to 12. so in english there are three main tenses that refers to time we have the past the present and the future and then there are also four aspects and that refers to the state of action and those are simple continuous perfect and perfect continuous 3 times 4 is 12 so we have 12 verb tenses now i'm going to tell you a little bit about each verb tense i'll give you an example sentence and then we'll take that quiz so let's begin with the present simple so the present simple can be used in a few different ways generally it's used to describe actions that are habitual and when we talk about these habits quite often we'll use an adverb of frequency like always usually sometimes rarely never i could say i always ask you to hit the like button and subscribe to the channel that is that's a habit that's something i always ask you to do and i really hope you do like and subscribe to the channel because that way i can become your teacher my name is wes and that's what interactive english is all about it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals we use the present simple to talk about facts fire is hot that's a fact fire is hot and we use the present simple to talk about scheduled time in the future now this one can be a little trickier because we're talking about the present simple but now we're talking about something in the future and this is actually quite common when we refer to a certain time and something that is scheduled so i could say the movie starts at eight o'clock it starts in the future but i'm using the present simple the movie starts at eight o'clock now let's talk about the past simple which is used to describe a finished action in the past and often there are some key words that really indicate the past simple like yesterday or last week or last year or a long time ago if i were to ask you uh what did you do yesterday you hear yesterday and you should automatically start thinking past simple i could say a long time ago i taught in south korea that's true that's a long time ago it's finished i taught in south korea anjangaseo to anyone out there who's watching from korea the next one it's a very important verb tense we we just talked about the past simple so i want to stay in the past and talk to you about the present perfect and this one it can be challenging because not all languages have a present perfect tense but when we use the present perfect we're going to use the verb have plus the past participle so with unfinished actions you may find words like for when talking about a duration of time or since when talking about a point in time and i could say we have lived in hungary since 2017. if talking about finished actions people commonly use this when when talking about experiences uh i could say we have been to berlin it's it's in the past it's finished but we also don't know when so whenever you're talking about those experiences it's very common to use the present perfect or we could use it to talk about something that was completed in the recent past and in that case i could say we recently traveled to italy you can see us right there i like this verb tense it gives me an opportunity to share some some family photos with you now living in another country or just traveling to another country has really taught me the value of learning another language and i i know that you are here watching because you would like to improve your english and i want to follow up on that with a very important announcement and then we'll continue with these verb tenses it's something that's happening right now in the present but it's really about your future and achieving english fluency because right now lingoda is having an incredible end-of-year promotion where you can get 40 off their english courses yes i said 40 and if you don't know about lingoda it is an online language school where you can learn english business english spanish german or french and you can get 40 off all of those all you need to do is click on my exclusive link down in the description and i am very familiar with lingoda i have worked with them a long time i have even studied with lingoda you can see me right there taking a spanish class and it really helped me build my speaking confidence as well as improve my pronunciation so because i have studied with lingoda i can tell you about all the benefits these are small group classes which means you can get a lot of speaking practice they have qualified teachers with a proven curriculum and classes are available 24 7.

classes around your schedule you pretty much get to design your own course because once you are placed at your level based on your needs then you get to choose which topics you would like to cover you can study from home which is a very comfortable and relaxing learning environment and there are cash back rewards which is an excellent way to stay motivated and if you want to know all of this for yourself it is certainly possible because when you sign up each plan includes a seven day free trial and you get that forty percent off you'll get forty percent off all marathon courses or 40 off the first month of a monthly subscription just click on the link down below in the description if you'd like to sign up and take advantage of this incredible offer and the discount is automatically applied so if you would like to give a gift to yourself this holiday season you can give yourself the gift of practicing and improving your english skills which is the gift that keeps on giving now let's move on to the future and talk about the future simple which is used to describe an action that that happens in the future and expresses fact or certainty and when talking about the future simple you're going to use either will or be going to previously i did a lesson talking about all the differences between will and going to and i'll leave that up here for you in case you're interested but uh i could say yeah i think it'll rain tomorrow so that's that's an example with will and going to all right the united states is going to win the next world cup okay i have a tough time saying it with a straight face but i just i got to be supportive so yes the united states is going to win the next world cup just wait the present continuous so we are going to use the present simple of the verb to be is am are plus the verb and ing and we use this verb tense when talking about actions that are happening right now and they're not yet finished so if i were to ask you what are you doing you could say that you are watching this lesson we use the present continuous to talk about temporary situations or habits so if somebody were to say well this month i'm working from home that's a temporary situation we also use this verb tense when talking about annoyances so if somebody were to say you're always asking me for help and in this case you may hear people use words like always or constantly when expressing that annoyance and just like the present simple we can use this tense to talk about the future but not not a time an arrangement something that that you have planned uh i could say i'm leaving on a jet airplane don't know when i'll be back again and bonus points if you can tell me who sang that song let me know down in the comments and then there's the past continuous and we're going to use the past simple of the verb to be was or were plus the verb and ing so we use the past continuous to refer to continuous actions that happened at a specific time in the past or actions that were happening when some other event occurred and we used the past continuous with story backgrounds i could say the sun was shining the birds were singing it was a beautiful day so with story backgrounds you will often hear the past continuous or overlapping actions they happen at the same time she was working while he was cooking dinner both of them happening at the same time we use the past continuous we can also use this if we're talking about a change of mind we were planning a road trip but the car broke down right something we were planning but then we we changed our mind now let's go back to the future and pardon the movie pun but i want to talk to you about the future continuous so we're going to use will be

plus the verb and ing and we use the future continuous to refer to a continuous action that's happening at a given time in the future or actions that will be happening when some event occurs so for a given time i could say a week from now i will be sitting on a beach it's not true i wish it were true and for an overlapping action then i could say while you are shoveling snow in your driveway i will be sitting on a beach and notice that you have that future arrangement with the present continuous while you are shoveling snow in your driveway i will be sitting on a beach and you often hear statements like this when talking about the future while you are doing something i will be doing something else and then we have the present perfect continuous and we'll use have been plus the verb and ing and we can use this with unfinished actions to refer to an action that started in the past and continued to the present and once again you may use this with words like for and since i could say i've been waiting for the bus for 30 minutes all right started in the past it's continued to the present and just to add one more thing about this verb tense it's likely going to continue into the future that that's another key part of the present perfect continuous we can also use this tense to talk about a past action that just finished so say that i walk outside and it's wet everywhere i could use this verb tense and say well it's been raining it's not raining now it finished in the recent past so i could use the present perfect continuous it's been raining and then there's the past perfect in which we'll use had plus the past participle and this refers to two actions in the past and really just shows that one happened before the other now the past perfect is often used with a dependent clause that's going to begin with a subordinating conjunction like when or before or by the time but just keep in mind that the past perfect is going to be used in the independent clause so i could say when i arrived at the office the meeting had already begun it's not a good situation and then there's the past perfect continuous and now we're getting into more advanced verb tenses so we're going to use had been plus the verb and ing and we use the past perfect continuous to refer to an action that started in the past and continued to another point in the past and we're going to use the past perfect continuous in that independent clause and i could say i had verb and ing and we use this verb tense to talk about an action that happens in the future and continues to some other point in the future and i could say by 2067 i will have been teaching on youtube for 50 years and okay that's that's a long time so now you know these verb tenses you know how they're used you've seen some example sentences so let's put your knowledge to the test i am going to give you some sentences without the verb tense and i want you to think how would you best complete this sentence i'll give you a moment to think about it and then i'll tell you the answer so let's begin with our first one right here was um broccoli okay i'm giving you the verb how would you best complete that sentence um broccoli i hope that you used the present simple to complete it and say we doesn't like broccoli it's true broccoli and i we have a bit of a contentious relationship the next one it's a question what um around eight o'clock last night okay i'm giving you the subject and the verb it's a question what um around eight o'clock last night a couple things going on you see last night you should think past there's a specific time which is continuous so i hope you use the past continuous what were you doing around eight o'clock last night at eight o'clock last night i think i was taking a shower all right again past continuous then we have this next one i um to india but i hope to go in the future i um to india but i hope to go in the future okay so in this case we're talking about an experience so you would use the present perfect i have not been to india but i hope to go in the future and that is true i really do i haven't been there but i hope to go in the future then we have she um to brazil a long time ago she um to brazil a long time ago the key word in this sentence a long time ago you see that you should think past simple she traveled to brazil a long time ago i'm sure you got that one right so here is the next one by the time i got to the stadium the match by the time i got to the stadium the match [Music] so i talked about that phrase by the time already that that is a key indicator of the past perfect by the time i got to the stadium the match had already finished had already finished past perfect and then i have one more question for you how long um in line think about the context in which someone would ask you this question how long in line so we're talking about something that started in the past it's continued to the present and will likely continue into the future and you would use the present perfect continuous how long have you been waiting in line so i hope that you did well on the quiz you can let me know down in the comments and i hope the lesson was easy for you to follow and that you now have a better understanding of these 12 different verb tenses if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and i'll see you next time so long

Learn Awesome English Vocabulary....at IKEA!

So today we are going to take you on a little field trip to.. So the reason we are at IKEA is...first off we needed to buy some things. But we figured that we take you with us because we wanted to teach you some new vocabulary words that you would find in and around the home. But not only that we wanted to show you these vocabulary words. So let's go inside What is this? It's a grill, an outdoor grill but it's inside. Couch or sofa. This is an armchair It's actually really comfortable. So this right here is a coffee table. And it goes in the living room usually next to a couch or sofa. This one is pretty cool because it has drawers that pull out.

So these guys are called coasters. And their purpose is to put a drinks on them. So you don't stain in the furniture whether it's hot or cold then it will keep your furnitures safe. Plus they will kind of cool. They're 195 forints. Why not? Do we need them? We're getting some. So these things are called shelving units. and they're just little parts of a shelf that you can assemble and put together. Bookshelf. It's where you put your books. So we don't need one of these quite yet because we don't have a baby. But for when we do, this is called a crib for the little baby. And this is the changing table where you change the baby.

This is... the oven. So the oven is where you would bake stuff. And the stove up top is where you would heat stuff up. So this is a cupboard. This is where you keep your cups and your plates. These are boxes Nothing super special about these, but this is actually one of the things we came to buy. This guy right here in front of the chair is an ottoman. And this is for putting your feet up. Are you comfortable? Not really. I'm making myself at home here. These are some of my favorite glasses... the shot glass. TV. But technically speaking, it is a flat-screen TV. So these are some of the less known kitchen tools.

This is a strainer. Mallet...oh, this side. It's a mallet. Shower curtain. Toilet. You may already know these. Got the spoon. The fork. And the knife. But together, we call them silverware. Cushions. These are bar stools. So these things are cutting boards and you use to cut up... use them to cut up fruits and vegetables and... We're going to get one today, but we need a bigger one. Refrigerator. Or you can shorten it...just say the fridge. So this is called Tupperware. It's one of those cases where the brand became the product because The main brand of these used to be Tupperware, but now all of them are called Tupperware. Swivel chair.

Okay, I'm dizzy. This is a vanity mirrors. It's where you get ready. Did you know that the pillows that go on the bed are called throw pillows? Slippers. Loofa. It's for the shower. This just never seems to end. Should be we get one of these? You can't come to IKEA without trying the Swedish meatballs. You ready to keep going? Yes. We are leaving the showroom area. Into the actual store. We're going into the actual store.

Finally entering the real store. Now we buy everything. These are pans. And they're called pans because their surface is shallow. It's not very deep. This is a pot. And it's different from a pan because it is much deeper. Cheese grater. Oven mitt. What's funny is that there's so much stuff in here, there's actually a few things that we're not 100% sure what you call them in English. Pitcher. Oh, it's a... It's...it's a... I think it's a hook. What do you call it? A hook. Sure. They're so weird. This is something that we need. Hangers. This is a laundry basket for hamper. Lamp. Lamp shade. This is a welcome mat. That you put in front of your door.

This is a rug. It's smaller than carpet because it's just a smaller piece. So this is a frame. It's where you put a photograph like all of these. I think we just about got everything. We still need to get the chocolate at the...at the register. How are you doing? Are you confused? Boom! So we hope you enjoyed our IKEA outing and even learned a few new vocabulary words as well. And... In the comments below write something that you need for your home, whether it's sofa or a pot or a pan just write it in there. Remember sharing is caring. And we will see you next time. Bye!

Learn English & Stay Motivated

Today, I want to talk to you about something that will really help you with learning English. Yeah...it's... It's this. So a little while back we got a question from somebody on Facebook who asked, "How can I keep motivated studying English every day? And that's the question that I would like to answer for you right now and talk to you about motivation. So this video lesson could be very useful for both English teachers as well as English learners. Well, first what we have to do is find out what motivates people more than anything else. So when it comes to language learning there are two types of motivation. Intrinsic Motivation & Extrinsic Motivation

Now, both of these can be important to a learner success at varying stages. So let's first take a look at intrinsic motivation. There! Okay. So, intrinsic motivation is learning a language because you really want to. You have a strong desire to learn the language and everything comes from within. Some examples of intrinsic motivation might be, you're getting ready to travel or go live abroad and you really want to learn the language so you can talk and communicate with other people.

Another might be a job opportunity that is available and you may need to speak or be proficient in this language or that language in order to have a chance at it. Another example might be you want to talk with girls who speak that language. So for example, when I was first learning Spanish I was getting ready to go live in another country And...and...yeah, that's...that's the reason. Okay, maybe you know... I figured it would be nice to...to be able to meet some other people...maybe some girls? Hello my love. You are my life...my heart. Your smile shines brightly like a star. Okay, to be honest. It didn't work whatsoever. But it did motivate me to learn the language and that's my point. These are all intrinsic motivations that come from within.

Intrinsic motivation is very important. Because if you don't have it it's a lot more difficult to learn the language because that just means nothing from within is truly motivating you to learn more, to want to learn more, and to try to improve. I told you I can only show you the door. You have to walk through it. So, if you're not sure what type of intrinsic motivation you may have, you should try to identify it. And you can do this by thinking about things that you are honestly interested in. Maybe you're interested in cars. Maybe you're interested in cooking. And you can use these other interests to provide some kind of intrinsic motivation for learning the language and using those language skills.

Next, let's take a look at extrinsic motivation. Now, this type of motivation is when some external or outside factor is motivating you to learn the language. Maybe you're doing it for some type of external reward. Or maybe you're even doing it to avoid some sort of negative consequence. You people have not given Private Pile the proper motivation. An example of an extrinsic motivation might be a language that you have to learn at school. In my own case, when I was in high school I took German. I took four years of German. And now, I really don't know much. You...sprechen zie English? And I think a lot of other people can relate to this.

That when they were younger and in school, they were required to study this language or that language. And now as they've gotten older, they don't really remember as much because they didn't have an intrinsic motivation at the time to want to learn that language. Another example of an extrinsic motivation might be preparing for exam. They're doing it just because they have to. Because it is a requirement for university or it is a requirement for work. So when you only have an extrinsic motivation, then it does become a little more challenging to try and learn another language. I would like to buy a hamburger. I would like to buy a hamburger.

Hamburger. Hamburger. Hamburger. I would like to buy a hamburger. Maybe we should stop. We don't quit. We do not quit. Again! Again! Let's take a look at both intrinsic and extrinsic motivation and compare the two. Because they do go hand-in-hand to some extent. Intrinsic motivation...I said it is super important because the motivation comes from within and because of that people are more likely to stay with what they're learning. They're not going to give up They're going to keep trying to reach new goals. As for extrinsic motivation a lot of times this helps us get started because we don't all try to learn something new on our own. Often there are external or outside factors that are pushing us in this direction or that direction.

The real key is to understand your students. Try to understand their interest and use that to motivate them intrinsically. Because the extrinsic motivation will only take them so far. So whether you're a teacher trying to work with other English learners, or whether you're an English learner and you just want to find it on your own, ask yourself, you know, "Why are you doing this?" Getting a job? Going to university? Traveling? Learning and understanding people of different cultures? Dating? It's not what I do...but hey... What is motivating you to learn this language? What are some things that can motivate you? What are some of the interests that you already have? And use that to help better your language skills.

I hope you have a better idea as to the role motivation plays in learning another language. So now I'd like to hear from all of you. So in the comments, let us know what is motivating you to learn English? Is your motivation intrinsic or is it extrinsic? Or is it a little of both? Oh, and I want to remind you to join our social media classes. It is another great way to practice and improve your English skills. And can be used as a form of intrinsic motivation because a lot of us are using social media anyway. So thanks for watching and we'll see you next time

Learn English with Friends - Ross & Rachel Sex Tape | Improve Your Listening

today you're going to learn english with one of the most famous tv american sitcoms ever made and i'm talking about the show friends and we're going to watch a scene from the tv show friends and i'm going to pause it from time to time and and talk about some of the things that that you just heard we'll talk about some of the the reductions that they use it's very common in spoken english some of the informal phrases as well as connected speech such as linking and i will also talk to you about well why some of the things that they're saying why it's funny so if you would like to improve your listening comprehension then please subscribe turn on notifications so that you'll learn about future lessons and then i can become your teacher my name is wes and that's what interactive english it's all about trying to help you practice and improve your skills so before we watch the scene let me let me set it up for you let me tell you a little bit about the context so the characters the the group they're talking about a sex tape because two of the main characters ross and rachel they they got together and they were unknowingly recorded and the situation the conversation they're having it's a little bit of a debate as to well who who came on to the other person first was it ross that started it or was it rachel and they're trying to decide whether or not they should watch this tape in order to learn who who was the first person that initiated this so let's uh let's go ahead and well let's let's watch it together you don't want to see this do you hell yeah i am not gonna show you this no okay so right right away you probably heard those reductions she said the very first thing she said you don't want to see this do you so instead of saying want to it's getting reduced to wanna you don't want to see this do you and of course monica responds hell yeah and this is an informal phrase it's really just emphasizing yes that this is something you want hell yeah and then rachel responds using another reduction when she says i'm not going to show you this so again instead of going to it's going to get reduced to gonna i'm not going to show you this now before i play this next part the the character phoebe she's getting ready to say something and i want you to listen for this word right here okay just listen for this one not the sex part just the stuff leading up to it forget it she's destroying it okay fine fine we'll just have to think of some other way to put the whole who came onto who thing to rest come on now think okay so i i told you to listen for for that word because this is an example of a lision and that's part of connected speech this is when a sound uh gets removed so she says just but you don't hear that t she said not the sex part just the stuff leading up to it so even when i said it right there you don't don't hear that t at the end of the word and then she even said it again when she said well just we'll just have to think of some other way to put this who came on to who thing to rest all right we'll just have to think of some other way so you don't hear that t it gets dropped and again this is something that's pretty common um in connected speech so let's continue forget it phoebe okay it's rachel's tape and she can do whatever she wants with it and she wants to destroy it so end of story i want to see it what clearly you don't want people to see this tape now i don't want people to see this tape either but you so badly don't want people to see it then it makes me want to see it do you see okay so this is kind of a play on words because you should you just heard her use the word see a lot to see something and the way she was using it especially at the beginning like clearly you don't want people to see this tape now i don't want people to see this tape either in this case c means to to look at something and then continuing but you so badly don't want people to see this that it makes me want to see it do you see and it's at the very end that the meaning of c changes because it is a multiple meaning word in asking like do you see it's then means it's like understand so think of it this way it's like if somebody were to say like oh yeah i see your point in that case it has the same meaning as understand like yes i understand what you're saying like and she's asking do you see all right let's uh let's keep watching are we watching the tape or not i don't want people to see it for your sake oh i don't believe you i think you don't want them to see you begging me rachel please oh a little preview so this is another great example as to how a word is used and it can have different meanings and in this case it makes it funny i'm talking about the word please so typically please means like you're you're asking someone for something like you want something so in this case she says i think you don't want them to see you begging me and ross says rachel please and she's oh a little preview as though he's saying please with the meaning that uh he's asking for something and she says like oh that's a little preview of what you're about to see in the video that ross is going to be asking her and saying please now it's funny because please can have a different connotation people can use this when they're like exasperated and they just they just don't believe something and that's how he's really using it if he's saying rachel please like come on i don't believe you nobody believes it um but she interprets it as the other meaning that he's he's asking for it and that's why she says yes it's a little preview let's keep going fine fine but i want the record to show that i tried to take the high road because in about five minutes i'm gonna be saying okay here we go hello can i get you anything i'm so happy music comes on as though we're going to a commercial oh thank god you're here ross and i need you to help me are you just talking to yourself oh there i am you're going to get pregnant i screwed up so bad i told monica that i would stuff and send all these wedding invitations like weeks ago and uh you didn't do it i i know i had put them in

in my desk at work and i completely forgot about them until today okay i wanna talk about the phrase forgot about them and the way that she says it this is a great example of connected speech she said i had put them in my desk at work and completely forgot about them until today so there's a couple things going on uh the first thing i want to say again this show is from the united states in the u.s people often use the flap t which is kind of like a soft d sound and we'll use this when the t comes between two vowel sounds so the t that final t and forgot and the final t in about are going to be said with more of a flat t and it's going to sound like a d forgot about um all right the other thing that's happening there's there's also some more elision that th it's like it's getting removed so you're not going to hear that and this allows us to link these phrases together so linking often occurs when you have the final sound of one word is a consonant and the beginning sound of the next word is a vowel so we can link them together like forgot about that that's that flap t is gonna link with the vowel sound in about forgot about and then that other flap t can now link with the vowel sound like m because we got rid of that th forgot about him forgot about him forgot about him all right let's let's listen to it again just uh so you can hear her say it okay and all the wedding invitations like weeks ago and uh you didn't do it i i know i had put them in in my desk at work and i completely forgot about him until today [Laughter] sweetie okay it's okay everybody made it to the wedding i'm fine kind of hurt in my hand though i know i cannot believe that i did this especially after monica just went on and on and on about it okay rachel here are the invitations rachel i'll be very careful rachel please drinking no liquids around the invitations rachel okay so i want to talk to you about the that phrase to go on and on and on about something so she says uh like especially after monica just went on and on and on about it so if you say that somebody is going on and on about something it means that there somebody's talking about something until it becomes just boring and tedious and you really just don't want to listen to it anymore so you notice that she says that like monica was going on and on about it and then she starts making fun of monica she's imitating the things that that she was saying to let's keep going [Laughter] [Applause] did you do it on our invitations not on the ones we sent out so just the ones he gave back to us and we had framed okay so i wanted to to well let's go back to that question that chandler asks did you do it on our invitations couple of things to do it this is again it's an informal phrase that's really just referring to to sex the other thing i want to say about this because do it um we can use it as part of connected speech because do you you hear that that w sound at the end of the word and this is what's called intrusion intrusion is when a sound is added so you hear that w which is a consonant sound and now we can link it with the vowel sound in it do it do it and this is very common you hear this all the time i'm sure you're you're familiar with the the famous nike slogan just do it do it all right you definitely hear those words linked together all the time um all right [Laughter] oh can you believe this is already happening i mean it seems like yesterday they just got engaged i know hey remember remember the night they got engaged you and i almost oh i remember that we almost do you think we would have gone through with it now if we hadn't gotten caught would you think we would have done it just to point out quickly again i don't know if you heard it like she just said you think we would have done it so again using it uh in a different tense done it but still referring to to sex i mean i i know i wanted to i just i just wasn't sure if you wanted to no i wanted to so we we both wanted to okay in about 10 seconds you're gonna see him kiss me and in about five seconds you're gonna see why ross did i ever tell you about the time that i went backpacking through western europe [Laughter] [Applause] get ready to see some begging oh you came on to ross what well i'm so happy what are you talking about you use the europe story that's the magic story you use when you want to have sex okay i wanna stop it right there um and talk about what what chandler just said because this is it's a great example of the rhythm and flow of english so he says that's the magic story you use when you want to have sex so english is a stress time language and that means that stressed syllables are said at approximately regular intervals so i'll say it again think of it this way that's the magic story you use when you want to have sex okay every time you just heard me clap that's like a stressed syllable and the words or syllables that come in between those are those are reduced in order to fit that interval so it kind of you can hear that flow when he says it you know that's the magic story you use when you want to have sex okay let's listen to it again um and you can really it's a good example of the rhythm and flow let's see what are you talking about you use the europe story that's the magic story you use when you want to have sex and i know people have asked me like how what are what's a great way to practice this because i want to improve like my rhythm and flow and to be quite honest i think shadowing is a great way to do this because when you're shadowing you're listening to something and you're trying to say it in the exact same way so you're trying to to say it with those same intervals same intonation same emphasis same stress and you're really trying to do it without having to to think about it too much so i think shadowing is a great way to practice that rhythm and flow how do you know about that story how do you know about that story i heard it from my friend irene who heard it from some guy some guy no no she told me that his name was ken adams [Laughter] [Applause] so i think this is it's a great show and i wanted to share it with you because it's very popular and i would definitely recommend it if you would like to watch something that's a little more casual you get um great exposure to the way people naturally speak using reductions connected speech as well as some of those informal phrases to help you build your vocabulary and in the comments below what i'd like you to do because i love hearing from you tell me which shows in english you like to watch in order to improve your skills let me know down in the comments if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Learn Future Time Clauses Correctly | Advanced Grammar

well hello hello and welcome to our lesson today have I got a fun lesson for you today we are talking about something super cool and the reason I say super cool I think all topics in English are super cool but this one has always been among my favorites and it is because it has a simple rule to follow but that many many people don't know about this rule so today we're talking about future time clauses and I would like to welcome everyone who's joining us today so welcome ilog Mayer welcome you guys thank you if you're watching this now or later I would like to welcome you and to explain so let me start by saying that it's an this is a grammar issue and I have heard many many people make make mistakes with this even at an advanced level not many times in English we have the chance to to have such a simple rule but many people don't know about it so that's why I want to talk about it today it's actually very important and when you get the right correct rule of how to use future time clauses correctly I think it automatically makes you sound a little bit more advanced in your practice and just a little bit more fluent and better so without further ado I yes welcome thank you guys please if you're just joining in the chat or in the comments please write down your name and where you're watching from because it's so fun to have everyone here so hello Mohamed Gwang Jo Raja welcome welcome everyone and if I don't see you you're also welcome but sometimes I don't see all the comments without further ado here is our lesson today it's one of my favorite things to teach it has always been so future time clauses now you may have wondered before if you've seen this word in English what on earth are time clauses or clauses in general so clauses are groups of words but what's important about them is that they have a subject and a verb they always come with a subject and a verb they have to have the two together in English we have dependent clauses and independent clauses and this is important to know I'll start with the independent clause in a sentence an independent clause is a clause like the word independent it's free it can stand on its own it makes sense on its own so for example we have the sentence right here when he got home he turned on the TV now as you can see we have two clauses I've marked them there the first one is when he got home the second one is he turned on the TV making it wrong so one is independent and the other one is dependent and the way to kind of mark these two to kind of notice them is by just looking at

whether they make sense on their own or not so if I talk about somebody who turned on the TV then that sentence makes sense right he turned on the TV great I get it perfect but if I say when he got home and that's it you want to find more information for me when he got home what what happened I need more information so that is why we call it the dependent clause because it's a clause that needs more it's not complete it needs another sentence to make sense but the reason I'm talking about this today is because the future time clauses are dependent clauses so that is what we'll talk about it's very important and the one I have here when he got home it is a time clause it's not a future because it's in the past when he got home happened already but it is a time clause and what do I mean by time clauses so in English we have noun clauses we have

adverb clauses and we have adjective clauses and this last one the some of the other clauses include time clauses and those are the ones we're talking today but there are other other clauses too like cause and effect condition and contrast so right here for you guys I have given you some of the more really some of the most common clauses and those are the first two the time and cause and effect and of course of course they're common we always talk about time we talk about time every day and we use these super commonly so my first one is when she got home she went to bed as you can see it's a time clause because it has to do with the time when she got home and the second one she went to bed because she was sleepy it's green just like my cause and effect up here so this one is a cause and effect I'm just giving you an example we don't need to spend too much time on this I just want you to see that in English we have different types of clauses different types of adverb clauses so if you are just joining we are talking about future time clauses and I'm explaining a little bit about what clauses are and we are leading into adverb clauses and time clauses which are adverb clauses so to talk about time in English especially when we are using more complex sentences we use these time markers okay we use words like after before when Wow by the time since whenever until as soon as every time the first time all of these I call them time markers this is what I've seen them called I think they make sense to me because they marked I'm here for you I've put the most common ones these because Wes and it's Wes his favorite - he loves to do dishes you guys he loves it he does him all the time it's the best Wes will do dishes Wes will do the dishes when he gets home this is my second time clause both of these time clauses are in the future and now we're getting into our role so before I show you what our rule is I want to know if you know what this special rule is I'm so curious so if you do write it in the comments right now if you know what the rule is write it down and I will check it if you're watching this now you can write it now if you're watching it later pause the video write it down and we will check it okay so if you know what the rule is I don't like this yes you do Wes you're so silly silly was okay so um if you if you know the rule write it down okay so let me show you so future time clauses so we've talked about time clauses just as a refresher they have these after before when these time record words in them but of course when we're talking about the future we're going to deal with something that hasn't happened so these time clauses are time clauses in the future now the special rule is let's see if anyone has written it no answers yet the special rule is the following if you guys look at my sentence right here when I finish my work I will go to bed I'm talking about the future I haven't finished my work yet I'm not going to sleep but so I'm not talking about the present so if you notice in my independent clause I will go to bed that is in the future but the time Clause the one with the time marker when I mark the verb there it is in the present tense that's my mind-blown expression the reason I say this is because when I first learned it I I it was crazy for me I it was just something that I didn't expect I thought if you guys have studied parallel structures in English you know they usually we follow the same verb tenses so in the past for example if you say when he got home he made dinner you're using both clauses in the same tense not in the future okay in the future you have to use the time clause in the present tense and the independent clause in the future tense very important this is the rule and it always works and it will make your life easier if you practice it okay so exactly if I watch this class I will learn more so that's that's perfect yes and you cannot use will no you cannot if you have a time marker in the in the time clause you can in the future time Clause you cannot use the future tense so as you can see here back to my two sentences we have after I get home present tense not after I will get home mmm incorrect after I get home I will eat dinner this the independent clause still has to have the future Wes will do the dishes when he gets home so get is in the present tense the other thing I wanted to mention is as you can see here these two if you start with the with the time clause you have to just like all the clauses in English if it's the dependent clause if you start with it you have to put a comma after the clause and if you start with the independent clause you don't have to put the comma so if I start to the time clause after I get home comma I will eat dinner or if I start with the other one was will do the dishes when he gets home not when he will get home when he gets home ok I think you guys I think you guys are going to I think you guys are ready to do a practice okay so that is the rules very simple simple the the the simple present in the time clause and then future in the independent clause so what I have here is a series of sentences I think I have four total and what I want you guys to do is to identify so right now in the comments if you're watching it now write it down now if you're watching it later pause the video and write it down I want to see if you can identify the time clause write down what is the time clause write it down okay so the first sentence is will be here when you arrive tomorrow you'll be will be here when you arrive tomorrow what is the time Claus will be here when you arrive tomorrow write it down just the time clause I want to see if you guys get it I'm going to eat until the tree to eat you know what I have in my mind always food I'm going to wait until the train comes I'm going to wait until the train comes what is the future time Clause write it down okay now the third one has sentences that have time clauses in it I'm going to wake up at 7:00 a.m. tomorrow after I wake up I'll do my yoga as soon as I finish working out I'll take a shower so these are the sentences

let's see let's see when you arrive tomorrow you guys are geniuses you don't understand this will make you sound so much better when you apply it because it really does when I've taught students this even super advanced students they didn't know and when they speak it sounds so much better so I am very proud of it you guys are getting it yes great ok the second one let's see how you guys are doing yeah soso yeah look for the time markers exactly if you look for it words like when until as soon as after before these kinds of words okay so if let me let me show you the answers but you guys did so well so the first one like you guys said is when you arrive tomorrow yes it has the word when it has the present tense yes that's the future time clause second sentence I'm going to wait until the train comes so if you said until the train comes then give yourself a pat on the back maybe a victory dance good job you guys are doing great for the third example nothing in the first sentence but then we have after I wake up and as soon as I finish working out yes yes you guys are doing amazing so if you got these congratulate yourself you are an English master or on your way to becoming an English master doing wonderfully okay so like I said it's one of those things that has a simple rule in English but it's just even even if the rule is simple many people get this wrong so it's important to just kind of keep practicing and even if you've made a mistake even if you didn't get a right it is no problem because we have more practice so you have more of a chance to practice so here is my next practice now

I'm going to give you a choice of two tenses one in the future tense and one in the present tense and I am switching things up so now you have to know which one is the time clause the future time clause and which one is the independent clause and how do you where do you put that present tense or the future tense okay so the first one is I'm going to cry when I see or will see my mother I love my mother I haven't seen her in a long time so I'm going to cry when I see or will see her write it down right now in the comments which one is it see or we'll see which one which one it's in the future okay number two as soon as the rain stops or will stop I will go to the grocery store as soon as the rain stops or will stop I will go to the grocery store now remember these are in the future you have a time marker look for the time marker and follow the rule okay and the third one he gets or will get here before we eat or we'll eat all the pizza so now with this one I'm being a little tricky I am making you choose both of them so you have to make sure that you don't confuse where they go so he gets or will get here before we eat or we'll eat all the pizza now you guys if you don't know the answer if it's too fast you can pause it pause the video think about it write down because I want you guys to practice with me okay so write down the answer whether it's now or later no problem write it down let me see what you guys have answered yes I'm going to cry when

I see my mother before we eat before we eat yes good job yes umm let's see let's see I will show you my I will show you guys my answers okay let's see how you guys did you guys are doing really really well yeah I am going to cry when I see my mother write a of time the time Clause is when I see my mother it has the time marker when so you want us you don't want to see when I will see my mother uh-huh when I see my mother as soon as the rain stops time cause starts with as soon as I will go to the grocery store as soon as the rain stops I will go to the groceries yes very good he will get here before we eat all the pizza right so he'll get here it's it's more commonly used he'll he'll get here before we eat all the pizza right so before is the time marker so that is the time clause so we make sure that in the time clause we stick with the present tense you guys are doing wonderfully I'm reading all of your answer because we are talking about the future okay so keep in mind that these are future time clauses so you want to use in the independent clause you want to use the future tense but in the dependent clause in the time clause you use the present tense so you have to show the future somewhere and that is how the rule works okay now you guys we are going to do a very quick very fun actually so if you guys have followed me for a while you know I love emojis even Wes was talking about why do you love emojis so much it's I think it won't use are great I think emojis help us understand it's another way to enhance the language so I love them and that's why I'm using them right here so for this I have a series of emojis and your task is to complete the sentence so what you have to do is I'm giving you part of the sentence and the other part I've kind of written in emojis and I what you have to do is kind of try to guess to complete a sentence write out what I mean with those emojis so for example we have a plate and we have some food there so how would we complete this sentence so there's like no before we go to the cinema so before we go to the cinema if you see a time marker there that means that we already have our time clause so it means that you need an independent clause so what can we add to make this an independent clause mm-hmm before we go to the cinema okay so write down how you would complete it before we go to the cinema okay and the second one he'll go to work and then again a bunch of food I guess I'm obsessed with food but um that looks like breakfast to me just giving you ideas do you notice a time a time marker if you don't then it needs one and if it needs one it means that you're going to use a time clause to complete the sentence okay so let's see why your guys's sentences are we will eat dinner before we go to the cinema perfect exactly you use the future tense in the independent clause we will eat dinner before we go to the cinema perfect you guys are amazing this is really really good okay now how about the second one any answers for the second one so remember it doesn't have a time marker so you're going to need to add a time marker before after as soon as when once whatever you want to do it a little time marker right there and something that has to do with pancakes bacon and eggs egg okay let's see what you guys are doing he'll go to work after a good breakfast okay almost very good that's a good sentence you just need to add remember a class is a subject and a verb so you have to introduce a subject and a verb right there yeah you guys are doing amazing um he will eat something before oh no sorry that's the cinema one he'll go to work when he gets after he gets breakfast gets yeah let me show you guys some possible sentences that you could have written the first one like we talked about will I wrote will grab some dinner before we go to the cinema again your sentences are also correct as long as you used the future tense we now I'm going to do more let's see what you guys have written I lost I lost you guys so I'm trying to catch up yes after he has a healthy breakfast exactly so you would really want to make sure that you are using the present tense in the time clause okay now this is a more advanced practice because now I am not giving you anything but what I am showing you is a little bit about my day so I want you to imagine that we are writing a little bit kind of like a little story about my day and my day starts starting from after I finish this lesson so I just used a time clause there after I finished this lesson which is represented by the books so I want you to write down a sentence or two or three or four based on the pictures that you have right there using future time clauses about me about my day so I give you some hints with some pictures over there so there's a dancing girl there's a bed and then for tomorrow morning there's a Sun and then there's a coffee and an egg and like somebody walking and a dog in a park tree so I want you guys to come up with sentences using future time clauses about what will happen after this class okay so I will start kind of go and then while you guys are writing I will check while you're while you're writing and please if you're watching this later feel free to also write because we check everything so you can pause and then write your comment and then I will show you my possible sentences after that so I will start and kind of get you guys there so right now I want you to really really really think about possible sentences okay so for example so this is a story so I'll start with as soon as I finish this lesson this is a possible sign as soon as I finish this lesson so I'm using the present tense I will go dancing to do the dancing emoji right after I get home see I used again after I get home it's in the future but I'm using the present test after I get home I will go to bed let's see how you guys are doing yeah so keep writing sentences it could be if about any of those images this is about my day today so as soon as I finish this lesson I will go dancing after I come home I will go to bed let's see um when I wake up tomorrow when I wake up tomorrow I will have a cup of coffee when I wake up tomorrow I'll have a cup of coffee after I have my coffee I will eat breakfast using those time markers before so on and so forth exactly after you hana discusses the lesson she will go for a stroll with her cute pup yes exactly so don't forget to write don't forget to write down a full set full clauses so the time Clause will have a subject and a verb and the independent clause will have a subject and a verb but you guys are doing great exactly after Jana finishes the lesson she is going to take a walk exactly you guys are amazing this is beautiful so here are some of the things that I wrote down after I finish this lesson I will go dancing as soon as I get home I will go to bed after I wake up tomorrow I'll have a coffee and I'm going to have breakfast before I walk the dog I'm going to have breakfast before I walk the dog so just keep in mind that this is how we use these these clauses now what I want to ask you guys right now before we finish is to write down in the comments something I want you to write down in the comments something that you will do today after class using a future time Clause so you it could be true or it doesn't have to be true I just want you to practice so you can you know you could say I I'm it really can be anything but write it down okay so tell me about what you will do after you finish class today after I finish class after I finished watching this video I am going I don't know I'm going to go scuba diving or I I don't know whatever you want to do but write it down in a full sentence because that will help you practice so I really hope you enjoyed this lesson I really did it's like I said something that I really enjoy teaching because I think many people get this wrong oops because I think many many people get this wrong but it's one of those things that once you get it you'll just keep doing it right and it just sounds so much better so I just wanted to thank you guys for watching and please write down in the comments any any questions any practice that you have write it down will answer to you guys if you've liked this lesson and please like it and share it and I'm sorry if I didn't see everyone's comment sometimes I don't see them all but we will get to them so thank you guys yeah I'll go to sleep let's see um I will go to bed I'll go to bed yes you guys are doing great exactly thank you guys for joining and I will see you next time

Learn Ordinal Numbers in English

Today, I'm going to teach you something that is so cool. Something that you probably always wanted to learn. What is he talking about? Before we begin, I would like to remind you to check out our social media classes. Right there. Ahh...because it's a great way to practice your English skills. And it's free. And we do stuff every day. And you should just go see it. Please. Here are some numbers. These are cardinal numbers. They are commonly used in English because they are counting numbers. And perhaps the first numbers that you learn when you're learning the language. And I don't want to talk to you about these today. I want to talk to you about other numbers that can confuse learners.

How to say them and when to use them. And they are ordinal numbers. So today I'm going to talk to you about the first 10 ordinal numbers. What are the first ten ordinal numbers? Great question. The first ten ordinal numbers are... Oh, I was hoping that I would get a chance to tell them to you. But that's okay. I'll review them with you right now. So the first 10 ordinal numbers are... Okay... Fine. You've heard them twice now. So I'm not going to say them again. I know TV and movies are much cooler to listen to than me. But at least I get to tell you how to use ordinal numbers.

Now, when you think about "ordinal" try to think about "order." Which things should come in order? We use ordinal numbers to talk about the position of something. And usually the position when we're talking about a list. So..for example, say that we have four animals standing in a line. We can talk about their position using ordinal numbers. So the cat is in the number 1 position. We would say that the cat is FIRST.

Now, the penguin is in the number 2 position. The penguin is SECOND. The turtle is a slower so it's in the number 3 position. Which means the turtle is THIRD. And finally we have the snail, the slowest of them all, is in the number 4 position. So therefore, we say the snail is FOURTH. We also use ordinal numbers when talking about specific dates. Because they come in order. March 15th. Friday the 13th. September 1st, 1885. And I just want to say, happy 4th of July! We use ordinal numbers when talking about people's names. If someone is named after their father, and grandfather, and on and on and on... John Clayton the 3rd.

Henry Jones the 3rd. Louis the 3rd. Ivan the Terrible...Henry the 8th. Now keep in mind that ordinal numbers have four different suffixes. Four. And they are highlighted right here. So if a number ends in ONE, it's going to have the -st suffix. Twenty-first. Thirty-first. If the number ends in TWO, then it's going to have the -nd suffix. Forty-second. Fifty-second. If the number ends in THREE, then it'll have the -rd suffix. Sixty-third. Seventy-third. And finally for all the other numbers, it's going to have the -th suffix. Eighty-fourth. Ninety-fourth. Seventy-fifth. Eighty-seventh. Ninety-ninth. Umm...eighteenth. So remember, there are four different suffixes. ONE is the -st suffix. TWO is the -nd suffix. THREE is the -rd suffix.

And FOUR to NINE, all those other numbers. have the -th suffix. I've been saying suffix a lot. As usual, with English, there are always exceptions. And...I know, this is something that will drive everybody crazy. But when it comes to ordinal numbers there are three exceptions. And those are the numbers eleven, twelve, and thirteen. Now, those numbers end with a one, two, and three...respectively. However, they all end with the -th suffix. So ELEVEN is going to be ELEVENTH. TWELVE will be TWELFTH. And THIRTEEN is THIRTEENTH. These are numbers that you'll just have to memorize. But these are the three exceptions when it comes to ordinal numbers. So now you should have a better idea about what ordinal numbers are and how we use them.

And remember, the first 10 ordinal numbers are Okay, I think you're ready for some practice. So what I want to do is I'm going to think of a number. And don't worry, you'll be able to see it. And I want you to say the ordinal number. So you can practice your speaking and pronunciation. I'll give you a moment to think of the ordinal number and say it and then I will tell you the answer. Alright. Are you ready? Let's begin. Great job! I hope you got all of those correct.

Now we have one more quick practice for you. And that is in the comments below we want you to write your favorite date. And tell us why it's your favorite date. Now, you can either write the number like this. Or spell it like this. We just want to make sure that you're using the ordinal numbers correctly. For example, my favorite date is March 6th. Because that's the day that Ioana and I got married. So in the comments below, tell us your favorite date. Thanks for watching and we'll see you next time.

Learn THIS - THAT - THESE - THOSE | Demonstrative Pronouns & Adjectives

what's up everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is Interactive English and if this happens to be your first time here welcome what we are all about here is is just trying to help you guys practice and improve your English skills that is what we're doing with our video lessons and we try to do that each and every week so today I have a lesson it's a grammar lesson I think that it should be easy for you to follow and to understand and we are going to talk about demonstrative pronouns and adjectives specifically we're going to talk about four important words that you will hear a lot in English you will come across these words and that is this that these and those so we're going to talk all about these demonstrative today and we are also going to practice using them but Before we jump into it I just want to give a quick shout out to some of those who are with me right now hello lollie Manu monatti Jason I T do deuce above nerd gildner de gali sorry if i mispronounce names machado johnny hello hello hello welcome i will try and give as many of you a shout out as possible because we are going to practice using these demonstrative x' a little later on in the lesson and even if you guys are watching this later i want you to use the comment section treat it like it's a piece of paper and actually participate in these lessons that's what it's all about these are supposed to be interactive lessons where which will allow you to actually practice your skill so that's what i want you guys to do write your answers in the comments write your answers in the chat if you are with us right now so let's let's just get right to it all right so first let's let's talk about what what are demonstrative so as i mentioned before we're talking about demonstrative pronouns and demonstrative adjectives i know i got a lot of information up here for you to absorb right now but just really remember we're talking about forwards this that these those all right now one reason why it's confusing is that because we use these same words for both if we're talking about demonstrative pronouns this that these those demonstrative adjectives this that these those so we're talking about the same words so I understand why people may be confused about when to use them and how to use them the other thing that is so so important is that it shows where things are in relation to the speaker in relation to the person who's talking about something else it talks about where you are are you close are you far away so we use this and that when we're talking about singular nouns these and those when we're talking about plural nouns let me let me give you some more specific information and we're first gonna look at some demonstrative pronouns so when we talk about demonstrative demonstrative pronouns they take the place of a noun and again they show where the noun is in relation to the speaker so for example if we're talking about something that is close to the speaker and we'll pretend like I am the speaker something that's close and it's singular the milk in our refrigerator has gone bad so the milk in our refrigerator has gone bad now maybe I am holding the milk right here just like that person in the picture over there I could just say hey this has gone bad this right here I'm right next to it I'm close to it it's singular this has gone bad so that is when you're going to use this as a demonstrative pronoun now what if we're talking about something that is close close to the speaker but it's plural there is more than one now instead of saying right here these the tacos that Westmead taste incredible these tacos right here they are right next to me I'm so close and they look so delicious the tacos Westmead taste incredible I could just say these taste incredible they're very close to me it's pleure there's more than one taco these taste incredible let's talk about something that is away from the speaker all right it's singular do you see that crazy thing way over there that crazy thing right there do you see that crazy thing flaunt crazy flying thing way over there I could just say hey do you see that we're talking about something that's away from the speaker that okay so this is singular clothes that is singular far away also we have right here we're talking about my next sentence talking a bit away from the speaker that's plural I like the green boots on the other side of the room so I say on the other side of the room you know that I'm saying I'm far away from this noun the green boots is plural so I could say I like those those is plural and it's away from me it's on the other side of the room all right so those are the demonstrative pronouns this that these those let's look at the demonstrative adjectives real quickly okay so again these they modify the nouns they come before so these are going to come before the noun that they modify and again it's going to show relation as to how close or how far away something is so I put both of them up here in this picture right here so now let's look at the the next one if we're talking about not we're talking about this is for singular close and far away for singular now let's talk about close and far away plural all right do you see these tacos all right these tacos she's right next to these tacos these are the tacos that I made I like these right here all right they are delicious I like these I made these right here and in that case I'm using it as a demonstrative pronoun I like these but she's talking about again do you see these tacos tacos is the noun these come before it she's right next to them or you could say far away I tried to give you that line to say some distance it's far away it's plural do you see those burgers okay do you see those burgers they're far away all right these are all demonstrative adjectives again they come before the noun that they modify all right so simple enough all right we've we've talked about the four words that we that we're going to practice using today and again this is something that that you will use in everyday English you're talking about this that it's it's you're directing your attention to something so these are very very important words before we start the practice I just want to give let you guys know if you guys enjoy our lessons and want to show us some love show us some support you can check out our patreon page I will leave a link in the comments so you guys can go check that out I will also leave a link to it right here in the chat if you guys want to show us some love we have some cool rewards up there that you can check out one of them being the lesson notes so we put these notes that you see you guys see right here we put them up for people as a bit of reward a way to review it so you can keep this information and always have it so let's start with the practice okay the first part of the practice is just a gap fill I am going to give you a sentence and I want you to complete the sentence with either this that these or those and I want you to write your answer in the chat or if you're watching this later make it interactive write your answer in the comments okay so the first one right here ready all right would you mind signing mmm documents okay the one thing I'll tell you is because I don't always give you the the distance think about the context of this situation if somebody is talking because we're talking about the distance in relation to the speaker so think about these sentences as though somebody is speaking somebody is saying this so what do you think would would complete that sentence do you mind signing mmm documents what would you say okay um getting some good answers all right yes give some shoutouts Oscar prey on perfect it's a Tao Michelangelo tools Paul dragon Vanessa yes we're talking about these would you mind signing these documents so again documents it shows us that it's plural so we're talking about its are there going to be these or those but again if somebody's speaking if they're talking to you probably they're holding on to these documents and they would say hey would you mind signing these documents right here okay I noticed some people put this but remember that S on the end of documents that makes it plural so in this case we're going to use these which is a demonstrative adjective all right it's coming before the noun let's look at another one are you ready here we go this is it some of these pictures I don't know where they fit this sentence I don't know if you can see that if you can't see what I have written very well I'm going to read it for you and again just put down this that these those which one best completes the the sentence so she's just saying look at mmm trees look at trees and used to use the picture to help you out which word best completes that sentence look at em trees what would you say this that these those write your answer in the chat write your answer in the comments if you this later I want you I want this to be interactive I want to hear from you guys I want to hear from all of you okay so let's see we have all right have some great answer okay yes all right I give some shout outs to everybody all right yes Ally Francisco Lally perfect Enrique John Scott IRA um have that I said their name long Mustapha go SIA yes we're talking about trees in the picture they're kind of far away so trees there's more than one it's plural again it's a demonstrative adjective look at those trees look at those trees all right so these first two I think have been they've been relatively easy all right then I'm gonna try and make the practice it'll get more and more difficult as we go along the next one um what would you say hmm are really expensive all right think about that hmm are really expensive this that these those again what I would say is try to think about the context as though somebody is actually saying this somebody is saying this sentence and that should help you determine you know which one which of these you're going to use this that these those write your answer in the chat what what do you think how would you best complete this sentence all right there are some clues that I'm giving you all already right now so yes all right got some great answers ask God tools Jay Paul dragon Mullaly Claudio it's just moving so fast I take a yes that our our tells us that we're talking about something plural now you might see this and just think oh it's just one it is one set of headphones but headphones again is a plural noun so in this case you are going to use a for a demonstrative pronoun the plural and if somebody is saying that like hey it's really expensive mostly you think okay there next to us it's close which means these these are really expensive these right here that I'm telling you about are really expensive especially if you're talking about like headphones it's not like you would be very far away from the headphones you're like hey those those headphones over there that you know grammatically you could say that but it doesn't make as much sense so these is the answer that we were looking for all right so what I want to do next okay is the way the this next one that we're going to work is that I am going to give you a sentence all right and I want you to rewrite the sentence using this that these are those okay so this is kind of like some of the examples that I gave you so I want you to rewrite the sentence using this that these are those are you ready alright so the first sentence I have for you it's a question okay it's a question what's the frosty pink looking thing on your face rewrite that question using this that these those alright what do you what do you think how would you rewrite that sentence let's see alright I'll give you guys just I'll give you guys just a moment's time to try to rewrite that sentence don't don't overthink it okay what's the frosty pink looking thing on your face what question could you ask it's kind of like a transformation okay how would we rewrite this question using this that these those remember I gave you those examples at the beginning to kind of show you okay this is like your noun and then we're going to use one of the words to replace the noun all right some of you guys if you guys are with it right though right the full sentence so that I know that you kind of understand because if you're just writing the one word I I don't know where you're putting it so again if you're in the comments try to write the full sentence so that I know exactly all right we have I haven't I've seen some again one word answers but again think of the context what's the frosty pink looking thing on your face think of somebody saying this question to another another person and this is something you might hear in a TV show or a movie ok um yes but I on yes all right kind of some people I think are miss confusing it all right the answer all right you're talking about what's the frosty pink looking thing on your face you're talking to somebody else so if you're talking to somebody else you would just ask them what's that on your face something is on that person's face something is on another person's face but you're not close to it you're away from it so you'd say what's that on your face a lot of people put this all right thinking about proximity but if I'm talking about myself then I could say hey what's this on my face I am close to it it's on me but if you're talking to somebody else more likely you're gonna say hey what's that on your face hey what it what is that thing what's that on your face okay so I hope that makes sense I saw a lot of people answering this but if you're talking about yourself what's this on my face then you would use this you're close to it but if it's somebody else you'd say hey you know hey what's that thing what's that on your face what's that in your hair what's that on your arm all right the next one okay now that you know what I want you to do try this one okay um I like my red glasses that I wear every day how would you rewrite that sentence using this that these those all right rewrite the sentence using this that these those take the noun and replace it what would you say okay see somebody people like make sense now I'm glad I'm glad it's easy again to follow and understand that's that's what I want perfect so how would you rewrite this sentence using this that these those remember write the full sentence so that I know that you perfectly understand okay how to write it it's not a long sentence it shouldn't be I kind of just gave you a hint all right what would you say um okay again some of these you guys I think you're right they're not full sentences so I'm gonna go see ya I like these glasses yeah that that that works I like these glass Francisco all right again think about the noun alright the noun phrase is going to be my red glasses that I wear every day that is the whole noun phrase so if we want to take this sentence specifically and just replace it all you would have to say is hey I like these you're holding something all right I like these you if you want us be more specific I you could say glasses but again keep in mind then you're changing it because the way it is written now I like these it's a demonstrative pronoun okay I like these I'm taking my red glasses that I wear every day I'm replacing that noun with a demonstrative pronoun I like these if you say I like these glasses it has the same meaning but these then it becomes a demonstrative adjective so again you're talking about two different parts of speech the meaning is the same because of somebody saying hey I like these they're talking about the glasses but in that case that would technically that would technically be the correct answer yes Ahmed yes perfect Vanessa I like these yes so that is something to keep in mind I like these verses I like these glasses same meaning what one is a demonstrative pronoun the other would be a demonstrative adjective all right the next one all right we're gonna make this I think it is a little more difficult okay the the other practice that I want to do it's an active listening exercise so I am going to tell you a sentence and I am just going to blank out that I'm just gonna say mmm for this that these those and I want you to tell me which one goes in there so this is an active listening exercise I want you to think about the sentence try to put a picture in your mind and again think about it as though okay I am the speaker what is the context as far as how what is the relationship am i far away am i close and that's going to help you so this is an active listening exercise I want you to use this that these those are you ready so the first one that I have for you is this statement right here okay all right I would say can you come over here and check them out can you come over here and check them out all right does that sound a little weird can you come over here and check em out so again I tried to blank out that one part and what would you put in that sentence you don't have to write the whole thing just write this that these those can you come over here and check out what would best complete that sentence again you're the active listening I want you to listen and then I want you to answer that's what makes it an active listening exercise it's a great way to practice your listening skills all right see some excellent answers from Wonderland go SIA Manu asked are Paul said it a DM on Sun the whole sentence perfect can you come over here and check this out so I'm telling somebody else to come over here which basically means whatever it is I'm close to it so we know it can you come over here and check this out all right can you come over here check this out I want to show you something all right are you ready for the next one I want you to listen to it again this that these those your next one is I really enjoy music we're listening to I really enjoy music we're listening to what do you think how would you complete that sentence I really enjoy music we're listening to maybe I'm saying these a little too slow and it makes a little easier I really enjoy music we're listening to it's kind of a challenge to say it quickly when I have to throw in that mmm alright so what do you guys think I really enjoy music we're listening to all right so excellent all right I see some some good answers yes IRA sulla Millard day you I really enjoy this music we're listening to idea I tried to trick you to this is that back to back now the reason why I'm talking about this is because again think about the context if somebody is saying that we're listening to it means that it's happening right now so you're talking about music this music that we're listening to right now now if the situation was like days later if you were talking about music that you heard in the past and it's not happening right now then you could use that and you're like oh yeah I really like that music I really like that song but if somebody's saying like oh that we're listening to it then makes it then implies that it's happening right now so you would use this I really enjoy this music we're listening to excellent all right you guys rock that one great the next one that I have for you all right I could say let's say let's go back to our main slide right here this that these those looking back on my childhood mmm were the days look back on my childhood mmm were the days what would you say what would what would you put in this that these those and that is that is I'd say a common expression in English and I'll show it to you in a second but looking back on my childhood more the days looking back on my childhood mmm were the days what do you what do you guys think all right excellent yes as god much table ghost yeah Wonderland I'm at lolly I think yes looking back on my childhood I'd say those were the days okay so we're talking about again like same with music you're talking about something that's already happened you're thinking about it it's far away from you because it's not happening now days is plural those were the days and again that is a common expression if somebody's reminiscing about something in the past they might say you know remember that those were the days yeah those were the days when life was good everything was wonderful those were the days all right if you guys you guys are rocking that again if you guys like learning these please hit that like button all right let me know that really tells me that you guys get this you understand it and and you guys are doing well with this practice all right hit that like button so that I know all right are you ready ready for the next one okay the next one again listening this is a an active listening exercise all right I'd say mmm pretzels are making me thirsty mmm pretzels are making me thirsty this is from this is a line that

I got from a TV show I'll explain it in just a second but again think of the context as though somebody is speaking somebody is saying this mmm pretzels are making me thirsty all right what what do you guys think this that these all right mmm pretzels are making me thirsty well how would you complete that sentence all right yes perfect great job Dan Monson Brian Vanessa Wonderland AB disease said that uh tools yes we're talking about the plural I'd say these pretzels are making me thirsty again if somebody's actually if you're thinking that they're saying this thing if they're speaking it they're talking about probably something that they're eating right now so they're eating the pretzels and they say oh these pretzels are making me thirsty this is a line from the the TV show Seinfeld from one of the episodes a long time ago I don't know if you guys have seen Seinfeld great TV series it's good way to practice your English I recommend checking it out it's an older TV show these pretzels are making me thirsty all right ready another let's do another active listening and I would tell you this all right again think about the context what the hell is mmm all right what the hell is mmm okay think about if somebody's saying that okay there could be more than one answer but think about really the context in which somebody would say that phrase what the hell is mmm all right what would you use this that these those and this is again I'm trying to use kind of phrases questions that that you might hear and come across in in TV shows movies that that you might come across yes all right I think you guys Rock that yes Monu at least Olivia sorry [Music] daughter son it's going so quickly right now perfect so if you're talking about this question somebody might say again you don't know what it is typically it's something that is far away from you or at least not right next to you and somebody'd say what the hell is that look at they're looking out the window or something what the hell is that or they're walking down the street what the hell is that it's something that's over there you could again complete this sentence if something is right next to you say what the hell is this it's not as common because oftentimes if you're close to something you're able to identify it but in that case again something that's far away you can't identify it somebody might say you might hear them say what the hell is that alright what what the hell is that alright so that that is the answer we were going for is that alright so again I hope you guys found this lesson easy to understand easy to follow if you did if you found it easy to understand easy to follow the best way to let me know is hitting that like button down below and as always we just love hearing from you guys in the comments so like and share this lesson write to us in the comments because we want to hear from you and you can always join our social media classes were active on Facebook Twitter and Instagram we're trying to be more active on Instagram that is a good way to connect with us so thank you guys so much for joining us thank you daughter and son thank you John Ahmed salute Mizpah kareem

Michaelangelo Audion go see Atul's henry thank you thank you thank you Lally I hope you guys have a wonderful day and even if you're watching this later write to me in the comments I just want to hear from you thank you guys for joining me and I will see you next time so

Learn Tag Questions to Improve Your Fluency | Advanced Grammar

all right I think I think everything is working now hello and welcome to today's lesson it is good to see so many people here thank you thank you thank you for joining us today I just want to make sure that everything is working so today I have a great great great lesson for you it's gonna be a fun lesson I promise and I promise that you will learn something new okay because we like to switch it up every now and then do some vocabulary lessons do some grammar lessons and today it's a grammar lesson because a few months back had somebody ask me a question do you have an episode about tag questions and I had to respond and say no but that's a great idea so today we are going to talk about tag questions or question tags so the first thing you might be thinking is well tag questions question tags what's the difference and the answer to that is absolutely nothing they mean the same thing whether you want to say tag questions as I think many Americans do or question tags as I think more British people do it's the same thing so it doesn't matter you can say whichever you like I end up saying both but so again it's your choice but that's what we're going to talk about today so if you are joining us please say hello in the chat I just want to hear from you guys there's a lot of people in here hello snake venom New York uh Hussein Andre welcome welcome I'm just gonna give some some names here Rafi Edgard a mano mo Co todo for long welcome thank you guys for joining me and let's just let's just jump right into it again as we go through this lesson I am going to be asking you guys some questions we're going to do a practice at the end and I want to make this interactive because again this is interactive English alright my name is Wes this is where you want to be for practicing and improving your English so let's make it interactive I want you guys to participate answer the questions practice using these create some sentences use the chat as though it's a piece of paper and you can do the same even if you're watching this lesson later use the comments section as though it's a piece of paper and we want you guys to actively participate in the lesson so let's begin and answer just the simple fundamental question what are question tags all right so question tags I think many of you are probably a little familiar with them so they I think they're pretty simple and straightforward but we will go over some things that I promise you will learn some new things because they're not there there are some little tips and tricks to them so a question tag or a tag question is just a statement followed by a short question you're saying instead of asking a question you're saying the statement and then having a short little question at the end and it's often used in spoken English you're not really going to find question tags if you're reading an article in The New York Times the only time when you might see a question tag being written is if you're reading a story and there's dialogue and the characters are talking so it's really just used in spoken English which is great because so many of you out there want to practice and improve your speaking skills so that's important to know you don't really need to write it if you're sending a text message or writing a paper or an essay it's just for spoken English and as I mentioned the rules are pretty straightforward so let's look at those basic rules but before we do actually let's talk about why we use them why do we use tag questions notice I'm switching back and forth between question tags and tag questions so we use them to ask for confirmation when we think we already know the answer so it's like we know the answer but we're just trying to get that other person to confirm and that we're correct we can also use it if we're asking a favor or you're just asking for some new information so let me give you an example it's always good to have an example so so everybody knows what we're talking about all right here is my example and notice my examples are always so suggestive to you guys so I would say you're going to hit that like button aren't you so again I'm asking you a question the first thing I want you to know when when we're when you're using a question tag is that the answer is just gonna be yes or no it's a closed-ended question you can answer yes or no or some variation of yes or no like I did down below and said absolutely you're going to hit that like button aren't you absolutely so again very suggestive why don't you guys if you guys like our lessons like what we do go ahead hit that like button show us some love and that way I know that you're listening and paying attention so this is kind of the form of a question tag over here you have the statement and then you have that that short little question at the end you're going to hit that like button aren't you the one thing I wanted to say tag even though they don't want to response they'd say like you know you stole the money didn't you and you know it's a falling intonation it's rhetorical question you don't need answer but that's just the one little key thing again if it's the rising intonation yes or no if it's a falling intonation you're kind of like accusing somebody of something and you don't really need to respond so this is my example now let's look at these basic rules and I tried to color code them for you guys hopefully it's easier to see maybe maybe it's not but there so you have two types of statements you have a positive statement and negative statements positive statements are followed by a negative tag so the positive is in blue a positive statement he finished the report a negative tag because we have that not in there didn't he finished the report didn't he now a negative statement negative statements are followed by a positive tag so again that negative in red right here he didn't finish the report did he did he is the positive tag okay so this is what you need to really remember that's the fundamental part of question tags right they're positive statements negative tag negative statements positive tag all right this is where I think learners sometimes make a simple mistake and again if you're having a conversation and you you mix this up it can actually sound pretty confusing so remember positive statements negative tag negative statements positive tag we're going we're gonna keep going through this so let's go through where it gets a little more tricky and difficult and I'm gonna give you some tips and tricks so after let's the tag begins with shall let's eat shall we so this is a fundamental rule that you can follow and right now I want you guys give me some examples all right let's study shall we you know right right some examples using less so if if you're telling somebody you know let's do something and you want to use a question tag we're going to use shall alright this is one of the few times when you actually use shall it's not a very common word in English but you'd say you know let's let's do this shall we so write some examples in the chat I'd like to see what you guys have to say the other one is right here use aren't I in tags to mean I am not so instead of instead of reversing it and saying you know I'm the favorite to win aren't I alright I'm not going to say am not I aren't I instead of I am NOT so again this is another rule to follow I'm the favorite to win aren't I you're kind of asking that question wanting that confirmation great examples Judy let's go to the mall shall we let's hit the like button out exactly perfect that is a great example let's usually say let us see let's eat shall we perfect alright great examples let's go shall we perfect all right you guys got it so if you say let's then you have that shall in the tag let's look at some more so use won't for polite request so somebody would say you'll help won't you now again this is a positive a positive statement you'll help won't you you could use it in the opposite sense and then it would be will you so for example if you're saying like you don't want somebody to leave and you're at you're saying you know oh you're not going to go you're not going to go will you will you are you're not going will you and wait a second I'm kind of getting confused with my example here I'm trying to use it the other way what I'm trying to say is that often you're always going to use won't because when you're making a request of somebody it's pretty much a positive statement you'll help all right so it almost saying if she's saying you don't want somebody so you know you won't go will you it's not that common you're not gonna hear it used like a request use than the negative so again just think about won't you'll help won't you as a request now we're going to use will or would with imperative sentences and remember imperative sentences those are commands you're giving a command to somebody and you're telling them what to do for example when our videos get posted even this video this video is going to get posted later and you can write to us in the comments we always tell you you know I would say write to us in the comments would you or write to us in the comments will you I'm giving you a command I'm telling you something that you should do it's an imperative sentence so when you're giving that command use will or would alright let's look at some more shall we so we have this use didn't in a question tag when the verb is used - alright you used to watch our lessons didn't you again we use use - to talk about things that happened in the past but they don't happen in anymore but when we're using it as our our statement in our positive statement we're going to use didn't in the question tag and if you guys can't give me give me some examples all right use use - all right often again you're talking to somebody else saying you used to he used to she used to you're not really going to use I BK and then it'd be like you're asking yourself a question which is a little weird so give it a try try to use used to using you he she it we they and again you're going to use didn't in that tag also down here there are two endings possible when have is the main verb one of them's more common in American English that first example if somebody says oh she has friends doesn't she that would be more common and I think American English we're going to use doesn't doesn't she but in British many people might say she has friends hasn't she and they're just using hasn't she as the tag so again you can use either one I think this is again a slight difference between British English and American English but again both are correct you don't have to think well I only have to use this one it's it's correct alright so keep that in mind have you can use either one doesn't hasn't whichever you like let's look at some more tips and tricks alright so this is good because if we're using you're going to use it and the question tag that includes this or that so when you're using this or that in your statement this is it isn't it we're going to use it this is it isn't it so is if we're gonna use it when when it has this or that all right keep that in mind and again same down here if we're talking about these are those you're going to use they in the tag that includes these or those for example that image down there you know the shoes these are your shoes aren't they alright I'm talking about the shoes I know that I'm talking about these that's plural so I'm going to use the vais alright you guys are putting down some great examples I love reading your examples of go through a few perfect Wafi you used to play football didn't you excellent Celinda you used to eat a lot didn't you I guess you could ask somebody that what else do we have she used to be fit didn't she she used to wear braces you used to wear braces didn't you excellent example thank you guys for writing those again it's great when you're able to practice and if you're able to read these it just it just reinforces how to use this grammar correctly so I want to let you guys know again if you like what we do and want to show us some love check us out on patreon it's a good way to support what we do here link is in the description and while I'm on that I want to go ahead and give a shout out to some of our patrons Thank You Vicky Sulaimon Pedro

Daisuke thank you guys you guys are truly helping make this happen and helping us come to you with with weekly live lessons and weekly lessons and making it all possible so if you guys are interested check out that link become a patron and I will officially be your best friend alright so now that we've gone through and and talked about how to form question tags I gave you some of those tips and tricks it's time to practice what we've learned and and put your knowledge to the test because again it this is where it's mostly interactive we want you guys to be engaged with these lessons because that's the best way to learn and practice what you know in order to improve your fluency so we are going to do a practice and what we are going to do for this practice is I'm going to give you the statement and all you have to do is write the tag so if you are in the chat I want you to write your answers in the chat if you are watching this later whether it is next week or next year use the comments section and just write your answers there and then hit comment we love it when we see that that people are using the comments section later on to actually participate in these videos that is what we love to see so I'm going to give you the statement and I just want you to write the tag and remember to keep in mind positive statements we use a negative tag negative statements we use that positive tag are you guys ready are you ready are you sure all right I'll give you one second to prepare one all right here we go so the first question is this all right he's always studying so I want you guys you know what what is Tagg that we're going to use to make this a question he's always studying this is again like maybe you're having a conversation we use it in spoken English all the time and you might be talking with somebody about this is this person that you know oh he's always studying mm-hmm how are you going to complete that sentence complete it correctly all right excellent seeing some great answers perfect PP Judy Nisha Alina Adolfo Richard one perfect Wafi Paula yes yes yes yes he's always studying isn't he okay remember positive statement negative tag he's always studying isn't he I'm asking that question yes or no next one let's try this one okay give me a hand mmm how are you going to this this is a common question that you would ask somebody maybe you might say this to somebody at work you might say this to somebody at school you might say this to somebody around the home to your husband your wife your parents your children and and you're you're asking this give me a hand mmm what what do you guys think what do you think the answer is write it in the chat okay I want you to write it in the chat let me know all right so again the key here the key here give me a hand all right remember it's it's an imperative sentence you are you are giving somebody you know a kind of a command telling them help me all right I want you to help me so I would say give me a hand if it's an imperative sentence you're going to use will or would so oftentimes even if you're watching TV or a movie you might hear somebody hey you know give me a hand will you or give me a hand would you this is this is commonly used in spoken English when you're you're you're giving somebody kind of it you're telling them a command you're telling them help me all right help me will ya help me would you so give me a hand will ya I think give me a hand is kind of a polite way to say you know I help me so again give me a hand will ya give me a hand would you excellent so next one next one next one here we go what do you guys think I told you what happened I told you what happened how would you complete that question all right we're looking for a question tag I'll give you guys a few mm-hmm how would you guys again this is a question I'm posing this question to you all right this isn't the last question mm-hmm so we talked about this think about that statement we talked about it when I when I went through those tips and tricks because those are kind of this the slight nuances when it comes to tag questions in general positive statement negative tag negative statement positive tag but there's just some other things just to be aware of which we went over and yes all right this isn't the last question is it all right if we're using this then remember you're going to use it if it's these or those then you would say though then then you would be using they so this isn't the last question is it no it is not the last question here is another one all right so there is yes you wanna die from several years ago they used to live in San Francisco they used to live in San Francisco mm-hmm how would you complete that question all right that question brings back the picture brings back some memories San Francisco they used to live in San Francisco mmm what is the tag that that we're going to use to complete this question and remember this was again this was part of that those tips and tricks that we went through when I was talking about used to if we're talking about used to what do we use in the tag all right perfect excellent I love your answers they used to live in San Francisco didn't they all right and the answer is yes yes we did we used to live in San Francisco so that was great thank you guys again for participating and gauging in these lessons that's the best way to practice that is the best way to learn and it's the best way to improve your English skills you're just getting the best of everything right here thank you guys so much for joining me for this lesson on tag questions again I hope that you guys enjoyed it please like and share this lesson with everybody that you know especially anybody who wants to and practice and improve their English skills this video will get posted alright and what I want to do right to us in the comments write to us in the comments willya using using those questions right there write to us in the comments because we just love hearing from you guys and you can also join us on social media right up here alright Facebook Twitter Instagram and of course here on YouTube thank you you Lissa Ida and Andre Carlos Nisha love the truth Freddy Arturo hablado for each uh thank you thank you thank you so nas thank you guys for joining me love having you here hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and we will see you next time so long

Learn Thanksgiving Vocabulary | Fun English Lesson

hello hello hello Happy Thanksgiving and that right there that is the reason for this lesson today's lesson I want to talk to you about Thanksgiving so today in the u.s. they're celebrating Thanksgiving and I want to talk to you about some of the vocabulary words that are associated with Thanksgiving as well as tell you a little bit about this family holiday if you don't know that much about it and kind of share with you because I am happy to be with you guys today on this Thanksgiving Day so if you are joining us again just let us know where you're coming from and what your name is and if you are watching this later again write it right to us in the comments let us know your name let us know what country you're from let us know anything about yourself we'd like hearing from everybody Patricia from France hello how are you welcome thanks for joining us so again as I was saying from okay Tunisia Francisco from Mexico Vietnam Mota from Argentina awesome great to have you guys I'm gonna talk to you today about Thanksgiving okay because this is an important American holiday so it is kind of a cultural lesson as well to learn a little more about the holiday and talk to you about some of the vocabulary words associated with this holiday and I'm gonna have some questions for you guys that you can write to us in the comments and share with us and again if you're watching this later also I encourage you to answer the questions and interact so let's start out with a very simple question which is what the heck is Thanksgiving okay so maybe you've heard of this holiday okay it is a very popular holiday in the United States which is where which is where you want and I are from we are from the US but the first thing that I think you should know about Thanksgiving it is a family holiday it's you know probably when I think of family holidays I think of Thanksgiving and Christmas those are those are the two main holidays where people want to be with their families now the reason Thanksgiving came about is it was a way of saying thanks it was a way of being thankful for the new harvest so this started a long time ago when most people were farming and every fall they would harvest new crops and they were thankful for that new harvest they were thankful for the food and everybody would come together and that is kind of how Thanksgiving began awesome we got more people Jose from Ecuador Russia welcome guys Nicaragua Happy Thanksgiving to you too Jose happy Thanksgiving to all of you I'm happy to be celebrating with you guys today right here the other thing you should know about Thanksgiving is it's not just a it's not just an American holiday all right it is also celebrated in Canada in the Korean some of the Caribbean islands not all of them and interestingly enough it's also celebrated in Liberia which is a small country in western Africa so I hope I don't get this wrong so in the US we celebrate Thanksgiving on the fourth Thursday of November so which is which is today so we celebrated on the fourth Thursday of November in Canada they celebrate Thanksgiving on the first Monday of October which you know that makes sense Canada is further north so they're gonna harvest their crops a little sooner so they celebrate it on the first Monday and Liberia celebrates Thanksgiving on the first Thursday of November so even though several countries celebrate Thanksgiving people celebrate it at different times and we're having this lesson today because as I said I'm American we're celebrating Thanksgiving today which is the fourth Thursday so if you did not know it already these are some of the other countries that Thanksgiving is celebrated in and one question that I had for you guys all right is again I said Thanksgiving it's a big family holiday what is the big family holiday in your country okay which which holiday do you guys celebrate write it in the comments that is probably maybe the most important family holiday where everybody comes together and they're visiting their relatives maybe they have a certain meal I have no idea let us know write it in the chat write it in the comments what is the big family holiday in your country I'd like to know because obviously in the u.s. Thanksgiving is a major family holiday so right now everybody is back home they're with their family they're with their friends and they are celebrating Thanksgiving so let us know which holiday in your country is a big family holiday I got some Lunar New Year Christmas of course our j'tia is very similar same in the u.s. excellent thank you guys thank you guys for sharing so the other thing is I want to say about Thanksgiving before before I tell you about the vocabulary words is when you think of Thanksgiving or at least when I think of Thanksgiving I think of food alright that is a big part of Thanksgiving is the food because as I said it is it all started people are celebrating the harvest when people are harvesting their crops so you know Thanksgiving is all about food and I put a list together there are a lot of different types of food that people will eat around Thanksgiving but the main one the main main main one is turkey of course turkey is the big one now not every family is going to be the same and eat the same food but for the most part many of the foods that people eat you know turkey potatoes corn stuffing pies like pumpkin pie that's a big one rolls carrots mac and cheese one of my favorites so Thanksgiving is a big food holiday so if you love food then you know you'd probably like Thanksgiving thank you guys for sharing aid in Ramadan yes excellent big family holiday Lunar New Year in Mongolia aww interesting and Christmas and Ecuador awesome thank you guys so much for sharing so this is again this is some of the food that people eat around Thanksgiving time turkey of course that is the main one Turkey so let's get into some of the Thanksgiving vocabulary okay so these are some words that are associated with Thanksgiving some of them maybe you already know because they're commonly used outside of this holiday season others maybe you haven't heard of so the first one is a feast okay so when you have a feast it is a large meal and it's typically to celebrate something so what kind of feast do people have you I asked you about the family holiday what kind of feast do people have what do people eat in your country for these holidays whether it's Lunar New Year or Thanksgiving share with us in the chat share with us in the comments I want to hear from you guys so in Argentina salads fruits asado excellent in Algeria in Algeria City yeah yeah now yeah it is an important family holiday and I had no idea see this is what I love about these you know these classrooms is that we can learn so much from each other so in the chat in the comments let me know what kind of feast do you guys have during these holidays what kind of food are you eating because I think when people get together and they celebrate a major holiday everybody's usually eating alright they have a feast they come together there is a lot of different food that we have and we can say it is a feast alright the next one this is one of my favorites again this is another Thanksgiving very common is gravy alright gravy when I think of Thanksgiving I think of gravy alright notice you might big smile there it is a sauce with meat juices with meat juices and flour so you put gravy on turkey you would put gravy on stuffing on mashed potatoes you can put it on your veggies honestly you could put gravy on a shoe and it tastes pretty good to me probably I'd love I love gravy the last word this one that I want to talk to you about on this page at least maybe it's a word you haven't heard of cornucopia so if you're wondering well what is a cornucopia that that picture right right there all right over there that is a picture of a cornucopia and it is a symbol it is a symbol of kind of a lot of food it is a symbol of plenty and it just means that there is an ample supply of something that there's enough so it's not always used when we're talking about food so you could use it in other ways as well so for example if you go to and Mews mint park or something like that you could say oh there was a cornucopia of activities all right there was a cornucopia of something which basically means that there was plenty there was enough there was a lot of it all right there was a cornucopia of activities there was a cornucopia of food it just means there is plenty so that is a cornucopia the next set of words is this the first one is a pilgrim and a pilgrim

I think many of you have possibly heard of this word because it's not just associated with Thanksgiving but a pilgrim is a person who journeys a long distance for some religious reason and in the u.s. when Thanksgiving came about they say the it started by the pilgrims so the pilgrims came to the u.s. from Europe and they looked kind of like that little cartoonish person right there that is a pilgrim and they harvested the crops and that's kind of how it began but as I said a pilgrim is also any person for any kind of long distance for a religious reason so for example also it makes me think of the Santiago Trail in Spain many people will go hike that trail and they are considered pilgrims when they do that or for example many Muslim men they will go to do the pilgrimage in the Hajj in they will go to Mecca and do that and that is a pilgrimage so pilgrim is used in a lot of different forms it's not just of course it's not just for Thanksgiving but it is a person who will travel for religious reasons the other one this is another important word right there number two is gratitude because when you talk about Thanksgiving again one thing that people do is they say what they are thankful for okay so for example I am thankful for all of you guys being here right now and joining this lesson so in the comments again let me know what do you what do you guys thankful for again let's let's kind of make this our little Thanksgiving lesson and kind of make it a part of your day so write something what are you thankful for are you thankful for you know your friends your family are you thankful for a new job maybe or you might be thankful for the new iPhone if you got that I have no idea you can be thankful for many different things so share with us in the comments what is something what what is something you guys what are you thankful for alright let us know but to say that you're thankful is showing gratitude alright it is the quality of being thankful and it's often used as a collocation with the word show alright you show gratitude for something or you show gratitude to someone alright so remember that those are the words it's gratitude is commonly used after the word show you show gratitude again show gratitude to someone or show gratitude for something alright Patricia Thank You Patricia thank you very much thankful for this great lesson well again I am thankful for all of you guys being here with me today the last word on this page is carve and the reason I used carve is because Thanksgiving the main food is turkey and before you eat before you serve the turkey you have to carve the turkey now carve can be talking about food which is cutting meat into slices or it can just be talking about cutting something to produce it could be object or just a work of art anything so for example you could carve your name into a tree maybe you've seen that before on a tree somebody has taken a knife and they've carved their initials Hosea I'm thankful for my family my wife and daughters that is a great reason to be thankful for excellent thanks for sharing amano hi excellent thank you guys thanks for joining us we are talking about Thanksgiving vocabulary all right so even if you're watching this lesson later on practice use use it in the comments practice writing write to us let us know what are you thankful for what's something you're thankful for now the last set of vocabulary words that

I'd like to go over with you or these right here now the first one is abundance and this just means that there is a large quantity of something so a lot mint often times it's used referring to could be a meal where for example at Thanksgiving there is an abundance of food all right that's pretty standard there there's usually an abundance of food there is a large quantity of food all right but it can be used to talk about other things all right we had an abundance of employees we had an abundance of people working on the project an abundance can be used in many different ways but it is talking about a large quantity of something all right and I'm a chicken and couscous is a traditional meal excellent welcome long great thanks for joining us so if you have an abundance of food which many people do at Thanksgiving then you often have our second word right there which is leftovers okay so leftovers I think in English again most the time it's talking about food when you're talking about leftovers and in general it's something again especially food that's remaining after the rest has been used so at Thanksgiving what happens because there is an abundance of food there's a large quantity of food there is almost always people don't eat all the food you eat as much as you want as much as you can and then there are leftovers you wrap up the rest of the food you put it in the refrigerator and you save it for the next day a lot of times people have food for the next week there are a lot of leftovers but again you can have leftovers if you go out to dinner if you go out to a restaurant and you don't eat your entire meal or if people don't eat everything you have leftovers and then depending on the restaurant depending on the country I know every everybody's a little different some people will take those leftovers they'll take them home and they'll microwave them and eat them later so leftovers is talking about food that is left overs so yes excellent thanks Patricia I like left it I like leftovers too because yes you don't have to cook and it's always just you know it's always just good to eat up the food it's good it's good to eat up your leftovers so the last word um right here is this one wishbone and you know it's not the most you know common Thanksgiving term but it's basically it is a forked bone just like that picture now the reason I put a wishbone on there is because in the u.s. in America I I don't know if it's the same in other countries is that you will have the wishbone and sometimes you're eating turkey Thanksgiving so there there might be a wishbone and it's called a wishbone because one person grabs one side the other person grabs the other side of the bone and you start to pull it apart and the bone it breaks now the person with the larger piece of the bone gets to make a wish all right so people - people will take the bone they'll pull it apart whoever has the larger piece gets to make a wish therefore it's called a wishbone all right again that is something that is something that people will believe in America and kind of have fun with this I don't know if it's used in many other countries or cultures maybe you can tell me if it's used in yours but those are nine important Thanksgiving vocabulary words that I wanted to talk to you about today so again thank you guys so much for joining me today on this very special Thanksgiving Day if you have any questions comments about Thanksgiving please please please please write them in the comments write us any questions that you have we always try to answer you guys and get back to you and again you can join our social media classes which are right down there we say their classes because we're always posting questions we're posting information to help you guys learn a bit more and improve your English skills so long thanks for joining us Patricia thank you so much Marie Angeles thank you very much again Jose thank you guys for being here I hope you have a wonderful day I hope you have a wonderful Thanksgiving and hopefully after watching this you've learned a little more about Thanksgiving about the holiday of maybe a little more about American culture and yeah that's great it's always good to share I know I've learned a little more today thanks to all of you so again thank you guys so much for being with me today and we will see you very shortly all right bye Happy Thanksgiving

Learn Useful English Vocabulary Ignorant

Dragons are real. That's ridiculous! Um...have you seen Game of Thrones? That statement...is ignorant. And that is our word for this lesson. The word "ignorant" means lacking knowledge or awareness. If somebody is not knowledgeable about a topic, or they don't know that much, then they may be a little ignorant about it. Let me start out by saying this is not a good word. Nobody likes being called ignorant. It's another way of saying somebody is stupid. Nobody likes being called stupid. But the truth is that we are all a little ignorant to some extent because we don't know everything about everything. For example, I don't know much about art history so I'm a bit ignorant when it comes to that.

Also when it comes to good fashion, nutrition, design...as well as Uh...okay. I think we get the point. So since we shouldn't directly call somebody ignorant because it's not nice, we use the word to describe some things that people say or do. If people don't have much knowledge or information about something, then they may say ignorant comments or ignorant statements or even have ignorant behavior. Here are some examples of some ignorant things that a person could say. Are you serious? You really think that? Uh...yeah! It's the Internet. Anybody can put anything up there. Do you know where babies come from? I don't even know what to say to that. Three kids. Now that you know the meaning of the word, let's look at the pronunciation.

The word "ignorant" has three syllables. And the stress is on the first syllable. Now keep in mind that the third syllable has the schwa or /uh/ sound. I'll say the word, and then I want you to repeat after me. Ignorant. Ignorant. That was perfect. You sound just like a native English speaker. Now let's use it in a sentence, so repeat after me. Wes can be a little ignorant when it comes to fashion. Okay. I admit it. I'm one of those guys. I like wearing socks and sandals.

Now we can expand our vocabulary with a couple of other words in the word family. If we use the word as a noun with the same meaning, the word is ignorance. There's a famous saying with this word. Basically, people say this to emphasize that sometimes it's better not to know all the facts about a situation. For example, let's say that you're trying to eat healthy and somebody offers you some delicious food. You don't know if it's healthy or not, but it tastes so good that you don't want to know.

Another word in the family, which I'm sure some of you already know is the the word "ignore." This is a verb whose meaning is a little different. "To ignore" is to refuse to notice or acknowledge. So, if you don't pay attention to someone, then you are ignoring them. You may have also seen this word when writing papers. Programs might underline your mistakes and then when you click on the word it will ask if you want to ignore that mistake. Can you give us some more examples with these words? Sure! Let's look at some famous quotes. Here he's saying that there are things that he doesn't know and that's okay to admit.

This is saying as long as you understand there is a lot you do not know. That is another form of knowledge. So let's practice what we've learned. We're going to give you three multiple choice questions, and for the first two questions we want you to say your answers aloud. That will give you an opportunity to practice your pronunciation. We'll give you a few seconds, and then we'll show you the answer. Here's your first question. The correct answer is a) ignorant. This is an adjective, and it describes what he said yesterday. Here's the next question. The correct answer is c) ignore. The sentence is a request, and ignore is the verb.

Someone would say this to you if you're not paying attention to them. Now we have one more question for you, but first we'd appreciate it if you go ahead and like our video. We also want you to practice and write a sentence using one of the words in the comments below. If you need some time, just pause the video. I'd also encourage you to read each other's comments because that helps you connect with your fellow classmates. For this last question, we want you to CLICK on the answer that you think is correct. If you get it right, we'll let you know. If it's not correct, it'll take you back to the beginning of this video.

And we hope that you watch it again because the more you watch, the more you'll learn. Okay. Here's your final question.

LESSON 423 OF 749

Learn Vocabulary in Barcelona with Interactive English in Barcelona | Travel VLOG

We are on our way to... Welcome to the incredible city of Barcelona! On this trip we're going to teach you, and show you some new vocabulary words. These words are not in any particular order. They're just related to our trip. Enjoy! We're getting off to a little bit of a late start today, but that is okay. Just taking it nice and easy. Today's agenda... We are at the beautiful Barcelona coast. And the coast is just the land that is next to or near the sea. Other words for this might be waterfront or shoreline. But "coast" is the most common word you would hear to describe this location. How long does this take you to make?

Nine hours. Nine hours? Yeah, I finished now. Very cool! So if you walk along, on the beach in Barcelona, you can see a lot of street vendors. And these are people just trying to sell you things. And they sell anything from carpets, to scarves, to glasses, sunglasses, and mojitos. These guys are everywhere. Barcelona is the city of balconies. And a "balcony" is a raised platform hanging from the side of the building, surrounded by either a railing or a piece of the wall. And we can see them around here. They're everywhere. How far did we go today? We have 28,839 steps. Nice! So today, we are going right...here. The architecture in Barcelona is insane.

It is so intricate. It's so unique. And so different than anything else I've seen. Architecture is the way a building is designed and constructed. And it can be constructed in different styles. Like this one is designed by Gaudi, who is a Spanish architect. And you can find his buildings all over Barcelona. I like this too. These are really cool. Look...a little snail! A little ladybug! The interior symbolizes a forest with the columns as the trees the branches, and then the lights are the leaves. Thank you audio guide! Here's some more famous architecture by Gaudi. His work can be found all over the city. So right now we are on our way to... What? Oh...I thought we were going to do that cute couplish thing where they finish each other's sentences.

Güell park! So this is a column. And a "column" is a vertical structure that helps hold up a building. And often you find them in historical buildings. We saw them in Temple de Sagrada Familia. And as you can see, in this park, these columns are holding up this platform above. There are a lot of columns in Güell park. We are at the Labyrinth Park. So this is just a maze of trees which we're going to try and get through. Uh-oh. What's happening? Well, we have hit a dead end. So a "dead end" is just...like a pathway or a street that comes to complete end and there is nowhere to go.

As you can see, we have hit a dead end, and we have to turn back around. I think everybody else is lost as well. We're having a lot more trouble with this than we thought. We keep circling back around the the front, but I think we're making a little progress now... Oh-no! Oh-no! Another dead end! We're not. We've now attempted this twice and we've ended up, each time, right back here at the entrance. How does it feel? Horrible! I want to get back in there. Alright. Let's give it another go! Keep hitting dead end after dead end. I think this is the end. We made it. Success! Should we do it again? No! I'm scared.

So this massive building right behind me is called a "stadium." And a stadium is typically where sporting events take place. And inside the stadium there are thousands and thousands of seats where people can watch these matches. Now, this stadium is home to FC Barcelona, which is perhaps the most famous sports team in the world. Let's take a look inside. Thanks for watching! We hope you enjoyed our trip to Barcelona. And before we go we'd like to practice what we've learned today, so we want you to choose one of the words from this lesson and write a sentence in the comments below. We'll see you next time! It's only fitting we end with some sangria and paella.

Learn Vocabulary in Dubrovnik with Interactive English | Travel VLOG

I want to show you something. Hello, and welcome to beautiful Dubrovnik. So on this trip we're going to be teaching you some new vocabulary words. But not only that, we're also going to be showing them to you. These words are going to be pretty random because they're not going to be specifically going to be about Dubrovnik but rather about our trip in general. Enjoy! Here is a map of Dubrovnik. And part of Dubrovnik right here is a peninsula. And a peninsula is just a part of land that is surrounded by water on three different sides. Even if we look at Old Town, it's kind of like a mini-peninsula. as it's surrounded by water on three sides as well.

You have everything? Are you sure? No. Because you're infamous for forgetting stuff. You're infamous for forgetting... Now, we're going to go explore a little bit of Old Town. So Ioana is working on her career as an amateur photographer. This right here is called an alley. So it's basically a narrow pathway, usually for people walking that is in between two buildings or even behind a building. There are so many different alleys in Dubrovnik. Like this one! It's so easy to get lost and turned around in here. But so much fun as well. These are called love locks. I guess people will write their names on them and then lock them up on these gates for their eternal love.

Why do people do it? They do it to show that once they lock it their love is...that they're locked together in love. Forever. Or as long as these locks are on the fence, I guess. So what they've done is engraved their names into these locks. and "engraved" just means to write something onto a hard surface. Like a lock such as this. So this would be like something that's written on there. This is engraved. Not all of these are engraved, but a lot of them are. This one looks like it belongs a gym locker. Here's a good example of one. It's engraved. Eva and Kieran, good job! We are now getting ready to walk from here...up to there.

And this right behind me is a cable car. It is a type of transportation that will take people up and down mountains, and it is attached to a cable. Now, we're in the process of walking up the mountain Perhaps foolishly we decided not to take the cable car. Krizni put walking trail. Nice! So, we made it to the top. It's a nice climb...a few hundred meters. But it was straight up. So we thought we were going to do this without the cable car, but then as we were walking up, this really nice couple gave us tickets to use the cable car to go back down. So we're going to check it out, and show you guys the view.

So that worked out really well. Big thank you to the kindness of strangers. So just behind me is Old Town in Dubrovnik, and this is the most historical part of the city. And a long time ago, these walls were built that fortified the city. And fortified, it means just to protect. And you hear it as an adjective talking about like fortified fences or fortified walls, which is what these were. How else is the town fortified? Well, it includes three forts, sixteen towers, six bastions, two corner fortifications, and two citadels. So...a lot. We are really high up here. Let me show you. She's stuck. Because at some point, in like the 16th century...I think. There was an earthquake and the city almost fell to the ground. And then.

They had to rebuild it. In the 16th century, it was like really big. and blah, blah, blah, blah, blah. We're very well informed on this...this trip. We are. It's just a really long history. I got to say, we are pretty impressed with the City Walls. It's taken us about three hours...two or three hours to walk around it. You can feel the history. Today, we are going to be going...there. So you can see behind me, it's a little cloudy this morning. So if we wanted to describe the weather, we'd say it is a bit overcast outside. And overcast just means that it is...like it is. It's cloudy. It might rain. It might not rain.

But the good news is...is that it's not going to stay like this all day. But right now, it's overcast. Can we get a roundtrip? - Yes - How much is it? Thank you. Alright, we got our tickets. Here's the boat. We're on our way! We made it to the island. The weather is still a bit overcast as you can see. But...you know. That's okay. At least it's not raining. This is... I don't know what this is. We found it. We're at nineteen. The Chapel of Annunciation. So the island is full of these peacocks. So this is a peacock. It's kind of like a turkey but way more colorful. And usually males are more colorful than females.

Do you really know this? Or are you just making that up? I think so. Usually males are more colorful than females in many species. So...it's the same with the peacock. They're peaceful...I guess. Well, he's getting really close though. He's so pretty. Grab him! Get him! Go! Go! Go! Go! Apparently, there is no smoking of pipes on this island. We are going to Fort Royal. We got a nice little 360 view of the island. Thanks for watching! We hope you enjoyed our trip to Dubrovnik. Hopefully you learned some new vocabulary words.

Now, it's time to practice. Take one of the words from the video and use it in a sentence in the comments below. If you don't remember the meaning of the words, just rewatch the video. Goodbye! We'll see you next time. In case you didn't know, Ioana is a huge cat person. Uh oh! It's going to attack. No he won't. What's it mean...it's showing his butt to you? What does that mean when cats do that? That they like it.

Learn about July 4th in English | Vocabulary + American Culture

hello everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English and if this is your first time here this channel it's just all about helping you guys practice and improve your English and today I have it's kind of a cultural lesson because we're talking about a holiday in the United States an American holiday but it's also a vocabulary lesson because I'm going to talk about different words and phrases that are associated with this holiday which I first just want to say to all of you happy 4th of July that is the holiday we're talking about July 4th happy 4th of July to especially those who are with me right now rod monatti lolli great to see so many members here excellent great to see you guys Deepa Amit nee Michelle Leonardo Adan how are you thank you guys for joining me and I do want to draw butcheries

Saudia welcome thank you and I do want to take some of your questions about this holiday as I go through and tell you a little bit about the fourth of July share with you some of my thoughts and opinions and teach you some new words along the way as we go through this so if you have any questions specific to the fourth of July write those in the chat and I will try to answer them as we go through the lesson so I first want to start out when again this is more just me as somebody from the United States when I think of the fourth of July I don't know why and this may not be the same for everything everyone the first thing that I think of are fireworks okay the same way that if I think of Thanksgiving I think of Turkey for fourth of July I think of fireworks because this has become like a bit of a trademark for this holiday there are at the 4th of July there are so many different fireworks show that NGO that take place all across the country and this is something that I really associate with this holiday even though other holidays you may people may send off fireworks as well so let's do a little vocabulary because if you're thinking about fireworks then some ways some adjectives that you could use to describe fireworks like dazzling sparkling shimmering glittering those are all adjectives you could use to describe I think something that's like lighting up let's lights in the sky and then booming I think that's more one for the sound that these fireworks they explode and it's just a booming sound now you I also wonder well let's talk about some different kinds of fireworks I told you if you stick with me I guarantee you you will learn some new words because I bet many of you you may not know the words of these specific fireworks so some very common fireworks I think if we start over here okay up in the top corner there sparklers those are just those sticks they just light up and they just sparkle like I said you could describe fireworks as like sparkling now poppers I think these are the ones that I think a lot of children will play with them you throw them on the ground and it just makes that snapping sound that popping sound over here smokebomb self-explanatory it's just this you light it nothing explodes it's just a bunch of smoke down here we have these mortars now mortars are the type of fireworks that they you see it's kind of like a tower they shoot up in the air and then they explode and it's a bigger explosion such as the fireworks like right here in in this picture I'd say those come from mortars then we have down here roman candles which are those sticks that you hold out and it shoots the fireworks out and then of course over there the m-80s those are the ones that make the very loud noise so I have a question for all of you are there any holiday specific holidays in your country in which everybody sets off fireworks that fireworks are a big part of this holiday in your country let me know let me know in in the chat so again just happy fourth of July thank you guys to those who are just joining sooo right good to see you Alex Amir Orlando glad you guys can join me on e so if you have some questions all right just write them in the the chat about the fourth of July hopefully as we go through the lesson I will answer some of those questions so I've already told you that for me when I think a 4th of July I think about fireworks but that is not why the 4th of July has become a holiday so let's talk a little bit about the history the history of the the 4th of July and the the United States in general so it really all began with these gentlemen right here who I they are referred to as the founding fathers of the country so this is more cultural vocabulary specific to specific to the United States the founding fathers are the people who kind of who put together the United States in total there are I think about eight or ten founding fathers I probably the Declaration of Independence this was the document that they created in which they said that that they are no longer a British colony the United States is its own country and they wrote the Declaration of Independence now speaking of John Hancock somebody was asking about that it's in here you can see that on the Declaration of Independence John Hancock wrote his name very large because supposedly at the time King George who was the king of the U.K. at the time supposedly he had very poor eyesight so John Hancock wrote his name very large so that it would be easy for King George to say his name now this has also become an expression in American English sometimes you could ask somebody if they say oh here's a here's a piece of paper I need can I get your John Hancock and if somebody is asking for your John Hancock it basically means signature so this is an idiom that people might use in the United States to talk about signature I need to get your signature I need to get your John Hancock all right there you go that's an English idiom for you about this so the other thing that I think of when I think of the July 4th people think of Liberty Liberty is another word to express freedom that you are people might use it in a phrase and say that you are at liberty to do something you are free to do something you're at liberty to do it I don't know why when I think of Liberty I think of somebody holding their hands up high in the sky they're free when in fact a better image probably would have been this one right here which is the Statue of Liberty some people call her Lady Liberty and this is a famous landmark in the United States located in New York City even though this this was donated wait a second it's her she's over here this was donated to the United States I believe around like 18 1886 which is well at which is over a hundred years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence but again this is a famous landmark in the United States and July 4th there would be fireworks going off and over Lady Liberty for to celebrate this holiday so the other thing that I have because we were talking about fireworks some of you answered that question that like oh Oh Carnivale Christmas so yeah there's there are many different holidays I think people would set off fireworks and I know they do that in the U.S. Futurity says lunar you lunar Lunar New Year all right excellent in the U.S. there's many but I'd know I definitely think of July 4th is like the main firework holiday the other question that I had for you is in in your country does the flag have a name does anybody have a name for your flag so for example in the United States you think of the Declaration of Independence the United States was born all right this is when the country was born and you think of the flag because the flag is a symbol for a country and in the United States our flag people would just call it the red white and blue so people would refer to if they want to talk about the flag they may just say the red white and blue or an older term which is not as common people might call it Old Glory so these those are two different names for the flag in the United States you could call it the red white and blue or Old Glory so what do you what do you think what what what are some names for your flags in your country sir ass I've heard that friends help Americans to get their independence yes that is true because before it was the British and the French that were fighting in the for the U.S. territory all right the I believe the British won that it became a colony of Britain so when the United States started they signed the Declaration of Independence they fought the Revolutionary War that is probably another word that I should have added so the Revolutionary War was the war that the US was fighting against England at the time they were fighting for their independence and the French were helping the the colonists they were helping the United States to defeat the British that is absolutely true so what is saying that in Orlando in Cuba is called the solitary star very cool Union Jack excellent what else do you guys have Bolivia tricolor all right I didn't know that from Japan so interesting that that yeah flags typically have a nickname the US the red white and blue or you could say Old Glory now the other thing that I'd say is that when you think of countries and freedom like when they celebrate their their Independence Day or their National Day you think of things like the national anthem so what this means is that if you're talking about a country's national anthem it's talking about the song that is related to that country that that represents that country and again just like all countries have a flag which is their symbol pretty much all countries have a national anthem I really don't know of any country that does not have a national anthem and that would be my next question to you guys what what is the national anthem in your country and I don't know if there is a there is an English translation for that but in case you don't know what the national anthem is in the United States it is the star-spangled banner all right this is the national anthem in the United States I I'm debating whether I should sing some of it for you because I am a horrible singer but in case you I'm sure you've heard it in probably in movies or if you're watching a sporting event from the United States they all start out playing the national anthem and it begins like Oh like oh say can you see by the dawn's early light what so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming okay I'll stop whose brats bright whose broad stripes and bright stars so it it's a song it goes on for maybe just a couple of minutes typically national anthems I don't think they they're not very long songs but again I think this is another way that countries can the countries have an identity through their Flags through their music and the national anthem so what do we have national anthem what do you guys got so life says in France ah the 14th of July Bastille the French Revolution excellent I was actually in Paris when was it maybe back in 2003 for the Bastille holiday and there were there were many fireworks going off per day the national anthem is Indonesia Araya excellent la Li says drop out Nicole or my French pronunciation I'm sure is is very is very poor I apologize for that god save the queen british national anthem excellent so yeah song countries they have a national anthem again it's part it's another identity and this is something to when I think of the flag that is somewhat Universal I think when people want to show respect to the flag they would do that salute and that is that motion in case you did not know that word people might salute the flag or if they are in the the military that is something that people will salute kind of way of showing recognition to either someone else because you could salute a person or something that is important like a flag so some questions that you somebody asked measure said how many how many stars does a US flag have so when the United States declared independence there were 13 stars on the flag and that represented the 13 colonies because at that time in 1776 there were 13 colonies today there are 50 states so the flag has 50 stars on it good question excellent I love it let's see you guys again sharing information I love this because oh so I said Cyprus does not have a national anthem okay I did not know that in Somalia national anthem oh so right for the French national is lame they marseille excellent so I love this just being able to share this information with each other not only you're learning about a little bit about US culture but you're learning about everybody else's country a little bit as well so you Ray says I'm a good thing thank you thank you really excellent so now you know what I think of when I think of the 4th of July I think of fireworks you know a little bit about the history and the signing of the Declaration in 17 in 1776 on July 4th and John Hancock wrote his big name which today stands for a kind of signature red white and blue is the flag now let's talk a little bit about I want to talk about a couple of words that people think about when you think about these holidays about independence or national days and the first one I want to start out with is patriotism and patriotic so patriotism is talking about the noun and patriotic is the adjective the reason why I'm bringing up these two words is because sometimes they are confused with these two words right here nationalism and nationalistic nationalism is a noun nationalistic is an adjective so what I would say is patriotism the reason they're confused is because both of them refer to a love of one's country sometimes people might even say they're you could use them as synonyms but I do think there is a difference patriotism to me is a love of your country because you are you are proud of it you are proud of the accomplishments you are you are also proud of the way of life the way that your country has developed and the way the people are and the culture and society and you could say that you have patriotism you're proud of your country or for example if you want to use an adjective you can say you are patriotic somebody who's patriotic they're proud of their country and the way the way of life now I the reason I say it's a little different from nationalism is because nationalism also it's like you're proud of your country but I think also it has to do with power a little bit about power that you're proud of your country's power and might and it could be the power that the country has because of the military and they've I don't know winning many wars and you're you're fighting different Wars or you're taking over land or maybe even nowadays economically so and in both of those cases some people might not think that's a good thing that if a country is at war and they're taking land from another country some people may especially the those that are not from that country they may be against it but the people that are proud of their country for those things like oh the country is so powerful that's a little more nationalism and nationalistic so again be aware of that difference if somebody if you just want to be that you're proud of the country it's a good thing then I would use patriotism and say that you are patriotic if you're talking more about the power and maybe the government the power that your country has that's a little more nationalism and that's why I think some people say that patriotism is a good thing nationalism could be a little dangerous because again your your being saying that oh like power is the most important thing which I think most of us can agree that it's not it can be a little dangerous but that's why I showed these two different pictures like patriotism with the flag and you're proud of the country and nationalism you see right here they're doing this parade and it's like a it's a little bit of a military parade because that's the other thing that I wanted to talk about too because when you think of July 4th and Independence the Revolutionary War they were fighting for it the military was involved in in that and because of that people will think about this holiday and they want to pay tribute pay tribute to the founding fathers who wrote the Declaration of Independence and and wanted to be free they wanted their Liberty alright I'm reviewing some of these words they want to pay tribute for the people that fought in the war and let's look at oh the next thing I wanted to show you is again just talking about a phrase that people might use when talking about July 4th the love of country is a phrase that people might say in English and you could use it in talking about your country if you're talking about like oh I have I have a true love of country there you'd be talking about your country but it's an expression that people would say when they are proud of their country to show a love of country all right so let me let me talk a little bit more answer a few more questions some people said you were asking about if nationalism and patriotism are the opposite no they are not the opposite again they're similar and that people are you're you're proud of your country you have a lot of pride for your country but the difference is really like why because patriotism is more you're proud of the people and the way of life and some of the accomplishments nationalism is you're proud of the country in part because of its power that you feel that the country has power in or influence in some way and perhaps and we don't know maybe they use that power in a good way or perhaps they use that power in a in a bad way and that's where people will disagree about whether nationalism is a good thing or whether it could be a bad thing but generally I think if you just want to say that you're proud of your country I think it's better to say that you are patriotic that would be the adjective that I would encourage you to use so that other people aren't confused and if you just want to say that you're proud of your country so let's see some other questions so Christopher kind of like what represents the colors red white and blue that is an excellent question and to be perfectly honest with you Christopher I am not 100% sure but that again with Google at your fingertips we can just look it up I know that they represent different I'd say adjectives like meanings but now that okay I have it so let's see so the colors represent this is what I'm gonna read it says the colors of the pails the vertical stripes are those of the flag of the United States white is a representation of purity and innocence the red is representing like valor and the blue signifies vigilance and justice okay so that is what it means like so I knew that they they represented some type of adjectives some meaning it was not it like a representation of some historical event not like the Stars which represent the states so white is innocence red valor and blue is talking about vigilance and justice excellent question great I just learned something so what else as some of you guys are sharing with me some more national national anthems excellent sorry I'm trying to go through these so I said Brian severe says veterans are nationalists now I would say again because again people don't necessarily join the military because they want their country to be really powerful because the military I think in many cases are they're really too check the country and and to help out in certain ways for example so in in that regard I would think people would refer to veterans as more patriotic overwhelmingly like these people are there they they're Patriots they're patriotic they love their country and I think that is how people would really think of veterans in that case let's see English gay guys like valor what is the meaning of valor I think valor would be more thinking about a more simple word would be like bravery somebody who's brave they have bravery honor those are words that I think you could use to describe the meaning of valor all right so let's now look at the the last part we've talked about what I think of fireworks we talked about the history now we just talked a little bit about patriotism nationalism and some of the other significance of July 4th I do want to kind of start to wrap it up with the activities what are things that people do for this holiday and I think somebody had actually asked that a bit earlier so the first thing I think of would be just like a picnic you July 4th I don't necessarily I would not say that it is a family holiday some families spend it together but it's not a holiday like Thanksgiving or Christmas which are definitely more family holidays and you get together with your family I think July 4th could be you spend it with your friends or just spend it however you want but people might go on a picnic or perhaps this is something else this is another expression in English fire up the grill so if you're talking about the grill you can see you you guys know what a grill is which you cook you could cook meat or chicken or veggies and a way that a phrase that people would say it they'd say let's fire up the grill so instead of saying we're going to have a grill it's a let's fire up the grill and you're going to invite your friends over and you're gonna cook a lot different food fire up the grill good expression or you might have a barbecue so this setting right here this activity where you have somebody has they have fired up the grill and they say we're gonna invite all of our friends over because we're gonna have a barbecue and in that case they're kind of talking about the the event not necessarily because barbecue does refer to food but it could also in this case refer to the entire event that you guys are gonna get together you're gonna eat some food you're gonna hang out and you're going to have a barbecue or you could throw another word in there and say it's an outdoor barbecue I think those are also very common on July 4th or you could also call it a cookout I think that may not be as common but you could tell people hey let's have a cookout we're gonna create it get a bunch of food and we're gonna eat it together or perhaps who knows some people just might watch Netflix that's probably even though I'm not in the United States this is probably how my wife and I and our little girl we're gonna celebrate it later we might just watch a little bit of Netflix so I kind of want to end it on that lighter note of just some activities but mostly I think people would go outside and they would watch the different fireworks show so again just want to let you know is no saw some of you guys patrons and members today always great to see you if you guys like what we do at interactive English and you want to sponsor or support our channel you can get a youtube membership or join us on patreon there are links down below in the description and we offer some different rewards for example one level of the reward is to get access to all of these notes from the different live lessons that we do so you guys can check that out if you're interested but thank you guys so much for joining me today I hope that you've learned a little bit more about the July 4th holiday and why we celebrate it and how we celebrate it I hope you also learned some new words some of the vocabulary that we talked about whether it was about fire fireworks or veterans or patriotism or nationalism I these are words that that you will hear especially if you are in the United States and it is July 4th these are definitely words that you guys might come across so just want to say thank you Angela Sin Ahmed I'm the tea Abdullah Abdullah Rahman Esther Anderson Jose st. Mary Sue ray Hadi thank you guys so much for for joining me today I hope even if you're not celebrating 4th of July I hope you guys have a wonderful day a wonderful fourth of July and I I will see you guys next time for another live lesson goodbye bye lolly salon tree boo tree good hope you guys have a wonderful day yeah I just I don't want to go but it's it's it's time all right I have a great weekend and I will see you guys later so long

Learn the Difference...TOO vs ENOUGH | Grammar Lesson

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English and if this is your first time here this channel it's all about just trying to help you practice and improve your English skills please write to me in the chat tell me your name where you're from or write to me in the comments because just it's always great to hear from new people I love it when people are able to find our channel and they just want to improve their English skills and we we try to do that in a variety of ways vocabulary pronunciation grammar which is about today's lesson so in today's lesson it is a bit of a grammar lesson I'm just gonna talk to you about two words alright and those words are the following I'm gonna talk to you about two and enough and we're gonna compare these two words we're going to practice them and I'm also going to teach you some very common and useful phrases that include these words which is a way to then help you build your vocabulary so I think that the grammar should be a little easier for you to understand I hope that it's easier for you to follow but if you're even looking for something a little more advanced I think that some of those phrases and expressions at the end are useful that maybe you will learn some new expressions so I want to just give a quick shout out to some of you that are here with me today lolly hello great to see you neckla andre katroo de Sonia Kareem hello sleepwalker cocea thank you guys for joining me as we go through the lesson I am going to ask you guys to participate and to practice writing some sentences and if I see some good ones I will read them out so let's begin with talking about these words individually so let's first look at two and if you're going to use this word it's just it's two it's an adverb it's going to indicate a degree and basically it's saying that you have something more than what is needed all right it's like too much it's it's more than what's needed and I gave you some example sentences here which I will read to you in just a moment and these are just some to give you an idea of how it's used in context but again if you guys have some sentences using to write them in the chat or write them in the comments this is what interactive English is all about getting you guys to actually practice while you are listening to these lessons so for example I give you the let's just look at these first two sentences he can't eat at all it's too much food or the next one I said I hate driving because there are too many cars on the road so in this case we're talking about using it with too much too many all right though that is it's commonly used when you want to say that there is too much of something if you're talking about a non-count noun too much food it's more than what's needed as well as count nouns there are too many cars that we we have more cars than we need on the road and because of that it just creates a lot of traffic so that is the first point I wanted to make when with too too much too many we hear it used quite often with these count and non-count nouns or the the next one the water is too cold to go for a swim if we have an adjective that we want to intensify and say it's just it's more it's excessive too cold too hot too fast too slow or another one like this is from makes me think of the movie lethal weapon if you guys have seen it one of the famous lines in that Danny Glover keeps saying I'm too old for this you're too old for something you feel like you maybe you can't keep up you you have more years than then one needs in order to do something you're too old for it so when you're talking about to you indicate a degree now excellent I'm too young for this excellent perfect outside is too hot for running that's true and today it's pretty hot in Budapest so I could you could say yeah it's too hot to go for a run outside now I want to teach you some other meanings for - real quickly because it can also mean like in addition or like also if somebody says like this first example West likes pizza and another person says well me too basically they're saying I I also like this thing I also like pizza a West likes pizza me too so in that case it means more in addition or also it can also mean like very completely and in the context of like - pleased and I'd say that is a useful collocation so for example say she wasn't too pleased with the performance she was not very happy with this performance so in this case I think it's used more you could think as a collocation you're not you're not too pleased with something and I would also say it's used more as a negative in which case you're trying to say that you're not very happy about something like I'm not too pleased with the result or I'm not too pleased with the performance so that's a useful collocation if you want to use to to mean like - pleased you're not too pleased with something or I think which is even maybe less common to show surprise and let the sentence I I can't believe the puzzle was solved and by a child - and I think in this case it you're showing that surprise the same way you could say and by a child nonetheless like it's surprising that the child solved the puzzle but you could use - to indicate surprise in this in this manner so let's see some other good sentence is fun it's too late I don't know where you are but perhaps for some of you right now it is too late where what else do we got some other sentences yeah I am I am too hungry to concentrate yes if you are too hungry you it may be difficult to concentrate perfectly it's too hot in India excellent so when you're talking about to your you're saying that's more than

what's needed that there is it's too you could say again too much too many of something I go back to those I think it's used quite often let's look at enough because enough also indicates a degree but in this case if you're talking about enough I think of the word sufficient you have the right amount of something that it's sufficient and there is enough so now try to think of some sentences using enough if you think of a good one write it in the chat write it in the comments always practice I think that's it's the great way it's a great way to improve so here are some of my example sentences using enough I think very common phrase somebody might say like we don't have enough time there is not a sufficient amount of time to do something or maybe to go somewhere and somebody might just say look we don't have enough time we don't have enough time to do this or in this sentence he needs to earn enough money to buy a car so in this case you want to get a sufficient amount of money you want to get at least the the right amount of money in order to do something which in this case is to buy a car he needs to earn enough money or I could say she's smart enough to figure it out she has the right amount of intelligence in order to solve some problem or figure it out like you're smart enough to do something or this last case where we really talk about a number there are 10 sandwiches and you say well that should be enough that is sufficient for if you're going on a picnic or maybe you're having some type of party and you have 10 people and there's 10 sandwiches you say that that should be enough that is that is the right amount so let's see like we're gonna get to some phrases a little later uh so says there are enough people here I think I would say yeah you can for these live lessons I always want me I always want more and more people I would say you could never have enough people in these live lessons so Lal I said this listen excellent we're using both it's not too difficult for me it's easy enough perfect so again I think the grammar it should be a little easier to follow and that's what I want to practice a little bit right now and then we'll get into some of those expressions because I saw somebody was asking me about different expressions that people might use with too and enough so the reason why people would I think even in grammar class or at school the reason why we tend to learn these two words at the same time is because of that that they indicate a degree that two is more than what is needed and enough you have like well it's the right amount so I could say when talking about to like I hope the lesson it's not moving too fast or too slow I hope it's it's the right speed for everyone I know sometimes because these live lessons are a bit longer people might think they move a little too slow but again I like to I like to try it oh I try to move it a pace that is comfortable for maybe most people enough again you know that something it's the right amount it's sufficient and I could say I hope I'm speaking slow enough so that you easily understand what I'm saying and I I think I do I tend to talk a bit slower I hope I'm not talking too slow but I'm hope I'm I'm speaking slow enough the sufficient amount so that you can easily understand what I'm talking about so these are the reasons why I think we focus on these two words together so let's practice this a little bit what I'm going to do is I'm going to give you some sentences and I just want you to fill in the blank what is are you going to use to or enough and I've tried to make them a little tricky but I know you guys you guys are you guys are smart enough I think to figure this out so let's look at the first one um they've got way mm time on their hands all right what would you say all right what would you use to finish that they've got way mmm time on their hands is it enough or too much alright I hope that you saw this is a little easier that you knew right away that we're talking about time time is non countable it is a non-count noun so in that case you would say they've got way too much time on their hands and this again if you this is an expression that you may hear people use from time to time that you have too much time on your hands and what that means is that you have too much time available and often I think it would be used if you're describing somebody who maybe there may be there may be a little lazy or they just don't have enough to do right now it could be with work or or anything that's going on in their life and you could say they have way too much time on their hands so you can use that expression to say that somebody has too much time available the next one is I can't believe they're dating he is mmm to be her father what do you think I can't believe they're dating he is mmm to be her father he's old enough to be her father or he's too old to be her father what do you guys think so I can't believe they're dating that's I'm trying to give you a little hint they're kind of building in the context of what you'd want to say I can't believe they're dating he's mmm to be her father alright I hope that because again you understood that context of their somebody's dating I'm trying to indicate a little bit of surprise so in that case a old enough in that case if you have an older man dating a younger woman and somebody says well I can't believe they're dating he's old enough to be her father he has the a sufficient amount of years that mathematically he could be this person's father excellent so I think you guys are rocking that perfect cocea rod excellent hello what's up I'm on perfect a 10 yes so let's continue I have a couple more and then we'll talk about those expressions to help you perhaps build your vocabulary a little bit more so in this case how would you complete this sentence and it is this is also a bit like in you could consider this an expression in English somebody says oh you're mmm what would they say how would they finish that statement oh you're what oh you're kind enough or oh you're too kind what do you think and this is something that maybe you've heard probably if you're watching a TV show or movie what would you say oh you're kind enough or oh you're too kind yes so I think again this is where I feel like exposure is important when you're watching things movie TV shows yes and you would say the answer is B oh you're too kind all right and what they mean by this expression is that if you're trying to kind of flatter somebody and give them a compliment saying that oh they're so nice maybe they tell you something they give you a compliment you say oh you're too kind you're being too generous with your words what you're saying oh you're too kind because again if somebody says you're kind enough it means that you're you're just you have the a sufficient amount but in this case obviously you don't want to sell somebody that they're well they're kind enough because that that could be taken as almost a negative in which case you're saying well oftentimes you you might not be very kind but oh you're too kind it would be used when somebody is paying you a compliment and you to say thank you like this person is very generous with their words oh you're too kind the next one don't give him the keys he's to drive what do you think eh old enough or be too young don't give him the keys he's old enough to drive or he's too young to drive what would you say so again just trying to think of enough into which one are we using are we using enough which is that sufficient amount the right amount or two which is more than what's needed and in this case again that first sentence should really put it into context don't give him the keys you don't want somebody to have that well why well somebody is be too young to drive he's too young to drive would be a reason why you don't want somebody to have the car keys so excellent yes Maria ma d alene who Jose Angela Kareem ester Adan perfect you guys you guys rock that one so again just to give you a little practice between using those words to in enough and I told you that I I think the grammar should be a little easier for you to follow because - you're talking about more than what is needed and enough is that sufficient amount so now let's make it maybe a little more challenging I want to talk about some very useful phrases and expressions that use the words - and enough so let's start with - and an expression that somebody might say is too little too late and if you hear this or if you want to use it in conversation it means that there is not enough of something that should have been provided earlier so let me give you some more context and and talk about a situation in which somebody may say this so the key here is about something that should be provided earlier so for example maybe I need I need help with cleaning the home I need help cleaning the house and my my family is supposed to help me and they say oh I'll be there I'm gonna help you but they don't show up so I have to clean the entire house all on my own and then later on my family whether it's my wife my mother my father they say oh I'm so sorry I should have been here I should have helped you and I say look you know too little too late it's it's already happened it's already ended it should have been provided earlier and in that case you'd say too little too late so I think often people would use this expression if they're a little angry at someone that they wanted help earlier they didn't get it perhaps the person is apologizing and maybe you're not ready to forgive them and you say look it's too little too late you you should have been you should have been there earlier for me but it didn't happen so this is a good expression that you can use if you want to express that emotion that somebody should have helped you they didn't too little too late or if somebody would use this phrase to go too far or you could also say to take something too far the meaning is the same and what you're describing is a situation in which that you know you're behaving in a way that upsets or annoys someone and what I think of is perhaps you're you're teasing somebody and you're just joking around and you continue teasing this person and at some point it just becomes it becomes too annoying and at that point you could say that this person they they they have gone too far are they have taken the joke too far and typically like I said it happens when you you're you're you're teasing somebody or maybe you're arguing with some and then you say something that's really offensive it's really bad and then you say oh you know you've gone too far you've taken it too far and in which case they're saying that you've really upset me you've you've really annoyed me you've taken this too far so if somebody again I think of a situation in which you're probably it wouldn't be a good situation maybe you're arguing with somebody and when you argue with someone emotions they they can get the best of you and you say something that maybe you shouldn't say and in that case the other person would say look you you've gone too far you should not have said that it was inappropriate you've gone too far or mm-hmm again to take something too far perhaps like a joke you're teasing it and it becomes it turns out it becomes a problem so to go too far or to take something too far all right let's look at the next one which is if somebody says not too bad or not too shabby I think many of you you may be familiar with that phrase like oh not too bad and they both mean the same thing you're used it's used to say that something is good and I feel like you would use it in the context of maybe some work that someone has to do and they're showing you the work and they say hey look at look at what I've done and you want to say that it's good you're like wow that's you know not too bad I'm I'm impressed or you could say not too shabby so if something if you if you don't know what the word shabby means shabby means something is low-quality that it's just bad but in this case again if you say something Wow that's not too shabby it means it's it's good but I would also say it's kind of a surprising good that you're surprised that that the that this work ended up very well and you're like wow you know wow that's too bad not too bad I was not expecting this so not too bad not too shabby you use this too say this something's good another sentence which I think is very useful is just when somebody would say you can never be too careful and in this case you would say this sentence to express that you should do everything possible to avoid problems or danger so I think of somebody who might be a little more conservative and they try to avoid problems they try to avoid danger and especially if somebody is asking them why like oh why are you being so careful and you say well yeah you can never be too careful that you should always try to be extra cautious avoid problems avoid danger you can never be too careful so again I think you would use this if somebody is more questioning questioning you as to why you are being so careful you could say this you can never be too careful says your lesson is not it is not too bad thank you excellent I hope I hope it's not too bad not too shabby that you guys are learning some new things even if the grammar was a little easier maybe you're learning a new expression or two so this is a good one say you can never be too careful and I think it's true I think it's absolutely true and in pointed out yes that I think in life it's good to avoid problems be safe you can never be too careful especially like think about nowadays when you talk about the the virus and and wearing a mask somebody could say that that you know definitely when you're you go shopping or something you're outside always wear a mask you can never be too careful so that's an example uh and then now let's talk about some expressions with enough somebody might say this tautology right here enough is enough so it really it means the same thing if you just say if you just tell somebody hey enough but you could use this expression right here enough is enough which means the same thing and base you're saying that you want someone to stop and if you want someone to stop something you could either say enough or enough is enough and I think you would use I think you wouldn't use enough is enough when something is happening and it's bothering you and it continues to bother you and finally you just want it to stop you snap and you tell them look enough is enough all right no more you need to stop what you're doing enough is enough all right so this is an expression that you you may hear from time to time see if you can listen for it another one is this one if somebody says sure enough and I think somebody may have asked about this expression earlier which which is why I didn't say anything because I knew I knew we were going to get to it so if somebody says sure enough it means as expected and I think people would use this when they're telling a story so let me give you an example and you're saying that well you expected this thing to happen so I could say that perhaps I have a dog and I left and usually I would I would let the dog go outside in case they need to go to the bathroom but I forgot they were locked inside the home and the dog was locked inside the home and I got home and sure enough the dog peed everywhere so in that case I'm telling you this story and basically I'm saying that something was expected and sure enough this thing happened so we often use it when you're talking about some result that's happening and you expected this result you can use sure enough all right so okay enough is enough I'll never tell you this Thank You lolly please please say hi to me hello surrender Yudof so let's look at another one another expression with enough is enough said and this is used to your telling someone that you you understand what they have said and there's no need to say anymore and I think the context in which you would use this is that I think of somebody perhaps apologizing for something that they're they're apologizing for doing something wrong and you you understand and you don't you want to play it safe enough is enough when you want to tell somebody to stop sure enough when you're telling that story you're talking about some result that you expected you could use sure enough or even enough said when you want to say that you understand you don't need to say anymore look enough set you don't need to tell me anymore so I again I hope you guys learn something new whether it was the grammar it's always good to practice and if you guys do if you enjoy what we do here at interactive English and you want to support what we do you can check out memberships or becoming a patron we offer some cool rewards links are down in the description it is our our member patron community which we love and some of you I see some from your faces members patrons with me today and of course I am very appreciative of that of all of you guys you guys Rock so again I hope that this may be cleared up some confusion if you were unsure about the grammar but when you're trying to use 2 or enough or it maybe help build your vocabulary little that you learn some new expressions when it comes to using those words so again thank you guys so much for for joining me it write to me in the chat write to me in the comments once this video is posted I love hearing from all of you let's see thank you so thank you 8 and sure enough it was a great class thank you excellent nice nice use of the expression Thank You Aidan Deepak can we say sure let me I'm just reading this question can we say for sure in place of sure enough no in that case if you want to say that something is expected that you'd want to use the whole phrase like sure enough something happened sure enough there was some result so you'd want to use both words sure enough good question though thank you sleepwalker Maddy Maziar lolly angela 'get Rudess and e-rod i saw you in there before yes Mina ivan thank you guys for joining me today I hope that you you know sure enough I will be back next weekend with another live lesson you you can still attend that live lesson if you want to it's not too little or light it's not too little too late to join that live lesson because it hasn't happened yet and I'm just trying to give you a little quick review all right so enough is enough I need to end this lesson I hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you next time so long

Learn the SCHWA SOUND /ə/ the Most Common Sound in English

It's not a word. It's a sound. And I know what you're thinking. What the hell is the schwa sound?!?! First, I'd like to welcome you to our global classroom. And remind you to subscribe to our channel if you enjoy learning and practicing English. And, for additional practice, check us out on social media. We won't disappoint! Now let's talk about the schwa sound. It is everywhere. Look at the sentence I just said. Everywhere. The schwa sound, which looks like an upside down "e" in the international phonetic alphabet, is an extremely important sound. Because it is the most common sound in the English language. It first came about in the early 19th century by a German linguist who used this symbol to represent the way people actually spoke.

So how do English speakers feel about the schwa sound? We love it! Before we practice the schwa sound, we need to understand what it is. The schwa sound is an unstressed vowel sound that often has the /uh/ sound. Now it's important to note that you only hear the schwa sound in unstressed syllables. You probably hear this sound all the time and you don't even notice. Here are some examples. Listen to these words that have the schwa sound at the beginning. Remember, the first syllable of these words is unstressed. But the schwa can come at the end of a word as well. Listen. Some words even have it multiple times. Look at the word "banana." It has three syllables, and the first and last syllable have the unstressed schwa sound.

I told you! It is everywhere. And the schwa sound is not just for the letter "a". Any unstressed vowel can be pronounced with the schwa sound. Listen. Learning and understanding the schwa can be very useful. When it comes to listening, you'll be able to better understand what people say. This is because native English speakers often reduce their words and sentences with the schwa. You wouldn't really hear a native speaker say... and emphasize each word. That's maybe how a teacher might say it in the classroom. Instead, you'd hear a native speaker say... Did you hear how many time I said the schwa sound? Listen again. I'll say it a little slower.

You can't say it too slow because the whole idea about the schwa is you're reducing those unstressed sounds. The words "Why," "learn," and "English" are easy to hear. But the words in the middle... get reduced. Now the other reason why the schwa sound is important is because of pronunciation. When you learn and understand the schwa sound, you'll be able to speak more fluidly just as a native speaker would. And you may even feel like a more confident speaker as well. You'll be able to speak and have conversations without focusing on every individual word. And also when it comes to reading, you'll be able to read in the same way that people would actually speak.

So what I'd like to do now is practice your pronunciation with words and sentences that have the schwa sound. First, let's start with some words. I'll show you a word and highlight the schwa sound in red. All you have to do is say it! Remember, the schwa sound has that /uh/ sound. I'll show you the word, and then Ioana will give you the pronunciation. Ready? Here we go! Alright! Now let's practice with some sentences. I'll give you a sentence and highlight the schwa sound in red. Remember, a lot of times articles and prepositions get reduced with the schwa sound. So practice saying these sentences as a native speaker would.

Let's begin! Excellent job today! I'd suggest watching the video again if you'd like a little more practice. But hopefully this will help you become a more capable and confident speaker. Please give the video a thumbs up if you feel like you learned something new today about the schwa sound. And remember to subscribe to our channel if you enjoy practicing and improving your English skills. We'll see you next time!

LESSON 428 OF 749

Learn to Use ACTIVE and PASSIVE VOICE | Advanced Grammar Lesson

Today I want to talk to you about using active and passive voice that's coming up Hey everyone, my name is Wes. This is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills today I have a grammar lesson for you. It's all about active and passive voice. I want to tell you Well, what is the difference between active and passive how do you change sentences from active voice to passive voice? And when should you use the passive voice because I think that can confuse learners from time to time the reason why I'm doing this is because Often in the comments I get questions and people like well, hey, how do you change this sentence to the passive voice?

It made me realize that okay This is valuable information for you to know about when and how to use active and passive voice So when you're thinking about okay? Like let's start with the sentences that we can change from active to passive so the first thing that I want to do is focus on the verb and The verb tense does not matter what really matters is what? Follows the verb does an object follow the verb Because if it does then we can change it to the passive voice. Let me give you some more information about that So verbs can either be transitive or intransitive if a verb is transitive It means that it has an object in order to help complete the meaning of the sentence For example the verb by we will follow that with an object because it tells us what the person is buying I buy some food subject verb object so if a verb has an object then it is a transitive verb if A verb is intransitive then well that just means that there is no object the verb will likely be followed by a Prepositional phrase or maybe even an adverb think about the verb laugh All right, you know what, the meaning of that is and I could say the sentence She laughs at the joke subject verb prepositional phrase or I could say they laughed immediately Subject verb adverb now there are some verbs that can be either transitive or intransitive Let's look at the verb eat I could say we will eat the sandwiches talking about the future I have my subject verb and the sandwiches. That is my object now I can use that same verb and follow it with a prepositional phrase and say well we will eat in the park in That case I have subject verb Prepositional phrase it is intransitive now The reason why I'm telling you all this because you may be thinking what the heck does this have to do with?

Active and passive voice if a verb is intransitive You cannot change it to the passive voice So all of those sentences that I just talked about that were intransitive she laughs at the joke they laughed Immediately we will eat in the park Those sentences cannot be changed to the passive voice in Order to change a sentence from active to passive or even just to use the passive. You need to have an object So now, you know the types of sentences that you can change to the passive voice. They must be transitive verbs let's look at the difference between active passive how to change it and when to use that passive voice so that I think just in general the main difference between Active voice and passive voice is that with active voice? The subject is performing the action when you're using the passive voice the subject is Receiving the action keep in mind that the vast majority of the time you're going to use the active voice when you're speaking you're gonna use active voice and when you're writing You're gonna be writing those active sentences. The reason for this is because Active voice. It's it's more direct and the focus is on the actor. It is on the subject That is performing the action. For example, I could say Well Wes teaches English it's direct It's easy to understand and the focus is on. Well Wes who is doing the action?

The subject is doing the action. So the vast majority of the time just no all right, you are going to use the active voice there are certain instances in which it's common to use the passive voice and I want to talk to you about four different times in which you you may want to use the passive voice and why and as we go through this I'm going to give you some examples and We're going to change the sentences from active to passive So let's begin with the first one which is when you want to emphasize the action over the actor This is a great example of when you would want to use the passive voice. So let's take the sentence. I Wrote that email. This is an active sentence subject-verb-object now if we want to change this to the passive voice we are going to take the object and Move it to the front of the sentence. Then you are going to add the verb to be plus the past participle

I I you he she it we they if we're changing it to the passive then it's going to become an object pronoun Me me you him her? Us them those are object pronouns one other thing that I think is important It is subject verb agreement because in this case I'm saying that email was written if in my active sentence I were to say well I wrote those emails and the object is plural That's going to change the subject verb agreement Then I would say those emails were Written so that that's something you need to pay close attention to when changing from active to passive is the object Singular or is the object plural?

So this this is kind of a difficult example to start out with because there are many changes that are occurring You have a simple sentence like I wrote that email and you're going to change it to the passive that email was written by me and Again, I told you in this sense You might use the passive if you want to Emphasize the action over the actor another time that you may want to use the passive voice is when you want to avoid Identifying the actor you want to avoid identifying that subject So let's take let's take an active sentence. We made mistakes We have our subject verb and our object. Our object is mistakes

Let's now change it to the passive and this time we're going to avoid we're going to avoid Identifying the actor so I would take mistakes I'm gonna move it to the front of the sentence mistakes were because again, We're talking about the past tense and then the past participle made mistakes were made Finished. I don't want to identify Who made the mistakes and the reason why is because well we made the mistakes so this in this example, I I think of Government and politicians because they don't want to admit when they made a mistake So instead of going up there and saying well look, sorry everyone We made mistakes they would get up there and they would use the passive voice and say well Mistakes were made. And in that case they are not Identifying themselves because people would would hate them for it and this is a way for them to avoid responsibility

So in this example, I I tend to think of politicians I know I'm rather cynical instead of saying you know, oh we made mistakes They might say mistakes were made and they avoid Identifying the actor another time in which you may want to use the passive voice is when the actor is unknown We don't know who the subject is. That is performing that action for example

Let's take the sentence Someone stole my bike Subject-verb-object. Now, let's change it to the passive. We're gonna take the object move it to the front my bike Follow it with the verb to be was because it was the past tense. My bike was plus the past participle Stolen so we have my bike was stolen by well, we don't know who the person is in the active voice I just said someone I use the indefinite pronoun But if we're changing this to the passive, you don't need to say by someone. It's not necessary We don't know who it is. You just say, oh my bike was stolen So this is a great example as to when you would use the passive When you you don't know who the actor is, my bike was stolen my wallet was stolen those are examples of When I think it's pretty common that you may hear someone use the passive or maybe you want to use the passive voice as well another time in which you may want to use the passive is when you want to you want to have a firm tone you're giving A command you want to be firm, but you also want to be polite as well So this is a great example of when you may hear someone using the passive or you can use it, too So let's start with just a general command, which is no talking So if we want to change this to the passive, it can be a little tricky. So let's expand that sentence out too We do not allow talking now. We have something to work with and can change it to the passive voice So we're going to take talking. We're gonna move it to the front We're gonna follow it with the verb to be in the present tense talking is not Because we're talking about something in the negative talking is not Allowed that is the past participle and and that's basically how you would say it You don't need to identify the actor you're giving a command. It's understood so you would just say Talking is not allowed and I said it's a little more polite because if if somebody's going to tell you hey No talking. I think that can be come off as a little rude instead I think it's a little more polite to just say hey, you know talking is not allowed so these are four great examples as to when you may want to try and use the passive voice or You may likely hear somebody else using the passive voice. So let's practice a little bit I want to go back through each and every one of these instances I'm gonna give you a sentence in the active voice and I want you to change it to the passive and I want you to Say the passive sentence out loud I'll give you a moment to think about it and then I will tell you the answer and I'm gonna try and give you sentences that I think are relevant That I think people would actually say in the passive voice So let's begin with that first instance in which you may want to Emphasize the action over the actor and the sentence that I'm going to give you is this one right here my ancestors Farm this land Change it to the passive voice. I'll make it a little easier for you. Alright, I'm giving you part of the answer right here What would you say? How would you change this to the passive? I?

Here is part of it. How would you complete that sentence? I? Hope that all of you said their dog will be put to sleep We're talking about something that will happen in the future will be put in this case You're not identifying the actor you're not saying by them if you're talking to somebody else about this Family situation and you know, it's difficult for them You're just going to tell somebody what would happen without identifying the actor and say Their dog will be put to sleep The next one is when the actor is unknown and this time I have a question for you I want you to change this question from the active to the passive And that question is has anyone fed the cat. This is a question in the active voice How would you change it to the passive and I'm not going to give you any hints this time?

So what do you think? Has anyone fed the cat again? The actor is unknown. We have that indefinite pronoun anyone So if we change this to the passive, I think a very common question Someone might ask is has the cat been fed We're still using the present perfect in the question And in the grammar is going to remain the same has The cat you remember that object is going to move to the front and it will go After that, helping verb has the cat the verb to be been plus the past participle fed Has the cat been fed, we don't need to say by anyone because well It's not really relevant. We don't know so it's very common just to say has the cat been fed And then I have a command for you that I want you to change and that is no smoking

Now we did this before I gave you that example, no talking I want you to change no smoking to the passive But I don't want you to use the word not and because of that I really want you to think about what verb should you use what verb is commonly used and This is actually I think a sign that you may see Quite often out in public. Let's stretch this out. I'll make it a little easier for you the verb you could use is prohibit. We prohibit smoking and then if I give you that I think it's much easier to change and make a passive sentence and you would say smoking is prohibited Smoking is prohibited passive voice it is a It's a firm tone, but it's also I think a little more polite than just saying. Hey, no smoking Just tell somebody smoking is prohibited. So I hope you have a perfect understanding of active voice passive voice

How do you change these sentences as well as when to use the passive voice? I think that is very important because like I said most of the time you are going to use the active voice What I want you to do right now is let's do some more practice I want you to write an Active sentence in the comments and then I want you to go to someone else's comment Reply to their comment and change it to the passive So what I want is just to have this Long list of comments in the active and then you can respond to those comments and change the sentence from active to passive So this is a great way to continue practicing Active voice passive voice and changing sentences from active to passive If you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button as always. Thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time

Learn to Use SHADOWING and Improve Your Pronunciation

So today, I want to talk to you about two online resources that you can use to improve your pronunciation. Before we begin, I'd like to remind you to subscribe to our channel for more video lessons on how you can practice and improve your English. This lesson is going to be a little bit of a learning tutorial because I'm sure many of you out there want to improve your pronunciation and one of the most common questions that we get is people asking us How can we practice our pronunciation? What resources are out there? So today I want to show you two resources that you can use to practice your pronunciation and do all of this completely on your own.

So the first online resource that I'd like to show you is called Youglish. Now, Youglish is a search engine that will help you find the pronunciation of any word out there, and it searches through a lot of different videos on YouTube. So if you want to know the pronunciation of a certain word or phrase You can type it into the search, and it will show you a lot of different videos with the words or phrase that you are looking for, so you can see how people are pronouncing this in context. So let's just take a sentence for example. And the sentence is... "Where do we go from here?" So we can just type that into the search and it's going to bring up different videos with people saying that exact sentence.

So you can see it just immediately goes to a video, just a random video that it found on YouTube. And it highlights the words that you just typed in. So, now we can listen to different people say that sentence in different context. ...have a soul-searching moment of like, where do we go from here? Like, what do we do now? Where do we go from here? Not only that, we can divide the search up and say that we wanted to hear the American pronunciation of it. We can click right here where it says US. So now we can hear people saying this sentence in an American accent in different context. So, where do we go from here?

It's easy to point the finger at corporations and blame... ...computing. And finally, where do we go from here? And the videos will just continue playing. And you can go back and listen to them again and you can just keep listening to them over and over. To hear how people are saying it. To hear the rhythm and flow of their speech. And the intonation as well as the emphasis. And so you want to hear it in a British accent. Then we can click where it says UK and listen to a British accent. ...got here and what's happening. But where do we go from here? ...which comes out twice a year, So where do we go from here?

...final round. The eggheads lost one earlier. Where do we go from here? The answer is film and TV. Even if we want to hear it in an Australian accent, we can find videos with people saying it in an Australian accent. Now, where do we go from here? ...it's beautiful. Okay. So where do we go from here? ...very pretty area. So where do we go from here then? So Youglish is a very important tool if there is a word or sentence that you want to hear and see well, "How are people saying this word?" And also find out, well what context is it being used in. So how do we improve our pronunciation and how do we practice it. To put it in simple terms, pronunciation is just two different parts. The first part is just making sure that your mouth is in the right position in order to make individual sounds.

Are you able to get your mouth in the right position and push the air in and out to make sure that that sound is coming on correctly. The next part is listening to the way that sound is said correctly. And then trying to imitate that and repeat that and say it in the same way. Because when people are talking and communicating, they are taking groups of sounds, putting them together, to make words, and putting those together to make sentences. And when we listen to them come together there is a rhythm and flow to it because of intonation, emphasis, and stress.

The next pronunciation resource I want to show you is called Yarn. And Yarn is a site that it's full of short video clips from movies, television, music. And this is a great resource for actually practicing your pronunciation. And you can do this by using a technique called Shadowing. And Shadowing is when you hear something being said and you try to repeat it in exactly the same way. You're trying to use the same intonation...the emphasis. And you're really trying to shadow what you are hearing. And shadow exactly what is being said. So say that we want to know more about the word "Colossal." And see how it's being used and actually practice saying that.

It can mean, "What's the matter with you?" like "What's wrong? Are you okay?" And it also can mean, "What's the matter with you?" like, "What's your problem?" And this is a great way to listen to how it's being said so you can understand how to use it when you want to express those feelings. So again, we can do a search for "What's the matter with you?" and we find a lot of different videos using that exact question.

Let's start out with some people asking that question like you know, "What's wrong? Are you okay?" What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? Wasn't matter with you What's the matter with you? That's my Nicholas Cage impression. It's really bad. What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? I sound like an owl...YOU...YOU...YOU. What's the matter with you?

Now let's see how it's used in the context of "Hey. What's your problem?" What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? What's the matter with you? Yeah, I can't do that one very well. What's the matter with you? So as you can see, with each of those videos we're saying the same question, but we're saying it a little differently depending on the context and the meaning that we want to convey. But this is a great way to practice your pronunciation.

Because these videos are short. And you can just listen to the way a word or a sentence is being said in a variety of contexts using a variety of intonation. And try to repeat and repeat and repeat and shadow what you're hearing. And for additional practice and to make it even better I would recommend recording yourself as you're doing this using your cell phone or a device on the computer. So then you can go back and listen to the way that you are saying it and then listen to the way it's said in the video. And then when you listen to yourself saying it, you can compare that with the actual video.

And by doing this you'll be able to identify perhaps certain sounds that you're having trouble making because they don't match up with what you're hearing. Or perhaps you hear that your intonation is just a little off. Or maybe you are not emphasizing a word the same way. So I highly recommend recording yourself as you doing this. So if you want to improve your pronunciation use the resources that are available to you. I will put a link to both of these sites in the description below. And what I'd like you to do is in the comments, let us know what you are doing to practice your pronunciation How are you trying to improve?

What resources are you using or what methods? And I think this will help everybody and maybe we can learn new ways techniques or find out new resources that we can continue to practice and improve. Sharing is caring. Thanks for watching and we'll see you next time.

Learning English On Your Own?... NO PROBLEM | How to Practice By Yourself

welcome welcome everyone on this beautiful Saturday thank you for joining us today we have a super super duper fun lesson interactive English it's here it's in the house oh my god okay sorry I was trying to be cool it didn't work we are here today for a super fun list and a lesson that I think is very useful and I think it's going to be very fun for our students so if you are just joining us please please please please write down your name and where you are joining us from because I love to see how where students are from you know sharing in this sharing our knowledge and creating a wonderful community of students from everywhere so let's see hi given hi Bindu hi Rohit Yohai quad in thank you thank you thank you for joining us again write your name and where you are from my name is you wanna from interactive English and I am here to talk to you today about ways we can practice English on our own okay so if you're just joining thank you from Belgium from Stockholm from Brazil Venezuela oh this is such a wonderful crowd I am talking to you today from the beautiful city of Budapest so it's so nice to see that we are from everywhere so thank you thank you thank you for joining us greetings and welcome a welcome welcome oh god from hell no I doubt that you're in hell they don't have typewriter or not typewriters they don't have keyboards there or the internet or maybe they do I don't know but welcome like I said today we are talking about activities you can do by yourself so one of the most the questions we always always get is students asking how can I practice how can I improve my English and of course we recognize that it's sometimes it can be difficult to improve your English if you don't have a teacher or somebody to practice with where you're in luck because there are so many ways you can practice your English by yourself without someone you don't need a teacher for these activities you don't need a friend it is absolutely free if you have an internet connection on sometimes even if you don't with a little bit of preparation so let me see let me look in our chat so many people I'm so grateful to have all of you in our classroom and kind of share in our community so hi Dahlia hi from Somalia from Sri Lanka Thailand India beautiful wonderful thank you guys I'm sorry I'm just my charger um sorry just one second there we go thank you guys so much from joining oh it's so wonderful to see you okay so I have a request from you I'm going to ask you because we're going to play some of these we're going to do some of these activities together and when I ask you please give me answers so you will see that we will need words we will need sentences he will need different things and I'm going to look for you guys my students my friends my community for answers okay so please please PLEASE answer and it's going to be a lot of fun we're going to participate in this together and then you can do them by yourself so thank you guys okay let's see if you're just joining like I said please write down your name where you're from because it's so fun for everyone to see where everyone is from okay so the first one were talking about today hangman have you ever heard of hang man this is a game that I used to play as a child it's it's I think in many languages not just in English but it happens to be a wonderful wonderful wonderful help with your spelling now if you're not new to English you know that English is not a phonetic language which means that English you can't the words are not spelled the way you hear them which means that spelling can be difficult and I'm sure we've all had some problems with spelling and sometimes we make mistakes so please in the comments write down if you sometimes have problems with spelling in English let us know do you have problems because I know it can be difficult and full-disclosure even native speakers have problems with spelling in English so it is not easy okay hangman will help you with this with this problem because it's all about spelling spelling and um it's a fun way of going about it so let's see anyone has oh yeah this is Apple thank you thanks for guessing this is actually just a picture I put in there to give an example but thank you guys doing great job spelling also wonderful okay are you guys ready for a more difficult one because I have one for you okay let's do it okay so I have a series of websites here that I am using and these websites I'm going to put a link for all of them after we finish the lesson because all of these are going to be very very very useful for you but we're going to play them together and then and then we're going to to answer you them and then I'll put the links in there okay so this website I found called games to learn English calm it has a series of [Music] different categories so this particular hangman game has categories so if your kind of newer to learning English this is a really good way to review some words your vocabulary but also a very good way to like learn it by categories so for example if I click on food you see if you kind of scroll above you can see the content so you can see the kinds of words that are in there so I'm gonna click on it okay so this is possibly an easy one so I want to see what are some words for the letter words that we can guess which one should I click click on what do you guys think let's see do I have any suggestions I'm going to click until I see all your comments I'm going to click on P oh it's a real one let's see I usually find ok any suggestions what are we doing any guesses I'm going to click on a hey okay PA what could it be ah any suggestions moon maybe but remember this is food it's food it's it's the theme of food I'm gonna go with em uh-oh PU what starts with P Oh pear okay let's try oh you are right okay so there's an e there there's an e very good very good I'm gonna press on our oh you are correct good job except for the spelling okay it's not a peer it's a pair a good job good job okay so you guys can see how this this can be really really useful and like I said it's with categories so you can you can choose different categories on this website and this is again a little bit easier now if you want a bit of a challenge this is kind of a medium one and if you want to even practice the cultural aspect of of English like for example Christmas vocabulary you can click this other website that's called just hangman comm and it has different Christmas category so you can play around I'm not going to go through all of them because I really wanted to focus on the next one but this is very very helpful it's kind of a medium difficulty activity now this is the one I wanted to talk to you about because I wanted to show you the different ways that you can you can work with this one so this website is called hangman word game comm if you can't catch the word don't worry I will put it on a little later after we finish but I wanted to show you these options you can click on play with friends or random opponents so if you want something very very challenging because you have to play against time against somebody or you can click or on a single player on time so there's no time limit you can play by yourself or time and you have two minutes to solve the game so you have all of these levels and you see the game here and you have to try to figure it out so I'm just going to kind of click on it to show you guys we're not going to play this one but just to show you how it works

oh so as you can see recitation was the word it's a more difficult word so again this is if you want a challenge if you want to challenge this is your this is this is the your your gota so I'm going to put all of these on the website thank you guys again for joining um hi Marcos and nice to see you again if I miss your names and I've miss if you have a question please write it down again but thank you for joining if you are just joining please tell us your name and where you're from because it's fun to see and we were just talking about activities you can do by yourself one of them being hangman now I know that a lot of people may want to practice English on your phone so if you if you don't want to do this there are so many apps do that you can look on your phone that just have the name hangman and you can do that as well okay are you guys ready for my second one this one's a little bit more difficult so I'm kind of going on difficulty level here boom crossword puzzles okay crossword puzzles are great they are kind of like hangman but so much crazier because you have to deal with words everywhere so crossword I don't know if I explained by the way hangman the whole point of a hangman is you have so many choices and if you don't if you don't get the word in so many choices you have a little man that keeps getting drawn and eventually if you don't guess it the man dies sorry if I didn't explain that so it's kind of a fun game to play because you're hoping that your man will not die well with a crossword puzzle you don't have that element of a little game but you have a lot of different words so this can be a la I see a lot of people when they travel they have crossword puzzles with them so this can be something that you do that you can take with you on a trip or on your commute to work if you're in traffic not if you're driving of course but if you're the passenger there's so many places where you can take a crossword puzzle and you can practice your English while doing it so it's kind of amazing because you don't need to speak with anyone you can just write it by yourself or you can do it on your computer so it helps with your spelling in your vocabulary now let me show you what I mean we're going to play obviously we're going to do one together so if you guys I'm going to look to see if you guys are answering so please pay attention okay so I have some suggestions my first one this one right here yep just a second did it did it did it yeah got it okay so this one is called free training tutorial and it's kind of an interactive platform where you click on it and then you see this so first of all it tells you something that is four letters and not the definition is not costing any money so what four-letter word do we know that means not costing any money let's see if you guys can guess it not costing any money let's see let's see let's see who can guess it any takers okay what nobody I'm going to guess free let's see if that's okay yeah good job Nordine good job okay good good so let's try another one right here down seven letters you wear them above your nose to see better what do we think we have also if you get stuck there's a reveal word option but let's not click on that to make sure that we can guess it so it tells you down or across what do we wear above your nose to see better I'm wearing them right now in fact if I don't wear them I am blind as a bat that's a English idiom I close so what do we hear what are these called glasses that's right okay good job glasses glasses and of course in this in this game spelling really really really really counts because um because if you misspell one word it's going to mess up another word so we're gonna try it one more this one right here to see a yellow sour fruit a yellow sour fruit five letters glasses good job thank you guys face mask maybe but no it's glasses glasses so what's a yellow sour fruit let's see who can answer it it is funny idiom Ricardo yeah okay so Yasmine says lemon let's try lemon lemon that is correct but you guys see how spelling really matters for this game because if I had written grasses for example then I would be confused and it would be hard for me to guess lemon so it's very very important to make sure that your spelling is really good on these the other thing I was going to show you was if you for example don't have access to the Internet I found this cool website called ESL games plus.com where you can print you can print some of these crossword puzzles and they're also on categories and they can be from objects or like rooms in the house like bathroom or bedroom or body parts and colors to things like adjectives or actions so you can really use some of these to really practice a specific part of English that you have issues with so if you print them out you can take them like I said on a trip you can take them on the bus and you can just fill them out without the destruction of the internet which is sometimes very very very nice so um I think I had yeah so they're very whoops not hangman crosswords okay so those are very very useful like I said it's a little bit more difficult and sometimes you can do some really difficult ones and if you're in need of a challenge I actually have to show you another one and this one is from dictionary.com it had they have a free daily crossword and it's pretty difficult so we're not going to play it right now because of time but they do have one and it's pretty lengthy so it's it's it's really good because you have the option of going from easy to challenging so I definitely recommend doing these at any level okay like I said I'll put the links before in the description once we are finished okay are you guys ready for the next one I am so excited because this is something that I used to play a lot when I was younger and now we've repurposed it we gave it an English an English application thank you guys for answering I still see a lemon and glasses yes you guys are correct those were the correct answers lemon and glasses thank you for answering the next thing I want to talk to you about it's this little game that many kids play when they're busy they look at two pictures side by side and they have to spot the difference so they have to find the differences in these pictures now before I we play this game together I want to give you some instructions on how you can play this so it can benefit your English because this can be a very beneficial game or activity okay very very beneficial what I would like you to ask to ask you to do is every time you you do this activity is to ask yourself how are these two different images different so I want you to describe the differences make sure you write them in full sentences because of course some of them might be easy to spot but the point is not to find them as much as to talk about them that is where the English practice comes in hand so you can use adjectives actions I just want to make sure that you're being as descriptive as possible this is where it becomes very very useful let me show you what I mean with a picture that I have right here are you ready are you ready to help me spot the differences yes please please join thank you so much join everyone into our spot the difference activity okay it is about to start good good good okay so I have here there are ten differences and this on this website there's ten ten differences it's an easy picture they're not that hard but I want you to write down what are the differences they use notice okay but make sure to be descriptive I will give you an example and then while I talk please write down any differences that you notice so for example in the second picture there is a black baby chicken black little chick while in the first picture there the little chicken the little baby chicken is yellow see so you have to make sure to describe these differences of course it's easy to spot them but what I'm interested in is describing them so let's see if you guys noted anything else the cow okay what about the cow make sure to be descriptive a blue rooster moon in the sky so yeah very good but please make sure write down write down a complete sentence blue chicken yes but make sure so yeah this is like a blue rooster and so the best way to do this would would be in the second picture there is a blue rooster and in the first picture there is no rooster so if you're using complete sentences you are fully trying to develop your English skills okay so let's see any other any other differences that you've noticed a B the cow has black stains very good exactly so in the second picture the cow has black stains or spots and in the first picture the cow has brown spots perfect so this is how I want you to play this activity just explained the differences don't just say what they are an insect Oh perfect in the second picture the dog still has a little bee and the first picture dogs doesn't have a little bee perfect so exactly so the that's exactly right so this is something you can do with yourself and I'll show you how to get find some of these together but definitely definitely write in complete second perfect so you get how this game is slash activity is played how we are doing this make sure to describe these as much as you can now if you're wondering how can I find these activities a very very great way to do it an easy way is to do a google search this is what I did I wrote spot the difference up here and you can see so many differences so many pictures that come up and there's something that I think was even did a lesson on is the usefulness of Google Images it's such a useful tool for you so if you have grammar questions or things like that you can always type them in in Google Images but I love it for this activity spot the difference so you can use any of these you and do it while on your computer or you can print them out if you want to use your color printer you can print them out and you can definitely definitely do this activity by yourself okay okay are you guys ready for the next one let's see okay the next one oh gosh I'm biased because I love all of these activities but the next one is among my favorites probably my favorite because it involves emojis there are so many reasons why I love emojis there's I think they bring such a wonderful dimension to language you can express a lot more they're fun they're funny you can just play with them as much as you want but in terms of learning English they can also be very useful who knew and I'll show you how so I like them because they develop your creative thinking they help you maybe if you're kind of stuck learning English you're just learning grammar grammar grammar all the time sometimes you need a little bit of inspiration to make things fun this is a great way to do it they also help you develop your vocabulary and fluency if you do it this way so now I want you guys to put your creative hats on okay and become very very creative because I'm about to show you something fun that I do with my students thank you guys for answering by the way about the ladybug and all these other differences thank you for being so descriptive this is great this is wonderful this is exactly what we need to do you need to speak use as many words be as descriptive as possible because that makes your English great okay so are you ready this is something I do with all my students and I love it it's one of my favorite activities okay here we go so in in the comment I want you guys to in the comments I want you to do the following I want you to write a sentence one sentence or maybe two sentences but a very very short story involving these three emojis okay so we have a poodle you have a plane and we have a key so write down any sentence you can think of involving these three pictures and you can be as creative as possible so I'll give you some time while I'll tell you my short little story and see what you guys come up with okay and again I'll put the links to these websites I'll put them all in the description okay so I'll tell you my story and then you can write yours also yesterday I was driving to the airport there from using the plane driving to the airport and in the car next to me I saw a poodle a poodle and he accidentally ate a key okay so again these stories can be funny I want them to be short because the point is to give you ideas to use your English let's see what you guys came up with I don't see anything yet but maybe my maybe my live feed is not catching up but I will give you another one okay in a second and then I'll read your responses out loud as soon as I see them are you ready for the next one okay so they spin spin spin spin spin and then you have a snail a shower and a clock now as you can see as you can see these emojis do help you because you have to think of the word in English and then you have to put it in a complete sentence so yes you're being creative yes you are using your vocabulary and yes you're practicing your sentence structure and these are very important skills to have when we are talking about being fluent in English so if you are seeing this please write a sentence in the comments about these three pictures okay one sentence very short story of ones or two sentences snails shower clock or alarm clock snails shower and in the meantime I'll read what you guys wrote about the the puto the puto was the pilot of a plane but she couldn't start the plane because she forgot the key this is West's sentence um it's it's a pretty good one I love it a small dog was swallowed the key of the captain so he can't go in the airplane perfect thank you guys see so this is so great and you can make them simple too because then it will said you don't understand much English you can make it very simple to the snail took a shower at 8 o'clock you can make it very or whatever that's 10 o'clock so you can make it very easy to you don't have to make it complicated but if you want you can ice now I just woke up because the alarm clock was set at 11 p.m. that remind us you got to take the shower exactly so you can make this as crazy as you want or as short as you want but I suggest making it a little crazy because it's fun you're ready to do another one okay we have another snail you have a bomb and that could be according to most of my students it's a castle but it could also be the Taj Mahal maybe I don't know but you can kind of you don't have to be exact instead of bomb you can say explosion instead of the building you can say a temple or you can say a castle so let's see I keep reading um I was taking a shower when suddenly a snail but it was a gigantic one I was terrified and out of the blue my clock rang I woke up it was a bad dream perfect you guys are doing so well white snail took shower alarm went off while snail yeah exactly I have these vocabulary words and also making sure that you really pay attention to your sentence structure it's a very very good one okay so we can there's a lot to do with this but I'm going to switch to another one that's equally fun but a little bit different so this one is from Bert c-calm and the difference with this one so it will give you different emojis but what it also does is they don't end so you can do so you have to keep adding to the story okay so are you guys ready okay let me see what else you've written the castle exploded I saw snail running away the secret agent snail with bomb attempt oh you guys are your imaginations are incredible wonderful thank you for answering everyone this is amazing okay so this one is slightly different so it all starts with a bicycle in this case but it gives you different ones every time so we can start it with one sentence yesterday I took a bike ride in the city in the park and then I saw a tram crossing crossing and then and then I saw a little boy next to the tram crying and I asked him why are you crying little boy and then he told me that he was crying because there was a train coming right at him and I asked him why don't you get out of the way and then he got so happy because of my advice and he told me that he loved me you guys see what I'm doing so I keep adding to to all of these to all of these stories I'm gonna keep going but we're going to do one together and I want to see what you guys are doing so and then what happened what do you think happens so if you listen to my story I said yesterday I went on a bike ride in a park and I saw a tram crossing and next to the tram there was a little boy crying because he was in front of a train and I had told asked him why doesn't he move away and he did and he told me he loved me so let's see if you guys can come up can continue my story so this is an angry emoji what else can we can you give me with this little with with this angry while you guys are riding I'll I'll keep I'll keep going with it let's see um and then I saw his mother the boy's mother looking very angry at me and I realized that she loved wearing a turban I don't know why but she was even angrier I don't know where the story is going but she got even angrier at me because I was looking at her turban and then I decided that this was a dream I was asleep okay so you can start over it's this big and I usually zoom in so I can see it better but every time I click on it it gives me a different emoji and I can start a different story so sure it belongs to the mother and then he said it was joking and so there's so much you can go with it as you can see this is so much fun because you can really clip keep clicking and then and then and then and it can go on forever okay so as you can see there are a lot of fun there's so much you can do and it's kind of wonderful that this resource is right there with emojis who knew that emojis could be so useful so emoji stories like I said they're a lot of fun they involve your creativity and your vocabulary now if you're doing this on your phone away something I really like to do is to look at apps I'm constantly on my phone I'm sure you are too so I found some emoji apps um that you can use I have an iPhone but my husband he has an Android so I was looking on both phones to kind of find some of these apps that I found on here so I know that I think the first one gets the emoji that I've listed I think it's on both but you can really just type in yes and emoji in your google play store or in your iTunes or Apple gosh what is it called now Apple Store I think it's an Apple store yeah so you can you can type it in and you get these games there there are word games they're actually very educational because some of them are very useful because they'll tell you compound words so like in this case we have a corn dog so a corn dog if you don't know it's kind of like a hot dog but it's it's like a hot dog wrapped in like a corn batter and you eat it on a stick and you eat it with mustard it's an American fare food that you eat at a fair and it's um very I don't know if it's as popular anymore was popular when I was younger so that's a corn dog but they give you these clever ways of guessing the words so it's worth checking these apps out emoji different emoji apps you can type and guess the emoji what emoji emoji quiz there's kind of similar but they all have like they're all a little bit different so they are not all like word puns some of them are they show you an emoji and you have to write what it is some of them you have to give some movie so if you're also interested in American popular culture this is very useful like I remember seeing one with a bat and then a man and you have the answer was Batman so there are actually a lot of fun because you learn a little bit about the culture as well and not just the words you also get it's a game so you also get points and you get coins or whatever don't pay for them if you want to pay it's fine but I don't recommend paying because you can do them for free and they're fun okay so before we go today I just want to quickly go over the different activities that we talked about today we have talked about hangman and I gave you different options we can go anywhere from easy to a little bit more difficult we talked about doing crossword puzzles and this is fun because you can do it on the computer again you can go from anywhere from easy to dictionary.com which is pretty difficult but you can also print them out and some websites like the ones we were talking about have categories if you're trying to perfect a certain skill so if you're working on your verb it might be very useful for you to print very creative with the different kinds of emojis and of course we looked at the apps as well I hope I hope that this was useful I hope you enjoyed it and every time every every time we do these lessons we hope that they're very useful to you I we hope that you keep improving and we hope that you keep practicing so I hope that this gave you another way to do that if you found this lesson useful please like it please share it with your friends if you think anyone will find it useful please show it to them and never stop writing comments we read them during the lesson if I miss them I will see them after the lesson so please keep writing the comments we always answer and for more practice please join our social media classes because we teach there too so thank you guys so much you guys are amazing keep practicing your English and keep doing a wonderful wonderful job like you are doing thank you so much and we will see you next time bye

Level Up Your English in Under 3 Minutes (B2 Adjectives)

Let's learn some B2 vocabulary to help you supercharge your fluency. And I say that because these are words that you will actually hear and use when you're in a conversation. Let's move into some descriptive B2 adjectives like forthcoming. So this has a couple of different meanings. So if we're talking about an event in the future, it could refer to something happening soon. We have not heard back yet from France, but we expect their approval to be forthcoming. Or if we're talking about a person, someone who is willing to share information or help. But it's also common to say the opposite and say they are not forthcoming and they are not providing information. I'm going to be as forthcoming as I can be, Mr.

Anderson. The next adjective is sharp. I like this word mostly because yeah, I like to think that I'm pretty sharp even though that that is definitely not always the case. But it refers to a person who is intelligent, notices things quickly, and just really thinks fast. And really you're just complimenting someone's mental state or mental speed. There's also an idiom that you can use if you want to add emphasis and say that someone is as sharp as a tack. And in that case you're saying they are highly intelligent. Hey, what do you guys think about this Jared? He's right? She's sharp, but she doesn't know anything. Oh, no, she's more than sharp.

She's a human lie detector. Then there's worthwhile. This refers to something that is useful, important, or just good enough to be a suitable reward for the money or time spent. So this is stronger than just saying something is good. It really implies that there is some effort and you're receiving a benefit. Getting a good person out of government is a worthwhile endeavor. Then there's last-minute. I think this is an adjective that we can all relate to because it refers to happening at the latest possible time before an event. And there are some common collocations like a last-minute change or a last-minute decision or even a last-minute cancellation. This morning's budget memo reflects some last-minute changes before our hearing. Next is self-confident. This refers to feeling sure about your own ability to do things and be successful. Be careful not to confuse this with arrogant because even though the meanings may be slightly similar, arrogant definitely has a negative connotation where you think you're better than others, whereas self-confident is more positive. That you just really are sure about your own abilities and it's generally seen as a good thing if someone is self-confident.

They're smart, self-confident, and articulate as we've raised them to be.

These are incredibly useful words. Try to listen for them. Preferably, try to actively use them.

LESSON 432 OF 749

Level Up Your English: Smart Ways to Describe Someone's Appearance

Would you say that you are effervescent, voluptuous, disheveled, or maybe you have prominent features? Let's find out because I'm going to teach you some advanced vocabulary that you can use to talk about someone's appearance. And these are incredibly descriptive words. And if you're someone who enjoys building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So, let's begin on a positive note. And I want to start with some words that really have a positive connotation. And the first word that I have for you is effervescent. This means active, positive, full of energy. So, really, you have a very positive appearance. And of course, this is not the most commonly used adjective, but it is more advanced. And it's always good to add a little flavor to your English fluency. I could say her effervescent smile lit up the room. Or even during tough times, he remained effervescent and optimistic. And there are some useful collocations with this adjective. These are words that are frequently used together. And I'm talking about some adjective noun collocations. Perhaps you're referring to someone's effervescent personality or maybe their effervescent charm or effervescent energy or even effervescent spirit. Here are some more examples. Also, you need to find someone educated and friendly and fun. Just tell us the damn word. Effervescent. He needs to be effervescent. Something's different. You're all effervescent and glowy. Then there's dapper. I like this word. It means neat and stylish. And often you're going to use this to talk about a man. I like to think that I sometimes look dapper, but yeah, that's not always the case. But I could say he looked dapper in his tailor made suit. One thing I want to point out with this word is that it's often going to follow the verb look in saying that someone looks dapper. So, here are some fun images of animals that look quite dapper. All right. Yeah, they they definitely look neat and stylish. And of course, that cat looks dapper, but not very happy. You look very dapper like a prank Sinatra. Don't you look dapper? I thought it was right to buy something special for the occasion. Oh, that's the one. Very dapper, Dr. Shepherd. Glowing. This describes someone who is looking radiant, happy, and healthy. Now, most of the time you're going to use this word to describe a woman, but that may not always be the case. Perhaps I say, "You look amazing. You're glowing." Now, one thing I want to point out is that often people may use this word to refer to someone's complexion. Maybe your skin is really healthy. You're well hydrated.

And in this case, I am never glowing, but I could say her cheeks were glowing. And then something else to keep in mind is that you could use this adjective to refer to a pregnant woman. And this is maybe a little bit more slang. Pregnancy glow. Let me give you some more examples. God, you are glowing. Your skin is glowing. Really? Yeah. He just told me that you're pregnant. Congratulations. You're glowing. I can already tell you're not a virgin anymore. You're glowing. No. How do you look so good with all this stress? Glowing. You actually look younger. What did you do? Then there's voluptuous. This word describes someone who is curvy and sexually attractive. Now, most of the time you're going to use this adjective when describing a woman. In general, women who have larger breast or hips, I could say, "The model's voluptuous figure stole the show." So just remember that if you describe someone as voluptuous, it implies that you are attracted to this person. You said she was very beautiful and voluptuous. Artist would only paint a big voluptuous woman. Well, the American made dog. Why must I be so voluptuous? The next word is striking.

I like this word. It's very descriptive. It means exceptionally noticeable or attractive. And quite often you're going to use this adjective when complimenting someone's eyes. And you could use it when talking about a man or a woman. His striking blue eyes caught everyone's attention. And there are some great collocations with this word. Striking beauty, striking appearance, striking features, striking eyes, or a striking resemblance. This word may also be used as an adverb with other very common and useful collocations. If you were to say that someone is strikingly beautiful or strikingly handsome, I just want to take time to say thank you for my family, my two beautiful, beautiful, handsome, striking sons. We notice the striking beauty of this gown matched by her own striking beauty. I have a daughter who runs fast and a son who runs blind. Your eyes bear a striking resemblance to both. Then we have chiseled. This refers to someone who has clear and well-defined facial features. And really, you're going to use this word when talking about a man. And it makes me realize that nobody's ever used this adjective to describe me, that I I guess I don't really have any chiseled features, but that's okay. I could say his chiseled jawline gave him a striking and timeless look like a movie star from a classic film. So once again, there are some useful collocations with this word describing someone who has a chiseled jawline or chiseled cheekbones or perhaps even a chiseled physique. You're just so hot and chiseled. Yeah, he's in the shower soaping up his incredibly chiseled physique. We have so much in common. Magnetic charm, chiseled jawline.

Let's move on to some words that have more of a neutral connotation. They're just simply descriptive. When talking about someone's appearance, they don't really imply anything that may be complimentary or disparaging. So, in that case, I could describe someone as broad shouldered. And this just means having wide shoulders. Often, you may use this when talking about a man, but that's not always the case. I could say, despite his broadshouldered appearance, he had a gentle voice and warm smile.

Now, it is descriptive, and I'll be honest, you may hear someone use it in a context that is a bit more positive just because of the look, because you look more confident when you have broad shoulders versus the sloping shoulders. Broad shoulders, sloping shoulders. It's always good to get a visual. Someone's going to have to go down in there. Someone with narrow shoulders. No, I have broad shoulders. I have narrow hips, but broad shoulders. I don't know. He's sweet. He's tall. Handsome. Broad shoulders. Good hair. I wonder what she sees in Leonard. The next word is stocky. This describes someone who is short and solidly built. Often you're going to use it when talking about a man. And really what you're saying is that it's not just fat.

There really is some muscle there. So here's an example. Was DC's short and stocky build an advantage for his fighting style? So, as you can see, this person is stocky. They're a fighter, so of course they're strong and they have muscles, but it is a great descriptive word and very specific as well. To give you a little more context, here are some news headlines. Police want to speak with stocky man after cash and jewelry stolen from Bristol home. Surprise on the trail. Stocky puma in Patagonia shocks hikers. And in case you're wondering, well, what does this puma look like? Here is a picture of this stocky puma. And I think it is quite accurate. What up, fat turd? Not a fat turd. I'm a stocky turd. Yeah, I have a thing for Marissa. Do she would ever go out with a short, stocky bald man.

Like that's her type. Then we have petite. This means small and delicate. Often you may use this word when talking about a woman. I could say despite her petite stature, she commanded the room with confidence. A side note, you may also hear people use this word when talking about a clothing size for smaller women. Petite. Here are some more examples. I think I had too much to drink. You are very petite. Just fun fact, the national average size is actually 12. So, you know, you're you're very petite. You know, I think if I were going to be with a woman, it'd be with someone like Michelle cuz she was so petite.

Prominent, great word. This is used to describe features such as a nose or chin without judgment. So, this is an incredibly useful word because often if you are highlighting somebody's facial feature, it may have a positive or negative connotation. So in this case, you can use this word to simply say that something is noticeable. I could say he had a prominent nose that gave his face character. To give you a visual, and I think this is a fun example, if you search prominent nose animal overwhelmingly, you are going to discover the proboscis monkey. This monkey has a prominent nose. Uh I'm not sure I want to eat my own face. I almost did it on the way over here. The lips are very prominent. What a beautiful ch.

Prominent forehead, short arms, tiny nose. Next is the adjective slender. This is used to describe someone who is thin and graceful. And often you'll use this when talking about a woman. I could say her slender waist was accentuated by the fitted dress she wore. And there are many collocations with this word. Perhaps talking about someone's slender build or slender figure or slender waist or slender legs. Many things can be slender. Used to call me the chameleon because of my slender frame and my big wet eyes. I never realized you had such long slender legs. Then there's unassuming. This describes someone whose appearance does not draw attention. So, someone could have an unassuming look or even unassuming behavior. Just keep that in mind. Maybe I tell you she had an unassuming appearance that made her blend into the crowd. In this case, I'm talking about her look. Or despite his success, he remained unassuming and humble. Now, I'm referring to his behavior. Let's have a look at some other video examples. And here he is, this week's noble nobody. What the? A quiet, unassuming security guard who foiled a robbery at a local tavern. Look, I'm a simple, unassuming janitor who can control people's actions with his mind. But I understand he's a perfectly charming man, tremendously talented, and yet modest and unassuming. And last, but not least, let's talk about some words that have a negative connotation. And we'll start with the adjective disheveled. So, you would use this word to describe someone who has a messy or untidy appearance. And you could use it when talking about a man or woman. I could say, "After the long flight, they stepped off the plane looking tired and disheveled." And after a long flight, I certainly look disheveled. To give you some more examples, here are some animals that look disheveled. I don't know what their excuse is. I don't know why they look disheveled, but it's a great visual for this word, disheveled.

I have a perfect right to be a bit disheveled. So, he shows up. He's all out of breath. He's disheveled. And he tells me that no matter what happens, whatever I decide is fine with him. Is that Gregory? Does he look like disheveled? Hello, Mindy. You're looking more disheveled than usual today. Then we have the word haggarded. This is used to describe someone who is worn out or exhausted in appearance. And I like this word even though it has a negative connotation. I think it's one that we can all relate to. I'm sure at some point in your life you can think of a time when you looked haggarded. I here yes. Here is me looking haggarded. I don't know why I have the handlebar mustache, but it's the best example that I could find of myself looking haggarded. To give you a sentence, I could say, "He looked haggarded after working night shifts." Here are some other examples. You look terrible. Haggarded. Thank you. I have been incredibly unwell. And doesn't Clark look a little haggarded to you? Yeah, you know, like he's been up all night bringing about something like a dog trapped in a cage. Scruffy. This describes someone who is untidy and even, you know, looks a little dirty. Now, often you're going to use this when talking about a man, referring to his hair or even his face. I could say, "The scruffy man on the bench looked like he hadn't shaved in weeks." Now, you may be wondering, what's the difference between disheveled and scruffy? So, I would say that disheveled is really referring to someone's overall appearance as being untidy, whereas scruffy to me to me it's more specific. You're referring to someone's hair or just they haven't shaved. So, that being said, I I would still say that you could use them interchangeably if you just want to say that someone needs to clean up. I would expect more from them than a scruffy face, poor hygiene, and your grotesque Simeon proportions. How older could he possibly look? A lot. He's usually a little scruffy, and then the baseball cap hides the funky hair thing. You haven't seen my mate Howard, have you?

Kind of tall, scruffy. Then we have frail. This is used to describe someone who is weak or unhealthy. Now, most of the time you're going to use this adjective to talk about someone who is older or even ill. I could say the frail old woman clutched her cane as she moved slowly across the room. So, this is really a great word if you want to add emphasis. I was helpless, blind, frail, though frail and extremely thin, his fighting spirit was still intact. If dad wakes up and he's frail and he's looking at the endgame, you want to be the one who tells him his family business isn't familyun anymore. Next is the adjective tattered. This refers to wearing torn or ragged clothing. And just keep in mind that we are specifically talking about clothing.

I could say the traveler's tattered clothing hinted at a long journey. Now, I'll be honest. I think some of my clothes, you could say that my clothes are tattered. And I I don't care. I like my old clothes. Even though some people such as my wife would describe them as tattered. Oh, my tattered rags are caught on your coffee table. Because chicks want guys that wear tight pants and tattered clothing and spit blood. You will wind up wearing tattered shoes if you mess with. Then we have slouch. Now, this word is different from all the others because it has a different part of speech. All of our other words were adjectives. Whereas slouch can be either a verb or a noun.

And it's very descriptive. As a verb, it means to stand, move, or sit in a lazy, drooping way. I could say the model was told not to slouch on the runway and maintain good posture. As a noun, it really has the same meaning, referring to a lazy, drooping posture or movement. His constant slouch made him appear less confident than he really was. Most often, you're going to use this as a verb, perhaps even giving someone a command and telling them, "Don't slouch or stop slouching or you shouldn't slouch." You're slouching? Is that how you've been presenting yourself to the world? Don't slouch. Would that fall under the uh stand up straight category?

Now, your mom can see you work from her house. Seymour, stop slouching. Now, if you would like to see more of my effervescent smile and broad shoulders, you can check out another video lesson and keep building your vocabulary. I promise that I will not wear any tattered clothing and I promise not to slouch, but I may look a little haggarded. I don't know. It happens to the best of us. But you can also practice using these words and describe yourself down below in the comments because I love hearing from you. If you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time.

Listening & Speaking GAME | Advanced Vocabulary Naming People

Hello and welcome to our global classroom! Today's activity is describing nouns. Today we're going to describe nouns that are people. This will help you practice your listening and speaking. These nouns are at an advanced level. However, learners of all levels can participate. You may even learn some new vocabulary words! For this activity, Wes is going to describe six different nouns to you. Each of these nouns is about people. You will have ten seconds to guess and say the answers. Please make sure to speak out loud. Who cares if your neighbor hears you? They'll just hear you practice your amazing English skills!

Let's see an example before we start. Wes will describe a word to me, and I will guess the answer. Here's the word: Are you ready for the word? Yes I am! This person mostly would work in a bar, this is the person who makes your drink. They make cocktails, they pour beer. It's not a waiter or a waitress. This person is a _____. Oh, that's easy! A bartender! Yea, you got it, well done! Thank you! Now that you see how it's done, let's begin! Wes will choose a noun and describe it to you, and then you will try to guess it. Remember to say all the answers out loud, and after we finish all six words, I will go over the answers with you.

Ready? Let's get the clock up there! Number one Ok, so this is a person that you're in love with. When you get married it's your husband or wife, but before you get married, you're engaged and you call this person your _____. Number two This is somebody who rents you your home or your apartment and you pay this person every month. This is the owner of that home or an apartment. You are the tenant and they are the _____.

Number three This is a pet doctor. This is a profession, people study to become this type of doctor for animals. If you have a pet like a cat or a dog, and they're sick, you take them to a _____. Number four So when you go to, for example, a nice restaurant, or a nice hotel, if there is nowhere to park the car, you would just pull up to the front, you would give them the keys, and they would park the car for you. Their job is to park cars. What do you call this person? Number five When you have a large group of people that gather for an event or function, like New Year's Eve, they're all together and it's very tight. This is what you would call the group of people. It is the _____.

Number six This is a person, it's not your friend. You know who they are, but you don't really know them. You might know their name, and if you saw them on the street you might stop and say hello. If it's not your friend, they are an _____. So how did it go? I hope you were able to give an answer to all of those. If you'd like to do this activity again before I tell you the answers, you can stop the video and go back to the start of the activity.

Now, onto the answers. I'll replay some of the key words that Wes used in the description before I reveal the answers to you. Number one When you get married it's your husband, or wife, but before you get married you're engaged and you call this person your _____. Fiancé is the word that we're looking for. Number two This is somebody who rents you your home or your apartment, and you pay this person every month A person you rent from is your landlord.

Number three If you have a pet, like a cat, or a dog, and they're sick, you take them to a _____. A doctor for your pet is a veterinarian. (Trying to say the word a few times) It's veterinarian. Veterinarian. It's a difficult word to say. Number four. you would give them the keys, and they would park the car for you. Their job is to park cars. The answer is valet. Number five When you have a large group of people that gather for an event, or function, like New Year's Eve Crowd is the answer we're looking for. Number six It's not your friend, you know who they are, but you don't really know them.

This person is an acquaintance. Easy peasy, right? Now it's your turn I'll show you two nouns and you'll need to describe them to Wes. He will then try to guess the words you are describing. Make sure to speak out loud, be creative and have fun! This is a fun activity, you get to speak! So, speak! Ready? Here's your first word: Ah, you're describing a judge. Ready for the second word? Here it is: I think you're describing a receptionist. Great job today! We hope you enjoyed this activity. If you did, give us a like down below. We also encourage you to write to us in the comments. We'd love to hear from you.

Give us your feedback, tell us about your day, whatever! Just use English! We'll see you next time, bye!

LESSON 434 OF 749

Listening & Speaking GAME | Intermediate Vocabulary Describing People

What's up everyone! Today we're going to do an activity called... The nouns we are going to describe today are people. This is a listening and speaking activity around the level of an intermediate learner. However, this is a great exercise for anybody who's looking to practice their English. In this activity, Ioana is going to describe six different nouns. Each noun is a person. You will have 10 seconds to say the answer. Please say it out loud. Talk to the computer. Talk to us. This is a speaking exercise so please SPEAK. But before we begin, let's do an example. Ioana is going to describe a word to me. And then I am going to try and think of the answer.

I do not know this word. I promise you. No looking Wes! I'm not looking. Ready? I'm ready. Okay, this person is an important male figure in your life. He's one of your parents. Another name for this person is dad. And it's not your mother but your... I think the answer is father. Yay! Good job! Okay, so you get the idea. Ioana is going to describe a noun to you. You'll have 10 seconds to answer. Remember, say your answer out loud. After we finish all six of the words, then I'm going to go over the answers with you. Are you ready? This is your mother's father or your father's father. They're a member of your family who you love a lot.

You always see them on holidays. And it's not your grandmother but your... This person is kind of like a doctor but for your teeth. They clean the teeth, but also they fix them if there's a problem. If you eat too much candy, you need to go see them. This is somebody who loves playing sports. He or she will play basketball or baseball. People in this category include Michael Jordan, Messi, Tiger Woods. When you need to travel somewhere, this person is the one who flies your plane. That's all I got. What else do they do? They fly your plane. This person works at a restaurant. They work in the kitchen. They make the food. They cut it up. They cook it.

Many times they go to culinary school to learn how to do this. Basically, they make your food. This is a person you go to classes with...to school with. They help you when you miss a class. They give you their notes. They're the same level as you are. They're right next to you in the classroom. Hopefully, you were able to come up with an answer to those. If you would like to do the activity again before I show you the answers, pause the video. You can go back. But right now, I'm going to tell you what the answer are. This is your mother's father or your father's father. And it's not your grandmother but your... The answer is grandfather.

It's your mother's father...your dad's father. This person is kind of like a doctor but for your teeth. They clean the teeth, but they also fix them if there's a problem. The answer is dentist...the doctor for your teeth. This is somebody who loves playing sports. He or she will play basketball or baseball. People who play a lot of sports, they are athletes. When you need to travel somewhere, this person is the one who flies your plane. A pilot flies the plane, so the answer is pilot. This person works at a restaurant. They work in the kitchen. They make the food. A cook is a person who makes the food, and that is the answer.

This is a person you go to classes with...to school with. They're right next to you in the classroom. People who are in the classroom with you, those are your classmates. So now we're going to switch roles, and it is your turn. I am going to show you two nouns, and YOU are going to describe them to Ioana. She cannot see these words. I promise. Ioana is going to try and guess what the answer is. Remember to be creative! Don't just use one word! Use complete sentences! This is a speaking exercise so... Are you ready?

Let's begin! Is it an actress? Fireman! Yay! Good job! We make a great team. Okay, nice job! We hope you enjoyed this activity. We're always looking to hear from our students. Let us know what you think. Give us your feedback in the comments below. And we'll see you next time!

LESSON 435 OF 749

Listening and Speaking GAME | Words that Describe People (Beginner)

Hey everyone! It's time for your favorite activity...Describing Nouns. This is a listening and speaking activity. Today we're going to describe nouns that are people. The people we will describe are around the vocabulary level of a beginner or high-beginner. However, this activity is relevant to learners of all levels. And if you're an advanced learner, you should get all of these right. In this activity, Ioana is going to describe six different nouns to you. Each noun is a person, and you will have 10 seconds to guess the correct answer. And remember to say your answers out loud. But before we begin, let's see an example. Ioana is going to describe the word, and I'm going to guess the answer.

Here's the word. Are you ready? I think so. Okay. So this person is a member of your family. You have the same parents as they do. It's a girl. I have one. She's not my brother, she's my... It's your sister. Okay. So you get the idea. Let's begin. Great! Ioana will pick a noun and describe it to you. You will try to guess that noun and remember to After we finish all six words, I'll go over the answers with you. Ready? Let's get the clock up there! And begin. Okay. So this is a girl. This is a girl that you like. That you like to go on dates with or you already date her.

And you have a relationship with her. Maybe give her presents. So this is a very little person, the youngest member of your family. They cry all the time. They need all of your attention. They're always hungry. A very, very, small child. Can you guess? This is somebody whose job is in music, someone famous. Somebody who maybe has a band. An example would be Beyonce or Michael Jackson. If you do something bad, this person is going to take you away...to jail. They catch criminals. Their job is to help and protect people. They drive a car that goes whooo, whooo, whooo, whooo... This is somebody who is always poor, never has money, is always reading books.

This is a person who goes to school, who sits in class, takes notes, trying to study for exams. And it is you. When you go to a restaurant, this person...they bring you your drinks. They bring you your food. They take your order. If you're not nice to them, they can do stuff to your food. Hopefully, you were able to give an answer for all of those. If you would like to do the activity again before I show you the answers, You can pause the video and go back to the start of the activity. So let's look at the answers. But before I show them to you, I'm going to replay Some of the key words that Ioana used to describe the nouns.

A girl that you like, that you like to go on dates with or you already date her. The answer we were looking for is girlfriend. They cry all the time. They need all of your attention. They're always hungry. Somebody who cries a lot is a baby. This is somebody whose job is in music, someone famous. An example would be Beyonce or Michael Jackson. The answer is singer. If you do something bad, this person is going to take you away...to jail. Policeman or policewoman were the answers that we're looking for. This is a person who goes to school, who sits in class, takes notes. The answer is student. They bring you your drinks. They bring your food. They take your order.

The answer is waiter or waitress. Hopefully, you were able to give an answer for all of those. Now, it's your turn. I'll show you two nouns and you need to describe them to Ioana. She can't see these words. I promise. So you'll definitely need to speak. Try to use complete sentences and not just one word. Be creative. And if Ioana looks confused, then try to think of another way to explain the word. Here's your first word. Is it a father? Oh, oh that's a doctor. Okay. Good job! We hope you enjoyed this activity. Let us know what you think. Was it too easy? Was it too difficult? You can give us your feedback in the comments below.

We'll see you next time.

LESSON 436 OF 749

Listening and Speaking Game | Guessing Transportation Words (Intermediate)

Welcome to our global classroom! In today's activity, we will be... describing nouns. Today's nouns are about transportation. This is a listening and speaking activity. These nouns are at an intermediate level. Even if your transportation vocabulary is immaculate, you can still participate. For this activity, Wes will describe six different nouns to you. Each of these nouns is on the topic of transportation. You will have ten seconds to say the answer. Please speak up, and say the answers out loud. Otherwise, we won't hear you! Let's see an example before we start! Wes will describe a word to me and I will guess the answer. Here's the word: Are you ready? Yes! I'm ready!

Ok, so this is a type of transportation, it's on the water, people use it to go fishing, they use it to travel if they want to go to an island... What do you think this is? I believe you are talking about a boat! Alright, you get the idea, let's begin. Wes will choose a noun, and describe it to you. You must try to guess that noun. Remember to say the answers out loud and after we finish all six words, I will go over the answers with you Ready? Let's get the clock up there.

Number one This is a vehicle that people will use in a medical emergency, or if you get injured and you see these vehicles at hospitals, and they help people. They pick them up and they bring them to the hospital Number two This is something that's not just on the water, it's under the water. They belong to the military, they're really really big. The Beatles wrote a song a song about it called The Yellow _____

Number three It is a little similar to a motorcycle, but they're smaller. A lot of times they don't go very fast You see these a lot on islands, or at tourist destinations Number four So this is a type of boat, it's actually a large boat that's used for public transportation, and it will take people typically to and from an island. What do you think this is called? Number five It's like a board that's on four wheels and people will stand on it to get around town or get around their neighborhood You have to push yourself with one leg to move forward. Number six So this is a type of car, a lot of times families will have this car, it's big, it can fit many people, usually it has a sliding door on the side What kind of car do you think I'm talking about?

I hope you were able to give an answer to all of those. If you would like to do the activity again before I tell you the answers, you can stop the video and go back to the beginning of the activity. Now it's time to reveal the answers... but before I do, I'll replay some of the key words that Wes used to describe the nouns.

Number one You see these vehicles at hospitals, and they help people, they pick them up and they bring them to the hospital You see these at a hospital. The answer is ambulance. Number two This is something that's not just on the water, it's under the water. The answer we were looking for is submarine. Number three It is a little similar to a motorcycle, but they're smaller A scooter is like a motorcycle, but smaller. That's the answer. Number four So this is a type of boat, it's actually a large boat that's used for public transportation. A boat used for public transportation is a ferry. Number five It's like a board that's on four wheels, and people will stand on it. You have to push yourself with one leg to move forward The answer is skateboard.

Number six A lot of times families will have this car, usually it has a sliding door on the side A family car with sliding door is a van. I hope you did well and got all of those correct. But now, it's your turn. I'll show you two nouns and you'll need to describe them to Wes. He will then try to guess the words you are describing. This is your moment to shine! Make sure to speak out loud, and try to use complete sentences. Be creative and most importantly, have fun! Ready? Here's your first word. I think you're talking about a helicopter. Ready for the second word? Here it is: Are you describing a limousine?

Great job today! We hope you enjoyed this activity! Give us any feedback in the comments below. You can give thoughts, suggestions, or just say hello. Thanks for watching, and we'll see you next time.

Live English Lesson to Improve Your Fluency | Q&A Conversation

hello hello hello what's up my name is Wes this is interactive English in case this happens to be your first time here what we do here at this channel we are all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills and today all right today we have a fun little Q&A and I am going to take some questions from from all of you all right so I first I just want to say hello to everybody who's who's in the chat right now um hello Miriam mortaza uh ashel Pedro Sandy hello hello Raheem inel uh Brian alar Oscar I'm sorry if I missed some names uh I will have some questions for you guys and I will try to give as many shoutouts as I can so so many people are like oh like you know say my name say hello we try to say hello to all of you so today I mentioned we are going to do a fun little Q&A an English lesson a live Q&A and I will take some questions from all of you guys here but first before we jump into that I do want to go over two other special special questions um this comes from our patreon community so I always ask uh some of our Pat patrons to say send us some of your questions and we will try and answer and I'll put put together some slides so I want to go over those quickly first so today's questions come from uh Dany and Danny asked the first one I kind of I mixed up the order of these questions so the first one is asking about the difference between run out and sold out if there is any difference because he says he's heard we're sold out the tickets are sold out other examples like you run out of cheese running out of cheese in the fridge so let's let's look at those first because this this is a great question because phrasal verbs can be tricky so you have run out and sellout both of them are phrasal verbs but notice notice the difference when you run out of something think of it like there's a supply of something and it's being used up so a supply you could say for example you are your battery um you know your batter is running out that's a common that's a common thing you might hear somebody say like oh you know my battery's running out it means that the supply of energy is is you're you're losing it you are using it up it's running out sellout all right so it's a supply of goods that's the key word here Goods that are being used up so run out is just something could be Goods it could be something else sellout you're talking about goods and that's why that's why I put that dollar sign there because think of it like money you're talking about something you buy or something that you purchase when you're selling out of something so let's look at some more examples okay so let's let's talk about them in the past because when we talk about ran out and sold out we're talking about they're both being used in the past tense and means it's finished all right it's done it's over there's no more now these phrasal verbs are synonyms they are interchangeable when you're talking about something it is no longer available to buy so for example the store ran out of eggs I could just say the store sold out of eggs so you're talking about something that you can buy eggs and the concert the concert sold out in record time there are no more tickets available to buy so you could say the concert sold out now I will give you that slight little Nuance down there which uh again is showing you that there might be a little bit of a difference and that difference is to me and some people maybe disagree with this but to me run out ran out sometimes it implies that more may be available later on and that's why I would say when you're talking about tickets to an event when you're talking about an event I think it's much more common to use sellout in the present tense or sold out so when you're talking about an event with tickets I think that's more common to you soldout simply because you know there once you're done selling tickets then there's nothing there's no more to buy you can't get more but if you're talking about a store maybe some shoes and the shoe store says you know oh yeah we we ran out of these shoes then it kind of implies well maybe later on in the future they will get more and more will be be available to buy so I think that is one difference when talking about goods and products that that run out and sold out um Can differ a little but in those cases most of the time they would be inter changeable now let's look at this part right here let's let's talk about when it's happening all right something is running out something is selling out and the the difference so look at those first two sentences those would be interchangeable we're running out of inventory if you don't know what inventory is it's talking about again Goods that you would store and you have these Goods that is your inventory and you're running out the supply is getting lower all right um or you're selling out of inventory people are buying them you are using it up uh I'm trying to give you these motions with my hand but you can't see it it's cut off the next one okay so again here this is good one is good one's bad so run out the restaurant is running out of cheese so in that example like you're talking about the supply is going down all right you are using it up you would not say the restaurant is selling out of cheese it's a it's very awkward you would I'd understand that it's awkward the reason I say it's awkward is because like I said you you when you're talk you would use sellout when talking about something you buy now when you go to a restaurant you are not just buying just cheese you're not buying only the cheese usually that cheese is going to come on a sandwich or it's going to come with some meal so it's a part of the meal and therefore you would say oh we are running out of this Supply we're running out of cheese all right so selling out again think of a product some something that you would actually be able to buy or purchase time that is another good one you talk about running out of time and you're you you don't have time left you're like as I'm running out of time you cannot sell out of time because that is not something that it's not a product or a service that you would buy and pay money for so those are some of the differences between run out and sellout great question again I think run out is it's just a lot more Universal because you can say you know you're you're running out of something you buy you're running out of time you're running out of battery you're running out of patience there are many different ways that we could use run out all right and again I love these examples you guys give me all right uh alab says yes you run out of gas another great example you know oh the car is running out of gas perfect um you could say Judy yes we ran out of books all right there's no more books um and be D might be selling out of love you know you could be running out of oh I LLY I'm running out of love okay all right so again just something to keep in mind the difference between these phrasal verbs and those slight nuances the differences between them so the next question from Danny he asked uh again all right let me get out of the way so the first one is talking about the difference between finish and done all right and as well as finish doing something and how they're used and how they might be different and again finish to do you wouldn't use that one because after the verb finish you are going to use the jiren but let's look at this because this this is a good question because depending on how strict you want to be with grammar then you might think that there is a big difference so a a a true real grammar grammar person might you know there there's this kind of quote this saying when talking about finished versus done cakes are done but people are finished now you might be thinking what the heck does that mean so let me tell you what that means so done the the the true actual technical definition would be something has brought been brought to a conclusion okay um the roast is not done cooking so often times you might use it with food talking about whether food is done it's been brought to a conclusion and it is ready so that's the kind of something to think about when something is done cooking that means it's ready you could keep cooking it longer but it's not it's not something you want to do because that's not going to taste good if you if you just keep baking a cake or you keep cooking these steaks you want to cook them until they're done until they're ready until they've been brought to a conclusion now finished you're talking about something that is completed it is concluded it's finished there's no more there's no more discussion about it they finished first in the competition the competition it's it's just done all right I just used it in that context it's there there's no more nothing more to do about it so think about that and now now I'll tell you again they are nowadays all right they are interchangeable and we use them interchangeable um interchangeably we use them interchangeably quite often especially when we're talking about a task so for example like sentences people might say you know I've done all my work I've finished all my work in that sense most of the time people will use them interchangeably and they have the same meaning that that this has been completed and there is no more however all right we get into these slight little nuances here which takes us back to the first meaning I'm done with this if somebody says you know I'm done with this all right technically speaking that means that they may not be finished all right it may not be completed so for example you might be working on a project and say that you're really frustrated and you just don't want to work anymore you're very tired you might say you know I'm done with this okay that means that like in that first sense it's been brought to a conclusion you are at a point where you're like I I'm not going to keep working but you technically did not finish the project so again it really depends on the context that you want to convey that okay you've just reached a point where you are you you don't want to work anymore I've done with this or if somebody said you know I'm finished with this then that means that yes it is completed you you have no more work left to do so again there are some tricky differences between them depending on you know what you want to say and what you're trying to express but sometimes when you're talking about tasks things that you need to do uh you can use them interchangeably I've done all my work I finished all my work now let's talk about um this one right here finish doing something like I said when you use the verb finish then you will follow it by with the Jaren you finish doing something um and it's used to talk about completing an action so an action that has recently been done as well think of it like uh we there are many collocations with do and in that sense you might use finish doing something for example you do the laundry and you could say yeah you know I finished doing the laundry or you might do students might do their homework so you could finish doing the homework or maybe uh somebody might do do their nails you finish doing their nails again this is something that happened recently it was in action and you might just say you know I finished doing this thing so I think in that context it's used often with those collocations you do laundry you do work you do homework you do nails and you might finish doing these things okay so all right those are the questions that I wanted to answer so if you guys would like us to answer answer some of your questions just like that you guys can check us out on patreon I will put up a link and you can join our community we have some cool rewards up there again I will leave a link in the description if you guys want to check that out so right now okay I would like to take some of your questions all right so if you have any questions just write them to me in the chat uh I will go through uh some of those and try to answer them especially if um let me put that up there boom there's that patreon link especially if they just keep them simple all right if it's something about pronunciation vocabulary grammar um just keep that in mind obviously if somebody says hey can you talk about all 12 verb tenses that's not possible um I will try to answer as many questions as I can as well as you know even if you have some personal questions things about me I know a lot of you follow follow us on social media on Facebook and Twitter and we we post pictures and some more personal stuff um so think just something to think about all right so if you have any questions write that for me you guys can write that in the chat um again some got so many other people hello I just want to give a quick shout out uh uh Delila hello um dang Wong excellent nice to have you here uh weon great to see you perfect uh jasine all right so I love it I love it when you say boom yes that is uh that would be an interjection that you're just saying an expression I always I use that one too a lot I use it in the classroom a lot especially when I want to emphasize something like here it is Boom all right that's a good one I like that too um haid asks EXC that's a good question do all Americans understand each other and I think that is a great question um because it talks about you know accent and many people out there many English Learners depending on what country you're from you might have an accent in English and I always tell Learners you know don't worry if you if you want to reduce your accent then that is up that's up to you that's your decision but don't feel like it's necessary don't feel like you have to the most important thing is that you all understand each other and even within the United States that's what I want to say different parts of the country have different accents whether you're from the southeast or whether you're from the west coast and depending on that accent because some people have a very thick accent it can be difficult for people to understand I remember yuana and I we were traveling through the North Carolina and in North Carolina Sometimes some people have a very thick accent and we were doing this tour and then after the tour the the guy who worked there basically said to us he's like um

Y and I basically I didn't know what to say because I couldn't understand him and I just said no thank you that's okay and and we left but he had a very very thick accent and it was difficult to understand so yes people in the United States they they may not uh understand one another so um let's see let's see is my accent is your accent am American because it's yeah I think I have if I had to classify my accent um Yasmin I'd say it is a standard uh American accent I do speak uh a bit slower because I've been teaching English for about 15 years so therefore I think my my speech has just developed based on that because I've slowed down my speech when I'm in the classroom I try to speak clearly because again I want students to understand me and it also like I've taught many different levels so I have taught very very very beginners um pre-literate students which means you do have to speak very clearly you have to be speak very slowly so again I I don't think I think my have a standard American accent but I I I speak a lot slower than I think other Americans or native English speakers would speak so say my name no 2011 what's up all right um what else um what's the difference between bother and bore well to bother someone is basically to Anno annoy um someone annoy somebody so bother annoy those are synonyms to bore a person would be again think of the word boring the adjective something is boring so to bore someone means some activities happening and that you might bore them all right I hope I am not boring all of you right now you guys ask some questions uh Alexander I really like your speech thank you Alexander um let's see are oh LLY are

British and American idioms the same no they they are not I think that there are some idioms that are used in both countries for example like an idiom that I think many people know about that is very Universal if you say something is a piece of cake piece of cake means it's very easy you might hear that in British English you might hear that in American English so some of them are used um by both in both American and British English but there are other ones that are not some that are just uh used in American English and then some that are just used in British English we do have some idiom lessons um we did a collaboration with Ali from Papa teach me where we were quizzing each other on different British and American idioms uh good lesson you guys check that out so what else do we have um Daniel hello from Brazil excellent um thank you L I can understand you very well excellent um isow you're a great and phenomenal teacher thank you so much I really appreciate that isow um what is the meaning uh manapur asked what's the meaning of once in a blue moon so all right that's a good one it is a again I'd say it's an idiom it's an expression once in a blue moon so basically each month think of it like this each month there is usually one full moon okay sometimes depending on the month you might have two moon two full moons within one month and in that case that's referred to as a blue moon all right where you have two full moons in one month a blue moon and it's very rare it does not happen often because usually each month there's just one full moon so something that happens once in a blue moon is something that happens rarely it does not happen often so that's the expression like oh like some situation happened you're like gosh I can't believe they called my name it happens once in a blue moon and they called my name and I have to go to jury duty it happens once in a blue moon so if something happens once in a Blue Moon then it's just rare it does not happen often good question um somebody said where is it uh I usually understand Americans uh better Americans than because we're used to Andrea said yeah we're used to more American English that is true I always tell uh students again some people want to learn more British English and others American English if what whatever English you want to learn then again it's all about exposure try to expose yourself to American English if you want to learn more American English and American idioms and the same with British if you want to learn more of the

the British accent British idioms then you need to expose yourself to British English and as Andrea said I think yeah I think it's common because of movies TV and music I think more people in general no matter where you are in the world are probably exposed a bit more to American English which is why I think some many people might be a bit more comfortable with that accent um over my head B Simon what does it mean over my head so if something is over your head people might do this ex this motion right here something goes over your head it means that you don't understand it so I'd say you know oh this math problem it was over my head I didn't I I don't understand it I did not understand it it was too difficult for me to understand so if something's over your head you don't understand it often times we use it when talking about a joke somebody tells a joke and maybe another person doesn't get the joke because they don't understand it and you say ah it was over your head it was over their head um another good idiom be happy says channel is precious to me thank you excellent well we I it's it's honestly this is the community that we have here like doing these lessons with you guys is just so awesome to think that we have made this connection with all of you from you know everybody is from all over the world and it is again it's for for Yuan and it is very meaningful to get your comments to to have you guys participate in these lessons and actually you know it's like we have our our this huge English class which we love um and we're really thankful for that so let's see sorry again if I can't get to all of your questions um I'm trying to see as many as I can um is it possible to say I'm blue um I'm sad yeah I think you could so that's another way of saying sad is to say I think often people might say they're feeling blue you're like you know I'm feeling a bit blue then you're feeling a little sad I don't think it's super common but again you could use it in that context to instead of saying you know I'm sad like you know I'm feeling a bit blue I think it's more common to use it with feel feel blue um let's see what do we have um does speed matter INF fluency William Johnson I would say I guess it depends I would say yes and no if you are talking about you know just fluency and wanting to communicate efficiently and communicate effectively then I think it's more important to have you know fluency in terms of the the Rhythm and flow of your speech it doesn't necessarily mean you need to speak super fast because again I I feel like I don't know I think my fluency is pretty good but at the same time I don't speak I don't speak fast at all and other people that do speak fast I've met some you know other Americans they speak really fast it's a little more difficult to understand and to me I'm not a big fan of that I think it's like okay it's too fast why are you talking so fast you need to calm down and just and just tone it back a little bit so I think it depends on instead of thinking about speed think more about the the Rhythm and flow of speech because again language it is it is like it's a pattern it's a flow it's a rhythm it's like music all right so again think of that um kcki says please answer me I'm sorry I didn't see where your question was oh how can I speak fluently again that's a very uh broad question we do have some fluency videos If you go to our Channel just search um fluency that you're going to find so many videos we actually have a whole playlist of videos to help you with your fluency and talking about different parts of it and all of that to help you with your fluency it would be working on all the different language skills like reading listening uh speaking all of it goes into improving your fluency so let me actually here it is all right so let me give that link to you I'll throw that in the chat right now this is our fluency playlist you guys can check that out so there's seven videos in there um that you guys can find so uh MD what does beat the socks mean okay that is a uh that is a baseball reference all right they're talking about uh the Boston Red Sox so if somebody says beat the socks the Boston Red Sox have a very good baseball team I don't think they're doing very well this year so somebody's talking about beat the socks I believe they're talking about beat the Boston Red Sox beat the baseball team um what do you say tamisa calm down or slow down both have the same meaning I think it's to ask somebody to slow down is more polite um I know I just said calm down I think when if somebody's speaking way too fast I think it's better to say slow down um especially if they're moving too quick for you just say hey could you please slow down calm down would mean like somebody's just like so hyped up and full of energy which if somebody's speaking too fast for me then that means they probably they are just so full of energy that it's like whoa whoa whoa whoa okay um maybe maybe they had too much coffee I don't know but if you're talking just a general conversation and you want somebody to repeat themselves you could ask them to repeat or just ask them politely you know oh could you please slow down a little um what is the difference Daniel ask what's the difference between figure out and find you I'm not really sure what find you but to figure something out is just to solve something so you can figure out the problem and you can solve the problem so in that context you just want to solve it um let's see uh who do we have as well as two as well and two have the same meaning no it depends like again if you're using as an adverb like something is you know I think of two to oo mostly be talking about to a degree of something it's too hot it's too difficult if I'm talking about as well as I'm thinking as well um kind of as I don't know if you said as well as I kind of I lost it in the chat there like kind of a conjunction you know something as well as this thing um what about uh hello Lea hello how are you good to see you um so idiom and slang this is something um I think it's useful to learn idioms and slang especially when it comes to listening I don't think like when when I've been teaching students I know we've done some slang lessons and they've been they've been overwhelmingly popular and people love those and I don't necessarily put those up we don't we don't put those up necessarily for you to go out and try to use them because that's when I think it's easy to make simple mistakes because a lot of it really depends on the context but I think it can be very useful in listening because you hear idioms and you even hear slang when you're listening to music or if you're watching a TV show or you're watching a movie so that way you can follow along and it just really helps with your listening comprehension uh especially if you're listening to more informal English which would be like TV shows and movies so when we teach it I don't necessarily say I think it's always good to try to use these things but again keep in mind who your audience is if you're talking to somebody who also uses those same slang words um typically younger people tend to use more slang uh let's see what else do we have um again uh wow it just keeps going sorry again if I can't uh see you some of you guys um what is the second international language to learn is it French um I again I don't know that would be up to I think what where what where you guys are and where you're at wherever you live what language might be most important to you I feel like in the United States for people there um obviously uh the the native language English I think most people want to learn Spanish probably Spanish and French and even Mandarin I think are becoming more popular uh nowadays those are the big languages at least in the United States I think it probably differs from country to country

let's see um hi hi Salma how are you let's see what else do you guys have um rayan asked what's the difference between overwhelm and overcome so I think overwhelmed is that it's just too much going on and again that case you would use it as an adjective overwhelming something is overwhelming or as an ed adjective you feel overwhelmed so it's more of something that there's too much in life going on overcome would be something like takes over and it's usually followed by the preposition by you are overcome you could idy it with by or with so for example you are overcome with joy all right um You are overcome with sadness it kind of takes over uh for temporarily and it takes over your temporarily feeling but overwhelmed is just yeah too much too much to too much going on uh let's see I like how you guys answering some of each other's questions that's always good what's the meaning of keep in touch um if somebody says keep in touch it means like let's stay in contact let's not lose contact so you can keep in touch with somebody by sending them a text message by sending them an email by writing them a letter letter by making a phone call you say you know let's let's keep in touch let's stay in contact uh do you speak other languages yes uh I speak Spanish um my Spanish proficiency has taken a hit all right and if something takes a hit that is another expression means it's probably been reduced so I've spent about three about three years in Spanish-speaking countries all right so I was basically just saying my I I've I haven't spoken in a long time so I've forgotten a lot of words and my vocabulary I think is greatly diminished I have also uh I lived in Korea for three years so um my Korean it used to be better it's a bit more basic now um for anybody Korean out there [Music] um so I was saying in Korean I was saying that I think Korean I said my name and then Korean it is a very difficult language to learn especially I think for um again I can only speak for I think native English speakers I think the grammar is very different the grammar structure so Korean is a very challenging language to learn it's not one that you can pick up quickly like uh I think many of the romance languages are a bit faster so um Mr Sam hello say hello hi to you wna I actually I will say h hello to her thank you thank you for asking um Shashi are you British or American do you know can you tell based on my accent am I British or American I think most people probably can just say like at least uh some people tell me they're like oh you just look American everybody knows you're American you just look like an American so uh yes I am American cats out of the bag all right and cats out of the bag that's another idiom that means the secret is revealed yes so uh what I guess is the hand clapping maybe for thank you for my language abilities I hope so so again right now uh I am like you guys I'm I'm trying to learn other languages too you Wana um she is American Romanian she has family in Romania so we go there from time to time I'm trying to learn Romanian right now and I'm just again try to do the same thing that I tell you guys try to practice a little bit each day try to learn you know one or two new words each day try to get different exposure whether it's listening reading and and you try to do all that and again I know that it's difficult because I'm going through it right now it's difficult to to set time aside and say yes I am going to do this each day it's easier said than done but it's great to have you know hopefully that I can be a motivator it's great to have people telling you like yes this is what you need to do keep at it you're doing the right thing this is the way that you improve your language skills so I hope that you guys keep at it and and keep a keep working at it um so uh your accent tells you're

American yes um Alex Russian is difficult langu I don't know don't know any Russian but I imagine yes uh bran I'm struggling with Portuguese so yeah I think again many of you are trying to improve your English skills but I also understand there are probably other languages that you guys are trying to learn right now as well and I think that's great because I I think the more languages that you learn the I I just think the better world viw that that you're going to have and and more that you're going to understand about people and cultures and I I think it really opens up a lot of a lot of doors for different people so keep at it I I keep learning those languages I think that's wonderful uh let's see let's see have some other ones um tell us popular discourse markers wow um that's one right there um um um that's a popular one I think it depends again on the person and where they're from I used to teach a student years years ago that would say um you know right on right on you know for everything and know yeah yeah right on like oh you're going out to this restaurant right on yeah and I I was I was teaching them every day and it almost I started saying it after that I was being exposed to it so much and I didn't even know that I was picking it up until people started uh telling me they're like why are you saying right on so much so Discord markers like again if you don't know what they are they're words that people put in there which is kind of unnecessary for example the word like is another common discourse marker that people use especially like younger American High School students they would use like all the time and say oh and we were like going to go to the restaurant but it was like closed so we like had to find somewhere else to go and like like like like like and they just keep saying it um can you help me with my a exam well I could give you some suggestions I can't really personally help you but again I think that's something we want to work on more and create some more courses for test prep but again I think the most important thing if you're talking about I or or TOEFL the first thing that I would tell people to do is understand what's on the test because again those tests they try to capture English fluency but they only capture parts of it and it depends on what it is because a test like the I the idea um is to make sure that that you are ready for University I think that you can go into an academic setting where English is the spoken language and that you can survive so again just make sure you know what's on the test what are they testing what's the listening section like what's the speaking section like what's the reading section like and then again just practice practice practice practice so that you are comfortable because I I've I've talked to many students in there and they say they go in to take these exams and that the environment around there just makes them feel so uncomfortable people aren't very friendly it's just not a good atmosphere and when people don't like they feel uncomfortable and they're full of anxiety that is the worst time to take an exam so the idea would be just to get so comfortable with the exam that you feel fine when you walk in there and you have a clear head and you can just take the exam that would be my quick advice for you and also I think it's okay take it more than once because I think that's the best way to get used to it I know some students would say I just want to take it one time and be done with it well I think if you want to maximize your score I think it does help take it a second a third time even though I know that that is that is how they make their money um let's see some of you guys learning easier to let's see what do you guys all right yeah Judy thank you don't forget to hit that like button if you guys enjoy this discussion if you guys enjoy these q&as where I can take your questions and talk to you guys directly please do please hit that like button uh I really appreciate it um I this is something again that I I would like to do each each month maybe do a Q&A we'll take some direct questions from our patrons and again if you guys want to check us out please go do that um and then open it up to questions uh with all of you guys and try to answer as much as I can and just again have informal conversation so even if you're watching this right now again it's a good listen exercise too because you are getting exposure you are listening to English and you're learning new things I hope about different idiom slang vocabulary words pronunciation accent this is all uh great information it is a great way to practice the other thing I wanted to tell you guys too if you guys want to connect with us via email please subscribe right here all right check that out boom there it is to throw in another boom again so check that out uh you can access the secret fluency lesson plus we'll just send you some emails time to time let you know some updates we will send you some free resources some very cool resources so Mustafa you already did it boom oh you already liked it awesome um sign up uh again connect with us via email it it's just another way for us to to to build that connection for you to kind of be more a part of the classroom to be a stronger part of the classroom so that is it for today today I am going to sign off and again that is an expression when somebody says sign off that means they are going to end they are going to end a broad so thank you guys so much uh for for joining me today uh I'm going to give some some shoutouts to thank you

Yasmin long um preo graviton uh CeCe um Mika sorry I mispronounced names Mustafa L Hamid Tamba um Pedro cookie you s Leila Alexander Camila thank you guys for for joining today's Q&A for joining today's English lesson Daniel um Milan thank you thank you thank you again I'll keep trying to give as many shoutouts as I can we'll do this another time and I will let you guys know I hope you enjoy the rest of your day and I will see you guys next time so long

MANY, MUCH, A LOT OF, & LOTS OF | Grammar Deep Dive with Common Quantifiers

many much a lot of lots of so these are very common and useful quantifiers we use them quite often in everyday conversation so in this lesson i want to talk to you about well how to use these words as well as how they're different and i think the one thing that i want you to be aware of is that they are not always interchangeable that's very important and i'll talk about that as we go through the lesson so well one thing that they have in common is that you may use these words before a noun or you could even use them without a noun and i'm going to go into a lot of detail about all of this in just a moment but if this is your first time here i want to introduce myself my name is wes the channel is interactive english it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals if that's what you would like to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that you will learn about future lessons so let's first talk about when you use these words and then follow it with a noun and i'm going to break this part into three different parts i'm going to talk about affirmative statements negative statements and then questions so let's start with affirmative statements and we'll begin with many and much so you are going to use many with plural nouns and you will use much with singular uncountable nouns so i could say well you know maybe there is much concern on your part that you're not getting enough exposure to the english language which is maybe why you're here right now and you're in luck because there are many lessons to help you improve your english skills and i i just used much with a an uncountable noun much concern and i use many with that plural noun many lessons but to be perfectly honest i would probably say great concern instead of much concern because when we're talking about affirmative statements uh you're not often going to use much before the noun it just sounds really formal but the one thing you just need to know is whether or not the noun is countable or uncountable i know that if you are in a conversation you're not going to stop and think about well wait is this a countable noun or an uncountable noun you're just going to say one of these and i think over time as you continue to get exposure you continue to read and listen you'll be able to use these naturally without even thinking about it but that being said if you want to make sure and not really worry about it using an affirmative statement well then you could use a lot of or lots of because you can use these quantifiers with either plural nouns or singular uncountable nouns so um do you know this is true that there are a lot of people who are trying to become fluent in english and i i really believe that in order to become fluent it takes a lot of effort so i just used it with the plural noun a lot of people and i also used it with that uncountable noun a lot of effort i could also say that i always try to give you lots of useful information to help you improve your skills and well because of that like in this video i really hope that there are lots of likes and comments so again i use lots of with information which is uncountable and i use lots of with likes and comments which are both plural nouns now again in my opinion i feel like when we're talking about these affirmative statements i probably use a lot of most of the time and i i will use many when talking about countable nouns i already mentioned that you're not really going to use much and just personally i just don't use lots of because uh it's it's pretty informal if you're going to say a lot of or lots of it is a little more informal but with these affirmative statements i probably use a lot of most of the time that's just me now let's talk about some negative statements and again when we're we're talking about negative statements you're going to use many with plural nouns you're going to use much with singular uncountable nouns and you can use a lot of or lots of with either one and i'm i am probably going to say this again because this is important information so plural nouns i could say that well i don't have many contacts in my phone um i also don't have a lot of photos either and i i do not have lots of apps so again i use those with the the plural nouns uh many contacts a lot of photos lots of apps and i really the thing that you're learning is that my phone is a bit uh old and boring it is an iphone 6 plus i probably need a new phone as for those uncountable nouns um i could say that i i don't have much money in my wallet i also don't have a lot of change in my pocket and i don't have lots of hope that my financial situation is going to change and well that that is a joke i i am hopeful but just to give you that example of using them with those uncountable nouns much money a lot of change and lots of hope i think the same applies for the negative statements that much and many are going to sound a bit more formal and a lot of and lots of are

that is different about this is that you cannot use a lot of or lots of instead of many and much all right so you really just need to think of those as like fixed phrases how many how much with other questions you can use them interchangeably i could say well um were there many children on the playground were there a lot of children on the playground or something like does your teacher have much patience or does your teacher have lots of patience so with other questions you can use a lot of or lots of instead of much or many but when talking about that uh that amount that quantity and you're going to use how you're just going to use that fixed phrase how many or how much there's also a difference with negative questions because with negative questions there's kind of an expectation as to what the answer might be if i were to say well was this not what happened it's almost like i i expect what the answer is so you're going to use many and much in negative questions when you're you're asking about a large quantity that you expect is probably not there and you're going to use a lot of and lots of when well maybe there should be a large quantity of something and you think well yes it might be there so if i say um are there not many coffee shops in your neighborhood it's like i'm i'm expecting that the answer is probably going to be no or if i said are there not a lot of coffee shops in your neighborhood i i'm thinking well yes probably the answer should be yes that there are a lot of coffee shops or i could say didn't you drink much water um i'm expecting that this the other person well probably didn't drink much water and that is different if i ask well didn't you drink lots of water that i'm expecting that the answer may be yes that this person did drink lots of water so so keep that in mind that is a slight difference between many and much a lot of and lots of now as i mentioned at the beginning you can use these without a noun as well and i think this often happens when you're having a conversation and the noun is obvious and both people or the group of people know what noun they're talking about so if i asked the question like oh did you catch many fish yesterday and you say yes i caught many right i don't need to say fish because we know that the noun is obvious can i borrow some money somebody might ask well how much or perhaps um were there many people that came to the party say yes there were a lot or you could ask was there food left over after dinner and somebody might just say lots all right so in this case you're not going to say lots of you would just respond with lots if we're if we're taking out that noun without the noun you just say lots there are also some other phrases with these quantifiers like well many of or much of and you follow it with that preposition you'll follow it with of if it comes before a possessive a demonstrative an article or a pronoun i always try to answer many of your comments all right before that that possessive or i i have studied spanish for much of my life all right that that is i think a phrase that you will hear from time to time much of someone's life we can also use much along with a comparative adjective and the reason for this is that it just makes the comparison it makes it much stronger i just used it right then much stronger so you could say like much faster much better and it's really just to emphasize that comparison we can also use so with many or much and this really just replaces very so many so much there are so many different flavors of ice cream or somebody could say i have so much work to do and we could even use so along with with much and that comparative adjective just to make even the emphasis even stronger so much better so much faster and we could also use two with many and much too many too much it just means that something is more than necessary there are too many people uh on this bus or something that i say from time to time ugh i i ate too much food more than necessary and then we could use well as many as or as much as and these well there are several different uses but the one i want to talk to you about is kind of just referring to a large quantity like some some kind of upper limit so i could say something like well you can write as many comments as you like or something well that a person might say it's pretty common you can have as much food as you want all right so those are some useful phrases so i hope that you learned a lot of information in this video and i just realized every time i use them like a lot of information i told you these are very useful words these quantifiers we use them all the time in everyday conversation so i really hope that you learned something new if you did please hit that like button write to me in the comments i always love hearing from you and i will see you next time so long mastering questions. So, I want you to participate in this lesson. I want you not only to answer questions in the comments, but actually speak out loud, practice saying these questions because that's going to help you improve your overall speaking fluency. And if that is one of your goals, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and we are going to cover a wide variety of questions. And the last thing I want to tell you is this. If this is your first time here, please let me know. Write your name. Tell me where you're from in the comments or in the chat because I love hearing from you. and I will send them to you. You'll have access to them if you are already a part of our email community. Check your inbox because I've already sent them to you or you will be getting them very shortly. So let's begin with some simple questions because we use questions all the time in just everyday conversation and I want this is my first question for you which if you ask these different questions say them out loud I think you'll be able to tell. So do you think the following questions have a rising or falling intonation? What do you think? Let me know. And again, you can practice saying them out loud if you think that helps you determine this because when it comes to your speaking fluency, especially when we're talking about asking questions, the way you ask them is important. And intonation is also important because that's going to provide you a little bit of extra information.

So, this I'll be honest, it's a little bit of a trick question because the answer is both, but generally speaking, yes, no questions really have a rising intonation. So, let me give you some more specifics. So, if you said rising, I think yes, that that is the correct answer because you're going to use a rising intonation when the answer is unknown. You're asking a question. You don't know what the answer is, which is why you're asking the question. So, you're going to have that rising intonation. Does that make sense? You know, you're really confused. You don't know if it makes sense to the other person. Are you hungry? Do you have a pen? So, say those questions out loud with me and really try to rise that like really that higher pitch at the end and that intonation is going to be rising. Does that make sense? You kind of have to get into character for this. You're you're generally genuinely asking someone, "Are you hungry?" And you can hear that rising intonation. Do you have a pen?

So this is important because yes no questions you have you you can hear that rising intonation. However, I told you it was a little bit of a trick question because these same questions may also have a falling intonation. But this would only be used when you you know the answer already or you think you know the answer. So, for example, maybe you're asking for confirmation. Does that make sense? So, in this case, I I use that a lot in the classroom. You you're saying, "Does that make that make kind of goes up and then it's going to fall with sense." Does that make sense? Does that make sense? Often, I will explain things like I just did and then I will ask students for confirmation.

Did you understand uh what I'm saying? Does that make sense? So, it's not necessarily that rising intonation, but I'm asking for confirmation. The same way that that next question right there, if I know that the other person is hungry, I would say, "Are you hungry?" Sometimes I I know my little girl, she's upset, it's because she hasn't eaten anything. And I'll just ask her, "Oh, are you hungry? Are you hungry?" And same with that last question. If I know that you probably have a pen, but I want to I I need one. Do you have a pen? Do you have a pen? Not often. Not as often are you you're going to ask questions like this because again, the slight nuance would be if you know the answer or you're asking for confirmation, you'll then have that falling intonation with these yes no questions. But generally speaking, you're asking the question because you don't know the answer, in which case you're going to have that rising intonation.

So the next thing I want to say about this is well, let's let's have a look at the structure very quick grammar. I know that you are familiar with this, but there's a reason why I'm presenting it to you now. So you have the verb, the subject, and other information. This is when the yes no question is the verb to be. Are you okay? If we're the main verb is any other verb, we're going to use the auxiliary verb do or does or in the past tense did. Does that make sense? Auxiliary verb followed by the subject followed by the main verb and then you have that other information. I'm going to come back to this with a question in just a little bit, but let's let's stay on yes no questions and I want to talk to you about another type of yes no question questions which are statement questions. We can use statements which are declarative sentences to ask yes no questions in in Again, if the answer is known and or or I suspect that Oh, okay. You're from Chicago. and you hear that falling intonation. You're from Chicago. So once again, the the distinction is really whether or not the the answer is unknown and you're genuinely asking this person because you want to know the answer or if you think you really know what the answer is, maybe you've seen this person, you've heard that they're from this city and I say, "Oh yeah, I know I know you. You're from Chicago."

The next thing that I want to look at, uh, let's let's well, is practicing. Let's practice these. I want you to say these with me. And this is a little bit of a listen and repeat. So, I'm going to say number one. Again, I'm telling you whether it's rising and just say it uh right after me. So, number one, she's 30 years old. She's 30 years old.

Number two, let's use that falling intonation. We know the answer, but we're still using this statement question. You went to my school. Like, yeah, I recognize you. You went to my school. Number three, that rising uh that rising intonation. That's your father. That's your father. And number four, again, you see someone, you think you know the answer. You live in my building. Yeah, I've seen you around here before. You live in my building. All right, so let's move on. So, we talked about those yes no questions. If you're participating, which is what this is all about, let me know in the chat, in the comments. you can just write one word speaking and that tells me you're actually practicing these sentences, these questions and trying to use the correct intonation because once again, if you're able to do this, it's about improving your fluency and just making it easier to communicate clearly. So, let's look at some open-ended questions. Very, very common questions. We use these questions because we want more than just a simple yes or no. So these are uh statements that require a longer response. My question for you is what are the six main question words? Uh and you'll once we once I show you this, you'll know what I'm talking about. But as far as these open-ended questions, what are the six main question words? Write those, write your answers in the chat or in the comments. That's what this is all about. It's about interactive English. It's about participating in the lesson. So these the question words that I'm referring to are the wh question words in general. However, there's one that does not begin with a wh. So, I'm talking about who, what, where, when, why, how. And you notice that how does not begin with a wh, but these are the most common question words and they're going to begin they're going we're going to put these at the beginning of our yes of our open-ended question. So, excellent Muhammad Lai. Excellent. Perfect. So the the next thing that I want to look at is well continuing to think about these question words. I told you the most common ones. Who, what, where, when, why, how. What if you are trying to ask someone and you want them to make a choice. Which question word are you going to use? Write your answer in the chat, in the comments. Participate. You're talking about uh a question in which someone needs to make a choice. Which which word would you use?

Okay, so the answer excellent is which. I was laughing because I just asked you which word would you use? Which one should I choose? Great job. Um, Estie, Lai, Angela, Nelly. Great. The next one, again, which is often used. I I would say it's not considered part of those primary six ones. Who, what, where, when, why, how. Now, what if we're talking about possession? Which there's that which making a choice. Which question word would you use? I'm not going to give you some options, but you're talking about possession, ownership, and you want to know. I I don't want to keep talking. I I feel like I'm going to accidentally say the word, but think about possession, and you want to ask a question. Which word are you going to use at the beginning of the statement?

At the beginning of the question. So the answer is who's well done SD Harry Carpenter Lai Ava S. Awesome. You guys got it. Angela, Julie, great. So we use whose when we want to know, okay, this belongs to you or him or her. Whose pen is this? And then finally, frequency. How are you going how are you going to ask about that? The one little hint that I'll give you, which I don't even really think I need to give you a hint, is that this is a phrase. There are two words that you're going to use. But if you again, you're asking about frequency, you're going to use this phrase at the beginning. And this is common. We we talk about this a lot. This is good little review, kind of testing your knowledge because we use questions all the time. And when we want to know about the frequency of something, we're going to ask how often. Well done, Katarina, Angela, Lai, Nelly, great. Ava, uh, Seda, how often do you go hiking? I'm asking you about the frequency of this activity. How often? So, there are other words out there, but again, when you're starting out, those open-ended questions, who, what, where, when, why, how, which, whose, how often, how much, how many, there are there are a lot of different ways to begin those questions. The one thing I want to point out real quickly, and again, I want you to practice practice your pronunciation. This is all about helping you speak naturally, easily. So when saying the did you, we're talking about the past in this case. Assimilation may occur in order to connect did and you because the final D sound may blend together with the beginning Y sound in you and it's going to sound a little like J. It's almost like we're taking a J and we're putting it in between those two words.

It's not something you need to force. If you just say them, it's going to naturally happen. So instead of what did you, and I'm just trying to pronounce those individual words, it's going to sound like what did you, what did you, and you can hear that J sound. Say it with me. What did you, where did you, how did you, why did you? And this is a great place to start if we're if you you're trying to speak more fluently, use connected speech and take that did you construction because we often ask other people questions in the past tense. What did you do yesterday? Where did you go last night? How did you find this? Why did you do that? And you can hear that J. But just when you think focus on that did you and instead of pronouncing the words individually you can blend that duh and y together and you get that slight j something to think about. Again I want you to hopefully I hope I trust that you are saying these out loud and practicing with me uh because that's what it's all about. So let's move on to structure. I've given you some words that make up this question right here. I want you to well just write the question. Write the question in the chat. Write the question in the comments. I don't think this is too difficult, but you'll you'll see in a moment where I'm I'm going with this, where I'm trying to take you. So, we have six words. Of course, the the first word, we're going to start with that wh question word. What? And we're going to follow it with does he eat for lunch?

What does he eat for lunch? Well done, Ava, Lai, SD, Harry. I again, I don't think this is too difficult right now, but you'll see where I'm going in just a moment. So, we have the question word followed by the auxiliary verb followed by the subject, then the main verb, and then the other information. Look at these questions down here. They follow that same structure. When did she leave? Where do you live? How often do you brush your teeth? So, if I wanted to give you, well, let's let's stay on structure. I want you to be careful. So, here is another sentence. I'll go ahead and say that this is not a question, but I want you to unscramble these words and see if you can create a sentence, not a question, and put them in order. So, remember the the the general question was, "Oh, what does he eat for lunch?" You're asking this to someone else. What does he eat for lunch? And this may be the response.

And there's a reason why I'm telling you to be careful because this is a mistake that I commonly hear in spoken English. And I know that when you're having a back and forth conversation, it's difficult to think of these small little grammar things that are going on, but it's still important and it's necessary to practice. So, the answer well done uh is right here. I don't know what he eats for lunch. Great job, Moath. Uh Manuel, see you. Excellent, Juliana. So, what I want to point out is the wh clause. So, I I've been talking to you about structure, and the main thing when it comes to these questions is really that the subject and the verb are inverted.

Typically, you think of a simple sentence in English, you have subject, verb, object. But when you're asking a question, that subject and verb are going to get switched around. But this once again is not a question. We have the subject followed by the auxiliary verb don't followed by our main verb no. We're going to follow that with a wh clause. This is really a noun clause. But when we're talking about clauses that which also have a subject and a verb, we are not going to change those around. You're going to follow the structure of a sentence. Subject, verb, object. We're going to start with our wh word, follow it with the subject, what he, followed by the main verb, eats, and then followed by that other information.

And I told you, and I I I imagine you probably think about your own conversations uh that you've had if you feel like this has ever happened to you. I I think this is something that's really common because when people are speaking and they say these wh words, their brains are so connected to those questions and you're switching the subject and the verb. I would often hear something like I don't know um what uh I don't I'm trying to even switch it back now. I don't know um what what does he eat for lunch? Because again, people would then ask it as the question. So I don't know what does he eat for lunch? And I would then try to tell somebody, look, that's a wh clause.

It's not going to follow the question structure in which you'll use that auxiliary verb. We're just going to follow the wh verb subject. I don't know what he eats for lunch. So this is something just to be careful of mostly I mean in your writing but also when you're having a conversation like I said it's a very common mistake and it's a little more complex because I know that many people's brains are wired for switching that subject and verb or they're thinking about those questions. Politeness very important especially culturally. I think you guys know this. Do you want something to drink? Can you rewrite that question? Or h how would you ask this question in a more polite manner? Because you especially you're you're traveling to another country, you meet people for the first time, there are so many instances in which you want to try and be more polite. And what I would always tell people is if you're unsure, always try to be a little more polite. And that's what you should use. Ollie, yes.

you? You can hear that slight J sound. Say the question. Say it right after me. Would you like something to drink? Okay. Hopefully I can you blending those sounds together using assimilation. That J. Would you? All right. Where is the toilet? Okay. Common question. You go you go out to a restaurant and you would ask somebody who works there, hey, where where's the toilet? But if you want to be a little more polite and not necessarily that you have to do this at a restaurant, but maybe you go over to a friend's house, somebody's home, and maybe you don't know the person really well. In that situation, I would suggest that you try to be a little more polite.

So instead of just saying, "Hey, where's the toilet?" How could you ask this question in a more polite way? So before we had uh the word want and I said use uh would it makes it a little more polite. In this case we're talking about uh you know where something is like the ability we're instead of saying like again we could say can you tell me where the toilet is instead of can I want you to use could. So once again, there's different ways to ask this. Where's the toilet? Can you tell me where the toilet is? But you want to be more polite. Could you Could you please tell me where the toilet is? Awesome. Um, great job, Avatina, Seda, Yousef. Wow, you guys are rocking it. You guys got some good typing skills as well. So, could you please tell me where the toilet is? Could you, Again, blending it together. Notice I'm trying to follow up on these. Would you? Could you? There's nothing wrong with saying could you and saying both words. That's perfectly fine. Never. You should never feel like you have to speak a certain way. But as far as, you know, using connected speech, I I it the reason people do this is because it's actually easier over time. You develop these uh this way of speaking, it's actually going to be easier. Could you please tell me where the toilet is? The other word that I want to highlight when it comes to politeness is the word please. Very important and it's a word that I think when you're starting to learn English, it's a it's a word that I think sometimes people forget depending on the country and culture that you're coming from, it it may be used in certain context or situations that it may not be applied in places like the US or the UK, but it's always good to use. The other thing that I want to point out, again, I'm trying to build on this as we go through this. Notice that second part.

Could you please tell me something, this is a wh clause? So, remember with the clause, we're going to have the subject followed by the verb. The toilet is. Could you please tell me where the toilet is? I I haven't looked. I saw a couple of answers responses in the chat where once again people would uh maintain that question structure. Could you please tell me where is the toilet? So be very careful when it comes to that. Instead of where is the toilet, this is a wh clause. So you're going to have the wh word followed by the subject followed by the verb and then any other information. Could you please tell me where the toilet is? Okay. Okay. So, again, like I'm trying to build on this and hopefully all of this makes sense, but when when it comes to politeness, basically what we're doing is we're taking a direct question, which can be less polite, like, "Hey, where's the toilet?" and turning it into an indirect question, which then allows us to make the make the question softer. It's not as demanding. It doesn't sound as aggressive. And that's really what that's really what's involved when you want to make these questions more polite. Where's the toilet? Hey, could you please tell me where the toilet is? So, essentially, that's what's going on. We're changing these direct questions to an indirect question. But when it comes to politeness, know your audience. If you're talking with a friend or a family member or you're out in public at a restaurant, again, you're at a restaurant, I think it's okay to say, "Hey, you know, where's the toilet?" But if you you want to be more more polite, you could use, "Could you?" Or if, again, you're at somebody's home and you don't really know them and you want to be more polite, uh, definitely. Yeah.

Could you please tell me where the toilet is? Then I want you to since you guys are so quick writing these responses in the comments in the chat, I want you to write a tag question. And you can write a question um with either a positive tag or a negative tag. It doesn't matter. We're going to have a look at both of them. But we're kind of moving into our next type of question and talking about tag questions. So in the chat, in the comments, write any tag question either with a positive tag or negative tag. Again, it's all just get you getting you thinking about these different types of questions. We started with the easiest, the yes, no. want to follow up on that with those statement questions because you're using that rising and falling intonation and then moving into those open-ended questions which again I don't think it it's not the most difficult or complex grammar or you know asking speaking in the world because this is just so common um but there are some slight little nuances okay so have like you like pizza don't you nice Angela she got a promotion at work didn't she? Perfect. Um, well, what a beautiful day in Madrid, isn't it? Okay. Nice. So, I you you get the I think many of you get the idea of a question tag. So, her name is Laya, isn't it? You say, "Her name is Ila, isn't it?" Okay. Are you going to be ready for the weekend? Um, uh, are you going to Are you ready for the weekend, aren't you? Um, Wes, is this American, isn't he?

And that's just the thing you got to keep in mind. But once again, I feel like a lot many of you uh have have studied this, have learned this, and you're comfortable and familiar with it. But the negative statements, she didn't see the movie, did she? The jury didn't find him guilty, did they? So, positive statement, negative tag, negative statement, positive tag. And there you have those tag questions.

Now my next uh question for you is to identify this type of question. What do you call a question that is asked in order to create a dramatic effect or to make a point rather than to get an answer. There is a name for this type of question and I think it's a pretty common type of question and it's one that you people use even in speaking and they'll use this uh you'll I'll tell you what I mean. You may hear this TV shows, movies. This is a type of question. What do you call it? You're just trying to create this dramatic effect. you're not really expecting an answer. You don't really need an answer. And that's the key part of this.

So, let me give you the answer. Um, we call a questions. And I just realized my own grammar sake. There should be a question mark at the end of that question. All right. So, I'm talking about a rhetorical question. I saw some answers in there. Uh, Ava SD, nice, Angela. So, when you're asking a rhetorical question, you're saying it to someone for effect or just trying to emphasize or point something out and you really don't expect or need the other person to respond. So, sometimes like somebody's frustrated. Hey, can't you do anything right? You're not really anticipating that a person responds to that with an answer. you're just frustrated and you say uh this rhetorical question or hey, what's not to like?

Who doesn't want to save the planet? Of course, you're you're not expecting somebody uh to answer that or again in a situation, hey, do you want to lose the match? You're maybe you're trying to motivate someone like keep going. Do you want to lose the match? So, we're talking about these rhetorical questions. And the reason why I said you may hear this is that sometimes in a movie or TV show, somebody would they would ask a rhetorical question and it becomes a little bit of a joke because the person's getting ready to answer and they say, "Hey, that's a rhetorical question." Okay, you don't need to answer. It's a rhetorical question. So, in a way, if you're in a movie or TV show is creating this situation, they may do be doing it for effect, for humor.

Somebody's asking a rhetorical question, the other person doesn't really understand that and they try to answer it and then they're told, "Hey, that's a rhetorical question. I don't want you to answer that." So, something to keep in mind, but these these are questions that are not meant to be answered and you use it for effect. Um, a lot of times it ends up people end up using it in frustration. Like I said that first example, well, can't you do anything right now? What about this type of question right here? So, we just talked about a rhetorical question. What about this type of question? I I maybe you can't see that. So, I'll tell you what it says. It's a it's a little bit of a comic strip um about Adam and Eve.

So, she says, "Be honest, Adam. Do these leaves make me look fat?" And then he says, "Just a little." So, that question that Eve is asking, be honest, Allan. Do these leaves make me look fat? What type of question would that be? How would you identify that question right there? So, it's not a uh it's not a rhetorical question. I think, you know, she's genuinely asking that question, anticipating a response, but the response can get people in trouble. That's all I'll say. So, you could say I I see a trick question. You could say it's a trick question, but there's another phrase, another term that I'm looking for instead of a trick question because sometimes trick questions will also Yeah. They get you in trouble. So, she's asking this, "Do you think these leaves make me look fat?" And it's putting him in a position to, "Well, no matter how he answers it, it's a little uncomfortable. It's a problem. It's kind of a little bit of a trap, maybe." And when you have a question like that, you could refer to it as a loaded question. And this is a question that's containing, as I me just mentioned, a hidden trap or an implication. So, let me give you an example of an implication. If somebody said, "Hey, do you still drive that ugly car?" If you answer yes or no, that's a yes no question. You're I'm implying that the car is ugly and you're admitting that the car is ugly. So, that would be a loaded question, one that you probably don't want to answer because it's like, "Hey, my car is not ugly." But if I say, "Hey, do you do you still drive that ugly car?" I'm implying that it's ugly. And no matter how you answer it, you're also then agreeing that it's ugly. So, that would be a loaded question. Or if somebody, and this is probably one that uh you know, I've I've actually gotten before, why aren't you married yet?

And it's a loaded question because the person that is asking it really is basically implying that okay, you should be married. If I'm asking you this question, hey, you you should be married and no matter what you say, it's not going to change my opinion. So even if somebody says, well, I haven't found the right person or uh you know, I've been busy or I was doing all these things over the years, it's not really going to matter. It's a trap. If somebody says, "Hey, aren't why aren't you married

then the final one, do you actually believe your own lies? Once again, no matter how you answer, you're you're admitting that you tell lies. And that's a loaded question that is basically trapping you into admitting that yes, you you tell a lot of lies. Do you do you actually believe your own lies? So once I Oh Li, actually somebody pointed out uh good question, Lai. No, that's a typo. It should say why aren't you married yet? You're that is a typo. That is my mistake. Thank you for pointing that out. I go through these I go through all these slides like multiple times, but it's one of those things that when you end up looking at your own work, it your brain just doesn't catch some of these slight little uh grammar mistakes or or uh any any kind of written mistakes. Like I said, I forgot to add a question mark uh to the other question. So hopefully that makes sense.

And some, this is another phrase you may hear when somebody asks you something and you may hear somebody respond like, "Wow, that's that's a loaded question. I don't want to answer that. It's a loaded question. It's a question that's a trap or it's basically getting trying to get you to admit something or concede something based on what they're implying." And then this uh last type of question that I want to ask you about, this is a a meme. Think about a a courtroom. You were forced to wear a leash. Right? We can say that question uh statement, that rising intonation. Uh if we don't know the answer, you were forced to wear a leash.

Or again, you could say it with that falling like we know the answer. You were forced to wear a leash. either one. Uh it's just a different way of asking that yes no question. But the lawyer who is this this dog right here says objection m the witness. What type of question is that? And again I'm trying to use these words that I think you may come across in movies, TV shows. You could even use them in conversations talking about a rhetorical question or a loaded question or even this this is probably a little more specific to a courtroom and that environment which is why I said objection m the witness.

Which word would you use to complete the sentence right there? So in this case, we're talking about leading objection, leading the witness. If you watch any type of movie or TV show that involves a courtroom and the lawyers are going back and forth, somebody's being questioned, this is uh this is a statement somebody might say, "Objection, leading the witness." And then the judge would say overruled or sustained. So listen for that next time that you may be watching any TV show or movie that is in a courtroom leading. But a leading question is basically the like the way it sounds. You're encouraging the respondent to answer in a certain way.

And these are common questions when you're you're seeking agreement and you ask questions that are leading. So I mentioned times that you would hear this would be in a courtroom. other times which are a little more subtle. If you watch the news, CNN, Fox News, it doesn't matter, and they're that maybe let's say the the host or whoever the host is is interviewing someone that they agree with or someone that supports their point of view. They end up asking these leading questions because they know that this person supports their opinion on you could talk about a range of topics, climate change, abortion, um, whatever. But if you have an interviewer and they're interviewing someone who kind of necessarily agrees with the what they're trying to say, the interviewer may ask these leading questions mostly because they just they just want to agree with each other. So they lead the person into responding uh a certain way or just into agreeing with them. These are leading questions. So if you're watching any news interview, like I said, CNN, Fox News, MSNBC, um BBC, doesn't matter. And somebody's interviewing someone, try to identify some of those questions. It depends on who's being interviewed, but they will ask leading questions definitely. And you de you will certainly hear that in a courtroom leading the witness. So these are the different question types that we went through today. Started out with uh the most common ones, those yes no questions, those statement questions as well as those open-ended questions. We talked about changing questions, making them more polite, very important, very useful tag questions, and then some of those other different questions types that you may actually come across in conversation.

somebody a rhetorical question and if they start to answer, tell them, "Hey, that was a rhetorical question. I don't want you to answer. It was a rhetorical question." Or somebody asks you something and you don't want to answer. It's a trap to say, well, that's a loaded question. I'm not going to answer that. or even again you're you're I don't know if you work in as a lawyer or you're in a courtroom or you're watching something you will hear that word leading leading uh people are sometimes lawyers will ask people leading questions and they shouldn't be doing that so I hope that you with all these lessons I just hope that you learned something new and I'm going to keep putting these lessons together this one had a little bit of everything as far as grammar pronunciation talking about assimilation, practicing your intonation, um as well as a little bit of vocabulary because if you are not familiar with the these words like rhetorical or loaded or leading, then these are uh good words to try to put in

MASTER the American Accent with 9 Simple Words

let's talk about some words to help you master the American accent now as someone who is learning English as a second language you should never feel like you need to speak with any particular accent the most important thing is that we understand each other however I know that this topic interests many people we all have different speaking goals and if one of your goals is to try to emulate the American accent and learn more about it then I think this lesson will really help so in general I'm going to talk about the pronunciation of certain words which falls under the umbrella of the American accent and pronunciation and accent they're not necessarily the same they're not always interchangeable pronunciation is how words are pronounced you're just making those sounds whereas accent is the way in which someone pronounces words and it's influenced by the country or area they come from to give you an example of what I'm talking about let's look at our first word two this is a very common and useful word and the word two actually has two different pronunciations a strong form and a weak form the strong form two sounds just like the number two the weak form is when the word is unstressed it's going to get reduced and the vowel sounds going to change and it's going to sound more like it has a wah sound T it's much softer and this is what I'm talking about when changing to T is more about accent reduction because two is really a function word these are words that are not really emphasized because function words are words that have a grammatical purpose and Americans often reduce function words in everyday speech in other words they often say function words more quietly and quickly and that is why two may often get reduced and sound like T let's look at the following in practice I'm going to the mall can you hear that weak form I'll say it slowly I'm going to the mall I'm going to the mall later no I want you to practice practice say it with me I'm going to the mall I'm going to the mall here's another one I'd like to take advantage of the situation I'd like to take advantage of the situation I'd like to take advantage of the situation now let's say it together I'd like to take advantage of the situation I'd like to take advantage of the situation so hopefully it was easy for you to identify and hear that weaker unstressed not only when I was saying it but when listening to those videos as well so I I just want you to be mindful and understand that this occurs it's not something that you have to start using you could practice this if you want to and I think shadowing is a great way to do that and trying to say something in the exact same way because this is not really something that you'll just be able to turn on and off it may take a little bit of time if you would like to reduce your accent and start using using some of these weaker unstressed words and sounds now if you would like to improve your English skills build your vocabulary improve your speaking fluency please subscribe to the channel turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals let's continue with another very common word that I'm sure you use quite often and that is four except I'm not really going to pronounce it four again when it's unstressed the word's going to get reduced that vowel sounds going to change from for to fur so for that or it's a low back vowel you can really feel it coming from the back of your mouth for to a fur it's much softer it is going to sound more like a front vowel and very similar to fur except in that case The Vow sound's going to be a little longer but let's uh practice with this question right here what are you going to do for dinner can you hear that softer sound and it does get reduced what are you going to do for dinner so uh what are you guys doing for dinner tonight so what do you think we should do for dinner this pronunciation is easy for me I hope it's easy for you again listen to how the word is unstressed easy for you easy for am not for me when you make it easy for me I'll make it easy for you and we can practice with some tricky sentences so repeat after me I have four brushes for my four cats because they have a lot of fur let's say that one more time I have four brushes for my four cats because they have a lot of fur and now give this next one a try we waited for the bus for 4 hours once again we waited for the bus for 4 hours and and yeah that that can be a little tricky especially with that for 4 hours for 4 hours but this is something you will definitely hear in spoken English and people are going to reduce for to fur the next word is one that I really enjoy water okay so there are two things that I want to focus on the flap T and the final R so the flap T is a really distinct part of the American accent this is when the t is going to sound like a soft D and it often occurs when the glottal te or or glottal stop so what is that this is when you stop the flow of air through the glottis in your throat so the sound is coming from down here and you can practice a glottal stop with uh-oh uh oh the glottal stop is coming after uh and before o you can really feel the tightness in your throat when you say uhoh uhoh now with the American accent when the t is followed by an n Sound it may get pronounced as a glal t like in the word Mountain so see if you can hear the difference when I say the word with a true te and a glottal te mountain mountain versus mountain mountain one thing that I want to point out is that this is not a fixed rule that any T that's followed by an n Sound is going to be pronounced as a glal te if you are living in the US or you visit the US you may hear both so here are some examples of the word Mountain I'm going to keep pronouncing it with a glal t but here are some examples of it being pronounced with more of a TR te yeah and the mountains they're not like mountains on Earth and now I want you to listen for that glottal stop oh that sounds fun I'm mountain biking on Sunday and uh Montage Mountain but because we're talking about the American accent I I want to practice with some words and I I want you to try to use a glottal T because I I think a lot of people do this I I actually do it all the time so I'm going to do this to get you thinking about that tightness in your throat but let's say these words repeat after me Mountain kitten written gotten bitten those last three were actually the the past part participle of those verbs and whenever you know you say the past participle of well quite a few different verbs you may use a glal t so let's practice with this sentence and there of course there are many glal stops when saying this I have written a story about a kitten that walked up a mountain and was bitten by a spider so I want you to repeat after me and and we're going to say the sentence in chunks I have written a story about a kitten that walked up a mountain and was bitten by a spider so when saying that sentence with many of those words you should feel that tightness in your throat with those glal stops Mountain the next word Center easy enough to pronounce but I would like to point out that when the T follows an n Sound it may a lied alision is when sounds or syllables get removed you don't really hear that t when I say Center wanted interview 20 entertain in each of those words you don't hear that t because it allies once again this is not an established rule I I'm just trying to share with you how I think most people will say this word Center you may hear somebody say it with the T Center either one just listen but we all know you put your biggest talent front and center oh I'll be there front and center I would like to point out that when the T follows an n Sound but it comes at the beginning of a stress syllable then you will pronounce it as more of a true T in words like internship or anticipate or intensive if you would like to practice then start with the words that I have already showed you and again they're pretty common and we can do so with this sentence I was watching an entertaining interview with 20 people who all wanted to be the center of attention say it with me I was watching an entertaining interview with 20 people who all wanted to be the center of attention excellent let's practice this word right here can't and I want to start with a vow sound because this is also a difference between British and American English because you're going to pronounce the vowel sound differently and I will make some comparisons between those two English varieties because I think when people are learning the language these are the two varieties that most people reference so in the US can't and in the UK can't can't we can't do that you can't do this I can't just do that we can't do that now so many people tell me they struggle with this word not only when listening and trying to identify the word but also when speaking and trying to say it and I think probably one of the more challenging things about this word is the NT that consonant cluster at the end the final NT consonant cluster your tongue is actually going to be curled down and the tip is going to be behind your bottom front teeth can't and we're really going to end with a glottal stop and we can practice this with the word ant which is really the last three letters in the word K so who the hell are you I'm Ant-Man Ant-Man what you haven't heard of me can't can't it's an incredibly common word and it can be a little tricky which is why I thought it deserved a little attention but let's practice and we can even review some of the other things we've talked about with this short sentence right here just repeat after me I can't find any water in town so I have to go to the mountain good job now I want to practice this word schedule I have already told you that we're going to practice some of the differences between American English and British English we did that with the previous word that vowel sound is different when pronouncing K versus K and there are many other words that are pronounced differently When comparing American English versus British English and it's important to know some of these words especially if you are trying to emulate the American accent so let's uh play a little game I'm going to give you a word I'm going to say both pronunciations and then I just want you to think about well which one is the American pronunciation so here's your first one I think you know it because I've already said the word you have schedule versus schedule and in the US people are going to say schedule here's the next one advertisement advertisement in the United States people are going to say advertisement here's another one zebra zebra I am going to say zebra how about this word dynasty Dynasty I hope that you chose Dynasty as the US pronunciation because that is correct now you get the idea there are many words that are pronounced differently between American and British English I I just want to get you thinking about some of these pronunciation differences so if this is something you want to practice just be aware of this the words that we just looked at as well as these words right here I'll give you a moment to look at them but we need to move on so let's move on to our next word entrepreneur this is one of many words that have been borrowed from French and the pronunciation is the sameish but not really the pronunciation is really an Americanized version of this French word I'll let you listen to the difference entrepreneur entrepreneur they're kind of close but if you are a French speaker then you need to be careful and understand that these words have been Americanized here are some other words that have been borrowed from French and I want you to think about what they have in common fiancé conasur Café sorb just listening to me say those words perhaps you notice that the stress syllable is at the end and in English this is something that is not very common and perhaps even a little bit of a hint that the word has been borrowed from French but I often hear second language speakers make a slight pronunciation mistake with some of these words that have been borrowed because they end up stressing the wrong syllable instead of that final syllable something to keep in mind whenever words are borrowed from other languages they may sound similar but not always the same just food for thought and then we have a fun and very long word which is supercalifragilistic xaladocious and it's silly but the reason I chose this is to get you thinking about Rhythm and flow and trying to develop that Rhythm and flow because English is a stress time language it's a language where the stress syllables are said at a proximately regular intervals and the unstress words or syllables are shortened in order to fit that Rhythm so here is a very short and simple sentence three different intervals and then as I add to the sentence those intervals are going to stay the same cats chase mice the cats chase mice the cats chase the mice the cats will chase the mice and as I'm saying this you can hear those stressed words and syllables and it does sound a little Musical and again it's really a good example of English as a stress time language now let's go back to our ridiculously long word and we can say this word keeping in mind those stressed intervals supercalifragilistic xous super fragilis in total the word has 14 syllables and I'll say it again and I want you to think about that stress super cala fragile xad does I could even clap and say it again and every time I Clap That is a stress sound super cala fragile xes so let's let's break it apart into those different intervals you can see the stress and now I want you to practice this word with me ready super cala fragilistic expad docious let's try it one more time again we're developing that Rhythm and flow it's going to sound a little bit like a song supercalifragilistic xad docious excellent this is something that you can practice because when it comes to speaking with an American accent well Rhythm and flow are a part of that and I think it's useful to practice and develop your speaking skills and you could really do this with any sentence like the very first one that we practice ice with I'm going to the mall later I'm going to the mall later and you can really hear that Rhythm and flow if I want to emphasize it just like this okay of course people aren't going to speak that way but it does help you hear that Melody and that Rhythm and flow so that's all I have for you in this lesson you can practice on your own with these different words if you enjoyed the lesson and learn something new you can let me know by hitting that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

MINIMAL PAIRS | Helpful Pronunciation Practice to Improve Your Fluency

What's up everyone? I hope you're doing well. My name is Wes and if you haven't been here before, this is Interactive English, which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills. So, see some people are here with me already today. If you are, say hello in the chat. I'd love to hear your name. And if even if you're watching this later, just write me a comment. Tell me your name. Say hi. Just love hearing from you. So, who do we have with us? Lai, King Roku, Rosalinda, um, Noricadre, Arti, Lai, uh, Satish, Jacel, uh, Seiya, Sharada, um, Shrea, excellent. All right, so Olivia Draco, hi. The list goes on and on. I will try and give everybody a shout out that I can because I do have some questions that I'm going to ask you today. So again, this is going to be a very interactive lesson which is all about minimal pairs. So you can look at those words that we're going to be talk looking at today. So you know that this is a pronunciation lesson. We are going to be talking about minimal pairs and we're also going to be practicing them as well and doing several activities along the way. So I think it's only appropriate to begin with a very very simple question and that is what are minimal pairs? So if you don't know what minimal pairs are, they are two words. It's a pair of words that have one different sound. The the words sound very very similar except for this one sound. And those are two examples right there. Desk dis. You notice that that vowel sound is the one different sound.

And the reason why it's good to practice minimal pairs is because this can often cause confusion. If people if if we don't pronounce these sounds clearly, then people might misunderstand whatever it is that we're trying to say or if we're not able to identify these sounds, then we may not understand other people. So, it's very important to practice these minimal pairs because often times there are different sounds in English that are very similar and they're very easy to confuse such as this. So, desk and disc. And I tried to make that that's a floppy disc over there. By the way, some of you you might depending on how old you are, you might not be very familiar with those. There it's from a long time ago. Floppy disc. So, again, let's let's look at how do they help us. This is going to help you really fine-tune your pronunciation so that you can speak clearly and that you can speak effectively. And it's going to help you understand the difference between sounds. Because again, if you're able to speak these sounds clearly and you know the difference between them, then you're going to be able to communicate exactly what you want to say and it's going to help your listening skills because you're going to understand exactly what the other person is saying as well. So, it's very useful to practice these minimal pairs, which is what we are going to do today. And today's lesson, just to give you a bit of an overview, I have chosen three different sets of minimal pairs. The short E and the short I.

And I tried to give you a little example right there where they're climbing up to perfect pronunciation, and the guy says, "Thank you." All right, this can cause a little bit of confusion, but again, if you already if you think you might be familiar with these sounds, then that's great. It's always good to practice. It's always good to review. Or maybe you are a learner out there and you're thinking, "Wow, this is something that I feel like I need to work on." Again, there are all sorts of different minimal pairs out there and and it's always good to practice and refresh, even if it's something that you think you already know. So these are the sounds that we are going to practice today. And let's just start out.

What I'm going to do is I'm going to tell you how quick give you quick overview as to how you can make each of these sounds. I will tell you a set of minimal pairs which we will practice saying together. Then we'll talk about some sentences and I'll go over some sentences with you and then an activity. Okay? So we got a lot to cover. Are you guys ready? Are you ready? Let's just get into it. So the short e versus the short i sound. All right. sound. Your lips are going to be relaxed and the tongue is in the central area of your mouth. So fell. All right. E. That is very different from the i sound. All right. The lips are also relaxed, but your mouth is a little bit wider. All right. So if you look look at me when I say these the tongue is still in the central part when they say e and I e i.

You notice that my mouth is just becoming slightly wider. E I So we have fell fill. And again it'll help make this an interactive activity. If you are at home wherever you are just repeat after me say these words with me. Fell. Phil. Let's look at the next one. The ones in orange. Ready? Set. Sit. And then let's say that last one, the purple one. Bless. Bliss. So the top ones, that blue, orange, and purple, those are all the short e. Fell, set, bless. And the bottom ones, that short i. Phil, sit, bliss. All right. So, let's say them one more time. Let's say them together. Fell. fill set sit bless bliss. Okay. So, now that we have these these minimal pairs, let's let's put them into practice. Let's let's step it up a little bit and put them into some sentences right now. Now, there's two ways that you can do this. I will say the sentence and then you can repeat after me. I'll give you a little time to do that. Or you can just do it as a shadowing activity. And that's another great way to practice your pronunciation because when you're shadowing somebody, you are just trying to say it exactly as they say it and and you say it along with them so that you're it it just like you're repeating it at the same time. You are shadowing that person. So you can repeat after me or you can say it with me as I read these sentences and shadow me. So let's start. Here is the first one and I'll I'll read them I'll I'll read them a little slowly to begin with. The first one ready. I went to fill the cup, but it fell on the floor. All right, I'll say it again. I'll say it a little bit quicker. Ready? I went to fill the cup, but it fell on the floor.

All right, and the next sentence, the one in orange. Let's say this together. Please set your bags down and come sit over here. One more time, a little faster. Please set your bags down and come sit over here. All right. So, I'm trying to give you both one one slowly so you can hear that pronunciation and then one with that more natural conversation flow. And that last sentence right down there, the purple one. Ready? We're blessed with so much bliss.

Let's say that one again. Are you ready? We're blessed with so much bliss. Okay. So, it's good to practice these sounds and pra and saying sentences. It's a good way not only to practice your pronunciation but to practice your speaking skills as well because if you are saying these these sentences out loud then you are practicing your speaking which is what many of you want to do out there and if you did if you are actually saying these sentences with me let me know write that in the chat and just say speaking so I know I know who is out there and they are actually practicing their English and making this an active speaking exercise. So write that in the chat. If you guys are speaking, just say speaking so I know that you are doing this. Now let's look at a practice. We're going to practice these right now. And what I've done, the way that we're going to do this is I I have a sentence. Okay, let's go after M. Now I have another minimal pair here. All right, the first one is a word that these are word these are common words. sex with the short e sound. Sex and six with the short i sound. These are two common words that you might hear just in everyday life. And they are also words that you don't want to confuse. You won't you don't want to confuse these words when you're speaking and you don't want to confuse them when you're listening either. So we're going to practice these. But first, let me let me give a quick shout out to some people here. Excellent to hear that you are actually speaking. Um Bashari, excellent. Thank you. Sorry if I mispronounced names. Lima, Arti, Anna, be happy. Uh, excellent. Somebody has other name. I can't really read. Uh, I guess maybe from China. Uh, Jacqueline.

Excellent. Um, Johannes, who do we have? Rams, Andre, Joe, Rosalinda. Perfect. Excellent. Thank you guys for practicing and saying these sentences. So, back to the activity. I'm going to say this statement. Let's go after M. And you are either going you're going either going to hear number one sex or number two six. All I want you to do. All right? You don't have to say it with me. If you hear the short e sex, you're going to hold up number one. That is number one. One is sex. If you hear me say the short i sound, six, I want you to hold up two. So in this case, it's more of an identifying. You're trying to identify the minimal pair that you hear. sex or six. So, if you hear sex, the short e, hold up uh wh here, one. If you hear six, the short i, hold up two fingers.

All right? And I trust you. I trust you that you guys are going to do this activity. All right? Are you ready? Okay. So, I'm just going to say five. You don't. And and just hold up the number of fingers. All right? And then I will show you I will put my finger up here and show you which one. The first one is um let's go after six. Wh that was two. Okay. The next one is let's go after six. Two. All right. I'll try to hold these up in the screen. Then we have uh Okay. Uh let's go after six. One. Let's go after six. That was two. Let's go after six. That was also two. Tried to fool you with the intonation. Um, you know, how how about uh how about we go go after sex? That was one. All right. Um, and one more. Let's just do um ah let's go after sex. All right. Hopefully you held up one finger. All right. So, that is just a quick exercise of trying to identify all those. If you got those right, if you could understand and identify those minimal pairs, then I will give you a digital virtual high five right there.

And if you got them correct, just write that in the chat. Write high five like you're giving me a high five right back. Okay. So again, this is a great practice, a great way to uh practice minimal pairs. Many of you out there are teachers and I would encourage you, you can use these same exercises in the classroom. This is the exact kind of stuff that I would do in the classroom and have people identify these sounds and see if they can identify the sounds. So, also want to give you a quick little heads up. If you guys if you like what we do here at Interactive English and would like to support us putting out these interactive lessons, check us out on Patreon.

interested in checking out our Patreon page, the link will be right down there. So again, let me give some shout outs to those of you who are with me um and actually practicing. Yes, Olivia Batul, excellent job. Dian, uh Jacqueline, Johannes, high five. Uh Braareshi, high five. Suli, high five. Perfect. Excellent. All right, Lima, high five. Excellent. So again, let's look at the next set. And again we're going to I'm going to show you the minimal pair. We will do some sentences and then I have an activity so that we can practice these practice these minimal pairs. So the next set that we are going to look at is this one right here. All right. We are going to do the the S versus the sh. All right. So again, to make the S sound, it's like the the front tongue is close to the teeth ridge. All right? It's not going to touch. Think of it like this. If this is the mouth, it's like a snake. All right? They make that S sound. It's like you're kind of striking the front part of the teeth ridge. You're not touching it. But when you kind of strike it and leave it there, it's going to restrict the airflow. So it has that s and you could probably if you really thinking about this the way the air is flowing through your mouth you should be able to notice that yeah the tongue is kind of blocking the air when it's trying to go through s. So we have words like sock. All right or the the orange one sign and the purple said. Now when we're doing the sh again these are these can be common. These are confusing. They can be very confusing. And I have a fun little tongue twister for you coming up. And you when you do the sh your mouth is a little more rounded. Okay? Your mouth is more rounded and it the tongue is almost uh it's a little more arched and the air is going to flow right over the middle. All right? It's going to flow over the middle. Sh. Again, this is very common. You hear people make this sound all the time.

When you want somebody to be quiet, you just say shock. All right, let's look at the orange one. Shine. Shed. Okay, so now let's say the blue ones, those minimal pairs, and see if we can say them. So you they're they're different. These are different words. The first ones, the blue ones, sock, shock. the orange sign shine and the purple said shed. Okay, you're saying those words. Let's look at the sentences. Let's practice some sentences. Are you ready? So again, uh what I would recommend you can repeat these after me or you can just say them with me. I will say the sentence twice. I will say it once very a little slower and then the next time a little more natural, quicker uh as a native English speaker would say these. So the first one, let's say this one together. I got a shock when I touched the sock.

All right, let's say it one more time a little quicker this time. I got a shock when I touched the sock. All right, shock sock. The next sentence right here, the the next sentence right here, the orange one. Uh, slowly. The sign shined in the light. Say it again a little quicker. The sign shined in the light. Sign shine. And this last sentence, the purple. Let's say this one. Go to the shed, he said.

Now say that a little quicker. Go to the shed, he said. So again, these are some common minimal pairs with that sh versus s sound. All right, so I hope you guys are practicing at home. Again, keep keep practicing. Practice makes perfect. So let's practice. Here's a fun practice right now. This is a tongue twister, an S and tongue twister, which I I think it's a very common tongue twister. You may have heard of this before. You may have practiced it before, but if you haven't, we are going to practice it right now. So, the way that I would say that we can do this, let's just read it together.

And what I would encourage you to do, try to shadow me this time and let's just read it together. Okay? And the first time we do it, we're going to read it slowly. So, let me kind of start out so I can set the pace and then just say it with me and we'll read it right through. All right? Ready? Let's begin right up top and begin now. She sells seashells by the seashore. The shells she sells are surely seashells. I'm having trouble. So if she sell So if she sells shells on the seashore, I'm sure she sells seashore shells. All right. It's a tongue twister because it's difficult to say. I was just having trouble saying it right now, speaking slowly. Okay, so let's let's do shadowing one more time. This time I will try to say it a little quicker and I will try to say it straight through without making mistakes, but maybe I will make mistakes. It's only natural.

Are you ready? Let's let's do it together. All right, here we go from the top. All right. She sells seashells by the seashore. The shells she sells are surely seashells. So, if she sells shells on the seashore, I'm sure she sells seashore shells. Okay. All right. Are you guys are you saying these with me? I hope I'm the only one right now who just doesn't feel like a fool uh by saying this uh by having trouble saying this. Okay, let's say it one more time. Again, the the the challenge with tongue twisters, and I would recommend you can go back and do this on your own, and you can find different tongue twisters in English, is to try to say them quickly. And by trying to say them quickly, again, you're you're practicing the position of your mouth. because

I told you how to make those two sounds and you're seeing how quickly that you can change positions in your mouth a and and say them so that it's understandable so that you can hear like okay yes I am saying this correctly or am I just mixing up a bunch of sounds. So let's practice. I'm going to say this quickly and you can you can try it with me. All right I'm going to try and read this uh a little quicker. Ready? All right let's from the top. All right. She sells seashells by the seashore. The shells she sells are surely sea shells. So if she sells shells on the seashore, I'm sure the shells she sells just Okay. All right. I'm gonna try that. I'm going to try that one more time. All right. pronunciation practice. It's different for everyone, but again, it's it's practicing trying to the the positioning of these sounds, okay? Okay. And this is a minimal pair that that's good practice for that s and that sh sounds because you're just mixing this sh sounds. Ready? One more time. Uh, one more time.

I'll make a fool of myself again. Ready? From the top fast as you can. Ready? She sells seashells by the seashore. The shells she sells are surely seashells. So if she sells shells on the seashore, I'm sure the cells she sells are seashore shells. Okay, that's a that's still pretty bad. I like your laughing emojis. All right. Yes. So again, there we we have another tongue twister um we have another tongue twister video lesson in which we go through different tongue twisters. If you haven't seen it, I will link it up above here so you guys can check that out. It's a good lesson. Uh let's look at the next one. is the s and the th. So again, we're talking about the s sound and we're this time we're talking about the th sound. the F and this is the voiceless th because there are different th sounds but again I I will get to that in just a second. So again the s you're it's like that that strike. All right, think of it like a snake s front uh the front tongue is close to that teeth ridge but it's not actually striking it and you're restricting that air flow. Let's say those words together starting with the blue sink some symbol. All right. Sink some symbol and the th sound. The tongue is is between your teeth. Okay. When you're using that th sound. And again, this is the voiceless sound. There is no vibration when you're saying these words. All right? Then there's a way that you can check this. If you put your finger vertically between there and you say it, you should feel the hot air, but you should also feel like a little bit of spit. It should feel like your your finger is becoming a little wet uh when when you put your finger there and just say that th sound think. All right, let's say the thumb thimble. All right, I'm really emphasizing the th sound, so it's not really that that's not exactly how it's going to sound. But if we say it to again together, these th1s, think, thumb, thimble. Now, let's say the minimal pairs. Let's say these together. Let's start with the blue minimal pairs and with the sink, think. All right, the orange. Some thumb and the purple ones symbol. Thimble. Okay, the next progression would be sentences. Let's say some sentences together and I want you to repeat after me or shadow and say these along with me. Ready? The first one, I'll say them twice. I think we're going to sink.

All right. And if I want to say it a little quicker, I think we're going to sink. I also reduce going to into gonna. I think we're going to sink. All right. The orange ones. Ready? There's some gum on my thumb, which makes it some thumb. All right, tried to put this in there. These are sentences again. They're a little crazy, but I'm just trying to use these minimal pairs.

Let's say it again. This time a little quicker. There's some gum on my thumb, which makes it some thumb. And this last one. And again, as you go through, these are like mini tongue twisters, these sentences. Our symbol is the thimble because thimbles make great symbols. We'll say that again a little quicker. Our symbol is the thimble because thimbles make great symbols. All right, this is all about that that th and that s sound. All right, so now we're going to practice. And this is another listening exercise to see if you can identify it. And again, if you practice these sentences, I want to know in the chat, just write speaking just so I know, okay, you are actually speaking English today. you are practicing your pronunciation skills and at least attempting to.

Even if I can't give you direct feedback, you are at least practicing and trying to practice these sounds because that that is the best thing. Okay? So, write that and even if you're watching this later, write that in the chat so I know or in the comments speaking so I know you are practicing your your pronunciation skills today. Let's look. Here is the activity that that we're going to do. Okay. So, let me explain this first. Okay. And before I do, again, quick shout out. Uh, Jacqueline, Arty, uh, Isatau, perfect. Olivia, great job. Jamas, Rosal, Linda, thank you. Thank you guys for actually practicing with me today. So, here is the s and the th again. I have a sentence here at the top and I am going to say a word. I am going to either say sink or no no I sorry sorry I'm either going to say sank or thank. All right. So I put that little image of a boat over there like sank. The boat sank or again somebody uh like it's kind of a praying emoji but like just saying thank you. Yes. Thank. So those are the words sank and thank. All right, I am going to say this statement three times. Notice there are three different parts. There is the red, the blue, and the green. So I'm going to say it three times the sentence. So the first time I say it, it's like the red. If I say thank you, like the s sound, then you're going to move to that s right there. If I say thank you, the th sound, then you're going to move over to the th. The next time I say it, it's the blue. So, I'll say the sentence again. If I say the s, thank you. Move to the s. If I say the th, thank you. Move to the th. And then finally, I'll say it the third time right here. And again, if I say the s, move there. If I say the th move there. And you end up in a city. And that's what I want to practice. So, I will say it three times. One, two, three. And that final time, you will end up in a city down here. And I want you to write in the chat, where did you end up? Because the goal would be that I say these and that you guys can clearly identify the minimal pair and we all end up in the same city. Okay? All right. So, let's let's say this. Uh I'll start slowly and then I'll get quicker.

We'll do this a few times. And again, this is another great activity that I love to do in the classroom. Um, which is uh perfect for minimal pairs. And then you could have students get up and they can practice their pronunciation. It's wonderful. So, the first one, I'm going to say it three times. Here's the first one. This is the red. All right. Um, so let me give you an example. Here's an example. Okay. If I say uh three times, this is just an example. Did he just say thank you? All right.

The next one. Did he just say thank you? And then the next one, did he just say thank you? All right, so in that example, you should end up in London because I said, did he just say thank you? The th. All right, then I said, did he just say thank you the s? And then again, did he just say thank you the s? And you should have ended up in London right there. Okay, that was your example. Now, here, let's let's do it for real and then I'll ask you guys three times. Ready? So, I'd say uh did he just say thank you? All right, that's the next one. And the second one, did he just say thank you?

Then the third time, did he just say thank you? Okay. All right. Where did you end up? All right. Which city did you end up in just now? Write that in the chat. Uh or you can also write it in the comments and really make it an interactive activity. So I'll say that one more time. The three times. All right, ready? Uh did he just say thank you? Did he just say thank you? Did he just say thank you? All right, those were the three times. So where did you guys end up? Write that in the chat. Yes. Excellent. Uh it's like okay. Yes, Rosalinda. Uh Arty. Uh, Andre, you should have ended up in London again. I was going for London. I was going to try and trick you because that was the example. So, yes, most of you ended up in London. Perfect. All right, that's where I wanted you. Let's Let's do it again. All right. If you didn't get to London, that's okay. It's all about practicing. So, okay, I'm saying here's the first one. All right. Did he just say thank you?

Okay, the next one. Did he just say thank you? And the final one. Did he just say thank you? Where did you guys end up? Which city are you in right now? I just said it three times and I will say it again. All right. Ready? So I'll say it three times again. Did he just say thank you? Did he just say thank you? Did he just say thank you? All right. Which city did you guys end up just then? All right. Write that in the chat. Let me know where you ended up. Excellent. I'm seeing some great answers. Yes. Um Rams, Lai, Arty, Alexander, um Sarvara, Jacqueline, Andre, Saba, an Anis, uh Isto. Sorry, Tina. So many excellent. Perfect. You guys are Paris. Yes, Paris is where we wanted to end up. Uh that is it. I just said SSS. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. Okay, let's do it again. All right, are you guys ready? You guys are You guys are rocking this. All right, write your answer in the chat. Um, three times. The first one, um, did he just say thank you? Next one. Did he just say thank you? And then did he just say thank you? Okay, those are three ones. Which city did you guys end up in? Write it in the chat. I'll say it again. Okay. Uh, the first one. Ready? Did he just say thank you? The next one. Did he just say thank you? And then the third one. Did he just say thank you? Which city did you end up? Notice I'm trying to say these a little quicker. I'm trying to say these a little quicker to see if you can identify them. And and that's the challenge with minimal pairs. The faster you say it, the more difficult it is to identify the difference in these sounds. So, excellent. Yes. Alexander, Arty, uh, Jacqueline, Lima, um, Sarvada, Brian, Kyleson. Yes, Bangkok. That's where we where most of you ended up. You should have ended up in Bangkok. That's what we were looking for. Okay. Um, let's let's just do one more. Okay. This is fun. One more. Uh, all right. Here we go. Um, okay. Did he just say thank you? Did he just say thank you? And did he just say thank you? Those three. All right. Which which city did you just end up in? I'll say that one more time. Ready? Did he just say thank you? Did he just say thank you? Did he just say thank you? Okay. Where did you guys end up this time? Write that in the chat. Okay. What do you guys think? All right. I said it. I was trying to say it a little quicker. Maybe it's a little more challenging.

Um, all right. See, maybe some different Well, no, you guys, you guys got it. Excellent. Li. Um, Alexandra, Sarat, Arty, Sava, uh, Anis, Jacqueline. Gosh, so many people. I can't I can't even keep up. Camila, perfect. Ashraf, Anna, Vegas. Yes, Viva Las Vegas. That is what we were going for. Uh, I was going for Vegas. So again, this is just all about practicing minimal pairs. This is a great way to practice your pronunciation. We will do more activities like this in the future because again, I I want to do stuff that we're not just learning new information about English, uh about pronunciation, but that we can actually practice this and you can speak and say these sentences and practice these minimal pairs with me and you can also practice identifying them with your listening because that is also very very very important. So, thank you guys so much for joining me today.

If you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button that I know like, okay, you guys like the pronunciation lessons. We should do more practice with minimal pairs because I told you there are many, many, many different minimal pairs out there and we will continue practicing. If you have questions, write to us in the comments because we just love hearing from you guys. And you can check us out social media. We are active on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, and YouTube. And you can also check out our Patreon page if you guys are interested in that. Here is a link. I'll throw this down here. what? Why is this not working? Boom. All right. Thank you guys for joining me.

Thank you, Tina, uh Yasmin, Isatal, Olivia, Lai, um Walter, Arti. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. Um, we have such an amazing community of learners here and you guys really just don't know how much this means. Uh, we we Yana and I just love putting these lessons together and and being able to connect with people from all over the world. Camila, um, Lin Mila, uh, Olivia Abdullahid, um, Omar, Tommy, thank you. Sorry again if I mispronounced names, but if I missed you and didn't and didn't give you a shout out. I try to get through as many names as possible, but we will be back again next week with another live lesson, and I hope you can join us then.

Thank you guys so much for watching, and I will see you next time.

LESSON 442 OF 749

Make Sure You Learn These Useful Clothing Phrasal Verbs

today I am gonna talk to you about something that is very useful it can be very challenging but it's stuff that we should know and that is phrasal verbs that's coming up so today's lesson I want to focus on phrasal verbs and as I said this is something that's very important because we use phrasal verbs all the time it can be very useful to use these when you're having a conversation or even writing a message to your friend but they can be very challenging as well because we have that verb as well as that preposition at the end which can really really confuse some people so I'm not gonna just throw out some random phrasal verbs and go over those with you I want to try and make it a little easier and discuss phrasal verbs by category I think that way if you can relate these phrasal verbs to a specific category it'll make it a little easier to understand and as well as remember so today we are going to talk about this useful clothing phrasal verbs and phrasal verbs that that you can use that the relate to clothing and getting ready and this is going to help you because we we use clothes all the time and it's it's important to know how to use these in the context of of you know whether we're wearing clothes and and how we're using clothes so it can be very very useful now before we begin I want to you know just say what's up in the chat let me know your name where you're from I love hearing from you guys and even if you are watching this much much much later I want to hear from you write your name tell me where you're from in the comments we just want to hear from you guys so what's up Chris Kristiana you see a Betsey junior Alex kid of Assam Mohammed welcome thank you guys for joining me today sorry if I missed some names I will try to acknowledge as many people as I can so what we're gonna do today we're gonna talk about some useful clothing phrasal verbs and then at the end we are going to practice and using these phrasal verbs and I have some questions for you so before we jump into the actual phrasal verbs one thing that I think many of you have asked when it comes to phrasal verbs is sometimes phrasal verbs they may you we can separate them and sometimes we can't separate them they may be separable or non separable so I want to take a moment and talk about when we can separate phrasal verbs and when we can't now the one thing we really need to know is whether the verb is transitive or intransitive now you may be asking Wes what the heck is that what is transitive and intransitive verb well basically it really depends on whether the sentence has a direct object or there is no direct object so you can't think of like well one verb it's always transitive or it's always intransitive don't don't think about that way because some verbs depending on the sentence

they may be transitive and they have an object or they may be intransitive and they don't so let's quickly look at this and when we're talking about transitive raised over transitive a phrasal verbs means that there is a direct object we can separate which means that we may be able to separate them this is not always the case but when there is one or more objects we may be able to separate them check out this example right here please take out the trash please take out the trash the trash is our object we can put that in between the verb and the preposition please take the trash out same meaning both are correct now this one right here if we're talking about to get on something like transportation we cannot it's a it's a transitive verb there is an object but we can't separate this one we got on the plane we cannot say we got the plane on no no no no no okay so this one right here it is inseparable we cannot separate the verb in the preposition a little later on I'm gonna give you a useful tip about how you can remember these because so that the next time you're having a conversation you're just going to be able to use it correctly whether or not you are separating the verb in the preposition or whether you're not so for transitive verbs they may be separable for intransitive verbs there is no object there is no direct object that's what makes it intransitive and when there is no direct objects they are inseparable okay so for example Wes wakes up at 9:00 a.m. at 9:00 a.m. that is a prepositional phrase that means that wakes up we cannot separate it Wes wakes at 9:00 a.m. up no no no no okay so remember if it's intransitive there is no object so we cannot put anything between the verb and the preposition so that is a little little tip for you guys when it comes to learning and understanding these phrasal verbs because I know it can be difficult I know it can be very challenging so let's talk a little bit about our phrasal verbs for today all right so the first phrasal verb that I have for you is this one right here have on when we're talking about clothes we can be taught we're talking about things that we have on you can have something on it is separable because we have that object it means to wear an item of clothes the clothing on one person you're wearing something okay for example she has on a blue and gold dress she has on a blue and gold trust that image that illustration right there it can be separable and we can take that object and put it between the verb and the preposition if we want she has a blue and gold dress on all right I have a shirt on we can separate it but when we're saying have on we're talking about just just something that we're wearing all right so in the chat you can tell it what would if I asked you you know what what do you have on right now what what do you have on what clothes do you have on I imagine most of you should be wearing clothes right no but I know who knows all right so the next phrasal verb I have is this one take in take something in again it is we can we can separate it alright it's a transitive verb so we it is separable and that just means to make clothes narrower all right we're going to make them smaller we're going to make them narrower and when you talk about taking something in I want to give you the context because often you're talking about four four men maybe a suit or some kind of formal coat and for women it might be a dress and you you don't want to go out and buy another one because it's very expensive so you might take it to a seamstress you might take it to a tailor and just have them take it in a little so that it fits better so for example we have our sentence there the dress is a little too big I'll have the seamstress take it in all right they're gonna make it smaller so to take something in is to make it smaller you might be wondering well what if we're going to try to make something bigger and in that case we are going to let something out again it is separable you can let something out and this just means to make the clothing wider or larger again we use it in that same context you're often talking about formal clothes because they're more expensive and you're not going to buy just a new suit or maybe a new dress that's very expensive so you might have them let it out to make it a little larger so that it fits better and we can use it in this example sentence by saying the dress is a little too small I'll have the seamstress let it out so if the dress is too big they can take it in if it's too small then you can let it out so the next phrasal verbs the next set of phrasal verbs I have for you is boom to slip on you can slip something on it is separable a lot of these are separable so this is good so you know that you can put the object in between the verb and the preposition and I think many of them they're separable because again we're talking about clothes so often that that clothing that is our object right there so when we slip something on we're talking about the ability to take on or off quickly we're taking something on we're - were you know you you actually it should be put you're putting something on or you're taking it off quickly so for example I could say just just slip your shoes on and head out the door just slip them on and go so you're slipping something on a lot of times when you're talking about this you you're it's it's talking about shoes you're referencing your shoes you know slip your shoes on head out the door or I'm just gonna slip my shoes on and you know walk out and get the mail you're putting it something on quickly oftentimes we're talking about shoes now slip on is to put on quickly we can also slip something off it's separable and that just means to remove an article of clothing easily and and delicately but mostly to do it easily you slip something off again it's common to talk about like your shoes or clothing if you want to get more relaxed so I think when you're talking about you know you're gonna slip something on or slip something off one context it's used in is to you're doing this to be more relaxed so for example you could slip on your pajamas you get more comfortable or you want to slip off your shoes because when you take your shoes off you're at home you're more comfortable so that is one context in which we use slip on slip off and our example sentence she slipped off her robe and jumped into the pool you know you can slip it off you can remove the article of clothing so let's take a little intermission and I want to give you a tip and talk to you about one way in which you can how to learn and use these phrasal verbs correctly and this is a challenge because so many learners ask us about you know how do we learn phrasal verbs what is the best way to do it and unfortunately when it comes to phrasal verbs there there are no real set rules like oh you you need to do this or this is the rule to follow a lot of it comes down to memorization a lot of it comes down to exposure and practice and I think one of the best ways to practice is to read and see how these phrasal verbs are used in context the other best way to do it is to do what you are doing right now you are watching a lesson about phrasal verbs and even if you know some of these phrasal verbs it's always good to review and see how it's used because then you'll understand well maybe I can separate this phrasal verb maybe I can't because then the next time you're having a conversation you're not gonna stop and think about the grammar and be like oh is there an object can I separate it can I not you just want to be able to say it naturally you want to be able to say it quickly and in order to do that it's always good to practice to read to expose yourself to the language and that is the best way that that it'll just start to start to click and you'll start using these phrasal verbs correctly and naturally so the best thing to do again reading is a great way the other thing to do is to do what you're doing now then and watch lessons watch different lessons on phrasal verbs that is only going to help you so let's continue with our phrasal verb list ready the next phrasal verb I have for you is this one come off it is not separable you cannot put an object between the verb and the preposition and when you're talking about come off it's basically the ability to detach or remove so for example the ring wouldn't come off if I have my ring and I'm saying okay the ring it wouldn't come off often you would hear it in something is happening maybe you're watching TV and somebody says you know oh it won't come off it won't come off and you can see this by the context of what's happening what it is maybe they're talking about shoes or something but if somebody says you know it won't come off there they don't have the ability to remove this thing so to come off to have something come off or you can't remove it you can't take it off so a lot of times it's also used with rings - if you're talking about uh-oh the ring won't come off or it's difficult it's very difficult so that is come off the next phrasal verb zip-up again this is separable and we're talking about to fasten an article of clothing that is using a zipper and when you think of a zipper I think most of the time we all think of jackets okay a jacket you zip up a jacket it's cold out so I need to zip up my jacket it's separable so you can say you know hey zip your jacket up or if you cold zip up your jacket zip your jacket up either one both mean the same but to zip something up next is with also another one using up hang-up it is separable I think many of you probably may be familiar this one because we can take clothes we hang clothes up we put something on a hook or a hanger we put it in our closet and we hang it up in the past tense we could say she hung up her clothes as soon as she arrived at the hotel you hang something up or in the past maybe you hung something up next we have this one to kick off and again if we're talking about kick off its we're talking about shoes because you are removing shoes quickly and a lot of times again I think you're you're kicking off your shoes because you want to get comfortable because you want to relax so you could say after the party she kicked off her heels and gave a sigh of relief it was a relief to take them off she kicked him off because she wanted to be more comfortable she wanted to relax so if you're talking about you know to kick off we're talking about shoes and you want to relax many times I might say if you're out and you're like gosh I just want to get home I want to kick off my shoes and and just relax and and take it easy and you want to kick off your shoes so those are nine useful phrasal verbs but we are not done yet because I want to practice using some of these phrasal verbs and test your knowledge and again this is this is the best way to learn is to actually practice and see if you can identify the verbs if you can identify the preposition and and practice using these phrasal verbs so that the next time you're having a conversation it comes to you naturally it comes to you quickly and especially if you're talking about clothing you'll really be able to do it and understand this because you have watched this lesson now we are going to do a practice right now and I have some questions for you but it's not just these phrasal verbs I am going to test your knowledge on all of the clothing phrasal verbs we have done and you may be wondering wait what what are you talking about because before we did a clothing phrasal verbs lesson with eight other clothing phrasal verbs and I will link that lesson in the description so if you have not seen that lesson I highly recommend you go check it out because that is a lot of different phrasal verbs that you between this lesson and last lesson the those are a lot of clothing phrasal verbs that you can practice and use and it is very very very useful so I have some questions for you guys and if you are in the chat I want you to write your answers in the chat if you are watching this later on I still interact with the lesson write your answers in the comment as in the comments as we're going through these so that way I know that you participated in the lesson that is the best way to practice so for the first two questions all I want you to do is complete the sentence with the correct preposition I'm not gonna give you the list of prepositions you just have to choose which one do you think would best complete the sentence are you ready so your first question is this one right here all right this is from this is a phrasal verb from the other lesson so this is a formal event so you really need to dress mmm for the occasion this is a formal event so you really need to dress mmm for the occasion what preposition are we going to use to complete that sentence write it in the chat and if you're watching this later write it in the comments participate in the lesson this is after all it is Interactive English so again the key word there is formal that that's the key word because if you're talking about a formal event we would dress up for a formal event to dress up is to put on formal clothing this is a formal event so you really need to dress up for the occasion the next question I have is this one you wanna likes to slip her pajamas as soon as she gets home and that little illustration it kind of looks a little like a little like you wanna you wanna likes to slip her pajamas as soon as she gets home what do you guys think what preposition are you gonna use to correctly complete that sentence all right you wanna likes to slip em em her pajamas as soon as she gets home all right so the phrasal verbs that we talked about in this lesson remember we talked about slip-on and we talked about slip off so when when you get home you first one I love that image right there when you go shopping you should always on new clothes before buying them what verb are we going to use to complete that sentence when you go shopping you should always on new clothes before buying them all right there there are some keys to that key words to that right there which we'll talk about so excellent I see a lot of great answers right now in the chat so we're talking about shopping that's the key word shopping so because when you go shopping you should always on new clothes before buying them you want to try something on you do this when you're shopping to see if it fits to see if it's comfortable and then you would buy it I know maybe you could say put on it just it would be it'd be correct and people would understand it it just wouldn't be the correct context because when you're talking about shopping it's better to use Try on to test it out to see if those clothes fit all right the next question right here last year the dress was tight so I had someone mmm it out now now that now that I lost some weight I need them to mmm it in which verb are we going to use to complete these sentences last year the dress was tight so I had someone mmm it out now that I lost some weight I need them to mmm it in what do you guys think you guys are rocking this write your answers in the chat or again if you're watching the later write it in the comments don't be shy we want to hear from all of you guys alright so what do you guys think which verbs which verbs are we going to use to complete these sentences last year the dress was tight remember that's the key word tight so I had someone mmm it out now that I lost some weight maybe it's a little loose I need them to mmm it in all right so the verbs that we were looking for I see some good answers all right last year the dress was tight so I had someone let it out so if some clothes are tight you want them to be wider and larger you would let them out now that I lost some weight and the clothes are too big I need them to take it in you need to make the clothes narrower and take it in and again we're often talking about formal clothing either for men usually a suit for women a dress you take clothes in or you let them out and make them larger alright so you guys you guys rocked that practice you did excellent a great job so again this is very useful when when talking about clothing you should know these phrasal verbs if you haven't checked out the other clothing phrasal verb lessons I highly recommend you do so and if you guys enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button and always we appreciate it if you would share this lesson with other friends family members anybody that you guys know who wants to practice and improve their English skills and help us spread the word and as always in the comments write to us in the comments we love hearing from you guys tell us a some a category of phrasal verbs maybe that you want to learn what what phrasal verbs would you like to practice and learn about because when we're talking about anything you know we use specific phrasal verbs with that topic with that category so this is all about clothing I hope you guys found this lesson useful and can go on to use these phrasal verbs the next time that you are talking about clothing so thank you guys so much for watching and I will see you next time

Make Your English More Impressive with These 12+ Letter Words

sound impressive and I impressive just like the uh northern lights that you see there. Now the the reason why I say to sound impressive is is really for two reasons. The first is these are words that are a bit more advanced and I think some many of them you might be familiar with especially if you feel like you're more of a proficient speaker and that's good because I tried to choose words that you will actually come across if you're listening to a podcast or reading the news. going to start with words that are 12 letters or more and then we're going to work our way up. So that's why I say I'm going to teach you the meaning, talk about how it's used in context as well as the pronunciation because sometimes with these longer words, they they can be a little intimidating. And I think this is when people may sometimes make a slight speaking mistake and they may stress the wrong syllable. So we're going to talk about those two things.

If you would like to get the lesson notes, check out the link down in the description. Join my email community. If you're already a part of it, then check your inbox. I have sent them to you already. So, if you are someone who likes building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. As many of you know, see a lot of familiar faces uh in the chat, which is great. So, let's start with some 12letter words. told you already, we're going to then work our way up and we're going to get uh longer. We're going to look at some longer words as we go through this. So, this is a quiz lesson. Of course, I want you to participate and write your answers in the chat or even in the comments if you're watching this later because yes, this is interactive English. It's all about participating and actively well, not only that, actively participating in the lesson. So to start out I'm giving you a sentence and the the word that is missing I'm giving you the first letter of the word. So some people are proposing a m approach to healthcare. I'm also giving you the meaning down here. So the meaning of this word is having many aspects sides or parts. This one I actually think is possibly a bit challenging. I don't know. We'll see. I feel like when I always say that, everybody seems to know the word that I'm talking about. So, write your answers in the chat. Let me know what you think. For for all of these, I I would say there is one word in particular that I want to teach you. Uh again, there sometimes you may could put in another word, but we're specifically talking about these longer words. So, this is a word that has 12 letters. All right. What do you think? Some people are proposing a approach to health care. So if we're talking about things that have many aspects, many sides, many parts, then in this case, the word that I'm looking for, well done uh uh dawit tal multiaceted. So some people are proposing a multiaceted approach to health care. And if something is multiaceted that's this is what it means having many aspect sides or parts. I'm giving you the phonetic spelling because sometimes you know people may not be familiar with the IPA. So this way you can actually see the pronunciation and the stress syllable is that third syllable. Multifaceted. Multifaceted. I think even as I say it you can hear that stress. If you want to practice your pronunciation say the word with me right now. multifaceted a multiaceted approach and I really want to highlight those two words a multifaceted approach because that is a common collocation with this word you might talk about uh you know trying to have a multifaceted approach or talk about a multifaceted issue or a multifaceted career or a multifaceted person man personality those are other words that you could use with multifaceted and I feel like I'm saying multifaceted it quite a lot. So, let's just move on to the next one. This is a word that I think you even if you don't know the answer or get the answer, I I think you know the word. They suffered m pain after the accident. So, this is really a word that's going to add emphasis and describe the really the amount of pain. So, we're referring to something that is well impossible or very difficult to imagine, believe or conceive because it is so extraordinary or unusual. And you can actually use this adjective to describe many nouns other than pain. But in general, just saying something is very difficult to believe, imagine or conceive. Now if you look in the meaning of this word there is a hint there. So of course if if you wanted to in this context unbearable pain yes that works but that is not the word that we're looking for because it doesn't have 12 letters. So remember we're talking about a word that has 12 letters. Unbearable works. it would fit in this context, but that's not the word that uh this meaning is referring to. So I said to you know keep in mind the I said there's a hint in there. So it's difficult to imagine that is the the hint because the word that we're talking about the adjective is unimaginable and you you might hear it used with unimaginable pain or in another negative connotation unimaginable suffering. uh or just some situation like the result, the outcome was unimaginable. We were not expecting it. And whenever you use this word, you are really adding emphasis. So again, I imagine now that I told you the word, I feel like you've heard this, you may even use it already.

So in this sentence, they suffered unimaginable pain after the accident. To go back what many of you were saying, if you said unbearable, that does that does fit within the sentence. But unimaginable has 12 letters. At least I hope it does. Maybe I miscounted some of these. And if I do, I apologize. Just keep in mind the stress is again on that third syllable. Unimaginable. And you really do hear that stress syllable. Unimaginable. Unimaginable. Just say it with me. Unimaginable. All right. Good. Because like I said, this is when you know small speaking mistakes are made. I feel like the longer the word, the more likely somebody will just make a slight mistake. People may still make mistakes with shorter words. That does happen.

But in general, when you have these really long words in any language, I think a person may be more likely to mispronounce the word. So, one thing I wanted to say about this, if you're describing intense suffering, that example sentence, other situations in which you may come across this word or use it when talking about the scale or magnitude, the level of devastation after the earthquake was unimaginable. There's our word. Or to describe something advanced, this technology would have been unimaginable five years ago. So the just to give you a little more context with this word, how about this one? Maybe I was going to say, well, I I can I think many of these words you're familiar with. I don't know if you'll be able to get the answer just based on the limited information I'm giving you, but we'll see. The museum's new exhibit provides an first letter begins with I journey through the history of ancient civilizations. The museum's new exhibit provides an journey through the history of ancient civilizations. So the meaning of this word is providing insight, clarity or understanding. Uh I well I don't want to I was about to say something. I stopped myself because it because it's incorrect. I'll I'll tell you what I'm talking about in just a moment as to well yes why uh I was uh incorrect. So what word is 12 letters begins with the letter I and means providing insight, clarity or understanding. And I I think it works well in this sentence as far as learning something and in well even at a museum and you're talking about this journey and we're going to be descriptive when describing it. It makes it sound uh more appealing. I feel like this is a sentence that the maybe a museum would come up with in order to promote their new exhibit. And you might say it is excellent, an illuminating journey. So if something is illuminating, it's providing insight, clarity, or understanding. The museum's new exhibit provides an illuminating journey through the history of ancient civilizations. Stress is on that second syllable. Illuminating. Illuminating. Now, one thing I will point out, even though um when they give you the phonetic spelling, overwhelmingly that T at the end, you're going to see that T. However, you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T with the American accent because it comes between two vowel sounds. Illuminating. And you're going to hear that soft D, illuminating something. This illuminating journey. I hope that this is an illuminating journey through in in discovering new English vocabulary and learning more words so that you can be more precise and descriptive when you're having a conversation. Now, when going back to how I was wrong, because one thing I want to point out is this is a resource that I I share with students from time to time and I think it can be very useful if you ever have some some words or phrases and you want to know, okay, which one is more commonly used? Which what word would better fit this context or which one uh would most native speakers use in this situation? A great resource is using engram viewer and you can just put in the words and it gives you a graph and put compares them and you can see which one is more commonly used. Now I will say this is taken from written English and of course spoken English is a little bit different but still I think this does give you a good reference as to which word or phrase may be more commonly used. So, I put these words in here and what I was going to say is it I if I had to guess before I would have thought that I I would not have guessed that illuminating was, you know, is the most commonly used word, but it is more often you're going to come across it more often than multifaceted or unimaginable. I I think I would have assumed unimaginable. I don't know why, but uh in this case, that's why I said I I was wrong because I was gonna I was about to say I don't feel it's as commonly used, but then I knew that well, of course, that was incorrect. So, let's um let's look at some longer words, some 13letter words.

Let's continue with the quiz. Once again, I'm going to give you the first letter of the word. And there are, this is a, you know, a political example. There are some other political examples coming up. I think it's uh well, you'll see where I'm going with this. Politicians are often m and will do whatever it takes to get ahead. And the meaning of this word exploiting immediate opportunities, especially regardless of planning or principle. So somebody who, you know, just doesn't care. I do feel like this word has a bit of a negative connotation if you're describing someone who is trying to well like it says exploit opportunities or take advantage of an opportunity even if it may be harmful to someone else which is why I said politicians I feel like they are often what and they will do whatever it takes to get ahead even if it hurts maybe their constituents I don't really like politicians I'll just go I'll put that out there. I'm not I'm not a big fan. Uh there's this it's a very frustrating uh yeah, I think many of you probably uh agree with me. So the word that I'm talking about or that we're looking for that is 13 letters is one that I feel like uh is an adjective that's very useful. I think it's part of the same word family as opportunity, but we're changing it to an adjective to describe a person as opportunistic. So, if you say that someone is opportunistic, then they're basically taking advantage of a situation or something that's available to them even if it's uh you know, not not good or detrimental for someone else. So, not always, but I do feel like this word more often than not, it has a little bit of a negative connotation if you're describing your colleague as well.

They're very opport opportunistic and they're going to try to get this promotion even if they're going to maybe say bad things about me or other colleagues in order to so that they get ahead and somebody is opportunistic. So the stress is on that second to last syllable. Uh one rule when it comes to some of these longer words because that tic is a common ending and when a word ends in that the stress is generally on that second to last syllable. It's on the syllable before it. Opportunistic. Opportunistic. Just say it with me. Opportunistic. All right. So, just keep in mind does have a little bit more of a negative connotation, but I feel like this is a word. This is an adjective that I think is easy for you to remember because I'm sure that you're familiar with the word opportunity and then this is part of the same word family more or less.

Some common collocations with this word because I don't think I mentioned already collocations are words that are frequently used together. This is a great way to build your vocabulary. You might talk about a an opportunistic politician or an opportunistic investment, an opportunistic deal. Uh if we're talking more about uh disease or medicine, an opportunistic pathogen. And then just to throw in an adverb because everybody loves a good adverb if you want to describe someone as highly opportunistic. And then we're adding a bit of emphasis. Highly opportunistic. So, let's continue with some more uh 13letter words. And this is kind of a this is going to be a little bit of a well, I have quite a few words to share with you. It is m to me that anyone would knowingly take such a risk. So the meaning of this word impossible to imagine believe often referring to something so extreme or unlikely that it defies understanding. What word completes this sentence? So we've already talked about the word unimaginable. Of course you know it's not uh in this case unimaginable. That's 12 letters. And the first letter of this word begins with the letter I. This is another word that uh I'm sure you know. I'm going to go ahead and say that I'm confident that you have come across this word and it is one that maybe you've you use from time to time. It is still I still would say it's more advanced, but it's descriptive. If you want to capture this sentiment and you're like, "Wow, I'm just trying to, you know, believe or understand this because it just doesn't make sense.

Defies understanding." It is to me that anyone would knowingly take such a risk. Sometimes people will use this word and then they follow it to me. that not that's not always the case, but that is a time when you may end up using it or come across it when trying to say that something is just so extreme, defies understanding. And you could say that it is inconceivable. It is inconceivable to me that anyone would take such a risk. Well done, Julia Lai. Perfect. So this means again it's impossible to imagine or believe and you could say that something is inconceivable.

Now the stress is on that third syllable. Inconceivable. Once again I'm I'm saying it slowly and emphasizing it a little bit so that it's easy to hear and and if I say it even faster something is inconceivable. It's inconceivable to me that you may be watching this and not participating in the lesson and writing your answers in the chat. That is inconceivable. So, let's continue. There are many more opportunities to try to write your answers down and and try to come up with the right word. Even if you don't, you know, even if you don't think you have the right answer, just take a guess. You know, nobody's nobody's keeping track of any of this. To understand the data properly, we need to m the results in relation to previous studies. This is a word that I I think may be a little more challenging and the meaning is, you know, pretty extensive to provide the relevant background information and circumstances surrounding it to make it easier to interpret and understand. So we need to do what? It begins with the letter C. This is a longer word. I in in my view it's uh not as often used as inconceivable. I still have to go back and and check engram viewer. Hopefully I'm I'm not wrong. We'll find out in just a moment. But this word is another good one. It's a good one to be able to use from time to time. it is more advanced but you're talking about trying to understand the data properly. So we need to the results in relation to previous studies and in that case again we need to look at the relevant background information the circumstances and that's going to help us more easily understand what it is that we're looking at and what's going on. I do not see the correct answer in there. So I'm just going to go ahead and tell you contextualize.

So if you're say if you say like well we need to contextualize the results you're basically saying that we need to understand basically things at like a deeper level and that's why it says like the background information the circumstances and really know everything uh and you want to contextualize the the results. What do you think? Uh, I told you I'm going to, you know, come back to engram viewer with these next three words if we put them in there. A um Oh, no. Wait a second. Did I Uh-oh. This is the one from before. My apologies. I'm going to have to go back and take a look at this. So, uh, we can just move on. But I'll I'll just go ahead and give you my opinion when talking about contextualize, inconceivable, and opportunistic. My own personal ranking would be you're going to probably use and come across inconceivable more often and describing something that is impossible to imagine. And then describing a person is opportunistic. And then finally, contextualize. Of course, I may be wrong. I was wrong about illuminating. Uh but we can we can take a look at that a bit later. Let's continue with some even longer words.

We're going to just get these words are just going to get bigger and bigger and bigger. These words have 14 letters. Transparency and are key to a functioning democratic government. I told you that I had some uh political examples not like overtly um political but more just general. And what this refers to because I'm still giving you the first letter A. Transparency and what that begins with the letter A and has the meaning the acceptance of responsibility for one's actions, decisions, and their consequences. I think this is a word that I know I've said this a lot. I think this is a word that you know because you your English is excellent and I am confident that even if you don't use this word actively I I imagine that you've heard it because I do think it is commonly used transparency are key to a functioning democratic government. A lot some of these words there are other words in the word family that you are probably not as advanced and you use but in this case excellent well done uh just a random person Mariana um Yasine Manuel giving out some shout outs here and there accountability accountability is the word we're looking for transparency and accountability are key to a functioning democratic government. Accountability. Well done. Uh Cindy, good to see you. So, just to quickly look at the pronunciation. Um, accountability. Accountability. This one I did come across like not all words may just have one syllable that's definitely stressed. So, I I throw in um both of them. Accountability. Accountability. You can kind of hear both of those two s syllables have a little bit more oomph than the other ones.

Accountability. So this is a great word to know and use if you want to say like a sentence, oh like you know we need accountability or somebody there should be accountability for someone's actions and you need to accept that responsibility. Great word to know and it's a long word. Here are some common uh collocations. You might hear people talk about corporate accountability, which I think is is common. Personal accountability, great phrase. Or if you want to say that there is a lack of accountability and I think this is also commonly used, that's a great collocation when saying people are not taking responsibility. Well, there's a lack of accountability. If I want to give you a couple more collocations with some verbs, you may demand accountability or even avoid accountability.

I think we can all relate to these. I'm sure at one point or another all of us may have avoided uh accountability in some way, shape or form. It does happen even to the best of us. What about this one? I agree with your concerns about the need for better environmental protection. Uh this I was about I don't want to give you too many hints. I want to actually give you a moment to see if you can think of the word. It begins with the letter W and the meaning is completely sincerely and enthusiastically with total commitment and without any reservation or doubt. It is a long definition that I found for this word there. To give you another collocation, I think you may hear people use it with agree. I agree.

And you could even use that with as to a response to someone. They say something and your response is yes, I agree. What? And you're basically adding emphasis to the fact not that you just you just agree, you completely agree. You sincerely agree, you enthusiastically uh agree or you what? All right, you got it. Cindy, Ava, uh Ibrahim wholeheartedly. wholeheartedly agree um with someone or you agree wholeheartedly. It means completely, sincerely, enthusiastically, with total commitment. It is a nice adverb. It's a good one to know. It's not one that you you're going to come across every day, of course, which is why I said some of these words are advanced, but at the same time, it's not a word that is completely obscure. So if you want to use it like I just said with, you know, talking about agreeing with someone and emphasize it, you can agree wholeheartedly. Stress is on that first syllable. Wholeheartedly. Wholeheartedly. Uh once again, you're going to hear that T. You're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T. Wholeheartedly. The next one. The book had a profound effect on his m young mind influencing his views on politics for years to come. I told you we're going to have some there's some political sentences. But this is I think a word that it definitely makes sense in this context when talking about this person's young mind. it's influenced and you could refer to this person as what when you want to say that this individual is easily influenced or impressed especially young ones who are susceptible to ideas or opinions of others. So that is a key when trying to think about the word that I'm giving you uh that second part especially young ones who are susceptible to ideas or opinions. So often you may use this to describe a younger person. Not I mean you could use it to describe a child, but I I also think it can be used when talking about a teenager or somebody who maybe a university student and they listen to basically anyone. Could be their professor or a friend or someone else. and they just start to to uh believe in what this other person says because they're impressed and they're uh you can say I'm just going to think you guys got it. Excellent. Somebody is impressionable. This is a word that I think is again commonly used, but I would still say it's a more advanced word. If you want to describe someone as impressionable, stress is on that second syllable. Four syllables total.

Impression. Impressionable. impressionable. All right, I feel like that uh there there was a missing maybe syllable in the what is it the phonetic spelling right there. I apologize for that. So again, if you want to talk about a younger person, and not always, you could say some adults are still impressionable, but generally young people who look up to someone and they're impressed by this person and what they're saying, they start to believe it, you could say that this person is impressionable. So, if I were going to look up these three words and just to show you how often uh they are used, of course, accountability, you're going to come across that word much more frequently than wholeheartedly or impressionable. So, if you're taking away anything from just looking at this graph right here, you should know the word accountability. Know how to use it.

I shared with you some of those common collocations. It's a great word to know. Let's uh let's look at some longer words. These are 15 letter words. They're not, you know, nothing too scary. And the first question, she constantly found herself in m situations at work and decided it was time to look for a less stressful job. This is a word, even though it's a longer word, I think it's commonly used. And this one, I imagine, is one that you know. and possibly use in your daily interactions when talking about a situation or another individual. The meaning is tending to deal with situations in an aggressive way. So if somebody is hostile or argumentative, you could also say that this person is what those last two words are basically they're synonyms for this word that's missing. I'm not giving you the letter this time. I'm just giving you the meaning and the sentence. And I just want you to try to put it in um into context. So, if somebody is acting in an aggressive way, you wouldn't really you wouldn't really say that overwhelming. Overwhelming is just how you feel like kind of like too much is going on. Sometimes I feel like yeah, this month I uh this month has been overwhelming for me. That is not the word that we're looking for because this specifically, remember, if something is overwhelming, you're not really referring to aggression. So, the word that we're looking for has to do with somebody being argumentative. That think about a synonym for argumentative. What could you say that someone is if this is a work situation, that's not a good situation? Because this does have a negative connotation. So, let me just go ahead and give you the answer. The word that we're looking for is confrontational.

So, confrontational. She found herself uh constantly in confrontational situations at work, not a good situation, and decided it was time to look for a less stressful job. So, confrontational, it has 15 words. Some of some of the words that you guys putting in, I mean, they may work in the sentence, but just to to keep in mind that these are longer words. Uh, that's why I said I'm I'm looking for one word in particular that has 15 letters. The stress is on that third syllable. Confrontational. Confrontational. So again, you can say it with me. This is a useful word to be able to use and describe someone as confrontational. Or you could talk about a situation that is confrontationable.

Confrontational. So let's go. I want to go ahead and give you some more common collocations with this word. If we're talking about a confrontational approach, not a good thing, or a confrontational style, again, negative connotation, confrontational situation, not one that you want to be in. Or if you say somebody has a confrontational attitude, or even just a confrontational stance, their opinion about something. All of these phrases have more of a negative connotation. something we I don't think any of us really want to be in confrontational situations. Some people like it, I guess, but I I am not one of them. How about this? This one may be a little more difficult. There was a general feeling of among the voters who felt the election promises had been broken. Now, this is a it's a word that has 15 letters in it, but also it is a word that you may hear people use when talking about politics, when talking about voters. People are supposed to vote, but they just feel like, h, it doesn't matter. These people are lying. They're not going to do what they say, or these promises have been broken. And you feel what? There are several words in this word family. Uh this one um I don't want to again I don't want to keep uh giving it away as far as uh the word, but I told you I think this one may be a little more challenging. So the word that we're talking about that you may hear in the context of politics, the way that voters feel, uh that disappointment, that's a good guess. Uh, it's not the word that we're looking for. I don't know. I'd have to count them. I'm not sure. Maybe it does have 15 letters. But the word that I'm talking about that I think is a little more it's more advanced than disappointment because that is a common word. Disillusionment.

Disillusionment is that feeling of disappointment, you know, from the discovery that well, okay, something is just not as good um you know, as what you think it is. And there's just that feeling of disappointment. Did I uh Yeah. Okay. I was going to make sure. I thought maybe I was wondering if the the definitions matched up. So, I told you that I think you might hear people say that voters feel disillusioned. So that would be another word in the word family, but it is one if you follow politics and people are specifically talking about the voters. This is a word that you may come across. Uh in this case, we're talking about disillusionment. Stress is on that first.

I'm I'm losing can't speak my the third syllable. Disillusionment. Disillusionment. Just say it with me.

Disillusionment. All right. And I trust I trust that you are practicing your pronunciation saying these words. And this is a good way good way to practice and just repeat these words after me. As I mentioned, sometimes people you have these longer words and people may not feel as comfortable or confident saying or using them in just casual conversation. The office renovation included a m of the floor plan to create more collaborative workspaces. So the word that's missing is uh well the meaning is the process of making a new or different arrangement or pattern of a group of related things. So maybe the that's a good definition for this word. But one thing I want you to think about is if you're going to you know focus on any of these words is that arrangement. you have these related things and there's this, you know, there's going to be a a different arrangement or a new arrangement and then you could use this word that is longer.

It has 15 letters. I think that's what we're on. 15 letters and you could say that you're talking about a what? Rearrangement. That's a good guess. That's not the word that I'm looking for. This is a word that I think is a little more advanced, not as commonly used is like, oh, we're going to rearrange things. Of course, that's uh very commonly used when you're talking about let's move things around, but this is uh okay, I feel like sometimes I have to stop myself from uh from giving away more hints. So the word that we're looking for, I think a lot of you are kind of on the right track with the re that re uh prefix. The word that we're looking for is reconfiguration.

So reconfiguration refers to the process of making a new or different uh arrangement or pattern when we have a group of related things. So, if we're talking about in this context, maybe I don't know if it's the best example sentence, but this floor plan you could use reconfiguration. If you're talking about moving around furniture, um rearrange it would also fit. I saw like refurbished when talking about homes or buildings or whatever that works, but this meaning is a little different um than refurbishing it and making it look nice and new. So reconfiguration, that is the word I want you to keep in mind. Stress comes on the second to last syllable. Another quick little pronunciation hint. When a word ends in t i o n, the stress syllable is going to come on the syllable before it.

So reconfiguration. And you can kind of hear that stress. Reconfiguration. Repeat after me. Reconfiguration. Good. Good. Good. Let's look at the frequency. This was a close call. Again, this, you know, this is taken from written English, but if you're wondering, well, which of these words, reconfiguration, confrontational, disillusionment, which one is more commonly used, they're pretty much the same. I'm pretty surprised because I would have guessed if I were a betting person, which I sometimes am, I would say I I would have thought that uh confrontational would have been the most commonly used. And I would say probably in spoken English, I do think you're going to hear and use confrontational possibly more often as those other ones. But once again, this is taken from written English, which would include more academic texts, things that are more formal that may use the word like reconfiguration a bit more often instead of, you know, just talking about general daily uh conversation.

We're not done yet. All right, you're not you're not out of the woods just yet. Let's let's, you know, let's make these words even longer. Let's talk about some 16 letter words. So the first one again I'm not I'm only going to give you the meaning. I'm not giving you the letter anymore because you guys uh trying to make it a little more difficult for you. A msh share of the work was done by the new interns. I don't know if the sentence is really going to help you unravel the mystery and the word that I'm looking for. But think about the meaning too large or too small in comparison with something else.

And that is the meaning of this word. So we're talking about this work that is done by the interns and you're saying we don't know the context. It was either well too much or possibly too little uh in comparison with something else. What do you think? Any guesses? A m share of the work was done by the new interns. Sometimes I would say you you may follow this with share of something in referring to like an amount but you want to say that the amount is well you know maybe I don't want to say fair or unfair because it's not really talking about fair or unfair. It's really referring to the amount too large or too small. This is another word that I think once I show you you're going to oh yeah I know that word. Of course I use that word all the time. Maybe not, but we'll see. Disproportionate a disproportionate share of the work was done by the interns. So once again, we

we don't know necessarily whether or not the interns did, you know, too much work or too little. In this context, I would probably assume that uh they did, you know, more than they needed to, more than their fair share. And I'm using this to compare to the other workers and saying, well, a disproportionate share of work was done by the new interns and saying that they did a lot. The stress is on that third syllable. Disproportionate. Disproportionate. I'm really emphasizing that third syllable. Say it with me. Disproportionate. A disproportionate share of something. I mentioned that uh is a a good collocation, but I want to share some other ones with you as well. If we're talking about a disproportionate number or a disproportionate response, that is another phrase that you may come across. Disproportionate share. I've already mentioned it. A lot of times you're then going to follow it with of disproportionate share of something. Or if we want to look at use it with some more adverbs, like I said, everybody loves a good adverb. saying that something is grossly disproportionate or vastly disproportionate or wholly disproportionate. In general, those last three phrases are really interchangeable. If you want to use any of those adverbs and add emphasis to the fact that well the scale like too large or too small and saying it was well grossly disproportionate.

Let's continue. It was an mistake. for such a talented athlete. We're talking about uh well the meaning something that is not typical of a particular person or thing. Now there's another hint that you have in there whether you notice it or not. It was an mistake for such a talented athlete. You see the article an. So you know that the word that's missing begins with a vowel sound. I don't know if that's really going to help you uh determine the word, but we'll we'll see. This is another word that I feel like uh is very useful and one that you could use or hear. So, we're talking about something that is not typical of a particular person. This this word really, you know, that meaning accurately describes this word not typical. So, If we're referring to an athlete and saying, "Well, they're so talented like this is they do they do not make these mistakes. Uh it's it is uh it is uh unusual. That's a good guess, but again, it's not uh 16 letters. It's it has a similar meaning. In this case, you're saying, well, it's an unusual mistake or more this word is more specific though." So let me tell you the word and then you can tell me if you know the word you could yeah hit that like button do some emojis let me know that it's like oh yes I know the word I just wasn't able to think of it uncharacteristic. So if something is uncharacteristic uh then it means that well it's just not something that this person does. It's not typical or peculiar of a person or thing. So, it was an uncharacteristic mistake for such a talented athlete. So, keep in mind the stress, remember there's that tic, the stress comes on the syllable before uncharacteristic.

Uncharacteristic, an uncharacteristic mistake. And that is a collocation that you could use if you're somebody makes a mistake whether it's at work or in some other situation and you're like surprised like wow that that's an uncharacteristic mistake for that person. Sometimes you find typos or mistakes in these lessons. I I to be honest I guess I would not say it's an uncharacteristic mistake. I feel like I I these typos, they find their way in there or I already caught that one mistake when I forgot to change out the the frequency of those words. So, even though I would like to believe they're uncharacteristic, I I don't know. It happens. So, how about this one? And if you know what this is talking about, you can or who this is referring to, then you can put the name in the chat.

I'm kind of curious. This is more following American I don't want to say pop culture. It's more American politics like this you know social things that are going on. It seems that he committed suicide in his cell impossible to understand or make sense of. So, we've already talked about a word that would also fit if somebody said, "Well, it seems inconceivable that he committed suicide in his cell." That would work. That's not the word. We're looking for another word that this time is 16 uh letters long. Deep value. Yes, you got it. Uh I And then I'll tell you what this is referring to. I told you there were some political examples mostly, you know, some of these sentences. Uh, I said not overtly political, talking about disillusionment among voters or opportunistic politicians. This is something that's current that's going on. So once again, you know, unimaginable that would also fit. That's not the word that we're looking for. We talked about it already. Doesn't have 16 letters. In this case, we're talking about well done, uh, Julia.

Incomprehensible. It seems incomprehensible that he committed suicide in his cell. Impossible to understand or make sense of. You could say something is incomprehensible. As I've already mentioned, in this context, um inconceivable would work, unimaginable, that would also work. That's fine. Uh but yes uh we're this is a reference to Epstein uh Jeffrey Epstein if you're following uh not US politics or things that are going on. This is a a big topic of conversation right now. And yeah I you know I don't like to think of myself as a conspiracy theorist but yes it does it seems incomprehensible that he committed suicide in his cell. something something is uh arai in this situation.

So, we'll see. We'll see if we ever find out any more information. Quite possibly not. Um unfathomable, that's another good word that you could use. There's a lot of uh um there's a lot of words that you could definitely use in this context. So, if we're just going to compare the three that we just looked at, disproportionate, incomprehensible, uncharacteristic, uh, as you can see, disproportionate comes out on top. Uh, one that you may come across more often. Once again, I I want to give you my opinion because I always for the most part, I think about English in terms of spoken English. I had that speaking course and I I understand especially in writing you may come across disproportionate more formal academic text uh things like that. I I generally feel uh that uh you you might come across uh incomprehensible or uncharacteristic more often than is represented um in this graph. All right there just wanted to give you more information. I'm trying to contextualize the situation to say that I think in spoken English maybe it's not uh there's it's not as much of a discrepancy that the the difference in usage is not that disproportionate. Right? I'm going to keep using some of these words if I can. We're not done yet. Let's go 17 letters. 17 letter words. The counterfeit bills were virtually what from the real thing. The word means not able to be identified as different or distinct. Which word has that meaning? And this once again, even though it's a even though it's a longer word, I think that you possibly know it and use it. It's not like a a very uh obscure word.

Again, I don't think any of these are too obscure. Uh I thought I saw something in the chat. Somebody's saying, "Are these really advanced?" I would say yes. I I know some of you very proficient and you know them, and I think that's great. It's always good to get review, but I'd say for the most part, these are definitely more advanced, like C1 level and and above if you're using these and able to use them correctly in the correct context when having a conversation. So, we're talking about two things that you they you know, they look the same. You're not able to tell the difference. And I think this is a good example when talking about counterfeit bills, fake money. And we're going to say that. Yes. Excellent. Saw some great answers. Indistinguishable.

Indistinguishable. So if something is indistinguishable, you're not able to identify the difference or understand if you know things are distinct. The stress is on that third syllable. Indistinguishable. Indistinguishable. Say it with me. We'll say it slowly and then a little faster. Indistinguishable. Now, a little faster. Indistinguishable. Indistinguishable from this or that. From is a preposition that may often follow indistinguishable. Saying something is indistinguishable from something else. So, I just mentioned that common collocational uh indistinguishable from and then you're going to use either a noun or maybe a pronoun. That would also work. Uh and then uh I'm a big fan. Love adverbs today. Let's look at some adverb collocations. Love a good adverb. Saying that something is virtually indistinguishable. Again, this is a way to just add a little more flavor. I think in any context, you don't have to use the word virtually. You could just say it's indistinguishable, but this it adds a nice flavor in emphasizing it.

Well, this is virtually indistinguishable. Or you want could say something is practically indistinguishable or even almost indistinguishable. And in that case, because we're using almost, it's like maybe, oh, there is a slight difference here. I am able to see something. Um, but it's almost indistinguishable. This the statement is unclear and open to the meaning of this word. The act of understanding or explaining something incorrectly leading to a mistaken view of a message, gesture, or event. What do you think? The picture the picture doesn't really match up with the the sentence. I was just I saw something that was unclear and I thought okay let's let's let's use this that looks like uh the weather is not very uh not very clear there. So if we're talking in this case we're talking about a statement something that somebody says and you could say it's unclear and therefore it's open to what?

Now a key phrase is something is open to this. Often you might say again I don't want to give it away because saying something is open to what? That's not the word. It is similar to the word but we're going to modify it. We're going to add a prefix ahead of it. And maybe the more I talk about this possibly the more confusing it sounds. So I'll go ahead and talk about the phrase in saying something is open to interpretation. That is a common collocation. And if you say something is open to interpretation, then it means that well you you know somebody may think this or somebody may think that.

Now the the answer is not interpretation because we're talking about specifically a mistaken view that you are incorrect. Specifically saying yeah you are incorrect. And therefore we're not talking about interpretation. I wanted to talk about a misinterpretation. So generally I think more common a collocations oh it's open to interpretation. You could believe this or that. But you could also say something is open to misinterpretation, in which case somebody is based on the information they're likely to come away with uh the wrong view or wrong opinion about something either something that was said or like it says a gesture an event a message and saying something is open to misinterpretation as I said before if a word ends with that ti n the stress is going to come on the syllable before so misinterpretation misinterpret retation. It is a little bit of a mouthful if you say it. Say it with me. Misinterpretation.

Misinterpretation. Open to misinterpretation. So, just keep that in mind. Hopefully, it makes sense the difference between saying something is open to interpretation, in which case you could have different views. But if we say it's open to misinterpretation, that the view that somebody's going to have is it's wrong and it's incorrect. Then uh what do you think the report looks into the m between unemployment, crime, and imprisonment? We're talking about uh the close connection between two or more things where they mutually affect or influence each other. What word specifically has that meaning? a close connection between two or more things where they mutually affect or influence each other given the sentence.

Hopefully that makes sense. We have two or more things, but they are going to influence one another. They're not just completely separate and isolated. If we're talking about these factors, unemployment, crime, and imprisonment, there's going to be overlap. they influence and you could say the report looks into the what between unemployment, crime and imprisonment. Part of this word, it is a longer word. It's 17 letters. Uh the base word you all know it's a very common word, but we're going to add a prefix to it, which is what makes it 17 uh letters.

Now I think in general you probably could use uh you know just the base word if you wanted uh see if okay correlation that would work but again it's not not 17 letters uh but that that that would work in this context interconnectedness sure uh that that would work. You're on the right track with that prefix at least the one that I'm trying to to get to. So I'm talking about the inter relationship where the the report looks into the inter relationships between unemployment, crime and in prison. All right. Excellent. Well done, Lai. Perfect. So in this case, it refers to the connection between two or more things uh like a relationship that may influence or affect each other. And we could use that that prefix at that interrelationship between different things. A synonym would be, you know, interconnectedness that that would work as well. Or correlation. Again, these are are rather interchangeable. Just keep in mind if you are going to pronounce this word, the stress is on that four syllable. Inter. ship. Now, the one distinction because I I'm trying to talk a little bit about pronunciation that I N T uh a lot of times with the American accent when the T follows an N sound, it's going to collide. It gets removed. You don't really hear it. So, if I were have a word like center, I would just say center. Now, that that's not always the case. You may hear somebody in the US pronounce that true T, which is what is often it's often the case in British English, but just something to keep in mind. In the US, you may not always hear that TT sound when it follows an N.

So, let's compare these words right here. And as you can see, indistinguishable is more commonly used in I would say also spoken English as well. uh when comparing indistinguishable misinterpretation and inter relationship. So I gave you a lot of long words today and here's just a quick uh little review all the words together the number of letters that they have as well as the phonetic spelling along with the stress syllable. I I told you that in my view I think these words are a bit more advanced but still I I tried to choose words that I think are ones that uh you may come across from time to time and I hope that you wholly agree with me and are that you wholeheartedly agree with me. I said wholly agree but uh in this case I wanted to use wholeheartedly. Um, and uh, remember if you want to get these lesson notes, just click on the link down below in the description. My hope is that you learned something new.

And if you did, you can let me know by hitting that like button. If you're in the chat, hit some emojis. uh because the goal is that over time just going to help you slowly and steadily build your vocabulary so that you can be a more proficient speaker describe things in a more precise way which I think really is where these words come into play. So, I hope that you all have a wonderful rest of your day and I will see you

Make vs Do | How to Build Your Vocabulary with Useful Collocations

Today I'm going to talk to you about some common words that are used with some common verbs. And those verbs are MAKE and DO. So stick around. That's coming up. In today's lesson, I'm going to talk to you about collocations. Now, you might be wondering... That's a good question. Collocations are just words that are frequently used together. And these are words that you might read in a story, or you might listen and hear these words just in everyday conversation. But these are words that you will frequently find together. And there's many different types of collocations. You can have an adjective-noun collocation. You could also have a noun-noun collocation. Two nouns that are often found together.

Or you can have a verb-noun collocation. Which is what we're going to discuss today. Because I'm going to talk to you about the verbs MAKE and DO, and the words that frequently follow these verbs. And the reason why you should care is because it is a fabulous way to build your vocabulary, and become more comfortable using these words in everyday conversation. Why just learn one word when you can learn two, three, or four. And that's going to help improve your overall English fluency. Collocations is just one way to do that.

Another way to improve your skills, maybe your listening skills, would be to listen to an audio book. That is a great way to improve your listening skills. And you can check out Audible because they're offering a free trial if you sign up. I'll leave a link in the description. So let's look at some common collocations, and I want to start with the verb MAKE. And generally speaking, when we use MAKE, we're talking about things that we create. Things that we might build. Keep that in mind as we go through these different categories, and I talk about these collocations.

First, let's start with food. Because who doesn't love food. Now when we're thinking of things that we make, things that we create. In the morning, I usually make some coffee. It's the first thing I do in the morning. And then I make breakfast. We can also make lunch, and we can make dinner. Something else that we make...we might make a cake for dessert. Mmm. Love cake. I'm starting to get hungry now so I need to start...let's move on and talk about something else. We can also use make if we're talking about stuff that has been built like a product. It could be made of something. Maybe it's made of gold.

That would be really nice, and it's probably expensive. Or it could be made from something else. If something is made from grapes. Like this bottle of wine, that's... That's already been opened by someone. What did...when did you open this? Also when talking about products, we can find out like where something is made. On tags in our shirts, things will say made in... I wonder where this one is made. Can't...what? Okay, that's not going to work. I don't know where this is made. We also use make when talking about plans. Because you can, well...you can make a plan. You can make a decision. And, well maybe if you haven't made a decision somebody might tell you "Make up your mind."

Make a decision. Make up your mind. Make also helps us talk about reactions. So for example, something could make you happy. Like this lesson. And you can give it a thumbs up if it makes you happy. I hope not. Maybe it makes you sleepy. I don't know. Wake up! We're not done yet. We use make to talk about money. Yeah, make money. Make a profit. And with your job we say that's how people make a living make. Make money. Some other common expressions with make...you can make a mistake. You can also make a phone call. You can make a sound. You can make a promise. And if you end up breaking that promise, then you can just make an excuse.

There are actually many, many, many, many other collocations with MAKE. These are just some of them. A few of them that I think are really common. So I recommend that you keep studying, keep learning, and help build, build, build your vocabulary. So let's have a look at DO and some of the common collocations with this verb and the nouns that follow. We use DO, generally speaking, when we're talking about some type of activity. For example, maybe performing an action. You can do the dishes You can do some exercise. You can also do the laundry. That reminds me. I need to do some laundry. We can also use do to talk about some kind of work.

Like you can do your homework. Or you can do your job. Or you can even do chores around the house. Finally, we can use do to talk about nonspecific activities like do something. Or do anything. Or maybe do everything. So those are some common collocations with do. Again, there are others out there, and I think they're great to learn because it'll just help you expand and build your vocabulary. So now we're going to do a quick practice, and I'm going to quiz you on what we just learned. I'm going to give you a sentence and I want you to complete the sentence with either MAKE or DO. So I want you to say out loud which verb would complete the collocation.

And I'm not going to show you the sentence, so this is going to be a bit of a listening exercise. Which one? Which verb would complete this sentence? If you're not positive just try and think think of what comes naturally. And if it helps, try to repeat the whole sentence and fill in either MAKE or DO. I'll give you a few moments, and then afterwards I'll go over the answer with you. Are you ready? I hope that you do a good job.

Let's begin. That was pretty cheesy. So if we're talking about hair and nails it would be more of an activity, and we would use DO. Do hair. Do nails. Let's look at the next one. If we're talking about money, money, money, money, money. We make money. I hope to make money. I don't know if we'll make a lot of money some day. Maybe. We'll see. Here's the next one. Here we are talking about some kind of work. Remember you do homework. So in this example... Do the assignment. Do work. Here's another. In this sentence we're talking about a nonspecific activity. Nothing. So you would do nothing. At the beach, I don't need to do anything. I just want to do nothing. And relax. Do nothing.

Here's another. Talking about food...food that I want to eat. Make. I want to make food. Make some food. That's wasn't the sentence. That's what you would. You would make soup. Make lunch. And I need to make some lunch because I am hungry. Probably won't make soup. Maybe I'll make a sandwich. Here's another one. This is a reaction to something. A reaction that causes a smile. It's true because when you're on vacation you do nothing. I hope you enjoyed that activity, and if you did and you did a good job, let me know. Write that in the comments. Let me know how you performed. We love hearing from you guys. So I hope that you'll remember some of these collocations.

And you will continue studying them because it is a great way to build your English vocabulary. Thanks so much for watching, and I'll see you next time.

Master This DIFFICULT GRAMMAR to Improve Your Fluency

Let's talk about some difficult English grammar. So, if you are someone who likes learning grammar, improving your overall English fluency skills, please subscribe, turn on notifications, that way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And I want to look at some well difficult grammar concepts, ones that may be confusing. And these are slight mistakes that I often hear in spoken English if I'm having a conversation with someone. And if you would like to get the lesson notes right here, click on the link down below in the description. Join our email community. If you're already a part of it, check your inbox. I've sent them to you. But this is a good way to review and familiarize yourself with these uh with this difficult grammar. So, of course, this is a quiz lesson. I want you to participate. Write your answers in the chat in the comments and then I'll give you a moment to think of your answer before we talk about it together. So, think about this situation right here. We were planning a family trip over the weekend. However, when I saw the weather report, it looked like it was going to rain. The end. We decided to wait until the following weekend. So, which word best completes that phrase? And I've highlighted the entire phrase. Really, I feel like you get you have one of two choices. So, what do you think best completes that sentence? M the end. We decided to wait until the next weekend. So I mentioned that this is a mistake that I hear quite often and it makes sense as to why people may confuse these but the correct answer given this situation would be in the end we decided to wait until the following weekend. So I I see you know some both in and at as far as responses goes. Think about the situation. So you have this plan, something that you want to do, but then in the end we get to the result right down here. In the end, we decided to wait until the following weekend. Like ultimately, well, eventually this is what we decided to do. So I I say that in the end and at the end are commonly confused. I'm giving you the meaning as well as an example. So, we use in the end when we want to refer to the outcome of events or disclose a result, which is the example. In the end, we decided to wait until the next weekend. Here's another example. In the end, well, we did what was best for the kids. At the end really is used when you're referring to the like a specific point or really at the end of something. You want to indicate the specific time like what happened at the end of the story. Now, one thing that may be confusing is because you may also hear people use the phrase at the end of the day. At the end of the day is a little more similar to saying in the end as far as well ultimately, eventually. The one slight difference is that when you say at the end of the day, you're really implying that everything is being considered. But keep in mind, I often hear this when people are telling a story and instead of saying in the end, like whatever the outcome or result is, they end up using at the end. And that is a slight slight speaking mistake. So keep in mind the difference between in the end and at the end. How about this one? I don't remember my teachers so strict when I was a kid. I

I'm giving you a blank there, but think about which word would correctly complete this sentence there. Maybe there is more than one. There's there's a specific word that I'm going for. And of course, I'll give you a moment. Think about how would you complete this sentence. I don't remember my teachers m so strict when I was a kid. Somebody's thinking back about their own personal situation and you would use which word to complete this. So I think uh you guys are on it. Excellent. Julia Ava uh being I don't remember my teachers being so strict when I was a kid. We're talking about strict and you are often going to use that with the verb to be. He is strict.

They are strict. In this case, we're going to use the gerand being. And sometimes I hear mistakes with being. And often people end up using the infinitive and they'll say to be. So here are a couple of examples as to when you would use being in the continuous tense, in which case you're talking about actions and behaviors like, oh, I'm being silly or you're not being serious. Or you may use it as a garand like we were doing in the example. I don't remember my teacher being like so you have the verb plus being. She likes being the center of attention or an adjective plus a preposition and them being. He's tired of being wrong all the time. I feel like sometimes I'm tired of being wrong all the time, which is yeah, sometimes it's that's kind of what happens. So, just keep that in mind as far as using being. How about this one? going to when we put it at the beginning of a clause we're going to invert the subject and the verb. I then know that wasn't part of the question, but I just want you to be aware of that and I've highlighted it down here. Not only did he miss, so instead of saying he missed, I'm saying not only did he miss, we're inverting the subject and the verb. Not only did he miss the meeting, but all but he also forgot to submit his report. that not only but also when you want to emphasize that something two things that happened and they were surprising. Excellent. Again, if you if you enjoy learning grammar, let me know. You can let me know by hitting that like button.

That tells me that you're learning something new or this is a good review because some of this you may already be familiar with. I I wanted to include this. I thought this was just funny. this little meme. Not only will this hurt, but your dignity will not be spared either. Uh, funny little meme that I wanted to throw in there. So, let's get let's let's stop being silly. All right. And now it's uh it's time to get serious and continue with more serious grammar. So, what do you think about this? The m you work the m likely you will have a better result. I'm stating this as pretty much this is a fact. I think we could all agree with this. But what do you think? What are what are the two words that would really help complete this sentence and then I'll tell you where I'm going with this as far as some difficult or tricky grammar is concerned. Write your answer in the chat in the comments. I just I want you all participating in these lessons. Uh this is that's what interactive English is all about. So I see some answers. Perfect. Um as far as the you know the more you work the more likely you will be able to have a better result. That that's fine. So the first part of this more would work. I had put the word harder in there which is also work. We're we're basically just talking um about a double comparative. So in in our example, the more the the you could say the more you work, the more likely you will to have a better result. That works. Or the harder you work, the more likely you will have a better result.

But double comparatives are phrases that they're really showing this cause and effect relationship. And also, I feel like it's a it's a great way to emphasize that cause and effect relationship. So, you could use it with more or less. And yeah, you could use it um with er comparatives or more and even mix those up. So, here are some examples. The less money I spend, the less I have to worry about saving. That's true. Or the faster the car is, the more dangerous it is to drive. Again, I want to emphasize that fact. or down at the bottom, the more the students study for the test, the higher the scores will be. So, these are all examples as far as double comparatives go and and comparing you that cause and effect relationship between two things.

I I like this I like this question. I don't know why. Maybe I just like these sentences. I really need is a cup of coffee. Which word completes this statement right here? And this is something that I would say in the morning, I really need is a cup of coffee. Perhaps I'm just really tired. I'm having trouble waking up. Or maybe I'm a little agitated and I tell this to someone. I really need is a cup of coffee. And I maybe I use these sentences from time to time and I feel like they're great in just casual conversation whenever you want to once again emphasize something because as many of you correctly pointed out, I'm talking about the word what. What I really need is a cup of coffee. So in case this is grammar that you may not be familiar with, the sentence is a what cleft sentence. And if you're thinking cleft sentence, what the hell is that?

Well, cleft sentences are well, they're complex sentences that have a meaning that can well you can express with a simple sentence. Of course, I could just say I need a cup of coffee. But I'm going to use this what cleft sentence to draw attention to the most interesting or important part. And that's where I said you're really um emphasizing this. So, in this case, I want to emphasize my need. What I really need is a cup of coffee. Of course, I could just say, "Well, I I need a cup of coffee or I really need a cup of coffee." But I can use this to really draw your attention to the most important part or the most important thing that you want to express. Here are some other examples.

What they did was give us a refund. Highlighting the fact, well, this is what they did. That is the most important thing. Or what she wants is some peace and quiet. And then finally, what we need what we need to do is get some batteries. And I feel like people often use what cleft sentences in that. Well, what we need to do is this. What we need to do is that. And you're using this form right here. Great for again this back and forth casual conversation. But in case you really hadn't given much thought to the grammar that they are what cleft sentences. What do you think about this? I love the the picture in the back in case you can't really see it, but the sentence, if I had eaten earlier, I m right now.

If I had eaten earlier, I right now just looking at the sentence, I I think you can tell we're talking about a conditional sentence. We have an if conditional. But these sentences can be difficult. They can be confusing because this is not your normal conditional sentence. in which case you have the zero conditional, the first conditional, the second, the third. In this case, I'm talking about a mixed conditional. If I had eaten earlier, all right, that's a past condition. Well, what's the present result? I wouldn't be hungry right now. I wouldn't be hungry. I feel like a lot of you either if you didn't know the grammar I think just thinking of the situation you could come up with those missing words. If I had eaten if I had eaten earlier I wouldn't be hungry right now. So I said this is a mixed conditional and I think this is probably there are several different mixed conditionals that people could use. I think this this is one of the more common ones in which case you're talking about a past condition.

We're going to use the past perfect and then follow it with a present result, in which case we're going to use would plus the verb. If you had asked for directions, we wouldn't be lost. Now, I could say we wouldn't be lost right now, but you don't have to put right now in there. Or if they had taken the train, they would be here by now. All right. And then finally, if I had taken my medicine, I would feel better. I would feel better right now in the present. We're talking about a present result. So, something to keep in mind with these mixed conditionals. It's a great way uh in this case to accurately express your your thoughts, opinions, and ideas.

He didn't realize what doing. Now, there are probably different ways that you could complete this sentence, but there is something specific that I want to point out, and I feel like probably you can uh guess the words that should go in there. He didn't realize what doing. You see that guy? He's very He's very surprised, very shocked. And of course, he didn't realize what m doing.

Now, of course, I'm pointing out difficult grammar that when you're having a conversation, this is when I often hear mistakes, but being able to see the sentence perhaps makes it a little easier. And as many of you pointed out, you would say, he didn't realize what he was doing. Now, we're talking about a noun clause, what he was doing. And when it comes to these noun clauses, the one thing you need to keep in mind, you need to remember is the word order. So, within a noun clause, the subjects going to come before the verb. And even when it begins with a question word such as what, where, when, why, who, how, it doesn't really matter.

But what happens I feel like when our brain starts thinking of questions, we invert the subject and the verb. So often when I'm having a conversation and somebody's talking, I hear people keep that inversion. And they would say something like, "Oh, he didn't realize what was he doing?" And it's a small speaking mistake, but one that I would continuously point out and just remind people, hey, keep in mind we're talking about a noun clause. We're going to follow that subjectverb word order. So, here are some other examples. I don't know who he is. Please tell me how you got lost. We know what we must do. In each of those sentences, I'm using a question word, who, how, what, but I'm going to follow subject verb. Again, when you see this, I think it's easy to spot or or point out, but of course, when you're having a conversation, it does become a little more difficult.

Something just to to be mindful of. What do you think? Everyone left. What? All right. What would you What would you What would you say? Of course, you you can see that it's a question. So, how would you complete that question? Everyone left. I'll give you a moment and then uh I'll tell you the answer. Everyone left. So the key part as far as well trying to make this a little easier is really pointing out the fact that this is a question. So really, I could complete this sentence and say, "Well, everyone left." Maybe I'm talking about a party or again, this empty room, didn't they? Everyone left, didn't they? Um, so we're I'm really just talking about tag questions. This is a statement uh followed by a mini question. So, we use tag questions to really ask for confirmation. you have a positive statement that's going to be followed by a negative tag. And this is when it sometimes gets confused. You have money, don't you? But if I have a negative statement, I'm going to follow that with a positive tag. So if I said a negative statement, well, you don't have any money, do you? Something to keep in mind. But these questions are once again more for spoken English. You often hear them in casual conversation. Um, everything's okay, isn't it? I hope everything is okay. What do you think? Little little subjectverb agreement quiz. So, the verb that's missing is the verb to be. And I just want you to complete it with the correct form of the verb to be. Now, whether you give me the form in the present tense or the past tense, I, you know, that really doesn't matter. But I just want you to think about which, you know, how are you going to conjugate that verb? Neither m fit to lead. She looked for a parking spot, but none m available.

Everyone a suspect. I feel like you would hear that in a movie or TV show. And finally, both of them m from New York. So this is a a little mini quiz. when it comes to subjectverb agreement because sometimes when you have these words like neither or everyone or both, it becomes a little tricky. So, let's look at our answers and talk about subjectverb agreement. Neither is fit to lead. If you're using neither, like, well, neither this person nor this person, it's always singular because you're referring to still the individual. Neither is fit to lead. She looked for a parking spot, but none were available. So, none may be singular or plural. In this case, because we're talking about parking spot, which in in the the context, there is more than one parking spots. None of the parking spots were available. So, I'm going to use the plural none. None were available.

How about this? I recommend ~~m~~ a specialist. I want you to complete this sentence using talk. I recommend ~~m~~ a specialist. This is another common mistake that I hear in spoken English and it is, you know, a little difficult, a little confusing, but one that I hear quite often. And I would say instead of making a case as far as something being right or wrong, I would really I want to present this to you as maybe what's more commonly used. So I recommend that you talk to a specialist. So recommend can be used in different ways. In this case, I'm talking about the subjunctive mood. Now what I sometimes hear people say is I recommend you to talk to a specialist. And there are arguments online as to whether or not, oh yeah, that form is okay. I do think that especially in places like the United States, which is where I'm from, uh it it may sound that construction may sound a little awkward. I would recommend using a that clause. And we're talking about the subjunctive mood, which may be used to express a wish, a recommendation, or a demand. So you see the form right here. verb of suggestion plus that plus the subject plus the base verb. The doctor recommends that you drink plenty of water and in this case that is optional. My friend suggested I come by sometime this weekend. So I often hear this with verbs like recommend and suggest. I think those are the two most common ones. And often I would end up having to tell someone, okay, just use a that clause. I recommend that you do this. I suggest that you do that. So to give you one other point of uh reference for this, this is actually taken from Cambridge's online dictionary where they're talking about suggest and they're identifying the typical errors. And that is exactly what I'm talking about when they say, look, we don't use suggest plus the indirect object and then the two infinitive. You would say he suggested that I should apply for uh a job in a bank or insurance company. So keep that in mind when we're using those verbs. Suggest, recommend. We use them quite often. So this is just a little bit of review. See, these are some of the grammar concepts that we talked about. LESSON 446 OF 749

Military Idioms & Expressions that YOU Can Use

Hey everyone. My name is Wes. This is interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I want to teach you some useful expressions. Specifically I want to talk to you about military and combat expressions and these are expressions that I think at one time they were, they were mostly used in that, that setting just by people in the military, but nowadays it's changed and Eh, anybody might use these phrases and expressions and everyday conversation depending on what they're talking about. So I'm going to do four things. I'll teach you the expression, I'll tell you what it means. I'll talk a little bit about how the expression came about and then tell you how people might use it in conversation today.

The first expression that I have for you is boots on the ground. Now this expression is probably still mostly used in in just a military context because it's talking about troops that are on the ground, engaged in some operation and you would say that that they are going to put boots on the ground. This is an expression that became a bit more popularized after the invasions of Iraq and Afghanistan, and they talked about more troops being sent there, more boots on the ground.

Another time you might hear this expression is from politicians when they're talking about whether or not the military might be engaged in some operation and they might have to send troops to a combat zone and put boots on the ground. It may also be used to talk about the civilian police force at times that they have to go out into the city for some reason or another and they're going to put boots on the ground. There will be police in the area to combat something.

The next phrase is bite the bullet. Now this is an expression that you might find more commonly used in everyday English because what it means is to endure some sort of pain or discomfort. You're going to suffer through something and basically you know that you're going to do this and you would say, you know, I'm going to bite the bullet. I am going to endure this pain. I'll bite the bullet. So for example, maybe you lie to somebody, it could be your husband or wife and something happens and you need to confess. You need to tell them the truth even though you know that you're going to experience some pain and heartache from this, but in the end you're going to do it. You're going to bite the bullet.

This was a phrase that was used by soldiers during the American civil war, but I think it can actually be traced back to a British army officer who wrote a book and referred to an expression with a similar meaning. Chew the bullet. But today if you know that you're going to endure some sort of pain or suffering could be physical, it could be mental. You can just say, I'm going to bite the bullet. Next is the phrase got your six. So if somebody says got your six, then that just means that hey, I have your back. I'm watching your back and protecting you and making sure nobody's going to hurt you. So the reason somebody would say got your six is because in the military, people might often refer to a clock as to where something is located.

Something is in front of you at 12 o'clock maybe it's to this side, three o'clock here's nine o'clock and then behind you would be six six o'clock that's it. Back of you. So somebody would say, Hey, I got your back, I got your six I'm going to go up to six okay, showtime Mack, I got your six I got your six this is an expression that you're not going to go out and use unless you are in the military or law enforcement. But it is an expression that you may hear if you're watching a TV show or movie that has to do with the military and people will refer to the position and say, Hey, something's at 12 o'clock something's at three o'clock or if you're talking about protecting somebody and watching their back, they might say, got your six.

You may also hear somebody say, watch your six. Which is similar to saying, watch your back. Especially if the enemies behind you, they could say, watch your six. The next expression is bought the farm and this is an expression where bought wood would be used in the past tense and the reason it'd be used in the past tense is because it's talking about a person who has died. It's an informal way and saying, you know somebody, somebody bought the farm, somebody died, somebody passed away.

Now we don't know exactly how this expression came about. Some people think it has to do with with jet pilots during the 50s that when they died the family would receive some money, some compensation, and then they could buy the land. They would buy the farm. Then we have an expression to catch flack and if you catch flack from someone, it just means that you are being criticized, harshly criticized by this person and we often use it with the preposition from you catch flack from someone. So if you do something wrong at home, you might catch flack from your husband or wife or if you do something wrong at work, you might catch flack from your boss.

This is an expression that can be used by anyone. If they are describing that situation that they are going to get criticized by somebody else and then you could say, yeah, you know I'm going to catch some flack, or if it already happened, you could tell somebody, yeah, I caught a lot of flack for doing this thing. So where does this expression come from? Well, during World War II, flack was actually an acronym for the German air missile defense system, which they called, and I'm probably going to mispronounce this, the flieger [inaudible] if you're German, let me, let me know how bad that pronunciation is, but it's an acronym for Pfleger up Vercon and when pilots would try to fly over, they would catch fire from these systems.

They would catch flack and then over years and years, the expression change to its current meaning today, which is to get harshly criticized by someone to catch flack. Then we have some acronyms and those acronyms are Fubar Snafu and tar Fu. Now fubar is an acronym that stands for EFT up beyond all recognition. The first time that I heard this expression, I was watching the movie saving private Ryan. Even if you think the mission is food busser, what's the WHO book? It's not a word that people might use in just their, their general life. I, I'm not a military person so I don't know if this term is still used today, but this is, if anything, it's more for your comprehension because you may hear this when you're watching a TV show or a movie such as the one that I just mentioned.

Now snafu stands for situation normal, all f up that that something happened, a normal situation and then it just really went completely to hell. This is an expression that personally I have heard in other contexts that if there was some situation that got screwed up and you tell somebody, yeah, we hit a bit of a Snafu, there was a problem and then we got through this problem, you might hit a snafu. Oh, good work people. Little Snafu were taken care of. There was a snafu in when we stopped combat bed and breakfast and Napa, high knees, smile food. I've already given the money to the contractor. Sorry, but the security snafu that was on you and Tofu is an acronym. Things are really EFT up. So if you're, you're describing this situation and things are really EFT up, you could just say tar Fu. This is an expression that, to be honest, I haven't heard it in a, in a movie or a TV show.

I'm not in the military, so I, I can't really say how common these expressions are used today, but it's good to know these acronyms for your comprehension and in case you hear them Fubar Snafu Tartu the next phrase is in the trenches and this just means that you are, you're in a tough fight. You are in the midst of things. You, you are in the trenches and this expression, of course it applies to war, but, but people may also use it in other contexts as well, that, that they're in a fight, they're down in the trenches. Perhaps maybe in a sports competition that you are, you're in the middle of this fight.

You're down in the trenches or maybe in business. If you feel like you're in the middle of this fight, you're stuck. You've got to keep fighting through. You could say that you know you're in the trenches. This expression comes from soldiers trying to protect themselves when they were taking fire from the enemy, so during a war like world war one, they would dig trenches. They would dig these trenches in the ground and when the enemy would fire, they'd get in the trenches, try to protect themselves. It was a tough situation, but it was a way for them to survive, to keep fighting. They were in the trenches. Next we have the expression, no man's land and what this expression means, it's, it's just a dangerous area that are maybe a topic that that can't be discussed. No Man's land and where this expression comes from.

It's talking about the area between two opposing armies and that area. When people would dig those trenches and they were, they were stuck there. They were fighting that area in between those two armies that was no man's land. Nobody would go in that area. That is a very dangerous place to be. No Man's land. Then we have the expression nuclear option. Now this is an expression that's used today in us politics and what it means is that you are just going to destroy everything and instead of having a debate, so just a quick little civics lesson in the United States Senate, this is where they would debate legislation, but if one party has control and they don't want to debate, they may opt for a nuclear option, which means they're not going to allow a debate.

They're just going to destroy everything and do what they want. This expression refers to nuclear warfare. A nuclear bomb went in the military when people might discuss a nuclear option, they're talking about dropping a nuclear bomb, which would destroy everything, but nowadays if you hear this term [inaudible], then you're probably watching something or reading something about us. Politics. Next is the expression on the double and if somebody says on the double, it just means to to do something quickly, pretty much, double twice as quickly as you would normally do it. And this is an expression that that people could use in their daily lives. If they're asking somebody to do something quickly, they might tell them on the double getting back up here on the double [inaudible].

maybe even some movement that they are out there. They are leading the charge and you could say that they are on the front line. If talking about the military then I, I think it's self explanatory that if, if there is a battle, if there is a fight and you are right in the middle of it, if you are out front than you'd say you are on the front lines. So this is an expression that may be used outside of discussing the military for example. Maybe there's a movement, there's a cause you really believe in it and you're out there trying to lead the way, trying to create change. You could say that that you are on the front lines of this issue.

The next expression, and I think this is a very well known one and that is just Roger that and if somebody says Roger that it just means yes. And when I think of this expression, I think about two people communicating over the radio or maybe they're using walkie talkies and that somebody is telling somebody to do something and instead of saying yes, you just say Roger, that you may hear this expression just in general, especially somebody's giving a command and telling you to do something. Is that Okay Roger, that? Yes, yes, I'll do that. So where does this expression come from? Well, in the old NATO phonetic alphabet, the letter r was pronounced as Rodger.

So if a message was properly received, they would confirm that by saying Roger, over time it evolved to the meaning of Yes. Nowadays in the NATO phonetic alphabet, they used the word Romeo in place of the letter r. But Roger is still used to say that a message has been received. But this is a phrase that I think you may hear in a TV show or movie and it's good for your comprehension. So if somebody says Roger that, then it just means yes. Now if you guys want to be on the front lines of interactive English, then I suggest you join our team. Sign up for our email list. We will send you lesson updates, useful resources, and access to the secret fluency lesson link is in the description down below.

Now, my last question for you is, did you understand these expressions? And if you did, let me know in the comments and just right Roger that. So if you write that in the comments, then I know that the lesson was easy to understand and follow. Thank you guys so much for watching. I hope you learn something new and I'll see you next time.

Minimal Pairs | Useful Pronunciation Practice

hello hello hello welcome to today's live lesson my name's wes this is interactive english which is where you want to be to practice and improve your english skills so see a lot of people in here already if you're joining us please please please please let me know what's your name where are you joining us from it's so good to see so many people uh people you've seen before i'll just say hello go see a ramesh anna hello hello welcome thank you guys for joining me today so today we have a special special lesson it is a pronunciation lesson and specifically we are going to talk about minimal pairs yes we're going to practice our pronunciation in today's lesson using minimal pairs so we're going to go over there are many different types of minimal pairs and i've just chosen a few of them that i think are more commonly confused among learners and we are going to practice them today so i hope that you are ready to speak i hope that you are going to practice with us practice out loud and actually try you know try test your own pronunciation and actually say these words with me so that is what i expect out of all of you who are watching this today even if you're watching this later practice actually saying the words all right it doesn't matter if you're at home if you're on a bus just yeah just start speaking it's always good to practice so the first question that you may have is this one what are minimal pairs so minimal pairs this is it's a pair of words that have only one different sound and that's why they can be confusing is because the words sound very similar except for this this one sound and usually you have these two different sounds that are fairly similar so for example look at my beautiful words my beautiful examples we have the word sheep that has that long e sound and then the word ship which has that short i sound sheep ship now the the the only difference is that vowel sound that's in the middle there but again when you're when i say the words individually i think many learners can tell the difference like okay yes i understand the problem is is that when we're communicating when we're speaking when we're having a conversation we don't really just say one word we're speaking about a topic and we're speaking in full sentences and when you use some of these words in in a full sentence that's where it can be a bit more confusing because if somebody says like oh somebody stole my sheep and then then if that word gets confused and somebody thinks you said ship they're like wow you have a ship well you must have a lot of money so again these these words can get commonly confused so it's always good to understand what the difference is but also to practice that difference and that's what we're going to do today so another question which you may have is this one right here how does this help us how do how to practicing how does practicing your pronunciation with minimal pairs how is that going to help you improve your pronunciation and your speaking skills well there's two things first it's really going to help you fine tune your skills because if you're able to say all the different sounds correctly then the other person that you're speaking to is going to perfectly understand exactly what you want to say there's going to be no confusion and you can accurately express your thoughts opinions and ideas number two is that it's going to help you understand that that there is a difference between certain sounds even sounds that that that they almost seem exactly the same and i i've i've gone through this as well when i was learning spanish uh since i've been learning romanian when i was learning korean there are minimal pairs there where people will say two different words and in my mind i'm thinking wait wait wait wait wait you're saying the same word that's the same exact thing and when i've done this exercise with students and we've discussed certain minimal pairs they've told me the same thing they've said hey wait you're saying the same word and that's why it's important for us if we're able to even listen and identify that okay there is a difference in the sound even if it's a slight difference that's going to help you acknowledge the difference and then try to practice that so that you can produce these sounds accurately and you can say what you want to say so let's look at today's lesson is all about this right here so the we're going to do three different parts we're going to talk about the rl which are two consonants that are commonly confused in certain words and we've done a whole lesson about the rl which i will link up above if you want more information about it i highly recommend you check that out we're also going to talk about this vowel sound these two vowel sounds the long e sound and the short i sound which i already gave you an example of and then this right here the bp two more consonants that may be commonly confused uh by learners so it's good to practice we're going to practice with some words and sentences so if you are ready to practice speaking and actually practicing your pronunciation write that in the comments that and then we're going to look at some words that have this sound and then compare the two compare the minimal pairs all right so got some response lolly you're okay all right ready uh hudong's you're ready yes excellent thank you thank you so hope you guys are ready to actually practice speaking sana's perfect thank you let's look at uh the r sound so if you want to make the r sound you have your tongue is up but it's toward the back of the mouth it's towards the back it's it's kind of it almost feels like it's in the center it's right in the center but the tongue is up it's turned up and it's towards the back and it always helps if you have like a handy dandy little mirror like this if you really want to see if you're looking at a picture oh this is where my tongue needs to be this is the position uh that that should be in my mouth you can use these mirrors to kind of check and it's a good way to check to see if everything that your tongue is in the right position so tongue is up it's toward the back and then you would say words you can repeat them with me right arrive rear so i'm kind of actually trying to say those r sounds uh pretty hard so you can hear those and i've put them in different positions the first position the middle position and the final position right arrive rear now for the l the l the tongue is curled up and it is placed the tip of the tongue is placed against it's placed on the ridge behind your two front teeth so you should have the tip of your tongue touching that ridge and if you put your tongue up there and we can say the words let's say them together light alive real and each time you have that l your tongue should be touching that top so now let's just look at the blue the blue that would be a minimal pair all right and again practice say them with me don't be shy right light let's look at the next one let's look at the orange ones all right say them with me arrive alive okay are you speaking i'm listening i'm trying to listen for you all right the last one in the final position rear reel rear real okay so those are some common minimal pairs this is what these are what minimal pairs are the two words they only have that one sound that is different and in this case it is that r and l sound so let's look at some sentences and again i want you guys to practice say these sentences with me all right the first one we need to take a right at the next light let's look at this one try this together the officer needs to collect the correct information the officer needs to collect the correct information i'm trying to use some uh some different ones for you so these are all rl minimal pairs and then this last one down here my favorite sentence the royal family is really loyal to the clown's crown this is it's probably not a sentence you're going to say in regular conversation but it is good practice for minimal pairs let's try that one again the royal family is really loyal to the clown's crown again try to say that rl sound and if you are actually if you are actually saying these with me write that in the comments speaking just tell me write speaking so i know oh okay this this person's practicing let's let's do some more practice with the rl and then we'll move on to the next one so i am going to say this sentence right here and i will either end it with right or light all i want you to do again this can be a pointing one just point to the word point to the correct word that i'm saying again this is more of a kinesthetic activity you're listening and then you're pointing to the screen all right and then i'll give you just a second and then i will point to the one that i'm saying all right are you ready okay so i would first start out and say go to the right go to the light go to the light go to the light go to the right this one up here all right so that's just again that's a way to see if if somebody's talking and they're saying a full sentence that you can identify that that rl sound and understand okay this is what this person is telling me all right excellent i'm seeing some great comments in here uh excellent thank you guys for participating in the activity that's what i want we want you guys to actually speak and to actually practice your pronunciation as we do these uh different activities so let's look at the next one so we're gonna this is these are two vowel sounds that can be commonly confused that long e and that short i sound so that long e sound how do we make this this is a sound that i think many of you are probably familiar with when somebody's taking a picture and in english they would say cheese and the reason they say this is because then your mouth is wide it's kind of like you're smiling to say that long e sound your mouth is wide cheese your tongue is forward and it's a little higher too and that's how you get that long e e cheese all right i see myself now it looks a little it looks a little strange i look i'm smiling perhaps a little too much but just to show you guys e cheese alright so let's say these words together ready sheep seat beach all right i'm kind of probably widening my mouth a little too much let's say i'm again sheep seat beach okay now that short i sound right here this one is is just completely relaxed lips are relaxed the tongue is central it's in that central area of your mouth all right and it's just all right ship sit all right the reason i mean you're probably hearing that last one and yes it's not a nice word to say but this is important because the reason i've done this that ian if there i've i've met many learners over the years that that we talk about going to the beach or traveling to the beach quite often and i've met many learners who are like i avoid saying this word i try to avoid it because i'm worried that people are going to misunderstand what i'm saying and they're going to think i'm saying the short i sound in alright so it is good to understand that it's good to practice it don't shy away from it just because again it's not a nice word but let's look at the blue all right let's start uh with you look like you're about to come batman yes yes i do with my big smile joker smile um the first one let's say it let's say it together all right don't be shy ready sheep say it one more time just repeat after me sheep ship the next one let's look at those orange words right there ready seat sit one more time seat sit okay and that final one all right that long e sound let's look at those i guess it's a purple color uh purple maroonish color ready beach beach all right it is always good to practice those again these are ways you can practice minimal pairs you can practice speaking out loud you can practice saying the individual words and again if you're if you have a conversation partner or if you're in class practice saying them and make sure that the other person understands what you would like to say because that's very important so that that you know like okay i know the difference between these sounds and i know how to make them so let's look at some practice sentences again all right i've tried to think of sentences you might hear but again in using both of them it's it's a little difficult so let's look at this first one up here in the blue somebody might say hey are you going to eat it you have something and you you maybe you want to eat it you're like asking somebody else hey are you going to eat it all right say that with me are you gonna eat it eat it all right next one let's look at that sentence i just want to take a deep dip in the pool say it with me i just want to take a deep dip in the pool and it would be nice it's very cold out today right here in budapest so i would it'd be nice to take a deep dip in the pool especially a warm pool uh let's look at this last one all right i tried to throw in some extra ones he has a sleek bed and slick pajamas that helps him slip right to sleep all right a lot of a lot of e and a lot of s sounds too sorry about that let's say it say it with me okay he has a sleek bed and a slick wait wait sorry sorry he has a sleek bed and slick pajamas that helps him slip right to sleep all right so it's almost yeah it kind of almost sounds a little bit like a tongue twister but again if you guys are doing this let me know if you enjoy these pronunciation lessons hit the hit that like button for us let us know let me know that you guys enjoy this so this is very useful and like i said there are many different minimal pairs but these are a few that i think are commonly confused and that's why i wanted to practice these so let's do a little game are you ready a little game time game time so this is more of a listening exercise for you to see that that you can identify the the different the different sound that you are able to actually identify the difference and practice that so you can see the game board these are a bunch of cities down below you see the cities so i'm going to say uh either the word sheep or ship all right i'm going to say it three times each time i say it i want you to move so you're going to start up here at the top i'll say a word all right and then you move to that side and then i'll say another word and then again move to that side and then i'll say it a third time and then move to that side and you end up in one of these cities down here and then i want you to write you know which city did you end up in so let's let me give you an example first because some of you might be a little confused right now so i'm going to say the word one of those words i'm going to say three times so for example let's start up here if i say sheep like the animal and then sheep the animal again ship like the boat then you're going to end up down there in new york city so you're going to move to that side sheep sheep ship and then you end up in new york city okay you guys got it you're ready all right let's let's just let's just give it a try so i'm gonna say the word i'm gonna say it three times and then i want you to write where you end up which city did you end up in are you ready okay ready ship ship sheep i'll say it again i'm kind of figuring out where i want to go as i'm saying it all right ship ship sheep okay if you guys are just joining us we're practicing our our pronunciation by using minimal pairs and we're going over these right now this is the long e and that short i so write which city which city did you end up in write that in the comments all right so i'll say it one more time ship ship sheep all right i think yes all right most of you guys you ended up in vegas perfect excellent yes that's what we're going for viva las vegas yes okay let's do another one bucharest that's not even on the list i guess it's okay maybe it's even further out all right um all right you ready for the next one uh let's do this one i'm gonna go a little faster this time sheep ship sheep ship sheep ship those are the those are the three words i'll say it one more time right where you end up okay sheep ship sheep where did you guys end up all right write that in the comments i want to know i'll say it one more time for you guys sheep ship sheep again this is good practice to see that you can identify you can listen for it and identify these individual sounds everybody's saying rio yes that is where we ended up we were you should be in rio um with all of us if if you made a mistake along the way don't worry about it again this is just practice this is good it's good listening practice all right so i said sheep ship sheep we now it is a voiceless sound that's the only difference between the b and the p because also with the p sound the lips are closed you want to stop that air and it's also aspirated that puff that however if you put your fingers down here on your throat all right you shouldn't feel that vibration it's voiceless so um let's say pig pie cap okay so let's let's look at the blue words all right that's our minimal pair right there let's say them together say just repeat them each one after me big pig that bp let's look at the orange words by pie and then that final those purple words cab cap cab cap all right so remember the b the the your your mouth is in the same position the only real difference one's voiced one's a voiceless sound so let's look at some sentences why not i have a few sentences that i want you guys to to say with me practice that that p that pb sound so the first one that blue one up there there is a pair of bears behind the tree there is a pair of bears behind the tree pear bear let's look at the orange one all right somebody might say hey let's go have a beer out on the pier let's go have a beer out on the pier beer pier and finally down here this one i tried to uh you like my lovely picture down there to to represent that sentence a big pig wearing a robe pulled a bull with a rope all right give that one a try repeat after me a big pig wearing a robe pulled a bull with a rope all right it's it's not a sentence that you're going to go out and and say this and use this with your friends because you pray i'd be very impressed if you actually saw that a big pig wearing a robe pulling a bull with a rope that'd be pretty amazing all right so now that we've practiced our sentence since i enjoyed that game so much and again if we have a lot of teachers on our channel as well if you are a teacher of english this is a great activity for practicing minimal pairs practicing pronunciation and practicing listening skills you just do a chart like this you go in there you you model it for students and then you can actually have students come to the front they pick out what city they're in they come to the front of the class they can say it and actually practice their pronunciation and see where people end up it's a lot of fun this time okay it's going to be a little easier to follow because i actually wrote the b and the p i wrote which way i want you to go so i'm going to say again i'm going to say the sentence three times the first time is going to be for the red up there if i say the b move to that side the p move to that one the next time i say the sentence it's going to be for the blue and then the final time would be the green it's going i i'm trying to make it a little more difficult because instead of saying just the individual word i'm actually i'm i'm saying a sentence okay so i'm either going to say with the b that's a nice butt all right like my picture up there that's a nice butt or like the golfer over there in the corner that's a nice putt all right i could say like that's a nice butt or the p that's a nice putt okay so now that you've heard it a couple of times uh let's let's do this and we'll see where somebody ends up wait somebody's already in vegas wait we haven't started yet um all right are you guys ready let's let's let's do this let's give it a try all right so i'm gonna say the sentence three times ready um that's a nice butt that's a nice putt that's a nice putt all right where did you guys end up write that in the comments i will say it again are you ready all right i just got to make sure i remember where i ended up so i can see i can tell you correctly ready that's a nice butt that's a nice putt that's a nice putt okay so where where did you guys end up which city did you end up in and don't be shy even if you think you got it incorrect just write it down it doesn't really matter this is just all practice practice practice because if you didn't end up in the right city then i know oh maybe i need to i need to work on my pronunciation and practice my minimal pairs so yes excellent bangkok that that is where i wanted to end up i said the bpp that's a nice butt that's a nice putt that's a nice putt excellent you guys ended up in bangkok let's do this again okay are you ready this time here we go i'm going to say it i'm going to say it quicker all right so hopefully maybe i'll make it a little more difficult for you all right that's a nice putt that's a nice putt that's a nice putt where do you think where did i end up all right write that in the comments write the city in the comments where did i end up i'll say it again ready that's a nice putt that's a nice putt that's a nice putt what do you guys think all right again if if you're joining us we're practicing our pronunciation practicing minimal pairs what do you guys think all right i'll say that one one more time see where uh see where people end up that's a nice putt that's a nice putt that's a nice putt all right excellent yes jackson anna christina jr joe uh love truth edison paulo perfect perfect perfect yes you ended up in cairo that is where you should be cairo i said p-p-p putt-putt putt for each of those let's do one more why not all right um let me see which way which city do i want to end up and okay i got a city are you ready one more time again i'm just gonna i'm gonna say it fast i'm gonna try and see if i can confuse you guys hopefully i don't get confused ready that's a nice putt that's a nice butt that's a nice butt i'll say it again that's a nice putt that's a nice butt that's a nice butt which city did we end up in you're listening that ready say it again that's a nice putt that's a nice butt that's a nice butt all right write the city write that in the chat again even if you're watching this later participate in in the in the lesson write your answer in the comments and hit that comment button so we know that you are actually participating in the lesson that's what we want to hear so okay interesting all right so got some different ones for this one i'll say it again i'll say it slower that's a nice putt that's a nice butt that's a nice butt so i said b p wait no no no i said p b b and you should have ended up in london the city of london that's where i was going for p b b putt butt butt some of you a lot of you ended up in london great that is the place that you need to be so again this is a great way to practice minimal pairs especially in a classroom if you have a group of people and again i hope that you guys were actually practicing with me in this lesson if you were actually speaking again write that in the chat speaking or write that in the comments write the words speaking in the comments so i know okay this person was participating they were actually practicing their pronunciation because that's what this is all about that is what interactive english is all about to have these interactive activities with all of you so thank you guys so much for joining me today if you enjoyed this lesson if you enjoyed learning about pronunciation and practicing your pronunciation please hit that like button we'd really appreciate it and you can share this lesson with your classmates friends anybody you know who's trying to practice and improve their english help us spread the word as always questions in the comments say just you know write to us we love hearing from you guys and if you practice with this lesson write the word speaking so that i know also finally a lot of a lot of outro stuff here check out us check us out on uh our social media facebook twitter instagram it's another good way to to practice and improve your skills so guys thank you thank you so much junior bruce excellent you guys were speaking um rodrigo don't go to rio okay maybe we'll i'll think about it all right olga thank you for speaking giselle thanks for being here lali uh yawendra thank you thank you abhi sorry if i missed some names too i just try and read through these uh really quickly kamal g christina love truth bellage anna thank you guys so much uh hope you have a wonderful rest of the weekend uh careers yeah let's we'll drink a beer with a pear all right we can thank you guys for joining me and we will see you next time so long

Money Idioms & Expressions to Build Your Vocabulary

today's lesson is all about money hey everyone welcome to interactive English my name is Wes and we are all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I want to talk to you about money this is a very important topic many people out there they love money everybody wants money we all need money in order to survive so I want to teach you some common idioms and expressions that are all related to money I will tell you the idiom and then talk about the meaning and I'll also try to discuss how you would use this idiom and then finally I'll show you some video clips so that you can see how the idiom or expression is used in context now keep in mind I am from the United States so some of the idioms may be specific to the u.s.

buck is just talking about a dollar one buck is one dollar now you would use this word I think mostly when talking about smaller amounts of money you're not going to hear people talk about 1 billion bucks that's you know people would use dollars in that case but if you're talking about a small amount of money people may say bucks instead of dollars like hey do you have a couple of bucks or can I borrow a few bucks and that's how I think most people would use this word when when they want to say a dollar instead they're just gonna say a buck oh we gave them a few bucks I mean I only got a couple bucks I made a few bucks ok whatever look if you're hungry man I count on your buck just want a quick look-see pay you back okay then we have to cost an arm and a leg and this just means that well it just means that something is expensive so instead of saying that well this you know that car it's really expensive you could say well it cost an arm and a leg I think people would use it when they're describing something that's expensive but I in a way I think they're also saying that they don't think it's worth that much money that it costs too much it should not be that expensive so when you say well something cost an arm and a leg you're you're basically saying that it's too expensive that it should not cost this much money but in general it's just it's just really expensive these lessons they don't cost an arm and a leg they're they're free this is an advanced computer system cost a nominal Estrin get rid of the old sandwich vending machine in the lobby which costs us an arm and a leg to rent and no one use it then we have the expression pony up and if you tell someone to pony up you're you're just telling them to pay money and it's it's money that they owe that they should pay and sometimes it may be to settle a debt and you tell this other person like hey okay you need to pony up you need to pay some money so this is a very it's a very informal expression but it's one maybe you would hear somebody use this if you're watching a TV show or a movie and somebody needs to pay money for something and the other person might say hey okay you need to pony up you need to pay your money you need to pony up it's a company party and you're the CEO so pony up know if anyone should pair it should be you this thing but body goes to trial we're gonna pony up some serious upfront cash what you should do is have him sponsor you for the dance ask the manager to pony up a couple hundred bucks ten dollars a dance so if she makes it through 20 dances need to pony up $200 towards her class trip to DC then we have the expression put your money where your mouth is and this is one of my favorite expressions and it just means that that it could mean a couple of things it could mean that somebody is spending money in order to improve a bad situation that someone needs to put their money where their mouth is or you could say that that you are telling somebody that they need to spend money so that that you know that they mean what they say and they're not just talking that instead of just talking talking talking you would say okay look put your money where your mouth is you need to spend money to show me that you are being serious to to show me that what you're saying is true it is believable put your money where your mouth is and again I I guess I would say that this expression doesn't always have to be talking about money and spending money in another way it's telling somebody to basically will do what you say if you are talking and saying all these things and the other person maybe they don't believe you then they might say look okay let's see you put your money where your mouth is let's see if you do what you're saying put your money where your mouth is put your money where your mouth is that's you ten boots five against five never drink can't four drink with me and see you over laughs yeah put your money where your mouth is I would want to get the exhaust on that pretty base don't you put your money where your mouth is next is the idiom to make ends meet and this just means that you are earning enough in order to live that you're not you're not making a lot of money and you have all this extra money lying around if you make just enough in order to live then you could say that you are making ends meet or perhaps you may hear somebody say well you know we're just trying to make ends meet we're trying to make enough in order to live to make ends meet would you describe your financial circumstances I was struggling to make ends meet you're a waitress for six years and I could never make ends meet Tara and I are trying to buy a house or no struggling to make ends meet she put in the in the bushels and stop and sell it you know they had to you know make ends meet and stuff the next expression is to be loaded and loaded it's just an adjective and it's used to describe someone who has a lot of money who is very wealthy you could say this person is loaded he's loaded she's loaded I think well many of us out there we'd like to be loaded because well it's nice if you don't have to worry about money because there there are many of us out there just trying to make ends meet we just want to make enough money although it'd be nice one day to be loaded [Music] Sapperstein are the stuff we smash is worth nothing compared to that thing these guys must be loaded then we have the expression to look like a million bucks now first I I want to tell you that before I said that you don't use the word bucks when talking about a large sum of money except except with this expression to look like a million bucks or you could say to look like a million dollars it means the same thing but when you use this expression you are saying that a person looks very nice they look very elegant and you're talking about most of the time I think it's talking about the way they look the way they're dressed the way they've styled their hair and you could say wow you look like a million bucks this is a it's a way that you can give a compliment to someone so I think you would say this to somebody if there is a very formal event and everybody's getting dressed up and they they come out of the room and you see them for the first time and you could say wow you know you look like a million bucks you look like a million dollars I like I love it if somebody were to tell me hey Wes you know you look like a million bucks it would it would make me feel good and right now I want to tell all of you I have no idea what you wear right now but doesn't matter I think you you look like a million bucks you look like a million dollars I just wanted to let you know you look great okay great like a million bucks yeah million bucks I have never been able to wear that dress cuz I just couldn't pull it off and now you just look like a million bucks then I have a couple of phrases that mean the same thing and that is shell out and fork over and you can use these interchangeably and it just means to pay for something and you may hear somebody say oh you need to you need to shell out some cash if you want to buy this thing that costs an arm and a leg or you really you need to fork over some money if you want to purchase this thing again you can use these two phrases interchangeably they are very informal so I don't think you are necessarily going to use them all the time and conversational English but try to listen for them the next time you're watching a TV show or watching a movie to shell out to fork over to pay for something he's trying to get big bad Dwight to shell out for a huge repair job while lucky Jimbo gets a paid vacation yeah he most certainly is people to fork over he grabbed for that well I've been on the phone all afternoon yeah had to show up five thousand dollars to the brick house next is the expression rags to riches so if you say that somebody went from rags to riches then you are just saying that in the beginning they were very poor and then later on they became very wealthy so you're describing a person situation over time and you could say that they went from rags to riches or that they have a story that is rags to riches they were poor and then they became rich rags to riches so what is the secret of this rags to riches story it's like a true rags to riches story but I've always been the middle class to be just so much more real then we have the idiom bread and butter and if you are talking about somebody's bread and butter then you are just talking about their main source of income and that would pretty much be somebody's job and for example I could say well you know making these English lessons on YouTube it's our bread and butter this is the the primary way we are are trying to make a living right now we're making ends meet but hopefully maybe a lot in the future at some point will be loaded and it will be a story of rags to riches I just want to give you a quick little review because I think the more you hear these idioms and expressions being used the more likely you are to remember their meaning so if we're talking about bread and butter specifically you're talking about the the way what what somebody does to make their living and to make money their bread and butter restoration antiques my bread and butter I'm a scientist my ability to think is my bread and butter then we have foot the bill and to foot the bill just means to pay for something you are paying for some bill when I think of this idiom being used I think it's often used to describe a situation in which someone else might be paying for this thing someone else is footing the bill you could use it when if talking about yourself that you're trying to pay for this but I think quite often it's used when you're referring to another person paying for this thing so for example maybe if the next lesson I show up with these expensive clothes and I look like a million bucks and you think wait a second I know that these

YouTube videos this is Wes's that's his bread and butter he's just making ends meet right now I wonder who's footing the bill who's paying for those clothes because they cost an arm and a leg who's footing the bill you would not have to do a thing and Philippe will foot the bill you got your money's worth what the bill well you played Mother Teresa we estimate the damage at $75 and frankly we think it's terribly unfair that other taxpayers should foot the bill next is the idiom break the bank and to break the bank means that you are you try to buy something that really it costs too much and you cannot afford it and you could say that well it's going to break the bank you will go into debt because this thing cost too much cost an arm and a leg you can't afford it and it's gonna break the bank or maybe you're trying to tell someone that well hey don't worry I can't afford this it's not going to break the bank so you may hear this idiom being used in either the affirmative or the negative so in the affirmative you'd say well it's gonna break the bank we can't afford it or if you want to reassure someone that you can't afford this thing hey hey don't worry it's not gonna break the bank but to break the bank means that you can't afford it and you will likely go into debt are you looking for a mattress that won't break your back or the bank if you want to be like me you gotta make snap decisions we're going to break the bank at the Monty burns casino then we have the word penny pincher it is a compound noun because this it's talking about a person who really tries to save all their money and they they really just don't like to spend their money and you could say well yeah this person is cheap you could say he is a penny pincher or she is a penny pincher they just really want to save all their money and they don't want to spend anything a penny pincher how can you afford a made on what I'm overpaying you Oh you see mr. penny pitch I another job on the side then we have the expression pick up the tab or pick up the check and they mean the same thing and it just means to pay for a bill to pick up the tab or pick up the check often I I think of a restaurant and perhaps at the end of the meal the bill comes and you might say hey don't worry about it I'm gonna pick up the check or I'm gonna pick up the tab I am going to pay for this bill to pick up the tab or pick up the check I'll pick up the check okay you're gonna pick up the tab that's on great pick up the check I have to pick up the check your little games so there you have it those are some great idioms and expressions that are all related to money if you enjoyed this lesson and learn something new let me know in the comments I want you to write I want you to write you look like a million bucks that is a a great way to end the lesson and with a nice little compliment and just say you look like a million bucks that way I know that you learned some new idioms and expressions thank you guys so much for watching and I will see you next time

Most Difficult Poem to Say in English | THE CHAOS

if you're able to pronounce all of the words in this poem correctly then your English pronunciation is better than 99.9% of all native English speakers [Music] what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is where you want to be to practice and improve your English skills and today I have a pronunciation lesson for you it is a pronunciation poem the name of the poem is called the chaos this poem was written by Gerard noise Tran it's a and the reason he wrote this poem was just to show you how how crazy and ridiculous English spelling and pronunciation can be and as I read this poem I'm going to highlight the words that I pronounce incorrectly and I'm going to go through the entire poem with you today and and yeah it's long I haven't done this before I have never read the entire poem so I anticipate that I'm going to make quite a few mistakes the purpose of this lesson is to show you that that nobody's pronunciation is perfect everybody makes mistakes it's okay to make mistakes I am going to show you that right now alright so a quick little update if you want to listen to the entire poem and the correct pronunciation I will leave a link in the description to another video where you can do that and hear the poem in its entirety with perfect pronunciation because obviously I made a lot of mistakes sometimes I just misspoke very very easy in simple words other times they're just words that we don't really use anymore anyway enough making excuses for myself here's the poem dearest creature in creation study english pronunciation i will teach you in my verse sounds like corpse core hoarse and worse I will keep you suzy busy make your head with heat grow dizzy tear and i your dress will tear queer

NEW ENGLISH WORDS FROM 2021 | Build Your Vocabulary

hello welcome to the very first live lesson of 2022 um so the first thing i want to say is happy new year and because it's uh a new year i thought it would be appropriate for this first live lesson if we kind of take a just a step back and look in the rear view mirror and talk about uh some of the new words from 2021 we're going to talk about new english words that were really they they were added to some of the english dictionaries now the first thing i want to say this is just a fun casual lesson it's not um it's not always exact because some of the words and phrases that i'm going to share with you have been added to some dictionaries and maybe they have not been added to others so these are not words that i would say oh you need to go out and use them right away um i think it's good for your comprehension and i tried to choose words that i think will kind of have a future and they may be continued um people will continue using them in the future that's that's kind of what i tried to do now before we start uh and i show these words to you i just want to give you one last reminder because this is this is the last call if you would like to join my speaking course there's like 48 hours left classes are going to begin this next week it's all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly speak naturally you can check out the link in the description it'll take you right here to this course page that gives you a lot of information about the course like what's included uh how it works as well as like right here the cost for it's an eight week course classes once a week the cost is 159 you can see right here but you can use the disk uh special code speak 22 to get a 22 discount off the course so check that out uh link is in the description down below i'll even add it right here in the chat just for quick little reference right here so this is the last call if you are interested in speaking with me and improving your skills i see some people like uh takayo hello uh also uh has participated in the speak up course uh welcome i also want to say hello uh gustav um good to see you here hope vicky is feeling better sleepwalker uh angela lolly welcome welcome welcome i'll give more shout outs as we go through the lesson uh because i'm going to be asking you guys questions to see kind of how familiar you are with with some of these words now i i mentioned that this is kind of a just a fun casual lesson i i took these words from a couple of different sites like this one right here this is the first one um it's again it's not exact i'll link these as well down in the comments this is from uh reader's digest uh 25 new words added to the dictionary for 2021 as well as this site right here from pearson 10 new english words for 2021. again i'll leave that down in the description as well if you'd like to just see more of the words um from the list okay so let's uh let's begin all right with the we're talking about new words of 2021 if you're just joining us right now and the way i'm going to do this i'm going to give you the definition let you see if you can think of the word and then i'll tell you the answer okay so the first one that i have for you is this right here so this is the definition it's a person who shows extraordinary skill or expertise in a specified field or endeavor i believe this was added to merriam-webster dictionary the picture right there is a hint okay that is a clear hint as to what this word is so let me know in the chat if uh if you think you know what word that i'm talking about okay so i think thinking about the picture uh again very famous movie and thinking about the definition i think some of you would be able to come up with the word it's a very i mean very popular word from the movie uh i see master you're kind of you're kind of close uh that's not what we're looking for it's the name of like a type of person what would you what would you call it i'll give you a few more a few more seconds and then i'll tell you what the answer is okay so uh it's not an astronaut this is from the movie star wars okay and yes excellent good job sam uh the answer that we're looking for it's from the movie star wars is a jedi so if you haven't seen the movie then obviously i i would not expect you to know this but if you are familiar with the movie star wars series and they talk about the jedi jedi masters so kind of masters a little similar but uh the jedi is the the people that have the extraordinary skills or ability so again somebody might use this casually and say like wow they're just like a jedi to to show that this person is very talented in some way so again i think it shows you also how the language is changing and evolving and how um even like pop culture kind of gets its way in there so this is from star wars all right the next one uh let's see is this one right here here we go okay and this one i think is probably if you watch the news a lot i think this is probably a phrase that you've heard so i'll read the definition in case it's um you're having trouble seeing it with the picture and the text so this is talking about a person who works temporary jobs typically in the service sector as an independent contractor or a freelancer and again i'm trying to give you a hint with the picture so you can see that person holding a phone and it says uber so for example uber drivers would be considered like as having this type of job so there's one word that's very common with it it's actually a phrase and we'll see i i'll explain it once i tell you the answer but again this is i think this is a little challenging it is going to be a little difficult again this is a fun lesson i'm not saying you need to go out and use these words but i think these are words that you may hear from time to time um i think i said the news for this one because i think people governments are trying to figure out well how how should these employees be treated if this is what the type of job they have how how do we pay them do they get benefits so this is it's part of the conversation all right so let's see any guesses um see some people were putting in uh jedi for that last one that was good all right that's it's good some good guesses um so interesting no sleepwalk not downshifter um it is a freelance job but that's not what you would call these people i i say uber in particular because there was a big court case in uh not court case there was a big referendum in california that they were talking about this uh close not uh jane entrepreneur contractor again remember think about it these are words that are kind of just being added to some of the dictionaries so some of the words you guys are given that would describe these type of people but those words are already in the dictionaries and we've been using them for a while so the answer that i'm looking for all right well the new word the phrase that was added is a gig worker so you might hear people talk about a gig worker as somebody who has a temporary job you might hear people talk about the gig economy which is another collocation that you have different businesses in which they hire just like these temporary jobs so like i said like uber drivers would be considered gig workers they can work whenever they want they control their hours how how often they work and that is like uh that would be considered a gig worker typically the word gig if somebody were just to look that up um it means that you have a job and often people would use it when talking about like music and somebody who plays music and they get offered a job and they say yeah i have a gig saturday night in which case that they they are going to be doing a performance so gig i think is often associated with that but now with all of these businesses hiring temporary workers they they would be called like gig workers all right the next one uh so i'm guessing i'm guessing you guys are learning some new new words and phrases which is which is good um but again like i said this is this is really just for your comprehension you don't you can listen for these words but you don't have to go out uh and actually use them um some people said oh samithra said gig worker excellent perfect um and so as uh can it be used anywhere

i would say these are words and phrases probably that are more taken from like american english in the united states even though i feel like places like the uk australia canada people would also be familiar with them this next one it's not a word i was familiar with all right i've included it because it has to do with social media and so many people use social media nowadays and they're connected through social media so i thought this would be a fun one to share with you even though like i said i was not familiar with this word i'm curious to see if any of you know it but the the meaning of this is it's reading the news on social media and expecting it to be bad so much that you become obsessed with looking at updates all right and you're just i guess you're always on like facebook and just going through there looking at updates expecting it to be bad um which i think many many times a lot of stuff on social media is rather negative but what would you call this all right i'll be very impressed if uh if any of you get this because like i said i i was unfamiliar with this i had no idea that uh this word exists um and some of you uh wow csb knocked it out of the park yes all right so this i'll just tell you the answer uh because somebody got it uh debbie downer that's a good one uh is talking about a person who i think is like always kind of down or upset and you'd say somebody is a debbie downer in this case wow you guys like young 233 excellent um wow i'm impressed i the answer is doom scrolling and i had never i was not familiar with this and i think i understand where it comes from because if you're using social media you're scrolling through those updates and if you're scrolling through them expecting to just find bad negative things then you think of the word doom like everything's bad so this is referred to as doom scrolling and some of you wow you got that i'm very uh very impressed kudos kudos to you guys um the next one uh i'll i'll tell you if i'm familiar with the words as well and this is one that i think that i'm familiar with that i think has been used again quite often nowadays especially when you're talking about like news and what's happening in um you know with different people and activities and well let's let's just look at the definition and then you try to think of the answer so this is the the practice or tendency of engaging engaging in mass canceling as a way of expressing disapproval and exerting social pressure so this is a phrase okay it's two words and this is a phrase like i said that i think is has become a lot more commonly used probably in the last five years and people you know will get angry they'll express their disapproval and maybe try to put pressure on maybe a company so that this person loses their job and this whole idea is referring to cancel culture and some people are really against it some people are for it it really just depends on the situation but once again this is something that i think is happening more often nowadays which is a phrase that i think you will hear people talking about um when this goes on they're referring to cancel culture excellent uh perfect uh nietzsche hello you're new to the channel welcome excellent i always love hearing new people if you're new tell me just write your name in the chat or even in the comments tell me where you're from i always love hearing from new people so this is another one that i wanted to include because i do think it's a little more um it's a little more common something that's going been going on over the years i really

i didn't know that it was not a part of the dictionary i assumed that this word was um but i think it you know some dictionaries have started to add it um as it's become more accepted and more practice so the practice is you obtain needed funding typically like for starting a business by asking for like contributions from like a large group of people mostly from an online community and what is that what's that called what is that practice called if i want to i have some idea for some product and i need money to develop the product and then um manufacture the product and then try to sell it and i'm trying to raise money online asking for people to donate and contribute what is that what's that practice called so it's not uh you know again think of it um this way uh that you're not uh what was i trying to say like again some of you are throwing down words that i think are already part of the dictionary um so wait jane says a scam i guess it could be a scam sure it just depends like donate it's kind of like donating but not really again um yes zsb excellent uh gusta vicky perfect takayo uh nichia natalia uh you guys got it so the answer we're talking about crowdfunding is what this practice um is if you are trying to raise money um typically to start a business and you're getting people to contribute and donate online i think another part of crowdfunding is like when you i've never done this or i've been a part of it but i think like when you do this and you give money it's like you will get maybe the product in return and you're it's like you're getting a not like a sample but kind of like a prototype it's just starting out so it's not like just like you're giving just a donation and you're never going to see that money back i think typically with crowdfunding you do get something for contributing um to the business the next one all right let's keep moving along this is something that i had no idea about um but i thought it was interesting um so i wanted to share it with you guys okay so we're talking about it's an informal way this is what the def this is what the the online dictionary had um an informal way of responding to challenging or disparaging uh the claim or opinion of someone usually used in the phrase don't me so from what i was reading about this is that people would use this phrase don't me that's the that's the missing word that's this new word well kind of new word that has been added to the dictionaries don't me and the other hint that i would give you i gave you a keyboard there for two reasons thinking about like what this is something you will find on the keyboard but also i think it would be more commonly used when you're referring to like um social media and you're telling somebody that you maybe you don't want to be a part of this conversation or you don't want to be a part of this uh topic that they're talking about you say don't me okay he said don't hit me no not hit um i'll give you a hint because this is challenging i told you i never heard of this before i've never heard anybody use it i just thought it was fascinating showing how the the language is changing um we're talking about a symbol okay there there's your hint right there where and that's why i gave you the keyboard in that picture it is a symbol on the keyboard so what symbol would you use that you could complete and use that phrase don't um me all right it's a new again you guess you could say word but again i just told you it's not a word it's a symbol what would go in that blank think about social media all right how what do you have to do in order to include someone in on your conversation or discussion what do you need to do on social media all right people like don't shift no point no bother me yeah

i mean obviously people say yeah don't bother me uh that is in the dictionary ghost no okay maybe you'll find this interesting i did which is why i've included it at all right so i told you that if you are wanting you want to include somebody else in something that's happening like challenge or responding to somebody online you would put at and then their username and then they will receive some notification or like it's they'll be a part they'll be added to the conversation and in this case like it's like you're telling somebody i don't want to be don't at me is the way um you would use it and i think that's how it's often used again i've never heard this being used but i wanted to include it because again it's like the language is changing a little more it made me think of the the other symbol hashtag which became very popular uh with with twitter and kind of like creating like this this environment for a conversation to take place and you would add a hashtag and it's like that symbol kind of it became a word added to the dictionary and now at is the same way so uh yeah don't at me exactly that's that's the way you would put it don't at me and i guess you're telling somebody don't include me in part of this conversation okay right what do you think um all right excellent uh some of you got you got this one um perfect uh zsb wow uh close a addl you know you got it right that's true so we're talking about um the word that he was using is truthiness truthiness and again truth is a noun truthiness would also be a noun so it's kind of like the you not really a similar meaning truth is like yes that this is fact truthiness would just be like well it seems to be fact but really there's no evidence to support it another reason why i wanted to share this word is because you have that suffix at the end and this is a way in which people are constantly modifying the language and the language is evolving so you think of um like a word like happy it's an adjective but happiness we change it into a noun so in this case truth again is a noun your truthiness it's like you're changing it into another noun that has a slightly different meaning but i i think that's uh i wanted to point that out the way people use suffixes to kind of modify the language this is something that shakespeare did quite often and a lot of those um a lot of the words that that he was using at that time became very common words nowadays the next one is uh well we're talking about words in you know added in 2021 of course the pandemic has been a large part of conversation uh the last um couple of years and there are words that have come out of that and i think this is one that's also kind of related um to the pandemic the meaning you can see um not having to physically touch or interact with people all right what would you say um what would you say if you have any guesses again this is not a word that i was familiar with it's not a word that i've used i understand it because again this one also uses a suffix to kind of modify a word that i think is pretty well known so the meaning is not having physic to physically touch or interact with people all right what would you say um again remember these are all words that are being added new to the dictionary um so some of the the words i think you have the same you're on the right track but like uh words like isolation they're already a part of the dictionary um let's see we have groundless all right so no not the ghosting so this social distance again that was a phrase that i think was added last year um even remote that's another phrase facetime them um so what we're talking about is well i'll show you the word and then i think you'll understand it because i said this is another example of a suffix being added that changes it we're just saying contactless so you're taking the word contact and you're adding less which is a suffix that means without so it's really like you're saying that oh it's without contact so maybe you're saying like yeah like this we're gonna have like this concert but it's going to be contactless that you're not going to have to physically touch or interact with other people there's going to be distance between them so once again again we're using this suffix to modify a word that is already there um and i think you could do this with a lot of different words um and and you may hear people do this informally so for example just giving you an example wanting to use less again if i were to say like oh i don't have a pen i'm like a pen like this um even though i do have one if i say i don't have a pen i'm penless i'm without a pen so i think l-e-s-s is a common suffix that people will use to you know say that they're without something but in this case i guess it's become common enough that it's been added to the dictionary all right so sticking on that theme of like kind of the pandemic and the influence that it's had this is another i think example that's become um this is a phrase that it's been abbreviated and the abbreviation i guess has been added to the dictionary um i was familiar very familiar with the phrase i didn't know i had never used it as an abbreviation but again i think i'm kind of behind the times when it comes to using abbreviations so the hint is the picture so this is um an abbreviation for what is this person doing in the picture so that my question is like what is this person doing it's about the picture so what's happening in this picture all right and then maybe think of the abbreviation that could go along with that all right what do you think um any any guesses all right so hello rodrigo from brazil how are you all right excellent um so yeah i think you guys are actually doing pretty well um guessing some of these and again if you're just joining us we're talking about new words that have been added to the the dictionaries in 2021 um things that are going on and they kind of yeah we end up adding these new words so this one like what is this person doing in the picture and then see if you can kind of extrapolate the abbreviation from that okay close um like interviewing cropping f being i'm guessing like facebooking like close i think you got kind of on the the right side so the phrase yes zsb uh got it wow zsb you're kind of that's impressive you got quite a few of these googling all right that's a good guess i guess what i was trying to get with this picture this person is working but where are they they're at home so they're working from home and that's a phrase that i think has become very common um talking about especially some of the changes because of the pandemic more people are working from home and i guess instead of saying the entire phrase people have just begun to abbreviate it and they just say wfh um i like i said i'm not too familiar with the abbreviation i've heard people talk about work from home it's something that i think many of you have heard about and i guess it's become so popular that people will just say wfh instead of having to say work from home or probably i think more in the context of maybe if you're writing an informal email or sending a text message um this is when people will typically more likely abbreviate things all right so uh i think you guys kind of got that um excellent uh who else uh zera alhatti excellent good job um some people said remote work that's also it's kind of the same a similar thing remote you can kind of do anywhere you might not be at home you could be at a coffee shop but that's also a very similar idea so this is let me give you the definition um this is a phrase that i've used in before um i didn't realize that it's something that was maybe just added to the dictionaries but we're talking about a firm refusal or rejection of something like you you offer me something and i say you know that is a um like what what what what would come at the end of that this is a phrase okay uh so you're rejecting an offer and you would say yeah that is a or i'm going to take a on that two it's it's two words all right it's a phrase and i look like i said i think this is a good phrase um it's kind of casual uh probably one that maybe you've heard of but like i i didn't realize that it's something that was just added to one of the dictionaries but because of that i did want to share it with you so okay um talk to the hand no not talk to the hand uh even though that's a good phrase denied denied again that would that's that's been in the dictionaries that is in the dictionaries turned down as a common phrasal verb okay caroline ralph you're on the right track you both use the word pass so pass is part of the phrase so if it's a firm refusal you'd say oh that is a um pass what word would go with pass it's a firm refusal all right that's i'm kind of giving you a little bit more of a hint uh a go away no close uh no way no so we're pass is part of it and if it's a firm refusal you're gonna say you know i'm gonna take a hard pass on that a hard pass would be that that firm refusal and some of you you guys are putting in again other phrases that yeah they mean the same thing you could also use a no-go um but yeah i think uh a hard pass is a phrase that i've used before and i i again it was in one of those articles i've left those links down in the description if you'd like to check those out um a refusal is like you're turning down something you're saying no and again you could just say a pass i'll take a pass but if it's a firm rejection you can say yeah that's a hard pass all right the next one this is a little more informal and this is probably maybe more slang which is why i've kind of put it at the end of the lesson it's not one that i've used or i was familiar with i think maybe more common among younger generations but the definition is an act of bragging or showing off okay and the hint that is uh the picture that is a hint that's a clear hint um hopefully and i imagine maybe some of you will get this what do you think it is if somebody's bragging they're showing off um people may say use this word and again it's not one that i'm more familiar wow you guys are rocking this one did you know it or did you know it just because of the picture uh excellent job uh sleepwalker uh zias carolee and jay are angela um yuckbenier yeah in this picture that the person is flexing so a flex flex is like the act of bragging or showing off it would be used as a noun though um when i was looking into this and they say like oh somebody could say maybe you're bragging about something and they think it's strange to say wow that's a weird flex or that's a strange flex like you're strange that you're bragging about this thing uh so i think in this context it's used as a noun even though like bragging to brag is a verb or to show off but people will use flex to refer to the act the act of bragging all right let's continue this is another one that i was i was not familiar with um and i think flex is a it's it's definitely more informal if you're you're wondering about it um this one is the action of becoming or acting like an adult and i think this one is a little also a little more casual informal possibly like a bit of slang um weird flex but okay yeah exactly that's a weird flex that's kind of how it was used in the the article that i was reading i think they used it in that way if somebody's bragging about something so what do you think uh the action of becoming or acting like an adult and in this word this word includes one of the words in the definition so i think by giving you that hint maybe you'll be able to put it together and let's see yes sam uh got it i don't know i guess some of you i i didn't realize i don't know i don't i i don't know if any of you open some of those links uh beforehand we're checking it out as we go through this that's always that's also a possibility um but yes the the correct answer is adulting um the action of becoming or acting like an adult i think this word has been more commonly used among like younger generations who i guess are expected to maybe try to act like an adult or they they're trying to pretend like they are and they could refer to adulting the action of becoming or acting like an adult it's a new word for me it's a new word for 2021 it's been added it's been added to some of the dictionaries now that doesn't mean all of these words have been added to all the dictionaries i told you this is just a fun informal vocabulary lesson really kind of trying to well kind of show you how the language has been changing even a little bit so these are the words that we've talked about in today's lesson what i'd like you to do is tell me in the comments which one of which is your favorite which which of these words do you like or have you heard about or maybe you've even used before uh let me know down in the comments because of course i again subscribe to the channel so that i i can become your teacher then that would be great and uh yeah that that's kind of all i got i hope you guys have a happy new year um and i of course i wish you all the best um in 2022 so let me give some last shout outs uh say thank you guys for joining uh let's see thank you angela zera um kayla kasia speak 22 for 22 off the price yes that's correct takayo good to see you again takayo i will see you soon uh sani sam lolly i didn't know any of these words yeah i told you i i was not familiar with many of them as well i just thought uh um that it would be interesting to share uh some of these words and i think some of them will become probably continue to be popular into the into the future um sam jane uh thank you guys for being here uh let's see uh somebody from korea it's 1209 wow in korea you're with me late excellent thank you thank you a little little midnight english study i love it uh annyeonghaseyo so yeah okay i'll just end it i could keep reading goodbyes all day um thank you guys for being here

NEW ENGLISH WORDS TO ADD TO YOUR VOCABULARY | QUIZ LESSON

so today we are going to talk about some new English words of 2018 that's coming up [Music] welcome to today's lesson which is more of a vocabulary lesson so we're gonna talk about some of the new words that have been added this year we have a list of different words that have been added we don't know each other's words and we're going to try to guess what the words mean I'm gonna test our own English vocabulary and see if we're familiar with these words these are all words that have been added to the Oxford English Dictionary so that's that is the source that we're using for this and now we're gonna quiz each other and see if we know these new words some of them are easy some are really weird so just a fun challenge don't feel like okay you need to know these words in order to use this word yeah you don't some of these are probably inconsequential or I mean they're very specific for different purposes others might be more common than others but we'll let you know alright who wants to do you want to go first sure I'm going first no I'll guess first okay I'll give you an easy one the first planet yeah start out easy the first word is even-keeled if someone's even-keeled it's kind of means like they're well balanced that somebody a person who's well balanced in their I don't know that well balanced in their manners or their demeanor and their personality kind of am i right it's just calm steady you know emotionally or mentally stable yeah yeah that's the meaning so like an example sentence like Wes is even-keeled motional rock all right you ready yeah yeah this is I I don't know if this is gonna be easier or not barbershop er a barbershop yeah it is a noun so it is a barbershop er okay thinking about a barbershop er and I could give you I'll give you a hint if some hints if I mean I'm guessing you don't have any immediate I'm guessing you see that a person works in a barber shop one who goes to a barber shop maybe one or the other mmm think about a barber shop er I'll give you one word I'll give you one word I think you get it sing Oh like a quartet like a barbershop where's a person who sings in a quartet such a weird word well there is like the the the idea of a barbershop quartet yeah is it in a barbershop or a member of a barbershop singing group a member of a barbershop singing group is a barbershop I feel like some of these words they they've maybe been around for a while and finally the you know Oxford is just like okay we'll add the word they've been around but maybe not slang or expressions that finally get added okay this one you might guess you might not guess I I actually didn't guess it and then I had to look it up but then it makes sense so it makes sense the way it is but it just anyway it's hetero social hetero social social yeah hetero social means somebody who's very sociable with the opposite sex if you're a guy and you're wanting to always be your personable you're talkative with other females other women I was checking the definition I'm thinking of like a a heterosexual would then be somebody who is attracted to somebody the opposite sex so hetero social somebody who's very social with the opposite sex I mean you're not wrong I just don't think you're it's not it's kind of in the neighborhood of what is it so it's kind of a long definition but it's saying that somebody who's hetero social it's basically somebody who has been shaped by the social standards of expectations of their of their gender sex gender whatever you want to call it okay well I was wrong then that's not talking about being social with somebody it's the kind of your norms and your values are confined to the way society expects you to be as a man however it also says designated social interaction between men and women so that is a multiple meaning word so basically it has to do with the interaction between the genders uh uh hetero so and kind of acting within you are like what's determined to be your okay which I I actually really like this word I thought it was really cool I think it's us I call this psychology word I could see that oh oh oh you're putting your claws in me stop it we have a cat oh it hurts okay so the next word I think I think you could get this one Beerfest Oh a beer fest a beer fest yeah if I were to guess I think a beer fest it's it's um yeah let's go the beer flavor your fist of all like were you drinking a lot of beer like some kind of event that celebrates beer an organized event at which a variety of beers are served so what would be the most well known beer fest Oktoberfest exactly oh my it's my turn okay this one you should guess I'll just say it's I agree what it sounds like mm-hmm well maybe I should have given you this hint later I'm too late now sorry I don't know it's a funny seed ball seed ball a seed ball heceta ball okay it's just a seed that's a ball like or you you form a bunch of seeds into a the condition of being a hipster okay also there's not make sense with the suffix like the yeah hipster dumb yeah the state or quality of being a hipster yes or also the world of hipsters nobody really knows it's just somebody that's very does know nobody does really know I don't know I've never been called a hipster you had no surprise no even though I'm so trendy next word okay this is an easy one I think many of you would know it Facebook as a verb meaning like what you're sending a message to somebody on Facebook mm-hmm yeah okay to Facebook someone okay have you ever faced well we'd like actually use that word like hey Facebook me yeah I'm sure I have was doesn't know I don't like as a hipster that's not what we do just say send me a message on facebook I don't think yeah I don't think I've done it often but I'm sure I have okay I'll Facebook you sounds familiar okay this one you might not guess either but it's also kind of logical maybe you'll guess a Jackson night Jackson Heights a Jackson I think historical a Jackson night mm-hmm well somebody who studies Andrew Jackson close if my hint is historical I'd say whatever group of people that are studying or adhering to yeah the principals of Andrew Jackson yeah it's just the person who's who's supporting you right like the policies and principles of Andrew Johnson and okay yeah which that word may be rather irrelevant to people that are not from the United States right but if you ever fall in love with the policies of Andrew Jackson just in case you're out there I just love Andrew Jackson you know you could be a Jackson how about thinking get this one and this is a common word binge-watch okay yeah yeah I'm surprised it was it hasn't been a dictionary yes no it's added this year with these streaming services like Netflix and well it's just I'm guessing it means to watch a show like to watch many episodes of a show in a row mm-hmm like a marathon to watch them one after the other and quickly yeah to binge watch you guys ever binge watched I mean we have I don't really binge watch that much literally we do like with the office if you soon as seen it so many times yeah I guess but we put on like a lot of shows that are just kind of in the background they're not paying attention not like binge watch where I'm focused on us I have TV show for life for 20 hours or so I have I don't know my name with like 5 yeah ok Oh Mimi oh this was so easy you're gonna guess it under mental I'm judgmental not judgmental yes mental ok I'm guessing that they've just allowed that prefix to be Ani it was non-judgmental before and now it's unjust people would say not judgmental and right let's say oh well let's just make it ungentle mm-hmm so you can be uninteresting all right the next one hip hop hip hop hip hop hip hop is it like a mix between hip hop and pop music yeah yeah combines the elements of hip hop and pop okay I have no idea like I was actually looking to try and find some examples of like well who do they who do they consider hip hop oh is it like you know Eminem and Rihanna they had that song when they're like it's alright but I like the way it burns and he's like rapping OH [Music] that's alright because I like the waiter but that was wrapped doesn't M&M my game I'm too old for this I don't know I don't know I have no idea it's a new word so I imagine maybe it's a new genre that they're classifying music I'm guessing you guys think we've heard hip hop before we just didn't know what it was I think this is an again straightforward even though it's gonna seem a little difficult but just think of the most straightforward answer you can give why are you trying to cheat even if it's not the word McKee derson no ilysm evidentialism is the word evidentialism yeah the quality of something being evident and appearing too evident mm-hmm like evidence uh-huh uh-huh like having evidence to support whatever it is you're trying to say or do or evidentialism yeah kind of it says any of various theories asserting the quality and traditional person's evidence for a belief is the primary factor by which the belief is justified so basically saying that that if your belief is that you believe that you're that you have to base something off of evidence okay that's it must be rooted rooted with evidence yeah that's my take on this definition very long definition yeah I think this one is a difficult one microaggression oh I know that so I think it's been around in the political sphere a lot like talking about like maybe like political issues like feminism or racism or something when you when you do when you commit an act of microaggression I think it means like these little things that you say or do that are not like violent towards somebody but they're still kind of hostile towards somebody mm-hmm marginalizing yeah this group yeah yeah no exactly a statement action regarded as an indirect indirect subtle or unintentional to discrimination against a marginalized group bubble head a bubble head somebody whose head looks like a bubble no you need to say hey you're a bubble head no hey look at that bubble head over there but think of something that sounds like it Georgie the Chi has a little bit of a bubble head are you gonna tell us what it is or it's kind of a synonym with airhead then somebody who's not intelligent not smart unaware yeah so it's just somebody instead of a bubble head that's new for me maybe that was you are slang or something and then it became a word bubble hood I remember reading about it it was maybe that's something that kids are using now like hey this guy's a bubble head no it had something to do with like Irish etymology using that no yeah like hey you bubble head okay here's one a gadjo oh I know that I'm I was curious if you it's it's cuz it's from from Roma it's a stranger isn't it yeah yeah i gadget like I saw it's it's a it's a Romani word used to talk about a non Roman a person yeah so you used to talk about somebody who's not gypsy yeah the gaucho is it's it was added yeah this year okay the last one that I have is hippyish hippie-ish well ich is kind of means something is like or similar to something else so if somebody is hippyish they are kind of like kind of like or similar to a hippie that's right hippie-ish so again yeah if you don't know hippies a hippie is that's like a term from gosh from the 60s yeah hippie is like somebody who was you know all about freedom and love peace like very much into nature drugs whatever trees yeah trees hippies more one more I want to ask you I want to ask you this alright ready the another word zeus like oh it's an adjective like this could either mean like zeus don't overthink it it's just like being like somebody is zeus like assembling the ancient Greek god of goofs characteristics befitting of zeus for example wes is zeus like angry I didn't think Seuss was necessarily well I think all those always anything most that many of those gods were angry but I feel like Zeus I think of like strength and power and oh yeah yeah yeah lightning yeah yeah okay actually Jackson knowledge well we hope that you learned some new words today I know yeah I definitely learned some new words so in the comments why don't you tell us a new word that you have learned and share with us it doesn't have to be from this year or this lesson but any new word that you've learned that you thought was interesting which oh can I ask something here we go what which one of these words today that we've talked about do you like the most I like the ones that you told me sure I think I would go with bubble head it's so simple why which one which one do you like from yours yeah can you read them again I got you I got you gotcha okay how many words so if you guys like this lesson and you feel like you've learned some new words from this year please hit that like button and as always thank you so much for watching and we'll see you next time thank you

NEW WORDS from 2020 | Vocabulary Year in Review

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is wes this is interactive english and here at this channel if this is your first time here uh we're just all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today i have a i guess it's a vocabulary lesson for you it's really a fun lesson and the reason why i say it's a fun lesson is because we're going to talk about new words from 2020 so the the new year has passed 2020 is in our rear-view mirror and we're i'm sure all of us are just looking ahead to 2021. we're i guess everybody i'm sure everybody's excited for this year a lot more than last year last year was just uh it was a difficult rough year not a great year uh but i want to look back at some of the words that have been added to the english language because every month pretty much there are new words that are added to the english language and they're added to online dictionaries and i want to take a look at a few of them and that's why i said it's a fun lesson because these are words that they're not going to be used in everyday conversation they're pretty casual they're pretty informal but it is stuff that you might hear from time to time and some of them are more popular than others and i'll try to to highlight that as we go through so i do want to give a quick shout out to some of you who have joined me today i love hearing from you guys please say hello to me in the comments in the chat uh welcome uh patrice happy new year uh takayo good to see you catrudus welcome happy new year angela lara tatau lavina hello wendell welcome thank you guys so much for joining me on uh on this saturday the second day of the new year so this is going to be a little bit of uh kind of maybe like a quiz lesson what i'm going to do is before i tell you the word i'm going to show you a picture that is like a hint and i'll tell you a little bit about the meaning of the word see if you can try to guess it and then i'll tell you what word i'm talking about and again these are probably words that you may not be familiar with because well because they're new words there are new words that have been added to english in 2020 and the source that i used for this was dictionary.com not all of these words will be found in all dictionaries i think over time words get added to certain dictionaries and others may not add them so i use dictionary.com as my reference for this list because if you go on to another online dictionary they may not have these words listed so disclaimer that's one thing i wanted to tell you let's start um let's start with this right here okay here's your here's your first picture as a hint for this new word from 2020 it is a burger looks very it looks pretty delicious to me kind of hungry right now uh so this is part of the new word and it's talking about something that is irrelevant is really what you're trying to say if there is like an accusation and oh this person they did this and then you try to say well this is irrelevant there nothing came out of it nobody could prove this accusation to be true it's just a big what what was this new word from 2020 uh it is a hamburger it is a yummy burger i will give you guys that the new word from 2020 is a nothing burger so i i told you that i think often people might use this in the context of an accusation oh this happened and then perhaps people look into it and they don't really find anything that was really bad that happened and say oh it was just a big nothing burger so i think this is a word that you might hear probably in talking a little bit more about politics because in politics there's a lot of accusations flying around and people might say well this is just a big nothing burger it's not that important it's a way of calling something such as an accusation you're saying it is irrelevant okay so you get the idea so i'm gonna give you a the picture is kind of a hint and we'll see all right um but uh welcome to these guys if you're just joining excellent thank you uh hello lupna karina uh gavard mahdi excellent thanks thanks for joining let's look at the next one okay here here is a picture of michael jordan uh some of you are probably familiar with michael jordan he's a he was doesn't he does not play basketball anymore but he was a very famous basketball player and this is a word that it's an acronym and this is an acronym that i think is more common which is why i've put it up on this list it was added as a well new word acronym of 2020 because i think people are just using it more and more so michael jordan he was the best some people would say he was the and it's really an acronym i'd be very impressed if some of you get this uh get this correct so michael jordan was the greatest of all time that is the acronym greatest of all time and if we just take that first letter of each of those words it is the goat so i know when many of you think of goat you think of the animal of course but if somebody's talking about uh like a professional athlete uh like football people might say oh leno messi he's the goat he is the greatest of all time michael jordan the goat the greatest of all time that is what this acronym means and i i told you i think it was added people start to use it this is more informal in conversation in speech and then it starts to as more people start to use it i think that's when words get added to the dictionary so this was a new word it's an acronym from 2020 if you say somebody's the goat the greatest of all time the next picture all right excellent angela wow did you get lavina did you guys get that excellent uh i like the i like the emoji body excellent this is the next picture this is another word that i think is has become very common and you can see in the picture this woman is having a video conference online you can see other people and it's actually the name of a company okay that is your hint it's the name of a company vu pencil i'm the goat oh thank you i really appreciate that uh it's the name of a company and it's become a word because it became so popular last year uh during the pandemic more people businesses were moving online and i say it's the name of a company similar to people use google now as a word it's the name of a company but somebody might search for something and they say oh let's let's just google it all right excellent uh gettrudis yasmin wow you guys all right i'm guessing probably you have been maybe using this platform like i have zoom that's what i'm talking about so you and notice that it's in lower case it's a lowercase letter zoom and you might just say to somebody oh let's just zoom this weekend and in that case they're talking about having a video conference to zoom it would be used as a verb to zoom and if you are going to use it especially in writing it would be very informal you would use the the lowercase letter zoom so uh that kind of brings me i actually use this platform it's just to communicate with a person or a group of people over the internet you're video chatting to zoom and i do use this we use this for uh the new course which i wanted to tell you about real quickly we have classes on zoom if you would like to improve your speaking and practice more speaking in 2020 check out uh our new speaking course that's going to start very soon it is a 10-week course classes are once a week and again this course you have classes with me this class is all about just trying to help you practice and improve your speaking skills and we do a lot of pronunciation there is so many different speaking topics that we discuss so let me put some information it's down in the description and i'm also going to put a link right here in the chat boom uh right there and if you use the voucher code speak up 10 you can get a 10 discount on the course so if you want to find out more information click on the link you can find more about class times prices but you must sign up by january 10th okay so that is our little promotion and as you can hear yes there is there is our little baby crying in the background she just woke up from her nap and she's not very happy about waking up from the nap let's let's continue okay um it's a nothing burger it's a nothing burger uh it is important to me but it right now it's irrelevant for the lesson it's nothing burger let's just move on here is the next picture right here so this is a word that i was actually not familiar with this word and you can see in the picture there's a lot of social media images and what it is talking about is parents sharing a lot of a lot of pictures a lot of things about their children on social media and it's become a word it's actually a verb and if you have any any idea take a guess so that's what it is it's parents sharing things on social media about their children and what this is called i didn't know this word before to share it so you've taken the word share and parent and you've combined them to sharant it means to frequently use social media to share photos and other details information about one's child this is a word that's probably more used for people especially families they have children i think we all know um people that do this and you see it in social media they're just constantly sharing stuff uh about their children we do it too if you guys follow us of course you see pictures of our baby girl up there i try i don't think we do it too much but again maybe maybe some people think we might i don't know here is the next word um okay let me explain this this is i couldn't find a good picture this is talking about technology all right and it's another word where it's been combined with uh something another word that means when there is when there's a problem so what the meaning of this is it's talking about when all right let me find it it is it's a negative reaction or backlash against big tech companies like facebook and google sometimes a lot of people get angry at these big tech companies there's a backlash and they would call that that situation what all right i told you the word too that you would combine it with backlash technology backlash against these companies and you could say there is a techlash this is a new word from 2020. if you guys are just joining us i'm talking about new words from 2020 that were added to the english language and again i'm referencing dictionary.com so a tech lash is talking about a strong negative reaction uh or backlash against the largest tech companies okay so uh excellent uh maybe some of you got that uh hopefully wow technox is new for you abraham excellent it was kind of new for me as well uh thank you daniel i appreciate that here is the next uh the next word that we're going to talk about here is your picture guy giving a thumbs up let me explain let me give you some context so you know what i'm talking about really the picture i couldn't find a good one but it's talking about the phrase am i right and people will use this phrase at the after they say something like they're trying to have somebody agree with them and you would say am i right like what do you think about this am i right how about this am i right and what's happened is people say that am i right and it's actually become a word now am i right and this was added to dictionary.com am i right this was new for me i had no idea what was going on uh with this word am i right i've heard about people using the phrase at the end of something when they want to they make an observation they want the other person to agree and they would say am i right and apparently it's gotten blended together into one word now am i right all right so that is another new word from 2020.

let's keep going i have some more for you all right here is this is actually a word that i heard a long time ago i had some friends that would say this more is like slang you're saying that something is really great it's really cool i've given you a picture of sauce there are three different sauces in that picture and that is part of the word sauce and you'd say it's really cool it's really great it's more like i said a bit of slang i think younger people would tend to use this when i was um working a long time ago as when i first heard this word and it was it was uh i think some people that i was hanging out with they were in their early twenties and they would say something is really cool it's really great and they sauce is a part of the word so that is sauce uh it's not no well junk food i like junk food but it's a good guess but that's not the word wow angela excellent perfect the word is awesome sauce so i told you that i think a long time ago this was more just slang that people would use to say something is really cool it's really great but in 2020 this word was added to the dictionary i would still say that it is a bit of slang and it really depends on who you're talking to if you want to try to use it if you want to have a little fun so instead of saying something is awesome saying it's great you could say awesome sauce all right then we have uh okay here is the meaning awesome it's used to say something is good impressive or awesome let's keep going here is your next picture and let me explain so i've given you uh several different colors and the colors are a little similar and if i were to say well what do you think about um this color right here is that purple and you might say well it's like purple this is actually a word that i talked about in a very recent lesson about things that textbooks might not teach you and you want to say something similar it's like this and you can use a suffix and you can now you can use it as just one word and i taught you this in the video uh i think it was last week or two weeks ago and when i was putting together this lesson i realized wow it was actually added as a separate word and if you want to say well it's it's like this you can just say this one word is would if you say oh is that is that purple and you say uh or that is that purple yes i think you guys saw the lesson yes takayo uh liamur sid mzz catrudus lavina ish that is right uh i had no idea this is it's added as a suffix to the end to say well something's purplish it's kind of like that and i told you in the lesson that a lot of people will some people i shouldn't say a lot but people may just use this as a standalone word to say it's like something or similar to it but apparently it was added to the dictionary in 2020-ish then we have well i'll give you the meaning it refers to something that is similar near or about you could say approximately ish then here this is a phrase and i think by the picture because this this is a phrase that was added to the dictionary because i think we so many people talked about it in 2020 because of the pandemic so in the picture you can see the the woman is trying to stay away from that guy they want to keep somewhat i don't want to tell you the the the word that i'm thinking of because then i think you'll know it it's too much of a hint but in 2020 even now people would say we need to do what what do we need to do that's what this picture is we talk about it a lot in 2020 and i still think we do need to do it now excellent you're absolutely correct uh social distance great job catrudus abraham suhuna uh limar rue so social distance refers to this right here a safe or appropriate distance or amount of space between two people or between people in a group this is a phrase that i think people would use even before but because of the pandemic because of coven 19 it became people were talking about it a lot so that's why this phrase was added to the dictionary in 2020. let's look at another i believe this is another phrase yes and this is another i guess you could say i think it's a kind of a problem that sometimes it happens so look at the picture it's a picture of a bubble and inside the bubble there is an eye and typically that eye would stand for what perhaps you're traveling somewhere you go to the airport and you see you might see uh an eye that looks like that and you're like oh i need to go there because i need to find out some more what so think about what the i stands for and then it's inside the bubble all right so yes katrina's the i stands for information but what are we talking about in information what an information bubble so this is a phrase that i think is used it's been used more because i think of social media and people you could say people live in their own information bubble and what it means is that the and i'll just read it the environment in which one's exposure to news entertainment social media it just represents one perspective and either does not represent the rest of it or maybe it misrepresents it and you could say that people live in their own information bubble that if i believe something i'm only going to find news that really tells me the same thing and then i'll just i just live in my own information bubble people might also refer to this as a filter bubble as well so this was a new phrase that was added to 2020 in 2020 an information bubble and i think this happens to i think this happens to all of us because we use social media for example i use youtube and if i look at something on youtube they they tip they will tend to give me more thing videos just like that so it's almost like it's confirming whatever i'm watching and i think on youtube people are able to live in different information bubbles and it's just as long as we're we realize that we can try to get out of it uh but it's a good phrase added to the dictionary in 2020. uh here again this is a word that i was not aware of but i'm giving you two dogs right here and again the names were pushed together to create a new word which is a i guess i don't want to maybe it's a new breed of dog i don't know so if you know the names of those two dogs then you could probably guess what the new word is so i'm giving you a picture of the two dogs i told you the the two the names were pushed together to form this new word in 2020. uh i'm sure the dogs existed before that if they were if people would breed them together so we have um [Music] we have a beagle and a pug all right those are the two dogs a beagle and a pug and if we put them together apparently you get a puggle so that is a new word that was added to the dictionary in 2020 i had no idea and you have a beagle and a a pug is a puggle i'm sorry i didn't i should have gotten a picture of it because i really i don't know what a puggle looks like but if you go on google you could google it again i'm using that as a verb you can google google it uh puggle and perhaps you'd see some pictures so it is a cross between a pug and a beagle let's look at another one this is another phrase so think about what this situation is and probably you might be able to figure it out it's uh it's kind of an event or activity that started to become more and more popular and i think the phrase has been around for a while and then it was added to the dictionary in 2020 and this is something that you might see on the news it started out with this people making a cake now you can see that one cake has blue inside the other cake is pink think about what that stands for and then if you can guess what that is perhaps you might know what phrase i'm talking about so typically people might do this and they would create a cake um for a baby shower uh or maybe not a baby shower this is actually kind of a different party and what they would do is the the blue cake would mean a boy and the pink would mean a girl and what people would do is they'd have this party or event and they'd have their friends over and then they were or family and then they would cut the cake and it would reveal if it's a boy or a girl and they would call this what abraham democrats or republicans close good guess uh finger no it's i'm talking about the phrase gender reveal and you would hear people talking about a gender reveal party or there was a gender reveal event where you're going to reveal the gender of the newborn baby and i said it started out i think a while ago years ago with people doing cakes and this last year i saw like it got crazier and crazier the the types of parties that people were having there was one in california where they they set off like these ridiculous fireworks shows and it actually started a fire and it started a forest fire and it was really silly because it was very dry and people were like why were they setting off fireworks at this time of year and it really became a big problem and they were like oh it was a gender reveal party so it started out i think with cakes and i think some people still might do this but there have been these other more crazy parties where people are doing all sorts of things that i think is a little too much but that's what it is it's a gender reveal party or it's a type of event so these are well i'll give you the meaning it's a public disclosure of the gender of an unborn baby by the soon-to-be parents uh parent or parents and i'm sure i'm guessing if people are having a gender reveal party probably they will start sharing at some point later on and they're just sharing all those photos on social media this is the word list that we talked about today and just to give you my opinion as to which ones i think are a little more common i think goat is something if you like sports and you listen to sports that is a an acronym that you will hear or you could probably use if you're having a conversation zoom that is another word especially in 2020 i think people were using a lot more uh i also think that depending on the people you're communicating with the age group if it's a younger group of people maybe they'll say that something is awesome sauce ish i do think is a prefix that again people might use to say yeah it's similar and you again you could say like uh purplish or red ish you could actually you would use it as the suffix at the end of a word but you may just use it on its own social distance of course that's very common people are we're still talking about it we're still doing it right now as we should just to be safe i hope all of you are staying safe staying healthy um and i think information bubble is a phrase that i think you will likely continue to hear in the future because this is stuff that's that's still going on and i don't know how i don't know how it's going to stop i think people just like to find out information that really supports the things they already believe in so these are some these are all new words uh from 2020 that were added to the dictionary again i referenced dictionary.com hopefully some of them were new for you this was more just a fun vocabulary lesson if you did like the lesson and you learn something new please hit that like button i would really appreciate it uh thank you guys uh so much for joining me remember if you do want to improve your speaking practice your speaking skills in 2020 check out our course you would take lessons with me yours truly uh and our speak up course i just threw another link in the chat there's links down in the description thank you guys for joining me today give some shout outs thank you lori john uh lomer thank you awesome oh i'm awesome sauce you're awesome sauce uh marty crazy dove is it a noun i don't know if you're talking about uh which word uh maybe if i was talking about ish i don't know actually if we're if you're asking about ish i'm not sure about the part of speech i'm guessing it would be maybe an adjective i'd have to look at i'd have to check that out uh almar thank you for joining me um give some shout outs thank you it was great to see so many members and patrons in here as well thank you uh thank you guys for supporting the channel i really appreciate it uh takayao glad you enjoyed the lesson nekla good to see you uh abdu here suhana sanjana uh sandre simelius uh sorry if i miss some names i try to get out in as many shout outs as i can uh esther daniel hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend i will be back next saturday for another live lesson dennis here thank you i really appreciate that i i try to do the best i can i don't know if i'm the goat uh but maybe one day i'm going to keep working at it i'm going to keep trying to improve my english teaching skills improve my craft because that's what it is so that you guys can continue to practice and improve your english skills hope you had a great start to 2021 and i hope it continued

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English which are channel it's all about helping you practice and improve your English and today is really a true practice lesson because I want you to participate I have the will these questions that I'm going to ask you and I want you to respond either in the chat or respond in the comments even if you're watching this later because that is such a great way to improve is just to continue keep getting more and more practice now what we're going to practice today are what we're gonna practice the following nouns and prepositions so I am going to talk to you about nouns that are followed by certain prepositions and these are phrases that I think are quite common and that's what we're gonna work on today so I want to give a quick shout out to some of you who have joining me today hello Aidan banette sleepwalker

Lali Alyssa Martina meri Nino Devika hello how are you thank you guys for joining me and and as we go through this again I want you to write your answers and I'll try to give some more shoutouts as we go along now the first thing that I really wanted to to get to and show you is that well just a little recap we're gonna be talking about nouns and the prepositions that follow and I thought this picture is is relevant I have used it before when talking about words that are followed by prepositions but you can think about like these big ducks these nouns these content words that really helped us put pictures in our mind followed by these prepositions that the these small words that that people tend to forget about sometimes now I think the thing with prepositions that they are difficult in that regard is that you if you make a mistake I think most of the time people will still understand what you're trying to say but this is all about improving your fluency so that you are speaking accurately you are speaking correctly or even incorrectly if that's what you're doing now the best way to learn this is you know this is not something you're going to just memorize all of these nouns and the prepositions that follow I think the best way to do it is to to read to be able to see the nouns and the prepositions that follow whether you're reading a book or the newspaper or you're even reading these questions because this is the other great way is just to practice and and just keep getting as much practice as you can because that's just gonna help you in the long run so the way we're going to do this is I am going to just give you some some statements or maybe a question and there's just going to be a blank and I want you to tell me what preposition goes in that blank look at the noun that comes before and think about what preposition follows if you're not sure I would still encourage you to go ahead answer the questions and if you if you don't know just try to do what feels right because like I said chances are you have read these nouns and prepositions before you do have it up here even if it's not something that is yet in your active memory which is the memory that you have where you have an ability to be able to recall this information so even that's why I said just do what feels right if you're unsure so let's jump into it the first one that I have for you is this okay I'd like you to give a response mmm these questions so that's true this is something I've made this the the first one for a reason because yeah this is what I would tell you right now I would say yes I'd like you to give a response mmm these questions in this

in this context in this sentence you have a response response is a noun what preposition do you think follows that noun right your answer let me know because I just want to hear from you guys excellent yes I have Lally Muhammad Mary Leticia the answer is two you would give a response to something and if you give a response to something you're just you're giving an answer you're giving a reaction I would like you to give a response to these questions write your answers in the chat write your answers in the comment comments and just participate in in this activity good way to practice the next one is right here okay so I could say there was an increase mmm crime after the budget cuts so there was an increase mmm crime after the budget cuts you the noun again it's always going to come before those blanks so you know that the noun we're talking about is an increase an increase mmm crime after the budget cuts if you want to know what budget cuts are it's when you're taking the budget the amount of money you have and you're cutting it all right you're you have less money so yes excellent Monda Marcel Bonita Edelson there there was an increase in crime there was an increase in crime after the budget cuts so if you're talking about an increase in something it's just again a rise in the amount or size of something most of these meanings that I'm giving you right here it's really the meaning of the noun but I do want to put that preposition right after it because again these are these are words that are frequently used together an increase in something the next one and I think many of you maybe you could relate to this I yeah I do watch I do watch a fair bit of YouTube and they say I have an addiction mmm YouTube so we're talking about an addiction we've we've used this word before because I think a lot of times people would use this word as the adjective which is addicted you are addicted mmm something in that case - you're going to follow it with the same preposition whether it is an adjective or a noun in this case we're talking about the noun and addiction mmm something so I would tell you it just said yeah yeah you know I watch a lot of YouTube i I could say I guess you could say I have an addiction to YouTube alright so this is the preposition that would follow you would have an addiction to something excellent Luna Darby Angela who else a bead thank you guys for answering you have an addiction to something it the meaning of an addiction is just when you are physically or mentally dependent on something and that you you must have it often I think people might talk about something a bit more serious like in addiction to drugs other times like in this example it's more just a casual it's kind of just you're you're trying to say that you you you have too much of something like you have an addiction to YouTube or some people might say that they have an addiction to coffee and like oh I must have it so again if physical or mental dependence on something let's look at the next one I say the picture I like that picture this is a recipe mmm disaster a recipe disaster the noun we're talking about is a recipe so the reason I chose this one and I tried to give you a picture to kind of represent this expression this phrase because it is more of an expression but think about what preposition is going to follow that noun this is a recipe disaster this is an expression that I'm sure you would hear watching a movie or a TV show and people would use it to talk about a situation just like this one so you would say if they're looking at that picture you'd say wow this is a recipe for disaster they recipe for something excellent we coat Rudess Lalli perfect so this one may be a little bit trickier but you're talking about a recipe for something a recipe those are just instructions it's talking about how to prepare food like my grandmother has a great recipe for make it for chocolate chip cookies you have a recipe for something for food in this case I'm using it a little differently we're talking about this expression a recipe for disaster it's talking about something that is going to have a really bad outcome and you say oh goodness this is a recipe for disaster so good let's go back to that picture guys riding on the front of a car you think well this is not going to end well this is a recipe for disaster so if you're talking about a recipe for

for disaster you're referring to a situation that is likely going to end badly and you can use that expression a recipe for disaster but in general if you're talking about cooking you would say a recipe for some meal some type of food a recipe for something the next one the very common word somebody would say is congratulations now if you want to give more information and really be specific about what you're talking about you could say congratulations mmm like this congratulations mmm the promotion somebody got a promotion at work they have a different position which is better maybe they get paid more money and somebody would say congratulations mmm the promotion you have to be careful I always I have a tendency to want to say the preposition and just tell you the answer so if you're talking about congratulations you would say congratulations congratulations on something congratulations on the promotion because when you say your congratulations you are expressing praise for for some type of achievement congratulations on the promotion Oh congratulations on the new baby congratulations on your marriage something that happened an achievement a great event and you would say congratulations on this thing excellent ruber congratulations Darby a10 excellent congratulations on Nastia thank you excellent great job the next one this I tried to think of an example and this is something that a lot of people in the United States some people feel this way so I could say much of the population supports a ban hmm assault weapons in the United States the little cultural things Second Amendment which is the right to bear arms which is the same as kind of like a right to own a gun but a big debate in the u.s. is like okay well what kind of guns are we talking about so these guns would be very more lethal assault weapons so much of the population supports a ban hmm assault weapons so the noun that we're talking about is a ban what preposition is going to follow that a ban mmm something so we're talking about these assault weapons what do you think what and if you're not sure because again we're talking about a ban that's a noun that may not be as commonly used as some of these other ones but what what just feels right if you're talking about yes new yen Abdul Rahman Stephen excellent you're talking about a ban on something a ban on something is when you are either officially or legally prohibiting this thing there is a ban on assault weapons or maybe somebody could say there's a ban on smoking or there is a ban on using cellphones at school so there can be a variety of reasons why somebody would want to prohibit something and you'd say there is a ban on this thing a ban on something the next one and I think this is true there is a strong bond mmm a mother and her cubs I found that cute little picture right there these polar bears a mother and her cubs and you could say yes there is a strong strong bond hmm a mother and her cubs so this one I'll talk a little bit more about we're taught there is a collocation in there too so a lot of these nouns and prepositions you could say their collocation z' which are words that are frequently used together but I'd asked I'd also add in this case that adjectives a strong bond that is another collocation if you're talking about a bond you could say there is a strong bond mm-hmm a mother and her cub so in this case yes most of you guys rock this one you're talking about a bond between someone now in this case we're talking about animals but it's the same thing a bond between two people or or groups of

added some situation the captain has the authority over his crew that one may be a little tricky remember you have authority over something or someone all right the next one let's keep going if we don't change the way we do business we run the risk mmm failure all right so you see that noun I'm giving you these nouns we're talking about risk risk mmm failure if we don't change the way we do business we run we run the risk mmm failure which preposition is going to follow that noun and this is I think that is this is a common phrase that you might hear if people are talking about the risk mmm something excellent Manpreet Nino that's just going so fast you guys everything so many people participating I love it gah no Daniel you're talking about the risk of something which if we're talking about risk it means the possibility of something bad happening so you could talk in that case like I said that's a common phrase and expression you talk about the risk of failure that we don't if we don't change the way we do business we run the risk of failure I also want to highlight that talking about that expression to run the risk people might say that together if they're talking about something that bad that could happen you could say oh we run the risk of something happening we run the risk of failure we run the risk of losing our license we run the risk of something all right let's keep going we have the need mmm speed I I put this picture of this is a reference to a movie from 1919 80s 1986 I believe was the year and this is a phrase from that movie as a statement from that movie we have the need mmm speed and it was a movie about these these guys they're flying these jets so I bonus points if you can tell me what what movie I'm thinking of so if we're talking about the need excellence hellim say sod great job Sylvia nice you have the need for something when you have the need for something it's talking about you you just must have it you you must have something that you just don't have so you could have a need for more money maybe you have the need for a car you don't have one right now but it's saying you have a in this case the need for speed yes Gertrudis excellent Adan it is the movie of Marcelo Top Gun yeah starring Tom Cruise if you haven't seen it it's an entertaining movie from the 1980s they fly those jets and in one of the lines they say that we we have the need for speed then we have this next one which i think is quite common so I hope that many of you are able to guess are able to get this one correct I have a strong interest mm education that's something that's true it's that's why I put it in there for me I have a strong interest mmm education we're talking about the noun and interest so if somebody's using it as a noun and interest what preposition follows it's the same if we're talking about the adjective interested somebody says I'm interested education we're going to use the same preposition so I think many of you know this one because it's more common that you're talking about the things you like and your interests and you'd say I would say I have a strong interest in education you have an interest in something that you want to learn more about it you want to focus more on this thing you want to give more attention to it you have an interest in something excellent Angela Lewis ooh bad Shalu Vijay nice well done let's continue going because again I want to get through as many of these as possible just keep practicing and practicing and practicing the police did an investigation mmm the company's finances so if you have some situation and they they say maybe you read this in a newspaper or you are watching a TV show you're saying the police did an investigation mmm the company's finances we're talking about an investigation what preposition is going to follow that that noun an investigation mmm something Oh Thank You marina I'm interested in your lessons thank you a great example interested in something so if you're talking about in invent an investigation close excellent yes this one may be a little more challenging because it really has to do with crime if you don't watch many crime TV shows or movies you might not hear this that often great job sleepwalker monthly we're talking about an investigation into something or you could do an investigation into someone if you're trying to discover more information about this person but a lot of times you would talk about an investigation into something which is an investigation it's the act of carefully examining some crime or problem but again if you are somebody who watches movies or TV shows that have anything to do with the police then you might hear this expression talking about doing an in negation into something or an investigation into someone an investigation into then we have like that picture he lost control mmm his emotions he lost control hmm his emotions so we we know you know the now we're talking about control what preposition what preposition is going to follow that now he lost control mmm his emotions and I think that is another common collocation you're talking about control you might hear people talk about somebody losing control in this case where it's the past tense he lost control his emotions so this one excellent I think you guys rocked it yes Leticia Diego Abdul Rahman many of you putting a couple of different answers but the one thing I want to show you is you could use either one you could say control of something or control over in this case either one of them is fine and in my opinion I think control of is probably a little more common if you say he lost control of his emotions but you could use over as well means the same thing he lost control of his emotions or he lost control over his emotions and you're talking about control which is the power that one has over that could be another person or some situation control of or control over either one great job you guys you guys knew that one so let's look at this next one this one it may be a little more challenging the hotel has a loose affiliation hmm local restaurants so affiliation is a word hopefully you know what it means that it's problem it's not as common as talking about control control of something but I could say in this in this situation the hotel has a loose affiliation hmm local restaurants and again I think it's good to keep in mind that that is also a collocation you might hear talking about a loose affiliation so if you know what affiliation means and you've heard this word before hopefully you know what preposition follows it great job lolly sleepwalker those caballero you're talking about in affiliation with something an affiliation with something is a connection you with some type of organization or maybe a political party a religion you have an affiliation with something the hotel has a loose affiliation with local restaurants I told you that loose affiliation is a phrase that you may hear because that just means that there's a connection but it's not very strong so you could use it if there you could say something as someone has a strong affiliation with something there is a tight connection or a loose affiliation which is the opposite which means yeah it's not it's very casual it's not very maybe very important a loose affiliation with something then we have sometimes I'll try to take advantage hmm Black Friday sales Black Friday is it's more it's it's it's very much a thing in the United States I think it's spreading to many other parts of the world but it is the Friday after Thanksgiving which in the United States it's always the Thanksgiving is the fourth Thursday of November and that next day Friday is called Black Friday and there are many different sales things are very cheap so you could say this segment say sometimes I'll try to take advantage mmm Black Friday sales this is a more common expression so hope that you guys know this one to take advantage mmm something excellent Roselle gertrudis Hanh under Mary you take advantage of something and you are using the good things from some situation so I could say sometimes I'll try to take advantage of Black Friday sales I hope that all of you take advantage of these lessons and really use it as an opportunity to practice practice your English and practice using these prepositions because again it's great way to just fine-tune your overall fluency so I think good also just to bring this picture back these nouns followed by prepositions and I could say I think you have a good grasp hmm these nouns and prepositions I think you have a good grasp mmm these nouns and prepositions this one may be a little more challenging because again the noun me is not as common you're talking about grasp a grasp mmm something so I would tell you yes I think this is true I think you have a good grasp hmm these nouns and prepositions so I all right great answer I see you're talking about a grasp of something or a grasp on something but many of you through those answers in there either one is correct I think I would tend to use of but when you're talking about a grasp you're in this case you're talking about you're having a you have a good understanding of something you have a grasp of something or you could have a grasp on something personally I think I would tend to use of more than on but either one of them is okay either of those prepositions is correct if you're talking about the noun grasped so just to show you a little review these are all of the nouns and the prepositions that we've talked about today and again a great way to understand these and be able to use them correctly the next time you're speaking you're having a conversation or you're writing an email is like what you did today you were practicing you see these written right here you're reading them right now and you just start to take all in and you internalize that information it goes into your active memory and and then you'll be able to use all of these the next time you need to response to increase in congratulations on investigation into so I just wanted to show you some in case you were wanted to review a little bit and think about oh wait what was that one so this is a list of the ones that we talked about today if you guys again if you enjoy what we do and you want to make another connection with us and sponsor and support interactive English we we do have memberships right here on YouTube you can click the join button or we're also active on patreon some some cool rewards for both of them check out those links down in the description but I thank you guys again this is what this is what I want I just want to do these practice lessons give you an opportunity in in real time to actually not just watch a video and listen to me speak English but really get to practice a little bit and this is a little more grammar vocabulary and it's a great way to improve so again thank you guys for joining me thank you Eddie a ten great seeing you again duska Vado sleepwalker Darby Shalu suspender Marcell sorry I tried to get in as many names as I could today but I like doing these lessons because it does give me an opportunity to acknowledge those of you who are here in the chat watching this live so I hope you all enjoy the rest of your weekend stay healthy stay safe and I will see you next time so long

Native Speakers Will Be Impressed If You Say These

It's not my first rodeo. You're going to use this to refer to a situation that someone has been in before. And really, you're going to end up using it as a standalone statement and you're reassuring the other person that you do have experience. So, the context in which you would use this idiom would be if someone's talking to you like you don't know what you're doing. You've never done this before. You don't have experience. And you want to let that person know, I do have experience. It's not my first rodeo. Don't Don't forget to support his head. I will. It's not my first rodeo. I can't wait to take him to his first rodeo.

Let's call a spade a spade. This means to speak honestly and directly about something, even if it's unpleasant or embarrassing. So, that last part is key when trying to understand how and when to use this idiom. Let's say that there is a topic that people are trying to avoid discussing, like criticizing your boss. It could get you in trouble, but you're going to do it anyway, and you're gonna let people know that you're being honest. Our boss is incompetent. I'm just calling a spade a spade. So, you use this idiom to highlight the fact that you're being honest. You're being direct when you call a spade a spade.

I'm all for living life, but this is the Geller's 35th anniversary. Okay, call a spade a spade. This party stinks.

To throw down the gauntlet. I love it.

This just means to issue a challenge. So instead of telling someone, I have a challenge for you, you can say, I'm throwing down the gauntlet. In case you're wondering, gauntlet. This is a really a medieval word. It's an armored glove. And people would throw it down and then they might start fighting. If you want a more recent example, Thanos had a gauntlet in the Avengers in order to hold the Infinity Stone. So, I'm going to write my own story. Yeah. Yeah, that's right.

Nature Idioms & Expressions for Everyday Conversation

today we are at this beautiful and amazing spot which is lake bled slovenia so we thought it'd be a great opportunity to talk to you about some useful expressions that are all related to nature what's up everyone my name is Wes and this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I want to talk to you about some useful expressions that are related to nature and what a better place to do that than right here so the first expression that I have for you is a breath of fresh air and if somebody says that that something is a breath of fresh air it just means that it is new it is different and it's a nice change oftentimes I think it's used as a simile and you say that something is like a breath of fresh air for example you could say that I hope that our English lessons are like a breath of fresh air they're they're new they're imaginative they're different and and it's something that you enjoy it is a nice change it's like a breath of fresh air tell us about yourself

I must apologize for my daughter when you're a breath of fresh air oh this is a sweet noise I can't tell you how excited you guys anybody up there's like a repla fresher and ever seeing everybody's so excited the next expression is to beat around the bush and if somebody is beating around the bush it means that they want to talk about some topic some issue but they're not saying it directly and in that case you would say that somebody is beating around the bush so for example if there is a situation that you really don't want to tell somebody about and maybe it's a little sensitive you might try to tell them in an indirect way and in that case you are beating around the bush I think often that I I'm guilty of this sometimes I'm not direct with people and say exactly what's on my mind and they might tell me to stop beating around the bush and just say just say what I'm thinking around the bush we really came here because we're both worried about your project is to sabotage my project yes don't beat around the bush Leonard you don't want me here just say the word and I'll leave could have beating around the bush a little I'm not gonna beat around the bush here got a great arm that's one of the best I've ever seen your control hasn't come around like we'd hoped it would then we have the calm before the storm and if somebody is talking about the calm before the storm there they're talking about a period in which there is relative quiet and peace just before a big problem is about to erupt and you would refer to this period as oh it's the calm before the storm you know that in the future something bad is going to happen there is going to be a major problem but before the problem there's just you know there's this peace there's this tranquility and you could say well it's the calm before the storm right now I guess you could say well I don't think this is the calm before the storm it's a beautiful day we're not gonna have any problems later so yeah today it's just like a breath of fresh air anything this is the calm before the damn storm guys relax this is just the calm before the storm that's right that's right tonight we build up some strength and then tomorrow I like these continental moments before the storm the next expression is dead in the water and you would say that something is dead in the water which means that there there is no chance for something to succeed or to make progress oftentimes I think it's used when maybe talking about some kind of deal some kind of negotiation and it's you're just not gonna make any more progress than you say yeah you know this is this negotiation it's dead in the water or the deal it's dead in the water we're not going to succeed and move forward filibuster reform stalled clean jobs initiative dead in the water nope no bank will give us our is duh we're dead in the water get that proposal to dr. have greener pastures and if we're talking about greener pastures often you would say that somebody is looking for greener pastures or they're seeking greener pastures and this just refers to somebody who is trying to find a a better situation or a more promising situation and they are looking for greener pastures or seeking greener pastures and in this case is kind of exactly like it sounds when when you're talking about greener pastures you're talking about land that is just better people want to move there people want to be there and we're always looking to go to greener pastures our boys moving on to greener pastures he taught me everything I know about wearing a badge it looks like you've moved on to greener pastures but you won't be working for Sacred Heart the place that's been fortune training you only to have you take off for greener pastures the next expression is a storm is brewing and in this case we're talking about in the future there's going to be a problem there's going to be something that's usually emotionally upsetting that the water right now but if you do just keep practicing continue watching our lessons sky's the limit I told Ben he could do whatever he wants sky is the limit do you want for your birthday big dog it's okay I'm good come on this guy's the limit dream big my boy how much bigger can we get guys the limit accepted by actors and musicians everybody else will follow then we have when it rains it pours and this expression means that when something happens usually something bad that it happens in large numbers so for example something bad may happen and then shortly after that something else bad happens and then again and you could say well you know when it rains it pours with one bad thing just happens after the other now it doesn't always have to refer to a bad situation it can refer to anything when it rains it pours for example you wanna and I recently we had a baby girl and then shortly after that my brother and his wife also had a baby boy and we could say you know when it rains it pours leg emerges everybody's having babies when it rains it pours Liz are you familiar with the phrase when it rains it pours while you just laid me off Jesus Henry Christ when it rains it pours so I hope you enjoyed learning these new expressions if you did please hit that like button and as always we love hearing from you write to us in the comments thank you guys so much for watching and I will see you next time

New Year's Resolutions | Listening, Vocabulary, & MORE...

Happy New Year! Wait, say that again. What? Happy New Year! Happy New Year! Happy New Year! Happy New Year! Today we're going to talk to you about New Year's resolutions. That's coming up. Today we're going to tell you some of our New Year's resolutions. Which are things that we hope that we can accomplish this year. And this is something that people... Not everybody does but many people do. And it's a way to set some goals for yourself and things that you want to accomplish. And this actually relates a lot to language learning because one thing we tell our students all the time is to set short-term goals for yourself. Set some learning goals for yourself so you know what you need to work on and try to accomplish so that you can practice and improve your language skills.

So this lesson will be a good listening activity. And we'll also put up some vocabulary words and let you know the meaning, some words that you may not know. So without further ado, let's talk about our New Year's resolutions. My first New Year's resolution this year is to get in shape. And this is more, you know, my goal to do some more exercise to get a little more fit. Maybe I'm thinking about running a marathon later this year. We'll see how that goes. But to get outside, be a little more active, and just be healthier in general. So I'd really like to get in shape this year. So usually, many years ago, I used to have these long lists of resolutions that I used to create for myself.

Things like be more organized and lose 20 pounds. Would you complete all of them? No. So that's the problem that I never did any of them And it was frustrating, so a couple years ago I told myself one or two. Just do one or two at most and then try to really accomplish those. So this year I have two. And my first one is to be more grateful. And I think this is very important for me. As the years go by I try to be grateful for the things I have in my life. And not kind of keep wanting more. So in order to do that, I have a little journal.

My little gratitude journal. I know it's very small, but I can carry it in my purse. And I can put it anywhere. So from time to time, I'll open it and write things. Or people that I'm grateful for in my life. And I really want to do more of this this year because I started this last year, and I only have one page. So I really...it's a continuation for my whole life. But I want to make sure that I really write in it this year. It might not be every day, but every time I remember. Really want to write in my gratitude journal.

Another resolution that I have is to learn more about cooking and nutrition. And this also goes back to health. Because I would like to have more home-cooked meals, and out eating out as much. And try to eat a little healthier...more fruits more veggies. Definitely, I need more veggies. Yeah, you do. So that's something that I think is really important for me. And trying to do that throughout the year, I know that I'm not going to just completely change all at once, but just...maybe a little at a time. Again, it's all about...I think setting short-term goals, and trying to realize those So that's definitely something that I would like to do more of.

Have some more home-cooked meals and eat healthier. My second resolution this year again...kind of ties into what Wes was saying. For me, this is something that's continuous. It's every year, but I just always want to improve. But it's to take care of myself. Take better care of myself. That is to...you know, go to sleep earlier. I am an early riser, so I always wake up early in the morning. And sometimes I don't go to sleep as early as I'd like. For me to get a full night's sleep. So I'd like to make sure I do that. Take care of myself with exercise. I really enjoy doing yoga, so I want to focus on doing more of that.

And also with...even healthier eating. And then just cooking and making... Enjoying it. It's a hobby of mine. I like to cook so... I'd also like to do more meditation and more breathing exercises. As an anxious person, it really helps calm me down. I should do that too. Yeah. It's very useful. It helps kind of de-stress, and it's just really, really good for... for your mind and for your body. So, that's all part of my resolution to take better care of myself. And I think it's a useful resolution for everyone. You go to sleep now at like 9 o'clock. No, at like 11pm. You want to go to sleep at 7pm? I want to go to bed at like 10pm.

A couple of New Year's resolutions that we have for interactive English is... First, we'd like to continue the schedule that we've been trying to maintain, and do two lessons a week. At least two lessons a week, which can be pretty challenging with a lot of other things going on in life. But, we'd like to continue doing two lessons each week throughout the entire year. So hopefully we'll be able to make that possible and continue sharing a lot of different lessons with you guys. And the other resolution that we are kind of hoping will happen this year is... We'd like to expand our scope and our lessons. So we'd like to have a webpage.

We'd like to do some courses and ebooks. That we're putting together. And we hope that we can finish and share those with you, so that you can take advantage of even more of our lessons and learn and improve. And you can grow with us. So hopefully we'll get that done as soon as possible. We're working on it. So these are some of our New Year's Resolutions.

Now, we would like to hear from all of you. So in the comments, please tell us one of your New Year's Resolutions. Tell us something that you would like to do or accomplish this year. Or maybe something you want to change to improve your life. So in the comments, let us know what one of your New Year's Resolutions is. Yeah, it's...I always find it very helpful when I read other people's resolutions. I find it inspiring. Yeah, share with each other. Yeah, so you can...you can kind of get some inspiration from what you see in the comments. Also, please remember to like and share this video if you enjoy learning English with us.

And, as always, thanks so much for watching and we'll see you next time. Bye.

LESSON 458 OF 749

New Year's Vocabulary | Useful Words to Celebrate the New Year

hello everyone hello and welcome to our last lesson of 2017 I can't believe this year has gone by super super fast how's everyone doing welcome welcome welcome today we have a super fun lesson we're talking about new year's vocabulary so I just wanted to welcome everyone we have one day till the end of the year so if there's anything unfinished business you want to do this year you have exactly one day to do it well one day in a few hours I'd like to welcome Prince of hardship a lot ah hello and Happy New Year thank you for joining us if you just tuned in my name is you wana from interactive English and we're doing our last lesson and I have a request for you please write down your name and where you are joining us from because we like to know our community of students hi Ally hi - Dora hi mano welcome welcome everyone hi hello Romania hello from Azerbaijan India we have such a beautiful group today thank you for joining us we have a wonderful lesson so we can finish off the New Year Strong you guys are improving your English and also celebrating with us so we're having a lot of fun here thank you thank you very much for joining today we're talking about the new year and I have some vocabulary words related to the new year for you and if you're just joining us thank you so much write to us where you're from and where you're from and what is your name so we have people from Cluj thank you for joining us we have people from Porto police in Sao Paulo Brazil thank you the lesson today is about New Year vocabulary and right now I want to ask you if you can tell me in your country what traditions or what do you do for New Year's do you have any special traditions any meals anything that you share or do with your family or friends what things do you do for the new year okay happy new year happy new year everyone we made it we survived 2017 there were times where we thought maybe we could hit I'm just kidding but we survived and 2018 is coming so in the question in the comments please write what kind of traditions do you have what things do you do on the new on the New Year's Eve eating a lot yes drinking yes I'm sure celebrating what kind of things do you do okay so my first word for today is calendar of course when we're talking about the New Year we are starting a new calendar and a calendar is of course what we all follow it's a series of pages that shows the days the week's the months of a specific year and in in the US where I was living for the longest time we follow the Gregorian calendar which starts you know in January and ends on the separate 34 31st so I was wondering if you can let me know what calendar do you follow in your country I know there are a few different active ones that people follow and there's different New Year's so I was wondering if you can write what kind of calendar do you follow in your country and if you're just joining thank you thank you so much and welcome good job for choosing to improve your English and starting strong and finishing strong so thank you guys for again for joining us and we're talking about our calendars and what kind of calendar are we following in our countries olive salad on December 31st so right now I'm reading your guys's comments champagne of course barbeque YUM salads all sleeping jr. that works too sleeping is good and a lot of people drinking and eating hi Daniel hi so welcome again welcome thank you guys for for her for joining us it was somebody asked me to speak up here maybe just is this better there my microphone is closer now okay so so that's the calendar it's a it's a word that we use a lot around this time of the year so I would I introduced it now let's talk about New Year's Eve as you might know of course the word Eve means the night before or the day before so New Year's Eve is the night before the New Year and of course of course it's a we celebrate a lot during this time people drink a lot especially champagne they eat a lot many many people go and find fireworks to watch and I'll talk about that later but there are also many traditions in in New York for example they do the famous ball drop

I've been reading about other traditions in the world and I will talk about them in a second but I wanted to ask you what other traditions do you have in your country I know there are so many in different in different parts of the world and I was curious if you have any special traditions for New Year's Eve for example this sounds a cool one I think one of my students was telling me that in Spain they eat 12 grapes and that this is practice still quite a bit so and I forget why if you guys if any one is from Spain if you can tell me why the grapes or if you know why they hit the grapes in Spain I'd be curious and also if there are any special traditions that you do for New Year's in Italy I think they used to break dishes just throw them break them for good luck but I don't think this was practiced in all of Italy so just some parts and I don't think it's a very that it's practiced a guys like streamers sometimes I feel like especially confetti with streamers they can get tangled in your clothes and your hair and they can be everywhere so I feel like sometimes they're hard to clean uh-huh but but I'm just curious so if you guys are just joining us welcome and thank you for our last lesson of the year and we are talking about some new year's vocabulary so far we've talked about just a few basic ones like New Year's Eve and calendar and now we're talking about streamers okay the next one that's very very important for this time of the year is midnight and midnight is of course when the clock strikes 12:00 it's 12 o'clock at night and many many countries there's a countdown and there are also some traditions that go with what happens at midnight so I wanted to ask you guys if there is something but what do you do at midnight what do you do at midnight tomorrow what are you going to do anything special are you going to sleep are you going to be out at a party are you going to hug your family and friends wish them happy new year are you going to kiss someone in the US the tradition of a midnight kiss is kind of I think it was popularized a lot I think in the 90s where it was very very important to have somebody to kiss at midnight a special person to kiss and to start off the new year with a romantic kind of twist but but you can also kiss your family and friends of course so eating grapes is starting off the year with some adrenaline rush and some laughs okay so yeah that's fun I feel like I would like three twelve grapes and it sounds like a lot of fun and people in Brazil wear different colors of t-shirts before midnight interesting jr. why why do people wear different colored t-shirts is there is it for good luck or any any other reason this is so fun to read through your guyses through your comments and see what kind of things people people do for New Year's and at midnight okay my next my next word is the New Year's Day so we talked about the New Year's Eve but then there is the New Year's Day and of course this is January 1 there are specific traditions that are that are that happened on this day I put here a blank calendar page because for many of us is a chance to start new so it's a chance to start whatever things we wanted to do we can try to last year we can do them this year so it just starts from the beginning it's a lot of fun but beyond that it's also their specific traditions like New Year's parades in the US and I think the UK well the US has a lot of American football games and I think the UK has soccer if I'm not mistaken I'm not sorry I'm not that much into sports oh I'm I don't really know but I've read that they have that football is a big deal there's of course family time usually where we don't work on this day so we have time to meet with our families their concerts I know about the the New Year's Day concert in Vienna traditional meals church services so what are some traditions that are done on New Year's Day in your country if you guys could join OC joke a yeah exactly so church service is very important I think this time of the year for for many people what does it mean grapes is the grapes you eat red oh this is wonderful so ok so red means love white means peace and so on uh-huh ok so they're color coded based on the things maybe we want to have in the New Year am I am i reading am I reading this correctly I hope I am so thank you again so far we've talked about New Year's Day midnight streamers you and a calendar of course you cannot have a New Year's Eve without fireworks fireworks are incredible I think they're fascinating for kids and adults alike I found a really cool picture of fireworks here basically they're just gunpowder and gunpowder and other chemicals together and they create a reaction at where they explode and they have these wonderful wonderful decorations they're used for display so they're something some fireworks shows can be really really really elaborate like you can see in this picture and some are smaller too sometimes but I wanted to ask if you guys like to watch fireworks in your country if the celebration is really big if there are a lot of fireworks for New Year's or maybe just a few okay well thank you guys yeah okay so fireworks are for of course essential and many many times I put these together because they're different and I wanted to make the distinction between fireworks and firecrackers okay so they're not the same thing fireworks are up in the sky of course you see them there they produce this this big explosion and they kind of transform in different shapes and colors and they produce a show where as firecrackers are this cardboard container and they they're kind of on a fuse and they have explosive powder so when you set them on fire they just create this loud loud noise and also a little explosion but firecrackers are many many times about about the noise that they make and they're also important in many many cultures so okay let's see so 17 men of fireworks in Rio wonderful are they I always want to see like magical firework shows I think some of the best I've seen have been around New Year's and also in the US for fourth of July which is the the national holiday so do you have firecrackers what is more popular in your country fireworks or firecrackers is my question I guess fireworks or firecrackers and which do you like more for me I definitely prefer fireworks firecrackers scare me because you just hear they sound a little bit a little scary like something's going on you don't know what's happening you can see them as much but fireworks is something visual so which do you prefer fireworks or firecrackers to celebrate the new year yes of course it can they can cause problems so okay my next word is resolution and before I talk about what is a resolution well no let me explain a resolution is something that we decide on that we want to start doing in the new year for example many many many people

I would say most people always have the resolution to lose weight or to start a new sport or - I don't know Journal more or - just start a different practice in the new year so that's a resolution it's a decision that you make on New Year's Eve a New Year's Day to stop doing something or to start doing something else so for example if you're if your wish is to stop smoking maybe you say my resolution for 2018 is to stop smoking or something like that so what I want to hear from you now is what are some of your resolutions what are some of your resolutions do you have any resolutions for the new year and if yes what are they let's see okay so Ju before fire Royce yeah I mean - I think they're more fun um hi Christina happy new year thank you for joining us so if you guys are just joining us we are talking about some new year's vocabulary hello from Thailand hello please if you are just joining let us know what is your name where you're writing from and right now we're talking about resolutions so it would be really nice if you could share some of the resolutions that you set for yourself for this year they can be simple they can be one or two or however many you have it's always nice to - to see what everyone's doing I will tell you my resolution and while I'm telling you you guys can write yours my resolution this year is to be to spend more time to spend more time with my family so that's one of my resolutions okay so very good we have to yeah to focus more on saving rather than spending oh yeah it's such a good resolution we end up spending so much money that's a very good way very nice one stop putting off studying English good job Junior you're ahead you are doing so well because you started you're right now you're studying English - even before the new year so good job yes a resolution it'll hate you I hope I'm saying your name right it is like a goal it's like a goal or a wish that you have for yourself for the new year I used to have a lot when I was younger super long list and now I kind of just keep it to just one or two at most so they're manageable so if you guys are just joining please write down your resolutions one of my favorites a very important sorry that's the cat oh we're cat sitting and that's what's happening right there so champagne is one of my favorite drinks it's it's a white sparkling wine that comes from champagne in France and it's it's a celebration drink so it's used in four four very joyous occasions kind of a symbol of the New Year champagne to celebrate to celebrate the new year to celebrate the end and the beginning it's also used as weddings it's another which is another celebratory occasion so I wanted to see do you have any special drinks for any special kind of celebratory drinks in your country is it also champagne or do you do something else like cider or other kinds of drinks or do you drink champagne or anything else so that is also if you're wondering about the pronunciation it's a word borrowed from French so the the G is silent so it's champagne okay so another important word for us is countdown so in many countries the countdown begins at 10:00 and what it is is it's just counting from 10 all the way to zero so you do them in reverse order so 10 9 8 7 I'm not gonna show you that I can count because I'm sure you guys believe me but that's a countdown and the point of a countdown is for everyone to join in it builds this momentum we are ending the year we're beginning a new era get it produces a lot of excitement and it's practiced I would say in the u.s. everyone does a countdown I don't know if it's done in every country if you guys could share I'd like to know do do people do a countdown in your country is it on TV is it on the radio if you're out in like outside watching the fireworks - people start counting down do you do a countdown do you like countdowns do you find them annoying would you rather be sleeping I don't know okay so right now we're writing a few different things in the chat if you're joining we're writing what are some of your resolutions we're also writing do you have any special drinks that you celebrate with this will be the new year with and also do you do countdowns a very nice make mama proud yeah drink coconut juice oh that's delicious as a smoothie yeah start healthy that's a good resolution especially if you like coconut juice and I really do so that sounds delicious so thank you guys for sure yeah I stopped smoking that's a it's a wonderful resolution thank you guys for for sharing these the next word a very important again the sum of the year is confetti and confetti are these little little pieces of paper many times are colored I have gold here because I think it's very celebratory gold for the new year but they don't always have to be gold they can be multicolored different colors they're very very very small and they're kind of thrown they're thrown out in the air or they come they're thrown from from somewhere above you or dropped and they're done at weddings they're done in New Year's they're done in concerts if special events so they're also a way to show a celebration okay so you do countdown on TV okay wonderful so um do you guys like confetti honestly I like the way they look but confetti they get everywhere they get in my clothes once they get in my hair so maybe when I was little I liked confetti a little bit more but now I could do with what's confetti they've really get in everywhere greetings greetings everyone again if you're just joining we are talking about New Year's vocabulary and if you are here with us I would like to wish all of you happy happy New Year and thank you for tuning for first finishing off your year with with us so before we finish I just wanted to go over all of these words very quickly in case you missed them or you didn't start at the same time as we did the words I was I was talking about today are calendar and we're following the Gregorian calendar New Year's Eve and traditions that we do for New Year's Eve streamers what happens at midnight what traditions do we have in our countries at midnight New Year's Day and the different traditions that we have on New Year's Day maybe it's it's a parade or football or church service fireworks or firecrackers in which we prefer firecrackers are louder I think and they're not as exorbitant and fireworks are just light shows out in the air and we also shared some of our resolutions and thank you thank you thank you for the ones of you who shared them with us it's so nice to see them and you know that now you that you rode them you have to do them right so I saw Ali that you want to stop smoking now that you wrote it you have to stop smoking it is a must so you have to you have to do your resolutions now that you wrote them and then we talked about champagne and special drinks that we used to celebrate I think this one is super popular it is also one of my favorites so and it's a way to celebrate champagne is mostly drank to celebrate occasions like like New Year's or even weddings and occasions like that countdown is the act of counting in Reverse from 10 to zero it doesn't have to be from 10 it can be from a million if you want but usually the the the word countdown is refers to counting from from 10 to zero especially around the new year and of course it's done at midnight in this case confetti are again small pieces of colored paper they can be gold or they can be silver any color you want they can be multicolored and they're very very small and they're usually dropped from somewhere and again well that's it um thank you guys so much thank you for joining us we hope that you have a wonderful new year we had a great 2017 preparing lessons and starting our channel this year has been amazing for us and we hope to do some great things in 2018 we are very happy with our students and we hope that we can bring you a lot more fun and interactive and incredible lessons to you guys this year this coming year and we just wish you a very very very very very very happy and amazing new year 2018 so thank you guys again for watching if you found this video helpful if you know anyone who'd like to learn about some new year's vocabulary please like share this lesson write any questions that we have in the comments we always respond and if you want to prepare even more join our social media classes we're constantly teaching on there too so thank you guys again and I hope you have a wonderful year and we'll see you next year thank you

Only Advanced Learners Can Score 10/10 on This Verb Tense Quiz

Can you get 10 out of 10 on this verb tense quiz? We're about to find out. And if you are someone who enjoys practicing your skills, because that's what Interactive English is all about, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel, I already mentioned, is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. And today, I want to help you fine-tune your grammar skills. Now, I would like to point out that if you would like to get these notes right next to me, check out that link down below in the description. Join my email community. If you're already a part of it, check your inbox. I have sent them to you. But, it's just a good way to, you know, stay up-to-date, to remind yourself, uh in this case, of the grammar that you're going to be practicing right now. So, I have a little quiz for you. I want you to participate. Write your answers in the chat, in the comments. I just love hearing from you. And I think it's important. I think it's important to participate in these lessons. So, this is kind of the a little bit of the topic. We're talking about the future is now. So, we're going to be really, the next few questions, talking about the future as well as right now, kind of a mix of both. So, let's just look at the first question. I've given you the verb. And of course, I want you to fill in the blank with the correct verb tense. I can't meet you on Friday afternoon because I mm with the board of directors to discuss the merger. The main verb, or the verb that I want you to, well, figure out how to use is the verb meet. So, which verb tense are you going to use in this context?

I can't meet with you on Friday because I mm with the board of directors to discuss the merger. So, to to be perfectly honest, I I hope that I know many of you have an advanced level of English. So, this may be a little bit of review, and that is perfect. I love that when you're just able to review. That is what fine-tuning your skills is all about. So, I think I I see a lot of great answers in the chat. All right, so the the tense that you're going to use is the uh I am meeting. I can't we meet with you on Friday afternoon because I am meeting with the board of directors to discuss the merger. If you're wondering what this is, this is future arrangement. Now, even though it's in the future, we're talking about the continuous tense. I am meeting. It is the present continuous.

I can't meet with you on Friday afternoon because what is what's going on? I'm meeting with the board of directors to discuss the merger. Why is this tricky? So, where you're going to use here because it is a confirmed future arrangement. It's not an action that is happening right now. Similar to somebody using the present tense to talk about a scheduled time in the future. But, in this case, I am meeting is correct answer. I think many of you you nailed it. All right, excellent. Good to see so many members. Lolly, good to see you. Nice. Here is the next one. Stop it. You intentionally difficult today. I almost said it. So, I'm sorry. That's that's been known to happen from time to time.

I just say the answer as I read the sentence. Uh stop it. You intentionally difficult today even though you're usually quite cooperative. The the verb that I want you to use is the verb to be. Which you know, how are which verb tense are you going to use to correctly complete this sentence so that well, it just it makes sense. And I feel like I tried to give you enough context. So hopefully it's not not that difficult. You you can assume from the picture that this this woman referring to the child look stop it. You intentionally difficult today even though you're usually quite cooperative. All right. The correct answer. You guys nailed it. Nice. Lolly, Theodore, Miranda. Uh am being are are being You are being intentionally difficult today even though you are usually quite cooperative. We're talking about like the stative uh which in in typically you don't use stative verbs in the continuous tense, but this is more dynamic. Um so we are going to use the present continuous tense. While the to be is a stative verb. Uh he is like this age or whatever. Uh it is a state. Using it in the continuous form implies a temporary behavior or choice rather than a permanent personality trait. So if somebody were to say uh I don't like Wes. He is difficult. Okay, which somebody people have said that before. As far as talking about more of a permanent personality trait that I have. If you're saying, oh yeah, he's really difficult. He is annoying. And yeah, you don't want to work with him. Whereas if you say somebody is being difficult, then you're just referring to that moment. It's temporary. That is not their permanent trait, characteristic, or behavior. So you could say that when saying somebody's being annoying or somebody's being difficult or they're being what whatever it may be, but we're referring to that temporary state in Which verb tense? I think you all know. starts The keynote speech starts at 9:00 a.m., so attendees should arrive early uh to get seated. Fixed schedule. I I mentioned this a few moments ago. Same way when we're talking about in that future uh I can't meet with you then because I am meeting with the the board members. In this case, the keynote speech starts at 9:00 a.m. It's fixed schedule, so in general you're going to use you're going to use the present tense. So, we're going to use when we're talking about fixed schedules, trains, planes, speeches in this case, stick with the present tense. The keynote speech starts at 9:00 a.m.

Let's move on to our next topic. And again, this may well don't think it's going to be too much of a hint, but we're going to talk about perspective. And I'll give you the answer and also tell you why why it's a little tricky. Here is the first question. I mhm Tokyo three times, but I still feel like I haven't seen half of what the city offers. Which verb tense are you going to use to correctly complete the sentence? Given the situation, given the context, think about perspective. I mhm Tokyo three times, but I still feel like I haven't seen half of what the city has to offer. Once again, I feel like this is I I don't I don't want to say this is uh you know, not too advanced, but if you're able to get all of them, I think that's good cuz this this can be a little tricky at times. So, if you get 10 for 10, I am impressed.

Given this situation, we're talking about using the verb visit, I would say I have visited. I have visited Tokyo three times. We're going to use the present perfect. This is referring to this life experience. I have done this. I have been there. So, we're focusing on experience. And if if you do mention a specific time, then you're going to use the past simple. So, if you have a time expression like uh last year, I then would say I went to Tokyo last year. Or I went to Tokyo um in 2010. And you have that time expression, then you would use the past simple. But, when you're referring to an experience, I have visited Tokyo three times, but I still but still I haven't seen half of what the city has to offer. It's like you're asking somebody if they've tried food. You know, have you experienced this? And you say, "Well, I haven't tried that." Or, "Yes, I have I have tried this." So, when we're talking about experience, keep in mind we're referring to the present perfect. What do you think? We mhm this contract for over 6 hours. I think it's time we take a break. So, I want you to use the verb negotiate. Which which verb tense are you going to use? And there is a keyword in here that should help you in this context. I don't want to give it away. We mhm for over 6 hours. I think it's time we take a break. So, we're talking about something that started in the past. It's continued to the present. And given the context, it's likely going to continue in the future.

So, basically, the way that I explained it just then, start in the past, continue to the present, will likely continue into the future, the correct verb tense would be have been negotiate, the present perfect continuous. That is what I meant to say. We have been negotiating this contract for over 6 hours. I think it's time we take a break. One of the keywords in there would be for, because that then really indicates the perfect tense. But, we're going to use the present perfect tense because you want to emphasize the ongoing nature or or the duration of this struggle. Like we've been doing this for this amount of time. All right, and I want to emphasize the time. So, think about present perfect continuous started in the past, continued to the present, and then it is something that's likely going to continue in the future. To give you another example, somebody would say

I have been waiting uh for the bus for 20 minutes. I uh have been waiting, all right? Started in the past, continued, and then probably going to continue into the future. All right, let's see. What do you think about this one? By the time the CEO finally arrived, the rest of the staff mhm to move forward without her input. I want you to use the two words already and decide to complete this sentence. By the time the CEO finally arrived, the rest of the staff mhm to move forward without her input. There is a time well, there is an expression in there that I think really can help determine or help you decide which verb tense to use. It is one that I've talked about in previous lessons. So, I'll go ahead and tell you the phrase that I'm referring to is by the time.

When you have that by the time, that is an indication of the verb tense that you should use, and then you just need to decide are we talking about the you know, something that happened in the past or are we referring to the future? So, in this case, by the time the CEO finally arrived, all right? Something had already happened. So, we're going to say had already decided. We're talking about the past perfect. So, you could say the past before the past. And I don't know if it helps to say the past before the past. The two time thing The two markers, the CEO arrived and the decision, both of them happened in the past. So, that is why we're going to use the past perfect. We're We're establishing this sequence of events. The decision happened before the arrival. It's indicating to, you know, the other person that you're speaking to what, you know, sequence of events.

The decision was made and then the person arrived. And then we fast forward to when we're having the when we're in the past. Here is the next one. He was exhausted when he got home because he mhm on that project since 5:00 in the morning. I want you to use the verb work. How would you What What tense are you going to use in order to complete the sentence? He was exhausted when he got home because he mhm on that project since 5:00 in the morning. Once again, there is a keyword in there that I think can help you determine or decide what, you know, what is the correct verb tense in this context, in this particular context. So, he was exhausted when he got home because, again, we're talking about something in the past because it'd been happening uh since 5:00 a.m. in the morning.

Since, just like for, is another indication of the perfect tense. And then you're just deciding, well, is it now it's in the past? I already mentioned that. Is the past perfect, the past perfect continuous? In this case, we're going to talk about we're going to use the past perfect continuous. He had He was exhausted when he got home because he had been working on the project since 5:00 a.m. in the morning. This duration in the past. It shows the cause of exhaustion because we're highlighting that duration in the past leading up to this point. And it also it to me it also implies that continuation. So, they they they're not done yet.

All right? Probably was exhausted, been working since 5:00 a.m., probably going to need to keep working because whatever it is, they're not done. This person is not done yet. He was exhausted when he got home because he had been working on the project since 5:00 in the morning. Excellent. Um Well done. I think many of you think many of you got that and that's what I want to say. Let's Here's the the final like kind of overall topic. Let's say we're going back to the future. All right? Little nice little shout-out to the old classic movie Back to the Future. What do you think? This time next week, I on a beach in the Maldives far away from my emails. Of course, this statement is not true.

I wish it were true. But if I were going to, you know, put myself in the situation, how what what would I say? What verb tense are you going to use? I want you to use the verb lie. This time next week, I mhm on a beach in the Maldives far away from my emails. Complete the sentence. So, we're talking about the future. Right? But of course, we're we're having this conversation right now, which would be you know, the present. But because we're talking about the future, we're going to use again that really that point in time. That's another key thing. N- uh we're talking about this time next week. That that you could consider it that that point in the future. So, we're going to use the future continuous. What will you be doing? I will be lying on a beach in the Maldives far away from uh far away from my emails. So, we're talking about future progress, the future continuous. We're going to use this to describe an action that will be in progress at a specific moment in the future. This time this week, that is my considered my moment. And then what will

I be doing? I will be lying on the beach that ev- even though the action we're talking about lying and doing nothing, that would be the the progress, the thing that you are doing. Uh I will be lying on a beach. I wish I wish this were true. Uh but unfortunately, it's not. Here is the next question for you. I think you guys got that. Excellent, well done. Um and Well, Lolly, um Hassan, nice. Give some shout-outs. Don't worry about the report. I mhm it by the time you wake up tomorrow morning. I want you to use the verb finish. How would you complete this? Don't worry about the report.

I it by the time you wake up tomorrow morning. So, keyword tomorrow, tomorrow morning. Of course, we're talking uh about the future. So, which verb tense are you going to use to accurately complete the sentence? Don't worry about the report. I mhm tomorrow when you wake up tomorrow morning. All right, in this case, we're going to use will have finished. I will have finished it by the time you wake up tomorrow morning. It is like you could think of it like the deadline tense, but we're going to use the future perfect. And you would refer to like this deadline in the future. It views the action as completed from a point in the future. So, when you wake up tomorrow morning, what what will have happened? I will have finished the report. Uh by the time you wake up in the morning, I will have gone to the gym. I will have eaten breakfast. By December, our team mhm this software for exactly 2 years. I want you to use the verb develop. And complete it with the correct verb tense. So, remember our topic back to the future. We're talking we're going we're going back. Yes, to the future. By December, I'll tell you right now that in this context is the future. By December, our team mhm this software for exactly 2 years. What do you think? This is a [laughter] little a little tricky. Uh all right, will have been developing this software for 2 years. I want you to use the future perfect continuous. Now, these verb tenses are you know, not the the ones that you're going to use all the time in conversation. That is why they're tricky. They're they are you know, to be honest, these are not the ones that are going to come up all the time. Of course, you talk about things in the past, so you're going to use the the past simple quite often. So, that 2 years we're talking about by December in that duration of time, we will have been doing something. We will have been developing this software for 2 years.

I want you to let me know. You can let me know in the comments. Let me know in the chats. How did you do on the quiz? Did you get 10 for 10? Did you get eight of them right? Nine of them right? Seven, six, doesn't matter. What I hope is that you learn something new or in general, maybe it's a little bit of review because you've come across these verb tenses before, whether you're listening to something like a movie, TV show, or you've read them in an article or in a book. So, it's just about reinforcing all saying.

Our Favorite Places to Visit in the United States | Natural Conversation

today we're going to talk to you about the best places to visit if you travel to the United States that's coming up [Music] in today's lesson we are going to share with you places that you should visit if you go to the United States and this is just our opinion I'm sure I'm sure other people will see this and be like no that place is terrible but this is just our opinion and and we wanted to share that with some of you if you happen to be traveling to the United States for for work or just for travel in general so what we've done is we've chosen some different categories and we've each picked a place that we think best represents that that category let's start with what's the the first category is best big city every country is known for for certain cities and those are typically the bigger city so in the United States what is the best what's your favorite big city I know this I think I mean hands down for me

San Francisco and it's not even a big city really by your standards yeah I mean I mean it is kind of big but that whole area there's a few big cities yeah I think it's very different than other US cities I think it's it's so geography makes it very beautiful because it's hilly so there are a lot of really nice views plus it's on the ocean coast and you can see you have a wonderful view of the ocean and there's just a lot about it that makes it really cool you have the tram the streetcars the it's just really pretty what's the weather's amazing I was gonna say what is the other thing that everybody says about San Francisco so a lot of people complain about the weather in San Francisco and they say yeah because they say like it's too cold but if you go in the summer I think a lot of people don't expect it to be because it's California and people think oh it's warm but it's there's basically no summer and no winter it's always spring and fall which for me is ideal I love it I love it so I think it's always very nice but do be prepared if you go there to bring the sweatshirt or a sweater because or jacket because it's windy and you are going to need it even in the summer yeah but we used to live there so I knew that's what you were I would say best big city you know to no surprise it's probably the most iconic city in the United States and that is New York City yeah so if you're gonna go to the US and go visit a big city I would suggest you go to New York because there there's really there's no place like it on earth it is it is what people say it is it's a concrete jungle once you get inside the city it's just building after building after building and it's yeah it's kind of amazing there's so much to do there's so much going on it's it's really it's also a melting pot absolutely yeah different people from all over the world so there's a lot to see and do there and I would recommend yeah checking out New York City it is expensive though so San Francisco oh my god they're probably two of the most expensive places in the u.s. so be prepared to spend some money what's the next category please for nature best place for nature do you want to share first anyone I can't share sure okay so I feel like a disclaimer should be that a lot of these places that I'm gonna talk about are in California or around California so my favorite place for nature Yosemite National Park I think purely because when I went there I was in awe absolute awe of how huge those those mountains look those rocks it just made me feel so tiny and just puts everything in perspective I I it it it's it's very difficult not to feel like you're in a postcard I was completely shocked a great place for hiking or even if you just want to drive through it yeah it's really impressive for me I would recommend that you go see the Grand Canyon which is another I think very well-known landmark especially for nature in the United States largest canyon in world so we did a road trip a couple years ago and drove by the Grand Canyon and it is it's just it's such an impressive sight what I'll tell you about the Grand Canyon just to show you how impressive it is is that when you first see the Grand Canyon and you walk up there and you're overlooking the entire Canyon and it's just like wow this is amazing this is incredible you just don't see it anywhere else and then it's one of those things that when we went there you can kind of I forget we were on the South Rim I think you can walk along the side for like maybe two or three kilometers and after walking along the side you know how you kind of get used to something and you know you have that initial like wow this is amazing and then after you know spending a couple hours out there you kind of just get used to it it's like it's still impressive but it's not that initial Wow cliffs and and with a view of the sea so I don't really like like flat beaches and the reason I say that is this place has so many of them is just so beautiful and it is the Pacific Northwest so it's like from what I've seen I was blown away by how beautiful the beaches were along like kind of an in the northwest of the country you know in in Oregon and Washington it's just so like everywhere you turn you stop on the coast and then you have this beautiful gorgeous view of the sea and also of the cliffs around it and it's just it's just I don't know very very nice it's just one of my favorite things to just kind of stare and look at the ocean and listen to the sounds and just kind of relax but I did want to say the reason why it's off the beaten path is because when you think of the beaches in the US and all of that you don't really you don't always think of like the Pacific Northwest people think of Florida or Southern California or yeah where the beaches are a little different they're beautiful and florescent there's sandy beaches yeah but it's it's just a different kind of experience and and if you're into nature hiking all over that you can have some gorgeous views and you see it all from like a distance from up high it's really cool my off-the-beaten-path place is a place you probably have heard of but it is just one that's more difficult to get to and it's a little out-of-the-way and that would be Alaska and the reason I say that is a long time ago I worked up in Alaska for a summer and definitely go during the summer there's so much to see there is a lot of diverse wildlife the mountains the geography it is it's it's a very it's a very cool spot and I think very unique for the United States because you don't find that in the lower 48 you don't find that same geography you definitely don't find the same wildlife so that would be my off the beaten path go to Alaska rent an RV and drive all through there visit the national parks next is the best tourist attraction so this is not really a city or a town but an actual attraction yeah that people would see what do you think best tourist attraction I invite this category I mean like something it's actually worth seeing that when you go there you're actually impressed with the way you're saying that's why I choose the Golden Gate Bridge San Francisco bias but it's so cool so like it's giant bridge but it looks so amazing you see it all over for I think it's one of the most I think it's the most instagrammed bridge in the world but not just because it's just such a beautiful view over the ocean but also and over the whole city it's just it's huge it's red it just photographs well and it's definitely worth seeing that's my best tourist attraction I would say another I don't know well-known tourist attraction even though I think they they have they have it in many countries all over the world now but I'd say if you're gonna go like check out Disneyworld it's an actual it's a little cheesier but it's another tourist attraction the reason I say Disneyworld is because if you go to Orlando it's not their army it's the one in Florida I'm not in California not Disneyland in California Disney World in Florida and the reason for that is because there are so many different theme parks in Disneyworld you have the Epcot Center MGM Studios you have there yeah Magic King there's just there's a lot of different things that you can do it doesn't matter your age there's a lot of cool stuff that you could find but I'd say again that is a very popular tourist attraction in the United States and it's not yeah it's not bad next we're gonna tell you about the best small town so if you're gonna go the US and you want to check out a small town where would you go this I really love this little town it's a it is a small small town it was super tiny it was we were going we were driving from Atlanta Georgia to Savannah right mm-hmm and somewhere in there we came across the town of Madison in Georgia and this place is gorgeous if you're interested in United States history it has some beautiful Antebellum architecture and it's actually really really hard to find because a lot of it was destroyed in in the Civil War and you know it's it's beautiful southern architecture with so much detail and I yeah it's very beautiful I definitely recommend a lot of the houses there have it and it's like worth driving these giant southern mansions and you're just like whoa look at that one oh look at that one so these beautiful house it'd be a place to go drive through because it is really small drive walk or quite weekend yeah

maybe a weekend it's not a place you'd go hang out for a week it's super tiny it's very very very small my best small town is not as small as Madison but it is also in the southeast and I would recommend Asheville Asheville North Carolina is a cool town it's it's known for I think it's it's a bit of a younger town it's up in the mountains so it's a cool mountain town a lot of things to do outdoors it's also I think a big more of a big music scene too if you want to go see a lot of live music a lot of different shows check out Asheville that's yeah it's it's another good spot to go spend a weekend or spend a few days if you want to see kind of a different side to America because I think when people go to most countries they go to these big cities yeah San Francisco New York LA

Chicago it's always good to kind of get outside of those bigger cities and see some other places so yeah Asheville North Carolina so I hope you guys enjoyed learning about our recommendations if you're going to travel to the United States and now we want to hear from you if you are going to go to the United States which place would you like to visit it doesn't have to be something that was on our list but someplace that you have either been to before or you've heard of let us know in the comments where would you like to go if you're going to visit the United States if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button down below and as always thanks so much for watching and we'll see you next time

PERPLEXING GRAMMAR Mistakes That Are Holding You Back

I want to see how much you already know when it comes to some perplexing grammar because well English grammar it can be a little tricky there are many rules structures nuances so learning this and gaining a better understanding of this perplexing grammar will definitely help you reach your fluency goals my name is Wes the channel is interactive English and if you would like to improve your grammar Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teach teacher so if you would like to access and get these lesson notes right next to me check out the link Down Below in the description you can join my email Community if you are already a part of it then check your inbox I have sent them to you so this is a quiz lesson and I would like you to participate write your answers in the chat in the comments I love hearing from you this is after all it is interactive English I want you to take part in these lesson that is what it is all about so here is your first question I want you to identify the incorrect use of the subjunctive mood so which one is used incorrectly a I wish he were here B I wish uh if you were if I were you I would talk to her or C if I was you I would talk to her what do you think you can just some of this is going to be multiple choice so it'll be very quick to respond but I'll give you just a moment to think of the answer and then of course I'll tell you and talk about why and try to give you this information so that it'll help you get a better understanding of what we're talking about so looking at this I I didn't think it was a trick question even though sometimes uh if you're taking an exam this really trips people up because I asked you to identify the incorrect use so which one is not correct and I hope that you said c if I was you I would talk to her so this one is this is not the correct use of the subjunctive mood so I think many of you rock that excellent Loi teayo Julia Perfect all right great to see so many familiar people so in this is a quick explanation right here with the subjunctive mood um were should be used instead of was in hypothetical statements like if I were you so it is the subun because as you can see the subject and the verb do not agree I were and that is what that is what makes it the subjunctive so the other two they work all right I wish he were here and if I were you I would talk to her the next question right here um choose the correct form of the word what do you think how can we M between the two so I'm giving you the word different but I want you to choose the correct form and some of these I think are going to be a little easier than others um I I would say in general this is definitely Upper Intermediate to Advanced grammar the the different things that we're going to be talking about but how would you complete this sentence how can we M between the two I will say that a lot of the things that uh we're going to talk about even though some of them may seem simple this is when people make small minor mistakes when it comes to either speaking or writing which are the two productive skills so in this case I'm giving you different this is the adjective but in the case of our question we're missing a verb so basically I'm asking you to figure out well what other word in the word family can complete that sentence and if we want to change this to a verb then the answer would be differentiate how can we differentiate between the two so the word differentiate this is the correct verb form and I've given you other parts of the word family down below the noun difference the verb differentiate the adjective different and the adverb differently now looking at these two pictures you can see that well one is an alligator and the other is a crocodile and basically the way that I I think that you differentiate between the two is crocodiles have a longer and thinner snout than than alligators that is one way to differentiate between the two all right you can let me know if you got that correct or or answering these questions hit that like button let me know those hearts I love seeing them that tells me that okay you are participating actively participating in the lesson what do you think choose the correct structure with parallel structure so which which of these sentence is an example of parallel structure a she likes reading books writing essays and to study history B she likes reading books writing essays and studying history and C she likes to read books to write essays and studying history what do you think now I I feel like in this case if I were just to ask you okay what is parallel structure I I think often people might say well

I'm not really sure but looking at these sentences I feel like you're probably going to be able to piece it together and choose the correct sentence that is a good example of parallel structure so as I went through and was reading those sentences and even if you're looking at them right now I I feel like you're probably able to tell like okay two this the sentences are not the same so the correct answer is B she likes reading books writing essays and studying history excellent uh Ava Miranda uh Loi adelon so basically parallel structure requires all elements in a list to be in the same form so in this case we're talking about jirens Reading Writing studying we're using the Jaren and in those other two sentences there was an infinitive that that was in there like that last one um you know to read books to write essays and studying history it just if if you're not going to follow parallel structure it's just going to make it seem sound a bit awkward uh and and really clunky if you're either writing or speaking so this is something that is very important and that you should follow the next question that I have for you I think this one may be a little trickier choose the correct form she would rather you m in here so I'm giving you the two words not smoke and I just want you to complete the sentence are you going to complete the sentence with a don't smoke B not smoke C didn't smoke and d uh not to smoke what do you think the I I say this is tricky or a little trickier and I will explain why but there is well one correct answer between those uh four choices that you have what do you think a b c d she would rather you in here so I see this one I I think it's a little trickier I see a little bit of a mix of responses but the correct answer is C didn't smoke so basically after would rather we use the past tense for hypothetical situations so the past tense did not didn't smoke is the correct form now I say it's a little tricky because in casual colloquial English sometimes people don't follow grammar rules we just talked about the subjunctive mood and somebody you saying well if I were you I would do this it is not uncommon to hear somebody break this Rule and they just say if I was you so that is a form that you will hear and in this case I I would say the same thing you may hear somebody say well she would rather you um not smoke in here and to give you an example if uh you want to compare the usage of some of these different phrases I think a great resource is engram viewer this is just a collection of written English and basically if you have a couple of different phrases and you want to know well which one is more commonly used you can put them in there and they'll they'll graph it for you so you get kind of an idea as to which one uh is more commonly used in English so I put in the three statements would rather you didn't would rather you not would rather you don't and as you can see would rather you did not ra would rather you didn't is the common response but would rather you not is also used and and it gives you an idea uh as to the difference between those and the frequency in which they are used so this is a great resource engram viewer I would check it out especially if you are writing and you're trying to think about what's the best way to word a sentence and which phrase would you like to use here is the next question choose the best verb tense to express the following I am waiting for the bus for over 20 minutes I have uh B I have waited for the bus for over 20 minutes and c I have been waiting for the bus for over 20 minutes which uh you probably see in my instruction that I I did not use correct I used the word best choose the best verb tense to express this idea right here and I I will tell you why I think this is the best verb tense in this context somebody is at a bus stop and they're waiting and then they say this sentence and I think they would accurately Express this idea when they say sentence C I have been waiting for the bus stop for over 20 minutes so in this case I would recommend that you use the present perfect progressive or present perfect continuous because it expresses an action that basically it started in the past it is continued to the present and is will likely continue into the future and the one thing that I also want to point out when it comes to the present perfect continuous is that there really is an emphasis on the duration of time that this has been going on so when I think of somebody saying this sentence they are perhaps frustrated the bus is late and you're like oh I've been waiting for the bus for 20 minutes and you want to emphasize the duration of time that is why I think that the present perfect continuous is the best answer because technically you could use the present perfect yeah I've waited for the bus for over 20 minutes but again in this case I think I think you should stick with the present perfect continuous or present perfect progressive it's the same thing what do you think about this question right here which of the following sentences uses the correct form of who and whom I know that I've we've done these grammar quizzes before and typically I will throw in a question when it comes to who and whom so this for this quiz this is your question so which of the following sentences uses the correct form a whom is going to the party B who is going to the party or C I don't know who he is what do you think a b or c the correct form of who and whom so I I think this is good if you all are doing well that is perfect again let me know hit that like button that tells me that you're learning new things and one thing I want to reiterate even if you know know many of these answers you're getting them correct that is perfect but still when you're having a see you nice uh let's see choose the sentence that uses a conditional correctly so I'm asking you to identify the correct conditional sentence is the answer a if I would have known I would have helped you B if I had known I would have helped you or C if I knew I would have helped you what do you think which of these sentences is the correct conditional sentence and for bonus points you can tell me which conditional is the sentence is it the first conditional second conditional third conditional what do you think that would be my my bonus uh bonus question for you so looking at these sentences I hope and I think many of you did choose B if I had known I would have helped you so this is the third conditional I saw some of you got that as well it's talking about a hypothetical situation in the past something has already happened it cannot be changed it is hypothetical and in that case you're going to use had plus the past participle and then you're going to that that is going to be in your if statement and then the result you're going to use would have plus the past participle so that is an example of the third conditional this I I don't think this is too tricky but still I think this is something that a Nuance in English that is important to understand choose the best question for the following statement when having a casual conversation so somebody makes this statement my friend is traveling to South America which question do you think is the the best if somebody is you're talking with someone they say well yeah my friend is traveling to South America and then you ask this question are you going to say a where are he or she going B where are they going or C where is he or she going which of these questions would you ask when having a casual conversation and notice I have I have said casual conversation several times I'm I'm trying to emphasize that so this is a little I don't want to say tricky but again I would say more of a Nuance because in this case I would say I I think you should ask B where are they going so the thing that I want to point out the Nuance is the singular they so in this case somebody says my friend is traveling to South America let's say that I have never met your friend I don't know if uh your friend is a man or a woman so I'm not really sure which pronoun to use now typically you would use he or she but if you are in a conversation it is not common you're more likely to see this Construction in writing but even when you're writing if you end up using it quite a bit it just is going to seem clunky and that is why I think it is preferred to use the singular they so you can use the singular they it it's become the pronoun of choice to replace he and she in cases where the gender of the antecedent the word um the word the pronoun refers to is unknown in this case my friend would be the unknown and in that case I'm just going to use they where are they going I I the reason why I emphasize casual conversation because you might find in more well formal circumstances they say no no no don't use the singular they use he or she however I would challenge that notion with the following because even the here this little uh exert the Associated Press settles the matter so I'll just read this quickly it says while it may seem awkward to use the singular they the Associated Press weighed in on the matter in March of 2017 it announced that the AP Style Style book will accept the plural they them in there to refer to a singular antecedent when the alternative wording is awkward or Clum clumsy I just mentioned if you keep saying you know he and she he and she he and she it is going to sound a bit awkward so I I feel like even the other more formal styles especially if you're talking about University academic writing MLA APA it is becoming more and more accepted but I would say in casual conversation that is this is something that you will definitely definitely hear I end up using it all the time and it just you know it's it's natural here is your next question which sentence uses reported speech correctly so we're talking about reported speech which one uh is using it correctly a she said that she had visited the museum yesterday B she said that she has visited the museum yesterday or C she said she visited the museum yesterday and I meant then in C there should be another quotation at the end of it is supposed to be a quotes around that she visited the museum yesterday what do you think a b or c i I feel like looking at these examples it's probably a little easier to spot when thinking about okay reported speech how is how do we structure this and as you can see many of you awesome can't get anything by you today uh a is the correct answer she said that she had visited the museum yesterday yesterday this is an example of reported speech because in reported speech the past perfect had visited is used to describe an action completed before the reporting verb said so a is the correct answer excellent well done well done everyone I'm GNA hopefully let let's see let's see if you get all of them and uh if if some of you just got all of them correct today that'll be very impressive what do you think complete the sentence with the correct verb tense by the time you arrive I my work so I'm giving you the main verb which is finish and I want you to use that verb complete the sentence so that it's correct by the time you arrive I my work and I I was about to give you a hint I don't think I need to and I feel like that would make a little too easy in that case so the one of the key words or the phrase that dependent um Clause by the time you arrive so that tells us really we're we're talking about something in the future and the correct verb form would be the future perfect tense by the time number one by next Friday okay I'm establishing that point in the future by next Friday I will have finished my report will have finished or if I say in five years okay that is my point in the future in five years I will have graduated from University will have graduated one more another phrase that I think people say especially now that we're in December by the end of the year all right it's coming up by the end of the year that's my point in the future she will have saved enough money to buy a car will have saved so just something to keep in mind we're talking about the future perfect continuous and I I think just reading and going through some of these example sentences just really reinforces the grammar that is something I would definitely recommend that you do try to make it a habit read each day an article uh a book because you're just seeing the grammar uh the structure and you're really learning it passively choose the correct sentence there's only well you got a 50-50 chance two choices so I want you to choose the correct sentence a neither the teacher nor the students was aware of the change or B neither the teacher nor the students were aware of the change which one is the correct sentence perhaps I I think maybe everybody's doing a much better job today typically I don't really do many multiple choice quizzes but often it's like just a fill-in the blank so possibly giving you this multiple choice uh probably makes it a bit easier so just going through these sentences I can see well done um V Angela Teo Loi um sampa just throwing out some some quick shout outs John well done B is the correct answer neither the teacher nor the students were aware of the change so we're talking about the phrase neither nor so when the subjects are joined by neither nor the verb agrees with the subject closer to the verb so in this case we're talking about students that is the subject closer to the verb students is plural so we're going to use were students were neither the teacher nor the students were aware of the change great job everyone perfect again if you got that just let me know hit that like button it tells me all right you guys are uh perfecting and fine-tuning your Grammar skills choose the correct option to complete the sentence and uh I don't I don't think this is too tricky we'll leave as soon as the train this is the sentence how are you going to best complete this sentence what are you going to say a arrives B will arrive C has arrived or D arrived will leave as soon as the train one thing I think that that would help especially as we go through these is to just say the sentence to yourself say it out loud and just see which of these words uh comes out so I think if you were to say this sentence we'll leave as soon as the train arrives a is the correct answer great job everyone you guys are rocking this so for the explanation we're going to use arrive when talk talking about we're talking about future events we use the present simple tense After Time expressions like as soon as so this is my time expression we're talking about in the future because you see that we will we will leave as soon as the train arrives that is our present simple so this is again the I I think you did a great job I will say this is perplexing is a little challenging difficult I do hear people make small mistakes when it comes to either speaking or writing and the more you practice reinforce this I I think it's just going to help you reduce those mistakes greatly so if you knew a lot of this it's good review again if you would like to get these lesson notes click on the link down in the description join our email Community I send out a lot of different notes resources lesson updates course information so please uh join and uh it's always it's always just great to hear from you but I hope that you enjoy the rest of your day thank you for participating and I will see you next time for another lesson so long

PICK UP has 20 Different Meanings | Phrasal Verb Vocabulary

today I'm gonna talk to you about one phrasal verb with 20 different meanings and that phrasal verb is pick up everyone my name is Wes from interactive English videos dot-com and we are all about helping you practice and improve your English so that you can achieve fluency and today I want to talk to you about a phrasal verb just one phrasal verb and that is pick up and I want to teach you 20 different meanings for this one phrasal verb and this is very useful because well especially phrasal verbs many of them have multiple meanings but what I want to do is give you specific examples as to when a person might use each of these meanings so that you have something to associate it with and the goal is not for you to memorize all of these different meanings just try to follow along and understand the examples that I give you because the more you read the more you listen over time you will learn all of these different meanings and you'll be able to use them correctly so let's get into it the first meaning is just to lift something up or you could lift someone up and you're using your arms to lift this thing up for example I I have a baby girl and I like to lift her up and hold her in my arms I can lift her up to lift something up pickup also means to make someone feel better and I think often like kind of when you're getting ready to start doing something for example I could say my morning coffee really picks me up and I can just get going and start my day it picks me up it makes me feel better in the same context you could use it as a noun you may hear somebody say you know

I just need I need a little pick-me-up and and this is again it's something to make you feel better so that you can get going I just need a little pick-me-up but it's true drinking coffee in the morning you know it just it picks me up I feel a little better and then I can start my day but I like coffee it picks me up and never lets me down also gives you heartburn and flattens your dream it also means to get back up after being knocked to the ground and I I guess you could say that you could use this both literally and figuratively so literally would be if you actually fall to the ground maybe you bump into someone or perhaps you're playing a sport a physical activity and you fall to the ground and you need to pick yourself back up a figurative example would be like if you you get knocked down mentally that you are really sad or upset and then another person might tell you like you know you got to keep going you got to just pick yourself up and keep going perhaps somebody maybe loses their job and they're really sad about it and their friend might try to encourage them and say look you got to just you're gonna pick yourself up keep going go apply for other jobs just just pick yourself right back up and keep fighting but my buttons stop crying look you need to pick yourself up man up pick up also means that something is improving or developing basically it's getting better and I would tell you to think about maybe like the economy or a business you may hear it used in that context somebody could say like well when's the economy going to pick up when's it going to improve and get better or a business somebody could say well lately business it's really picking up it's improving it's developing it's picking up pick up also means to collect someone typically by car you you have a car and then you will go pick someone up and you will collect that person and you will hear it used with this meaning all the time when are you going to pick me up where are you going to pick me up somebody needs to come pick me up still pick me up at 8:00 what time do you want to pick me up Sunday you will pick Ellie up oh brother picks me up police car then we have the meaning of well cleaning or tidying some area you just want to make it look nicer and you could say that you're going to pick up your room or maybe you're talking about your home like yeah I just I need to pick up a few things around the home I need to clean it a little bit make it look a little nicer I just to pick up around the home my mom would always tell me this when I was a kid and she would always tell me look Wes you gotta go pick up your room before you go outside and play before you do anything go pick up your room maybe we could work out some kind of a deal you pick up around a place then we have the meaning to arrest someone so you you know that with this meaning we're talking about the police that the police might pick someone up they would arrest them I could say well last night the police they picked up a suspect and we'll see we'll see if they committed the crime but they picked up a suspect last night just one unless you know the area is safe because they picked up that suspect so again listen for the this meaning

let's let's go out to the bars tonight and and we'll try to pick up some girls we'll try to talk to them and have a sexual relationship to pick someone up it's not I I mean women could use it as well if they want to try to meet a man but anytime that that a person wants to informally have some sexual relationship they might use this phrasal verb in that context to pick someone up okay just the idea of you and he and all these women no no no you can't take him away from me I got a great partner to pick up girls with finally then we have the meaning to pay for something and in this case I think about well like a bill that there is some service that you need to pay for maybe you're at a restaurant and somebody could say well who's going to pick up the bill I'm not gonna pick up the bill maybe you don't want to pick up the bill I don't know who's going to pick up the bill and in that case they're talking about paying for this this service and I think this is commonly used when you're eating out at a restaurant and somebody would pick up the bill now another meaning which is very similar is that you can also use pickup to say that you are buying something and I say it's similar because both of them involve money but it's different and that you're talking about you are you're actually buying some physical thing like I could say that you know we went to the grocery store and we picked up some great deals something was on sale and we picked up these different items we bought them or maybe I I find a really good deal on a

TV and say well you know I picked up a big-screen TV that was on sale it was a good deal and I picked it up I didn't you know physically pick it up I'm saying that I bought this thing I picked it up luckily I just picked up a new bottles lavender essential oils turn around pick up also means to understand information and there's a funny little expression in English there goes are you picking up what I'm putting down I'm serious are you guys are you picking up what I'm putting down I'm basically asking are you picking up do you understand the information that I'm putting down the information that I'm telling you are you picking up what I'm putting down that that's just a fun little sentence but it really kind of highlights the meaning of well understanding information pick up picking up when I planned out all right

I know what's going on here I'm picking up what you're putting down it also means to acquire some skill or talent over a period of time and I think learning languages is a great example when when using the phrasal verb like this so I could say that right now you guys you're trying to pick up English you're trying to learn the English language so we can use it when talking about languages you could use it talking about well a skill like maybe a musical instrument and I say you know I'm trying to pick up guitar at the moment it's taking some time but I'm just hopefully one day I'll pick it up I will learn the thing I will learn this skill I'll pick it up yesterday goodie promise our profiles we can also use pickup to talk about acquiring an illness or disease that if you get sick and you got it from someone else you you might pick it up from that person or an example I could say well last week I picked up a really bad cold at work so many people were sick and I picked up this cold I picked up this illness this disease but I was visiting that bird town on business when I came down with some light-headed and I'm afraid I might have picked up swine flu if you'd like to see a doctor you'll have to fill out the paperwork we can also use pickup to talk about starting again or just to continue so if you're doing something and you stopped you are going to continue at that point you are going to pick up there you're not going to start back at the beginning and in that case you might hear somebody say let's pick up where we left off that you were doing some activity you stopped and then you're going to pick up where you left off we can pick up where we left off listen Ally maybe we could just pick up from where we left off what are you saved we pick up where we left off pick up can mean to receive or detect some kind of sound or even a signal and in this case I would tell you think about your cell phone and sometimes you you can't use your cell phone because you're not picking up a signal you're not picking anything up and and that is a great example as to when you would use this meaning to detect a sound or a signal see if I failed to pick up a signal it also means to identify something and what I would tell you to think about maybe doctors and you could say that well doctors are able to pick up early signs of a heart attack and you're able to identify some sort of sign and you would pick it up I it also means to notice something that is not obvious so this is a little similar but the the not obvious part is different so the example that I would give you would be think of a dog maybe a police dog and you could say well the dog is able to pick up the scent that if the dog is looking for the criminal you could say well the dog is able to pick up the scent because it's not obvious to everyone else but the dog can notice it the dog can pick up the scent and then hopefully if they find the criminal then the police will pick up they'll pick up the criminal they will arrest them and [Music] pick up also means to accelerate to go faster and you might hear somebody somebody'd say you need to pick up your man you need to defend this person or even in soccer somebody could say well who's going to pick up this player right here who's going to defend this person so right now you are picking up the English language and you are doing an excellent job because you are able to learn and and pick up the different meanings of this one phrasal verb and I know that that it can be confusing I know that it can be difficult just don't let it get you down but if it does get you down you just got to pick yourself back up all right so I hope that you learn some new meanings for for this one phrasal verb and next week I'm just gonna pick up right where I left off thank you guys so much for watching and I will see you next time

POLITICAL VOCABULARY Advanced Words & Phrases You Should Know

this is a bipartisan video to help you build your vocabulary with some Advanced political words and phrases and let's just start with that word right there bipartisan this means supported by or consisting of two political parties and it really does have a positive connotation so I thought we would start and should start with something positive and there are some common collocations with this adjective and these are words that are frequently used together so you might hear somebody talk about bipartisan support or a bipartisan agreement a bipartisan Vote or even a bipartisan committee speaker Kimbell hook Strat has promised a bipartisan effort to amend the legislation and get it passed number one we need to reform but we can't do it without bipartisan support the president will announce a major bipartisan agreement in the state of the union now if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary on a variety of topics like politics and many others then please subscribe to the channel turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and if you subscribe I'm not just going to treat you like any old other subscriber I'm actually going to listen to you I'm going to try to answer to you and I will treat you as though you were one of my constituents and that is the next word that I want to talk to you about constituent this is basically a voter or a person who can vote in a particular particular area of the country and the opposite of a constituent or I guess it would be the opposite would be a representative a representative represents voters or they represent their constituents and sometimes you may hear these words used in the same sentence so I could say the representatives in Washington will have to go home and answer to their constituents you're asking us to abandon a man who's inspired millions of our constituents try to repair the damage done to my beloved family and my esteemed constituents then we have incumbent this is a person who has or had a particular official position so in the United States which is where I'm from there are really two people who are running for an elected government position and that's a Democrat and a Republican and typically one person is the new candidate and the other person is the incumbent and in those situations the incumbent definitely has the advantage and when an incumbent retires then there would just be two new candidates but the incumbent is the person who is in office now breaking news out of North Carolina Democratic incumbent cam Bri getting a run for his money by newcomer Marty Huggins the next word it's a negative one and that is demagogue now you may use this word in other contexts outside of politics but I think often it is used to talk about a politician so this is a person especially a politician who really gets support by exciting the emotions of Ordinary People rather than by having good or morally right ideas so this is how weird things are in the US because each side May accuse the other of being a demagogue people on the left May accuse Trump of being a demagogue people on the right May accuse Biden of being a demagogue and this is just the time that we live in your leadership has raised the stakes of hate to a level where we can no longer separate the demagogue from the truly inspired then there's a word that is used a lot nowadays and that is the adjective polarized this word really just means divided but specifically divided into two opposing groups and you will certainly come across this adjective if you are listening to the news or reading a newspaper because people might talk about an issue that has become polarized or just saying that people nowadays are polarized so look for it listen for it you will certainly come across this word we're more polarized now ever that's understandable we're in a tribal moment we are frequently told that American politics are polarized on the right Republicans work together with other Republicans and on the left Democrats work with other Democrats then there's filibuster this refers to a long speech in order to delay or prevent a law from being made or past and you can use this as a verb or a noun so to filibuster something I could say I plan to filibuster the proposed legislation or as a noun a filibuster I started a filibuster to stop the proposed legislation so in the US this is just a legislative technique to stall or stop voting on something and in order to give you a better idea as to how this word is used in context I have some news headlines for you state senators filibuster ahead of legislative deadline filibuster returns to Nebraska legislature over Bill targeting fentanyl crisis Senator Jeff Merkley on how to fix the filibuster because yeah it's a little screwy it's kind of broken and here are some more examples because I love giving you a Variety article 7 section 3 allows for a citizen filibuster if I stand here and refuse to yield my time you are prohibited from voting on the bill let the filibustering begin next is impeach this means to make a formal statement saying that a public official is guilty of a serious offense in connection with their job and it's a word that once again is used more and more often in the United States so you could use it as a verb to impeach someone or as a noun impeachment or even as an adjective impeachable saying something is an impeachable offense and I want you to keep in mind that impeachment is a political process you're not really going to go to jail but you may lose your job so now for a little trivia how many US presidents have been impeached uh I'll tell you the answer is three and you may be able to think of two of the three well the first one is Trump who was twice impeached once in 2019 and again in 2021 Bill Clinton was impeached in 1998 and then Andrew Jackson was impeached in 1868 and of the presidents who were impeached none of them were convicted so I pretty much ran the place into the ground after 2 months and got impeached

I changed my vote I vote to impeach me too I still have loyalty to my party tongue and where's their loyalty they were going to impeach you then we have referendum this is a vote in which all people in a country or area are asked to give their opinion about or decide an important political or social question and this noun may be followed by the preposition on so in the US in some states there may be a referendum on marijuana legalization or a referendum on abortion or a referendum on school boards but this year there are going to be a number of different referendums you know to some a simple Schoolhouse whiteboard but to those in the know a referendum on Democracy But ultimately this was a referendum on the leadership of George W bush the state of Nevada is trying to uh pass a referendum where uh State uh local government employees cannot have mustaches then we have ballot which is a pretty common word you may be familiar with it already but it has a couple of different meanings and there are some common collocations with this noun so the first meaning is just a system of secret voting and collocations you could say that someone was elected by Ballot or something was done by secret ballot or you could say that you're going to hold a ballot it also refers to a piece of paper on which you write your vote so I could say that the referendum is going to appear on the ballot or a collocation would be to cast your ballot a very common noun definitely one you should know the Americans are heading to the polls to cast their ballots for the next US president all 48,000 voters and who each one of them voted for I thought this was a secret ballot next is winner take all and this is really about a competition in which The Winner Takes the entire prize so it really means what it says but you may be wondering how does this word relate to politics so in the US we have this screwy system called The Electoral College and this is actually the way that we choose our president it's not by the popular vote the person has to win 270 Electoral College votes that is the magic number so each state is given a number of electors based on the size of the state and within the state whoever wins the popular vote wins them all and that's why we say win or take all because even if it's very close if one person wins by one vote they get all of the electors win or take all it's screwy to me it doesn't make any sense but this is the way it's done in just about every state so let me give you some more political examples using this phrase okay guys one match winner take all one more time winner take all last game coming up we going to take all agreed think tank this is the next phrase that I want to teach you because it refers to a group of experts that are gathered together by an organization especially a government in order to consider different problems and try to come up with ways to solve these problems so you might hear someone say that a study or or some research was done by a think tank now even though think tanks May consist of different experts they're not really without bias because some think tanks have been created to support a progressive agenda while other think tanks support a conservative agenda and here are some well-known think tanks The Brookings institution the Heritage Foundation Pew Research Center whenever you hear these names you now know that they are thinking tanks I think it's exciting Springfield is the center of the political Universe I feel like a pundit in a think tank think tanky I thought you would be a tremendous addition to this think tank this woman Simone Iir is the president of a think tank called European independence league then there's to Lobby this means to try to persuade a politician or the government or some official group that something should or should not be done or that some law should be changed so someone may Lobby someone else for something and to give you a better idea as to how this verb is used in context here are some more news headlines Nebraska high school students Lobby legislators on a new program with a focus on diverse perspectives Spain set to Lobby EU Partners to recognize Palestinian State and student leaders

Chancellor Lobby and DC for increased financial aid and stable research funding I should also tell you that this word is commonly used as a noun a Lobby to refer to the group that tries to persuade politicians so in this case you have the gun lobby the meat Lobby the telecon lobby there are many different lobbies our president is prepared to Lobby Congress to lift the NASA exclusion policy welcome to the grand opening of our Whatchamacallit which thanks to the lobbying of Lisa

Simpson we built instead of a new baseball stadium and then we have poll this is a study in which people are asked to share their opinions about a subject or person and in an election year this is a word that you're going to hear quite often so you may hear statements like the polls show that Biden is ahead or the polls show that Trump is ahead and I'm also using this as a noun a poll but you can use this as a verb as well if I were to say we pulled a thousand people to ask their opinions on Free Speech in my personal opinion I think polls are really for reporting news and just capturing people's attention I I think in the US they've been somewhat inaccurate but what I think is more interesting are the exit polls this is the activity of asking people how they voted after they leave a polling station which is where people vote in order to discover what the results will likely be of course these polls are more reliable because people have already voted but it kind of helps you understand where people are at as far as what they think about certain topics and issues but these are words that you will hear a lot a poll or exit poll oh don't worry about the polls they're just a sampling CH don't get ahead of yourself we did a flash poll 68% of pans now believe you're lying about where you were born early exit polls are good the West Coast exit polls are looking bad and now for a little review because of course I am going to Lobby you to watch another video Lesson as my constituent that is what I would recommend and I suppose that if there were a study done by all think tanks the research would show that watching interactive English just helps you reach your fluency goals but in in all seriousness I would love it if you hit the like button and you could think of it like a secret ballot and later on I will check the results and really it's going to be a referendum on my teaching abilities so I I'm I'm not going to keep talking because then I'll just sound like I'm filibustering which is not what I want so I'm going to wrap things up but I really would appreciate it if you hit that like button if you enjoyed the lesson and learned something new but as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

POPULAR AMERICAN SLANG (Millennials & Gen Z)

let's learn some American slang and the words and phrases that I'm getting ready to teach you are mostly used by Millennials and gen Z technically speaking I am Gen X so I don't personally use many of these words and phrases but it is good for your listening comprehension and it's also good to stay up to date this lesson is good for me as well because I need to stay up to date with New Slang this this may be the future of English so the first phrase that I have for you is to keep it 100. this means to be truthful to be authentic and this is actually a phrase that I learned recently from a student of mine from Brazil I appreciate it Chris keep it 100. I don't know it maybe sounds a little awkward when I say it but this is a phrase that has gone a bit more mainstream lately so you may hear it in the movie or TV show everyone knows that keep it 100 and they do seem to as they say keep it 100. I gotta keep a wine with myself too keep it in a honey another fun thing about this phrase is that people may use it when texting with the Emoji 100 so to give you some examples I have some tweets to share with you can you keep it 100 with us keep it 100 y'all try in these loyalty is rare if you find it keep it 100. the next slang word that I have for you is extra now normally this adjective means more than what is needed or usual can I have some extra sauce or let's do something extra special and people will use this as an attributive adjective that comes before the noun when we're talking about slang meaning it's slightly different so extra means something that is well just attention grabbing dramatic too much and it really has a negative connotation most of the time you're going to use it to refer to a person and in this case you may use it as a predicate adjective and it's going to follow the verb to be he is so extra she's being so extra that's so extra and I'm using so just to give it a bit of emphasis I seriously don't know how you're ever married to her shoes so extra she's a little extra yeah angry he was a pro and he brought quite a lot of fire path such an easy target yeah he was so extra right right I could take that girl out with like a fly sword he rocks up in this Urban Assault Vehicle then we have Vibe check so this is a way of well checking someone's attitude personality see how they're doing and it's really done in a friendly way this is often spontaneous and said at random times like you just want to check in with your friend and see how things are going and all of this is according to Urban Dictionary so to show you how this phrase is used in context I have some news headlines for you decoding Vibe check the word overused by gen Z so I guess this phrase is pretty common Vibe check big Tech is losing its luster for the class of 2023 amid mounting layoffs and an uncertain economy I like how Forbes is trying to be cool Vibe check and then Google Maps will now Vibe check your destination for you I suppose that's a good feature and you get to check people's Vibes before you go there and then there's rent free now normally this phrase would mean exactly what it says that you are living somewhere and not having to pay rent but when we're talking about slang it's referring to an obsession and somebody has this thought they can't stop thinking about a person in which case you could say that this person is living rent free in your head and that is a common collocation with this phrase to live rent free in someone's head think about it I live foreign nope they do not get another second free rent in our heads right then we have Stan I like this one because I think it's become more and more common this is referring to an obsessive fan and I can actually tell you where this word comes from so it originated in the year 2000 with the Eminem song Stan that's the name of the song and the song is talking about a person named Stan who is an obsessive fan I play the song for you but I don't want to get a copyright claim but often you would use this and talk about some celebrity and then follow it with the word stands if you want to say that these people are obsessive like Taylor Swift stands or

BTS stands or interactive English stands I don't know if many of you out there are just obsessive fans but if you are you could say that you're a Stan and if you are an interactive English Stan let me know in the comments then we have simp now this is a noun and it refers to a person typically a man who really desires the attention and affection of another person typically a woman so you would say that someone is a simp and often I really think you're going to hear younger Generations use this word she's a fake giraffe who eats all the good leaves from the top of the tree Jake C is her little simp who just stays in a shitty relationship because he's too afraid to be alone but to give you a little more context here are some news headlines for you rapper T Payne has labeled Drake king of simp music what is

you think that this is based okay and I feel a little ridiculous saying one right after the other but it's good to get a little bit of review alright Vibe check how are things going okay are you enjoying the lesson are you learning some new slang if so let me know by hitting that like button let's keep going with the next word which is sus and this is just short for saying something is suspect or suspicious this is an adjective that means giving the impression that someone or something is questionable or dishonest and once again I think mostly younger Generations are going to use this word at least younger than Gen X I figure out what his angle is the one thing we're calling that man is sus because that's what he is he is so sorry yeah Wyoming weird why everything so sucks then we have bougie and this is derived from the French word bourgeoisie referring to the class of owners and

Merchants that were experiencing new wealth back in the 16th century but the slang meaning of bougie comes from hip-hop and it was popularized by the group Migos and I don't know who these guys are I don't listen to their music but just so you know where it comes from this word is an adjective and it just means luxurious in Lifestyle Rich special fancy so you could say my bougie friend bought a new house or she's so bougie with that Louis Vuitton bag or look at Wes with his bougie outfit and I'm sure you're thinking that well that example is sus because you can see my outfit and yeah it's not very luxurious but you get the idea and then there's basic this is an adjective that's used as an insult to say that someone or something is boring or uncool I could say look I'm Gonna Keep it 100. this party is basic and I'm leaving you may also hear people use the phrase basic which is a common phrase so you could say it is a collocation with this adjective you basic they called you a basic my back charm our family should wear uniforms with basic across the front and I'm like that is Lady Gaga oh your grandma's such a basic now for a little review and this is possibly going to sound weird but just because you're learning this slang do not feel like you have to use it this is just my advice and perhaps you think my advice is based because if you are trying to force slang into a conversation people may think that you're trying to be all extra and you're gonna sound a little strange like I may sound right now because some of you may be looking at me you see this Gen X person doing a lesson on slang and you think you know this guy is just a simp he's just trying to get a bunch of attention I don't think that's true I try to create a variety of English lessons for all of my fans especially my interactive English stands you know who you are and even though this review sounds a little weird I'm just trying to keep it 100.
