vocabulary and again we're going to keep building those positive learning habits and I want you to just put away your translator if you have a translator just put it away you do not need it in order to express yourself I know as a beginner it's a quick and easy solution but the goal is not to stay at the level of a beginner you want to improve and when you're constantly translating it's really it's really going to delay your learning it's not as meaningful and you're likely to forget so as I mentioned I want you to start looking up new words using an English dictionary and as you learn the meaning of these new words and you feel comfortable that you understand maybe how the word is used I then want you to make a word association because that way it it becomes more meaningful and you're more likely to remember the meaning as well as put that word up here in your active memory so when you make a word association you're you're basically you're taking a word and you are connecting it with a person or thing it's like you're able to then put a picture in your mind and there there have been many studies about how useful word association is when it comes to language acquisition and this is really how we acquire our native language we learn a new word and then we put that picture in our mind so if I say blue bear all right you you can probably put a picture in your mind maybe it looks something like this this is one of my daughter's favorite toys but I think one of the challenges is with a more advanced vocabulary that that might be a little more abstract and there's not just a clear picture that you can think of but still in that case you can you can associate it perhaps with a person so if you learn an adjective like Frugal it means somebody who does not like to spend a lot of money they're very careful with their money well I am Frugal you can think of me or if you learn an expression like glass half full it it describes somebody who's very hopeful or optimistic and the same way that glass half empty describes somebody who's pessimistic so I could ask you what kind of person are you are you a glass half full type of person or a glass half empty type of person let me know down in the comments and it it doesn't always have to be a word association with other people recently I did a lesson talking about earthquakes and some words that you would often hear when when talking about this and one of the adjectives was devastating and this is actually an adjective that is pretty common when you're talking about any natural disaster so this is a change that I definitely want you to make and at anytime you learn a new vocabulary word or phrase make a word association because it's just going to help you retain that vocabulary which then means when you're trying to think about something in English you you have all those words at your disposal and your brain's not going to be switching back and forth as much to your native language you're going to be able to keep it in English mode which is what I want you to do something I also want you to do is to start automating your responses and well think of autotype when you're you're typing something and then it goes ahead and fills in what what you might be trying to write if you use Gmail they have something called autoc compose it helps you write emails faster because they're making suggestions and and you can do the same thing with your speech and in that case you're not really even you're not really translating you're not even really having to think somebody's just saying something to you and you respond immediately without thinking about it and there is no translation so how should you do this I think you should start with common well questions that somebody may ask you um if you meet somebody and they say what do you do for a living you should be able to give a response quickly easily naturally and talk about this because you've done it several times before so this is a great example of a question somebody could ask you and then you give that autor response you could also use partial autor responses so a question like where are you going you could say I'm going to go and then fill in the rest and you're using that reduction gonna I'm going to go I'm going to go shopping I'm going to go to the bakery I'm going to go to the park and then you can fill in the rest with well whatever is happening at that moment wherever you may be going so this this is useful when you're having a conversation and you can just respond immediately you're not having to translate you really don't even need to think that much and you give a quick response there are no awkward pauses which is which is how a conversation should be now I I know I said there's not much thinking with these automated responses so let's talk about thinking right now and one thing that I want you to do is I want you to turn thinking into Active Learning and when I say active learning it just means that you're required to do something so in this case you're required to think I want you to make yourself think in English so if you have like 5 or 10 minutes during the day maybe when you're you're not doing much you're brushing your teeth you're you're making dinner you're riding the bus to work I want you to take some of that time and say all right I'm going to make myself think in English whatever you see however you feel you're going to be thinking about it in English and see how long you can do that before your brain switches back over to your native language this is something that I want you to do and I want you to do it for homework that's right I'm going to give you some homework in this lesson today I want you to take 10 minutes and just think in English and tell yourself okay for the next 10 minutes I'm just going to think entirely in English and I want you to let me know how it goes down in the comments were you able to do this for a few minutes or 10 minutes or even longer before your brain switch back to your native language the longer you you can do this then I think that is an excellent sign so starting today I want you to do those five things that we talked about in this lesson you're going to create an English bubble you're going to keep your learning routines in English you're going to change the way you learn new vocabulary you're going to start automating some of those responses and you're going to turn thinking into Active Learning and when you do this tomorrow the next week the next month the next year you will be translating less and you'll be thinking more in English which is the ultimate goal I hope you enjoyed the lesson if you did please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time Soo

Stop Using Basic English! Speak Like a Pro with These Advanced Phrases

Let's learn some advanced phrases that native speakers use to be more precise, descriptive, and persuasive when both speaking and writing. And if you are someone who enjoys learning new phrases, building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So, let's begin with our first phrase, which is in no uncertain terms. This means in a very clear and direct way. This phrase emphasizes a forceful and unambiguous message. And often you're you're going to use it right before that that forceful message that you want to share. So I I could say she told him in no uncertain terms to leave her alone. So I'm using the phrase right before that direct message to leave her alone. He made it clear in no uncertain terms that the deal was off. or the letter stated in no uncertain terms that failure to respond would result in legal action. Hopefully, these sentences give you a better sense as to how this phrase is used in context. But still, I want to share some video examples with you. He told me in no uncertain terms that he's got dibs on the upper class girls.

I am here to tell you in no uncertain terms to stay away from my son. and she made it very clear in no uncertain terms that she loves you and she wants to stay in your class. Then we have the phrase a foregone conclusion. This refers to a result that is obvious to everyone even before it happens. So you're going to use this when you want to say that the outcome is obvious. There is no doubt as to the final result. Given the team's poor performance, the loss was a foregone conclusion. Everyone knew this was going to happen. Here are some news headlines to give you more context. Trump cutting off aid to Ukraine, not a foregone conclusion, says experts. In this case, we're using it with the negative to say that the final result is well, it's not obvious at this point.

And it's a foregone conclusion that Ethereum is a commodity, says Joe Luben. Let's take a look at some more examples.

You go down with your plane.

From that point on, the whole game was like a foregone conclusion. I I couldn't fight this feeling that I'd already lost. Now, if you are someone who wants to build your vocabulary, improve your speaking fluency, then I am telling you in no uncertain terms that you should join my speaking course. It's all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, and speak naturally. Each week there is a different speaking topic. You will learn vocabulary related to that topic, and there are a variety of engaging speaking activities. So, click the link down below in the description if you want to enroll or learn more about the course. And I just hope to speak to you soon. Let's continue with our next phrase, which is one that I really like, and that is nip it in the butt. It means to stop something before it gets worse. And in this case, the it refers to the problem or the issue, to nip it in the bud. And we're going to use it because it's already been mentioned. The problem is getting worse. We need to nip it in the bud. So it in this case refers to the problem. Now, that's not always the case. You may actually say what it is that you want to stop from getting worse. I could say to you, you need to nip these rumors in the bud before they spread. The phrase comes from gardening. When a leaf or flower starts to form, it's just a bud. And when you nip it or cut it, you stop it from growing. Now, sometimes people mistakenly say nip it in the butt. All right, that's a that's a different word.

We're not talking about somebody's butt, even though that may sound a little funny. The words sound similar. Just keep in mind the phrase is nip it in the bud. We just want to nip any problems in the bud. Tell you what, I'm going to nip this in the bud. You deserve a fighting chance.

Then there's the phrase to go against the grain. This refers to something that you would not usually do because it is

No, no, no, no. It's just go against the grain. So, think of this as a fixed phrase. Let the perfect be the enemy of the good. Guess I'm just going against the grain again. Shouldn't mean that we can't have a civil conversation. I just don't understand why you always have to go against the grain. Hang by a thread. This phrase pretty much means what it says. You are in a dangerous situation or state in which you are unlikely to survive or succeed. So I I literally want you to imagine this in your mind. If you are hanging by a thread, that is not a good position to be in. But you can use this phrase to emphasize the fact that you're in a situation in which you are barely surviving or or getting by. His career is hanging by a thread after the scandal. Now, you could use the preposition on and say somebody's hanging on by a thread. That also works.

And here is a fun picture to visualize this phrase. I I don't know uh if that's a panda or what, but yeah, that little guy is hanging by a thread.

Our coalition is hanging by a thread. I

I don't know how we can possibly beat them. Glee is hanging by a thread.

Until our group is back together again, this whole thing is hanging by a thread.

The next phrase, a case in point. This means a good example of something that was just mentioned. So, think about this phrase as having the same usage as the phrase for example. Now, often you're going to just say for example, this phrase is commonly used, but it's always good to get a little bit of variety because a slight nuance would be that you're going to use a case and point in more formal situations. So, this phrase is a bit more formal whenever you want to introduce an example. So, you're more likely to use it in presentations or essays. I could say many species are struggling to adapt to climate change. A case in point is the polar bear. And maybe you've seen some of these images, but it is very sad to see these pictures of the polar bear struggling due to climate change. Here are some more examples. You can learn a great deal about a man from his trash. Case in point, satellite TV bill.

Case in point, sometimes when I blow my nose, I get a boner. Boss has to loosen up every now and again. Case in point me. I'm half loaded right now. Then we have in the grand scheme of things. This means considering everything. So it really refers to the broad perspective, seeing the big picture and and not getting bogged down in the specific details of a moment. Often you're going to use this phrase at the beginning of a statement or clause. In the grand scheme of things, the Earth is just a tiny planet in a vast universe. I was really upset about losing the game, but in the grand scheme of things, it's not that big of a deal.

Or in the grand scheme of things, my problems are insignificant compared to what some other people are going through. I hope that gives you some context as to how and when to use this phrase. Let me give you some more examples. In the grand scheme of things, an ex-wife's throw pillows aren't much of a problem. Pay them scheme of things, it's a speeding ticket. In the great grand scheme of things, we're just tiny specks that will one day be forgotten. Then we have the phrase to strike a chord with someone. This means to resonate emotionally or intellectually. So uh perhaps I say his story about growing up in poverty struck a chord with many people. So in this case they could they could empathize with it. They could relate to this story. I hope that this lesson strikes a chord with you and creates this emotional response that that makes you go ahead and hit that like button. So please hit the like button if this lesson strikes a chord with you. I want to give you some more context. So, here are some news headlines. Chimes IPO may struggle to strike a chord with investors. Sydney music students strike a chord with Bush Kids. And this headline is kind of a play on words because we're talking about the phrase strike a chord and music, chords, instruments. I think you get it. Sir David Adam's latest message about the world's oceans should strike a chord with us all. Here are some other examples. Pat was the biggest child actor of the 1980s, striking a chord with audiences all over the world.

But it's worth what you wrote here struck a chord with me as well.

And when I started sobbing uncontrollably, apparently that struck a chord with quite a lot of people.

The lion's share. This just refers to the largest portion. So if we were talking about food, a lion is a very strong animal. And if there were some food, I would not try to take a lot of it. I'd just, hey, go ahead and take it. You can have the largest portion and you can have the lion share. Now, often you're not really going to use this phrase when talking about food. Instead, you may hear people use this phrase when talking about work. Let me give you some examples. She did the lion share of work on the project. Or, the tech giant dominates the market, claiming the lion share of global smartphone sales. And finally, although many departments contributed, the R&D team did the lion share of the innovation. Let's have a look at some videos. I'm I'm taking the lion share. I'm just saying. No, take more than the lion share. Take the whole share. The animal rights activists, they want the lion share and they don't want to share their lions. And when it's time for for her wedding, I will I will handle the the lion share.

I like this next phrase, cut to the chase. It just means get to the point.

So, this is a great phrase that you can use if you want to tell someone, be direct. Don't waste any time. Please cut to the chase. Now, often people are going to use this as a command, telling someone to get to the point if they're rambling on and on, talking about a bunch of nothing, kind of like I'm doing right now. So, perhaps you're thinking, look, cut to the chase. So, I am not going to waste any more of your time. I'm just going to cut to the chase and show you some video examples.

I'm late for a skydiving massage.

I'll cut to the chase. Behind every great inventions in MIT M. I'll cut to the chase. The Air Force believes there's an application for this technology.

Can we cut to the chase? Cut to the chase. Yeah. Well, what are you, Joe Hollywood?

Then we have the phrase at the heart of the matter. This just refers to the most important or fundamental part of a problem, issue, or situation. So really, you would use this phrase if you want to highlight the central point and talk about that problem that should be understood or addressed. Or maybe I I give you a command and say, "Let's cut to the chase and get to the heart of the matter." So now I'm using both of these phrases to say let's get directly to the most important thing. To be honest, these two phrases to cut to the chase and at the heart of the matter, they are a little similar, but one clear distinction is that they have different parts of speech.

But let's get to the heart of the matter right now, which is helping you understand how this phrase is used in context.

Charmaine being pregnant just changes everything.

The heart of the matter. Put your hands where I can see them. So before we get to the heart of the matter, I have one question for you.

The next phrase to be in over your head.

This just means to be involved in something that is too difficult. So instead of me telling you this is too difficult for you, I could say you're in over your head. It's a little more informal, but I really do think it adds emphasis. If you want to tell someone, look, this thing that you're doing, it's too difficult. You're in over your head. So let me share with you sometimes when I was in over my head. So, I was in over my head the first time I stepped foot in a classroom. And this is true. Not not just the first day or week, but really that first month, the kids ate me alive.

I was in over my head. I was also in over my head this one time when I tried to cook dinner for a group of friends. It did not go well. The food did not taste well. And yeah, I was in over my head. And even right now, I'm in over my head right now because we had another child and it's very difficult and I'm struggling and I feel like I'm in over my head. But I I will say if you're ever in a situation and you feel like you're in over your head, try to learn as much as you can, make adjustments, and really just do your best. If you ever feel like you're in over your head, the market's crashing.

Nuh-uh. You're in over your head. Maybe you're in over your head. Yes, I do. and so does the leadership.

You're in over your head. And remember, if you feel like you're in over your head, just excuse yourself to go to the bathroom or get a drink.

Now, I hope this lesson really struck a chord with you. And even though these are advanced phrases, I I don't think you're in over your head trying to learn and understand them, but when you watch lessons like this, it is a foregone conclusion that you will build your vocabulary. So, let me just cut to the chase. Let's just nip this problem in the bud right now. So, watch another video lesson. In the grand scheme of things, it's going to help you reach your fluency goals. And if you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button.

Summer Idioms to Help You Beat the Heat

I'm going to teach you these expressions, come rain or shine. And I'll tell you what that means in just a second. What's up, everyone? In today's lesson, I want to teach you about summer expressions, well, because it's summer outside. So, I thought I'd take this opportunity to teach you some common expressions that are related to the summer. So, the first one that I have for you is one that I've already mentioned, and that is come rain or shine. And what it means is that that something's going to happen. It doesn't matter what the weather's like, doesn't matter what the situation is, that something is going to happen come rain or shine. Often, I think it's used when talking about some event, maybe a sporting event, that it's scheduled for this day, and it doesn't matter what the weather is like, the event is going to happen.

And then what I'm going to do, 10 miles, rain or shine. It's after school, rain or shine. The re-exam will be tomorrow morning at 4:00 a.m. outside. Rain or shine. The next expression is everything under the sun. And what this means is that you get everything that you want, everything on earth, anything that you want that that you will get. So, often, I think it's used when you're talking about maybe describing a person, that they want a lot, maybe they want too much, and you could say they're asking for everything under the sun. You were thinking you could control everything under the sun? Then there's an expression, an Indian summer. And what this means it's an unexpected period of hot and dry weather. And the reason why they call it an Indian summer is cuz it doesn't happen in the summer, it's usually in the fall.

When you think that summer has ended and it starts to cool down, but then suddenly it gets really hot again for a short period of time, you could say it is an Indian summer. I think of this heat as late in the year? Yeah, Indian summer, huh? sure my husband and I can brave another week or however long this Indian summer's going to be. Then we have a ray of sunshine. And often I think that this expression is used to describe a person and saying that that something or someone just brightens your day. It makes you so happy, it makes you so excited, and that you'd say, "Wow, it's you know, you are just a ray of sunshine." For me, I would say our little daughter, Amelia, she is my ray of sunshine. And you guys too, you are also my ray of sunshine because yeah, you you brighten my day with all those amazing comments. Who are the ray of sunshine? You know exactly what a ray of sunshine?

You're my ray of sunshine, Cupid me. The next expression is to take a shine to someone. So, shine again makes me think of the sun, summer. And what this expression means is to take a liking to someone. and you really get along with them and you really hit it off, you could say, "Wow, you know, I'm I'm really I'm really taking a shine to this person and we're really getting along. I really like them." To take a shine to someone. Ah, yeah, he took a shine to me. Because we rather hope Lady Mary might have taken a shine to him. He is quite a charmer. Your father's certainly taken a shine to him. Oh, Homer, you are the living end. Then we have to soak up the sun. And when I think of this expression because it just means to to get a lot of sun, to sit out in the sun and just take it all in. You just want to soak it up.

So, I often think of somebody perhaps going to the beach and they just want to lay out on the sand and soak up the sun. We're going to be soaking up some sun at the Phillies game. Soak up all the sun you can. The next expression is summer fling. And often I think people would say that somebody has a summer fling. And what it means is just a short-term romance during the summer. And often I think it's used with younger kids, teenagers, high school students might have a summer fling. That school has ended and summer has started and they might meet somebody and they have a short-term romantic relationship and then school starts again and the relationship ends and you just say it's a summer fling.

So our summer fling was going to be just that, a fling. Oh, Miss McGarrigle, who says anything about girlfriends? Let's just start with the summer fling. The next expression is not a cloud in the sky and this is I think used to describe the weather. That you're talking about a summer day and you want to say, "Well, there's not a cloud in the sky." It means exactly what it says, that the sky is clear and you could describe it and say, you know, everything is good, everything is well because there's not a cloud in the sky. Beautiful day, Mrs. Palmer. Not a cloud in the sky. Not a cloud in the sky. Perfect day to unveil operation slammed. Then we have to brighten up someone's day and what this means is to make someone's day more special, to make somebody's day better, especially after somebody might be having a bad day and somebody does something for you and it might brighten up your day and make you feel a little bit better. I bought you some flowers to brighten up your day. I'm just trying to brighten up your day with my dope ass anecdotes. But you brighten up for me all of my days. The next expression is just a statement. It's a way to describe a summer day, especially if you're talking about the weather and it's really hot, you could just say, "It's a scorcher." So if somebody says it's a scorcher, then it just means a very, very hot day. It's a scorcher. Right now, it's kind of nice out. It's not really a scorcher, but maybe later in the week it supposed to get a lot hotter. It's a scorcher today, ain't it?

Going to be a real scorcher today. Well, it's going to be a scorcher. Then we have a phrase that I I don't really like, and that is rise and shine. And all this means is that somebody would say this when it's time to get up. So, if somebody says rise and shine, it just means, "Okay, it's time to get up. It's time to get going. You you need to start your day." And the reason why I don't like hearing this is because I usually I usually want to sleep a little later in the morning. I don't want to have to get up. Day one, greenie. Rise and shine. Rise and shine.

Rise and shine. Rise and shine. It's a beautiful morning. Yes. All rise and shine, camera. Don't forget YOUR BOOTIES CUZ IT'S COLD OUT THERE TODAY. NOW, let's talk about a few expressions with the word heat in there because when I think of summer, I think of the heat. And the first one is to beat the heat. And if you are trying to beat the heat, it means that you are doing something to stay cool and refreshed and and get out of the hot weather in some way, shape, or form. You are trying to beat the heat. So, during the summer, what do you guys do? What do you do to beat the heat? Well, people have found all sorts of ways to beat the heat. One local man is using his head. Is it warm out? I hadn't noticed. I think I have a way for us to beat the heat tonight, Philly style.

Then we have to take the heat. And what this means is to accept criticism or just just get scolded for something that was done wrong or for something that was wrong. You're you're you're going to take heat for this thing. So, if you do something bad, like you have a summer fling and your partner finds out about it, then you're going to take a lot of heat for that. And we're supposed to be some kind of decoy for you and take all the heat? This is all my fault. You're not taking the heat for this. If I'm wrong, I'll take heat for it, but I'm just trying to do what's best for the paper. The next expression is in a dead heat. And this is used quite often with with sports because if something is in a dead heat, it just means that it's a draw. It's even. It's the same. So, you could say that the match ended in a dead heat and it ended in a draw. It was a tie. Nobody won. Anybody has a strong feeling one way or another? Interesting. Our preference survey shows a dead heat.

And the latest polls have it as a dead heat. So, there you have it. Those are a bunch of different summer expressions that that you can use in a variety of context. So, I would encourage you to go out and practice them. If you enjoyed this lesson and you learned something new, please hit that like button. And as always, thanks for watching and I'll see you next time.

Super Advanced Vocabulary that will BLOW YOUR MIND

I have some vocabulary for you that's going to blow your mind. Well, I I say that and this is why I say that you are highly proficient if you know these words, but I think that you are very knowledgeable when it comes to vocabulary. So, some of them you may be familiar with, but if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary, please subscribe to the channel, turn on notifications, that way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. So, let's just jump right into it with our first question. suspicion? This is right now at the beginning. It's a multiple choice. So, perhaps this is going to be a little easier and we're going to ease our way into this and it's going to get a little more challenging.

Now, I say that these are advanced words. They're going to blow your mind. That means that you're not going to use them in just everyday conversation. You're not going to hear them all the time. These are words that are more specific, more descriptive, more precise, but they can still come in handy, and it's always great to improve your listening and reading comprehension. suspicion uh condemn, vindicate, reprimand or discredit. I see some uh excellent answers. I think you guys you're you're on top of this. All right. Maybe maybe you're gonna blow my mind. To to vindicate is the word that we're looking for. That is the correct answer. So that means to clear from blame or suspicion to help give you a little more context.

I have some example sentences down there for you. New evidence vindicated the accused or he felt vindicated by the court's decision. And finally, her success vindicated her bold choices. So, I'm going to give you some example sentences as we go through this. Hopefully, that'll give you a better understanding as to how the word is used in context. And if you would like to get these lesson notes that you see right next to me here, click on the link down in the description, join my email community, and you can access these notes. If you're already a part of our our lovely amazing community, I have gone ahead and sent them to you. So the next question, what do you think? Again, multiple choice. Which word means carefully considering all circumstances before acting? So before you do something, of course, you're going to consider all circumstances. And which word do mean? What what is which word means that? So is it impulsive, circumspect, frivolous or brazen? The fact that it's multiple choice right now makes it a little easier because if you do know some of the other words, you can, you know, go through a process of elimination. But which of these words means carefully considering all circumstances before acting? So in this case once again it's not it's not trick trick answer but uh some of you all right wow perfect be once again be the correct answer uh you guys you guys are blowing my mind circumspect so it means carefully considering all circumstances before acting here are some example sentences I know it's a little small so I'll go ahead and read it for you she she was circumspect in choosing her birds or his circumspect approach helped avoid a disaster. And finally, always be circumspect when making big decisions. It is true. Now, again, this is not a word that you're going to turn on the TV and you're going to hear someone using. However, you still may come across it. And to further bolster that argument that this is a word, you may come across, I have some news headlines for you. Again, giving you a little more context. And all of these headlines have the word circumspect. For example, up here, time to be circumspect about Trump's global trade warnings says uh Kierney chairman Bob will. And then finally, the next one, barristers must be circumspect in exercising free speech. And then down below, journalists told to be circumspect in reporting. So this is a word that you may come across reading the news or watching a TV show. It definitely is a more advanced word, but I I think it's good to to get a variety.

Even if uh you know you you really want to be descriptive or want to learn specific words, it's good to know them. And then if you feel comfortable, you could try to use them in conversation if they are applicable and they're relevant to what you're trying to convey. What do you think about this one? Which of the following means showing strong feeling, forceful, passionate, intense? Which of these words? And I don't I found this picture of uh this cat right here and it just yeah, that that look was very intense and this that the cat looked like it had that just strong feeling. So what is the correct answer? vehement, tepid, aloof, or mellow. Once again, maybe you can go through a process of elimination. For example, mellow is really kind of the opposite. Like you're kind of relaxed and calm. So, I'm just going to tell you it's not D. The answer. Wow, everybody.

Uh, yeah, you guys are rocking this. Perfect. Vehement. A is the correct answer. showing strong feeling, forceful, passionate, intense. Now, one thing, well, let me give you get to the example sentences and then I'll tell you where I'm going with this. He gave a vehement denial. All right? Yeah, it wasn't me. It was a vehement denial. Very passionate. Or she was vehement. She was a vehement supporter of reform. All right? That strong feeling. Or finally, the protester spoke vehemently about the issue. And that's what I wanted to point out because this right here we're vehement we're using it as an adjective but often you may come across this word as an adverb as far as in vehemently and that ly ending. Somebody may speak vehemently or act vehemently.

And so that's one thing I wanted to point out with this word in particular as an adjective or as an adverb. And yeah, I like these uh I try to find these pictures of uh animals every now and then because it does I think it makes the lessons a bit more engaging. What do you think? Which of the following means brief and to the point? So I think this is a well in my opinion I feel like it's a good word to know because often you may talk about this meaning and you want someone to be brief and to the point or you're trying to write something or convey a message that is brief and to the point and in that case you would want the message to be mundane, succinct, verbose or malefuous.

What do you think? Brief and to the point. I hope in this case that you said and I think many of you did succinct expressed in few words concise. So in general I think this word has more of a positive connotation because I think most of the time we use it in a context in which um fewer less is better. All right, fewer words, more concise. That's generally a good thing. He gave a succinct explanation of the problem. Or her writing style is clear and succinct. This is a collocation. You may use it with those two words, clear and succinct. Perfect. Good phrase to use. And keep your answer succinct and focused. So those are some more examples using this word in context. If you knew some of these words already, that's perfect. And of course, this is a quiz lesson. So, I want you to participate. I want you to write your answers in the chat or in the comments. I love seeing it, seeing people participate in these lessons. So, I thought it would be fun.

We just went over four words to go ahead and look at the frequency and see how often they're used and compare the two. So, this is from Engram Viewer. If you have a word or phrase or a couple of words or phrases and you want to know, well, which one do most people use, this is a way to very quickly get a snapshot because they put it on a graph as to which words are more often used. So, as you can see, they're very close, but in this case, you're going to come across succinct and vehement more often than you would come across vindicate or circumspect. And to me, that that's not surprising at all. I think those words are more absolutely more commonly used.

Vindicate, I often feel like it's used in the context of somebody, you know, being accused of something or in a courtroom setting uh is when you may end up coming across that word. So, let's switch gears. I gave you uh some multiple choice questions. Now, let's let's make it a little more difficult. I'm going to give you a sentence with the missing word, and I'm also going to give you the meaning. And I want you to see if you can think of the the the advanced word, the word that is going to blow your mind and write it in the comments, write it in the chat. So the first one, he gave a m apology that seemed rehearsed. So the meaning is carried out without real interest, feeling or effort. I will be incredibly I will be very impressed if you get this because I feel like in this case there many native speakers would find this very challenging. I would find this challenging just giving this one sentence plus the meaning. This is a word that is definitely more advanced.

It's one that you you may come across from time to time. However, um th this is uh the the one thing I want to point out maybe the is that in this example he gave a m apology that seemed rehearsed. So in this case, it's not really a good thing. We're talking about an apology. Oh, it seemed rehearsed. Maybe they didn't mean it. There wasn't really any effort or feeling put into it. And therefore, you could say it was peruncer. He gave a prefunder apology that seemed rehearsed. So the meaning of peruncer is carried out with any real interest, feeling or effort. And uh well done. All right. I saw a couple answers in there.

Perfect. Peruncctory. To give you a little more context because some of you may be thinking, "Well, I've never I've never come across this word before." Here are some example sentences. He gave a prefunder nod and walked away. again without maybe real interest. The cleaning was done in a peruncer manner. Okay, maybe no effort was really put into it or her smile was peruncer, lacking real warmth. Once again, in that last sentence, it is used in more of a negative way. Peruncctory. What do you think? Oh, I thought uh this was a good meme as far as uh giving you another example with this word of bonus points if you can tell me the movie. Okay. Life is like a box of chocolates. Okay. And then down here, a cheap, thoughtless, peruncer gift that nobody ever asks for. Now, of course, life is a very precious gift, but I thought this was funny. mostly thinking about this box of chocolates that you may give as a gift to uh someone or uh maybe you get it as a gift and just comparing it and saying it is a peruncer gift that well nobody ever asked for. Um and uh yeah, I thought this was a little humorous. So, let's uh see. Oh, and by the way, if you're wondering about the movie, I said bonus points. This is of course from the movie Forest Gump. That is a picture of Tom Hanks playing Forest Gump. Well done, Lai. Excellent.

Here's the next one. I think this one is easier and this is a word that is more commonly used and uh I I think you'll realize that once I give you the answer, but let's see if you can uh get it. um his response was m revealing more than he intended. So the meaning of this word revealing or indicative of something that is not explicitly stated. So you could say it is you're giving you're revealing this information even though you're not explicitly saying it and you could say it is. A lot of times you're going to use this as a predicate adjective and it's going to follow the verb to be that. Oh, this is his actions were his response was again I think this is a word that you've certainly heard of and maybe it is one that you even use. So when talking I may it's hard to perhaps come up with it with just this limited information that I'm giving you. But if we want to say something is revealing it's not explicitly stated. You could say that it is telling. You know his response was telling revealing more than he intended. So if something is telling it in a way it tells us information even though it's not directly said to us. Maybe it's basically the way somebody is acting or behaving and you could say that it is telling. So this is a useful adjective.

Of course, most of the time people when you hear see the word tell, you think of the verb to tell someone something. And in this case, you could think about using it in the continuous tense like listen to uh you know, I am telling you something right now. But in this case, we're using it as an adjective. So here are some example sentences. Her silence was telling. Okay, that okay, that gives us more information because she's silent and it tells us something. Or the hesitation in his voice was telling. If somebody hesitates, well, something's wrong and maybe it gives us that it reveals some information. It's telling. And then finally, it was a telling sign that something was wrong. So once again, this is, I think, a useful adjective if you want to say something is telling and it's revealing some information. What do you think about this next one? They found themselves in a m situation with no easy solution. So the meaning exposed or involving danger or dangerous, perilous, risky, those are all synonyms if you want to dangerous, perilous, risky. But I will say that I feel like a common collocation you might talk about a situation that you are in and you may say I am in a m situation. They found themselves in a m situation with no easy solution. Exposed to or involving danger, dangerous, perilous, risky. Um, I like the guess somebody mentioned dire uh a dire situation and that I think is a good guess. That's not the word that we're looking for. I feel dire is actually a stronger word than the one that I am going to share with you. Uh, but that is a that is a really good guess. Uh so of course it is a dangerous situation and this word I guess well let me let me give you the answer and then I'll give you a little more context. All right the answer well done Vicky Gustav precarious a precarious situation. So precarious situation it is like okay there is some danger it's like uhoh you know maybe um a little complex as well I feel like in this case dire would be a stronger word if you wanted to emphasize something and say it's a dire situation we have major problems but if you refer say some you're in a precarious situation it is you know involving some danger or you're exposed and I think that is a key word exposed to danger danger. Uh, for example, here are some example sentences. The ladder looked precarious. Okay, it didn't look very safe. It was dangerous. Or their financial position is precarious. They're exposed to some risk or danger. And finally, she was in a precarious state of health. So, this is I feel like a useful word, good word to know, descriptive word, precarious.

Okay, I thought I saw this. I thought it was funny. I had to share it with you. So, this this is uh a headline uh kind of just like a joking article. I think it was from BuzzFeed. And basically, it was like 32 kids who supposedly found themselves in a very precarious situation. And I didn't I didn't want to go through and show you all the pictures. I just thought the first one was uh funny. And it says first, um, there's this poor kid in a less than stellar view. So, yes, I could say she's on that bike. She is in a precarious situation just sitting there. Uh, and I thought that was humorous, so I wanted to share it with you. How about this? Despite the pressure, she remained m and handled the situation with grace, having or showing calmness in a crisis.

Of course, I think overwhelmingly people are going to use an adjective like calm, and this is a bit of a synonym. It is a more advanced word. It's not as commonly used. Uh you could put in the word calm. Despite the pressure, she remained calmed and handled the situation with grace. Very common. But there are other words that we could put in there, synonyms for the word calm. So, I feel like there may be more than one response that could uh be put into this sentence and it makes sense. It's correct. But the meaning of this word having or showing calmness in a crisis composed is another good word that would work. That's not the word that I'm looking for. So, again, composed, I feel like, is a is another commonly used word and I think a great word to know and you should know it. Um, but this is not not grounded or adamant in this case. Let me give you another synonym. Uh, you could say it's not as commonly used, but just one to just be aware of. Unflappable. Despite the pressure, she remained unflappable and handled the situation with grace. Having or showing, which means having or showing calmness in a crisis. And you would say someone is unflappable. So, here are some example sentences. Again, I want to give you a little more context. If you're looking at this word and you're thinking, you know, I've never heard anybody use the word unflappable. Again, that doesn't mean that you're going to hear somebody use it tomorrow or the next day. These are advanced words. Remember, I'm just trying to blow your mind. So even when the situation even when the students got rowdy, the teacher was unflappable and remained calm or her unflappable demeanor impressed the interviewers. Somebody was unflappable or he remained unflappable even after the shocking news.

And I feel like for even though this adjective is not the most commonly used word, I feel like that is kind of a verb adjective collocation to remain unflappable or saying somebody remained unflappable in some very I don't know uh dire situation, precarious situation and they stayed calm and they remained unflappable. What do you think? Oh, let me again we just did four more words. So, I I wanted to go back to engram viewer, but I wanted to point out a flaw and I wanted to make you aware of this because engram viewer is not perfect. It's not going to tell you all the information that you may need. So, if we put in these words, uh I I do think that the order of usage as to which ones are more commonly used, telling I definitely think that's most commonly used. And then you see precarious, prefunder, and then unflappable. The one thing that you might be looking at saying, "Wait, why is telling used so much more often?" Because when you use engram viewer, it's not differentiating between parts of speech. So, we were talking about telling as an adjective that you're revealing information. Engram viewer is putting together all forms of telling even as a verb in the continuous tense like I am telling you something and they're going to count that which is why it's not always going to work. So just something to keep in mind. I wanted to point this out. If you were to use engram viewer for this and you see the results are very skewed and because it's using telling in other um other part as another part of speech. So let's make it even more difficult and uh let's see uh you can really practice your typing skills because this time I'm giving you the word and I want you to tell me the meaning. So, what is the meaning of this word? I will go ahead and read these example sentences down below to give you some context. And I just want you to write down the meaning of the word. So, she made a cogent argument for her case. His explanation was both cogent and thorough. And then finally, the lawyer presented a cogent summary. So, how would you define this word cogent? I think looking at the sentences, this is another good exercise when it comes to learning a language is um you know putting words and phrases into context and coming up with what you think might be the meaning the meaning would be. So, think about how it's used in these sentences. a cogent argument or the explanation was cogent or a cogent summary. So convincing is I I think you're on the right track but not the word that I would probably use or even persuasive. Uh somebody had mentioned clear. I think that uh is better even though actually no I feel like convincing no it works. I'm trying to think because uh I haven't looked at this while as for what the exact meaning. I think all of you are right. Convincing, persuasive, clear. I think that would work. Uh I had forgot the what I had put as the meaning because I had just got this from the the dictionary of an argument or case. Yeah.

Clear, logical, and convincing. A cogent summary, a cogent argument. when when I was uh hesitating on that because I feel like in my view when I was thinking of the word cogent the first thing that comes to my mind is clear that it's clear it's easy to understand in that case like clear and logical but as you can see convincing up there is also part of the meaning as well all right so maybe this was not as difficult as I thought it would be for you guys uh probably I hope maybe the uh sentences help. think? Again, this is not a word that it's not like I go out and use this word all the time, but let me give you some examples. The beauty of the sunset was ephemeral. Fame can be ephemeral. That is a this is a good example sentence to try to put the meaning together. Or they enjoyed the ephemeral moments of spring. What do you think this means? If you're describing, so there think about what the sentences are describing. Sunset ephemeral fame can be ephemeral or these moments of spring. So because of that hopefully and I saw excellent some great answers, not lost lasting long, fleeting. I love that word. That's a great word. Temporary. Perfect. So if you want a short-lived Well, excellent. I like the I like your guys meaning. I like all of these even uh more than the dictionaries lasting for a very short time and I mentioned fame as a good example and you hear that expression somebody has their 15 minutes of fame something happens and all of a sudden the spotlight is on this person they have their 15 minutes of fame but it's ephemeral and you know it's forgotten about after that and it's temporary it's not lasting for a very long time. So once again, I feel like in most of these situations, again, instead of using this word, people may use a phrase like uh short-lived or fleeting or just not not doesn't last long. And those are phrases that end up being more commonly used. But still, this is all about building your vocabulary. How about this? Ubiquitous. What do you think it means? This is actually a word that I have previously talked about in at least one other vocabulary lesson, quite possibly two other vocabulary lessons if you are an avid viewer of interactive English. Ubiquitous. Let me read the sentences for you. Nowadays, smartphones have become ubiquitous. Very true. Her laughter was as ubiquitous as her optimism. And finally, social media is ubiquitous in today's society. So if you want to describe something, and I think good examples would be like social media or smartphones because everyone has them or everyone's using it and they're on it all the time because it's just to use some of your uh meanings, it is everywhere. It is common place. It is all over. It is ubiquitous. present, appearing or found everywhere. That is the meaning of this word. And once again, it is a more advanced word, but still one that I think you actually may come across this word from time to time. So, it's good to know uh especially for your comprehension. Don't feel like you need to go out and just okay, let me go out and use this word and try to comment and say, well, you know, McDonald's is ubiquitous. Um, but again, if it comes up in conversation, it is useful. I thought this was funny. Um, notice how you hear the word ubiquitous being used everywhere. So again, trying to be funny that the meaning is everywhere even though it is not a word that of course is being used everywhere. It is a more descriptive precise word that you can still use if you want to describe something as ubiquitous. What do you think? Cander. What is the meaning of cander? She spoke with candor about her experiences or his candor earned him respect. I appreciate your candor on this matter. What do you think the meaning? And hopefully again you can use those sentences to kind of come up with the meaning putting it in a context. I like this activity when it comes to building your vocabulary. And this is another way to test those skills and really get you thinking. It's a thinking activity. So candor, somebody speaks with candor or again it's a positive using it in a positive way. And yes, perfect, frank, open, honest. Uh those are all great synonyms. The quality of being honest and telling the truth.

Cander. Keep in mind candor is a noun. Often you may I should say often. It's still another advanced adjective. Sometimes I'll say sometimes instead of often in or instead of using it as a noun, you may hear people use it as an adjective to describe someone who is being honest, who is being frank. And in that case, you could say they are candid. So just keep in mind candid as the adjective or candor as the noun. Once again I wanted to give you some context and I'll be honest I was surprised um with this not with ubiquitous. So just comparing those there is absolutely a difference as to which of these four words is more commonly used. Ubiquitous apparently it is everywhere especially compared to these other words. I was personally surprised that efferial was next. I thought cogent would be more commonly used.

That's just that's just me. As far as some of those collocations, like a cogent argument or a cogent summary, I feel like that is an adjective that's sometimes used to describe different nouns. And candor as a noun, it I guess it doesn't surprise me, but like I said, a lot of times instead of somebody saying like, "Oh, I appreciate your candor." I might just use it as an adjective and say, "Oh, you know, I appreciate it. You were very candid uh about what happened." Instead of saying honest, I'll say candid as an adjective. So, here are a list of these words. and uh just to use them quickly. I hope that I know v building your vocabulary can be a little daunting and maybe you feel like you're in a precarious situation. I hope not. But if that is the case, I hope that you remain unflappable and you are calm because you can watch more of my video lessons to get a cogent summary of different words and phrases and how they're used because I am vehement about helping you build your vocabulary. And I hope that my passion comes across and I hope that it's telling because some of these words that I teach you, some of them are ubiquitous and you can really use them and they are common and others like these maybe they're not as ubiquitous, but they're still good to know because it's all about improving your skills, improving your listening and reading comprehension, and just building your vocabulary a little bit at a time. So, if this lesson just if these words just blew your mind, um then uh let me know.

You can hit that like button or write to me in the comments. I always love hearing from you. But I really appreciate you being here with me today. As always, I hope that you learned something new. Uh and again, if you did, you can let me know by hitting that like button. And if you want to get these lessons, check out that link down below in the description. But thank you so much for being here for the members. Vicki, Gustav, Lai, um great to see you all. Uh let's see who else. Ahmed, Julia, uh Rexi, thank you guys for participating in the lesson. That is what it's all about. It's interactive English. That's what I want you to do when it comes to these lessons. So, I hope you have a wonderful rest of the day and I will see you very soon for another lesson in english is full of confusing words like these first two words that i have for you between and among they're both prepositions but you're going to use between when you're you're talking about well two things or two people there's a one-on-one relationship use among when you're talking about well more than two and it's not really distinct so i i could say you know the information in this lesson let's keep that between you and me talking about a one-on-one relationship between you and me or there there's an idiom that is between a rock and a hard place this is talking about a difficult situation a rock a hard place you're between it it's it's not a good place to be it's a difficult situation now with a hmong i i know i told you to keep this information between you and me but i'd rather you share it among all of your friends so in that case i'm i'm talking about that group and you you may also hear people use amongst instead of among and they they mean the same thing i think it's more common to use among especially in the united states amongst it's a little bit of an older word but there are still some phrases statements in which people are likely to use amongst if you are in front of a group of people and maybe you're talking to them and you have to leave the room you could say talk amongst yourselves that is that is a statement that you may hear in which people may use amongst now between you and me if you truly want to build your vocabulary learn the difference between these confusing words i suggest you subscribe turn on notifications so that you learn about future lessons and i can become your english teacher my name is wes the channel interactive english that's what it's all about trying to help you improve and reach your fluency goals the next two confusing words that i have for you reluctant and reticent they're both adjectives but you're going to use reluctant to refer to something that maybe you are hesitant to do or you're unwilling to do this thing use reticent when you're you're really talking about somebody's manner that they're shy or reserved so in that case i think it's more common that you're going to hear people use reluctant when talking about things they're unwilling to do in general reticence go it's going to allow you to be more specific so maybe if we're talking about somebody shy to speak and they don't want to speak they're reluctant to speak then you could describe them as being a bit reticent because we know that they're a little shy um if i were talking about maybe a team that had to do a presentation and i could say well well she was reluctant to put together the presentation she was unwilling to do it maybe it was very difficult but then he was reticent to give the presentation so in that case i'm talking about well his his willingness to speak he was reticent he was shy he didn't really want to do it before we continue i want to take a moment to thank the sponsor of today's lesson which is italki and when you use italki you will always find a teacher that is right for you there are qualified teachers from all over the world sharing their languages their cultures their dialects and there are a lot of benefits to using italki i personally think that the greatest benefit is that these are one-on-one lessons which means that if you want to improve your pronunciation maybe you want to develop your writing skills or build your vocabulary well then you can do all of that because you are in control of your learning you also get to learn at your own pace you get professional feedback and you can practice for free with the italki community there is no subscription there's no commitment you just pay per lesson and right now when you click on the link below and sign up you have the chance to win free italki lessons twice a week for three months to learn more details don't hesitate to click on the link down in the description grab your chance to win some free lessons find an english teacher that's right for you and then you can take your english skills to the next level let's get back to our lesson of confusing english words and here are another couple of confusing words achieve and accomplish and these are great words to know so you're going to use achieve when talking about well you want to succeed in something if you use accomplish then that means well you've you've finished something often successfully so if i were to say like i want to achieve my goal it means that i i want to reach this point and i want to do it successfully that's a little different than if i say i accomplish my goal well then it's finished and well perhaps i i was successful think of it this way i always talk about trying to achieve english fluency that you want to be successful in in learning english and it's not something that you're probably ever going to finish so in that case i'm not going to use accomplish but if i'm talking about like a mission or a task well then i could say that i i want to accomplish this mission or maybe i already accomplished this mission it's done it's complete and i did what i needed to do then we have customers and clients so customers refer to people who

Super Confusing Words for English Learners | BUILD YOUR VOCABULARY

who are buying a product or service and clients refer to people who need some type of professional support or help from another person or a company so i am going to tell you i'm going to give you a situation uh talking about some people and i want you to think whether i'm talking about customers or clients i'll give you a moment and then i'll tell you the answer so if i am talking about well shopping at the mall those are customers if i need to hire a lawyer and i need to use their services then i am the client if a company uses services from another company then they would be this is a little tricky because you they could be either clients or customers so in some instances they may be used interchangeably it really just depends on the relationship maybe between these companies but that's another reason why they can be a bit confusing and finally if i were to talk about well people at a restaurant those are customers yes those are customers here are another couple of confusing words figuratively and literally they're adverbs we use figuratively to refer to well using words or phrases in an imaginative way talking about something that that is not realistic you would use literally to talk about something that will is realistic something that happened so there's a phrase that people might use with figuratively and they may say figuratively speaking at the beginning of their statement and then go on to say something that is not realistic figuratively speaking people were kicking down the doors to buy the new iphone so it's not realistic it's just an example and people would do this really kind of to emphasize their statement if i want to use literally and this does happen maybe you're you're talking with a friend about another friend and that person shows up and you say hey we were literally just talking about you so this was realistic it happened the reason why these words may be confusing is because people use literally instead of figuratively and i know that may seem a little strange because their meaning is it's pretty much the opposite and i there are people who say this is incorrect this should not happen but you should be aware that this this is something that occurs in spoken english somebody might say something like i i literally have not slept in weeks of course that's not true it's not realistic but they they may use literally just to try and emphasize the fact that they have not been sleeping at all or i could say people have literally been kicking down the doors to buy the new iphone so once again i'm talking about something that's not realistic but i'm using literally instead of figuratively this is something that happens quite often in spoken english and i i'm even guilty of doing this from time to time then we have these confusing abbreviations eg versus ie and it's something that people will often confuse in writing they may even confuse it in spoken english if people say these abbreviations but you're going to use eg in order to mean for example you're going to use ie it's it's like saying that is to say or it's even interchangeable with specifically so let me try to make it a little easier for you to understand if i were to say something like i've been trying to eat more foods that are high in protein eg tuna broccoli chicken i'm really just giving an example of some of the things that i'm eating if i i were to say well the hotels downtown they raised their price during the high season ie may to august now i'm specifically talking about that time period may to august let me give you a couple of statements and you tell me if we should use eg or ie if i were to say the restaurant is closed once a week on mondays all right in that case you should use ie because we're talking specifically about mondays how about um there are many chores that i have to do during the week take out the trash mop the floor uh clean the living room okay you should have said eg because once again i'm giving just examples of some of the chores that i have to do so just just really keep that in mind eg is used to just give some examples i.e is much more specific you were talking about something that is specifically happening or some specific information and then we have these two confusing words consecutive and concurrent and i think they may be confused mostly because of well the spelling and they kind of sound like they might be the same word but they have different meanings you're going to use consecutive to talk about will something that happens one after the other without interruption and you use concurrent to talk about well things that are happening at the same time so i could say that the city experienced consecutive heat waves there was a heat wave and once it ended without interruption another one started or if i were to use concurrent i could say well the country is experiencing concurrent heat waves that there are different heat waves happening across the country at the same time it's concurrent so just remember they're two different meanings consecutive one after the other without interruption concurrent it means happening at the same time i hope that these words are now a little less confusing for you i hope you learned something new if you did please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Super Confusing Words? | Useful HOMONYMS explained

so I want you to listen carefully there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't if you are confused right now then that is because of homonyms and I promise that that by the end of this lesson you will not be confused anymore so let's talk about homonyms like these two words right here flower and flower so homonyms are words that that are pronounced the same or maybe they're spelled the same as another word but they have a different meaning and flower and flower you can hear that they are pronounced the same but you can see that they are not spelled the same and they do not have the same meaning all of the words that I'm going to teach you in this lesson are like this to be exact they're called homophones but homophones those are a type of homonym I'm also giving you the phonetic spelling and the IPA so that you can actually see the pronunciation I think that'll make it a little bit easier for you and I'll tell you the different meanings as well and if we're talking about this flower well then that is one that you might find in a garden or in a park it has a very pleasant smell and this other flower well that is referring to that fine powder that you might use for cooking like if you're baking a cake then we have these two words right here addition and Edition all right good words to know so the words have have three syllables and that first and third syllable you can hear that schwa sound that uh sound the tion is pronounced as shun and the syllable stress comes before it on the second syllable addition if we're talking about this Edition well then we're referring to adding numbers together like in math and this other Edition would be talking about like a book or a newspaper or a magazine being published and there might be different editions then we have click and click so this first click I think is is more common it's the verb to click to click on something think about a computer you might uh click on a link I hope all of you click on that like button and and show me a little bit of love the next click that q-u-e it does it has that k sound but it's referring to a small exclusive group of people and what what I would say is maybe think about like high school that's how I think it's commonly used talking about young people they have their exclusive group of friends and you might refer to it as a click I don't think this word is often used to reference or talk about adults then we have these two homonyms right here patience and patience these words have two syllables the the stress is on that first syllable and notice both words that have that t-i-e which is pronounced with that schwa sound patience and in this word patience the t is going to be silent and this refers to well a person who is under medical care or getting some type of medical treatment and this patience refers to the ability to wait and not be annoyed by something especially if there is a delay and you could say somebody has patience moose and you guessed it moose all right these words are homonyms and you you may be familiar with uh this moose that large mammal that's part of the deer family and this other moose is talking about that that creamy and foamy dessert and it's actually a French word because the dessert it comes from France and in French it means like like froth or foamy which is what gives it its second meaning in English because you could talk about moose referring to a foamy substance that somebody could use for for styling their hair like right now um I actually I did not use any mousse I did use a little bit of gel but but not mousse the next set of homonyms metal and metal so both of these words it's going to end with that dark Arc L that o and you're not going to release it at the end but but these words are homonyms in in American English mostly because if we're talking about that t in metal it's going to be a flap T which is going to sound more like a soft D sound and the reason that we're going to use a flap T is because it comes between two vowel sounds so um I'm from the United States so I would pronounce it as metal which then means it's also it's a homonym with the verb to metal so metal the noun which is the one with the t is talking about an element like like gold or silver that is generally hard and strong and metal the verb to metal it means that you are getting involved in a situation in which um well you have not been asked to be involved and to share your opinion and you could hear somebody talk about meddling in somebody else's business or meddling in someone else's personal affairs to metal then we have horse and horse so this horse very well known the animal that people can ride around on I don't know if you have ever ridden on a horse but this next horse it's a good this is a good word hopefully you're building your vocabulary and it allows you to be a little more specific because it's talking about this the sound of a person's voice so if somebody sounds hoarse it means that that their voice sounds a bit rough possibly because they have a cold so you could hear somebody important I could talk about the principal reason for for doing something if we're talking about this Principle as a noun it could refer to like a basis of conduct and you say that someone has principles or it could be used to refer to like um like a set of rules that that explain how we should do something or what's happening that you want to follow these principles then we have Gorilla and gorilla these words have three syllables that that first and third syllable you'll hear that schwa sound and the stress is on the second syllable gorilla gorilla and this gorilla refers to that that giant ape perhaps you have seen a gorilla at the zoo and this other gorilla it's a noun it's talking about like a member of an unofficial military group and the the group of people together you would say they are gorillas the next set of homonyms core and core and I'm sure that one word you're thinking what wait a second that sounds nothing like the way it's spelled well the reason reason for that it's it's like you have that that pns you don't even hear it the other thing I would say about this word is that it is singular you see that S I think people might think that it is a plural noun but it's singular so let me let me explain why this is pronounced core so the origin of this word it comes from Latin Corpus which means body now this word was borrowed from French as well as the pronunciation core which is why you don't hear the p and the s so if we're talking about the this core it refers to the central part of something like the Earth's core and this core refers to a military organization kind of like that that body that organization that body the Army Core then we have sweet and Sweet I'm sure you may like this one word like I do sweet it is talking about a flavor something that's sugary I really enjoy foods that are sweet and this other sweet that s-u-i it is pronounced like sweet sweet and that is because it's another word that's been borrowed from French and it refers to a set of connected rooms like that you might find at a hotel a hotel suite then we have these three words C's C's and C's okay you have that long e and it ends with that z sound so C's well this is just talking about like the ocean this sea these the verb to look at something and really talking about it in the third person like he sees or she sees and then this other verb to sees something means to grab a hold of it suddenly okay so now that you have a much better understanding of homonyms let's go back to that riddle I told you at the beginning of the lesson there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't think about which word is a homonym there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens okay the word eight is a homonym we could be talking about well the number eight or the verb to eat in the past tense which is eight and that that was the word I was saying all along there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't the answer of course is ten I I know you're probably thinking well wait a second cows don't eat chickens of course they don't it's just a riddle but it's it's a fun little way to to introduce and talk about homonyms if you enjoyed this lesson and learn something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Super Descriptive Adjectives to Build Your Vocabulary

i want to teach you some super descriptive adjectives related to the five senses sight hearing smell touch taste and i want to teach you some common collocations words that are frequently used with these adjectives and i promise you will learn something new my name is wes the channel is interactive english that's what it's all about just trying to help you improve your english skills and always learn new things so let's start with sight because i think quite often we want to describe the things we see and the first adjective that i have for you is uncanny uncanny means that something is strange or mysterious in kind of a surprising way you could say somebody has an uncanny ability to do something like an uncanny ability to pick the winner it's very surprising or it could be strange and mysterious because it's unsettling maybe i'd say you have an uncanny resemblance to my father that's another collocation with this word to say that somebody has an uncanny resemblance to someone else then we have dilapidated it's a very descriptive word and usually you might describe a structure as dilapidated and what it means is just old or in poor condition so you could say that the building is dilapidated or the bridge is dilapidated maybe in your town there might be an area where some of the buildings are dilapidated give up the condo life give up all your flaming worldly possessions you'll live in a dilapidated house in the toxic waste part of town then we have the word gruesome which means that something is unpleasant or shocking and often it's related to death or injury and that's also a collocation with this adjective you could say it was a gruesome death or maybe you're watching some police show and they describe a scene and they say oh it was a gruesome scene then we have a word which is more well it's more positive than gruesome and that is mesmerizing if you say that something is mesmerizing it means that it is attractive in in kind of a mysterious way and you just cannot take your eyes off of it so you could maybe describe somebody's eyes as mesmerizing and you just want to keep looking at their eyes or maybe you could say that you were mesmerized by the performance i hope that you are mesmerized by this video lesson and then we have hazy so hazy means just well not clear but you could use it in two different ways you could use it to talk about the weather and it's not clear because of the heat and you'd say well it's a little hazy outside or you might use it to describe uh your memory and in that case you're saying well it's not clear you don't remember it very well you can't really put a picture up here in your mind and see things it's it's just hazy my memory is a bit hazy now as you learn new vocabulary i think it's important that you try to practice using these words and phrases and i think the best way to do that is just with conversation and if you'd like to get more speaking practice maybe improve your pronunciation learn more about grammar then i'd recommend you check out lingoda which is the sponsor of today's lesson and lingoda is an online language school where you can learn english business english spanish german or french and right now lingoda is getting ready to have their biggest promotion of the year if you click on my exclusive link in the description you can get 40 off your course fee but first let me tell you why i think lingoda can help you reach your fluency goals these are

do all that when you click on the link in the description and take advantage of this incredible offer because once you click on that link you can get forty percent off all marathon courses or forty percent off the first month of a monthly subscription once you click on the link and sign up you don't need to do anything else the discount is automatically applied and if you're still unsure there's no harm in signing up because each plan includes a seven day free trial so click on the link in the description and sign up to start improving your english invest in your education invest in your future and invest in yourself let's get back to our lesson with more super descriptive adjectives and i want to talk to you about hearing and the next word that i have for you is faint and if you're describing something as faint it means that it is not strong or clear and you may refer to like a faint noise or a faint sound or maybe something whispers and really what you're saying is that it just you're not able to hear it well enough to know exactly what it is it's just it's a very faint noise and kind of the opposite of that is piercing and piercing would be talking about well something that you hear that is high and loud and unpleasant if there maybe is just this really loud ringing and you could say it's just it's a piercing sound when my alarm goes off in the morning it's just this very annoying piercing sound then we have raspy which means unpleasantly rough okay and often i think you would use this word to describe someone's voice they have a raspy voice for example what about this joker guy one man or the entire mob he can wait when the new d.a hears about this he'll win do you trust him i really don't know why they gave batman such a raspy voice but it is a great great example for teaching this word then we have thud and thud is talking about the sound that's made when something heavy falls and and hits something else and often i think you might use it with the word loud and say that you heard a loud thud and the other thing i would say about this word is i think people would use it when they don't see what it is that's falling and they just hear the sound and say oh i heard a loud thud like this one here's another thud okay we don't know what it is but we heard it and we could say there was a loud thud vociferous it's a great word and you would use it to describe a person because what it means is that someone is expressing their opinions or complaints loudly and repeatedly so you could describe perhaps a vociferous opponent or talk about someone's vociferous demands if i were just like yelling at you loudly subscribe to the channel hit that like button do it right now i'm not going to take no for an answer those would be my vociferous demands but i i don't want to yell that at you i want to ask you politely please subscribe hit that like button i just wanted to give you an example of what vociferous means now let's talk about smell and a couple of these words could also be used to describe someone's taste like this first one which is overpowering so overpowering just means that it's it's extremely strong or intense if you smell something that's just overpowering and and really that's all you can smell open grave smoothies get them out quickly the stench is overpowering you could also use the word heavenly to talk about both smell and taste and it just means that something is giving great pleasure when talking about smell i think you would often use it with the word aroma aroma refers to a pleasant smell so if you say that something is a heavenly aroma you're really just giving it a bit more emphasis next we have putrid it's kind of the opposite of heavenly and if you say that something is putrid it just means that it's rotting and really has an unpleasant smell so you could say that there's a putrid odor or a putrid smell or maybe a putrid garbage can just really unpleasant then we have the word toxic toxic just means poisonous so if you smell something that you would describe as toxic then you just need to get the hell out of there eyes forward back straight and oh yes read in the toxic fumes and you'll probably die toxic fumes and then there's the adjective musty which means that something is smelling unpleasantly old or and slightly wet so you could say that it's just like a musty room or maybe um you're talking about some musty old books and people will often use that phrase to describe something musty old something that's just it's unpleasant maybe a little wet a little damp and it's just a musty old smell let's talk about words to describe the things we touch like slick and if you say that something is slick it means that it is well smooth and maybe shining and that that you tend to slide when walking or riding on it so i could say that that the roads are slick because of the ice then we have filthy which means extremely dirty and you could also use this word to talk about things that you see but if we're referring to touch then maybe you might slide your finger along something and it's really dirty and you could say oh this is filthy next is the adjective lukewarm i really like this one it's just saying that that something is slightly warm especially a liquid so perhaps i'm talking about maybe the shower and say yeah the shower is just it's just a little lukewarm so so somebody knows what to expect that the water is just slightly warm you're gonna leave me here with a floundering career in a lukewarm americano mushy great word it means that something is soft and has no firm shape and you would probably use this word talking about things you might be touching with your hands if you're preparing food and maybe some meat that that is mushy yes and then there's cuddly cuddly is just talking about something that you'd want to really wrap your arms around in a caring and affectionate way maybe you're talking about a cuddly stuffed animal like this one right here which my daughter calls huggy yes stuffed animals they can be cuddly and then there's taste and i want to teach you this adjective right here subtle which means that something is not bright or loud or noticeable or obvious in any way you could also use this adjective to talk about well hearing or something you might see but if we're talking about taste you would use this generally in a positive way and you're describing some something that you're eating that has a subtle hint of something else like a subtle hint of cinnamon or a subtle hint of oregano so that's a good phrase to learn a subtle hint of something then we have strong which i think is also used when talking about smell but it means that that maybe a taste is very noticeable and powerful and you could describe maybe a cheese a blue cheese as having a strong taste or coffee that is a common collocation if somebody's talking about strong coffee pet arabian is strong coffee pungent this is one of my favorite adjectives from the list and you could also use this to to talk about smell but what it means is that something is smelling or tasting very strong and sharp and often i think you would use it to describe something that you find disagreeable so i could say that that a durian has a pungent taste and i also think it has a pungent smell then there's savory we can use this adjective to talk about food with with a salty or spicy taste not not a sweet one so pretzels garlic bread beef jerky i could describe those as savory and then there's succulent which means pleasantly juicy and there's a wide range of foods that you could describe as succulent ranging from strawberries to steaks there's a lot there's a lot of food that i would say is succulent that looks positively succulent i hope that you learned some new and descriptive words and collocations in this lesson if you did let me know write the word mesmerizing down in the comments that way i know that you learned something new you enjoyed the lesson you just you could not take your eyes off this lesson that's all for now thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Super USEFUL EXPRESSIONS for your next conversation (30-minute Lesson)

let's learn some super useful English expressions for casual conversation and I think these expressions are going to help you add a little more flavor to your discussions if you're talking to a friend a colleague a family member now this is a quiz lesson so I would like you to participate write your answers in the chat or in the comments and if you'd like to get the lesson notes join my email Community Check out the link Down Below in the description if you're already a part of it I have sent them to you all right now so one thing I do want I would like to introduce myself if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary and learning new words phrases and expressions Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so this lesson is not just passive learning you don't have to just sit there and watch I I want you to participate there have been allegations of corruption I bet this is just the tip what how would you complete that expression I'm giving you part of it the tip this is I think a common expression that you probably know you may even actively use it already it may be a part of your active vocabulary but to try and give you some context there have been Al allegations of Corruptions corruption and somebody says well I bet this is just the tip how would you complete this expression and I think giving the the first part the tip is a little bit of a hint and yes we are talking about the tip of the iceberg and I don't know if you noticed this is a politician in the background uh Senator Menendez and yeah I feel like when when talking about corruption and politics I think usually whatever you know whatever information you have it's probably just the tip of the iceberg which means a small noticeable part of a problem and even though the total size which is really much greater and the example sentence yeah there have been allegations of corruption but I bet this is just the tip of the iceberg to give you a visual because I'm a visual learner when thinking about an iceberg you can kind of see well up top what people see that small noticeable portion and then down below what is hidden there's more to it so for example they say well you see someone's Behavior but there's all this other stuff underneath which is actually uh a bigger part of who the person is their values their beliefs their worldview the things that you don't readily see so if you want to say that well there you can only see a small part of something that's much greater you could say it's just the tip of the iceberg here is your next question I wasn't sure if he was telling the truth but I decided to give doubt what do you think this is a I think a very useful expression and we're talking about to give M and then the the final word is doubt I wasn't sure if he was telling the truth but I decided to give doubt uh this is one that I'm sure you've heard and once again maybe you actively use it I tried to choose Expressions that I think are a bit more common excellent great job uh Loi J janatul uh to give someone the benefit of the doubt I wasn't sure if he was telling the truth but I decided to give him the benefit of the doubt this means that you're choosing to believe what someone tells you even though it may be wrong or maybe it's a lie I wasn't sure if someone was telling the truth but I decided to to believe what they were saying and I could say yeah I decided to give him the benefit of the doubt and how about what do you think this one is maybe a bit more challenging I feel like I always get the M stick when my family decides who is going to do which chore I feel like I always get the the M stick when my family decides who's going to do which chore so to get the and the last word is stick and notice the chore I put somebody cleaning the toilets it's not a chore that I think well many people enjoy doing or want to do I know I would rather do the dishes than clean the toilet but if somebody they have to do this and you could say that they get the short end of the stick so if somebody is getting the short end of the stick this just means that they they end up in a worse position than other people in a particular situation even though it's not their fault so perhaps somebody is selected at random and you basically have to do something that nobody wants to do and you get the short end of the stick such as like well if somebody gets the short end of the stick and they have to clean the toilet when deciding who's going to do which Family chore I believe believe this may come from people when they try to make a decision like who's going to do something and they have all these sticks and they break them up and somebody has to choose whoever gets the shortest stick is the person that has to do the task or the thing that nobody wants to do and you get the short end of the stick I believe this is where this expression comes from to give you a little more context because these are casual Expressions most of the time you're just going to hear hear here and use them in informal conversation however you may still come across them in a more formal context such as a news article and even though this is more casual I've given you some news headlines using this expression Zim government I believe they're talking about the Zimbabwe government restrained and carefree in its spending civil servants get short end of the stick or land owners may get short end of the stick and finally Blue Jay's Prospect get short end of the stick as many are absent from MLB pipeline top 100 now once again you're probably not going to come across this as much in writing if you're reading a news article or a book but it is something that you're you're more likely to use in conversation I would say that that goes for all of these Expressions what do you think of the next one she plans to keep running she's m wind so the expression it it ends ends with the word wind once again I think this is a useful expression that I think you can use quite often in a specific situation so in this context someone's going to keep running but and and maybe it's difficult and they're just going to keep going and they would you say oh gosh I'm about to say it she is M wind I think once I tell you you probably May recognize it or think oh yes I I I'm familiar with uh this expression so the the expression that we're looking for is to get your second win or to get for for someone to get their second win so in this situation somebody's running and they're very tired but they get their second win they get the energy to keep going so you have this return of strength or energy that makes it possible to continue an activity or start again if you stopped doing an activity a lot of times I feel like this is used when you're exhausted and you're tired but then you have this energy to keep going or to stay awake and you're getting your second win for example sometimes at night if I'm working late I might be really tired and then instead of going to bed I'm say okay I think I'm getting my second win and I'm going to continue working or maybe you fly somewhere and you travel somewhere and once again you're tired but you've landed and you're like okay I'm going to stay up I have this again this other this return to strength and I'm getting my second win here is a funny example think this oh these raccoons when you're tired but you get a second win and of course this raccoon looks like like it looks like he's up to no good and I don't think it's a good thing if a raccoon is getting a second win so a great phrase in case this is one that you may be unfamiliar with how about this one your eyes for any changes in the schedule so I'm giving you part of the expression your eyes I know this is challenging because you're really some with some of these sentences I'm not giving you much context M your eyes for any changes in the schedule so you're giving this command which I think is often how this expression is used M your eyes what do you think I'm telling somebody to look pay attention I want you to be aware and I would like you to keep your eyes peeled keep your eyes peeled for any changes in the schedule

now I saw somebody said keep your eyes open that that also works I I would say if you say hey tell somebody hey keep your eyes open and look for something be aware that also works you could use again in this case the expression keep your eyes peeled for any changes in the schedule or I'll give you another example because this is one that I would often use but again it means to watch carefully for someone or something if I'm driving and maybe I'm looking looking for a gas station if somebody else is in the car with me I might tell them hey look keep your eyes peeled for a gas station and look for one so that we can pull over and get some gas so once again keep in mind I told you that often you may use this as more of a command you're telling somebody look keep your eyes peeled for this thing but you could use open I don't want to say that's incorrect and I'll even give you another one that I was unfamiliar with which is more British English keep your eyes skinned it says informal British but it means to look or watch closely in order to see or find something before this lesson I was unaware of this phrase but so you learn something new every day keep your eyes peeled keep your eyes skin but to give you a little context if we want to if you want to know which one is more frequently used this is a great opportunity you can go to engram viewer this is a resource that you can compare the frequency of different words and phrases and as you can see it's much more common to say keep your eyes peeled keep your eyes peeled for this or that and yes if you are in the US that is the

that is the expression you want to use keep your eyes peeled for something I'm switching it up a little bit now I'm giving you the meaning and I want you to think of the expression use the picture to help you so I've Cho I've chosen picture that kind of really capture the the idiom or the expression so the meaning is to not completely believe something that you are told because you think it is unlikely to be true what what do you think what expression can I use that has this meaning don't completely believe it because you know it may not be true what should you do look at the picture and I think this one I I thought it might I thought it might have been fairly easy or at least a little easier when you're talking about this expression yes excellent uh this is some great answers to take something with a grain of salt a lot of times the something is going to be it like you're talking about uh a story and you say look I'd take it with a grain of salt or you read something in the newspaper or on Facebook and okay just take it with a grain of salt once again in British English you may hear people use pinch instead of grain uh but I just wanted to give you some example sentences using this expression uh I already mentioned when you see something on Facebook and yes I definitely think this is true you should take it with a grain of salt now I always I always try to take everything with a grain of salt I think that is a healthy thing to do especially nowadays with you have you know social media a lot of information that's really not that great it may not be true or it's incomplete so I think it's always good to take things with a grain of salt and uh another thing maybe you don't you don't have to trust me you should take what I say with a grain of salt that final example sentence so that's another way that uh I that you may hear people use it I said to take it with a grain of salt or in the next sentence to take everything with a grain of salt or to take what someone says with a grain of salt and it's kind of like your advising someone uh when it comes to this how about this expression right here use the picture to come up with the expression the meaning is to do things in the wrong order what is someone doing in this situation if someone is doing something in the wrong order of course you could just say look you're just doing this in the wrong order but if you want to use an expression and you want to capture this idea you could tell someone this you are doing what and once again I feel like this image really captures the the expression so looking at it what's going on in this picture you're doing things in the wrong order in that case you are putting the cart before the horse so once again of course you could say something look you know you're doing this in you're doing this all in the wrong order but you might want to you could emphasize tell one something look you're you're putting the cart before the horse you you should be doing the other thing before you do this to try to provide a a little more clarity when it comes to this here are some examples of when you might be putting the cart before the horse so you're putting the cart before the horse if you start decorating a new office before you get the promotion and in that case yes you are putting the cart before the horse or you're putting the cart before the horse if you you book your honeymoon vacation before you propose not a good idea I think you definitely you should propose first and then think about the honeymoon if you do it the other way around you're putting the cart before the horse and finally you're putting the cart before the horse if you start selling a product before it is tested once again you're doing things in the wrong order you should test things and then sell the product but if you don't do that you could tell someone look you're putting the cart before the horse Great Expression here's another one that I think uh maybe it's a little more aggressive depends on the situation and the context again the picture I think really is um very specific when it comes to this the meaning is to show to show by your actions and not just your words words that you support or believe something so in this situation maybe I want to tell someone I don't want to I don't want to hear what you're saying because let's see your actions let's see you do this thing and I want you to do what the picture I think can really help you in this case because this this gentleman right here what is he doing he's putting his money where uh his mouth is to put your money where your mouth is I told you that this may be I a little more aggressive but it's like if somebody's just talking like I'm going to do this or this is easy and you want to say okay let's see you do it don't just talk about it let's see your actions let's see you do it I want you to put your money where your mouth is or you could just say tell somebody as like a Command put your money where your mouth is a lot of times people would follow this up and they might want to bet the person and say let's see you put your money where your mouth is I'll bet you $100 that you cannot do this thing so think about that context that situation because language learning should be fun here is a little comic uh in in which case this person is saying they say put your money where your mouth is so I'm making a salad out of $100 bills it's like they're taking the expression literally as far as putting the money where your mouth is and making a salad out of this uh out of this money so here is the next one what do you think to depend for your success on a single person or plan of action what is if somebody is doing this and this is the situation what expression has this meaning and once again I I I don't know if you all find this more challenging than the first part or a little more difficult I thought maybe it might be a little easier with these pictures because the picture is like almost literally what the expression is you're depending uh your success depends on maybe a single action or a plan of action and this is not a good thing and in that case excellent uh LLY Joanna Manuel you are putting all your eggs in one basket to put all your eggs in one basket means that yes you're just depending on maybe one thing when you probably should uh diversify would be uh a good way of putting it so here are some example sentences to give you a little more context investing all your savings in one stock is risky you're putting all your eggs in one basket or the next one I wouldn't recommend applying to only one college you don't want to put all your eggs in one basket sometimes you're going to hear people use this with the negative like you're giving someone advice and you in that case you're going to use it the negative say look don't put all your eggs in one basket you should do more things uh apply to more colleges buy more stocks instead of just one don't put all your eggs in one basket and then finally she's been relying on one client for most of her business she's definitely putting all her eggs in one basket so keep in mind typically this is more of a negative uh when you have have all your eggs in one basket it is a risky situation and that is why I said I think often people may use it with the negative in advising someone look don't put all your eggs in one basket here's the next one the person who arrives first in a place is most likely to get what they want what expression has this meaning and you can use that picture to try to think about okay what expression is this the person who arrives first in a place is most likely to get what they want and I feel like this is like a saying that you're you're telling somebody look you should arrive first because yeah you're going to get the thing that you want and you would tell this person the early bird catches the worm early bird catches the worm you arrive first you're going to get what you want so basically it's kind of saying that if you wake up earlier if you're really active probably like I guess in the morning then you're going to achieve your goals you're going to get what you want and you may say this to someone if the next morning like we got to get up early we got to get going we got to start because the early bird catches the worm I thought this was funny again this little meme you see this this bird right here kind of clutching like yes I slept in and I still caught that worm yes that was great and it's always uh I guess it's always a good thing it's always reason to cheer if you're able to sleep in and still catch that worm and achieve your goal for the day what do you think this is this is a common expression it's one that I I think most of you know many of you probably actively use it but it means to imagine how someone else feels in a difficult situation use the picture think about the the expression you're imagining well how is this person feel in this situation or I'm trying to think about it and be a little more possibly sympathetic to what someone else is going through or dealing with and you could tell someone look look you need to put yourself in their shoes to put yourself in someone's shoes is just imagining how someone else feels in a difficult situation now there there are other Expressions that you can use that really have the same meaning and you could put yourself in someone's shoes or you could say someone else's shoes you you'd often hear else's with this expression or to put yourself in someone's place or to put yourself in someone's position so I've given you some example sentences with each of those you should be kinder when considering others and put yourself in their shoes once in a while or to put yourself in someone's place if we're having a conversation and I say look put yourself in my place what else could I have done all right what should I have done in this situation I don't know just put yourself in my place or put yourself in someone's position if I maybe you're encouraging me to exaggerate in a job interview and I don't feel comfortable and I like look okay this could be problems like I'm not going to lie in the job interview it's wrong you know put yourself in my position all right think about my situation and put yourself in my position so all of these again are really have the same meaning trying to say look you should be more sympathetic as to what someone else is going through we've already talked about Ingram viewer this is another great example of we have these different phrases and you want to know okay which one do which one is am I more likely to come across or use when I'm having a conversation uh I put these in engram viewer and it was very close basically to put yourself in my place and put yourself in my shoes are are used at about the you know the same frequency you're going to come across them uh fairly uh well regularly and then the the other one to put yourself in my position is not as often used but still one that you may come across so it's good to to be aware of and know all of these so here is a little review these are all the Expressions that we just talked about today if you learn something new you can let me know by hitting that like button that is my goal with all of these lessons I just hope you learn something new so that you can continue building your vocabulary

Super Useful American Expressions | Build Your Vocabulary

let's talk about some super useful american expressions they're very common in the united states which is where i am from and the first expression that i have for you is to err on the side of caution and what this means is that you are going to be especially careful when making a decision you don't want to make a mistake so you're not going to do something that would be very risky you're going to be very careful you're going to err on the side of caution one thing i will say about this expression is that the first word you may hear some people pronounce it as er to er on the side of caution however i think in the united states most people are going to say air to air on the side of caution i would say to you i hope that you err on the side of caution go ahead subscribe to the channel turn on notifications so that you'll learn about future lessons and then i can become your english teacher my name is wes that's what interactive english is all about trying to help you achieve your fluency goals the next expression is one that that i use quite often and that is to play it by ear so what this means is that when you say let's play it by ear it means that you do not want to make decisions about what will happen you're going to wait and see how things unfold so you really don't want to plan in advance you're going to play it by ear and when i'm when i'm traveling sometimes i don't like to have a fixed plan i just want to see what happens throughout the day and then i'll make a decision as to what i'm going to do next yeah i like to play it big ear let's play it by ear so when are you getting back from florida i don't know played by you why geez the pick and the poke itinerary is just great now they've worked it out to the exact minute you won't miss a thing honey why don't we just forget the pig in the poke itinerary and play it by ear before we continue i would like to thank the sponsor of today's lesson which is skillshare and skillshare is an online learning community where you can take thousands of classes which means that you can explore and discover so many different things that you would like to learn more about when i joined skillshare i took a class by thomas frank on how to improve productivity i've also taken classes on stocks and trading because that's just something that i'm interested in and i'd like to follow up on that point because of course you can take classes in english if you want to build your vocabulary or learn more about grammar but what i would recommend is that you explore some classes that interest you like like travel or design or cooking because that way you can practice and improve your english as you learn about one of your passions and right now skillshare has a special offer for all of you the first 1000 people to click on the link in the description will get a one month free trial of skillshare so you can start exploring your creativity today so click on the link in the description to get your free trial take some online classes learn more english and learn more about well just about anything else that you'd like to learn about now let's get back to the lesson on some of those useful and common american expressions which i i think are really going to help you in just casual conversation and the next one that i have is i hear you i hear you so this is an expression that people will use when they're trying to empathize with somebody else and they're kind of maybe you're you're listening to another person's problem and you want to empathize with them and you'd say yeah yeah i hear you and most of the time i think people they're going to pronounce you with that schwa yeah i hear you i hear you we don't have as much money as you okay i hear you we can talk about that then we have the expression close but no cigar and what this means is that a person falls short of a successful outcome and therefore they get no reward so it's believed that the origin of this expression comes from well fairgrounds a long time ago people would participate in in games and activities and if they win they would get a cigar and if they didn't win then the person running the game or activity would say close but no cigar are these diamond deep nope diamond down nope like diamond damn close but no cigar just plain diamond sooner rather than later so this expression really comes from the binomial pair sooner or later which means that something is going to happen in the future you just don't know when so sooner rather than later it's kind of just being a little more specific and you're saying that something is going to happen in the immediate future closer to now than at a later date so i could say well right now the the door handle in our home one of the door handles it's it's a it's broken it probably is going to fall off if we don't fix it so i think we need to fix it sooner rather than later stannis baratheon is coming for us sooner rather than later you're gonna run out i guess the sooner rather than later painful detox is inevitable then we have an accident waiting to happen this expression was coined in the united states and it really means what it says it refers to a person thing or situation that is likely going to cause an accident so maybe there is some really old bridge that has been neglected and it looks a little dangerous to cross you could say this old bridge is an accident waiting to happen or if somebody were to just leave like a box in the middle of the floor and somebody could easily trip over it you could say well this this is an accident waiting to happen i had a smoke and i think i might have lit something that i don't know what happened he put so much goddamn lacquer on that thing it was an accident waiting to happen the next expression is in and of itself and what this refers to is something well on its own or by its very nature and you may hear people use it in well one of two places perhaps at the end of a statement i could say well taking care of a child is a full-time job in and of itself on its own that's a full-time job or people may use it after the subject so i think flying is stressful you have to check your bags go through security wait at the gate get on the plane and using it after the subject i could say flying in and of itself is stressful but the rest of the vacation it's it should be very relaxing summoning the brother in court i probably hope that that's a sad commentary in and of itself elizabeth do you think this is actionable oh polonium in and of itself is improved then we have throw a wrench in the works or you may hear people say throw a monkey wrench in the works and if somebody says this what it means is well something that prevents an activity or plan from succeeding i could say well the project ran out of money and that really threw a wrench in the works because we're not able to finish the project now you you could also use this expression saying well to throw a wrench into something so maybe something well throws a wrench into your plans this bad weather really it threw a wrench into our plans or maybe well the attack threw a wrench into the peace negotiations that it was going to prevent these negotiations from being successful so just be aware that you can use this expression in different ways okay here we go you know what i don't want to throw a wrench into the works but i want everything to be perfect baby's fingernails are just bothering me were you expecting to have detective boyle on your team have i thrown a wrench into your plan i really like the next expression because i like to use it and that is not buying it and what it means is that just you're not willing to believe or accept that something is the truth if maybe you're at work you're talking to one of your colleagues and they say oh the boss called in sick again you say yeah i'm not buying it now i think most of the time people are going to say it because whatever you're talking about what you're referring to is known it's obvious and you just say hey i'm not buying it i don't believe this is true you may hear people actually be more specific and say what it is as uh a teacher might tell a student say yeah i'm not buying that the dog ate your homework okay i'm just not buying it and you could also use this in the affirmative especially if you're talking about expressing disbelief so you you tell somebody something and maybe it's not true but they believe it and then you say well i can't believe i can't believe they bought it i honestly think i helped him more than he helped me i'm not buying any of that no i told my uncle i had a stomach ache tonight you think he bought that yeah he probably bought it the next expression is jump on the bandwagon i i think this is pretty common especially referring to like trends or or talking about sports because what it means is that you are either joining an activity because it's become very popular or you're changing your opinion about something because it's become popular and you want to share in the success so thinking about trends like fashion maybe there are just some popular shoes that everybody has to have and you're going to join in this activity and sharing the success you're going to jump on the bandwagon or in sports maybe a team is always losing and everybody has a bad opinion but then suddenly they start winning and people jump on the bandwagon they change their opinion so they can share in the team's success and they jump on the bandwagon are you jumping on this superhero bandwagon club where you have to wear full body spandex really my thing reason for not wanting to jump on the bandwagon it's just that i've seen you get your hopes up before only to be disappointed when things didn't work out okay so let's use some of these i could say i hope that you jump on the interactive english bandwagon because this channel in and of itself will help you achieve english fluency and i would really love it if you would write to me in the comments and i hope that you write to me sooner rather than later and i know you may be a little disappointed that the lesson is ending i hear you but i have to go do laundry okay i'm sure you're not buying it but i do want to err on the side of caution and and start wrapping things up i don't want this to go on too long i know that you are a busy person you have a lot of things going on i do not want to throw a wrench into your plans and that that that's all i got thank you guys so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Super Useful Idioms & Expressions w/ SPEAK or TALK

in this lesson i am going to speak my mind and i'm going to tell you exactly what i think about these idioms and expressions and this is actually the first idiom that i want to teach you and that is to speak one's mind it means to say what you're thinking openly and honestly and when it comes to well the word mind you're really referring to a person's thoughts similar to the way somebody would ask well what's on your mind in this case they're asking what are you thinking but as far as speaking your mind in that case you are speaking and saying and sharing your thoughts with another person and you may hear people use this as like a stand-alone statement kind of like giving a command to another person and you would say hey speak your mind and in this situation probably the other person is thinking something and they want to say what they're thinking but perhaps they just haven't yet and you are just telling them hey i want to know what you're thinking speak your mind tell me openly and honestly or you could use this to encourage a person to to speak honestly and say hey don't be afraid to speak your mind all right you should share what you're thinking honestly and openly don't be afraid to speak your mind you don't think we can win yeah i speak my mind your grace i've been speaking your mind lord carson i think you lost this war and throughout this lesson i am going to speak my mind i'm going to do that right now and tell you that if you would like to practice and improve your english please subscribe turn on notifications that way i can become your teacher my name is wes the channel is interactive english it's all about helping you reach your fluency goals so that you are not afraid to speak your mind and tell others what you think so in this lesson i am going to teach you a lot of different idioms and expressions that all have the word speak or talk not only am i going to give you the meaning but i will talk to you about how the idiom and expression is used because if you're going to use them you want to make sure that you are using them in the correct context the next one that i have for you is speaking from experience this means that you are talking about something having had prior experience so that you what you have to say is more credible and that you have a worthwhile viewpoint and and really i think the key word is credible because if somebody says well speaking from experience it's kind of like you're letting somebody know that well you are an authority figure when it comes to this topic or this situation because you have prior experience now just because somebody says this and they say speaking from experience that does not necessarily mean that they are a professional it just means that this person has some experience so perhaps they have some valuable insight so you may hear people share their viewpoint and then say well i'm speaking from experience so that you know this person is credible or you can use this as an introductory phrase before sharing your viewpoint so i could say speaking from experience i think one of the best ways to learn another language is to continuously get exposure to the language and i'm talking about my experience when i was learning both spanish and korean i would try to get as much exposure to each language listening and reading and then i would try to practice using the language with speaking and writing and i'm just speaking from experience okay so i tried to use it both ways once to introduce my viewpoint and then again just to reaffirm it at the end and tell you hey i'm speaking from experience secrets create barriers between people speaking from experience believe me the next idiom that i have for you is to talk one's ear off and what this means is to talk to someone for a long time often excessively and loudly so really it's a situation in which you feel like the conversation should be shorter but it just goes on and on and on because the person is talking your ear off now it's not really a good thing but because it could be more negative if you say someone is talking your ear off because people may not like that but people also use this jokingly as well perhaps my wife might say hey if you start talking about football my husband is going to talk your ear off which tells you that i am a fan of the sport and that i like to talk about it and i might talk about it a little too much and talk your ear off now this is an idiom that you may not often say directly to another person perhaps you might use it apologetically and say hey you know sorry for talking your ear off in which case you're letting the person know that you're probably talking a little too much but more often you may use this idiom to talk about well another person and say that they were talking your ear off about some topic i could say i went to the party last night and i saw one of my work colleagues and he just started talking my ear off about a presentation that he has to give next week and it's a party i don't want to talk about work so i quickly tried to get out of that conversation and then i talked to the host of the party who was just complaining about the weather and was going on and on about it and was just talking my ear off so i i wanted to get out of that conversation and ultimately i just left the party so those are a couple of examples using this idiom to talk one's ear off you two have a great time getting to know each other don't let this one talk your hair off she's the type of girl who just loves to talk that's mrs robertson watch out she will talk your ear off right now i want to take a moment to tell you about my speaking course and i i'm just going to speak my mind and i will try not to talk your ear off so speak up is a course for intermediate to advanced speakers and it's really all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally check out the link in the description if you would like to join or learn more information and when you click on that link and go to the course page you will find a special discount just for you so each week there is a different speaking topic you will learn vocabulary related to that topic we do engaging speaking activities at the beginning of each lesson we warm up with something related to pronunciation or connected speech there are also pronunciation video lessons included in the course in addition i'll teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases so click on the link below if you would like to sign up and i really hope you consider enrolling because perhaps you are someone who thinks yeah i would like to practice and improve my speaking skills and maybe you tell this to yourself but in the end actions speak louder than words and that is a nice segue into our next expression which is actions speak louder than words so this is actually a proverb which means that actions are more revealing of one's true character because it's easy just to say things and make promises and it takes more effort to actually do something and follow through actions speak louder than words now you can use this proverb in a variety of situations like uh perhaps somebody is just talking about some of the things that they want to do or they're planning to do and maybe you don't really believe this person you could use this proverb and say hey actions speak louder than words in this case it's like you're telling them hey show me all right don't just talk about it let's see you do it or you could use this in a situation in which somebody talks about one thing but then their actions are doing like completely the opposite and i can give you a great example when it comes to this think about politicians they like to say things all the time say the things they're going to do or say the things they believe in but when it comes time to vote which would be the their action they do the exact opposite so in this case you could say hey actions speak louder than words your actions really reveal your true character and what you truly believe in actions speak louder than words uh he's he's just a loader they don't allow them to communicate but what if he has something to say actions speak louder than words the next expression is one that i really like and it's one that i hear from time to time and that is like talking to a brick wall and what this means is that you are unsuccessfully trying to persuade or reason or talk with someone who just does not listen or or does not react and i think people would say this out of frustration and they would say well it's like talking to a brick wall and i it's a it's an expression that i think we can all relate to sometimes my wife says this when trying to talk to me i i might be on the computer and i'm really concentrating on something maybe i have my headphones in and she is talking to me at the same time perhaps asking me something and i'm not i'm not ignoring her i i kind of out of the corner of my eye or the corner of my ear i can hear that that she's saying something and the one the one thing that i do catch is her saying it's like talking to a brick wall because i'm not listening and i'm not reacting and she would say ugh it's like talking to a brick wall says it just like that all right another time when you may use this expression is when you're trying to reason with someone who is just unwilling to listen perhaps this person is just really stubborn and it doesn't matter what you say or the reasons that you give they're just not going to listen and again out of frustration you could say it's like talking to a brick wall what did he talk about he talked about rugby what did he talk about francois it's like talking to a brick wall what did he say i think he wants us to win the world cup next is the phrase on speaking terms and this just refers to a mutual relationship that is limited to uh casual greeting or just casual conversation it means that you're friendly enough to talk now the one thing that i want you to know about this idiom is that often you're going to use it in the negative with the word not to say that you are not on speaking terms with someone in which case it's like you're saying that that you had a falling out and you and this other person you are no longer talking so we can actually use engram viewer to show you which one is more common and as you can see it's more common to say that you are not on speaking terms with someone than to use this idiom in the affirmative and say that you are on speaking terms and because it involves two people you're really going to use it with the subjects we or they we're not

them the avengers broke up we're toast broke up captain i fell out hard we're not speaking terms then we have to talk one's way into something or out of something and it means to persuade people to do something or to not do something by the reasons that you give so if you talk your way into something you are persuading someone to give you something or maybe allow you to do something i could say he talked his way into getting a promotion okay he got a promotion or we talked our way into the private party and they allowed us to enter if you talk your way out of something then you're persuading someone not to give you something perhaps a punishment or persuading them not to make you do something like chores or work so i could say she got pulled over by the police and she talked her way out of a driving ticket she persuaded the police officer not to give her a ticket or maybe i tell you you have to write to me in the comments it's like i'm making you do something and you are trying to talk your way out of it and persuade me not to make you do this and i'm i'm not buying it and i say look you're not going to talk your way out of this all right that that is a statement that you may often hear if somebody's trying to persuade the other person and they're they just don't believe it and they're not gonna fall for it they may say you're not gonna talk your way out of this okay i i'm still gonna make you do this thing the other thing that i wanted to point out with this idiom is that it is more common to hear people say they're going to talk their way out of something than talk their way into something so comparing these two phrases you can see that it's more common to talk your way out of something i'm not letting you just throw your life away i'm gonna talk our way out of this start a new life there meet a local girl fall in love talk my way into a line job at a textile plant next is the phrase as we speak and it just means at this exact moment right now and really it just adds emphasis to whatever it is you're talking about you might say it's happening as we speak and there's really a sense of urgency so you can use this phrase at the beginning of a statement and i could say hey as we speak there is a crowd forming outside the building and perhaps a protest is going to begin and yeah there's a sense of urgency or i could use it at the end of a statement and tell you the plane is boarding as we speak we need to go right now because the plane is boarding as we speak even as we speak millions of children are staring at the tv instead of getting some much needed exercise and then there's to talk some sense into someone and this means that you are talking to someone and really trying to persuade them to see reason and what it makes me think is that this other person is perhaps scared or angry there's a lot of emotion involved and you may be trying to talk some sense into this person and it really implies that this other person is perhaps out of control and they're not listening to anyone so maybe i say well look dave is out of control can you please try to talk some sense into him right now it's like talking to a brick wall he won't listen to me or anyone else so please please try to talk some sense into him and then once again you tell me sorry we're not on speaking terms i can't help you because dave and i we're not on speaking terms you're going to have to find someone else to try and talk some sense into him dad mom is crazy can you talk some sense into her i hope you learned some new idioms and expressions and you don't feel like i just talked your ear off this entire lesson because i know that that when you watch these videos you're paying close attention and because of that i never feel like i'm talking to a brick wall and please check out the link down in the description if you'd like to learn more about my speaking course there are people signing up as we speak and of course yeah write to me in the comments i always encourage you to speak your mind and tell me what you're thinking and i'm just trying to get you a little bit of review but i hope that you enjoyed the lesson and if you did please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Super Useful Idioms & Expressions | Learn American English

today i want to teach you some common american idioms and expressions that's coming up [Music] hey everyone my name is wes from interactiveenglishvideos.com and this channel it's all about helping you practice and improve your english skills and today i want to help you build your vocabulary as well as improve your overall fluency because i'm going to teach you some very common and useful american idioms and expressions that you might hear if you are talking to somebody who is from the united states or maybe you can use some of these if you plan to visit the us so believe me when i tell you that this lesson it's going to be a piece of cake and that is actually the first idiom that i want to teach you many of you are probably familiar with this i wanted to start with something a little easier and then it'll get a bit more challenging but if we say that something is a piece of cake it just means that something is very easy so i told you that this lesson it's going to be a piece of cake i'm going to teach you these idioms and expressions and after i explain them and tell you how to use them i think that you will have a better understanding and like i said it's just going to improve your overall fluency so this lesson it's a piece of cake what's the sound of one hand clapping piece of cake oh bart it's a 3 000 year old riddle with no answer and every task you undertake becomes a piece of cake what about a raise based on merit rank each person individual piece of cake then we have the phrase run late or run behind and they they both mean the same thing it just means to be late for something now i i guess i could say that i use this phrase quite often and i would tell people that that i'm running late and i i would use it often because yes i am sometimes late for appointments or if i'm going to meet somebody but i would call ahead and tell them hey you know don't worry i'm i'm just running a little late so in that case i think it also implies that you are on your way to to get somewhere or if you're talking about perhaps like a project and you say you tell your boss you know i'm running a little behind you're telling them that it may be late but that you're working on it so again this is a great expression i think uh especially if you're somebody who who tends to be late for things you could just tell somebody hey you know i'm running a little late but i will be there it's only four blocks but they are so slow i'm running late too we're running light yeah we're always running late we're running a little behind schedule hi sorry i'm late i've been running behind all morning then we have the expression to get the hang of something and this just means to learn something that's not quite obvious so for example i think often you would use this when talking about some type of game or activity you're trying to learn it and and get a little bit better at it and in that case you could you could tell somebody you know i'm starting to get the hang of this i'm starting to feel a little more comfortable i understand it a little bit better and i'm starting to get the hang of it one thing i would like to point out with this expression is that it is often going to end with that pronoun it so in that case it's almost like you know what it is you know the game or activity that somebody is talking about and if you're trying to learn it a little bit better then you're trying to get the hang of it or starting to get the hang of it or you could say he he is getting the hang of it but you know the activity so it's often going to end with that pronoun it don't worry you'll get the hang of it you're going to get the hang of it we'll help you how's he doing i haven't quite gotten the hang of it yet then we have the phrase all set and this just means that that you are ready and you are ev everything is in order so it's something that maybe you could ask to somebody if you want to know if they're ready and you can say hey you know all set or you could tell somebody if you want to say that you are organized you're prepared and you are ready to go and you'd say you know i'm all set we're all set we are ready we're organized we're prepared you could also say just to throw in another expression good to go okay it means the same thing if somebody says you know i'm good to go that means that they are ready they're all set ready ready set okay we're all set let it rip is it okay if i put out some candy that pam brought back from puerto rico sure thanks for asking pam we're all set let me know what you got good to go weapon's good to go you're good to go then we have the expression to sound like a broken record and it really means well kind of exactly what it says and that is that somebody is just repeating something again and again especially when it's not really necessary and you would say to another working with a group of people maybe a team you want everyone to pitch in you want everyone to do some work the something that's helpful for the group or the team and in that case you want everyone to pitch in but it's used in in that context that you might ask someone who may not be helping and you would tell them to pitch in or say you need to pitch in but it is to to do something that's helpful everyone here has a job we all pitch in glad you could pitch in he needs all the help he can get by the way if you need help with that i'm more than happy to pitch in then we have the idiom to blow off some steam and this just means to to do something or to say something that helps you get rid of of some energy often some some negative energy that if you're you're angry or upset you might try to perhaps you go for a run and you just want to blow off some steam you just want to want to get rid of that energy so you could use it when talking about a an activity that you do something physical in order to blow off some steam or maybe it's something that you you say to someone perhaps you even might yell at someone and you're just you're trying to blow off some steam time to think no let him go he needs to blow up some steam i've never seen him like this get the big lug a break even he needs to blow off some steam you're working so hard this semester really need to go crazy you know blow off some steam you still seem stressed you want to blow up some steam then we have the expression it's not rocket science so this is a statement that somebody would would say to another person if they want to express that something is not really difficult and it's it should be easy to understand and you'd say no look it's not rocket science the listen for this if you're watching a tv show or movie because again if somebody wants to say that like look this is not difficult they might tell somebody you know it's not rocket science so i would tell you guys you know learning these idioms and expressions it's not rocket science i think it's a piece of cake and if you just keep practicing a little bit each and every day then you're really gonna get the hang of it caller apologize it's not rocket science i mean fixing your hair is not exactly rocket science because i don't want to go by myself barb it's not rocket science you just tell your parents you're going to stay in my place afterwards then we have the expression to table something and this just means to postpone a discussion until a later time and often i think it might be used in business perhaps you're having a meeting with a group of people and and you have a list of items that you're going to go through but you want to discuss one of them at a later time you might say you know let's let's table this item for right now and then we will discuss it later so you could table some item if it's on an agenda or maybe you could just table some discussion and you will talk about it at a later time to table something suppose that we table this discussion until let's say the second nope is gone i i think what the dana's trying to say is uh there'll be time to talk about that we can table that for a later date what is your job exactly besides making balloon animals protecting your reality okay guys can we table this discussion right now the fact is is that we have this stuff next is the idiom to jump on the bandwagon and this just means to start supporting something or to even start doing something because it's trendy or fashionable often i i think i would use this idiom uh when talking about sports that if there is a sport team that just suddenly started winning and then everybody they they like this team all of a sudden they're they're a huge fan then you could say look you know uh he he just jumped on the bandwagon he only likes the team because everybody else does he's supporting this team he jumped on the bandwagon of course this has happened to me if i'm living somewhere and then that that city has a sports team they become really great yeah i jump on the bandwagon everything's echo friendly that is how friendly that i just haven't jumped on the bandwagon yet millions of people got on the anti-denmark bandwagon show me some kind of kindness not jumping on the let's get meg family bandwagon let's stick with sports for right now because the next expression is to sit in the nosebleed or you could say to sit in the nosebleeds section and what this refers to is that you are sitting in seats that are that are very high up at the the very top of a stadium and you're very far away from all of the action because you're so high up there you are sitting in the nosebleed section and the reason why we use this is because if you are at a very high altitude then maybe your nose would start to bleed because of the altitude so if you're high up there in the stadium then you could say you know i'm sitting in the nosebleed section when i jump on the bandwagon and i want to go see a sports team play typically i don't have a ton of money to spend so i have to find the cheapest tickets which are usually high up there in the stadium and i would sit in the nosebleed section can you take me to a concert with my new friend harper sure why not it'll be nosebleed or obstructed view seat but you know what i have a friend uh he's got a couple of seats if you don't mind the nosebleed section they're yours no we don't care we just want to go then we have the idiom to fall through the cracks and this just means to overlook something so if you are perhaps doing some project you don't want to overlook the details you don't want anything to fall through the cracks i need you to be sure that things don't fall through the cracks basically i need you to be more like dean here you do it every week and you forgot things are falling through the cracks i'm pretty sure you've worn that sweater four days in a row this whole uh single-parent thing everything is just falling through the cracks so what did i tell you those idioms and expressions piece of cake all right it's not rocket science and i'm sorry i know that i sound like a broken record because i keep repeating these these same idioms and expressions over and over again i hope you're not upset with me but if you are a little upset and you think you need to blow off some steam then i would suggest that you check out another video lesson i hope that you enjoy these lessons and that you just you jump on the interactive english bandwagon jump on the interactive english bandwagon and because okay i can't think of any more i just trying to review as much as i can thank you guys so much for watching i hope you learned some new idioms and expressions and i will see you next time

Super Useful Idioms & Phrases for the US Election

We just had an election in the US. It's big news and we will talk about that. But because this uh event just occurred, I want to teach you some useful idioms and phrases to talk about the election to talk about politics. This is a conversation that may persist well especially in the short term in the next 3 to 6 months. So, I think some of this vocabulary will be useful. And I would say that it is a bit more advanced, but you'll still come across them if you're listening to um a news report or watching some uh reading a newspaper about the election. Now, uh if you would like to Well, sorry, I was going to say, of course, as you know, Donald Trump has defeated Kla Harris. Uh this it was pretty much a sweep. I don't even think it's really gonna end up being that close. And we will get to that. I as as we get to the end, I'll tell you who who I voted for. And I'm also curious to know who even though the election is over, who do you think uh who were you hoping would win the election and I want to take a little bit of a poll and and get your thoughts on this. But if you'd like to get the lesson notes, please click on that link in the description. And if you are already a part of our email community, I will send you the notes so that that you have them and you can practice and try to remember this vocabulary because that's what this is all about. And if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And yes, I

I say that every lesson or pretty much every lesson. That is my intro. So, this is a quiz lesson and I want you to participate and it's going to get a little more difficult as we go through this. And the first question is the immigration issue is often used as a political. So, I'm giving you the the meaning down below. The meaning of this phrase and I've bolded it as well. A political is a problem that politicians from different parties argue about and try to to use in order to get an advantage for themselves. And you would refer to this issue as a political. Often times it implies that maybe one party they don't really care about solving it or they don't care about u you know fixing it and it's just being used as a political.

So I'll give you a moment. think of the answer and then I'll tell you the answer. But I would love it if you would participate. Write your answers in the chat in the comments. I just love hearing from you guys. This is definitely a more challenging question. I see a lot of different if I see any answers, I'll uh correct answers, I'll I'll give some shoutouts. Now, there there are you you know many collocations with the word political. It's it's not the word I'm looking for. It's not a political weapon. That's not uh what I'm looking for in this context. But you would specifically talk about an issue, whether it's immigration or some other issue, and you could say that the issue is being used as a the answer that I'm looking for is a political football. That is the phrase that you may hear when you talk about certain parties using an issue trying to gain an advantage and they say, "Oh, they're just using it as a political football." Now, even though I'm from the US and in the United States, when people say football, they think of American football. But that's not really what this refers to. Again, I'm sometime I'm miss I'm interested in the history of some of these these phrases and the origin and where they came from. This actually has been around for a long time. Said it was first used in 1857. I've underlined part of it because this is from Wikipedia. And it says this is from an American cartoon from the time President Harrison in 1889 shows a clear visual illustration of the metaphor without using the actual phrase. So, I don't know if you didn't notice, I used that in the background of the when I was asking the question, but this is the image that appeared in the newspaper in 1889 talking about this metaphor as in football, which in this case, yeah, it looks more like like rugby. Um, but nowadays, I feel like this phrase is used across many English varieties. If we're talking about the UK, Canada, South Africa, Australia, and they might say an issue is being used as a political football. The next one, hopefully, again, I hopefully if this is new, then just try to listen for it, especially in the coming months. Like I said, now that the even though the election is over, people are going to still be talking about politics and and what's going to happen after this. The parties worked out a compromise in a m deal. I think this one is a little more common. So I think some of you may be familiar with this. A m deal. That is the phrase that I want to highlight. Something is done secretly without attracting attention and you're you could say that they're doing something and it was a m deal. What do you think?

secrecy involved. It doesn't always mean that it is um nefarious and that there's definitely a negative connotation. Sometimes it's better for things not to be out in the public. So, any time though it's we're talking about secretly, something's done secretly, you may hear it being used as a backroom deal. To give you a little more context, here are some news headlines. Um, I think I say it's not negative, but I think some of this is more negative. Um, formal WAPO, this is referring to the Washington Post editor, reveals proof of Trump's backroom deal with Amazon founder. This has to do with a couple of weeks ago or maybe even a week ago when the Washington Post said they were not going to endorse anyone uh for president. He's implying that there was some backroom deal or this one, this is actually from France, the backroom deal to parachute macron loyalists into Brussels. I'm not really sure exactly when this article was done, but another example talking about a backroom deal.

And then finally, California journalists slam backroom deal after big tech upends agreement meant to bolster local news. So even though it doesn't have to be used as in more of a negative connotation, I I guess I would say most of the time I think it does imply something secret that is not good and they're talking about a backroom deal. Here is the next one and at the end I I want to I'll get your opinion. You can let me know who you voted for and I'll tell you who who I voted for. So, Senate Republicans have made supporting the war in Ukraine a signature policy priority, but their efforts have been complicated by fellow Republicans who are moving on the issue. This is an idiom moving m on the issue. This refers to the like to change the rules while someone is trying to do something in order to gain an advantage or you know make it more difficult for them. And you could say someone is moving.

Now, this can be used outside of politics, but often I think you might use this when there is a negotiation going on and transpiring and the conditions are changing and you could say this person or this group of people are this actually this is actually from um a news article and I'll show you that in a second. This is not a sentence that I just made up. Uh, so if we're talking about a change in rules and somebody's doing it, we are talking about to move the goalpost. Well done, Fatty Acid, Julia. Excellent. So, some of this is an idiom I'm sure some of you may have heard before. I think I've even taught it in a previous lesson on idioms to move the goalpost. You're changing the rules and the conditions to make it a little more difficult or challenging.

This is this is something that happens in politics a lot. Now I tried to highlight this and maybe I made it more difficult to see. This article is from a while ago and this is I basically summarized uh that first part which I highlighted which was the previous sentence talking about McConnell bedeled does Trump GOP move the goalpost. So, it was implying that Mitch McConnell back before was trying to get some deal done um that involved uh funding for uh Ukraine and some of the other people in the party were moving the goalpost.

The next phrase that is this one is more current and relevant from this year. After Joe Biden stepped aside besides Kla Harris, no other Democrat decided to throw their How would you complete this sentence? To throw someone's. It refers to announcing your intention uh to enter a competition or election. So you would use this when talking about elections. If you are entering and you're saying, "Yes, I am now running for office and I am going to throw my what?" How would you complete this sentence using the idiom? But you could also use it when you're, I guess, entering a competition as well. It doesn't always have to be used as part of politics. But I think often this is an idiom that you're going to hear in this context. When there's an election, somebody says they are going to run for office and they are going to throw their All right, that's like my I guess giving you a hint. They're going to throw their what? Not throw in the towel. Remember, throw in the towel is another idiom, but that just means to quit or give up. So, that's really a different situation. If you quit, you say, "Look, I'm throwing in the towel. I'm giving up. I'm quitting." In this case, when you're announcing that you're going to, you know, enter an election, enter a competition like, um, no other Democrats did this. Kla Harris decided to throw her hat in the ring. So to throw someone's hat in the ring basically means you said you're announcing that okay I am going to enter the competition. In this case it was really just Kla Harris. They did not have a primary. I think the Democrats felt like they didn't have enough time.

So nobody else decided to throw their hat in the ring. Another idiom that I would encourage you to listen for, especially in the context of politics, whether it's a US election or any other election for that matter, to throw someone's hat in the ring. Again, I hope uh I I'm encouraged that I feel like some of this may be new for some of you. I thought this was funny, so I thought I'd share it with you. Um you see Willy Wonka there saying, "I'd like to throw my hat in the ring for president." Why, you ask? I wouldn't be the oddest one running. So I think this is again just making fun of the I don't know the state of US politics and the the candidates that end up uh getting selected to to run for office. The next question in elections people sometimes underestimate the power of a movement.

So, a grassroots movement really underscores the fact that it's more I I guess I want to say local, but also just really ordinary people started it. Not somebody famous, not somebody with a lot of money who's very influential, but just ordinary people try to to start this movement and have it spread and get others to join their grassroots movement. To give you some context for this, this is another resource that I might use with uh learners from time to time because I am a visual learner. So sometimes I might go into Google and in quotes I'll put the phrase and then look at Google images to see what comes up.

So this is an example of putting grassroots movement into Google images and just seeing what pictures pop up. And as you can see, it is more you see these protests, people gathering or they're trying to um spread the word when it comes to some sort of cause, but really people getting involved uh in in trying to make change in some sort of grassroots movement. So hopefully looking at some of these images helps uh give you a better idea as to the meaning and how this phrase is used. Politicians often avoid talking about and what they're what people may avoid talking about is a major problem or controversial issue which is obviously present but is avoided as a subject for discussion. This is an idiom, but you can definitely use it outside of politics. And you could use this when you're in any situation in which there is a problem, tension, and people are just avoiding. They try to avoid talking about it and they want to ignore it, pretend that it does not exist. And somebody might say, "Okay, look, we need to talk about what?" And you could use this idiom, one that I feel like you've all heard. Uh I don't maybe not everybody, but uh most of you have probably heard before. You might hear it movies, TV shows. Excellent. Great job. We're talking about the elephant in the room. Uh well done, Mal Li. Great job. Good to see you. Um Boston Cafe. Uh Simple Boy, nice. Trying to give a few shout outs uh as we go through this again. I just I thought this was funny so I thought I would share it with you.

Sometimes I feel like you can use humor as a way to learn language and and enjoy learning the language. So this is just a comic uh from I think a while ago. If you were in the middle of the room the whole time, why can we not find a single witness to corroborate your your testimony? And they're questioning this elephant, you know, but the elephant was in the room the whole time. the elephant was in the room.

Now is maybe it's going to get a little more challenging because before I was giving you at least one word in the idiom or in the phrase. Now I'm just removing it but I'm still giving you the meaning. So the first one, the country's new prime minister is expected to win his first from parliament next week. Obviously, I'm not talking about the the United States now because this is not an example about the US because we do not have a parliament. Um, but you could still use this phrase when talking about US politics in general. If this is the meaning, we're talking about a vote in which members of a group are asked to indicate that they still support uh the person or group in power, usually in government. So, we're talking about a vote. I don't want to give it away. I almost said it. Um, support is a key word that you still support this person or this issue and it's going to be in this case is expected to win the first vote of what I just gave you part of the phrase right there. So that is the idiom. a vote of m and in this case we're talking about the phrase a vote of confidence. So a vote of confidence would be when members uh indicate yes okay I still support this person or maybe I still support this um this legislation and it is a vote of confidence. Now this this phrase does have two different meanings and I want to really uh point that out. So the first meaning we already talked about more related to government. The next meaning I classified this more as a you know broader use and it refers to a sign that you are pleased with the quality of something and what someone has done or produced. So let's say that in a company there was a you know the marketing team did a really good job promoting products and um as the marketing team was promoting this the CEO of the company shows up and you could then say okay yes it was a uh a real vote of confidence and that the CEO showed up and It was a vote of confidence. So again, there are different ways that you can use this idiom in other contexts and which is why I said it's has a little bit of a broader use. How about this one right here? Let me know what you think. So the sentence, some people claim that Obama [Music] to get Joe Biden to withdraw from the race.

Apologize for the the phrasing. These are things I having some internet uh issues today. But the the idiom means to secretly use influence you have over important people in order to get something uh or to help someone. So in this case, people say Obama withdrew from or not Obama, Biden withdrew from the race and people were wondering well why like what happened? Um and and and some people were speculating that Obama m to get Joe Biden to withdraw from the race and say, "Look, I think we should go in a different direction." What do you think? And this is another idiom that I think is very useful outside of politics. So you could use it in this context, but also just uh talking about other things as well when you're secretly trying to influence uh something or have uh you know some some sort of influence and you might try to do what the idiom that

So, this is a typo. It should be to pull a few strings instead of pulled a few strings in the past tense. But, as you can see, you can use this idiom to talk about a variety of uh situations in context as long as it has this meaning and you're secretly trying to influence something. What do you think? There was a lot of in order to get a visa to travel to the US. This is another another phrase that I think is commonly used especially when talking about government and we're referring to the official rules and processes uh that seem unnecessary and delay results. And you could say there is a lot of what? Government bureaucracy, government rules. You might refer to it with as this phrase. What do you think? Um, all right. Welcome, Jacelelle. Excellent. Becoming a member. Good to see you. Nice to meet you. Uh, thanks for thanks for joining the team. So, we're talking about two words in here. It it is referring to government bureaucracy. So, it does have the mean the same meaning. If I were to put it in here, there there was a lot of bureaucracy in order to get a visa to travel to the US, that would work. But in this case, we're talking about a specific phrase, and the phrase that I'm referring to is red tape. Well done, uh, Julia Fis Farv, sorry if I mispronounced names. Um, Miranda Talal. Red tape is informally or casually used to talk about government bureaucracy. And a lot of times that you're going to use it with a lot. There is a lot of red tape when you're trying to get a permit or do something and you say, "Oh, there's just so much red tape. There's a lot of red tape." And you're really frustrated. So red tape, it absolutely has a negative connotation. It's not a good thing. In my opinion, and this is true, this is my opinion. Politicians must be willing to in order to pass legislation. This is a phrase and I I guess you maybe I don't think it's really an idiom. I would just say it's a phrase, but the meaning is to vote, unite or otherwise cooperate with members of another political party. I think that people should work together even if they're in different parties.

That's my opinion. And in the US especially, you're going to hear this because there are just the two main parties. And you might say people need to in order to, you know, get something done, they're going to work on legislation together. Even though uh they're they're in two different parties, a Democrat and Republican may work together. And they would talk about they have to do what? So it's not uh has to do with coalition. A lot of times coalition is often used in more of when talking about parliament. So in the US with the two-party system, we don't really use um like the word coalition to describe cooperation. Collaborate is it it is a type of collaboration, but that's not the phrase that I'm looking for. specifically implies that one person from one party is working with the other party and in that case they they may need to cross the aisle and when you hear this being used especially in the US and maybe this is a little more US-specific because of the two-party system that we unfortunately have that a Democrat may need to cross the aisle and they may work with Republicans to get legislation passed or if Democrats are working on something but they need some Republicans to cross the aisle in order to get the votes to pass the legislation and that is when you may hear this phrase being used crossing the aisle working together which yeah in my opinion I think that's a good thing. Here are some more news headlines to to give you a little more uh context. So the first one polarized electorate American voters not easily swayed to cross the aisle and yeah it's very polarized uh nowadays so it's happening less frequently. Uh here's the next one. When families cross the aisle against presidential candidates. I think it's kind of just commenting on families that may have different uh political views. And then uh this is I this is kind of silly. Why did the politician uh cross the congressional aisle? Uh data privacy act was on the other side. This is more of a play on words if you're unfamiliar with that structure of someone telling a joke. Why did the chicken cross the road to to get to the other side? Or there's the punchline. So they're it's trying to, you know, have this kind of play on words referencing that joke. Why did the politician cross the congressional aisle? A data p privacy act was on the other side. Maybe that joke fell flat, which is fine. Um, uh, I just wanted to throw it in there just to have some fun. President Obama used a lot of his to pass the Affordable Care Act. So, this is a phrase, I know this is from, you know, a long time ago, uh, when this is when Obama first got elected and they were passing Obamacare affordable care act. and he had to use a lot of what to get it done. And it refers, this phrase refers to an individual's ability to influence political decisions. Has to do with a lot of networking and I'll give you this, you give me that, and making deals. Maybe there are some backroom deals going on, and you're having to use something in order to get some legislation done. your influence. So, it's really another phrase that is talking about influence. And you may hear people refer to this as what? This one is a little more challenging, but I think when I tell you the answer, you you may think, okay, I'm I've heard this before when talking about politicians negotiating with each other. The phrase that I'm looking for is I said it really is like networking but political capital. And if a politician has power, which a president does, you're going to use some of that power to get things done. And you may have to, you to work together. Maybe they have to cross the aisle and use some political capital in order to pass legislation. Women are entering the M in larger numbers. This is referring to the sphere of political activity or and debate. So this is another phrase and you you may hear it news um just in conversation discussion. I don't know if you are somebody who likes talking about politics, but I I wanted to choose some idioms and phrases that you may come across uh in the coming weeks, coming months, especially now that the election just ended. Women are entering the M in larger numbers. We're just talking about that sphere activity, the the conversation, and you might refer to it as the political something actually. All right.

Well done. We're talking about the political arena. TP Valley. Well, excellent. Great job. So, when somebody's talking about the political arena, this this is in general what they're they're referring to. And you could use arena with other adjectives as well if we're talking about, I don't know, the economic arena or or something like that. So you may hear the noun arena used in other context when talking about some sphere of activity. In this case, I'm referring to the political arena. So, here are the 12 idioms, phrases that I wanted to highlight in this lesson. Again, if you want to get the lesson notes, click on that link down below in the description.

Um, if you're already a part of the community, I will send them to you. This is a good way just to practice. Remember remember them. Try to listen for them in the coming days, coming weeks, because these are are ones that you'll you'll come across. So, now for the moment of truth. I'm I'm really curious about uh what you guys would do. So, in the I'm going to start a little poll right now and you can I know the election's over, but I would just be curious to get your opinion. Um, I just started the poll. Uh, just wanting to know what you you all think. Who did you want to win the US election?

um Donald Trump or Kla Harris. So now I will tell you, yeah, I'll tell you who I voted for. So I am not a Trump person. I voted for Kla Harris. I was voting in the state of Florida and I think she got crushed in Florida. So I am not a Trump guy. I've never really been uh a Trump guy. So I voted for Kla Harris. But again, it's okay. It's okay for people to disagree. I think we we talked about there was that one article was talking about polarized and I think it there are levels of unhealthiness as far as the conversation is concerned whether somebody likes this person or that person and if there's a political divide it really has to some extent created a social divide and I think that's really uh unfortunate and I've had people actually write comments when I've mentioned that yeah I I just voting for Biden or Harris and people are like, "Look, I can't I can't learn from you anymore." As though they're connecting learning language to their political ideology. And again, I think that's kind of silly. I teach students that are more progressive. I teach students that are conservative and have told me they're supporting Trump and they like Trump. And that is okay. It's okay to disagree. Um, I think the most important thing is that, you know, not that I need to tell you guys, I think you hear it all the time that people just need to be able to have conversation and talk and try to listen to each other and well, why do you feel this way? This is why I I think that or why I'm voting for this person. So, uh, I wanted to kind of gauge where you were at as I, you know, shared, um, who I ended up voting for. I hope that with all of these lessons that you just learned something new. And if you did, you can let me know. Hit that like button. And uh I'm going to keep coming up with lessons on different topics with it when it comes to vocabulary idioms. I think when you take some vocabulary and you're able to put it in a topic, in this case like the election, it gives you something to associate it with. And in this case, because the election just happened, I I hope that maybe as you're listening to the news or reading an article or just having a conversation, maybe you end up coming across some of these idioms and phrases to reinforce that and it's just going to you'll be able to make it a part of your active memory and um you'll be able to use it moving forward. All right. Uh Egon, I didn't know it.

Unsubscribed. I've had people tell me that. I have had people tell me that. Um, but that's just that's just the day. That's just the the time we live. So, I find it fascinating. I know it seems like uh there've been about 53 votes. The all of you here, it's seems a bit of a split between uh Trump and Harris. I feel like the um the interactive English electorate, if you will, if I'm talking about the audience of learners, the electorate seems very split. It's almost like this is uh we have a little bit of a swing state here that uh the interactive community interactive English community is a little bit of a swing state and that's okay. So uh I hope you enjoyed some the lesson and learned something new. Um as always, thank you guys so much uh for watching and I will see you very soon in the future with another lesson. So long.

Super Useful Phrasal Verbs for Everyday English

what's up everyone today I'm coming at you with a phrasal verb lesson so these are all phrasal verbs that are related to travel and transportation this is something that's very common it's a part of our everyday life we go places we take different Transportation so it's good to know the phrasal verbs that are associated with with different types of Transportation so I'm going to teach you the meaning of the phrasal verb as well as give you some examples so that you can see how it's used in context keep in mind that that some of these phrasal verbs may have multiple meanings but today I'm I'm only going to talk to you about their meaning when it comes to travel and transportation the first one that I want to teach you actually I'm going to teach you the first two at the same time and those first two phrasal verbs are get on and get off so when you get on something you're talking about you're you're entering it when you get off then you're talking about leaving it now what I really want you to remember with these phrasal verbs are the types of transportation that we use them with so we use get on and get off when we're talking about a bus a plane train boat motorcycle or bike so those are six forms of transportation that you will use get on get off please get on the bus please get on the bus get on the boat Train's leaving do I get on the train where are you meeting there's women when they get off the bus at the pool party right here George in here [Music] now another set of phrasal verbs that that have the same meaning is Hop on and hop off so again hop on means the same as get on Hop Off means the same as get off the only difference is that I think hop on and hop off they're a little more casual a little more informal but you hop on you enter you hop off you exit and you use them with those same six types of Transportation [Music] hopped on a train follow the degrees no ah get down hop off their Blonde Ambition now just to give you a a real world example if you've traveled in a major city especially in Europe you may see a bus that's called Hop On Hop off it's a tourist bus that that drives around the city and takes people to the main tourist destinations and it's called Hop On Hop off because you buy a ticket you can hop on and hop off at the different landmarks keep an eye out for that the next time you're traveling in a major city the next set of phrasal verbs that I want to teach you and again we're going to do them both at the same time and that's get in and get out so get in

is just to enter get out is to exit to leave so the only difference between get in and get on is the types of transportation that that we use it with so when we're talking about getting in and getting out we're going to use that with cars trucks taxis ambulances helicopters and canoe I don't know how many times you find yourself getting in and getting out of a canoe but just in case now you know you're gonna get in that canoe and then you'll get out of that canoe in the car get in the truck oh boy she's getting in his helicopter early chances if you're getting an ambulance and you try this out of here out get out of my truck get out of my cab we can also use these same types of transportations with other phrasal verbs we just got to replace the verb and that is hop in and hop out it means the same hop in is the same as get in hop out same as get out and we use them with those same types of Transportation it's it's just a little more casual it's a little more informal hop in hop out it happened we'll talk in the car hop in let's go check out your new home you're gonna hop out sir no he's not no no hopping okay we're here hop out so there you have it we just learned eight phrasal verbs right off the bat just keep in mind that when you're talking about trying to figure out the difference between get in and get on it really depends on the type of Transportation the next phrasal verb is get around and to get around is just to move around from one place to another you are traveling from one place to another place you're getting around often I think it's used in the context of a question and you're going somewhere and people may say Hey you know how are you going to get around how are you going to move from one place to another and you might say well I'm I'm just gonna get on a bus or maybe you're gonna say hey I'm gonna hop in a canoe that might work if you're traveling in a place like Venice but when you want to get around you are moving from one place to another you can also use it in the context of even a smaller area for example the home if you have an older grandmother or grandfather and you could say it's difficult for them to get around if they have a tough time walking around the home you could use that in general conversation and be like you know yeah they have a tough time getting around so you can use get around when talking about a larger area or even a smaller area when you need to move from one place to another get around but Mr Ann does have one with an electric motor we can get around by himself are you gonna get around out there we'll rent a car the next phrasal verb possibly one of my favorites is hurry up and if you tell somebody to hurry up then you are just telling them to go faster to move faster we need to hurry up I think uh we use it a lot especially in travel if you are running late you're going to tell somebody hey we need to hurry up we got to catch our flight or if you're in the car and somebody's driving and you're you're late again you might tell them hurry up we need to move fast faster this phrasal verb is a great example that it can be used in a variety of different contexts not just travel or Transportation at work if you need to finish something on time you might tell them to hurry up we need to hurry up because we need to finish the report on time [Music] you better hurry up yeah I'll run quick get in hurry up let's go the next phrasal verb is take off and this is just talking about an aircraft mostly a plane when it leaves the ground and it starts flying it takes off for example if you have a flight instead of somebody asking you you know when does your plane leave maybe they'll ask you hey when does it take off when are you leaving when is it going to take off often I think I'm usually sitting on a plane waiting because it's been delayed and I'm wondering when are we going to take off they need to hurry up let's take off only an hour before the plane takes off that's no surprise since I've been here those planes have been taking off every two hours I want to make sure the helicopter is ready to take off got a private jet taking off across town and we wanted to get you a seat on this rocket before it takes off then we have hold up and this means to cause a delay and often make somebody late because of that DeLay So when talking about travel and transportation I think of traffic and if somebody show goes up late for something they may tell the other person look I got held up in traffic that's why I'm late because I was held up in traffic often I think this verb is used in the past tense because you're already late and you're telling somebody why you're late so you you were held up by something and you can use this phrasal verb when talking about most things that have caused a delay and you were held up maybe by someone or you were held up by something for example maybe you arrive you arrive home late and you could tell your husband or wife you know I was held up at work and if you arrive late to work then you could tell your boss hey I was held up in traffic those are those are some good excuses pranks late must have been held up in traffic oh no he got held up at work and you can go and look for him or you can stick with us as long as you don't hold us up the next phrasal verb actually I'm going to teach you another set of phrasal verbs and that is check in and check out I think many of you are are probably familiar with these two phrasal verbs because it's talking about hotels or a hospital so for example you check in to a hotel that just means that you arrive somewhere that you've you've made arrangements to stay there you check into a hotel you can also check into a hospital if you're sick and you need to go and stay there for some time when you leave then you would check out of the hotel and that means you're leaving after you have paid the bill to check out you can also check out of a hospital once the doctor gives you permission to leave check in check out are you checking in sir I need to check myself in I just checked myself out of a mental hospital she checked out of the hotel the next phrasal verb buckle up and this just means to fasten your seatbelt in a car or in a plane it's a smart safe thing to do I think everybody should buckle up we're gonna need to buckle up before we take off sir all right boys up then we have cut off usually this phrasal verb is separable and you would cut someone off and when you cut someone off it means that that you are blocking their way especially trying to keep them from from going somewhere you cut them off I think it's used a lot when people are driving and somebody cuts you off or you if you're driving the car you'd say oh man that person just cut me off they blocked my way and I can't get around them to cut someone off it's not good to cut people off people get very angry they might get filled with a lot of of road rage now that this is an extra one for you road rage is just an expression used to talk about someone who is very angry when they're driving it's not good to have road rage because it's not good to be angry it's not safe to be angry but if you do get road rage make sure you buckle up hey you cut me off what turn down your radio I'm driving in my car somebody cut you off I think to myself I could just kill that guy but I don't all units cut him off on Elm now then we have speed up and this just means to move or happen faster again I think of driving you're in a car you might need to speed up and the car needs to go faster so if somebody has cut you off then you might be upset and you will speed up and you'll try to pass that person not saying that's what you should do but again just make sure you're buckled up the opposite of speed up is our next phrasal verb and that is just slowed down and that means to happen or move slower speed up slow down again I think they're pretty common because we use these quite often especially when you're driving and you might tell somebody if they are speeding up you might tell them hey hey hey slow down who cares if that person cut you off you don't need to be angry no road rage you don't have to speed up and pass them let just slow down let's take it easy doesn't seem like it doesn't slow down that was a lot of fun I'd like to get off now slow down the reason why I didn't tell you that I was going to teach them as a set is because the verbs are different I think this is when phrasal verbs can be pretty confusing that if somebody learns the phrasal verb speed up they may instinctively want to think that well the opposite is probably speed down but that's not always the case so I wanted to point that out that these verbs are different speed up slow down the next phrasal verb is pick up and again often I think it's separable and you would pick someone up and when you pick someone up it just means that you are going to get someone at a specific location that you've arranged you've made plans to go get them and then you're going to take them somewhere in a vehicle you would pick them up so you could pick someone up and take them to school you could pick someone up and take them to work take them to the library and you are just taking this person to a different location to pick someone up so you'll pick me up tonight at 7 40 five I'm supposed to pick her up next Sunday April 12th 3 42 p.m picking my girlfriend up at the mall now after you pick someone up and you take them to wherever it is that they need to go you're probably going to drop them off and that is our next phrasal verb to drop off and when you drop someone off it means that you are leaving somebody at a particular location usually with you not getting out of the car so you stay in the car and you would drop someone off so you might pick up your friend and drop them off at work you could pick up your husband or wife and drop them off at home so remember you would pick someone up and then you would drop someone off she just dropped me off would you please take us to the next corner and drop us off yeah a spaceship drop off don't focus on the wrong part of the story brother then we have connect through so this phrasal verb is all about flying and what it's talking about is that you are stopping at a location kind of an intermediate location as you continue traveling to your final destination so when you're flying it's not often that we fly directly from one place to the other we are going to connect through another city and you'll have to change planes and you will go on to your final destination so this would come up when you're having a conversation about flying and somebody's asking you about your flight and you're telling them how long it is and that you have to connect through one or two or three different places before you reach your final destination connect through I never want to connect through many different places I always want to take off from wherever it is that I'm leaving and then land in my final destination and then I can catch the 4 30 a.m back to Edinboro connect through Houston head on up to Cincinnati and then rent a car drive around nine and I'll be home two hours earlier than if I flew home as planned the next phrasal verb is see off again this is often separable and you would see someone off you're talking about a person in that case to see someone off and when you see someone off it means that you are going with with another person or maybe a group of people to an airport or to a bus station to say goodbye I am going to see my friend off I'm going to take them to the airport and say goodbye to them there or maybe a bus station if you are going to get on or hop on a bus to see someone off it was so nice of you to come to the airport to see us all oh shoot and I really wanted to see will off to the boss come to see me off graduate kind of view your master doesn't seem to like Lannisters I hope you have a wonderful day remember next time you get in a car be sure to buckle up and if somebody cuts you off don't don't worry about it don't speed up take your time just slow down there's no reason to hurry up but I hope you can now go out and try to practice using some of these phrasal verbs because that is the best way to remember their meaning I hope you guys have a wonderful day and I will see you

Super Useful Phrases for Advanced English Speakers

I just want to give you a heads up because this is not your average run-of-the-mill lesson I'm going to teach you some Advanced phrases for highly proficient speakers of English and these phrases are even a little more challenging than the C2 level they are a bit informal but I think they are useful when it comes to everyday conversation so if you are at your wits end when it comes to building vocabulary look no further now I'm not going to drag my feet any longer so let's go ahead and begin with the phrase that I just mentioned to drag your feet this means to do something slowly or not start it because you just don't want to do it so let's say there's a deadline and you're working slowly your boss might say why are you dragging your feet we need to hurry or every year yeah we have to pay taxes I'm always dragging my feet because I just don't want to start the process I procrastinate I put it off I drag my feet even Morpheus knows this phrase now it may often be used as a jiren if someone's giving you a command like quit dragging your feet or stop dragging your feet or you may often use it in the continuous tense to talk about what's happening right now he is dragging his feet or she is dragging her feet this is a phrase that I think you may certainly come across when watching a movie or TV show see for yourself moving kid quit dragging your feet mother we caned Gordon stop dragging your feet don't act like he's the only reason you've been dragging your feet to stay here he accidentally got it right didn't he you've been dragging your feet on the next OS so you can figure out what Apple's going to need now I would like you to stop dragging your feet and subscribe to the channel turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals let's continue with our next phrase which is to go to bat for someone it means to support someone when the person needs help this phrase originated from baseball the idea of Simply substituting one batter for another to help out the team it was slang but now it's used more generally and to show you that here are some news headlines Pharma funded Republicans go to bat for drug industry as Medicare moves to negotiate prices to help stop the killing of pets we must go to bat for Chicago's abandoned animals and Eagles as veterans go to bat for embattled head coach Nick serani serani serani okay any anyway I want to quickly talk about how to pronounce this phrase and I want to focus on the word to which has two different pronunciations when stressed it sounds like to when unstressed it may sound like it has that schah sound t it's a much softer sound but that's what I would use when I say the phrase to go to bat for someone the other thing I want to point out is the flap T which is specific to the American accent and I am from the United States but it occurs when the t comes between two vow sounds so it's going to sound like to go to bat for someone can you hear that flap te go to go to to go to bat for someone just listen for it they wouldn't honor my coupon for two free streaks they wouldn't well I'll go to bed for you honey obviously I said by no means are you kidding me I always go to Bath for you then we have the phrase run-of-the-mill this means ordinary or not special or exciting in any way and often you may use this adjective phrase as an attributive adjective it's going to come before the noun perhaps you're talking about a run-ofthe-mill Cofe coffee shop or somebody gives a run-ofthe-mill presentation or maybe we're talking about a run-ofthe-mill lesson but at the beginning I told you that this is not your average run-ofthe-mill lesson and that's what I want to point out is that you may use this adjective phrase with the negative to say that something is not ordinary it is special and exciting and yes I do believe this is not your average run-of-the-mill lesson when pronouncing this phrase I want to point out that linking may occur we can link the final consonant sound in run with the beginning vowel sound in of and it's almost like we're moving that consonant sound over so it sounds like run of run of the- Mill it's totally acceptable to be a everyday run-of-the-mill average worker is that what you think Gordon does run-of-the-mill interviews does the run-of-the-mill college experience include stripping you of your dignity next is the phrase to air on the side of caution this means to be especially careful rather than taking a risk or making a mistake so instead of saying we should be careful or we don't want to make a mistake you could say we should air on the side of caution and I would recommend that you go ahead and hit the like button I don't want you to forget so let's air on the side of caution and go ahead and do that for pronunciation the only thing I want to point out is that first word that e RR is pronounced as air or ER you may hear either one in the US I feel like most people are going to say air but it can be a little tricky because the spelling and the pronunciation don't really match to air on the side of caution once again just listen for it if you're worried there's extra milk in the freezer okay yes I will air on the side of caution and defrost a fresh badge I didn't care for the way that he handled it so I'm going to have to air on the side of caution and say pass why it's the first rule in pain management always air on the side of caution then we have the phrase pull strings I like this one it means to secretly use the influence you have over someone in order to help someone or get something that you want now again I should say it doesn't always have to be like you have a lot of influence over this person it could just mean like maybe your friends let's let's say that you want to go see a movie and it's sold out and I tell you hey look I I know someone who works at the theater maybe I can pull some strings and get us some tickets and I have not really influence but I have a connection I have a contact there and I can pull some strings one thing I want to point out with this phrase is that you're often going to use a determiner before the word strings to pull some strings or to pull a few strings if you don't believe me listen for yourself fck did you get me out of that and pull some strings have you getting this a few calls pulled some strings so what do you think pull a few strings you know hook me up with some tickets I decided to pull a few strings call in a few favors and I've decided to make you official Security Supervisor of the branch next is a phrasal verb chime in this means to add one's comment or opinion to a conversation or discussion that one has been listening to and sometimes this is done by interrupting I know when my wife is talking to someone else and I want to share my opinion I may chime in and yeah it can be a little rude and annoying if someone chimes in or other times someone may be asking for someone to share an opinion and they may say does anyone want to chime in to give you some more examples as to how this phrasal verb is used in context I have some more news headlines for you whoopy Goldberg chimes in on Barbie Oscar snub drama a Tik tocker went viral with a tearful reaction to a Super Bowl party snub and celebs chimed in Snowflake CEO says he values Merit over diversity VC's chimed in when pronouncing this phrase I just want to point out that more linking may occur and we can link the final consonant sound in chime with the vowel sound in in chime in to chime in Chris I'm not sure you have the green light to just chime in whenever anyone please chime in well take it easy and this is not her fault oh look who decided to chime in anyone else want to chime in then we have the phrase to cut someone some slack this means to treat someone in a less harsh or critical way so some examples I will cut you some slack if you don't hit the like button I know I told you to air on the side of caution and go ahead and do that but if you don't I will cut you some slack I will cut you some slack if you don't join my email Community but I will not cut you any slack if you don't write to me in the comments so I I I want to talk to you quickly about the difference between I will cut you some slack versus I will not cut you any slack remember that we're going to use some with affirmative statements and any with negative statements one more thing I want to point out is that you may hear people use this with the verb give to give someone some slack however as we can see using enr Vier it's overwhelmingly more common for people to use the verb cut to cut someone some slack young lady this may be the high point of B's life cut him some slack let's say you get a job which you probably won't they're not going to cut you any slack you're meant for a job with lots and lots of slack then we have the phrase to oneup someone I like this phrase even though it's not really a good thing to do it means to get an advantage over someone by saying or doing something better or more extreme so let me give you some examples and I want you to think about who is trying to one up the other next week I'm going for a hike next week I'm climbing Mount Everest last month I met the star of the high school basketball team yeah that's nice I met Michael Jordan I think I might buy a new car maybe a Honda I've been thinking about buying a new car as well but probably a Ferrari I think it's quite clear that person B is trying to oneup person A it's time I come up with a to score with the ladies there's Jimmy trying to one up me I go to church too and I have raffled and bingoed and B sailed my way as close to the good Lord is you so do not try to one up me because I will one up yours the next phrase is perfect if you ever feel like you are so worried confused or annoyed you just don't know what to do you can say I'm at my Wit's End often people may use this phrase at home or at work parents might say this when they're frustrated with their kids kids I'm at my wits end or maybe at work you just have too much going on you can't handle it and you tell your colleague I'm at my wits end and I just don't know what to do most of the time you will use this phrase to talk about yourself your own frustration therefore you're going to use the possessive adjective my I'm at my wits end but you can use other possessive adjectives as well his wits end her wits end your wits end and keep in mind when pronouncing this phrase more linking may occur we can link the final consonant sound in wits with the beginning vowel sound in N witsend I'm at my witsend I'm sorry I'm at my wits end Sally I think she may need private school if there's anybody who could understand what I'm going through it's you and to tell you the truth I'm I'm at my Wit's End I am I am really sorry about this I'm just at my wits end with these two then we have to second guess this means to criticize or question a decision after it has been made and typically you say what's wrong with it so let's say that you make a decision and then I am telling you like well why did you make this decision what were you thinking did you consider this in that case I am second guessing your decision so it really has a negative connotation keep in mind this phrase may also be used with a reflexive pronoun when we're just not confident with the decision that we've made if I said well why did I do this that was a dumb mistake what was I thinking I am second guessing myself I think everyone can relate to this and I'm sure at some point in your life you have second guessed yourself for pronunciation I just want you to know that the final D in second may get muted because of Aion this is when sounds or syllables get removed and this may occur with the t or d when they come between two consonants think about the phrases old car or next day you don't really hear the t or d nor do you hear it when I say second guess to second guess someone don't second guess yourself you made the right call cautious not cautious enough I'm already second guessing myself and that's the last thing a captain could afford hey I figured out on my first job when a little creative thinking on my part almost got me not paid never second guess a client heads up this is a phrase that I use all the time and it's a warning that something is going to happen usually so you can prepare for it and I might use this you know I'm out walking with my wife on the street and I see a bike coming down the sidewalk and I say heads up and she tells me well why don't you just say there's a bike coming down the sidewalk and I tell her that's too long you got to be concise fast efficient heads up now I want you to know that this phrase is often used with the verb give to give someone one a heads up it's a common collocation so I will give you a heads up when the next vocabulary video comes out I will also give you a heads up when I start my next speaking course and I will give you a heads up when this lesson is getting ready to come to an end when pronouncing this phrase you guessed it more linking may occur we can link the final consonant sound in heads with the beginning vowel sound in up heads up to give some one a heads up Mak Not freak out it's not my responsibility to care a heads up heads up hey wonderful but before you fully commit I should probably give you the heads up my plan is very elaborate and you might get a little messy I'm in it's the highest and then there's to foot the bill this means to pay the bill for something especially something expensive now I want to clarify how you would use this phrase because if um you go out to an expensive restaurant with a group of people you're not really going to say well who's going to foot the bill but you may use it when talking about things that are a lot more expensive think about education or travel I could say my parents foot the bill for my college education go Buffs or if you are going to travel for work I might ask you is the company going to foot the bill for your trip it's expensive there are multiple things you may pay for flight hotels is the company going to foot the bill the other thing I want to point out with this phrase and you may have noticed it with the examples is that you're really going to use this when talking about paying the bill for someone else so my parents foot the bill for my education or the company foot the bill for your business trip so so keep that in mind when using this phrase here are some other examples I'm sorry Alex so much for attorney client privilege not when I'm footing the bill one call to the town they'll declare that thing a hazard and they'll rip it down themselves and they'll foot you with the bill I'm renting a yacht and I'm calling all our friends and we're taking a yacht to Catalina and you're coming and I'm putting the whole freaking bill you know what now for a little review so I'm giving you a heads up that the lesson will end shortly and I hope that you will cut me some slack because I'm sure that you want to continue learning more useful phrases but we've we've talked about quite a few already I don't want to overwhelm you therefore I decided to air on the side of caution because I believe that's what good teachers do and I certainly don't want to think that I'm your average run-of-the-mill teacher but you can let me know down in the comments feel free to chime in with your thoughts but if you would like to continue learning watch another one of my video lessons make that decision don't second guess yourself continue watching and learning so I'm going to stop dragging my feet and wrap things up if you enjoyed the lesson and learned something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Super Useful SPEAKING Phrases to Build Your Vocabulary

I want to help you upgrade, enhance, and develop your speaking fluency. And what better way to do that than with phrases that have to do with speaking. So, if you are someone who would like to improve your overall speaking skills, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It is all about helping you reach your fluency goals. And generally speaking, this is the best way to do that. just subscribe, watch these lessons, and generally speaking, you will improve your skills. And let's just go ahead and get into the first phrase, which is generally speaking. This is very common, extremely useful because you're going to use this phrase to talk about things that are usually true or true in most cases without getting into specific details. So this is an excellent qualifier that you can use whenever you want to avoid saying that something is absolute. It is 100%. So I could say generally speaking the weather in California is quite pleasant. Now this is a state that is known for its weather. Not too hot, not too cold. And yes, generally speaking, many people, myself included, find that the weather is quite pleasant. Here are some more examples. I mean, generally speaking, people don't like you. Shut up. Shut up. You're an idiot. You're an idiot. But generally speaking, in the afterlife, there's a good place and there's a bad place. I'm just saying generally speaking, when you order breakfast and they give you the wrong order, send it back and get the right order. Then there's speak up for. This is a phrase that you can use in order to support or defend someone or something, especially when they're being criticized or they're just unable to defend themselves. So, this is a phrase that implies courage because you are taking a stand for someone with less power. Now, keep in mind, you may hear people use this with the reflexive pronoun yourself. You need to speak up for yourself. In this context, it means you need to communicate your needs and really express your thoughts and opinions and yeah, just speak up for yourself. To give you another example, I could say you need to speak up for your colleagues if you feel like they're being treated unfairly. So often you would speak up for someone else, but you could also speak up for yourself.

If you can't speak up for us, at least speak up for yourself. And they hate that I do that and they want me to speak up for myself. They'd kill you right now. Is the peacekeeper on me for speaking up for you.

Now, generally speaking, if you would like to greatly improve your speaking skills, then you need to practice. You need to have more conversation. And that is why I would like to tell you about my speaking course. It's all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, and speak naturally. Each week there is a different speaking topic. You will learn vocabulary related to that topic. We do engaging speaking activities and I'll try to teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases. So, click on the link down below in the description if you would like to sign up or learn more about the course. And yeah, I just hope to speak to you soon. Let's continue with our next phrase, which is to be on speaking terms. This means that you are friendly enough to talk to someone usually after a period of arguing or disagreeing. So, because of the meaning, and this is what I want you to know, you're pretty much always going to use this with the negative and say that two people are not on speaking terms, that they are not in a friendly situation, that they're willing to communicate. So, in that case, you're going to use it to describe this icy relationship between two people. I could say, "My neighbors haven't been on speaking terms since the dispute over the fence last year." So, people are not willing to talk and communicate with each other because of some argument or disagreement. And in that case, you could say that these people, they are not on speaking terms.

Last night in the crypt, you had another vision, didn't you? I didn't realize we were back on speaking terms. We're not discussing anything. You and I are not on speaking terms. You have been invading my privacy for years.

I didn't invite him. He and Jean View were not on speaking terms. I was so annoyed. Next is the phrase shoot the breeze.

This means to have a casual informal conversation with someone or a group of people about unimportant things. Now, I could also use the phrase shoot the [____] I think this is more commonly used in spoken English, but shoot the breeze is safer for all audiences. So to give you an example, I could say we spent all afternoon sitting on the porch just shooting the breeze and we were talking casually about nothing. Or to use the other one, uh he likes to go down to the pub and shoot the [___] with his friends. So we can look at engram viewer and you can see that both of them the frequency of their usage is about the same. But personally I think it's probably more common especially in spoken English just to say shoot the [___] simply because you may end up using this phrase among friends the people that you're closer to. So in that case you may use that more informal phrase instead of shoot the breeze. But either one works. Welcome home buddy. Man, I missed sitting around just shooting the breeze.

What are you doing here? Just been upstairs with your boss, you know, shooting the breeze. I'm not your boss. We're just a couple of guys. A couple of guys shooting the [___] The next phrase is to speak highly of and this just means to say good things about someone or something and you're just offering a lot of praise. Now, typically this phrase is used to comment on someone's professional reputation or character. So, this is an excellent phrase in a work context. Everyone speaks highly of her leadership skills.

Now, I want to take a moment and thank you because I read the comments and I know that you enjoy the lessons and that you speak highly of them, except for this comment and this one right here, as well as this one. No, I'm I'm just trying to have a little fun with these negative comments. I don't know. Maybe I sound like a cat. I don't know. But I generally speaking, I know that many of you enjoy the lessons and you speak highly of them and I really appreciate that. You're the most popular girl in your school and the fact that you hang with G and I well speaks very highly of you.

Oh, yes, of course I do. Nice to see you again. Speak so highly of you.

So nice to hear. Angelo here spoke very highly of you and how you handled yourself with him in Pennsylvania.

Then there's speak too soon. I like this phrase. It means to say something that is quickly proven wrong or to celebrate success before it is actually guaranteed. So this phrase is really used as a type of self-correction. When something goes wrong immediately after you say, "Well, hey, everything's okay. I said the traffic wouldn't be bad today, but I definitely spoke too soon because it's actually pretty horrible. All right, here is a funny meme. You guys are the greatest. Spoke too soon. Any Gladiator fan, you you get this joke. You can appreciate it. I don't want to speak too soon, but we may have beaten this. So, is your dad here yet? No, I never showed up. What? Oh, damn. It's about too soon. It's going to be okay. Don't worry, kid. Your old man's crafty.

Spoke too soon. Then we have speak out against. This means to publicly express an opinion, especially a critical one, in order to protest something. Now, keep in mind there is a very distinct difference between speak up for and speak out against. Speak up for is more about showing support, whereas speak out against is more resistance and opposition. And there are some common collocations with this phrase. You could speak out against corruption or speak out against injustice, speak out against racism or speak out against abuse. There are many things that you can speak out against. It takes a lot of courage to speak out against corruption within a large organization. Yes, that's true. I think we should all speak out against corruption, especially government corruption, which many countries are not immune to. I have my lands and titles stripped from me. I dare to speak out against Prince John. Every man, woman, and child is going to speak out against you. If you are wise, you will leave this place.

You know, I was one of the first to speak out against horse play.

Mhm. Then there's the phrase talk tough. This means to use strong, aggressive, confident language to show that you are in control and you will not back down.

And I'm trying to explain this in a tone in which I'm I'm talking tough. Now, one thing I absolutely want to convey when it comes to this phrase is that a lot of times it implies this subtle hint that the other person, the person who's talking tough is all talk. And all talk is another useful phrase that means that really somebody is just saying words. There is not going to be any action. there's not going to be any followth through and it's kind of a way of projecting strength even though you you're not really going to follow through with anything that you're saying. I could say the CEO talked tough during the negotiations but eventually agreed to a compromise. So, someone can project strength when they talk tough, but yeah, it's not they're not going to follow through with it. And there won't be any action if somebody is just talking tough. It's easy to lash out when your blood is up. Easier still to talk tough when no one's life hangs in the balance. Right. It's probably easier to talk tough when you had your magic to back it up. Y'all [___] don't scare me. You can talk tough all you want, but this ain't no record. Then there's the phrase speak out of turn. This means to say something at an inappropriate time or without having the authority to do so. Now there are two situations in which you would often use this phrase. The first is when you end up sharing information that was not really yours to share and in that case you are speaking out of turn or you are interrupting this formal hierarchy that you should let others with who have more authority they should be the one speaking but you interrupt you share your opinion and somebody might view that as speaking out of term. I could say, "I hope I'm not speaking out of term, but I think the current plan has a few flaws." And maybe I'm saying this to a group of people who are my bosses or executives, and I I might say, "Look, I hope I'm not speaking out of turn." Now, in that example, it does sound more neutral, but I want you to keep in mind that this phrase, it really does have more of a negative connotation if you or someone else is speaking out of turn.

Now, when Dwight tells you that he will keep prices steady for a year, I think he is speaking out of turn.

Forgive me for speaking out of turn, sir, but you sent me to that school to change me. But if Detective Blake chooses to speak out of turn, the result would be unpleasant. Then there's the phrase to speak ill of someone. This just means to say bad or unkind things about someone. To to give you an association, think about this famous old proverb, speak no ill of the dead. If someone passes, then it's not really necessary to then say bad things about this person. To give you an example, I could say, "Even though they broke up, she refuses to speak ill of him, and they're no longer dating, but she's not going to say bad or unkind things uh about her ex." One thing I want you to know is that this phrase may be considered a little more formal because you could also say speak badly of someone or speak poorly of someone.

All of them work. They have the same meaning. You could use any.

Tell me about Dr. Stapleton.

Never speak ill of a colleague.

I don't like to speak ill of anyone, but he is not a good man. I'm sorry, but he's not really. What did you hear exactly? Just I shouldn't speak ill of the dead. talk is cheap. This means that it's actually much easier to say you will do something than actually do it. It's a little similar to the phrase I mentioned before and that saying someone is all talk and there's not going to be much action. However, talk is cheap is more it's more of a challenge that you are directly telling someone, okay, let's see you stop talking and start acting. Another expression that you could use which is interchangeable would be actions speak louder than words. They keep saying they'll fix the road, but talk is cheap when no construction is happening. This is a great example that I think we can all relate to. Somebody says that they're going to fix something. It doesn't happen and then you are thinking, "Ah, talk is cheap. Stop saying it. Let's see you start acting.

Talk is cheap. We believe you. Talk is cheap. Perhaps a test of thy faith. Walk through the wall. I will remove it for you. Talk is cheap, Ryan. If you're going toe-to-toe with this Frenchie, you need to step your game up. Oh, he end up looking was weak. That ain't no bail. I'm just saying talk is cheap. Then there's to be spoken for. This means to be already claimed, reserved, or in a committed relationship. Now, in a romantic context, it means I have a boyfriend. I have a girlfriend. But in a more general context, it means this item is already taken. Here's an example. I'm sorry, but that last piece of cake is already spoken for because I want it. It is spoken for. Here is a funny comic that I wanted to share with you. Sorry, but I'm already spoken for. I I think you get the joke, but in case you're unfamiliar with what you would call this person, it is a ventriloquist.

Just wanted to let you know. Here are some more examples with our phrase.

In your pants, Tommy Bahama. She's spoken for. I made friends with the richest lady in baby camp. Very cute. Should send you up there. I'd imagine she's spoken for.

Hey, at least give me one of those margaritas. Sorry, they're so spoken for.

I hope I'm not speaking out of turn, but I would love it if you go ahead, watch another video lesson, keep building your vocabulary. Generally speaking, it is the best way to reach your fluency goals. Now, I know talk is cheap. I want

Super Useful Weather Phrasal Verbs

everyone today i want to talk to you about the weather and specifically i want to talk to you about some advanced phrasal verbs that you can use to well not just have conversation and talk about the weather but really make specific observations about what is happening right now or what will happen in the future and this is useful because well we're people are outside all the time and the weather changes so it can be useful to point these things out and talk about what's going to happen with the weather especially when you're making plans with other people so we're not going to get into phrasal verbs that i think are a little easier like wow it's really heating up which is it's getting hotter or well it's starting to cool down which means it's getting colder i think many of you may be familiar with those and you could probably put them into context these phrasal verbs however will help you provide a little more information a little more nuance a little more flavor to the conversation whenever you want to make an observation about the weather so the first phrasal verb i have for you is to let up and a common sentence that you might hear somebody would make the observation well i think it's starting to let up it means that is starting to become less severe than it previously was and often you would use this to talk about either the rain or the snow so for example if you are somewhere and it just starts raining really hard and you run and take shelter and you just have to wait so you might wait for a little while and then over time it's going to become less severe and you could say well i think it's starting to let up are you ready let's let's go ahead and leave let's go back out there in the rain because it's starting to let up and as you can probably guess once a rainstorm or a snowstorm begins to let up after a while it most of the time it's just going to stop so it's really severe then it starts to let up and then it stops to let up to become less severe no i know i know but looks like my flight's cancelled and no one's flying until this weather lights up then we have rained out and this just means that some kind of event or activity that it cannot take place because of the rain and i i think of sports quite often there is some kind of match that takes place outside and and you can't play there's just too much rain and you say well the game got rained out we can't do this because of the rain it got rained out yeah but we drove we could drive back we could watch the parade it's rained out since soon another great weather phrasal verb is to blow over and this just means to come to a quick end and we often use it when talking about a storm again it could be rain it could be snow and you say that it's going to blow over and you can kind of think about it based on what those individual words mean that you have some kind of storm and it is blowing over and then it's done it's already passed by it has blown over and it's come to an end there's no more and i think we use it i think i use this quite often when you when you're saying something that you think is going to happen and you think well you know there are some dark clouds but i i think the storm's going to blow over i don't think it's going to last it will come to an end shortly it's going to blow over then we have to clear up and this just means that the weather becomes more pleasant or more agreeable and you could say well it's it's going to clear up so we're talking about a situation in which it is raining or it is snowing and you say that well in the future it's going to clear up it's going to become more pleasant and it's going to stop again i think we can often use it when expressing your hopes or desires and you say you know i hope that it clears up soon or you could say well you know it's raining pretty hard right now but i think it's going to clear up by this afternoon to clear up to become more pleasant or more agreeable grace guys are gonna clear up pretty soon the sky is gonna clear up charlie the crazy weather cleared up too for whatever reason then we have breakthrough and this just means that it is starting to appear and in this case you're you're mostly talking about the sun that the sun is starting to break through the clouds that is a common way in which this phrasal verb might be used so let me let me give you an example i could say that well you know the the storm has blown over the sun is starting to break through which means well very soon the weather's going to clear up and it's going to be a nice and pleasant day and as you can see you can use these phrasal verbs multiple times to talk about a variety of situations once you break through the clouds to the clear blue beyond the the space next is roll in and if something rolls in it just appears in a large amount and when i think of this phrasal verb i think of you're talking about perhaps some dark clouds often i think you might be talking about the fog so the fog starts to roll in which means it's appearing in large amounts and then you could say well i really hope this clears up soon i have places to go people to see i hope it clears up soon and that this just blows right over and it goes away and i'm just gonna keep using these phrasal verbs throughout all of these examples just to help you remember and better understand what they mean years ago malaria was a sunny land of farmers until the mysterious storm clouds rolled in and never left then we have pick up and if we're talking about a storm specifically rain or snow if you say it's starting to pick up it means it's starting to get stronger so you would use this phrasal verb when making an observation about maybe the rain the snow or even the wind and you could say wow that wind is really starting to pick up and it is getting stronger or that rain it's really starting to pick up outside and if it continues to pick up well then the match might get rained out and we won't be able to play so if you want to talk about weather that is getting less strong and is the opposite of pick up then you would use the phrasal verb die down to die down is to refer to rain snow wind often those three things and you want to say that it is getting less strong it's getting weaker it's starting to die down and depending on what you're talking about you may use these together quite often so perhaps you're doing an activity in which well the wind is good maybe you're flying a kite and you say wow i really hope the wind picks up so the kite is very easy to fly or maybe you're sailing a boat and it's becoming a little more difficult and say oh no the wind is starting to die down we need it to pick up and get stronger so that the sailboat can go ah come on dad the wind's dying down we're almost to the engine winds died down they'll be here soon then we have the phrasal verb hold off and what this means is that you're referring to the weather and saying that it's not going to start yet but it probably will in the future and i often think of using this phrasal verb when talking about your hopes your wishes your desires and you want to say that the rain is going to hold off or that the snow is going to hold off mostly because you have something you need to do something you need to finish and then it will start in the future but right now you're hoping that it's gonna hold off so for example you could say well i i really hope the rain holds off for a little bit and that we can finish the match because if it starts to rain and then it starts to pick up well we're gonna have to cancel the match it's gonna get rained out so hopefully that weather that storm will hold off next is a winter phrasal verb and that is bundle up so if you tell somebody to bundle up or you say that you have to bundle up it just means that you need to wear warmer clothes during cold weather so if it's really cold outside i might say well you know i really need to bundle up or maybe i'm talking to you and i say wow it that that cold weather it just rolled right in it's starting to snow i don't think it's gonna let up anytime soon so you know my advice i think you should bundle up when you go out there so that you can stay warm bundle up looks like another cold one today in the midwest that's the bundle up everyone bundle up it's awfully cold outside let's stick with winter and snow for right now and the next phrasal verb is snowed in and if you say that someone is snowed in or maybe you were snowed in it means that you are unable to leave you are unable to go anywhere because there's just too much snow so if there is a huge snowstorm and it snows a lot and you are unable to leave you can't go anywhere you would tell somebody you know well i can't leave we're snowed in we have to stay where we are we have to wait until the weather clears up because right now we're snowed in there was this huge snowstorm and i got snowed in we're snowed in we're dropped in the school then we have beat down and this just means to shine intensely so because of that you know that it's just describing the sun we use this to describe the sun and you could say that you know the sun is just really beating down so not only is it hot but it it really has this level of intensity which often it just makes people uncomfortable if you say wow that sun it's really beating down right now it's too hot it's too uncomfortable to be outside we need to go inside where there's air conditioner because the sun is just beating down oh let the sun beat down upon my face the sun beating down on tropical waters powers the weather systems of the globe so there you have it i hope that the next time you are talking to somebody about the weather but more specifically that you are trying to make an observation about what's happening especially if it's snowing or raining that you can try to use some of these phrasal verbs to talk about what you see or what you think will happen so i hope that wherever you are in the world the sun is starting to break through and you can just go out and enjoy the day and that any type of bad weather will just hold off right now because i don't want your plans to get rained out i really don't want you to get snowed in and i what i really want is for you guys to understand and remember these advanced phrasal verbs when you want to talk about the weather which is why i just keep repeating them and trying to use them over and over again so in all seriousness i hope that you have a wonderful day i hope you are having beautiful weather go out and enjoy it and i will see you next time

Surprising Things about Americans & Living in the USA

welcome everyone to our wonderful Saturday lesson I hope you're having a great day and I hope that your week was also amazing today we have a different kind of lesson and it is a very cultural kind of lesson so if you are just joining I would like to welcome you to interactive English Saturday lesson please tell us where you are from and what is your name and introduce yourself a little bit either if you're with us now live or if you are joining us later please write it in the comments welcome Vivian welcome for COD welcome Estella Anita Junior Patricia yeah long time no see I know so it's glad it's glad to see you here and I hope you're having a great day so I want to explain a little bit about the lesson today it is a cultural lesson like I said and I think it's very important then when we talk about language that we also talk about culture because it's not it's not just words the formal language there's so much more that comes with it so that being said I am talking to you today about things that surprised me about the US so if you're just joining please no you're not late you're not least we just began we are writing about we're talking about the things that surprised me about the u.s. so some of you may know that I moved to the US when I was 15 this was in 2002 I believe it was in 2002 so everything i am telling you today has to do with my personal experience and what was surprising to me I have to mention this because maybe I noticed things that other people haven't or maybe these things are more important to me than to other people so if there's anything else that if you've travel to the US and you've noticed that was surprising to you please write it down and I will remind this to you throughout the lesson but again this is my experience the picture that I'm showing you right now this was taken in April of 2016 it was the day when I got my citizenship yay so that was a really fun day uh-huh that is me with an American flag and a flower that I got from my colleagues at work so again welcome welcome if you're just joining in the comments write down your name where you're writing from and if you're watching this later please do that as well yeah I was a teenager yes when I move to today us a very young teenager I was just starting high school so so let me tell you some of the things my favorite one is this one by far so before I moved oh gosh if you've seen American movies especially ones from like the 90s or the 80s you always see blonde people wearing jeans or something like that and I for some reason thought that everyone in the US was going to be blond and white I mean I knew about African Americans but I didn't I I didn't I didn't know that there would be like other kinds of ethnicities I had no idea and I was in for a huge surprise and this is my favorite part about the US and it is what I miss the most now because where I lived in California um there was a huge diversity they were Korean there are Japanese there were Vietnamese there were people from Mexico there are people from India they're people from you name the country there were a lot of places they were there and it was amazing and let me tell you why that was amazing first of all because everyone has a great story so they have stories from back home they have stories about immigration they have stories about culture different customs traditions and it was really great for me because I was used to a lot of European traditions but not so much about other places and this maybe should have gone before because I love food if you know me you know I love food so there is a lot of diversity that comes with that in food so you get to try if you're in the u.s. especially where I was in California you get to try a lot of amazing like Mexican food and a lot of amazing Korean food and a lot of amazing a Vietnamese food so you get to try all of these different foods and I loved it I loved it so that was surprising because I did not expect it but it was wonderful so so I'm off to the US just to answer a quick question I moved to the US because my parents decided to go there it I already spoke English I learned it in school I was I was already practicing and speaking before before I moved so it's been it's been going on for many years was is in the comments he's somewhere out there okay so oh I forgot to mention one thing the other thing that's wonderful is that with this diversity is that people celebrate different holidays so even if maybe you have no experience in different cultures and their holidays maybe especially in high school they'll have organized events or in university or you'll meet friends and you'll get to participate in other people's holidays so like I said this was wonderful for me I learned so much I met a few people and it was just something really nice because I think the u.s. is a unique place in that and I missed that because now in Europe where I am at least we I just don't have that even though we have other countries here it's it's not to the same extent okay so like they come they cover partially so it takes a little bit of getting used to and I think it's a little strange so you can see people's feet which can be a little weird it was very surprising I got used to it and it was it was it was a little funny so okay so now I have a question for you guys that I'd like to ask you so please write it down in the comments do you have any international friends so if you have any international friends friends from other countries write down where they're from and yeah just where they're from and if you have any because I'm going to tell you the story about my experience with being in the US and making friends so please write that down in the comments do you have any international friends and if yes where are they from and I'm going to just yes okay so this was my experience with making friends in the u.s. even when I first moved there and it took a while after that I don't I didn't think it was easy in fact I thought it was really difficult you have I think Americans are friendly people they're they're friendly they're always they like to smile they like to greet but I think that they're not always like I put here they're not always inclusive this was my experience at least maybe I was in the wrong place but it felt like like I mentioned before you have these different ethnic groups you have like I said Koreans and Indians in Vietnamese but it seemed to me like they many times these ethnic groups or people like to stick to their groups and it's hard if you're not part of this group sometimes to join a group so that was difficult for me like I didn't want to hang out with other Romanians I wanted to meet other people and that was a little bit difficult in the beginning so it can be hard and so that's been my experience it's not always easy but yeah I want to see what you guys have answered yeah you have friends from India very good friends from Trinidad Tobago wonderful and everywhere except Antarctica well that's wonderful Turkish friends yes so I you know I think the world is changing a little bit and we're becoming more international more globalized so it's really wonderful to hear that you guys are making friends from from different places honestly I think we have so much to learn I think we all learn from each other so for me this is really important to have international friends okay now I have another question and it's about food to do so inadvertently I think if you think of America or United States I think about fast food and I'm sure a lot of other people did too so I wanted to ask you before we talk about my experience with international food I'm sorry with fast food is what kind of fast food do you have in your country because I know that it's not going to be Burgers and Fries okay so what what into what fast what do you have in your country what do people eat when they want something fast and on the go maybe they had a little bit to drink um what do people eat what is fast food in your country please write that down and I'll tell you my experience with fast food so before I moved before I moved to the US I thought that I didn't realize how important fast food was I thought it was one of those things that you just have from time to time and you have it like a treat or something that was extremely surprising for me because people really eat it and they eat it some people eat a daily other it's just something that is part of the culture that I think is really really ingrained so that was that was that that was really surprising for me the other thing again I was raised on I was lucky enough to be raised on organic food and my mom's an amazing cook and she was cooking all of these amazing foods from scratch everything was made from nothing well in the US that's not the case and I've seen that many many people use things like a cake mix which is pre-mixed ingredients and you buy it in a box which I'm still very surprised by or many frozen foods or canned foods or processed foods that was a little bit shocking like for example for cookies they have this this roll and then you just open it and then you cut the cookies it's like in a log of cookies you cut them and then you just put them on a sheet and then bake them like you don't have to you can if you want to which I do but you can just put them in there and they're ready so that was in 2002 and even later that's those very surprising to me so let me see what you guys answered tapioca tacos quesadillas tamales oh my god you guys are making me hungry falafels oh gosh pestle I hope I don't I don't mispronounce that okay very good question what does it mean from scratch it means from the beginning so some some foods especially nowadays if you go to like in a frozen aisle you can find things like a frozen pizza dough and you just you can just buy it well from scratch means you make it you add the flour you add the the oil the salt you mix it together and so on so and that's what it means from scratch when you start from the beginning so that is what I want to talk so fast food now I put a picture here of my favorite fast food place so it's it's not McDonald's I in fact I hate McDonald's i I cannot stand it but if you because I moved to California this is a franchise that is started in California Southern California and then it kind of spread up to I think it's in Oregon Nevada I'm not sure about Texas maybe not but it's kind of in the West the Southwest if you ever go try it it's burgers in an hour burger and I think it's really good it's actually really cheap too and I think it's higher quality now I will I will tell you guys I don't I don't really like fast food I'm not a fast food person like I said I was raised on organic ingredients I love healthier food so I'm not a huge fan of fast food but I do love this place I like a good burger and this place I think in and out makes a really good burger so of course West had to share that his favorite fast food is its chick-fil-a it's okay I'm sorry was but thank you guys so much for sharing um yeah exactly so I think the key is is a very diet America's eat more than I thought but they are aware of being fit and I'll talk about that later because that's that was a pleasant surprise okay so moving on okay you need a car so this was very surprising because when I first there's a song actually that goes I'm not gonna sing it because my voice always carry most of you but it goes like nobody walks in LA and it's so true people don't walk everyone has a car you'll see like two or three people walking maybe there really aren't many people walking because everyone is driving and it drove me crazy the traffic is terrible is it I'm talking about LA this is not always the case but you do generally need a car in the US and the reason why is because the places the distances are are big and places are spread out so you know it's in order to get to a point A to point B by foot it would take you two hours you know but if you take a car well might take you two hours because of traffic I know it will take you like thirty minutes but the distances are really great and everyone drives and public transportation is not very reliable so that's a problem and this is not something I like at all at all that you need a car because for example here where I am in Europe you don't need a car like it's nice to have a car if you want to get out and travel but you don't need it and over in the u.s. I think you really really do so let's see so you do need a car that was surprising very surprising to me something another thing I don't like but again it's because of the size of the country I think and the streets are bigger everything is bigger so one of the things that was the first thing I noticed which is my third point here is it was the food how much bigger the food portions are and then I noticed cars and the other things so cars are much bigger and I think a reason why is because people are more comfortable because they're always in a car so they like to feel safer and more comfortable so they drive either bigger trucks or they drive these giant like vans or SUVs they're really big and they take up a lot of space but they can do so because the streets are big - streets are wider so they have more room so it's easier but in the same time it's just big big big it's a little too much for me and now the food portions oh gosh the food portions are really big like really big so this is not if I get a burger and I get something like this that's not abnormal for me to receive a burger this big on a plate this big I think they do this for several reasons I think people like to I I don't think everyone I don't think people usually finish these portions I think it's something to mention because I when people go to the US they say oh my god how can people eat this much I don't think they always do I think it's because when you pay the restaurant they think you get a better value if the food is bigger and it's actually very customary that people take a lot of their food with them in a bag you know to go back so but it's still I don't I think there's a lot of food waste because of that if they don't take it so I don't like that at all I don't think they need to be that big so so yeah I just wanted to ask you yeah it's funny because you mentioned peanut butter because I'm going to talk about peanut butter um but Monica to answer your question and my accent and yeah it takes a really long time to become fluent honestly so if if but that doesn't mean that you're not speaking the language even if you're maybe not as advanced the more you you speak the better it is but it does take I think it takes a lifetime to to be fluent in a language and I think that's something amazing that's my view of it so so yeah so the other thing I want to talk about houses are bigger to like they're they're much bigger than I see here in Europe and I think that's especially in the suburbs if you go outside of the bigger cities so not in if you're in like Chicago or New York no that's where spaces are smaller but in the suburbs you will see bigger houses bigger cars bigger streets wider and this is of course because it's a new more country and they couldn't they had the space for it okay oh this one so surprising to me you guys the country's so huge that if you go from the west coast to the east coast it feels like you're in a different country sometimes because of the people there so different sometimes the accent the the the southern accent is so different than the Western accent through the eastern and also because the geography I mean there's in California where I was there were you know there's this of course the ocean next to me but you also have mountains in in Arizona Nevada Texas you have the desert and then you have mountains and the Rockies in Colorado for example and Utah and so the geography varies quite a lot because it's such a big country but I think the people are very different so I was shocked when I went from California to places like Georgia to see how different people were it really did feel like a different the food is different I think very different in the south it's more it has its own there's its own cuisine even the north northeast was different so it's just all very very different it's a it's I don't know if it's good or bad it was just surprising that because of these big distances that you can have such different experiences for you for though for for the ones if you ask in my native language is Romanian okay another thing that surprised me that I really some of it is good some of it as bad is staying healthy and what it takes to stay healthy first of all it's expensive staying healthy in the u.s. costs a lot of money because buying organic fruits and vegetables is not cheap and that's it's it's because it's a priority to many people and especially now especially where I was and people realize that and they they up the price and and it is a little it's expensive the same with joining gyms or big craze now is CrossFit or these kind of like smaller parts gems they can be very very expensive but what I do like about it that was surprising that I didn't have in Romania when I was younger was this idea of being fit as a priority so Americans generally from what I've noticed they like the outdoors they like doing things like hiking and biking and being active and staying active I really really like that I think it's very healthy and I think they have a lot of natural beauty to go explore especially I mean everywhere really but it's I really really like that and it was surprising because I didn't expect it so that was that was surprising to me okay my I have a question for you guys I'm going to talk about sports and this is difficult for me because because I don't know much of us with what I'm going to try to cover it so my question is what sports are popular in your country so it's an easy one I'm sure you know and I'll tell you about the u.s. in a second more specifically about college sports so when I went to university I was shocked first of all that the college had a team different teams in fact like they have team they have basketball team they have football team they have all kinds of teams for all kinds of different sports and they compete with other college teams and it is a big deal everyone goes to watch these sports the schools actually end up making a lot of money off of these sports people pay a lot of money and athletes college athletes are seen as celebrities so it's very very important and it is also a little bit surprising to me how important it is because I've I've when I visited like I was telling you guys about Georgia and Atlanta you see these you see college sports flags or in people's houses it's that important to them like they're constantly ask me like Oh UCLA they have a great what do they have like a basketball team or this is bad because I don't know because I'm not a sports fan but it's very important and Americans take their sports very seriously and they'll wear like the wear hoodies with their sports team on the on the hoodie and it's a big thing it's very surprising this nothing like this exists where I grew up so let me see what you guys are doing okay football football football curling and Korea interesting football badminton soccer football and by football I'm guessing you you you me soccer right and the us like I said I think basketballs huge but I think football is probably and I mean American football would be the most important sport or the most watched I guess so yeah I'm looking what you guys are saying it's it's pretty it's pretty incredible because I have no idea that I didn't know that the US would be such an important like a country that cares so much about sports and you have people in people but I think I think generally speaking people care a lot more than well than me okay so I'm let's see we were talking about a few different things that surprised me I want to talk about this one which you might have heard before but it has to do with drinking alcohol I think in most countries the age where it's legal to drink alcohol is 18 but I don't think it's enforced in many places I know it wasn't in Romania I don't think in many countries in Europe it is well in the u.s. things are a little different first of all the drinking age is 21 I've made a mistake there but the drinking age is 21 it is strictly enforced and so like if you you have to bring an ID even if you're clearly over 21 so I had occasions where I've gone with people even if you don't actually sometimes if you go into a place where they might serve alcohol even if you don't buy alcohol you might still have to show them your ID so it did even if you're clearly older this was very surprising because like I said in Europe nobody cares everyone just lets everyone in it's not enforced it doesn't matter so uh hmm

let's see oh wow so we have a hockey - and we have soccer I see soccer soccer if I'm going back to - what you guys are saying soccer to be the consensus of being one of the most important important ones yeah in the u.s. soccer is getting gaining more popularity I think but it's not definitely not the most popular sport I forgot about baseball I think that's another one that people watch a lot so there's basketball American football and baseball okay I don't know if you guys have seen these or have them but this was this concept of a drive through was totally surprising I was so surprised but not just by any drive-throughs but because of the places that had drive throughs that I've seen so a drive through if you don't know it's a place where you go with your car you don't get out of the car you stay inside your car and you talk through a little window from your car and then for many they're common with restaurants where you tell them your order and you drive through the window you pay and then they give you your food that's very common but what I found very surprising were pharmacies where you'd have you'd give them like you'd go to the window give them your prescription and then they'd come back and give you your medication very strange and then I've seen banks like for the ATM where you go in pull out again with a car driving driving then you stop you put in your car take out money and then keep driving so again very surprising to me and Starbucks which is if you if you're not if you're not sure what it is Starbucks is a an American coffee shop I guess it's everywhere now but you can go again like you don't have to stop you just get you her take a wake up and then you just keep driving so I put a picture here of a drive-thru pharmacy it was very very very very surprising um very very strange what cost more gaining or losing weight Oh that is a great question absolutely absolutely losing weight costs a lot more than gaining it's very easy to gain weight food is everywhere and it's cheap especially fast food it's cheap so you can it's much easier to buy fast food than to just you know purchase everything to make your own food because it costs time and money so sadly gaining weight is a lot cheaper okay we're getting through these this one's faster at just an observation I had that I thought was very bizarre maybe it's not so strange Americans like to be comfortable I think they're more of a casual people and I think that this is reflected in sometimes in the use of pajamas so I've seen people in class when I was a university student and even a high school student people came in class wearing their pajamas very strange I thought but it's fairly I saw it I saw it like a lot actually I did I don't see it at work it doesn't happen at work but definitely in university I saw it a lot at the grocery store from time to time you'd see people wearing pajamas I don't know or jammies has has some people like to call them they you know people like to be comfy I find it strange a little bit but sometimes I saw some kid pajamas so I don't know if you can work it um okay so before I show you the next one I have a question for you and please please please answer um throughout while I keep speaking I have a couple more things to show you but here's my question to you if you've been to the US or if you've seen different if you've noticed other things about Americans I would like to ask you have you noticed but what was something that surprised you about Americans what was surprising to you because these things are surprising to me but maybe not to other people or maybe I haven't noticed other things that are surprising to others so I would like to know please write it in the comments right now or later if you've been to the US what is something that surprised you about the people about culture about maybe language write it down we love love love love to see I be so curious to see what you notice maybe you agree with my list maybe you don't maybe you've seen something on TV if you haven't been there what do you think okay so now I want to talk about something very surprising and this again it's personal ice and what do I mean by ice American look Americans love ice like they are I feel like they're obsessed with ice you when you sit down at a restaurant poof they give you a glass of water but that glass is going to have it's going to be full of ice and maybe a little bit of water now you may like ice maybe you love it um I I don't know I I think it's okay but I think it's too much but it really is in everything even in the winter people like it some people chew on it like they think it's satisfying to crunch on it I don't understand this is not something that I get and I I lived there for 15 years and I could never understand American obsession with ice it they and then they give free refills I don't know if this is something you knew about like if you order a drink in many places they'll bring you another one another one another one and they only charge you for one but it's it's like full of ice so so you're probably just getting one drink I don't know so when I'm there I usually ask for a little ice like it's too much for me so I found this very funny it's people love it I don't I don't understand yeah I love ice cream too let's see that's something I love I again maybe you love ice and so that's um so maybe maybe maybe this will be great for you I know Wes I think he likes it so I find it funny this is another thing that's weird to me we're surprising I guess peanut butter oh my gosh everyone loves peanut butter I feel like um now I'm okay with it but I'm only okay with it in different contexts but when I moved there everyone was like how do you not like peanut butter what's wrong with you what how can you not like peanut butter um Americans love it they really really love it they eat it on everything bread cookies um bagels chocolate I like it I really like it with chocolate actually crackers oatmeal and celery which I find very disturbing I don't understand but they really eat it with everything and I don't understand this obsession with peanut butter it is everywhere if you guys don't know a very very iconic American sandwich is the peanut butter and jelly sandwich which is just jam kind of and they just put on the side it's like peanut butter on a slice of bread on the other hand it's like jam or jelly put it together and you eat it it's very strange um I like it if it's in a sweet combination so now I learn to be okay with it so it fits with chocolate I love it if it's out if it doesn't have chocolate I'm like eh but I'm not a huge peanut person but I found it very strange but I just wanted to mention that I shouldn't be talking too badly about peanut butter because Europeans are obsessed with Nutella to be to be honest we have it everywhere we love it we put it on everything pancakes we put it on toast we put it on cookies we put it in ice cream so we also have an obsession with a different kind of spread so I'm not judging I was just confused white peanut butter why not almond butter or I don't know so if you guys are writing remember to write down if you've seen remember to write down if you've seen any if you have if you've been to the u.s. if you find anything else that's strange other than my list because I'd be

with hats or with bumper stickers or on like mugs or houses t-shirt it's it is a little bit strange to me um but it's there and I think maybe not so much anymore but when I moved I moved at a time it was right after 9/11 if you guys know 9/11 was when the twin towers fell so that was a time when I think a lot of people really felt the need to show their their their love and their support for America and so on so that was very strange I hadn't seen that when before in any place so that was a little surprising and of course in schools this may be something that you don't know is that children many times have this thing that they say which is the Pledge of Allegiance and it's a short statement about being respectful to the flag and it's it's it's a very interesting thing that I haven't seen I wasn't used to and it was certainly very very very surprising so right now I'm still looking through comments to see if you guys have written anything so some of you haven't been there it's it's well now you know now you know what to expect kind of that might surprise you but maybe it won't because now you know about it but even if you're writing later please right down what were some things that surprised you about Americans well that's it for today thank you guys for joining if you found this interesting if you liked my list if you disagreed with my list if you have anything to add please let me know in the comments I want to thank you for joining me on this beautiful Saturday and I hope you have a wonderful day if you like this lesson please like it please like it and share it with your friends thank you guys so much and I'll see you next time

TAKE THE IDIOM QUIZ | COMMON & USEFUL AMERICAN IDIOMS

what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English and in case this is your first time here let me just tell you interactive English we are all about helping you practice and improve your English and today we have a fun little quiz so this is really going to be an interactive lesson because I am going to give you a quiz and I want you to tell me the answers all right so we're going to see how much you know about idioms we are going to give you I'm going to give you a quiz on idioms and I will say that I think that these are common idioms so after this lesson in the comments I want you to tell me how many you got correct because that way I know maybe next time I will make them a bit more challenging I wanted to start with some common idioms because again these are the idioms that you are most likely to hear and the idioms that you will most likely use when you're having a conversation with somebody else so I want to give a quick shout out to those of you who are with us right now I want to say hello to uh sidad Andre Barbara little provian hi how's it going um sahid Barbara I can't read it from Creek Greece hey what's up um Huda an L Isaac yes thank you thank you thank you guys for joining me just wanted to give you guys a quick shout out some recognition thank you for joining me and let's just go let's just get into it the first thing I want to tell you though in case you're watching this and you're like what the heck are idioms all right just so you know a quick little warmup all right an idiom it's a group of words which have a different meaning when they're together when they're put together then they would if you just take the meaning of each separate word so for example here's my example under the weather so if you think of weather then you think of rain snow sunshine and if you're under it then maybe you're just standing under it I don't know like this little guy under the cloud but no no no no no that's not what it means when we use this together under the weather it means that you feel sick and right now I would tell you just to to give you an example right now I'm feeling I'm feeling a little bit under the weather it's true it's nothing bad I just need some more vitamin C perhaps a little more sleep and then I won't feel under the weather anymore but this is a good example of an idiom and a common one too that that you might hear often if you're watching a TV movie uh under the weather so I'm going to give you the quiz and if you are with us in the chat I want you guys to to write your answers in the chat and and play along because this is interactive English we want you to interact with us that's what it's all about even if you're watching this later I want you to take the quiz write your answers in the comments and then at the end tell me how you did because I just I want to hear from you guys so these idioms uh some of them I will give you the meaning and you need to identify the idiom others are just Gap fills and you need to complete the idiom like what word finishes the idiom so let let's get into it all right are you guys ready you know your idioms all right let let's see let's see how much you know of these common idioms so the first question is right here all right a m in Disguise means a good thing that seemed bad at first so how would you complete that idiom I've highlighted the idiom in red well it's it's kind of a shade of red m in Disguise is it a favor in disguise a blessing in disguise a coincidence in Disguise or a mask in Disguise what what word completes that idiom it means a good thing that seemed bad at first okay so again we we talk about this situation often idioms will will summarize like a situ and capture something and M in Disguise all right excellent thank you uh great Miriam Kim alandro uh jelle great yes you are be a blessing in disguise so a blessing in disguise is a good thing that seemed bad at first so here is my situation to help you try to understand it a little bit more losing my job was really a blessing in disguise because then I never would have moved across the country and met the love of my life so if you lose your job that's a bad thing but then maybe you move across the country you're going to start over you're going to start new and you meet the love of your life and you live happily ever after so then you could look back and and look at that situation and say you know losing my job that was a blessing in disguise it was a bad thing but but good things came out of it it was good in the end all right the next question all right are you guys ready I think you guys you guys did well on that one this one I just want you to tell me the meaning let's call it a day so you need to put it in context unfortunately I didn't give you much context here because I've just I've just given you the statement let's call it a day what does that mean does it mean time to call it a day it's time to stop and finish what you're doing or maybe you'd say you know we'd better call it a day we had better call it a day we had better stop working we've done enough we don't need to work anymore let's call it a day but right now we are not going to call it a day I have more questions for you so let's continue and I want you to this one's really context you need to identify the entire idiom all right that's good example be happy I'm really exhausted let's call it a day sure so I'm a bit tired I'm going to go all right so think about the situation all right I'm a bit tired I'm going to go what what are you going to do what idiom are you going to do if you are a bit tired are you going to hit the sack are you going to take a sack are you going to hit the pillow or take the pillow I meant to say take the sack in B those should all Beth the the the but since I'm a bit tired and I'm feeling under the weather I I I that was a typo so what do you guys think all right if if you if I say you know I'm a bit tired I'm going to go or again I'd reduce it and say I'm G to go I'm going to go M what what do you think hit the sack take the sack take the pillow hit the pillow or take the pillow and we see a little little uh differences in this yes most of you excellent uh Ronan Luca Izzy uh Lai Atilla uh Asma perfect I want to try and give you guys some shoutouts if I see your name sorry if I mispronounce your names or don't see everybody but yes the answer is a hit the sack so if you're going to go to sleep and you're tired and you want to say that you're going to go to sleep you're going to hit the sack in this case the sack is just talking about the bed or wherever it is that you're going to go lie down and here are some sentences so you can put the idiom in context if you say you know it's been such a long day I'm going to go hit the sack which mean I'm just going to go to sleep or you might say you know maybe you've been traveling for a really long time and you'd say this I'm just going to go hit the sack as soon as we get there soon as we get there I'm going to go hit the sack and I I think it's commonly used with going to go talking about something you will do that you will go to sleep you're going to hit the sack I'm going to go hit the sack all right so that one is C and I just want to give a quick another little shout out basically a quick shout out to ourselves if you guys like what we do and you want to support what we do we have some cool cool cool rewards on patreon you can check that out I will leave a link in the description and you can go check out our patreon page if you guys haven't seen it or you haven't been there let me just hook it up right here in the chat bada ah right there so again you can check that out we it's a great it's another great way to connect with us and that's what this community is all about us trying to connect with you guys on a little more personal level and communicate with you so let's continue the quiz are you guys ready hopefully again these are common idioms so if you think they're a little easy don't worry about it that's okay just tell me that you did perfect at the end and then I'll know okay I need I need to make them a little more difficult so this one is is a common phrase uh it's also a common expression all right ignorance is bliss what would you say how would you complete that this expression means that someone is better off not knowing what do you think all right write your answers in the chat somebody say hey Wes I brought some students to watch this live excellent what's up guys I'm glad glad that you get I love it when groups groups get to watch these lessons perfect so what's the ex this is a common phrase that you will hear ignorance is bliss I gave you the meaning somebody is better off not knowing so in this situation what would you say ignorance is bliss ignorance is happiness ignorance is tolerated or ignorance is awesome what what would you say I think most of you guys uh got this Les yes uh Francisco what's up rousar Ira um GV yes Barbara who else do we have cuz it just keeps scrolling through scrolling through Sarah excellent the answer is a ignorance is bliss and it's usually a standalone sentence and you're just talking about the situation so you're not really using it with with a lot of other words you're just capturing it and say you know ignorance is bliss so here is a situation like I'm your friend and your boss I don't want to know about your devious plan I'd say ignorance is bliss so for example because we're friends but I'm also your boss all right you're going to do something that you know might not be wrong but because I'm your boss I don't want to know about it don't tell me I don't want to know because I don't want to get in trouble you do whatever it is you're going to do and I'll just say ignorance is bliss it's better for me not to know so I I hope that makes sense I hope that's easy to follow and I if that's the situation you're talking about like look I'm better off not knowing ignorance is bliss very common phrase that you might hear all right next one all right and even if you guys don't know these I encourage you write an answer in there even if you don't know it's great to just practice and and again it's all about interacting um is what this is all about ready once we land in New York once we land in New York City our plans are really up in the air so that is the idiom up in the air that is the idiom and I want you to identify the meaning what do you think it means does it mean that things are uncertain does it mean that that your plans are complete and very busy maybe your plans are C cancelled I don't know or maybe their plans are always changing what what is the meaning of up in the air so if you say that something is up in the air it means what all right excellent I see some great answers yes yes sabba Miriam rusa

Francisco Kevin um who else Olivia Kim Veronica Esther yes yes yes yes the answer is a if things are up in the air then you're basically saying that things are uncertain unsure or or not planned you don't know what's going to happen and you could say well it's up in the air I think often that it's used when you're talking about your plans and they say somebody say oh what are you going to do and you're like well I don't know our plans are up in the air we don't know what's going to happen things are uncertain I've given you another example here I'd say you know she hasn't decided who to hire so she's going to make a decision but at the moment the decision is really up in the air the decision is not planned it's unsure so this is another example about how you can use this idiom but most of the time it's used to talk about somebody's plans like things they're going to do up in the air all right the next question next idiom challenge question is this don't do anything until you hear from me I want you to all right and and this is the full idiom what does it mean if if this is your situation this is your context I don't want you to do anything until you hear from me I want you to I want you to sit tight I want you to stay still I want you to stay up or no sorry a first one was sit firm or D I want you to sit tight so what does this mean if it says I don't want you to do anything until you hear from me I want you to what sit firm stay still stay up or sit tight what do you guys think write your answer in the chat or again write to us in the comments even if you're writing this later I want I really want to see how well you guys are doing and this is I think this is one that I use from time to time because it it really addresses a certain situation this in this situation you're telling somebody something specific what would you do we got some different answers but yes uh yes Ronin Miriam Lyn G RAR yes the answer is D I want you to sit tight so when you when somebody tells you to sit tight they are asking you to wait patiently and take no action until you hear otherwise you need to wait for instructions you need to wait for somebody to tell you what to do so for example some and most of the time somebody would just tell you like it's a command uh you know sit tight just sit tight you need to sit tight and when somebody tells you to sit tight it just means just wait patiently and then somebody will tell you some instructions what you need to do you need to sit tight and wait until I call you so in this situation you have to wait for that phone call all right wait for that phone call you need to sit tight and again it's very specific it it's a great idiom to use if you want somebody if you want them not to do anything until you tell them to do something tell them to sit tight all right the next one the next idiom question is this all right again this is a fill-in the blank so the idiom is in red the expression is in red and there's a blank a rule of M what is it how would you complete this idiom a rule of m means a general Unwritten rule for whatever they're talking about all right are we talking about a rule of fact a rule of Secrets a rule of thumb or a rule of law what do you guys think A B C or D and again if you're just joining us we're we're taking a quick little quiz we're doing an idiom quiz I I want to see test your knowledge of these common English idioms and again I think uh these are common idioms these are very common idioms so write your answer in the chat I want to hear from you guys all right so getting some different answers in here let's see let's see what we got um what do we have so yes all right excellent uh a medium uh abdell Ronin who else we got skip through it keeps going doing you guys are answering so quickly perfect octar s jelle uh imate Asma perfect so the answer is C if you're talking about a general rule we refer to it as a rule of thumb all right rule of thumb just like that like button down below a thumb if you guys enjoy if you guys enjoy these quizzes hit that like button so that I know like okay I need to do more quizzes like this we need more idiom quizzes vocabulary quizzes grammar quizzes uh because this is a great way especially it's very interactive I really like them so a rule of thumb is a general Unwritten rule for whatever it is that that they're talking about or whatever it is you're talking about so you you're telling somebody like okay here's a general rule of thumb all right so for here's my example in in language learning there's usually a general rule of thumb for for many different things I'd say okay here's a general rule of thumb with spelling put I before E EX except after C so it Rhymes a little and this is actually a rule of thumb put i before e except after C so if you're trying to think like oh the word receive how do I spell that which comes first e or I so it's after C so we do r e c e i v e now compare that to the word preview which one comes first I or e p r e v i e w so that's something to remember all right put i before e except after C so if you're writing a message to somebody and you're thinking oh what comes first I or E remember this remember this rule of thumb right here this is a good one this is a good one all right so here is your next idiom question I don't know if it's possible we may have to take a range check so that's your idiom right there take a rain check what do you think it means all right what what do you guys think want to postpone the plan you don't want to do it right now maybe you'll do it later so you want to put take a rain check postpone a plan and my little image right there I tried to write it like as if it was real all right you talk about rain clouds and it's raining little checks all right that that doesn't exist so to take a rain check means to postpone a plan I will tell you this I think culturally when sometimes when people say like H I'll take a rain check sometimes they're saying it sarcastically like okay we're not going to do that that's never going to happen but yeah yeah I'll take a rain check so for example like in this case it might be real it's like oh I can't meet you to dinner tonight I'll have to take a rain check sorry maybe next time we'll postpone it and we will do it in the future we will do it later I can't meet you for dinner tonight I'll take a rain check now in this situation is what I was talking about somebody says it and they'd mean it like okay it's never going to happen so if somebody's inviting you to a wedding and you say whoa whoa whoa whoa wait you want me to come to your friends sisters nephews wedding I'm not going to know anybody then you might say yeah I think I'm going to have to take a rain check basically you're just telling them no I'm not going to go because it's a wedding you can't really postpone that plan so in that situation you're telling them you're using take a rain check by saying yeah I'm not going to do this the I'm not I'm not going to do these plans we are going I am going to take a rain check great idiom I love it love it love it love it next one all right if you really want it you have to work for it and then you would follow it with this expression all right it summarizes that statement that conditional sentence this phrase summarizes it if you really want it you have to work for it what would you say the entire expression the entire idiom and it's it's often used as a standalone expression would you say no pain no gain no rain no gain no pain no brain or no rain no brain what would you say all right this is uh this is a good one I like this I I think this is a bit more common all right if you really want it you have to work for it what would you say to complete that sentence all right again if you guys are just joining us we are taking an idiom quiz I am testing your knowledge of some English idioms so yes you guys again rock that one thank you uh perfect Kevin Lisa Allah um Sada uh snake venom perfect excellent love it Tiffany you would say a Esther excellent job no pain no gain so if you if you have to work for something you that you really want all right it's something that's difficult so because it's difficult it's going to cause pain but once it's done then you are going to achieve your goal which means again if there's no pain then you're not going to gain any value out of it is basically Al what it's saying and we just shorten it together and say no pain no gain all right so for example in these in these sentences I might say you know finishing the marathon will be difficult I have not done it yet and I can summarize it and say you know no pain no gain I am going to have the physical pain but in the end I will finish and maybe I'll just feel good about myself or in this case you're talking about you know this construction project is a huge undertaking it is a huge project it's it's going to take a lot of time a lot of energy a lot of money and you say you know no pain no gain you have to work for it if you really want it so all right so excellent excellent excellent let's do the next one ready here it is if something is over someone's M it means beyond their understanding or too difficult for them to understand so again I I'm giving you part of the idiom I want you to complete that blank over someone's what over my M over your M over their M what does it mean well yeah actually you know what it means it's too difficult for them to understand and yeah it's it's beyond their understanding what would you say how would you say it over someone's shoulder over someone's head over someone's brain or over someone's mind how would you complete that idiom let's see what do you guys think I'm seeing some good an well let's see all right some different answers in this one maybe this one's a little trickier all right but yes uh a Saba Milan hi hi Milan uh what else do we have who else got it well um I don't know that name it's somebody from Thailand I think so excellent good job jelle um and then again I don't know that name I think uh not sure where it's from maybe I think it I know you told me you wrote comments before and I I know you just told me sorry I forgot write me a comment let me know your name um yes perfect Olivia Tiffany so this one if it's too difficult to understand the answer is B it's over someone's head so if something uh you don't get it you don't understand it and maybe you should understand it and you're like ah it's it's over my head it's too difficult to comprehend so this situation it's it's often used when talking about jokes maybe because sometimes a joke a person might not understand it Wes didn't understand the joke it went right over right over my head right over his head so if something goes over your head then you don't understand it and you know again it could be a joke it could be a story that somebody's telling you and you just don't get it you don't understand what they're saying and it goes over your head or maybe even a subject something is very difficult Quantum quantum physics all right that's definitely over my head I just I I don't understand it it's too difficult for me to understand it's over my head all right so again another great idiom that you guys can now go out and try to use and again this is very much for idioms are very much for informal speech so you not over my head all right and tell me how many of these how many of these answers you got all right how many did you get correct so again thank you guys so much for joining me if you enjoyed this quiz you can let me know that by hitting that like button down below so I know that that we should do more of these idiom quizzes vocabulary quizzes write us questions um in the comments and tell me how many how many of these did you get correct and say hey it was not over my head I rock that one you can also check us out here on social media and oh by the way another great way to connect with us is to join our other interactive English community and subscribe to our newsletter let me leave you guys a link right here right here baboom bam all right so check that out uh it's another good way for us to communicate we send you free resources and you will get access to the secret fluency lesson oo it's a secret all right thank you guys so much let me give some more shout outs uh for those of you are here Su jelle um Risa Allah oh first time excellent we're glad to have you here Sadia thank you thank you thank you um all right let's see um s you are you typ some s using chin are you from China no I'm not from China I'm from the United States um snake venom thank you be happy thank you guys for joining me Saia Sai Ira Fanny uh Risa Kevin Saba F Fernando Olivia thank you guys so much I hope you enjoy the rest of your day and I will see you very soon all right so long

TAKE UP Has 6 Different Meanings Phrasal Verb Lesson

today we're talking about this phrasal verb and its many different meanings [Music] what's up everyone my name's Wes this is Interactive English which is the place you want to be to practice and improve your English skills in today's lesson we are talking about phrasal verbs actually we're just talking about one phrasal verb take up and it's many different meanings and that's something that's very challenging and difficult when it comes to learning phrasal verbs is that they don't just have one meaning they might have two three or four meanings in this case I'm going to talk to you about six different meanings of take-up I'm going to tell you the meaning I will give you some example sentences and I'll also show you some videos so that you can see how the phrasal verb is used in context let's begin the first meaning of take-up is just to start doing something new it can be a hobby and activity and you're doing it because you are interested in this thing so for example a long time ago I wanted to play guitar so I took up playing guitar if you're interested in gardening you can take up gardening keep in mind that in this case we follow it with the gerund that ing now so you can take up cooking maybe you want to take up running these are things activities that you want to do and start honey when did Peter Griffin take up jogging I mean I've always wanted to take up golf the next meaning of take up is just to fill a particular amount of space or time so let's start with space and when I think about this I think about the computer because things on your computer take up space for example maybe you have a movie and it's a very large movie you're like wow that takes up a lot of space I can't stay with Phoebe Ross we're roomies you guys don't need me here taking up all your space which is my boo I've got it the way I like pickup space and you slow me down if we're talking about time it's just an activity something that that uses your time for example learning English maybe it's taking up a lot of your time maybe it's not taking up a lot of your time but if something takes up time it's just using your time these take up a lot of time listen I don't want to take up your time Michael I thought we do not take up people's time with meetings like these the next meaning of take up is to accept an offer so you can take up an offer in which case you are accepting it I think often times you would hear it as you take someone up on something so that's that's that's a longer phrase and typically if you're having a conversation and you're asking this person if they're going to accept this you don't have to say what something is often people would just say that for example you're negotiating with somebody and they tell you something you're like you know I'm gonna take you up on that I'm going to accept your offer I'm going to take you up on that hey I might take you up on that I might take you up on that one day absolutely take you up on that offer then if we're talking about clothing we can use take up to say that we want to make it shorter in length so for example women might have a dress that they want to make it shorter it's too long so they might take it up well what do you think we need these clothes so badly hey I think they're gonna be okay we'll just have to take them up just a couple of inches you can also take up a question a problem or cause and and discuss how you are going to act on it so you might really believe in something and you are going to continue discussing it or acting on it and you say I'm going to take up this cause because I believe in it or I'm going to take up this issue most great actors take up coozes and I'm the greatest difficult do we have to take this up with the police so why don't you take that up with him we can also use take up to say that that a person or or a group has has gotten in a particular place and and that is where they are they have taken up a position at this certain location when I think of it used in this context I think of maybe war and battles and the military and somebody might say you know the enemy's taken up position on the other side of the hill they take up a position somewhere gentlemen take up your position so those are six different meanings for take up but I also wanted to give you some bonus phrases and the first one is to take up arms this just means that you are preparing for battle using weapons so if somebody's taking up arms they are getting ready to fight there is going to be a battle we're going to take up arms it's not something you want to hear it's not a good thing when people take up arms he will remain in the north where he belongs he will not take up arms against the analysis well not two sides you can also take up residence somewhere and if you take up residence it just means that you live somewhere this is the place that you live and often it's it's temporary so you're talking about taking up residence in this place for for some period of time yeah I took up residence at this apartment by the lake just for the summer or it could be something more permanent maybe you're talking about an animal that might be unwanted that has taken up residence in your home maybe mice you don't want them there but they they've taken up residence and you want to get rid of them so you take up residence just to live there and Susan Fleisher takes up residence in a remote farmhouse and Ashtyn Oregon so I don't want to take up any more of your time but if you enjoyed this lesson and you learn something new please hit that like button also I suggest that you join our community and and subscribe to our newsletter you get to access the secret fluency less of us will just send you some cool stuff from time to time some useful and free resources I hope you take me up on that link is in the description thank you guys so much for watching and I'll see you next time

THANKSGIVING PHRASES + COLLOCATIONS | Build Your Holiday Vocabulary

Fall is in the air, and this is the first phrase that I would like to teach you. So, if you say that something is in the air, what it means is that well, you are aware of something or that that something is in the immediate surroundings. So, you could say that well, like love is in the air. This is another common phrase, but if we were were talking about fall, you could say fall is in the air or or autumn is in the air, either one. it starts to become fall. The the temperatures are getting colder. Um the leaves are starting to change color, and and you could use this phrase. And something else that's happening this time of year is Thanksgiving. And I want to teach you about Thanksgiving in the United States.

I want to teach you a little bit about um you know, the holiday in general as well as some vocabulary, some useful phrases and collocations that you may hear or that you could use if you're talking to somebody about Thanksgiving. So, the very first thing that you should know is that in the United States, Thanksgiving is celebrated on the fourth Thursday of November. It's a family holiday in in which everyone will get together, and that is a useful phrasal verb when talking about Thanksgiving. Get together just means that well, people are meeting each other at in a arranged time, and in this case, it's Thanksgiving. Very popular time for people to get together. But let's talk about why people get together. How how did this all begin? So, the origin of Thanksgiving dates back to the early 1600s when colonists came over to well, what is now the United States. And in the beginning, I think they were having a tough go at it. So, they came to an agreement with the Wampanoag, which was the Indian tribe that was in the area.

And the agreement was that the the colonist would supply the Wampanoag with European weaponry. Well, more more like this. And in return, the Wampanoag would give the colonist some food. And one year, the colonist and the Wampanoag, they shared an autumn harvest. And that's another colocation when talking about Thanksgiving, this time of the year. Harvest means just to gather crops. And this is something that that people would do before winter. So, they may talk about the autumn harvest or even the fall harvest. Anyway, this became known as the first Thanksgiving. Now, many people like to think of this event as everyone getting along and sharing, probably because that's how we like to think about Thanksgiving today. But really, what this symbolized was a rare peaceful coexistence between these two groups, between the colonist and the Indians. I think it's a far stretch to say that they were BFFs.

And then afterwards, the US went on to become independent, become a country, and and states would celebrate Thanksgiving independently until Abraham Lincoln came along. And you may be familiar with President Abraham Lincoln because he was president during the Civil War. And it was actually in the midst of the Civil War that Abraham Lincoln proclaimed that there be a national Thanksgiving Day held in November. And I think there are probably many Americans who are unfamiliar with Abraham Lincoln's role in Thanksgiving. But this is how it all got started. Nowadays, each November, people will get together and and they'll have a family gathering, which is another colocation when the family just comes together. You could use this to to talk about well, Thanksgiving, some other family event, or or even other family holidays. And you have a family gathering.

Now, people mostly will celebrate with family, but but you could also celebrate Thanksgiving with friends. It's it's just about well, being with the people that you care about. Thanksgiving is an important food holiday. Everyone will will get together. You have a family gathering and people will have a feast. And that is another great phrase. A feast is just talking about a large meal and you would use it with the verb have to have a feast. Or somebody may describe and talk about Thanksgiving and say, "Oh, it's going to be a huge feast." So, you you could use those phrases when when talking about Thanksgiving or really any other big food event. Now, speaking of big events, if we're talking about food, the main event, of course, is turkey.

Turkey is clearly associated with Thanksgiving and I'm not just talking about like small slices of turkey. I'm talking about a big full-on turkey that you would need to carve. That is another phrase that you may hear, carve the turkey. Carve just means to cut into the surface of something, but because we're we're referring to a big turkey, you would use this verb and you would say, "Somebody needs to carve the turkey." Shall we carve the turkey, get this dinner started? I'm an excellent carver. Allow me. Think I can carve the turkey after all this my house. Sitting right here in front of me. Now, typically people are going to sit around a table and eat together. And if that's going to happen, then you will need someone to set the table. Another great phrase. To set the table just means to to organize the cloth, the plates, the silverware, the glasses. And once the table is set and the food is brought in and everyone is sitting down, they may not eat just yet. Because Thanksgiving is a time when people show appreciation, they may give thanks. That is a collocation. Give thanks means that you are expressing gratitude and talking about something good that has happened. And in general, people may talk about some of the things they are thankful for. That's another collocation. You When you use thankful, you're going to follow it with the preposition for. You are thankful for something. I can tell you that I am thankful for you. I really love the community that that we have created. And if you are thankful for these video lessons, you can let me know by hitting that like button. You could also you could also use the phrase grateful for. It really it means the same thing.

I think it's a bit more formal and because for some Thanksgiving it is more of a formal holiday, they may use grateful for. But in general, you're really still just talking about the things or the people that you appreciate. Another phrase that you may hear, which is a little similar, is count your blessings. And often I think people may say this like kind of as a reminder to others and they would say like, let's count our blessings or we need to count our blessings. Now, before eating, we're still not eating yet, people may also say grace. That is another common Thanksgiving collocation. To say grace, it it's just talking about a prayer of gratitude before or after a meal. And in general, I think most of the time people may say grace before the meal.

Are we going to have a prayer? It's Thanksgiving, you know. Before we're served, shouldn't we say grace? And once those traditions are over, still before eating, somebody may say the phrase dig in. And and that right there, that is your cue to start eating because this is a phrase that you could really use with any type of shared meal and it just means that that you're telling people like start eating, all right? It's time to start eating, dig in. And of Of there are families and people who will skip out on some of these traditions of saying the things that they are thankful for and they'll just go straight for that phrase, "Dig in." And everybody will start eating.

And once that happens, it can get pretty silent around that table because everybody's just there focused in on that food. I'm even getting a little hungry. And after eating, somebody might say, "I'm stuffed." This is a pretty common phrase. It's just another way of saying that you were full. You can not eat any more. I'm stuffed. Or perhaps somebody will ask you the question, "Do you have room for seconds?" That is another great phrase. Room for seconds is talking about the ability to eat a second serving of food. And I think at Thanksgiving, I think most people have room for seconds and thirds and sometimes even fourths. And still, after eating all that food, many people have leftovers, another common phrase. So, leftovers is talking about the food that remains after a meal. And you would use it with the verb have, have leftovers, or you could use it with the verb eat, eat leftovers.

Personally, I really enjoy eating leftovers after Thanksgiving. I hope that you learned some new phrases and collocations and that you are now stuffed with vocabulary. And I'm going to let you digest this over the next few days. But because it's Thanksgiving and we have such a caring and loving community, I'd like you to write to me in the comments and maybe tell me something that you are thankful for. What is What is something that you are thankful for? I think it's always good to think about some of the positive things that are going on in our lives.

Now, because it's Thanksgiving, whether you celebrate it or not, of course, I'm going to wish you a happy Thanksgiving. I hope you enjoyed the lesson. I hope you learned something new and I will see you next time.

THAT, WHICH, WHO? Important Relative Pronouns You Need to Know

this is the grammar lesson that will change your life because let's face it English which is the global language is important for people to learn and use and I am the person who is going to teach you all about the relative pronouns that which and who and I'm sure you heard me emphasize these words as you were just listening to me and these pronouns are very important because there is some debate as to how they should be used when it comes to formal or informal or written English versus spoken English let me give you an example I don't like the dog um fit me which pronoun should we use and normally I would say which one is correct but in this lesson I I don't want you to think about grammar in terms of correct and incorrect instead I want you to think about it more in terms of acceptable versus unacceptable and then you're going to have that Spectrum in between so which answer do you think is more acceptable and I will tell you in just a moment but it's important to know why because when you know this and you know why an answer is more acceptable or more often used than others it's really going to help you dramatically improve your grammar skills have a better understanding of the language and you won't make simple mistakes when you're having a conversation or when you're writing and if you are someone who would like to improve your grammar Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and be sure to stick around because I'm going to give you a mini grammar quiz at the end to see just how much you've learned so let me give you a quick overview of that which and who because these pronouns sometimes may seem interchangeable but it can be a little trickier than you think in general you're going to use that when referring to people animals or things you're going to use which when referring to animals or things and you will use who when referring to people and I'm sure you notice that that is more often used than the other pronouns because it overlaps with which when talking about animals or things and it overlaps with who when talking about people so let's dive deeper so you know how and when to use these words and I am from the United States so just know that the recommendations that I'm going to give you it's more related to American English and I will try to point that out as we go through the lesson now the relative pronouns that which and who are going to come at the beginning of a relative clause and you're starting to hear the word relative a lot so what is a relative Clause a relative Clause gives us extra information about a noun it is a dependent clause so it has a subject and a verb but it cannot stand alone as its own sentence and as I already mentioned it's going to begin with a relative pronoun in every lesson I always ask you to hit the like button and if you're ever wondering well where is the like button I would say just hit the like button that is right below this video so that last part that is right below this video that is a relative Clause it begins with the relative pronoun that it's just giving us more information about the word button I'm telling you the location of it and it's just a quick example but maybe subconsciously I'm trying to get you to hit the like button but let's just sum up quickly so we have a noun that is modified by a relative clause and that relative Clause is going to begin with a relative pronoun are you with me here are some sentences that we can combine using a relative clause I don't like the dog the dog bit me I don't like the dog that bit me all right there there's your answer to the question at the beginning or we have the sentence I plan to go running it's a great stress reliever I plan to go running which is a great stress reliever so I combine the sentences using a relative Clause except in one sentence I use that and in the other sentence I use which and maybe you're wondering are they interchangeable and in this case I would say no so let's talk about why and look at the difference between that and which it really depends on whether or not the relative Clause is restrictive or non-restrictive and that just it pretty much means what it says if the relative Clause that extra information is restrictive well that means that it is necessary in order for us to understand the sentence and we really need that information if the relative Clause is non-restrictive well then it's not necessary it's optional you can leave it in or you can take it out so if the Clause is restrictive you should use that I don't like the dog that bit me all right we need this information to help help us understand well why I don't like the dog but we could also assume that well maybe there's more than one dog and I'm talking about that dog that dog that bit me or if I said computers that are used for gaming are usually more expensive so not all computers are now let's look at some non-restrictive Clauses which once again and this information is optional it may be interesting but we don't really need it in order to understand the sentence I plan to go running which is a great stress reliever so we can take this out and it's not really going to change the meaning of the sentence or my plan or I could say my flight which is tomorrow has been delayed and again this is you know good information to have but it's not necessary and in this sentence you'll notice that the relative Clause comes between two commas and this tells us that we're talking about a non-restrictive clause so we can take that information out now if you're having a conversation you're not going to be able to see these commas but one thing you could do is listen for that short pause or if you're speaking you're going to make that short pause when you get to the comma so if I were to just say this sentence naturally I'd say my flight which is tomorrow has been delayed now let's talk about the difference between that and who and remember these pronouns overlap when we're referring to people and one thing you should know about who is that this pronoun is commonly used with both restrictive and non-restrictive clauses when who is part of a restrictive Clause it may sometimes be interchangeable with that just keep in mind if we're using that to refer to people it's pretty informal so if you're writing which is a more formal way of communicating I would not recommend using that if you're writing stick with who but let's combine these two sentences I told you about my friend Tom he got a promotion so he is the subject of my second sentence and I can combine them using a relative clause and who I told you about my friend Tom who got a promotion now in this case I would definitely recommend using who I think using that sounds a little awkward for two reasons first we're actually saying the name of a person when you're that specific I would definitely recommend using who the next reason is that we're talking about the subject of the sentence and I will come back to that in just a moment now even if we remove the name and take it away and I say well I told you about my friend who got a promotion if we're talking about the subject of this sentence I would definitely recommend using who so you may be wondering when are that and who interchangeable in restrictive Clauses and this is really going to happen when we're talking about the object before we were talking about the subject so if I said I don't know the man you were talking to him and I want to combine these two sentences with a relative clause and man that is the noun that we're going to add some information to so if we're really being grammatically correct I would say I don't know the man to whom you were talking but this sounds pretty formal especially to American ears but if we're talking about the object which in the second sentence is him we're going to use whom I don't know the man to whom you were talking now I didn't really include whom in this lesson mostly because in the United States except for and writing people are not going to use it often in conversation instead they're going to use who or that so in this case when we're talking about the object that is when who and that may be interchangeable and what happens is the preposition then goes at the end of the sentence I don't know the man who you were talking to or I don't know the man that you were talking to so there's three different ways that you could say this all of them are accepted so the more formal I don't know the man to whom you were talking or what I would refer to as just a more casual way of speaking I don't know the man who you were talking to or a more informal way I don't know the man that you were talking to so when referring to people and we're talking about restrictive Clauses if we're referring to the object this is when that and who may be interchangeable and personally I would recommend using who because I think that is what is more commonly used and when who is part of a non-restrictive clause it is not interchangeable with that you are always going to use who but once again it's a non-restrictive clause so this extra information it's optional I could say my teacher who taught me in high school retired last month it's good information to have but it's not necessary or Anna who's from Brazil is pregnant okay it's good to give more details but again it's not necessary in order to understand the main idea of the sentence so now that you have a better understanding of how we use that which and who I want to test your knowledge with a mini grammar quiz so I am going to give you a sentence and I want you to think about which relative pronoun best completes the sentence and I I want you to listen for it because at first I'm not going to show you the sentence I just want you to listen I'll give you a moment to think of your answer and then of course I will tell you the answer are you ready I like the dress my mother made for me I like the dress my mother made for me what do you think the answer is that I like the dress that my mother made for me all right and then again this is an example I'm not talking about me but this information is necessary it implies that well maybe we're talking about more than one dress so we're going to use that Chicago the largest city in Illinois is not the state capital Chicago the largest city in Illinois is not the state capital so perhaps you were listening and you heard those pauses which tells you that this is a non-restrictive clause in which case you are going to use which Chicago which is the largest city in Illinois is not the state capital and in case you're wondering Springfield is the state capital of

Illinois the next one last week I saw Tiger Woods is one of the greatest golfers of all time last week I saw Tiger Woods is one of the greatest golfers of all time so Tiger Woods is a person I'm giving you the name so you should use who last week I saw Tiger Woods who is one of the greatest golfers of all time then we have you should not use the bike um has a flat tire you should not use the bike has a flat tire so this is a restrictive Clause we need this information because well maybe we're talking about more than one bike you should not use the bike that has a flat tire my cat is 15 years old scratched me yesterday my cat is 15 years old scratched me yesterday so even just hearing this you could probably tell like okay well this information is not necessary and we're talking about an animal so we're going to use which my cat which is 15 years old scratched me yesterday it's a non-restrictive clause then there's this one if you're traveling to India you should visit my good friend is living there if you travel to India you should visit my good friend um is living there so we're talking about well friend that is a noun that is a person we're going to modify that with our relative clause and use who as the relative pronoun if you're traveling to India you should visit my friend who is living there and then this one you should join the gym is only five minutes away you should join the gym is only five minutes away so I'm trying to to tell you this and like give you extra information about the gym you can see with that comma of course you want to use which because we're talking about a non-restrictive relative Clause you should join the gym which is only five minutes away so how did you do on the quiz let me know down in the comments I'd love to hear from you if you enjoyed the lesson and you learned something new please hit that like button I'd really appreciate it as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

THE SHORTEST WORD IN ENGLISH #shorts

a is the shortest word in English just listen to how short it is this video is a masterpiece you should learn how to pronounce this word correctly because we use it all the time according to the Oxford English Corpus it is the sixth most common word in the English language now you may be thinking what about the word I that's also pretty short no a is shorter according to the internet which is never wrong in sound a is shorter because it is a monong while I is a diff thong just try try to pronounce these two words a i you see it's much more difficult often this indefinite article is simply pronounced as an unstressed schah sound uh which is the most common vowel sound in English give it a try and see how easy it is uh this makes it even shorter amazing and now you know

TOP 10 REASONS TO LEARN ENGLISH

Hey everyone, welcome to today's lesson. I think this is I think it's a very fun lesson because I am going to talk to you about the top 10 reasons to learn English. Now, I'll I'll be honest with you. These these are my top 10 reasons. And I'm sure that some of them may be similar for all of you. And of course, we all have different reasons. You might have different reasons for learning English and that's that's perfectly fine. So, let me quickly introduce myself in case this is your first time here. My name is Wes. This channel, Interactive English, it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals.

will then hopefully become one of your online teachers and you can learn with me each week because well, I come out with quite a few lessons. So I do want to say some quick hellos to some people who are with me in the chat. Hello uh Taio Juliana good to see you. Um, Dip Dip John, sorry if I mispronounced names. Sleepwalker, Rosalind Linda, how are you? Uh, Abdul Rashid Washington, Maggie, hello. Let's, uh, as we go through these, I told you these are like my top 10. And I'm going to try to present them in a more interesting way, I think, kind of more entertaining way. And I'll give you some information as to why I am um this is my opinion about why this is the reason why you should learn English. Uh so oh Washington first time here. Awesome. Excellent. Love having first timers with me. Uh so the first reason that I have for you is well I'm going to explain this as we go through it. I thought this was kind of a funny meme right here. these little uh little baby ducks just trying to fit in. And really the first reason is well you just you don't want to feel left out. And there are so many people around the world today who are learning English. I think especially when you talk about kids learning it in school, many of them have to. So I think as you get older, at least this is what happened for me is that I got as I got older, I started to understand how important language learning was. I really started to appreciate it more. I wish that I had taken it more seriously when I when I was a student. But I I think I wanted to be a part of that community if I were were traveling somewhere else and being around other people. I wanted to fit in.

And to kind of show you this, I have this um right here. I wanted to share with you that this is from the ethnol log. And the ethnol log is kind of it's a it's a publication that comes out every year giving statistics on language as well as um living languages really. So this just shows you that English is the most widely spoken language in the world. 1.348 billion. Now the way they calculated this up L1 and L2 learners. So what that means is like L1 is that English is your first language. L2 would mean that English is your second language. So when you combine those L1 and L2, we're talking about 1.3 billion people. And I think it would always it's great to be a part of that group as well as other language groups as well, but you don't want to feel left out. So that's my first reason because there are so many English speakers. It's good to be a part of that group. The the next reason that I have for you is I kind of mentioned it about a minute ago and this should give you a clue as to what I'm talking about. I also thought this was an entertaining uh an entertaining image. It says, "This is me walking down the aisle." So, this is a reference walking down the aisle when somebody is getting married. And they walk down the aisle and then they they get married. They have the ceremony. So, basically what this person is saying like this this is their love. This is their true love. They're walking down the aisle on an airplane. So, really that the next reason that I have for you is basically just travel. your ability to travel, go other places, and communicate with other people. Because truthfully, if you I I had just showed you that other picture talking about 1.3 billion speakers. If you travel to another country and you don't speak the the native language there, there's a good chance that English would be the common language that you would use. And that's how you would communicate with people. Ask them how much something costs. Tell them that you want something to eat. You could even ask them where uh where the bathroom is. So, if you plan on traveling, I think this is a great reason to learn English. And I don't know uh please share with me what what your reasons are. I'd love to hear from you, especially if you can connect to any of the reasons that I'm I'm giving right now. And as I go through, if I find something to comment on, uh I will. I will. Um so the next uh the next one so we talked about you know you want to the first one you want to to fit in travel is another important reason why you should uh learn English and then this one this is number three all right number three of the top 10 uh and I'll tell you this is nice to meet you I already forgot your name so in short what I'm really referring to are relationships you're able to form different relationship. So, right now, let me know if any of you are trying to learn English or improve English because of some relationship you have. Maybe you are interested in dating somebody else.

Perhaps you're interested in making friends from another country or you already have friends and you would like to improve your English skills so that you could communicate uh a bit better with them. So, relationships, not just talking about dating, but relationships, um, friendships, uh, colleagues at work, any type of relationship. This is a good reason to learn English. All right. Uh, so let's look at uh, the next reason, number four. All right. Number four. We're running through these here again is how I wanted to present it. Um, I am ready for my promo promotion. That dog is ready for a promotion. So, I'm talking about you would get a promotion because of work. All right. Learning English is going to present you with different work opportunities. And it might not just be like maybe it could be a promotion. Maybe you are able to advance further in a company or in your career because you speak English or maybe you even speak some other languages as well. Again, I think many of these reasons that I'm giving you could relate to any learning any language. Uh but I know you guys are here because you want to improve your English skills. So I'm relating it to that. So work opportunities I think will definitely help. And again, you can connect many of these because there are so many English speakers around the world. I already mentioned that when you're traveling, chances are that English could be the common language. So, that could be another work opportunity that if you are trying to get a job in the tourist uh some the tourist industry and that business, they might want people who can speak English that have to communicate with tourists in English. So, I think learning English and improving your English will definitely help you get more work opportunities in the future. And again, if this if you guys can relate to this, if some of you have had work opportunities because of English, just let me know. Let me know.

Um, great to get a new foreign culture sleeper. Yes, I'm going to come to that one in just a minute. Songs in English. Yep, I'm getting you guys are you guys are reading my mind. Excellent. So, this is the next one. in again just I thought this was a a funny way to kind of introduce the uh idea the reason I admire your relentless drive to further your education and avoid real work. So really this is kind of taking a jab at I think uh higher education probably people doing MAS PhDs uh who just continue going to school but relating it to learning English and language we I just I mentioned work opportunities I feel that it's important to also say that yeah it's go also going to help you um with a lot more education opportunities that if you want to learn something. If you want to go to school, if you speak English and you can take uh classes in English, that is going to give you more choices as to maybe which university you can go to or perhaps you want to take a class, but maybe only the cl the class is only offered in English. And I think this is especially important because all all of you guys I'm looking at the chat uh see Min from Vietnam. Esther hello from Barcelona. Um Juliana I know is in Italy. So everybody's from you know different places around the world but we're all you guys are all online right now and online education is something that's growing. It's becoming a lot more prevalent. and say that you have an interest in learning more about cars or fashion or something like that and you want to find some online class.

Well, I I think there are many online classes that are offered, but they may be offered in English. Now, that doesn't mean that you could you could probably find maybe another online class in your native language as well, but again, it's about having more opportunities to take classes, online classes here or actually attend some university or school and then you just have the choice. So, you get to decide what you want to do. Um, excellent. Uh, all right, Gustav. Yes. Uh, you said Vicki also learning language. she's learning German. Um, so again everybody, as you guys can just see in the chat, people are from uh around the world. So I think education is another opportunity that learning English, improving your English is going to give you. And the last thing I'll say about this quickly, I mentioned about taking an online class um in English. I I personally think that is an excellent way to improve your English is if you're taking perhaps a class that's related to something else and you're learning vocabulary related to that something that you're interested in and you could take those classes in English. The next one that I have for you, so we've done the top five already. Uh, number six, this one the the number six reason why you should learn English or continue improving your skills. Uh, some of you probably recognize that logo right there. Uh, which is from Netflix. And you can see, I don't know if you could see the writing. It says person who pays for the account. And then you have parasite 1, parasite 2, parasite 3. What this is referring to is a parasite is a person. They're they're kind of joking saying this is somebody who's using another person's account and that person is paying for it. I'll be honest with you, my wife and I, our family, we we are parasites. We are parasites right now.

But what I'm trying to get at with um with learning English is that when you learn English that there you you also are then able to access a lot more entertainment, TV shows, movies, books, um stories, anything. There's so much out there that's in English and it will open that door and you can watch um a TV show that everybody's been talking about or you can go see a movie and you're able to watch it in English and not have to worry about um having it dubbed in your language because again when when people would dub in like films or TV shows in another language, it is slightly different. It is a little different and it's nice to be able to go watch it in the original language and I think this is true this is I think so useful again for any language that the more languages you learn the more opportunities you're going to have but because English is such well it's such a popular language around the world there is so much entertainment in English that you would then have access to so I think that is another great reason why you should keep improving improving, keep trying to learn. Um, and and that is that's it's just going to help you open up so many more doors to entertainment. I've actually been watching some shows on Netflix, the the Narco series in Spanish. Um, I I speak some Spanish, so that that I'm comfortable with. And I've even been watching this other show in French, Lupin, and I just turn on the subtitles. But again, it's there's so much access out there because of the internet. And that uh well, that kind of leads me right into number seven. Um the number seven reason why, and I thought this was uh kind of funny and and probably somewhat true for for some people out there, it said, "The internet went down and I had to spend time with my family. They seem like good people." kind of indicating that this person's not spending much family time. They're usually online. And I think uh I think probably many of us can relate to that that as time goes on, I know especially for me over the last 10 years, 20 years, I spend more and more time online. I spend more on time surfing the internet. It's more like my work is more related to that. So what I'm trying to get to with number seven is basically saying that English is the language used online. It is the language of the internet. Now of course there are many websites out there in the different languages but English again once again is the most popular. It is the most common and just to prove it this was taken from statistica which provides a lot of different information and statistics about things. So this is the common languages used on the internet as of January 2020. You see English is like it makes up 25% of the internet right now followed by Chinese and then Spanish and then Arabic. But 25% that that is a lot. And again when you speak English you have access to that. It then leads you into some of these other things when we talk about access to that entertainment, possibly access to finding uh employment and getting more work opportunities, access to travel. So, a lot of these are really connected. So, um thank you Fidel. I appreciate it. Um Nuria, hi from Argentina. Um he says they don't dub anything in German. That's good. I think nowadays I think dubbing is becoming less common and I I do think that's a good thing that really people getting that exposure to other languages and I think for me that my personal preference is I would rather watch a TV show or movie using subtitles than it be dubbed in English. Um let's see. Takayo says learning English enrichment of life for me. Excellent. Perfect. uh kind of the I'm going to kind of kind of leading into that one as well. So number eight, the number eight reason to learn English and I will explain this as well. Um I just thought again I just thought it was funny. People say nothing is impossible but I do nothing every day. And this I guess is a quote from Winnie the Pooh or it was part of uh it was part of that. Uh, I did not know that it was from Winnie the Pooh, but it seems to be attributed to that. And I really I thought this quote was really funny. But what what I think it's really saying is again saying that um you you you do nothing. You're not having to work hard. And I will explain this in saying that it's easy to learn. Let me let me explain what I mean when I say it's easy to learn. I don't necessarily mean that. Oh, it's going to be easy for everyone. language learning it takes time it takes dedication there it's it for for most of us like especially for me it takes a long time what I'm really talking about when I say that it's easy to learn is the it's e so easy to get a lot of exposure it's easy to learn because there's so much of it that surrounds us I just showed you that basically 25% of the internet is in English. So, you go online, you're probably going to be reading in English.

You turn on the the radio in your car. Chances are you might hear some songs in English. Whatever country you live in, you could We were just talking about movies. You could go to the movie theater and perhaps you can see a movie in English. So, there it's very accessible. It's a language that's very accessible. And because it's so accessible, I think it it can be a little easier to learn than perhaps other languages. If somebody wanted to learn Swedish, it might be a little more challenging because there's you it might be a little more difficult to get exposure to Swedish than it is for somebody to say, well, I want to get exposure to English. Um, and there's many different choices out there. even learning online. If you wanted, we talked about education. If you want to take some classes in English or if you want to take private lessons with a teacher, there are so many options out there. Um, I'm I'm just taking a guess, but I'm guessing there are probably more English teachers than there are Swedish teachers. Again, you just have a lot more opportunities. And because of that, because of that, that's why I said it might be easier. So, that's my long explanation for easy to learn before many of you start thinking like, "Wait a second, I'm having a tough time learning English." I know it is. It can be challenging, but I just keep stick with it. It's worth it, which is why I'm doing these top 10 reasons. Um, let's see. Number eight is the best. Yes, this was a great I really love this picture. Um number nine cuz somebody before had mentioned um culture and that's what this one is related to. So I thought this was inter interesting again to giving a little bit of a take on water in restaurants. You see in the US um you see those ice cubes France like sparkling water and then China where it's it's hot. Now, I again, I don't fall on any of these categories. I'm from the United States, but I don't drink uh ice water. I'm sure there's probably a lot of other people that don't drink ice water. My choice of water is not up there. I just Yeah, just pour some tap water. Whatever temperature comes out, that's that's what I'll drink and I'm fine with it.

But again, the point that I'm trying to make here with number nine is the you're you're able to learn about different cultures because it is going to open up other realms of like travel for example. We talked about being able to travel somewhere, communicate in English, learn more about other people in in English as you're c talking with them. And you learn about other cultures. And it doesn't have to be through travel. You can also learn about other cultures just from talking to people uh talking to people online. I hope that maybe some of you perhaps you can learn a little bit more about uh culture in the United States from watching my video lessons. That's what I hope. But again, it's partly learning about different cultures. So I think that is another reason which somebody had uh mentioned previously as to why they wanted to learn English. Learning cultures is um a great reason. And then let's see number 10. And I'm going to leave you with this quote um right here. The measure of intelligence is the ability to change. Albert Einstein. To be honest, I have no idea if Albert Einstein actually said this. It's a it's one of those quotes that gets attributed to Albert Einstein. And I feel like there are so many out there. There just so many of these popular quotes and phrases and then you look it up and it'll just say Albert Einstein. I don't know if it's true, but this is one um that I I thought was relevant for number 10 as we're kind of wrapping this up. The measure of intelligence is the ability to change. Because basically what I'm talking about is just you learning more about yourself. because we just talked about number nine, your ability to learn about different cultures and get that experience and the education opportunities. You're you're you're going to be able to learn more that way. And I think just in general, the more you learn, not just about language, but about anything, any topic,

I think you're always going to learn a little bit more about yourself. And that's a good thing. And I think English will help you do this. I think learning other languages will also help you learn more about yourself. I told you that some of these I definitely think are connected as well. Good reasons why you should learn any language in general. I think a lot of them um are are related to that and relevant. So let me again because I I sure uh you probably don't remember some of these. These are again the top 10 if you kind of wanted to look back through them.

Number one, you don't want to feel left out because I told you that there are 1.3 billion billion speakers of English worldwide. That's L1 and L2. Travel. Again, if you travel somewhere, especially outside, travel abroad, there's a good chance you're going to be speaking English in order to communicate. relationships, any type of relationship, friendship, love. Um, that is a good reason to learn English, your work opportunities. I'm sure many of you probably that that might be one of the reasons why you are here, you watch these video lessons, is to try to help with your your work opportunities, education. I mentioned that um your ability to attend different classes whether it's actually you go to a university or even just online classes entertainment so much out there in English TV shows movies uh books you name it there's just a lot more entertainment that you could then access the the language used online 25% I think is what it was uh it's like 25% of the internet is in English I said it's easy to learn. But again, I'm really talking about you can easily get exposure to English. Number nine, learn about different cultures. And then number 10, wrapping it up, learning a little bit more about yourself. So, I hope that um maybe again you can relate to some of these. I saw you guys uh writing some in the chat as to why you are trying to learn English and improve your skills. Um, I I think there are more than just 10 reasons, but ultimately what I hope is that if you can if if you think about some of these reasons and maybe it helps you stay motivated a little bit because I know learning a language, it's uh it can take some time and it's important to stay motivated to continue improving. I love doing these lessons and seeing so many familiar faces each week. It it's it's awesome. Um so many familiar faces like Lai, Rosal, Linda, um Vicki, Gustav, um Sleepwalker, Juliana, Tayo. Uh I really appreciate you guys being here with me. I hope you enjoyed the lesson. I hope you enjoyed my my top 10 reasons. And right now in the chat or in the comments once this gets posted, let me know what what is your primary reason um for learning English. Why do you want to learn English? Uh is it one of these reasons right here or is it some other reason? Let me know in the comments because I just love hearing from you guys. Um I hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend. Thank you. Um, Moaba, Deanjan, um, Rudra, Washington, Rodriguez, Eder, Edair, Angela. Um, thank you guys for joining me today. Trying to give some quick little shoutouts at the end. Also, uh, if you do, I know kind of mention this every now and then. Uh, if you guys like what we do, want to support the channel, links are in the below. If you want to become a member, a patron, uh, you guys can check that out. So enjoy the rest of your weekend. Uh I will be back uh next Saturday for another live lesson. Thank you. Uh Juliana, Nyion, Ahmed uh learning it to get educational opportunities. Perfect. Uh Sebastiano, uh you're welcome. Thanks for joining me. Birdie, uh love for English is insatiable. Awesome. Um Ra Garcia, you're welcome. Thank you guy. Thank you for joining me. Um, tal. All right, I'm going to wrap things up. Uh, thank you guys again. Uh, yeah, that's kind of that's kind of it. Remember, let me know, write to me in the comments what your reason is for learning.

TRAVEL VOCABULARY - Useful words & phrases for your next trip

if you are like me and you plan on traveling in the near future then i want to teach you some useful travel vocabulary that you should know that's coming up [Music] hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel is all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today i want to help you build your vocabulary because i think many of you out there are really you are ready to travel after lockdowns and and not being able to go places visit family and friends i think yes i am ready to get out there i'm ready to travel so that's why i want to teach you some essential travel vocabulary that will help you the next time you're planning a trip and you're getting ready to take a vacation so let's kind of start with that word right there vacation except i i want to teach you a word that's pretty informal and i think it it's kind of a new word over the last few years and that is staycation so this refers to well it's a vacation in which people stay at home or near home and they do not travel to to other places and i think many of us can relate to that you take some time off from work you don't really leave home you could refer to it as a staycation i think lately many of us may have been taking some staycations as punishment for my reckless evening i plan on taking a quarantine style staycation a whole day just to myself so that's a good word to know that i think is becoming more popular because yes often i think people want to take a vacation from work but maybe they don't want to travel for one reason or another and and they might take a staycation at this point i am ready to actually go other places i do not want to take a staycation i'm really i'm feeling really excited i'm feeling a bit adventurous so the next phrase that i want to teach you really kind of has to do with that and that is a sense of adventure you might hear people use this phrase when they're talking to somebody else and telling them about some exciting trip or or even some opportunity and they'd say hey where's where's your sense of adventure so this refers to people kind of getting outside of their daily surroundings and doing something unusual doing something different and sometimes it may even be a little bit dangerous and you refer to a person's sense of adventure next i want to teach you the difference between two words that i think learners might sometimes confuse and really talk about how they're different and that is book and reserve two words that i think are very common when talking about travel and i'm referring to the verbs to book something or to reserve something so let's start with the verb book if you book something you're talking about well you have something for a particular time in the future and when you book something you will likely have to pay for it so in that case we're talking about maybe you book a hotel room or you book a flight or you book some train tickets hey i need you to book me a flight to st louis i need to book passage on your ship to the far outlands when you reserve something you keep something for a particular purpose or time and you you may not have to pay for it when you reserve something so you could reserve a table at a restaurant or maybe you reserve a rental car or even a hotel room yeah which brings us to article 23 subsection c check here to reserve your spot is it possible to reserve a table for 2 at 8 or 8 30 perhaps it's really a difference between well having something when you book it and just keeping it when you reserve it and i i think nowadays these words may overlap because online sometimes you may you may be given the option to pay right at that moment and you might get a discount or you can pay later so in that case uh the words may be used interchangeably depending on what you're talking about camping trip the one you booked for us at owl haven the one you have to reserve a year in advance so i think because of the internet these words will maybe tend to overlap which is another reason why they can be so confusing we can also use these words as nouns a booking or a reservation in my opinion

i think it's more common that you might hear people talking about a reservation than than talking about a booking but as a verb i think people will use both and remember the difference is really between when you book something you have it mostly because you pay for it and when you reserve something it's like you're just keeping it because you haven't paid for it yet then i want to talk to you about these two words right here and show you how they're different and really they're just opposites when you talk about peak and off-peak they're very useful especially if you're getting ready to travel so peak is really referring to well the highest level which means that off-peak refers to well when when something is not at the highest level and you could use this when talking about time like if a restaurant is busy and you could say well these are the peak hours and these you when you go somewhere and you might say that well i really need to pack light for this next trip because i don't want to carry around a bunch of things or maybe you're telling somebody uh about this how much you have brought and you say well right now we're traveling light we don't want to bring a bunch of stuff we're traveling light so pack light travel light you can use them interchangeably these are great phrases leave all that can be spared behind we travel light i've got more luggage to get this one does not pack light i don't know why i brought so much pancake mix how'd you get ready so fast oh i packed like once i got through an entire spring break with nothing but a long t-shirt and a belt and once you pack if you're going to travel a long distance you might be getting on a plane and you might have a flight so i want to talk to you about these two phrases right here a connecting flight or a direct flight so a connecting flight is talking about an arrangement in which you might take two or more flights in order to reach your final destination and in this case you would be getting off of a plane and then probably getting on to a different plane and you would call that a connecting flight you could also use this as a phrasal verb and say that you are going to connect through some place and in that case people would typically say the name of the city like before we get to our final destination we're going to connect through los angeles so when you connect through a place you're gonna say the name of the city but a connecting flight yeah they they can make the trip a lot longer in my opinion it's much better to take a direct flight and when you take a direct flight you're really you're just taking one flight you you leave one place and then you get to your final destination in just one flight it's great it's wonderful but they can be a little more expensive and you may notice that when you go to book the flight and if you travel a long distance by plane it's it's very possible that you might get jet lag which is another useful phrase that you could use if well if you experience this so jet lag is talking about a feeling of tiredness and confusion that a person might get when they travel a long distance by plane and the time is very different from the place that they left and you might hear people use it with verbs like uh somebody has jet lag or maybe you might get jet lag or you are experiencing jet lag and i i think this happens to everyone and typically the result is that you just don't sleep very well for the first few days until you get used to to this time and you just gotta just gotta endure that jet lag oh does the word jet lag mean anything to you people here we go maybe it's the uh the jet lag whenever somebody arrives at the place that they are traveling to their destination i think quite often the first place that somebody would go is to the hotel and in that case i want to teach you a couple of phrasal verbs that are very common when traveling and that is check in and check out so check-in means that you are reporting your arrival at an airport or hotel so when you check in at the airport you might get your boarding pass and check-in in this case may also be used as a noun the check-in we need to go find the check-in and when you check in to a hotel you would report your arrival and they would give you your room key so you can check in at the airport and you can check in at a hotel check out means that you are well you're leaving and you are paying the bill and returning your room key so you would check out of a hotel and with this phrasal verb we do not use it when talking about flying we only use it when talking about a hotel you can check into a hotel and then you would check out of a hotel but if you're talking about a flight you're only going to check in to your flight and when you're traveling especially if you're traveling to another country it's very important that you know the exchange rate and this is talking about the rate at which money in one country can be changed for money in another country you want to know the exchange rate because when you change that money you want to make sure that you're not losing a lot of money in that process and personally i would not recommend changing money on the street many places that you might go to you might find this little kiosk where you can exchange money and that is actually the next word that i want to talk to you about kiosk and kiosk can have uh well a few different meanings i think it can refer to like a small business or small shop that would typically sell items for example you would find them maybe at a mall hey ned i can't hack it anymore you want to buy my side of the kiosk i'll get all the people coming out of sears kiosk can also refer to well a small building or small business in which you are buying something or you're exchanging something through a window so somebody's on the other side and maybe you are buying some concert tickets and you go to a kiosk or like i mentioned at many airports you might find a kiosk where you can exchange money and you do this through that small window it could also refer to a small machine in public places that you could go to to perhaps get information or maybe even buy tickets like train tickets and well finally i want to teach you a this is more of a proverb it's a great expression very common related to traveling and that is when in rome i the full expression is when in rome do as the romans do however most of the time people are just going to shorten it and say when in rome what this means is that when you are visiting another place you are going to follow the customs of

let me know in the comments if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and i'll see you next time

TRICKY GRAMMAR QUIZ | MANY ENGLISH LEARNERS GET CONFUSED

hello and welcome welcome welcome welcome to our grammar quiz lesson I'm so excited how are you guys doing today on this beautiful Saturday I hope you're doing well let's see I'm gonna say hello to everyone hello welcome Lally welcome my web welcome Lake welcome welcome welcome are you ready to practice your grammar because I know I am it's December which means it's the best time to practice grammar of course it's the best time of the year for it so today like you've seen probably in the preview today we are having an amazing lesson we're going to do a grammar quiz a grammar quiz so I hope you have your brains you're thinking helmets on your grammar helmets on and you're ready to begin hello welcome welcome welcome ok so why are we doing this because I want you guys to practice your grammar these questions that I have prepared for you today are difficult and they're easy at the same time meaning that everyone everyone can make these mistakes whether you are advanced or whether you are a beginner because I see this I see this all the time students who are very very advanced and then they make these tiny little mistakes I would just say they're just very very common mistakes for English language learners so let's let's brush up on that grammar let's let's get it let's get it let's get it right ok so if you guys are ready we're going to start I have a few questions this is we're just going to do a quick practice I will show you the questions and then I will show you the answer and tell you why okay so let's begin here is the first question it's a little bit of an easier one and if you are right now in the chat make sure to write your answer down in the chat write the whole word it's good practice if you're writing later if you're watching this later make sure to also write the answer down because we look forward to seeing those answers okay so your first question is sometimes English grammar can be hmm okay what is the answer confused or confusing what do you guys think write it down in the comments okay again make sure to write the whole word please form that habit write the whole word because it's good practice is it confused or is it confusing which one is it oh I see a lot of good answers I see a lot of good answers if you answered confusing you're correct okay why is it confusing you know this like I said it's an easier one but I see so many people make mistakes that I have to I have to address this when we use when we use these ing adjectives we are describing situations or a person's character okay very important situations or a person's character we used eg adjectives to describe emotions like how are you feeling about something if you feel confused you feel confused about something okay so something is confusing to you or you feel confused about something do not get those mixed up because then you could be switching the whole meaning of a sentence for example you don't want to say you're boring when you mean you are bored that's when these become important and all of these mistakes today I will say this some of them are small but they become really significant when they interfere with meaning when they change what you want to say when they don't express what you're trying to communicate that's when it becomes really important okay so let's keep going you guys are rocking this far perfect good job so one other one good call good call good job okay let's see the second one tada okay this one has a very simple rule but if you don't know it you might get it wrong and I see so many advanced students getting this one wrong so here it is I mmm tomorrow oh sorry I am him when he tomorrow okay the verbs are see and come this is in the future it's in the future so make sure you time it accordingly so is it I will see him tomorrow when he will come tomorrow is it I will see him when he comes tomorrow or is it I see him when he comes tomorrow or I see him when he will come tomorrow which one is it okay so I like I said many students get this one wrong even advanced students I've heard this all the time so let's see what you guys are writing I see some we'll see comes calm comes okay so some mixed answers there I most of the answers I think are correct but if you're wondering why I will show you the answer so here it is this is the correct answer I will see him when he comes tomorrow a lot of the answers so a lot of people that I've heard in the past a lot of my students even if they're very very advanced they will say something like I will see him when he will come tomorrow it makes sense kind of because we're respecting the rules that we think are correct right like we're talking about the future so you the future but here's this thing there's a rule in English when we're talking about future time clauses so when we're talking about the future and use these time marker words like when he comes tomorrow or when he gets here or after or before we have these words that is in that time clause we use the present form of the verb it sounds confusing but it's really not just make sure you use the present tense so if you're wrong don't worry this is one of those times when things are going to start sounding wrong like you hear native speakers speak like this and at some point you'd be like hmm I will see him when he will come tomorrow that sounds weird to me and you might not know why but it's because of this rule it's it sounds weird because it's wrong and that's what I wanted to emphasize today with a lot of these grammar rules some of them are super complicated trust your intuition because English is one of those languages that has a lot of exceptions but the exceptions will start resonating with you trust that if it sounds wrong it's probably wrong okay so that is the answer okay so again we'll have things like I'll come home after I finish work or he'll turn off the TV before he leaves the office not before he will leave the office even though both of these events happen in the future you use the present tense with a time clause okay so it's it's it's not difficult it's a simple rule and I actually really suggest studying up on this one because it's a nice rule that English always follows which is not always the case with English so whatever you see rules that don't really have exceptions like follow them because they're hard to find with the English language so just remember to use the present in the time clause when we're talking about the future okay so I know you guys are saying oh it's terrible it's confusing no it's not it's not it will come it will become easier than where you use it I promise I promise see if you got it wrong just keep it in mind okay this is something I need to work on again if you are answering this if you're watching this later write it in the comments because we pay attention okay ready for next lesson here F for next question here it comes did its prepositions because I know everyone gets them wrong so so here it is we do live lessons Saturdays which is today is it in on or at which one is it in on our app which one live lessons in Saturday's life lessons on Saturdays live lessons at Saturdays let's see your answers I see some on on on let's see if you guys are right I don't know I don't know I don't know you guys are right yeah we do live lessons on Saturdays now the reason I put this on here is because it can be tricky for some people I have heard students say like at Saturdays because I think they're thinking of the British at the weekend so if you're thinking of that keep in mind it's it's it's not when we are talking about specific days we use on okay days and dates on if you made a mistake don't worry prepositions are honestly difficult for everyone regardless of how advanced you are because they're so different in every country in every language that we speak so sometimes that we we tend to translate directly from our language and we tend to use that preposition that goes with it and we make mistakes okay so if we make that mistake it's okay just make sure that you correct yourself every time okay just just make sure and then the more you use it the easier it will become okay by the way at is used for precise times so like we say things at 3 p.m. or at 5:00 or whatever precise times and in we use for things like months or years or like long periods so say like in January or like in the 15th century or something like that that's when we use it it is difficult again because we just kind of

have to we tend to translate from are from different languages and that's what gets us but the answer to all of these is more practice so let's go let's go let's do more practice let's see how you guys are doing ok this one it's actually really difficult ok even though you guys might not realize it I'll tell you why in a second San Francisco great city by the way is where mmm Golden Gate Bridge is located beautiful bridge you should go see it is it San Francisco is where Oh Golden Gate Bridge is located is it San Francisco is where the Golden Gate Bridge is located or is it San Francisco is where Golden Gate Bridge is located without an article which one is it okay which one articles are one of my favorites okay so what what is the answer I see a lot of the and some some extent or some extent bag in there let's see if you guys are right and bonus if you know why okay the answer is the following San Francisco is where the Golden Gate Bridge is located and do you know why is the question because when I found this out my mind was blown first of all I did not know that English has so many rules for articles if you ever studied articles and you've studied them in depth especially the article the there are so many different like I feel like they're 18 or something there's so many different ones basically the rule here is that we put the in in front of the names of bridges it might sound crazy but it's true so if you have a bridge we put the in front of it in front of the name of the bridge and that is literally the rule so you know you have the Golden Gate Bridge the Brooklyn Bridge the the I would like to emphasize what I wrote here that there are many arbitrary rules things that don't seem to make sense so it doesn't seem like oh because of this or because of that it's just the rule and you kind of have to memorize it that's really what it is and I wanted to show you some other things just because I find it very fascinating for example when else do we use the this is just another example we have so many more rules but in front of museums so for example we don't say I'm going to visit Louvre Museum I'm going to visit the Louvre will you always put the the Prado Museum which is a fantastic museum by the way in Madrid so you put the in front of museums also you also do it in front of like a monument like the Colosseum or the pyramids like you want to visit the pyramids again makes no sense but there are exceptions to that too so you don't say I want to visit the Stonehenge you say I'll visit Stonehenge or St. Peter's Basilica so again these do require memorization kind of in a way but in a way they will sound weird because to me I could never get myself to say I'm gonna go visit the Stonehenge it just sounds wrong and the more English you expose yourself to whether you are reading articles or you know the newspaper or whatever or listening to the news it will become easier I promise I promise I promise so don't despair don't despair it's just it's just something that you'll become used to but check it out we do have a lot of these rules and we have some some really good ones um by the way for newspapers it's done the New York Times The Washington Post and so on it's crazy crazy crazy English okay so are you guys ready for the next one [Music] okay this one is also a little bit difficult the doctor recommends she hmm some sleep the doctor recommends she some sleep is it get is it get is getting or will get which one is it get get is getting will get what do you guys think again write down your answer in the chat or in the comments she so this one it might be might be different than how you expect it to be it's just what I'm saying so I see a bunch of different answers which is good because I'll explain why the answer is what it is in a second a lot of very different ones here is the answer okay I know this could surprise a lot of people but the correct answer is the doctor recommends she get some sleep why you're wondering why is it not yet you know we've always learned English and we've learned you know when you have he she or it you always put that s right she yet he got he gets like it it make it seems to make sense but we have this thing in English called a subjunctive which is kind of an older formal grammar and we use it in these dependent clauses for kind of very specific things like recommendations or expressing desires or the or resolve and that is when we do not use that s for third person singular okay so the subject is a weird one it's it's right now it's mostly used it's not really used formally that much in American English and British English is not used that much at all its more common in in American English but we do see it quite often with with these kinds of recommendations so or questions like is it necessary that she work all day or something like that it's kind of a tricky one it's just you don't have to use it if you don't want to but it's good to recognize it and see why it is the way it is it's not easy but this is the correct way to say because it's a recommendation in this case the doctor recommends that she get some sleep so it's good to recognize it again like I said it's because it's a little difficult and not very common you don't have to use it yourself but just be able to recognize how it is okay so how are you guys doing so far did you get all of them right how many do you have out of because we've had five questions so far how many did you get out of five let's see let's see let's see let's see well you guys right that answer I'm going to remind you that we are now on patreon and if you don't know what it is you can check it out in the description it's a really cool place where you can support us and and and get some really amazing rewards we do a lot of exclusive content that's on there and it's just for our patreon it's just a nice place to show your support and where we get really really creative so let's see you guys are doing well five fours threes good job good job good job good job okay we're good we're about to get some more so let's see tada okay let's see if you give this one right okay it's actually true for where we are today mmm raining a lot lately is it it's raining a lot lately is it it'll be raining a lot lately or is it it's been raining a lot lately which one let's see how you guys are doing is a B or C it's it'll be or it's been and also if you know why I also like to see some of those answers okay so I see I see some good answers I see it has been it's ill be I see some mixed answers but let's share why okay so the correct answer was it's been okay it's been raining a lot lately this is the present perfect continuous if you're wondering what further perform it is and why is it it's been it's a short form for it has been it has been and we use this again the present perfect is honestly one of the most difficult tenses in English and it is also one of the most common ones so you can't get around it you have to use it and you have to know why we use it the way it we do but the present perfect especially there are continuous we use it for actions that started in the past and that are still happening right now or just finished happening so that means you know the streets are probably still wet it's been raining a lot it's raining now or even if it's not raining the streets are wet because it has been raining a lot with this I would say a quick quick tip for you watch your pronunciation you know you see that bin a lot of a lot of students I hear say they make the e sound like in cheese it's not being it's been it said shortened it sound okay it's not it's been raining a lot it's been raining a lot I hear this mistake all the time I think it's easy to correct so there you go that's my pronunciation tip make sure that you follow it okay how are you guys doing enjoying grammar you should be proud of yourselves even if you haven't gone all of them right because this is how you improve your English you find out things and you practice them so give yourselves a pat on the back for being here and for practicing with us because you are doing amazing and I'm super proud of you very very proud okay here's our next question which one is it okay she stopped to smoke or she stopped smoking okay this one might seem easy but it's not let's see so I see I see a lot of smoking i sees a lot of smoking everyone seems to agree that it is she stopped smoking wow you guys are all in unanimous in this decision almost oh there's a see there there's no see okay I was tricking you I'm so sorry I was tricking you because they are both correct but why are they both correct and this is what it's very important the meaning of what you're trying to say okay so I am sorry again I was trying to tricky she stopped smoking is probably what most of you thought about when when I say she stopped smoking it means that she quit smoking it means that she does not smoke any longer she's done she's like no more cigarettes I am never smoking again but what about

she stopped to smoke why am I saying that that is correct because it has a completely different meaning we do this when we are talking about she stopped doing whatever she's doing maybe walking or whatever in order to smoke so it's like she stopped she took a break and then she smoked so she stopped so this is when it's so important like said that you use these germs and infinitives that we call them correctly because it literally means come to completely different things so in one instance she is not smoking and then the other instance she is smoking so this is why you have to pay attention if you say she stops to smoke but you mean she's she quit smoking you are saying the wrong thing so pay attention right very very very important as you might know there are things that you need to remember with germs and infinitives there are verbs sometimes that take both of them and they're both correct and they mean the same thing like I like studying with interactive English or I like to study with interactive English those mean the same thing but when it comes to stop pay attention because you could be saying the opposite of what you're trying to say very important ok so I hope you got that right I'm sorry that I was trying to trick you I promise for the next one I'm not trying to trick you I'm just trying to teach you so here it goes ok let's see which one you guys get there was up on the table red big plastic hat big red plastic hat plastic big red hat or big plastic red hat which one is it there is only one correct answer this time I promise no more tricks just one one one correct answer let's see which one you guys get to do I'll give you a tip for this one just a quick quick little tip go with whatever sounds sounds good this is when when you have to trust a little bit of your intuition so go with that and if you don't have an intuition about it don't worry it's okay you will develop it I promise over time so I see a lot of again mixed mixed answers so let me explain why you probably have different answers the correct answer was I believe it was B but it said this is what it is there was a big red plastic hat on the table big red plastic hat why is it this way why is it that you know some things that it this is the correct way of actually saying it well because in English adjectives follow a certain order when you have more and the order is kind of like what I marked over there you know first you have opinion then you have size then you have shape then you have age color origin material and then the noun so in this case big which is size comes before the color which comes B wait yeah comes before the color and then that comes before the material and then you have the noun so that's the right order and it is right there's no like is it right another way no no this is the only correct way of mentioning it okay big red plastic hat big red plastic hat on the table so if you didn't get it right don't worry this is something that you can practice just you know you can follow a lot of these exercises and just kind of keep practicing and it will start sounding natural and things will sound off okay very good okay so that was it's again it's not like I said it's not difficult it's just something of a matter of practice that's why I said these can be very difficult or they can be very easy it depends okay ready for the next one it's gonna be different I think this one's easy but maybe it's not you guys tell me what do you think oh yeah I did want to give you more examples for the other ones so we can say like I have here dirty old cotton sock or a small Japanese serving ball or something like that those are just more examples of how you can play with with these and keep keep practicing okay sorry back to the question mmm the keys with you when you come over tomorrow is it bring the keys with you when you come over tomorrow just one one correct answer bring or take bring or take I like that it's mixed everyone has a different opinion it's bring or take it's kind of mixed so I will show you what do you guys think again write it in the comments did you do and do you know why if it sounds if you answer a certain way the correct answer is bring bring the keys with you bring them with you when you come over tomorrow I'm making this motion because when we use bring we use it to show movement toward someone or something so when I when I talk about you coming over tomorrow you are coming to my house which means you it's the motion is towards me right towards somebody or something so you have to that's when you use bring but when you're talking about take that has to do movement away you know away from someone or something so you say take the keys when you leave you know take them with you when you leave but bring them when you come so if you the key words here I'd say would be come because coming has to do with come like come here right not leave so everything that any motion anything that has to do with you or emotion towards you it's bring and things that have to do with away from you it is take again this will become easier as you as you move along I think you guys are doing amazing you guys doing really well so again put yourself on the back even if you got it wrong this is a great opportunity to practice okay tip tip tip tip to exactly take the keys when you leave take them good good good a good example any okay wonderful now we have another one again I'm not trying to be tricky but this is something that people make mistakes with so I wanted to bring it up the sentence is the euro has been used in Europe several years has been used in Europe mmm several years is it since or is it for since or for has been used in Europe hmm several years what do you guys think since therefore again they are they're easily confused because many people learn that you use this at four with a present perfect so everyone kind of uses them and then they end up using them interchangeably but they're not actually used interchangeably so let me show you what I mean if you answered four you are correct the euro has been used in Europe for several years why is it four why why is it not since well because we use four to talk about the duration of time right for a few years but since we use it to mark four point in time so like will say since 2004 or since I was a child a point in time when you talk about one specific point in time you use cents and when you're talking about a duration like we are talking about in this case several years you know three hours five days whatever that's when we use four so keep that in mind there are simple rules but of course there's so many rules in English that it is normal to forget so don't feel bad just keep on practice and keep on practicing and I promise it will get easy things will sound wrong and when they do that's when they probably are wrong so so just just kind of follow that okay so I hope you guys have enjoyed our lesson if you didn't get all of them right don't feel bad this is not supposed to make you feel bad it is just an opportunity to practice that it's literally what it is so hopefully now you'll you know you'll remember that we put this uh in front of bridges and that we talked about you know bring when we're talking about an action towards something it's okay if you don't remember all of them you can always rewatch this lesson it doesn't matter if you got them all wrong maybe next time you'll get more correct it's just an opportunity to practice so I just wanted to thank you for joining us today if you found this lesson useful if you've learned something new please go ahead and give us a thumbs thumbs up like it share it with anyone who you think would find this interesting right so keep on practicing you guys are doing amazing great job today thank you for joining thank you Antonio thank you Giselle thank you Judy long is there not a crumb Thank You Ian for joining us again on this beautiful Saturday you guys have a nice weekend and keep practicing and you will do amazing thank you so much I'll see you next time

TRICKY VERB TENSES Advanced Grammar Quiz

hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel's all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today we're going to be talking about well english grammar i have a verb tense quiz that i want to give you so you can practice your grammar skills and see if you can complete some of the sentences with the correct verb tense so i will give you a moment to think of your answer and then of course i will tell you what the answer is and i will i'll try to help you out a little bit i'm going to give you a hint with each of these questions so this is actually a live lesson that i did a while back i've just shortened it for some of you that means that this may be review which is always good and for others of you if this is new let me know how you did in the comments below let's just go ahead and start the quiz good luck let's just look at our very first question maybe this is a little tricky so i've given you a hint that this is uh well there is a modal in this sentence all right there's a modal in this sentence and i want you to the main verb is no he ought um better the answer is to no so i told you that it's a little tricky because you're not only writing the verb you need to put the preposition to in there so ought is your modal verb many people really consider ought to as the modal and then when you have like a modal verb you're going to follow that with the base verb no the next one right here this is going to be again maybe it's a little tricky we'll see i did say this is more advanced grammar so the plane um your main verb is arrive at 8 pm your clue is scheduled time somebody is saying that oh we got to get to the airport the plane um at 8 pm the reason i said i thought it would be tricky is because i thought many people might say will arrive which you could say but scheduled time it's more common that people are going to use the present simple i'm talking about something in the future but i'm using the present tense because we're talking about something that is scheduled scheduled time how about this one again um your clue unspecified time so how would you complete this sentence i um to china twice in this case unspecified time we're talking about the present perfect tense i have been to china twice you don't know when i'm talking about i didn't tell you the time so in that case it's it's common people are going to use the present perfect tense i have been to china twice here we go and this is true actually uh this is a true sentence for me and my family i'd say last year last year at this time we um a trip to romania your clue is i'm talking about an action at a point in time we're talking about the past continuous last year at this time we were planning a trip to romania and in this case it's the past continuous at this time last year we were planning a trip to romania let's look uh at the next one i um the door in this case i want you to think about the situation and you're saying this sentence like it's a quick and sudden decision we're talking about the future tense something in the future but it's like really the immediate future and if you're talking about a sudden decision i'll get so you're going to use will with quick and sudden decisions something that would happen immediately and i think most of the time in conversation people are going to use the contracted form i will ow i'll get the door i'll answer it so this i'm telling you there's an adverb clause in this sentence and the adverb clause is before my alarm went off the hint is really i think about that adverb clause and that's going to help you determine the the verb tense that main verb which is here before my alarm went off i um allowed boom the answer that i have for you just think about is just heard before my alarm went off i heard a loud boom the reason why i wanted you to focus on the adverb clause is because you have that past right there it'll help tell you that the main verb will also be a simple pass before my alarm went off i heard a loud boom i kind of gave you a hint for uh one that's coming up anyway we will get there i um english for four years and i will continue to do so in the future another key word there is for fo r the preposition not the number so i um english for four years and i will continue to do so in the future we're talking about the present perfect continuous i have been learning english for four years and i will continue to do so in the future let me tell you why it's the present perfect continuous so that first part um that first independent clause i've been learning english for four years something that started in the past it's continued to the present so that really tells you you're going to use the perfect tense but in this case it's better to use the present perfect continuous because the next part is saying that you will continue learning english in the future here's the the situation there's two sentences your key is that there's like just some evidence uh and i don't want to give out i don't want to give too much of it away so think of the situation there's only one minute left in the match our team um win remember how i told you before that sudden uh sudden quick actions like something that happens immediately you're going to use will when there's evidence or even there's a sign that something will come in the future you're going to use going to there's only one minute left in the match our team is going to win this is great let's look at the the next question or the next sentence that i have for you this is an example of the subjunctive technically the subjunctive mood so here's my sentence the doctor recommends that she um some sleep i've done lessons about this before so hopefully you've seen some of the lessons and it makes it much easier to understand you would say she get the doctor recommends that she get some rest did i say sleep in that first no rest sorry maybe i misspoke when i was talking about it the doctor recommends that she get some rest now i will say that this again i'm writing this down so in writing i think it's very common people would use the subjunctive mood especially in the united states because i'm from the us uh that they would use this in the united states now if we're talking about spoken english i think that people will say gets and this is sometimes when the way people speak does not always match the way somebody would write something that is grammatically accepted or correct spoken english can be a bit different here's another one are you guys ready what do you think now many now i talked about this before previously a few minutes ago two past events and now i'm giving you two blanks so think about the situation by the time i um at the restaurant that is actually an adverb clause the main clause everyone um and i want you to use already order and i'm talking about two events that are in the past so the first part by the time i um at the restaurant that is my adverb clause and with the adverb clause you're going to use the simple past the next part it's appropriate especially because you see the word already that should tell you okay the perfect tense and because we're talking about the past then you would use the past perfect let me show you the answer yes by the time i arrived at the restaurant everyone had already eaten this is a good example as to when you would use the past perfect tense so this was just a a quick little grammar quiz that i had for you guys today to help you practice uh verb tenses it wasn't a very long quiz there were just ten questions but it's always good to get that practice and i think it really helps with your overall english fluency i i want to say again if you guys like what we do here at interactive english there are links down in the description if you'd like to join patreon youtube i have some different rewards for you if you want to check that out help support uh what we do here at interactive english but in the future i will have more quiz lessons like this to help you practice your grammar help you practice vocabulary pronunciation i really enjoy doing these lessons and if you guys think they're useful let me know hit that like button

TRY LISTENING FOR KEY DETAILS | Advanced Practice Lesson

hello and welcome today I have a super duper super duper useful lesson for you it's all about listening for details coming up so welcome everyone to our beautiful lesson like I said it's a very very very useful lesson because listening tends to be something that everyone is having trouble with and it's always one of our biggest complaints and we're going to talk about that in a second but for now I wanted to welcome you to our wonderful lesson so in the comments please write down where you what is your name and where you're greeting us from where you are joining us from so please write that down in the comments I'd like to say hello to a few people Bassam welcome Judy a life of happiness XO Deepak John I would Jabar bruh welcome welcome welcome if I didn't say your name its I'm sorry I'll try to say it later lolly welcome welcome so Ezequiel hello and welcome everyone so please don't hesitate to write your your name and where you're from in the comments and today I have a really really useful lesson for you like I said before and the reason why I really like listening lessons is because it's something that I always hear from students students always tell me you know we can maybe we can understand you as a teacher but when I hear conversations between people then I have a really hard time catching the information because it's too fast or the words are blending together and that's it's very important to do listening exercises and that's what we're going to do today so I hope you're ready that your ears are perked and listening because we're about to do some practice so today we are talking about listening for details okay details is a key word here and I want to talk to you about why this of listening practice is important so why why our detail is important why do we care about them why why is this something that we should study so obviously you've heard about details before I am sure of it um because there if you've studied English at any point in your life you've seen this it's in all of the textbooks it's everywhere people saying you know everyone says details are important well why are they important because they truly provide information about the main idea so whatever conversation you're listening whatever context listening context you have you want to have you need that information you're listening to the news they're saying something the details are going to give you the hood why the the how and so on that's where the meat of this is it's it's very very important so those details are really everything and when are we kind of looking for details well sometimes we don't even care about the main idea and we just look for details and in those cases it's very important to just train your ear and know what to listen for what are these details and what am i what do I mean by this is you know for example if you have to make a phone call to find out to a store to find out the opening hours for example you don't even care about anything else they mean like they don't care about the address you don't care you just want to listen for that specific information just for the hours you hear them and then you hang up that's it that's a great example of when details are important there you know everywhere we go we're always looking for specific details and if you care about improving your English and you have to take a test these kinds of questions will always be in you know tests like the IELTS a TOEFL it will show up everywhere so it's really good to kind of get us trained on this so that's what details are now I want to talk to you about content words as well and content words in English if you haven't heard this term it's not as common as details if you haven't heard about content words in English these are words that carry meaning so they are you know your nouns your verbs adjectives but main verbs I mean verbs that show action not helping verbs adjectives adverbs so the words that have meaning those are content words that's what we call them so here I have an example as you guys might know I love cats so I put a hun example of a cat the cat was sleeping on the bed the content words in this example are cat sleeping and bed right nothing else that is those are the words that carry your information that is what gives you why you need to know the message of the sentence those are the content words and why am i bringing up these content words well because the content words will give you these details we you should make sure that you look for content words whenever you listen for a message and also because you need to understand what content words are in order to understand or follow what's being said there is a huge difference for example I showed I have two images here when you listen for a conversation if you just listen for the main idea if somebody's talking you know about a car you could just the the content words make the difference about what kind of car so for example I can be talking about a small red car or a big blue car well those are two very different things and that's where contact content words come into play because that's what you need to listen for so details really make all the difference and they're very very useful they will help you all the time so now because I know you guys want to do a practice we're going to do a bunch we're going to practice quite a lot and what I have in store for you today is I have some listening exercises and I have them written in front of me but I will not show them to you I will just say them so you have to listen and then I have some questions about the details of course and you have to make sure to pay attention now I will see each one twice so if you didn't catch all of the details the first time around you have another chance the second time around but I will not slow down they will not be too easy okay so just try to keep up because I'm going to read at a normal conversation level so that you can really really practice your listening okay so are you guys ready are you ready for the listening there you go okay it's coming up it's coming up okay so now pay attention Jane Austen Jane Austen was born on December 16 1775 she was an English novelist she wrote many books of romantic fiction her works made her one of the most famous and beloved writers in English literature she is one of the great masters of the English novel Austen wrote about typical people in everyday life this gave the English novel its first distinctive distinctively modern character Austen stories are often comic but they also show how women dependent on marriage for social standing and economic security her works are also about moral problems so that was that was my first reading I hope it wasn't too hard I realized I was a little slow so I think I'm gonna read it a little faster this time so I hope you guys got it I'm going to read it one more time okay so pay attention here he goes Jane Austen was born on December 16 1775 she was an English novelist she wrote many books of romantic fiction her works made her one of the most famous and beloved writers in English literature she is one of the great masters of the English novel Austen wrote about typical people in everyday life this gave the English novel its first distinctively modern character Austen stories are often comic but they also show how women depended on marriage for social standing and economic security her works are also about moral problems okay so I hope you're able to catch that I'm going to give you the questions in one second I wanted to ask you something now I just realized these are famous people that I'm talking about please do not cheat do not Google this information okay so it's solely based on what information I gave you okay so based on what I asked you let's see who gets this right when was Jane Austen born okay and try to give me the entire date like I said I'm not trying to make this easy for you this is a this is a good practice it has to be challenging okay so write it in the comments whether you're here now or later okay when was Jane Austen born let's see if you guys are providing oh I see some good answers there let's see if you answered December 16 1775 you are correct and some of you did good job and even if you didn't if you wrote the year that's good too good job good job Junior good job some your good job Judi good job you guys okay ready for my next question boom in what genre of literature the Jane Austen's writings belong this is a little harder so genre of literature means what kind of literature what kind of writing did she do in what genre of literature the Jane Austen's writings belong so what what were what were what was the type of writing that she did that should be the answer and see if you guys get it I see some good answers good job so if you answered romantic fiction you would be correct now some of you may have just said fiction and that is also okay this is the complete answer so it's fiction but it is romantic you can have like dramatic fiction you can have different kinds of fiction so that is correct okay question number three so this is a little bit more free it says right one detail about her writing meaning that you guys can you might have different answers here so whatever you remember if you whatever detail you remember about her writing write it down okay so if you guys I'm gonna give you a little bit of time so it could be a few different things in my examples I answered a few I gave some possible answers so I'm going to show them to you right now basically you could have said you know she her writing were comical you know they were funny at times also you could have written that they show women's hardships because they had to deal with you know showing how women dependent on marriage for their economic status or for their social standing those are all very good details that you could have given about her writings that she wrote about people everyday people that could have been another detail that you've written or that she wrote about moral problems like I said any of these would have been a good answer as long as it is pertinent and part of what I actually said okay so like I said I kept it free because many of us could have different answers but if you are writing any of those than you would be correct okay so how did that go was that difficult was that easy are you like you wanna you have to give me something harder because that I knocked it out of the park what do you guys think I thought it was really easy so I'm ready I'm ready for a new one I'm ready for the next one are you guys okay this is gonna be a little bit tougher but I think you guys are ready okay Oh before I read it to you of keep in mind that we're now on patreon so if you like what we do and if you'd like to support us you can go ahead and go on patreon our link is in the description okay now for real I'm going to show you our next practice okay okay coming up

Florence Nightingale Florence Nightingale was an English nurse she helped create the modern techniques of Nursing she became a leader of the team of nurses who helped wounded soldiers during the Crimean War she was the first female to receive the order of merit the highest honor awarded to a British person as a nurse she was given the name the lady with a lamp because at night she checked on the wounded soldiers and always carried the lamp with her Florence Nightingale was a wonderful woman who fought the odds of not living a life expected by her family there you go so that was that was the first reading maybe it's not long now I just realized it was maybe a little bit shorter so I'm gonna do it again okay so you catch those details one more time Flores 19 Gale was an English nurse she helped create the modern techniques of Nursing she became a leader of the team of nurses who helped wounded soldiers during the Crimean War she was the first female to receive the order of merit the highest honor awarded to a British person as a nurse she was given the name the lady with a lamp because at night she checked on the wounded soldiers and always carried the lamp with her Florence Nightingale was a wonderful woman who fought the odds of not living alive expected by her family okay so I hope you guys caught that try to pay attention to the content where it's okay so things like dates things like like other details like names that I've said a numbers anything maybe if you've caught like I was trying to stress some of those content words hopefully you caught that and here are the questions okay so my first question is why why is Florence Nightingale famous okay so this is obviously a very important question there were a couple of details in the story that I've mentioned that you could mention in your answer okay so it's not just one say it's probably to that you could mention but I will be happy if you just mentioned one and let's see I see some good answers good job okay so here's what you could have answered you could have said first of all she was an English nurse she's probably the most famous nurse in the world I think one of the most famous because she really laid the foundation for modern nursing if you know a little bit about Florence Nightingale she's a very interesting person you should look her up it's just kind of just a fantastic woman so any of those answers could have been fine I I think I think I if you just said like something about the woman with the lamp that's also kind of acceptable but you should it should be something about Nursing I think because that's that's what she did okay so and that's a Content word that I kind of kept saying so that should be in your answer ok now this one I've only mentioned once so I hope you I hope you caught it but I did stress it so hopefully you caught that the question is during what war did she practice okay so what was the war and if there's any history buffs between among you like I'm curious if you guys got this one it's a little bit harder especially if you're not familiar with this war let's see somebody answered it they're close but not quite not quite actually this is the Crimean War okay the Crimean War so if you didn't get the Crimean War correct don't feel too bad because I have more questions coming your way for example who this is another difficult one she was the first female to receive the DA what and here I'm looking for a very specific answer that I mentioned okay very specific answer let's see if you guys get it okay so I'm good answer some of you guys did mention the Crimean War a few of you good job okay so this one might be hard to I quizzed West earlier he got this wrong so sorry to out us okay so if you answered the order of merit you are correct then they did it in points for you if you didn't don't feel too bad because it's not something that we hear a lot about a lot like it's not something that you don't hear about this everyday this kind of prize the order of merit okay so yeah I would say a lot of people probably said like Medal of Honor or like something like that but it is order of merit so if you got it pat yourself on the back good job we are not done with Florence Nightingale my last question is what did she always carry with her and I fully expect all of you to answer because I think this is easy what did she always carry with her let's see if you guys got it I see some good answers there did it the lamp yeah so you guys are correct good job so if you said the lamp it is true yeah it's overwhelming everyone's getting it right you guys are rocking this amazing amazing amazing amazing so how is it going so far are you doing well um like

I said these kinds of exercises are very very useful okay if if you're if you're kind of listening before I do the next practice I do have a question for you and I want to ask you what is your biggest challenge when it comes to listening okay what is it is it when people speak do they speak too fast do they kind of link the words together what is your biggest problem with listening please write it down because I really really want to know I'm always curious so please share okay so I want to we're going to do one more practice right now and and I hope you guys are ready because it's coming it's coming up okay so just like the other ones I'm just going to say it two times and then ask you questions you guys are doing really well on this by the way okay here it goes Mary Curie was born on November 7th 1867

Mary Curie was born on November 7th 1867 she was a Polish and French physicist chemist and feminist her research focused on radioactivity she was the first woman professor at the University of Paris she was the first woman to win a Nobel Prize and the first person to win two Nobel prizes one in physics and one in chemistry together with her husband she created a theory of radioactivity they found different ways to separate radioactive isotopes and discovered two new elements radium and polonium she used her own studies and radioactivity to develop a new treatment for cancer okay so I promise I wasn't trying to read that fast it's just how you would read that article so if you're feeling like oh my gosh this is going so so fast I still think you guys probably are gonna get some of these right again pay attention to those content words okay so here is my first question where was Mary Curie from okay so I didn't I mention dit and hopefully you guys got it it wasn't exactly the country wasn't mentioned but her nationality was mentioned so if you got that I you should have answered Poland or France she was born in Poland but then she moved to France when she was young so a lot of you I see said polish and some of you say Paris so that both of those are correct but really yeah she was from both places Poland and France so hopefully you got that right I see a lot of good answer so good job getting difficult she won two Nobel prizes one in mmm and one in hmm let's see let's see those answers okay so she won two Nobel prizes let's see how you guys are doing with these answers interesting fact if you remember from the reading she was the first person ever to win two Nobel prizes how amazing is that if you answered one in physics and one in chemistry you are a rock star and you should congratulate yourself because you are correct yes exactly physics and chemistry my goodness this is one smart woman right amazing amazing and incredible my next question is sorry that about my image here is why were the two new elements she discovered together with her husband what were the two new elements she discovered together with her husband my image will come back don't worry so what were the two new elements she discovered with her husband let's see some of your answers this one might have been harder a little bit because if you don't know or if you don't work with the specific names then that might be a little bit more more difficult so the answer if you guys got it and you really should be super happy and oh my god so many good answers good job radium and polonium okay I actually don't know much about these elements I'm not a chemist but that seems pretty damn impressive to me so great job Mary Curie great job and great job to our students because you guys did an amazing job I see so many good answers so wonderful wonderful wonderful work well I hope like I said before I hope that you know you keep practicing I asked you before what were some of the main issues that you have with listening I've seen some answers you know about people speaking too fast and that is that is definitely a legitimate concern if you feel like people are speaking too fast I would say that the best thing to do would just just keep training you're listening and you will find out that the more you listen the easier it will be also if you're watching TV a good way to improve your listening would be to turn on English subtitles not subtitles in your own language but English subtitles so when people are speaking really fast you see the text and that will help you catch because people will use contractions when they speak people will use like they'll have pronounce the word sometimes so that will help you catch how people actually say a word and they don't fully say it right so that is my tip for the day I wanted to thank you so much for joining me this this wonderful Saturday Thank You Carlos thank you pirata muhammad Arman John my Javed Bassam Samira thank you thank you jr. thank you so much for for joining us today and I hope you have a wonderful day and if you liked our lesson please share it and don't forget to write questions in the comments either now or later it doesn't matter thank you and have a nice have a nice day

Take This Advanced Vocabulary Quiz | Learn New Words

today I am going to test your knowledge of some advanced English vocabulary words so what's up everyone my name is Wes and in case this is the first time you're here at interactive English we are all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and the way that we are going to do that today is by testing your knowledge of some advanced vocabulary and I am going to give you an advanced vocabulary quiz so I encourage you to participate take the quiz and and really see what you know and hopefully you will learn some new words and that is just going to help you improve your overall Eng English fluency but if you are also out there looking to really improve your English skills and improve your fluency a great way to do that is by finding an English teacher and what I would recommend you do is to check out I talked e and I talked e was kind enough to sponsor today's lesson so if you are not familiar with I talked e it is an online language learning platform where it connects students with teachers from schedule a lesson according to your schedule so whatever time is convenient for you and then in the end you get a one-on-one lesson which is also perfect because that means that you get to work on the goals that that you want to achieve and the things you want to improve for example this last week I've been taking classes on I talked E and I've been learning Romanian I've been studying Romanian that that's the language I'm trying to learn right now and it was really great because I got to work with a couple of different teachers on I talked E we had one-on-one lessons and I got to do the things that I wanted to do we were working on building new vocabulary learning verbs how to conjugate those verbs and then I was trying to make sentences and actually improve my fluency so this is a really great opportunity if you're looking to find a teacher and for all of you guys here at interactive English I talked e is offering $10 free credit after you sign up and purchase your first les so if you purchase your first lesson they will give you $10 credit which you can then use for your second lesson so I will leave a link in the description and I will throw one in the chat right there if you guys are looking to up your game improve your fluency and find an English teacher so let's talk about today's lesson and about building vocabulary especially advanced vocabulary and and why this will be helpful and in helping you improve your overall fluency and and really you know most of you guys out there you are a little more advanced your intermediate to advanced learners so I think many of you are very interested in advanced vocabulary but let's quickly talk about why should you learn advanced words these advanced vocabulary words the first reason is for greater all-around comprehension so think about your receptive skills you're reading you're listening if you know these advanced words and somebody uses them in conversation then you're just going to be able to understand what that person is saying and you're not going to miss a beat you're going to understand everything and your comprehension will be at the at the top level if you know them the more vocabulary you know the greater your comprehension the second benefit is with those productive skills speaking and writing because when you're speaking in writing you are trying to communicate and if you know these advanced words the more vocabulary you know the more that you will be able to express exactly what you want to say because you will have the word that that describes that situation so many times when I've been working with learners over the year years they say like Oh like we're having a conversation and then it's like we hit we hit a point where they can't really express anymore and they say I don't know how to say this in English so the more vocabulary that you learn the less that you will say that the less that you're going to say I don't know how to say this in English so those are two great reasons why you should learn these advanced vocabulary words and just constantly be building your vocabulary it's always a great thing to do so what I hope is that today you guys are going to learn some new words as you practice but before we take the quiz I just want to say what's up to some of you guys who are here with me right now Jean monpod Noelle Ludovic ah Francisco

Anna what's up isso Tao ceci cocea Allah thank you guys so much for being here Lally how's it going seeing so many familiar faces Karl jr. hello hope you guys are having a great day and again as we go through this I want you guys to answer these questions to the best of your ability don't be shy even if you're watching this later on I want you to participate alright try it try to write your answers in the comments so that I know all right are you guys ready here we go all right let's let's take the quiz the first question that I have for you is this one it is a synonym question tell me which is a synonym for the word tradition okay so this this is your advanced vocabulary word right here trepidation which of those is a synonym you can either write the word or just write a B C or D which word has this a

if somebody was anxious about something that may happen and they stayed quiet all right maybe they were afraid that about their language skills all right so they they had some trepidation all right this next one this is a good one and give you an image too we entered the dark house with great fear and trepidation if I I were entering that house - yes I I would I would have trepidation to go inside that house so it's kind of a mix of fear I would also say your little hesitant you're not sure whether you want to do this because of that fear because of that anxiety trepidation the next word the next question that I have for you guys is which of these words means bold and without shame the meaning of this word is bold and without shame okay again these are these are advanced vocabulary words what do you think is it a stout be altruistic see sullen or d brazen what do you guys think which which word which word means bold and without shame okay this is a great word to describe a person describe a situation okay so seeing some great answers in the chat yes Samira Alan McGee Alamgir sorry if i mispronounce names ha fede Konica so if somebody is bold without shame D is the correct answer brazen you could say that person while somebody is brazen or you could use it before the noun as it because this is an adjective to describe something alright so it means bold and without shame for example let's look at some sentences criminals have a brazen disregard for the law they don't care about the law so they have a brazen disregard for the law without shame they don't care about it or for example all right here we're using both words without any trepidation without any fear or anxiety she brazenly told her boss that he was incompetent so again it's not something he would often tell your boss but if you do so she brazenly told her boss again in that case it is an adverb and ly so we can use these words as different parts of speech but brazen is an adjective or you could do something brazenly brazenly so again also if there's other words that you're unsure of because some people have asked like oh why don't you tell us the meaning of all the words that would take a long time plus if you find other words that you don't know I would encourage you look them up just do a google search and you can find the meaning immediately all right so the next question I have for you is this all right I like to use myself as an example and poke fun of myself I'm an easy target so West doesn't like to spend a lot of money he's so hmm so in this case I'm giving you the context and I want you to see okay which word best goes which word best completes that sentence all right West doesn't like to spend a lot of money he so is it a conscientious be spendthrift see a verse or D frugal what do you guys think which word best completes that sentence right there okay so excellent excellent excellent seeing some great answers yes Carl Lentz ash I can perfect Alan Grier Donna lolly perfect so if somebody doesn't like to spend a lot of money and adjectives that we could use to describe them is Dee frugal somebody is frugal it means that you are sparing or economical that's you know in in regard to money or food most of the time I think it's used to talk about money you're talking about the way somebody spends money in this case the hell they don't spend money they are frugal and my good example sentence is just talking about other synonyms there are other synonyms for frugal such as thrifty or cheap okay so again they're these these are words with very similar meanings you could say somebody is cheap say somebody is frugal say somebody is thrifty now one slight difference I feel like if somebody says cheap that that's a little meaner so it's kind of is it's a bit more negative and might make someone feel a little worse if somebody said oh Wes you're so cheap like oh okay I don't feel very good but frugal frugal and thrifty they're also not like you know things that you want to call other people it's not somebody people want to say yes I want to be so frugal but again they're not as harsh as cheap but you could describe a person as being frugal or thrifty and yes it is true I am kind of a frugal person yes I don't go out to expensive restaurants or anything like that or you could say he's so frugal he never buys anything and puts all his money in the bank alright so hopefully these sentences will help put these words in context so that you better understand them okay the next question alright the next question I have for you is this another synonym question what is a synonym for candid okay candid so this word I'll tell you it's an adjective alright you could describe a person and say that they are candid or if we wanted to use it as a noun we could say oh you know I really appreciate your candor I appreciate your candor so what do you think it means candid it's an adjective does it mean a joyful be uptight see displeased or D truthful okay what what do you guys think all right yes excellent all right I see some great answers gurveer isset Oh Samira yes yes yes yes if somebody is candid it just means that they're truthful that they are honest so it is the quality of being honest truthful and straightforward so those are some more great synonyms all of these words candid honest truthful straightforward those are all synonyms that have a very similar so here are some examples the owner was candid about all of the problems with the car and the work that still needs to be done so maybe you're buying a car and the person is honest with you they are candid and say well the car needs this the car also needs this and the car needs this and they tell you what problems exist so they're very candid is a good thing you want to be candid with other people and I want you to be candid with me are you guys are you gonna hit that like button that's my question for you what are you gonna be candid with me hit that like button so again yes I hope you guys are candid and I hope you guys do hit that like button if you enjoy learning new vocabulary words alright so we've had some great words already let's look at the next question let's just keep it going keep it going are you ready the next question is I give you the

policy it affects its neighbors and you say it has a pernicious effect it has a harmful effect I think another great synonym for pernicious is insidious if something is insidious you could also say it is pernicious they have a very similar meaning because you're talking about something something that is harmful but maybe like again it's very subtle you don't maybe you don't realize it immediately all right it's something that happens over time it's pernicious okay so that is a great word great word to no good advanced vocabulary word the next question I have for you is this again put this into context all right some people are so mmm and distrust the sincerity of others so if people are this this this is an adjective all right if we can use this word to describe this person all right then you know they distrust the sincerity of others all right so there are other words you have to know again you kind of need to know what does sincerity mean in order to really understand in order to really comprehend this question so again

I told you that the more vocabulary you learned the better your comprehension so yes I see some great answers yes lolly Prasanth Shelley SHhhh Karl I can perfect this test is difficult yes I want it to be difficult because again these are these are advanced vocabulary words that you know maybe you might come across if you're reading a newspaper article or something that is a bit more advanced so the answer is a cynical and if somebody is cynical it means that they are believing people are motivated by self-interest that people do things in order to only help themselves when you have that belief these you'd be so describe you are cynical whereas a noun a person would be a cynic all right if somebody says oh there's such a cynic they think that others are motivated by their self-interest or distrustful of their sincerity if I say oh I want to do something for you and you don't trust my intentions then maybe you are cynical all right so for example here is I was about to go over here but again no no not over here over here is where the sentences are when you're talking about politics this is often times when you would hear this word when it comes to politics FIFA people often tend to be cynical because you think of politicians and you think well these people don't want to help me they're only looking out for their own interests they only do things that benefit themselves and the people that give them money so people often are cynical about politics they don't trust the sincerity of politicians so often that that's a when talking about politics you might often hear cynical or in this case the employees were cynical when it came to the company's promises and the company makes promises the employees didn't really believe the company because they think oh this company is just looking out for themselves not not the employees and they were cynical all right so again another good word cynical next question another synonym question what is a synonym for impeccable all right again these are this is another adjective ok so again a lot of these words are adjectives which are great because those are words used to describe things describe situations and describe people and like I said you learn these advanced words you will be able to use more precise language and really say what you want to say impeccable so what is a synonym is it a imprecise B unblemished C erroneous or a D squalid all right again if you guys are if you don't know some of these other words again just do a Google search I recommend look up stuff it's you as long as you're learning new vocabulary that's what's important to me that's what I want to hear so all right excellent yes we have di Monza and shalosh Lally yet lotta perfect Connick excellent yes impeccable means be unblemished where is it right here whoops I think did I maybe I mixed up the order that's okay impeccable means without fault or error something is unblemished so for example I did it again over here everyone respects the coach because of his impeccable reputation if talking about somebody's reputation the way that they think of other people and they think all his reputation is impeccable people think really highly of this person okay maybe they are somebody who is honest they're straightforward they're very candid about life and they have an impeccable reputation or for example we could use it when talking about like a job candidate she was an impeccable candidate for the new position so she gives her CV it lists her qualifications and you could say wow she is an impeccable candidate all right they are unblemished without fault or error impeccable alright somebody else like are these adjectives are often used that's a good question and I'd say again it really depends it depends on what your level of English is if you are listening to a movie all right you're going to come across some advanced adjectives throughout a two-hour movie you might hear some of these if you are reading the New York Times or The Washington Post newspaper articles they use more formal language they use more advanced vocabulary words you will you will hear this these words so for example like I said when talking about politics I think it's common to hear somebody say that they're being cynical or somebody is a cynic so it really depends on the context of the conversation but but yes I think it's always good to build your vocabulary again depending on your level these are definitely advanced words so if you have an advanced level of English then then that's good if you can learn some new words today and use them let's look at the next question which is this all right what do you guys think all right I want you to write your answer in the chat or in the comments even if you're watching this later on hmm means obviously offensive or disgraceful all right it's obvious so again there there are words you know you need to know obvious that helps if you know obvious in order to figure out this word so again the more you build your vocabulary the better your overall comprehension what do you think it means obviously offensive or disgraceful is it be a obtrusive be perennial see flagrant or D amiable okay what do you guys think Wow I see I think I might have I think I may have tricked some of you on this one okay um mr. Sam boom magda yes excellent the answer is C flagrant I noticed many of you were putting a obtrusive if something is obtrusive it more it that means something is sticking out okay something is sticking out of it like you know there was an obtrusive like Rock sticking out of the water or something like that you could say obtuse is another word that kind of means offensive but flagrant alright let me give you some good examples it's obviously offensive or disgraceful in basketball if any of you are basketball fans out there I could say this sentence right here the basketball player committed a flagrant foul so if there is an intentional obvious disgraceful foul somebody pushes another player they would get a flagrant foul and maybe get thrown out of the game so if you talking about basketball they call it a flagrant foul that's a that is a again this is a common way that you would definitely hear this word if you are a big basketball fan or you're talking about basketball or look at this sentence right here the teacher exhibited a flagrant abuse of power alright if we're talking about a flagrant abuse of power it is disgraceful it is horrible they are taking advantage of other people all right and yes again I like to use myself to pick on myself as an example so yes you could talk about a flagrant of of power alright is another phrase a collocation you might hear this adjective being used in that context next let's look at it alright years after he went to jail he was mmm for a crime he didn't commit so again put the words in this is I'm giving you the sentence try to put it into context and I want you to choose the most appropriate the most appropriate answer because technically I think somebody could say oh you know maybe you could say this other word but to me I think there's really only one answer alright there's really only one answer years after he went to jail he was hmm for a crime he didn't commit is it a exonerated be discharged see placated or d incarcerated what do you guys think all right seeing some great answers in there yes fabio jr. fara wasa RT mr. Sam Justin perfect so if we're talking about in this context the answer is a exonerated somebody went to jail but they didn't commit the crime so later on they were exonerated and if you were exonerated it means that you are proven innocent you are absolved from blame so like I said in that other sentence they were exonerated they were proven innocent and then they got to leave jail so for example here's another sentence the new evidence exonerated the primary suspect so again depending if you're saying well how common are these words if you're watching a TV show that's about law and order and and police and arresting other people and criminals then this is a word that you might hear you might hear somebody talk about the word it can be used as a verb like I used it in this sentence to exonerate someone as a verb or in the example that I gave you it was a participle adjectives exonerated someone is exonerated this the meaning is the same here's another example politician should be should not be exonerated for their misdeeds so if politicians again many people their cynical when it comes to politics because the politicians are only looking out for themselves and maybe they commit some crimes and they say well they should not be exonerated for those crimes people should be punished all right so again a lot of these I'm trying to use topics that you might hear these words being used for example like cynical or exonerated and and hopefully that'll help you keep an eye out for them if you heard listening or reading about those topics all right the next one and this point is just it's a fun one all right what is a synonym for sesquipedalian and I don't even know honestly I might be mispronouncing this sesquipedalian okay I'll go ahead and tell you this is absolutely not a common word in English all of these other words are our advanced vocabulary words that you will hear not every day but in certain situations precise language this is a word like I said I'm just having a little fun right here all right this is not a word that you probably need to add to your vocabulary it was just a really long word and I found it was like okay I'm gonna throw this in there what is a synonym for sesquipedalian all right just take a guess what do you guys think all right you know and who knows there might be some examples in which you find this word but this of all of these words we've done today this is the least common all right so but I actually I see I see some good answers somebody got it um where is it shall I say yes all right also who else Ahmed perfect all right if we're talking about it in general it means long but specifically it's talking about not just long in length long words okay I didn't throw that on there it was just it was too long all right but it's something that's characterized by long words so look at these example sentence I'd say oh the people of this town tend to have sesquipedalian surnames maybe everybody's last name or surname is very long name and you could say it's sesquipedalian all right characterized by long words all right it's a long word the story was replete with the sesquipedalian dialogue all right people are having dialogue conversation and it's characterized by long words you could say it's sesquipedalian I actually think that other words a bit better replete that is a better word for you to know an advanced vocabulary word it is replete it is full of something it is full of something it is replete with something all right it's full of that's a bonus word for you all right so let's have a look at the words that we talked about today so again trepidation brazen frugal candid pernicious cynical impeccable flagrant exonerate sesquipedalian what I want you to do in the chatter in the comments tell me a word that you learned today are there any new words that you learned today and if so write that just write that word in the comment or write those words in the comments because I love it when I hear from people and they say oh I learned something new today that that just makes my day when I hear that so in the chat or in the comments just write a new word that you learned today besides sesquipedalian all right besides that one some of the other words because of those those are more common all right so again this is a great way to build your vocabulary to practice your vocabulary we are gonna have more quizzes in the future because it is a great way to interact especially with all of you so again I hope you guys keep building your vocabulary the larger your vocabulary the better your overall comprehension all right so hopefully some of these words were new for you today and hopefully you learn some new words exactly I see excellent perfect Fabio learned a new word arti of it Avani Oh learned all of the excellent perfect Hesham so again the idea is that you're probably not going to remember all of these words but over time the next time maybe you come across the word you'll start to remember it the more you see it the more you're likely you are to remember it and then you make it a part of your active memory all right that is the goal so thank you guys so much for being here with me today if you enjoyed this lesson please like and share it hit that like button down below in the comments tell me a new word that you learned today I want to hear from you and as always you guys can follow us up on social media here we are active on Facebook Twitter Instagram and of course here at YouTube so thank you guys so much for joining me today Jean Jean Louise blueberry red brandy Anna Doha Fatima I'm trying to get as many shout outs as possible um Curtis the guy Hameed Camilla thank you thank you it is a Francisco la Lee jr. sorry I'm not sure how to pronounce that name but thank you anyways thank you said thanks arty I like em here thank you guys we will again we're gonna do more quizzes I might make this like a quiz month of live lessons so join us next time we will be back next week for another live lesson I hope you guys have a wonderful day keep practicing and keep up the good work I will see you next time

Take Your SPEAKING FLUENCY to the NEXT LEVEL

let's talk about how you can improve your speaking skills and these these are things that you can start doing today i want you to start doing them now because i think it's really going to help you and if you would like more lessons to help you improve your english skills please subscribe turn on notifications so that i can become your english teacher and that is what interactive english is all about trying to help you achieve english fluency so the very first thing that i want you to do if you're not already doing it is to continue building your vocabulary and try to make a habit out of this that you're going to learn a new word or phrase each and every day because that is the best way to help you be more descriptive and you can talk about the things that you see you can share the way that you feel and when you learn more precise language even if it's an idiom with a specific meaning it's going to help you more easily express yourself and you'll be able to say exactly what you would like to say now the next thing that i want you to do which is kind of following up on that first one of building and and learning new vocabulary is that i want you to continue practicing the vocabulary that you already know keep practicing the words and phrases that you have already learned that you're familiar with and this is something that i think tends to get overlooked because i know there many of you are are focused on trying to continue building your vocabulary which is great but sometimes you may forget to practice the vocabulary that you learned last week and you need to keep practicing these words and phrases because then it'll become a part of your active memory and then over time it'll become part of your long-term memory which is the ultimate goal i also want you to talk about a variety of topics and i think this is a great way to challenge yourself because then in a way it's like you're making yourself learn new vocabulary that may be related to that topic and of course it's great to be able to to talk about your work or where you live conversations that you might have quite often and you can keep practicing that and be able to have that conversation easily but it's also important to vary your conversations discuss different topics whether we're talking about education or stereotypes or even crime because when you do that when you vary your conversations then you'll be ready for anything something else that i want you to do which i think you may not be doing is find fun ways to engage with speaking so having a conversation is just one way to engage with the language and practice speaking but there are other things that you can do as well like you can do role plays you can give a presentation you can have a debate these are ways that you'll be using the language in a different way which is going to help your speaking fluency and it's also and most importantly it's also going to help you build your confidence and that's the next thing that i wanted to lead into which i think is so important when it comes to improving your speaking so much of speaking is related to confidence you want to feel confident that you are pronouncing words and phrases correctly you want to feel confident that you're using grammar in the right way you want to feel confident that you are also using new vocabulary correctly and people can easily understand what you're saying so doing all those things that i just talked about that's going to help you build your confidence you're going to feel a lot more comfortable when you're having a conversation or even doing one of those other speaking activities and you're not really going to worry about making mistakes and i i also think in general when you build your confidence you're going to be presented with more opportunities to speak english and then i want you to practice practice and then practice some more take advantage of every opportunity you get to practice speaking english because well the more you practice the more confidence you're going to have the more you practice the more you'll be using new and old vocabulary the more you practice you'll likely be talking about different topics and having different conversations in short when it comes to speaking just like the saying goes practice makes perfect now i told you that i want you to take advantage of any opportunity to practice speaking english and right now i'd like to share with you a great opportunity to help you practice and improve your speaking skills and that is by joining speak up this is my speaking course which is all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly speak naturally you will also get to speak directly with me because i will be your teacher and right now i have a special end-of-year deal because i'm getting ready to start a six-week mini-course click on the link in the description use the code speak 30 to get a 30 discount off the course so click on that link down below if

Take the CONDITIONALS QUIZ | Advanced Grammar

what's up everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is Interactive English which we're all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills so if you're with us for the first time that is perfect that's what we're all about especially practicing your skills which is what we're going to do today because I have a quiz for you and and I'm going to ask you some questions and you are going to participate and we're going to talk about conditionals it's it's a bit of a conditional quiz so this right here this is a grammar lesson to help you guys practice your skills to improve your skills and this is useful so that the next time that you are having a conversation or that you are writing something you're going to be able to use this grammar correctly because you've practiced it again and again and again so if you are somebody who is interested in improving your grammar skills or if you want to improve your speaking skills basically any of your English skills one thing I would recommend is finding an English teacher and a great place to do that is at itok ii who was kind enough to sponsor today's lesson so if you don't know what I talked he is it's a platform that helps connect teachers and students so it's a great way to find an English teacher if you want to work with a teacher from the US from the UK from Australia you can find teachers of all sorts you can also schedule classes around your schedule so if you don't have time at a certain point you will find a teacher that has availability for whenever you want to teach or for whenever you want to learn and then you get a one-on-one class okay so for you guys right now I talk has a special promotion that if you sign up take your first class they will give you $10 free credit which is great it's a nice little discount on that second lesson that you would take so if you sign up take a class they will give you $10 free credit after purchasing your first lesson so check out the link in the description all right in the description down below if you want to find a teacher and start improving your English skills so today is all about improving your grammar skills especially with conditionals now I am NOT going to go deep into the the grammar of these different conditionals

we're just going to practice writing sentences and practice our skills we've already done some lessons that are all about conditionals and if you are interested in seeing those lessons I'm gonna put a playlist up right there go check out that playlist we go through all of the different conditionals and really show you the grammar and give you a bunch of example sentences so go check that out so what I want to do today is more about practicing but before we get into it I want to give a quick shout out to two people who are with me today let's say hello hello Ahmed Sava Mizpah Robbie Harun Louie Poonam sorry Kennedy just been Joe jokin no again sorry if I'm mispronouncing names alright there's a lot of people here Lally Rob great to see you if I miss some names I will try to get recognized you and shout out your name throughout this lesson because what I want you to do I want you to participate I want you to write sentences I want you to practice using these conditionals and actually that is a benefit because everybody who's watching this and they're seeing this they're gonna be able to see a lot of different examples as to as to how these conditionals are being used so let's just go quick little quick little review all right I told you I'm not going to get too much into the grammar but just some basics okay so what are conditional statements this is when you have a condition and a result so the condition is going to be that if statement the result is just your main Clause so you can see this sentence right down here if you don't pay attention that is the condition if you don't pay attention you won't understand conditionals but if you do pay attention then you will understand because that means your eyes are practicing your language skills and even if you're watching this later I still want you to practice use the comments as though it were a piece of paper and practice practice practice the next part is just let's look at the types of conditionals okay so I've listed five different kinds of conditionals and I've given you an example sentence so I didn't break it down the grammar but I want you to just read the sentences carefully and just kind of take it in and that is a great way reading is a great way to to under absorb the information so that when you need to use it you can use it correctly so the zero conditional if you touch fire you get burned this is just like a general truth we use these conditions just to say things that are true in general and we use the present simple present simple okay that's the zero conditional the first conditional we're talking about a result that happens in the future if I go to the party I'll call you okay if I go to the party I will call you a result in the future the second conditional those are your hypothetical situations okay those are kind of imaginary if I could fly I would travel the world all right can I fly know it's imaginary Beyonce has a great song it's called if I were a boy now this song it's a great song for listening for the second conditional because she talks about all of these things that would happen if she were a boy you can check that out you can look that up on YouTube and find the video it's a great song for for listening for grammar the third conditional okay is unreal and the reason I say it's unreal is because we're talking about a condition that happened in the past it's already happened we cannot change the past so that's why I say well it's unreal you can't change the past if I had gone I would have told you so maybe you're talking about that party that you were supposed to go to well if I had gone to the party I would have told you so in that case did I go to the party no if I had gone alright you're using the past the the past perfect all right and then in the condition would have would have and the pass so again just just read the sentences take it in all right we're gonna practice this and then the final one the mix conditional this this one can be really challenging because you're taking oftentimes you're taking a condition that it happened in the past and then you're talking about a present result as in as this example sentence right here if I had eaten all right I wouldn't be hungry now if I had eaten earlier in the day I didn't eat but if I had eaten then I would not be hungry right now so you're kind of mixing the those two which is why the grammar is a little different and those are tricky but again if we practice practice practice it'll get better so we're gonna start out we're gonna start a little easier and then it's just gonna get a little more difficult as we go through and again I want you guys to to practice write in the comments you guys are already writing some great sentences exactly that's what I want so that everybody can read them and that's just going to help us absorb the information and and that's gonna help us learn so the first part is what I'm going to do is I am going to give you the condition or the result and I just want you to complete the sentence that's all and I will tell you the conditional but I want you to use the picture that I give you try to use the picture so if you're wondering what I mean by this let's just do the first one so for example let's talk let's look at the zero conditional okay this is the one I want you to write a sentence in the zero conditional if you commit a crime what what's the result so I've given you the condition the if statement if you commit a crime okay tell me the result remember to keep it in the zero conditional this is talking about a general truth so I'll give you a moment and then I will show you I will show you my answer okay and if you guys if you're if you're just joining us what we're doing is we are practicing using conditionals and practicing conditional sentences so use that picture all right what do you think excellent Paul alright curious all perfect perfect remember guys I told you guys keep it the zero conditional alright present simple present simple alright so the answer that I was looking for are that you could say again there's different things yes Hui Allison you commit a crime well you could say you are sentence keeping it in the zero conditional you go to jail so a general truth okay if you commit a crime present simple you go to jail present simple now you could use it if you said you will go to jail that's the first conditional it's also correct you can say that but that's a difference between the zero conditional and the first conditional zero conditional you're talking about just a general truth all right something that's true maybe for a person as an individual or just something like science all right you can use those statements all the time if you commit a crime you go to jail now let's look at the first conditional okay so I've tried to make this a little more challenging okay those are the pictures all right you see study test all right I'll fail now the the hint that I'll give you okay I've kind of switched it around because you're talking about a condition and a result they're not always in that order sometimes the result can come before the condition the meaning is the same but you can put the the result before the condition which is what I've done here so I have given you the result I want you to complete the sentence tell me what the condition is and use those pictures all right I'll fail what what what would be that what would be the the condition all right all right so yes we have all right curious all perfect cláudio excellent edison excellent perfect all right said that uh perfect all right so yes we're talking about I'll fail what's the condition if I don't for the test okay so you may have put something a little bit different but that's just fine again we're practicing again that that grammar to the result is going to have the future tense I'll fail the condition present simple I'll fail if I don't study for the test and usually yes that that's that's true statement um let's look at the next one okay the second conditional hypothetical situation okay if you're just maybe you're just thinking something to yourself if I had five dollars okay if I had five dollars what all right write it in the chat if you're watching this later again write your answers in the comments and then at the end just you know hit that comment button so that I know that yes you were participating in the lesson that is the best way to learn is to participate and keep practicing so in this case I've given you the condition if I had five dollars all right the condition is in the past simple all right that that's the that's the simple past all right you can say it either way past simple simple past if I had five dollars what would you do okay remember care to so if I had five dollars I would buy all right you would say remember you're using would plus the base verb all right so Claudio yes I would buy a coffee I would buy a house a house for five dollars wow that's a good deal listen I would buy something all right perfect if I if I would buy a gift for myself Mary good good example all right you guys are rocking it alright so again if we're talking about the second conditional remember I asked you what would you do so if we're tired if I had five dollars I would say I would buy you a coffee I'd buy you a coffee because that's just it's a nice thing to do maybe you don't like coffee I could buy you a tea okay so if I had five dollars all right simple past the result would plus the base verb I would buy you a coffee I would go I would say I would dance so again this is the second conditional now let's look at the third conditional are you ready it in this case again I'm giving you the result first all right I'm giving you the result we would have hit the like button all right we would have hit the like button give me the condition now I'm asking for that if statement and again you you could you might say something a little different it's fine you can have different answers I just want to make sure you guys have an idea as to how you should use these conditionals and then make sure you know the the grammar isn't confusing you too much all right so again you're talking about something that happened in the past all right we can't change the past all right we would have hit the like button what would you say okay what do you think all right give me that if statement so we would have hit the like button if what all right what do you say if my mom watched this video if we had had an interesting session okay yes all right perfect so if you had shared a good clip exactly so that you guys those are good those are good examples all right I would say again I would we would have hit the like button if you had asked us all right so again I didn't ask you I didn't ask you in the past it's already happened so then again think about the grammar the condition if you had asked all right is the past perfect had asked and then the result we have would Plus have plus the past participle would have hit okay so if you haven't hit the like button I am asking you now please go ahead hit that like button if you like practicing your English skills and practicing using conditionals okay now let's do a mixed one and I just realized all right this is this is very similar to that example I okay I don't want to tell you all right we've already we've already kind of talked about this so again if you're just joining us we're practicing using conditionals it's a bit of a conditional quiz this is going to help you get a little more confidence in your skills so this is a mix conditional if I had had breakfast that is the condition I want you to give me a result from the present all right so think about this situation think about your real life and maybe okay you didn't eat breakfast how would you feel all right what what you know what would the result be what what would you say right now well if I had eaten breakfast what okay how could you complete that sentence give me a result it's a mixed conditional because we're kind of taking that conditional the the condition as in the third conditional that past perfect something in the past we can't change it all right what about you know right now all right excellent hurry I wouldn't be so angry okay that's time I'm I'm angry when I'm hungry too Elena I wouldn't be so hungry hangry you could say hungry and angry that amalgamation I wouldn't be hungry yes perfect all right so if I had eaten breakfast again I wouldn't be so hungry right now talking about the I said right now just to emphasize that I'm talking about the present okay this is an example of a mix conditional and a common one that people might say well if I had eaten earlier I wouldn't be so hungry that is a common example okay so what I want to do now all right we're gonna switch it up a little now I have a few more questions for you and this is just going to be a gap fill it's multiple choice I'm going to give you a statement and I want you to complete it with either a B or C okay I'm not gonna tell you the conditional it's just a little gap fill if you're just joining us we're practicing using our conditionals and that's what it's all about so let's look at the first question okay if you can't see it really well because of the picture try to find these nice pictures to kind of go along with these sentences I'll read it so I said if I hmm it was going to rain I would have brought my umbrella okay what what do you think best completes that that conditional statement if I hmm it was going to rain I would have brought my umbrella alright what do you think all right a B or C okay would you put will no had known or would have known what do you think all right so seeing some good answers in there all right so yes curious soul Paul dragged on and B yes thank you guys for answering boom Ron alright so the correct answer is B alright we're talking about the third conditional if I had known it was going to rain alright I would have brought my umbrella third conditional all right excellent the next one this one I think you can see clearly I you to dinner if you help me move all right what do you think what what could best completes that sentence I hmm you to dinner if you help me move would you say would take take or will take and again I'm trying to switch it around between sometimes I'm putting the condition and then the result other times I put the result first and then the condition and just get a feel for it because either way when you're having a conversation you can switch it however you want alright so hmm yes in this case most people yes madam poor Mary Mario Claudio you know who I am wait a second wait a wait so he yes if we're talking about this okay if you help me move alright what it will what will what will happen in the future we're talking about the first conditional all right so the correct answer wait a second the correct answer is C yes I'd want to know make sure that I got the right letter I will take you to dinner if you help me move so somebody might say this to you like hey if you help me move I will take you to dinner all right you will do something a result in the future all right excellent the next one all right let's do another one here we go if you if ok what if I hmm you I join our email list what what uh what would you what would you say alright if I you I join our email list alright this one I just realized I kind of made a little bit of mistake alright we'll see all right I'll give you both parts of it so what do you think would you think it's a B or C if I mmm you I join our email list alright so many of you I think you got it yes Paul Dogon Maria mana poor Patsy Olivia Alice Elise thank you guys excellent you guys are rocking it participation wise so the correct answer is B I put if I were you all right I join our email list it's the second conditional and if you guys are interested in joining an email list boom there's a link right there if you haven't done so already we send you some cool stuff some free resources some email updates just you know keep you involved in our lives the one read the one thing I wanted to talk about this is this is an example of the subjunctive in English because you have that that I all right I were when you're talking about the simple past you'd say like I was happy but in this case when you're talking about the second conditional it is grammatically appropriate to use the subjunctive if I were you alright the same way in the beyond seesaw fiancée song to bring it up again the title of the song if I were a boy alright if I were you will hear people in spoke in English they will say if I was alright so I would say in spoke in English you you might hear both if I were if I was when you're writing writing is more formal so I think if you're writing something I would stick with the subjunctive and use worse so just something if you said a that would say okay you're not really wrong I told you so I would accept both of them so just keep that in mind this is the subjunctive now let's make it even a little more difficult okay whoops wait wait wait no don't look at that don't look at that let me explain it first so now what I want to do is I'm going to give you a situation this is kind of talking about transformations I'm gonna give you a situation I want you to write a conditional sentence using that situation okay I don't want to give you too much of a hint but read the sentence or the sentences and then write a conditional sentence and this is a little more tricky okay so let's look at the first one right now so again I will read it in case your you can't see it very well because of the the colors and the picture so it says I didn't take the bus so I didn't arrive on time okay what is a conditional sentence that you could use that that would mean the same thing that would capture that same meaning this is again people have asked me about transformations and practicing transformations of taking one sentence and using saying it in a different way but having the same meaning so this is a sentence I didn't take the bus so I didn't arrive on time what what's what conditional sentence could I use that kind of means the same thing all right that has the same meaning so I'll give you a hint all right remember think about it like this the condition and the result all right the first part is the condition the first part of this is the condition the second part is the result so again we're talking about something in the past I didn't take the bus so if we're talking about something in the past you can't change the past we're talking about the third conditional all right so somebody said all right monatti Menotti excellent very good all right I okay you could say it patia close Christina yes perfect so again this is the third conditional if we want to say the same thing I didn't take the bus so I didn't arrive on time if I had taken the bus all right past perfect I would have arrived on time so basically like I put the sentence down there so you can reference it I didn't take the bus so I didn't arrive on time if I had taken the bus I would have arrived on time so we can use the third conditional to say - they have that same meaning and it's a little more challenging because you have to think it through a bit more with that grammar if I had taken the bus I would have arrived on time would have plus the past participle would have a ride let's do another one all right so I don't live in New York City because I didn't get the job I don't live in New York City because I didn't get the job what conditional sentence could you write that has the same meaning all right think it through remember how I said typically you'll find like a condition your if statement and then the result but you can mix those over all right you can put the result first and then the condition that's a hint okay so so think about that I don't live in New York City that would kind of be that's your result because I didn't get the job that would be the condition all right so I'm trying to kind of work this out as you're as you're going through this and trying to think of the answer yourself and probably spend a little more time writing it so what do you guys think what what condition can't what what conditional sentence what would mean this same thing I don't live in New York City because I didn't get the job all right close I think this one if I lived in your city I would have got the job close all right little little peon excellent that's nice all right if I had got the job I would live in New York City now one thing I would say if I wanted to be technical about this and say oh it has to be perfect remember in this case in this example what it's over here in this example the result comes first so if we're gonna put the result first I would say the following all right I would live in New York City you're talking about right now I would live there right now if I had gotten the job and I would say again when you're talking about the the past perfect had gotten had got you can use either one either one of those is correct but if you wanted to write this sentence exactly all right you would use this conditional up here the result would come first I would live in New York City if I had gotten the job this is a mixed conditional we're talking about a result talking about the present I would live in New York City and then something that happened in the past which I can't change if I had gotten the job all right so excellent I think I saw some great answers in there that's perfect all right you guys are getting this so let's do another one all right one more good for good practice right now so this is my sentence all right my sentence is all right I'm shy I didn't go over and talk to her okay I'm shy I didn't go over and talk to her what conditional sentence what conditional sentence captures that find it looks a little strange because it's like where I'm about the same I'm about the same size no she's over here I'm about the same size as her in that picture so if I said I'm shy I didn't go over and talk to her what conditional would would capture that okay so again think about a the condition and the result all right what are you going to do and that like I said this this is more challenging these transformations are a bit more challenging because you kind of really have to to think about it in a different way because you know the meaning you understand these sentences they're not very difficult sentences but then when it comes to okay now I need to put it in a conditional sentence and make sure that the grammar is correct as well it becomes an added challenge all right so okay all right so I am shy I didn't go over and talk to her excellent Paul Patrick um Ron are remember okay I little slight mistake so again we're talking about I am shy all right that's the present condition so I would say like if I weren't shy all right I didn't go over and talk to her all right that's my result remember I would have gone over and talked to her so in this one I switched it around all right I know I said it's it's still it's still best to use the subjunctive but I wanted to give you this example because again somebody might say this and they might not use the subjunctive and this is this is how it is in English but I would say again even though I didn't do it here if you're writing I would I would set recommend stick with the subjunctive if I weren't so shy I would have gone over and talked to her but again somebody might just be having a conversation they say wow if I wasn't so shy I would have gone over and talked to her all right if I wasn't so shy that hypothetical all right hypothetical all right I I would have gone over and talked to her that is that that third conditional that result I would have gone past participle I would have gone over and talked to her if I wasn't so shy I would have gone over and talked to her all right so again this is a great way to to practice your skills to practice these conditionals and it's it's a bit more challenging so if you guys enjoyed this lesson I do hope pleased that you hit that like button maybe share this lesson with anybody else that you know who's trying to practice and improve your English because again this is a great way to do it it's just to practice practice and practice even if you don't understand and you find it a little confusing like I said we have that whole playlist of lessons talking about each conditional and we give you the grammar and talk about it in more detail I'm gonna throw it back there in the chat for you alright go check out those Plett that playlist and you can see those different lessons alright so thank you guys so much for watching again like and share we really appreciate it write to us in the comments because we just love hearing from you and of course you can follow us on social media we're active on Facebook Twitter Instagram and

Take vs Have | How to Build Vocabulary with Useful Collocations

Today I want to take some time and have a lesson that will help you build your vocabulary with these two verbs right here. Where'd they go? Welcome to today's lesson which is really going to help you build and improve and enhance your vocabulary skills because I'm going to talk to you about two very very very common English verbs: take and have and talk about some of the words that frequently follow these verbs. And these are called collocations, and collocations really help you expand your vocabulary because you're using words that are frequently used together. And you're not just learning one word, you're learning two words and seeing how they're used in different contexts. And there are all sorts of collocations. You can have an adjective noun collocation. You can have a noun verb collocation, or you can have a verb noun collocation which is what we're going to talk about today because I'm going to talk to you about words that frequently follow the verbs take and have.

Now when you think of these verbs, you might be thinking: "Oh, I know this verb. I know how to use it. I know its meaning." But when these verbs are used with certain nouns, the meaning can change slightly. And that's why it's so important to learn these verbs together with these nouns, because then you'll know how to use them, and when to use them, and be able to use them correctly the next time you're practicing your English skills. So let's start with the verb "take". This is one of the most common verbs in the English language. And when you think of take, you probably think of the meaning of, well: to hold something, to take it. I'm going to take it. But when we use it with certain nouns, the meaning's going to change a little. And I'm going to show you how "take" is used with these nouns in different categories.

because that's going to help you understand how to use it, and you'll be able to relate this verb to a certain category. Because it's used in more ways than one. For example, we often use take when we're talking about transportation or movement because you can say that you are going to take a walk. Or if you're using transportation, you might take a bus, or take a taxi, or you can take a plane. You can also move forward by taking a step in the right direction. We also use take when we're talking about a response to something, or even a plan of action because you can take action. I don't know what... that's taking action, I guess.

You can also take control: take control of a situation. If you want to be the leader, then you can take charge. Take charge of the situation, take command! That's another one: take command! You can also take responsibility for something that has happened and you can take advantage of something or someone. There are many different responses when we're talking about take. We also use take when we're talking about time, because you can say that something takes time. It takes a duration of time and you can be a little more precise and say how much time something takes. It could take minutes. It could also take days. It could take years. And if something goes on, and on, and on, and it feels like it never stops, you could say that it takes an eternity.

And I hope you guys take some time to join our social media classes, because it's a great way to practice! Some other common expressions with take: we can take notes, you can take a photo. We can also take a nap. Who doesn't love taking naps? You can relax and take a break if you're tired of doing something. You can also take someone's advice. Take advice. These are just some of the nouns that we use with the verb take, but there are many many many many other ones out there that you can learn and practice and use and that will help you build your vocabulary.

Next, let's have a look at the verb "have" and talk about some of the nouns that we frequently use with this verb. When you think of have, I think most of us think of possession, something that we actually have. For example, I have a phone. I have a phone. And it's important to note that when have means possession, you cannot use it in the continuous tense. You cannot say: I am having a phone. No! But when have is used with certain nouns, the meaning of the verb changes. It doesn't actually mean possession. And in that case, you may be able to use have in the continuous tense. Over the years, I've had many learners ask me about this, and they say: Well, you told us we can't use have in the continuous tense, but I'm reading this story and they're using it that way.

You can also have a snack; you can have a drink like coffee Mmm. I like having coffee in the morning. Finally, you could have a bite to eat. Something that you're going to eat We can go out and go have a bite somewhere. Have a bite: have something to eat. We use have when we're talking about someone's health because you can have a headache. You can also have an injury, or you could even have the flu. If you're sick: have the flu. I hope nobody out there has the flu right now, because it's been going around this year. We can also use have to talk about problems. ... problems that somebody is having. You can have problems, You can have issues.

You could have trouble with something, or trouble with someone. That's not good. or you can even have an accident. like you broke something. We use have when talking about speaking, because you can have a chat with someone You could have a talk. You could have a conversation. And if you don't agree with somebody, maybe you have an argument with that person. Some other expressions with have: you can have a good time; you can have fun; you can have a relationship you can even have sympathy for someone. Again, there are many many other nouns that we often use with have. These are just some of them. And I recommend going out and learning more of them because this is a great way to build your vocabulary It is now time to practice what we've learned.

So I am going to tell you a sentence and I want you to complete the sentence with either take or have. and I'm not going to show you the sentence, so this is also going to be a little bit of a listening activity as well. and you need to pay close attention. I will say the sentence twice, you will say the answer out loud, and then afterwards I will go over the answer with you. Are you ready? Let's begin! The answer is take. It'll take a few hours for us to get there. Remember, we use take when we're talking about a period of time. Something takes time. Here's the next one Again, I hope that you answered take because this is talking about more of a response.

People who gamble are willing to take a risk. Let's look at another. The answer is having. What are you having for dinner? We use have quite often when talking about food: have dinner. I don't know what I am having for dinner. What are you having for dinner? Well, before you tell me, let's do some more practice. Here's another. The answer to this one is take. We'll take a boat out to the island. We use take when talking about transportation - how are we going from one place to another. We'll take a boat. Are you ready for the next one? Here it is: Have is the answer. We need to have a chat about your work performance.

Have, we are speaking. And this is something I hope that your boss maybe doesn't tell you at some point, because that might not be a good thing. Here's the next question: Right now I have a bad cold. We use have when we're talking about health: have a cold. I hope you guys rocked that practice and got all of those correct And now I want to hear from you. So if you know of any other collocations with take and have, I want you to share with everyone and write those in the comments. Any other nouns that you know of that are often used with take or have - Please write those in the comments.

This will help everyone out there build and expand their vocabulary. And if you enjoyed this lesson, and you learned something new: Don't be shy, please hit that like button down there and let us know. I really appreciate you guys taking your time to watch this lesson, And I hope that you have a wonderful day. I'll see you next time.

The 3rd Conditional EASILY EXPLAINED | English Grammar Lesson

If I had taken my medicine, I would not have felt sick. If I had studied for the test, I would have gotten a good grade. If I had taught a different lesson, then you would have learned something else. And not the 3rd conditional, which is what we're going to talk about coming right up. Welcome to today's lesson which is all about the 3rd conditional. We're going to talk about the 3rd conditional. And we are also going to practice - PRACTICE, PRACTICE, PRACTICE - the 3rd conditional. And I'm going to tell you how to use it, and when to use it, and well...why we use it. Which is where I want to begin.

So, why do we even use the 3rd conditional? Well, we use it to talk about the past. And it is an unreal situation because it did not happen. We cannot change the past, so this is not possible. And we're basically just thinking about some event or situation, and we're imagining how things would have been different. Now remember, when we're talking about conditionals these are "if" statements. And they're made up of two parts, which is a condition and a result. The condition, which is our "if" clause, is going to have a subject and a verb. And in this case, with the 3rd conditional, the condition is talking about the event that we're thinking about in the past.

So for example, I could say... Now look at the grammar here. In this clause, in our "if" statement, we are going to use the past perfect. As I said before, this is an unreal situation because...well...Do I have a car? No. I'm just thinking about this situation. If I had a car... Now, what would be the result if I had a car. I could say...

Now pay attention to the grammar in this clause as well. It also has a subject and a verb, but the grammar that we're going to use is: would + have + the past participle. Now my subject is "I" and the verb is "take," but the past participle of take is "taken." So I would say... That is what I'm imagining would have happened. So when we're using the 3rd conditional, we're going to follow this structure. Did I buy a car? No. Did I take a road trip? No. This is what I would have done if I had bought a car. But...I didn't buy a car, so I didn't take a road trip.

It didn't happen. Let's look at a few more examples. And for these I will give you the condition first and then the result. And please, please, please, please pay close attention to the grammar that were using. So again, this is an unreal situation because well we did feed the squirrels, and they don't look hungry. Again, this is a situation that did not happen because he did not type his essay yesterday. But we didn't see a shark. It didn't happen. And we're just imagining, well...What would have happened?

Now keep in mind the punctuation. If the condition comes before the result then we need a comma to separate the two clauses. But if we switch these, and the result comes before the condition, then there is no comma needed. Let's see some more examples on how the 3rd conditional is used in different situations. Now are you ready for the big moment? Because it is time to practice using the 3rd conditional. So what I want you to do is practice using the 3rd conditional in the comments. And I want you to give us an example from your life. So think about your life. Think about an event in the past that did not happen.

Now think, if it had happened, what would have been the result. So I want you to write us a sentence using the 3rd conditional. And you can use this right here to help you out as a bit of a starting point. And I would also encourage all of you to read each other's comments because that gives you an idea as to how we can use the 3rd conditional. And, you know, help us learn a little bit about each other. So if you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button. And feel free to share this lesson with your friends, classmates, anyone you know who's trying to improve their English grammar skills, especially with the 3rd conditional.

Thanks so much for watching. Don't forget to write to us in the comments. And we will see you next time.

Hello everyone. Welcome to today's lesson. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. If this happens to be your first time here, please let me know. Write to me in the chat or in the comments. Write your name. Tell me where you're from. Very happy to meet new people and hear from new people. And of course, if you want to improve your English, if that's why you're here, please subscribe, turn on notifications, hit that like button. um so that you will learn about future lessons today. Well, actually the very first thing I want to do, I do want to give a few uh hellos to some people who are here. Um great, excellent uh to see so many uh uh members and and patrons and speak up students. Awesome. Thank you guys for being here. Hello Vicki, Gustav, uh Gatrudis, Lai, great to have you guys here with me. and uh to hello speak sleepwalker Rosalinda um thank you guys so much for joining me as we go through uh I'll try to acknowledge some other comments today I I just want to share with you some books that I think are great for learning English and the very first thing that I want to premise this with is that all the books that I'm going to share with you the books that I'm going to talk about it's just my opinion this is my experience experience with these books. Everybody is a different type of learner. Just because maybe I like a book doesn't mean it's probably it may work for you. And if you find a book useful, that may or may not work for somebody else.

So again, this is all just my opinion, my experience with this. Because what I want you to do is as we talk about some of these books, if there is a book that you that's related to the topic that I'm speaking about, if you have a book that you think has been great and very helpful to you, please write that in the comments and I'll try to make a mention of it um so that we can share and learn from each other because of course there are many books out there that I'm unfamiliar with or that I haven't used in the classroom. So again, it's a great way to learn from one another. Now, um so now that we got that out of the way, let's uh let's talk about the first book that uh that I have that I want to talk about. Some of these are also kind of um I think would be kind of relevant for teachers, especially this first book. So other other books are going to be um for like maybe if you're learning on your own if you're learning by yourself but compelling conversations this I would say is a speaking book if there are so if there are any other books out there that you have used to help you improve your speaking or practice speaking throw those down in the chat and I will I will try to look for them and make a mention of it. I told you that this one is one that I've used in the classrooms and all this really is and I said I think it's probably geared more toward uh English teachers is that it's a book of just questions and it takes like there are so many different topics whether it's like restaurants, travel, uh environment and all it is movies, TV and it just has a topic and it just lists probably about 50 questions for each topic. So that's why I said it can be very useful for teachers if you're you're in a classroom and you're trying to think about, okay, this is the topic. What are some questions I could ask the students to have them engage in conversation and talk to each other? This is just a good book to reference that can help you really kind of get the the creative process going about, okay, what are some questions that I can ask about this topic? something on your own, you could uh just try to think about the look at these questions, try to answer them. But I think this book is probably more for teachers in the classroom. The other thing I would say, again, we're talking a lot about books in this lesson. Some of you may prefer to learn using books.

Others of you, again, we're all different learners. Others may just prefer to watch videos on YouTube. Others may take actual um lessons in class and have discussions. Uh and then like I said, many of you might use books to try to improve, to try to practice. It's very common. So, as far as speaking goes, especially if you are an English teacher out there because I I hear from quite a few English teachers in the comments, um this is a good book as far as like thinking of questions to engage students in a variety of conversations, compelling conversations. Um, I haven't seen any the books about the about speaking. So, I'm just going to move on to the next part because I don't I think with speaking there you're probably not going to you're you're not going to find too many books out there. Um I think often because again you think about speaking it's not something that um you may use a book for unless it's for kind of like overall um where you're have a book for like speaking reading um writing this I I guess I put this kind of related to speaking. Um don't be fooled by the title because again don't nobody should feel like they have to speak English like an American. Not at all. This is a book of idioms and that's I think why they chose this because these are idioms that I think are more common in the United States which is why it's titled speak English like an American though. Now I think when it comes to speaking because idioms can be rather informal and I think they're quite common in spoken English. This is a book that has like a bunch of idioms.

But the reason why I like this book is because the way that it teaches the idioms, it's all dialogue. So they they tell you some of the idioms and then they give you this sample like dialogue, some situation between like the mother, the father, the son, the daughter, and it just shows their conversation. So so that they're using the idioms in context. And I think that's so important when you're learning idioms. you're not just learning the meaning, but you're trying to figure out, okay, how to use this in the correct context so that I'm using the idiom correctly. And that's one that's one reason why I like this idiom book in particular is because it really teaches the the idioms through these different dialogues and situations and then at the back of the book, it lists all the idioms and the meaning uh as well. So this I think when it comes to idioms, even though there are so many books out there for for learning idioms, if you guys uh if you guys have an idiom book, write it in the chat, let me know. Um but this is a I think this is a good one um so that you can see how the idioms are used in context. Uh let's see. Lolly says, "Yes, for watching your videos." Thank you, Lai. Uh I'm glad that you enjoy the the lessons on YouTube. Um, so, so Zane Brahim, I just saw um ask saying the English teacher suggestion that Beex books I'm using class. So that's what this lesson is. So um, Zay, I'm maybe mispronouncing it. I just talked about like for speaking, this is a good uh, conversation starter book. If you're talking about idioms, then I I like this book, but again, it I think these are more idioms that would be more common in the United States. So, it's kind of rather isolated in that regard, which again is why it's titled speak English like an American. Um, it's focused more on uh idioms that people would use in the United States. So, just keep keep that in mind. Um, let's see. Um, uh, V or Gustav say, "I talked to my wife in English all day. Live in English uh speaking country." Excellent. Yes, that's always uh that's always a good way. I'm sure you probably Gustav you probably hear quite a few idioms uh that they might even mention in this book being in the United States. Let's look at uh well somebody Jatine asked which book is best for a beginner. Well I'll I'll get into that a little bit. I don't know if this is really a beginner book because I feel like idioms you're kind of getting into more as part of vocabulary. Idioms would be more I think intermediate like advanced and you're trying to learn these different phrases that are kind of unique idioms. So this I would not say is a beginner book right here. But let's move into something which I think is very common. Oh, one last thing. Um when we talk about this uh this is more related to vocabulary and I I again I don't know what your guys opinion would be about this book. This is just from my own personal experience. The the book is 501 English verbs. And the reason why I'm putting this up here is because when I was learning Spanish, I used it was the same book but for Spanish. 51 Spanish verbs. And all all it is is just that's what it is. It's just a book of verbs. and it gives you the the verb and how it's conjugated, examples as to how um people would use it. And for me, it helped with my own like self-study because when I was learning Spanish, I took some classes, but I was also trying to learn it on my own. And this is one that I would use mostly for building vocabulary. And I would I would just read through it, look at the verb, and see how it was conjugated, how they used it. and it really helped me. And the one thing I would say about this is that it's definitely more like wrote learning. And when I say wrote learning, which some people may, it may work for some people, maybe not for others. Wrote learning is more like memorize, memorize, memorize, memorize. Because that's what I would do with this book. I would try to learn a verb and try to memorize how it's used. And over time, I hope I was getting a little more comfortable with it. I think one of the challenges with wrote learning is that when you're just trying to memorize stuff, sometimes it can be easy to forget if you're not able to make some connection with the word or phrase and associate it with something else. But as far as wrote learning goes and you're just trying to memorize and learn new words for vocabulary, I think this can be helpful. And the the other thing that I would say about verbs is that I I think verbs are really like the heart of the sentence because they they tell us the time like when something is happening. It really help they can be very descriptive to help people put a picture in their mind. So, I think verbs, learning verbs, not only different verbs and what they mean, but how you're going to use them um grammatically, I think can be very useful if you're going to use the present tense, the future, the past tense, the perfect tense. So, that's why I put this up here more as a vocabulary book and not as much of a gram as a grammar book. That's again, that's my opinion. And the reason why I threw it up there is because like I said, I used this when I was learning Spanish and yeah, I thought it was uh kind of helpful. Uh let me go back uh check some of the comments. Um yes, exactly. Sleepwalker mentioned, I think when I was talking about the idioms that many different English-speaking countries have their own slang and idioms. That is absolutely true. So, that last book I told you was um I think definitely that's more for idioms in the United States. Um again, Adrienne says, "Yeah, I'd like to learn more books about uh English slang or idioms. Not sure if I'm catching on to these a little late here. This is a book if you're looking for English American slang and idioms." Uh let's see. I'm going to get into some more books uh with uh some grammar specifically. Uh Vick and Gustaf, we have 51 English verbs and 51 journal in digital form.

Awesome. Excellent. Hopefully, I don't know. Let let us know if you if you have found this useful or helpful. Um Lai says, "Rope memory is really important." Uhhuh. Absolutely. I think uh yeah I I think again I think a different a learning approach in which you're like they they talk a lot about an eclectic approach where you're trying to teach um learners using a variety of styles because I think wrote learning can be very effective for some and others they may need more than that um that memorization maybe they need to be like more kinesthetic learning get out of the chair and stuff like that but I think this is a good one um for like memorizing and just learning a bunch of different ones because there's so many different verbs out there. Also, it's just a great way to build your vocabulary. Let let me move on.

So, let's get into some grammar. grammar books I think a lot of them can really be used for self-study because it it'll talk about the grammar and then give you some different exercises so that you can practice on your own and then you can check to see whether or not you you made the correct sentence. So English grammar and use I think is a good one if you're trying to learn English on your own. And I think that's how they've really developed the book. So that that keeping in mind that okay, the person who's going to buy this book is um trying to learn English on their own. They're trying to study grammar on their own. And that's how they've laid it out. So it's very easy to understand like okay introducing the topic. This is the grammar we're going to talk about.

Here are some examples. Here are some activities that we want you to do. So, it's really easy to follow in that regard if you're looking for a grammar book. Uh, I've also said um that I think another great way to learn grammar is just to read and read story books or read articles online. And the more you read, you're learning grammar passively because you're seeing how the correct grammar is used. This again these books right here like this one is more active learning because it's giving you the grammar but then you have to do some exercises or activities um after you learn about it and then you can check the answers. So I think these are u this is a good book for grammar. Let's see what else we got here. Um Adrienne says another book where to learn uh slang than that blue book.

Apart from that blue book, I don't know. That's a good question. Adrian, no, that's the one that I have. That's the one that I used. Um, let's see. How can I find the book? Uh, Zen asked, "How compelling Conversations?" Some of these books, if you just do Google searches, um, online you can find them. I didn't leave any links down in the description, like taking you to an Amazon page or I know everybody shops at different places. Some people would buy books online. Others may you may even go to a bookstore. So, I just wanted to give you these titles that if you wanted to, you could do like for this one, just do a Google search for English grammar in use and you're going to find different options for buying buying this book if you were interested in it. Uh, let's see was I have the Lai has these books. Awesome.

Excellent. That's great. Uh, the next one I have, this is another grammar book. And so, this one I'd say is really good for self-study. This one, I think, is good in the classroom if you're a teacher and you're looking for a grammar book to teach a class of students. You could also use this one on your own as well. This is um understanding and using English grammar. This blue one is for I think this is their advanced grammar. They have two other books, two different versions. I think the red one is for beginner and the gray one is more for intermediate. So, you can find it at different levels. It's written by Betty Azar, who Betty Azar is pretty well known in grammar circles. Um, she's written, I think, a variety of books, but I've really enjoyed using this one in the classroom because it lays out the grammar in different ways. So, it's not just like here's the grammar, here is your writing activity, like cut write it down. It gives um grammar exercises with reading. There's parts for for speaking as well. So that if you're in the classroom with students and say, "Okay, let's uh let's do here's the grammar, but let's practice it speaking." It also has some activities that you can do with that, which I think is wonderful. So it's not just more for like on your own, which would be this one where here's the grammar, here's practice some activities. Um would be like okay, wide ranging. And that's why I said I think this one is good uh for the classroom. Uh Carne uh 282, thank you so much for the the super chat. I really appreciate it. Says, "I've been learning a lot uh grammar for writing recently. I'm curious how accurate are um writers grammatically correct?" Like are you talking about like I guess how often like if these writers are grammatically correct when they're writing like articles? Um, I think honestly I think when whenever you're writing I think grammar mistakes are are fairly common. I I was reading an online article um just yesterday and I noticed a grammar mistake and of course these businesses some of them have editors and sometimes they still make a mistake or I I'm sure some of you may have read a book and even a book that's been published and you might find a slight grammar mistake. So I think it definitely happens. Um, I noticed when I whenever I write something and even the last lesson that I did, somebody had found uh a mistake and I was like, "Yes, good. I I always like look like rewatch the videos or even as I'm writing something, I reread it and still at the end there's still like a mistake. Um, sometimes it is a grammar mistake. It's like they're so hard to avoid. Um, let's see.

Vicky Gustav, his nine-year-old daughter still speaks German uh better than I do. I guess nothing beats a native speaker. Okay. Yes, true. Um, so yeah, this I I told you I've tried to give you two different options with the the grammar as far as like self-study. This would be more like a classroom approach, but you could use this one um on your own as well. Uh, as are any book for writing? Yes, I'm I'm working our way toward writing. So, so far um just to recap, you guys just been joining us, we have this book which I talked about for speaking and questions. This one uh idiom book, but specifically idioms in the United States. Uh this is for like vocabulary, building your vocabulary with a bunch of verbs. This, um grammar, self-study grammar book, more classroom grammar book. And now, well, before writing, this is a reading book. One thing I will say about reading, of course, you're probably thinking like, wait, why do I need a book teaching me about reading when I could just read?

And of course that that's actually what I would recommend that you do is if you want to read find something that you are interested in some topic whether or not it's like fashion or cars or food and then use that read articles about that. That I think is the the best thing that you can do. Um oh Vicki thank you so much awesome for the super chat. I really appreciate it. Um, all right. Yes. Oh, you just found out you came here. Yeah, the super chats. Yeah, it's available. Like, it's not I I'm not really honestly too familiar with how it works. It's not something I've really mentioned or talked about a lot because I'm not sure exactly um what everybody sees on their screen, but I I really appreciate it. Thank you. Uh for reading though, this is a book, What a World.

I've used it in the classrooms and all it is it is it's real stories about things that are going on around the world topics. It could be things that are historical. It could be some that are kind of um related to current events or um like sporting events, uh festivals, traditions, uh places. There are many different things and all it's a very short reading and they then give you some comprehension. There's some vocabulary but then there's also some comprehension questions to see what you understood. So that would be I think the main argument for buying a reading book is because then you're making it an active exercise because you would read something and then you'd have some questions that you need to answer or perhaps there's some like vocabulary from the reading and it wants you to put it in context. So, I think that can be very useful um as far as improving and developing your reading skills in in any way if you're making it a more active exercise because again, if you're just reading something and just learning about it, reading is a passive activity, which I think is wonderful.

But if you're looking for like a reading book that would give you some active uh like discussion qu or questions after um after you read, then I like I like What a world. That's just me. these current events. The next book um is we're talking about pronunciation. I know somebody asked about writing. We're getting to writing. Um even though I think I just have one book mentioned for writing. Uh Wells said is a pronunciation book that I've used in the classroom. I really like the way that this is laid out where it really breaks it down talking about the individual sounds, consonant, vowels, and how to make the sounds. It gives you some examples, words, phrases that you can say. But then it also goes a little deeper into other parts like intonation, emphasis, connected speech, different parts of connected speech. So, this is a great book for the classroom and I think it could also be used uh like on your own as an individual learner if you're looking for some type of pronunciation book. And again, like I said, everybody's different. Many of these resources, like if we're talking about pronunciation, you can do searches online and find different sites talking about um pronunciation of certain sounds that could help be helpful. So, it's not necessary that you buy a book or that you use a book. Everybody's different. Some of you may prefer that, but this I think is a good book uh pronunciation that I've used. Another one which uh I've also liked and I've used in the classroom and it's very similar. I found them to be very similar in the way that they approach pronunciation. And again, they lay it out um with the the individual sounds, some how to how to how the air flows in and out of your mouth, how you how you should position like your your mouth and your tongue.

Clear speech is another good book that gives you all of a lot of that same information and also talks about intonation, emphasis, word stress. Uh they give a lot of information about pronunciation. You really you really get into the weeds on pronunciation. And that is a phrase, if you haven't heard, if you get into the weeds on some topic, it's an informal expression that it's an idiom that means you're getting detailed about some topic. So, these pronunciation books, they really you really get into the weeds when it comes to pronunciation. It dropped. Okay. All right. Sorry if that uh sorry if that kind of dropped and it picked back up. you're doing academic writing for university or whatever. Um it gives you a lot of great information about how you should structure your writing and it could be very helpful. So this is my suggestion for writing. Um if you guys um were wondering about oh what about a writing book somebody had asked about that and then all right this is one other book that I kind of wanted to highlight and talk about it's called um presenting in English and it's about giving presentations. So this one is more related to business English. I know some of you out there are learning English for work um or for a job maybe you you might have to give presentations and that's what this is about like kind of structuring the presentation so it's similar in a way similar to writing because I think you're you're giving a presentation same with academic writing you're going to use more formal language it's going to be more structured so a lot of that can be related so This also is talking about forming the presentation. What are some words that you're going to use to transition from one idea to the next? But then it goes into other details that are more specific about giving a presentation like your your introduction. How to hook the audience. what are you going to say at the very beginning to grab people's attention or what are how are you going to answer questions at the end of the presentation and and what you should do and some strategies about that. So if if you're somebody who has to well you're trying to learn English for work or business and you think you might have to give a presentation this is a good book for that. So, uh, again, these are just books that I have experience with. I'm sure some of you, um, are familiar with these books. Maybe you've used them.

Maybe they've worked for you. Some of them maybe, uh, maybe you didn't have a good experience with them, but again, a lot of this is just uh, opinions. There are so many different books out there to choose from um, when it comes to learning English. So, thank you guys for for joining me. Um, if you Well, yeah, if if you like what we do, there are links down in the comments or down, sorry, down in the comments down in the description if you would like to become a member or um a patron. Check that out. Of course, I saw many of you amazing members and patrons today. Vicki, Gustav, Lai, um, uh, Gatrudis, uh, Takaya, some SpeakUp students as well. Juliana, awesome. Trying to give some last minute shoutouts. Um but yeah, and what I would say is to to wrap things up, um if uh there are some other if there's another book that you would like to recommend that you have found really helpful, please write that in the comments. Uh let other people know. They say sharing is caring because uh a book that has been very useful for you, I think somebody else could get a lot of great use out of it as well. So please leave write a message in the comments talk write a tell me about a book that you have found found very helpful and useful and that's good for me to know as well like as far as learners telling me like oh this is a book that was really useful then that's like a book that I want to find out more about maybe I'm going to go buy it um because I'm always interested in like how these books are teaching English it's always there's so much to learn when it comes not just to learning English but also teaching it as well. Always trying to to get better and better. Um, so thank you guys for being here. Uh, Juliana, Esther, Gatrudis, uh, Vicki Gustav, Sleepwalker, Lai, uh, Anjali, Judith, um, Bird 2K, hello. Um, Raul, Garcia, Kareem, uh, I, Maggie, thank you. I hope, uh, I hope you guys enjoyed the lesson. I hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend. Don't forget to tell me what book uh you have really enjoyed and I will see you next week for another lesson.

The BEST Listening & Speaking Activity | Practice English on Your Own

Today I have a super cool, super amazing listening and speaking practice for you! Now every time I do a lesson, I'm just going to do that. So today I have a really great lesson because I think it's a very very useful activity because it will get you listening and speaking, which is so important. So what I'm going to do today is I'm going to give you a couple stories and you have to listen for the details. So this is how it's going to work: I'm going to read the story to you twice and then in order to help you remember the story I'm going to give you some clues. As you follow the clues, you can remember the story, and I will ask you to pause the video, say this story using the clues, and then, to make this even more fun, and a little bit more embarrassing for Wes, we're going to bring him over here and he is going to do this exercise with you.

So this is kind of a memory/ listening/ detail exercise, but it's also a speaking exercise because you have to speak. It's going to be fun. So Wes is here. I am here to do this activity with you. We brought him so that it's funny. To test my listening skills. Yeah, I mean, it's just funnier than just doing it by ourselves, right? So he's going to do this exercise with you. He's going to listen to this story. I have it right here on my phone, I'll read the story to Wes, and to you guys and then I will ask you to pause the video. And then to try to say this story as you see the clues, and then unpause it to hear Wes.

To see how much I remember. So here's the first story: Okay, there's a lot of numbers in there, all right. Oh yeah one more time, okay. Sorry guys it's also a bit of history. So Okay, I'll say it one more time if you if you can't remember it, okay? Okay, I don't think that was too bad. All right. No the next one's pretty bad. Okay, so I hope you were able to get all those numbers down because now it's time to retell the story that I just said. So, please pause the video right now and use the clues that you see on the screen to retell the story. Try to remember as many details as you can. Okay, so I hope you guys got most of that. Yeah?

I know the years were a little bit tricky. Now let's see how Wes did. Okay, so I'm showing keep the clues. I want to see them before I forget. Okay. So um, so I'm showing him the clues right now if you want I can read it to you one more time. No, no, it's fine. Okay, if I screw up, I screw up. Okay. Um, okay. So the Eiffel Tower was built in Paris, France. It was built from nineteen...not 19... 1887 to 1889 for the World's Fair which is what they were hosting. It is 324 meters tall and it's made of iron. And originally, it was only supposed to be there for 20 years because the people thought it was really ugly and ruined the skyline, but then they decided to keep it and now it's a very famous landmark in Paris.

Is that right? Is that good? It's true, but you added some stuff that wasn't in the story. Why not? Yea, I ad-libbed, give a little more information. What did I add? Well, you added the last part that now it's an important landmark. It's true, but... But it wasn't in the story. Okay, nice. Also, it's the World Fair. the world's. It belongs to all of us the World's Fair. No, it's fine. Okay. Wait, I don't want to look at these other clues. Okay, so I hope you guys got that. Um, I think I think what could have been tricky were the years because there are a lot of numbers. But I hope you got it. Wes did really well. I rocked it.

So are you guys ready for the second story? Are you ready? I think so. Yes. This is the this is the weird one. Yeah a little bit. All right, so the a little strange but go with it. Okay. Snow? It's about snow. All right, I got that. It's very logical. So I mean just trying to remember the the different details. Okay, so you're gonna read it again? Okay, so one more time. Okay. Okay, so now it's time for you to pause the video and use the clues on the screen to help you remember the story.

Now this one's a little bit more difficult, so don't feel bad if you couldn't remember all the details. I hope you guys got most of that right, or all of it. If you did, great job. Now let's see how Wes does. All right. Let's see. Snow. What is snow? Oh gosh, I feel like I forgot now all of a sudden... I see the clues and now it's all okay, so Snow is frozen water. It forms by I kind of forgot the beginning. Wait so snow... it is just no it's like frozen ice and Snow is frozen. All right, it's frozen water. Okay it forms. High up in the sky where it's cold it comes in all shapes and sizes and it becomes Snow becomes water when the temperature goes above zero degrees Celsius. There are many different winter sports that involve snow like skiing and sledding. It's also there's fun stuff that we can do with the snow and build things like a snowman.

If you enjoyed this activity hit that like button, show us some love, and keep practicing, keep speaking, keep listening and your skills will improve greatly. Thanks for watching and I'll see you next time! Let us know if you did better than Wes. I'm very curious. Stupid snow!

The BEST Ways to Greatly Improve Your Fluency in 2021 & Beyond

so if you are thinking that this year 2021 you would like to improve your english and and you just really want to take it to the next level i want to talk to you about five things that i absolutely think you should do if you really want to improve and and reach your fluency goals that's coming up [Music] hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english and the channel in case this is your first time here it's all about just helping you practice and improve your english so that you can reach your fluency goals and in this lesson i want to talk to you about 2021. kind of just more of a statement and then i'll explain to you what i mean and that is make time not excuses this is probably it may sound like one of the easiest things to do but it's probably one of the most difficult things that somebody can do because how often is it it's a new year and we tell ourselves i'm going to do this i'm going to do that and we don't make time for it and when that happens we start making excuses i'm too busy i'm too tired so it's so important that you make some time for your learning and this goes for anything that you want to learn if you want to learn how to play a sport you need to make time for it if you want to improve your skills uh playing an instrument you have to make time for it and once you're able to think about well your day your schedule what time you have available if it's well i'm going to study for 10 minutes each day or perhaps i'm going to study for 30 minutes three days a week it really doesn't matter you just need to set aside some time that you are going to dedicate to learning english and once you do that it's like you're taking the first step because then you can start to think well how am i going to fill that time how am i going to practice english am i going to read a book am i going to watch a youtube video and then you can start thinking about the things you need to do the things you need to work on that is going to help you improve the most if you want to build your vocabulary or learn some new grammar the very first thing you need to do is just make some time and that is the first step that you can take this year to truly improving your skills make time not excuses my next suggestion is to get outside of your comfort zone and i i know this may sound a little strange because i i always tell learners that when you're learning a language or you're studying it's it's always great to be in a comfortable environment you want to feel comfortable and not worry about making mistakes however sometimes i think it's good to really challenge yourself and push yourself a little bit and just get outside of your comfort zone and that might include trying to find maybe a speaking partner people to speak with in your city or town or perhaps go online uh join some group or maybe it might include taking a class but find some way something new to get outside your comfort zone challenge yourself push yourself and i'm not saying that you need to stop everything that you're doing because if if you feel that the way you're learning english works well and it works for you definitely keep doing that i'm saying that you should do this in addition to what you're already doing challenge yourself get outside of your comfort zone push yourself a little bit i think you will find it to be rewarding and it will really test your language abilities it's always good to really test yourself and get outside of your comfort zone and my next suggestion is to know your limitations and what i'm really telling you is just don't overdo it i think if you're really you really want to improve you're working hard you're studying a little bit each and every day that's great but if it gets to be a little too much if you feel uh perhaps you're a little frustrated or you get to a point where well today i just i need to take a break it's okay take a break stop take a deep breath as long as you have made time for your learning and you know what you're supposed to do it's okay to take a break because i think you'll be able to easily pick back up once you're ready once you feel a little better once you feel a little more confident and you're ready to continue if you've made time it's going to be easy to pick right back up where you left off but i would definitely encourage all of you to know your limitations in 2021 and if you need to just just take a break one of my other suggestions that i have for you this year is to use all four language skills try to get a little practice using all four language skills listening speaking reading writing i think it's very important for for just developing your overall english fluency because these language skills they're they're all connected so it's very important to get some practice and try to learn and develop all four language skills instead of just focusing on one so for example think of like well what you're doing right now you're watching a video lesson so you're getting some listening practice i i've been putting some some words and sentences up on the screen so you're able to read and you you could also write a comment down below and practice your writing the only thing that's left is speaking getting a little speaking practice in 2021 and that brings me to my final suggestion if you are somebody who you you want to speak more english that's something you want to do this year then i recommend you check out the interactive english speaking course called speak up this is a 10-week course that is all about just trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak effectively each week there there is a new topic we will get into small groups and do different discussions we'll do different speaking activities we're going to work on your pronunciation help you build your vocabulary a little bit of everything but it's really just all about having you speak and speak as much as possible check out the link down below in the description if you would like to learn more about the schedule about the price that link is down in the description and i truly hope that i will speak to you in 2021 if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and i'll see you next time

The Health Vocab Native Speakers Use Every Day (Advanced Words & Phrases)

Let's build your vocabulary with what I think are very useful, pretty common words and phrases. It is all about health. And if you enjoy building your vocabulary, please subscribe. My name is Wes. The channel is interactive English. It is all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So if you would like very quickly to get the lesson notes, check out the link down below in the description. Join my email community. If you are already a part of it, check your inbox. I have sent them to you. So, for those of you who've been here before, you know, you know the drill. This is a quiz lesson. I want you to participate. If you're new here, I want you to write your answers in the chat, in the comments, because this is all about active learning. I want you to participate in these quizzes. We're going to start out with physical health.

So all of these words, phrases, idioms are in one way or another mostly related to your physical health. What do you think? Professional athletes constantly push themselves to the limit during training. So, I've blanked out two different words in there and I've highlighted part of the expression something themselves to the limit before training the meaning down below to make the maximum possible effort physically. So, if you are physically I almost I almost said it as I was about to try to explain it. You you're talking about that maximum possible effort. What is it that you're doing? And this is not something that just professional athletes do. I think anybody who is very competitive and you really want to win, you want to succeed, you want to finish the race or the competition, you are going to what? What is it that you're going to do? Write your answers in the chat, in the comments, and then of course I'll show you and let you know what the answer is, give you a sentence, talk a little bit about it. So, this is something that [sighs] I think uh let me let me go ahead and show you. Maybe the chat's not updating. We're talking about to push oneself to the limit. If you are going to push yourself to the limit, that is when you are making that maximum effort physically to finish or achieve a goal. And really it is more about your physical health in this case more about competing whether it's running, swimming, tennis, it does not matter and you are going to push yourself through the limit. Excellent. Uh Tayo Manuel great to see you. Um in this case I wouldn't say put through put through but to push push oneself through to the limit. So that example sentence from before. Professional athletes constantly push themselves to the limit during training. Let's look at the next one. This one I I think you all know this. I you know this phrase I'm so this is like this is what I would say. I I guess it depends on the stairs. I'm so that I get out of breath climbing the stairs. This phrase refers to being unfit, lacking stamina, or having poor health due to a lack of exercise. I I need to Yeah, I need to change my ways. So, I'm so that I get out of breath climbing the stairs. This what what phrase is commonly used when you want to talk about someone, whether it's you or someone else, as unfit? If somebody is unfit, typically you're not going to use this. This phrase is much more commonly used. I I would say I wouldn't say, you know, I'm unfit. Instead, I would use this phrase and say, I'm so what. And I'm actually going to give you actually going to give you both phrases.

The one that means unfit, but also fit in this case. So, I'm not seeing a you know, not exhausted, couch potato. No. Out of shape. Yes. Well done, uh, Miranda. So, if you want to say that you are unfit, you don't have STEMA, you there's not a lot of exercise, specifically, this phrase is commonly used to say that you're out of shape. Uh, if you say, "Look, can you are you able to run uh 10 kilometers?" And no, no, I'm kind of right now I'm pretty out of shape. If you're out of shape, you are unfit, you are lacking stamina, it is because of health or lack of exercise. The opposite would say would be to say you're in shape. Well, I'm right now I'm in shape. I feel good. I'm able to run a long distance because I am in shape. But generally, I feel like for the most part, I don't I don't know about you, I feel like a lot of people like me would ref more kind of be closer to out of shape. So, if I go to the doctor and they say, "Do you exercise regularly?" I'd probably be like, "To be honest, I feel like I'm a little out of shape." Right now, I'm a little out of shape. I've given you a couple example sentences. That one's from before. I'm so out of shape, I get out of breath climbing the stairs. or after months of training, she is finally in shape for the marathon. These are opposites. Great phrases to know when talking about your physical health. I just thought this was hilarious, so I wanted to share it with you. They tell me to get in shape. And that is a common collocation when we're talking about uh in shape with that verb get. I need to try I want to try to get in shape. You should get in shape. I'm working hard to get in shape. And of course, the squirrel right here is just going to say, "Look, round that is a shape." And yeah, that that's true.

Recovered, out and about. That's a that's a that's another great phrase. I like it. Well done, Julia. the the phrase that I'm looking for specifically to be physically healthy again in is to be back on your feet. And this is an idiom that you would use again if somebody had you had this injury, you're ill, and basically saying you're back on your feet. It uh it really implies that something was wrong before. You were ill, you were injured, and now everything is okay. Some of these other phrases like you said out and about I think that is good to say that yes you are active specifically this idiom though it it if somebody tells me like yeah now I'm back on my feet I know that previously there was some issue somebody was injured or somebody was ill so that's why I feel like this idiom is pretty pretty precise if you want to capture that sentiment and say I was really hurt before but now now I'm back on my feet or the doctor said, "I'm going to be back on my feet in no time." That is an expression you might hear if you're watching a TV show or movie. You'll be back on your feet in no time. This is again another good little meme that I came across.

Miss two car payments. We'll take that car away and then you will be walking and you will be back on your feet. After a week of uh heavy flu, I'm finally on something. So, on is part of this phrase. I want you to keep that in mind. On what? The meaning is to be recovering from an illness or an injury. And in that case, you know, we're not going to say, "Oh, you're back on your feet." I've already talked about that. In this case, we're going to say, "You are on what." This is one that I think is I I mean, maybe not as commonly used, but I still think it's useful to know, not just for you to try to use actively, but in case you hear it. This is for your listening comprehension. In case you're unfamiliar with this phrase, after a week of heavy flu, I'm finally on what? There are two words missing. To be recovering from an illness or injury in this case, instead of saying if you didn't want to use like back on the feet. Uh yes, excellent. Um Lumilda to be on the mend. We're gonna when you're on the mend, it means that you are recovering from uh an illness or injury. The distinction, if I wanted to give you a slight nuance between back on your feet and be on the mend, we're going to use on the mend with the verb to be. If you say you're back on your feet, then I feel like you are more fully recovered. That you've gotten past the worst part of it and you have recovered.

You are back on your feet. When you say on the mend, I feel like you are still in the recovery process. You're very close to being back on your feet, but you're still recovering. You're still taking it easy. And that is when I would use on the mend as a quick little distinction between on the mend and back on your feet. So, I get hurt and then I'm starting to feel a little better and I tell you that, yeah, I'm on the mend. and then you see me a week later and say, "Well, you're back on your feet." So, both of them have a similar meaning, but uh that would be the a slight little nuance between the two.

What do you think? Sorry if the picture got in the way uh of this. The doctors discovered a m heart defect during a routine screening. Now, there's one word in here that I'm really highlighting, but saying an M heart defect is a collocation with this word. So, the doctors discovered a m heart defect during a routine screening. We're talking about like of a disease or physical abnormality. Uh something that is present from birth. So, that's really what it means, present from birth when referring to either some disease or physical abnormality. The doctors discovered a heart defect during uh routine screening. You again, you might use this. I feel like you're probably more likely to hear it, especially if you watch medical shows that involve doctors, nurses, then you might certainly hear this. It's not a word that I feel like I've used quite often.

I think nowadays, especially as I get older, I think I talk more and more about my health and and telling like telling you that I'm pretty I'm kind of out of shape in the moment. I need to I need to do more. Uh not inborn or inherited, not those words. There's another word that is definitely more advanced in this case. And the word that I'm talking about, I'll go ahead and tell you, is congenital. Congenital means present from birth. doctors discovered a congenital heart defect during a routine screening. Keep this in mind. Like I said, you may actively hear it more, especially if you watch a lot of TV shows, movies that involve doctors. But to give you some examples as to when you might hear it, here are some common collocations with this word. So, a congenital birth defect or a congenital heart defect. You might hear somebody talk about congenital heart disease or a congenital condition, congenital disorder, or a congenital abnormality that it is present from birth. Something to to keep in mind. Well done. Excellent. Uh Manuel Jerks. All right. Some people, you guys got that one. Nice. Well played. It took her nearly a month to fully from the surgery to recover from an illness or exertion. So I don't probably uh [laughter] you could substitute some of these. Oh, it took her nearly a month uh before she was back on her feet. Uh it took her nearly a month and then she was on the mend uh from like recovering from the surgery. But in this context, there's one word. There's one word that's missing very similar to recover.

And I don't know if that helps you or gives you a hint at all as far as trying to come up with the missing word. It took her nearly a month to fully from the surgery. Of course, you could say recover. That works. But there's another word that I think is a little more precise, and we'll talk about why in just a second. I wouldn't say in this case you couldn't use get over because the word from you wouldn't say get over from that would sound awkward. So you could say it took her nearly a month to fully get over instead of get over. So I think often get over is commonly used when talking about an injury. You're going to get over an injury.

In this case I said there's one word missing and we have it. There it is. The word is recuperate. To recuperate means to recover from an illness or uh just this exertion. It took her nearly a month to fully recuperate from a surgery. So I said that the word recover would work just fine. This word is a little more precise. Here is just an example. I like to play around, have a little fun with these Google searches because now you get this AI overview for for everything. Sometimes it's useful, other times I, you know, might slightly disagree, but that's okay. This is all about learning and and kind of navigating this process. So, this case, I was just wanting to highlight what it was saying about the difference between recover and recuperate.

And if you can't if you can't read it, that's okay. I'll give you a summary. Basically, recover is just a much broader term. You are going to use this more often in casual conversation. You could use it in the sentence that I just gave you. took her nearly a month to fully recover from the surgery. That's fine. of healing that would involve resting and taking it easy and then you are trying to recuperate from uh surgery or something else that is causing you issues. So both of them work. recuperate I think is a little more precise because it does really imply that relaxation in order to feel better in order to be at a point where you could say yes I am on the mend and then eventually you will be back on your feet I'm just going to use a lot of these different phrases hopefully again the more I say them the more that I use them you just be able to internalize them and more uh easily remember them so that was all about physical health. Even though sometimes I think there is overlap between some of these words and phrases, that's okay.

Now, I want to specifically look more at mental health and some words and phrases that are directly involved in this because when talking about health, I think those are the two two key aspects. Physical health, mental health. So, the first one, I've tried everything to fix this laptop. I am at my what? This is an idiom. When you are worried, confused, annoyed, you do not know what to do next. And in [clears throat] that case, you're so frustrated, you could say, I'm at my Now, there is there are other idioms that I think would work as well, and I think it does tie into your mental health because we're talking about this worry, frustration, annoyance, and you could use this phrase.

So the phrase that I'm looking for if you want to specifically again at my is part of it and you it means that you are super worried confused annoyed well done Manuel you are I am at my wit's end. If you say I'm at my wits end he's at his wits end she's at her wits end then it just basically means that you're very annoyed you don't know what to do. I I think that is also a key part of it that you don't know what to do. There is some situation, some problem that is so annoying, it's causing you a lot of worry and stress right here and you just don't I don't know what to do next. I'm at my wit's end. There is another idiom that I've taught before in my courses saying that you're at the end of your rope. And if you say you're at the end of your rope, you are frustrated and you have no more patience. And often I feel like if you're dealing with someone else and they are frustrating you and you have no more patience with this person then you say look I'm at the end of my rope. This specifically more refers to that that idea I don't know what to do. I don't know what to do now in this situation. I am at my wits end. So both of them great idiomatic phrases that you can use to talk about that frustration or annoyance. Here's this is the title of a book, but I thought it again relevant just to show you how it's used in context. The title is Laughter for Days when you're at your wits end. And I think it's just like a joke book telling these different jokes to cheer people up whenever you are at your wit's end. The next uh the next question, this I think is common. After 80 well the phrase as well as I think the situation after working 80 hours a week for a month he finally reached what what what did he reach? And that is that's part of the phrase right there the verb reach which is why I tried to highlight it. Maybe you can't see it very well, but the meaning is the moment of greatest strain at which someone can no longer cope with the situation. And in that instance, you can no longer cope. You would tell someone, I have reached what what what could you say? I guess there's a couple in you thinking about the verb reach. Maybe there's a couple of different phrases that you could use.

Uh let's see what you guys come up with. Can you come up with anything? After working 80 hours a week for a month, he finally reached what what did uh what did he reach in this case? So the idea that when you can no longer cope with some situation and there's all this distress and frustration and I definitely think this is all about mental health. You could say reach you reached your limit. That works. That does work. That was the other phrase I was thinking of. But in this case I'm going to give you another one with the verb reach. I wouldn't say reach depression. Um, Elon Musk mindset. No, no, that's not what I was looking for.

This is a word that I'll be honest, it is an advanced word. It's not as commonly used, but again, I like to mix it up with words and phrases that I think are more colloquial, more formal or professional, or just ones that are more advanced just to uh improve your overall comprehension. So, the meaning is to be nervous, irritable, or anxious. And this is I think this is true. If I say lack of sleep, it always makes me it always leaves me feeling and I could say any of these. It leaves me feeling irritable and easily frustrated. It leaves me feeling anxious and easily frustrated. It leaves me feeling nervous and easily frustrated. Now, insomnia is not it's not a feeling. It's not a way you feel. It's more a noun to describe that situation when you cannot sleep than you have insomnia. But in this case, we're talking about you are feeling.

Let me go ahead and show you. Um, wait a second. I am feeling on Okay, I meant to say yes. I I'm feeling leaves me feeling on edge. Actually, there's I apologize. There was another word that's coming up which I guess you could use interchangeably but this is not the this is one this this is another phrase that again you can use in this context when you are irritable, nervous, you are on edge. I do think this is a useful phrase to know and it is more common just colloquial speech to describe how you feel or describing how you think somebody else is feeling if they have that nervous irritable feeling and you could say look you you seem a little on edge or you know I I'd say look sorry I'm just right now I'm a little on edge I've been frustrated at work home all these different things it's coming at me at once I've reached a breaking point.

And yes, right now I am on edge. So, this is a good phrase to know, especially in more of a colloquial uh sense, spoken English, I think you're more likely to come across it, but it is very descriptive. So, good one to keep in mind. Sorry if I I confused you with that other verb or the other word that I was thinking of, which is coming up. Don't worry about it. Uh we'll get there. Many health uh many healthcare workers suffered from severe m during the pandemic. This is a this is a word that I think you know. I'll go ahead and say that even though there are many of you here right now, I will go out on a limb and say that I think the vast majority of you know this word. You've come across it. You probably even use it in casual conversation.

Think about the context when it comes to this sentence. Many health care workers suffered from severe during the pandemic. This is a state of emotional, physical, mental exhaustion caused by excessive and prolonged stress. This is a word that I feel like many of us can relate to and it is tied in with your mental health because it's not a good situation. And I think you need to do something in order to change it. So the word that I'm looking for, excellent. Uh just give some quick shoutouts. Um Natalia Manuel uh FCH Teao, good to see you. Burnout. This extreme, you know, emotional state where you've had so much stress for a period of time and you are experiencing burnout. Or you could use it as a phrasal verb and just say right now I'm just I'm burnt out. I can't keep going like this. I'm burnt out. I'm emotionally exhausted. That is my mental state and I need to make some changes.

It's a very I think uh common and useful association when you think about the pandemic. Healthcare workers suffered severe burnout during the pandemic. Like I said, this is a word that I think we can all relate to. I'll be perfectly honest. I feel like the last month there's been a lot like going on a lot uh you know obviously work keeping me busy home personal like I [laughter] I feel like I and in some ways I am at my wits end but uh in the last month yes I feel like right now I've I've been experiencing this burnout this just emotional I feel drained right now and I'm trying to think of things to do meditation what have you uh going out walks in the morning, tried to cut back on some classes. Lot lot lot going on. But this is something that I feel like, you know, we can all relate to in one way or another. And we experience in our lives we've experienced at one point or another this idea of burnout. So the next one, sorry, that's okay. I'm gonna I'm gonna get by. I appreciate it. Uh appreciate it, Teayo. Uh but this uh you know we all you know life full of up ups and downs. Here is a fun little again little I like to throw in these memes with this candle reading this book how to avoid burnout. If you are able to get the joke I think that does say something about your level of English fluency. If you're able to look at whether it's a meme or a comic and you understand the play on words or whatever it's trying to say, I think that is a sign of a more proficient level of English fluency. So, that's another reason why I like to throw them throw them in there for you.

I'm not sad, but I'm not happy. I feel like I'm just in this job. This is the this is the word that I was talking about before. But the actual phrase was to be on edge sometimes. Yeah. I feel like uh lately again with the whole burnout I would say I feel like I'm on edge sometimes. Sometimes this is a state this feeling of blur. You're not depressed but you're not like thriving either. feel like as I go through this it's like all right it's like I'm looking in the mirror. Uh a sense of stagnation. What do you think? Can you think of a word that accurately, you know, fits this definition? This state of blah. You're not depressed, but you're not really doing great either. You're stagnating.

Everything's kind of just moving right along. And in that case, you could say that you are what? Again, it's not the most common word. Maybe this is new. And like I said, it's always good to get exposure to new words and phrases. So, I haven't seen the answer. Uh, I think probably the closest one. I like the word stuck. I feel like casually, colloquially, that's not the word I'm looking for, but I like it as far as saying like, look, I'm I'm not able to move forward. Um, especially like more emotionally, and you feel stuck. that is very common and useful in just colloquial speech. The word that I was looking for is languishing. So in case this is a new word for you, that's wonderful. But if you are languishing, that is this state of you know bleh.

You're not depressed, you're not doing really well, and you feel like you're you feel you're stuck in this case when you are languishing. So good word to keep in mind especially if like I said this is new new reading listening what have you but when talking about mental health yes perhaps you will come across this word totally new love it love hearing that here is the next one if you your if you m your anger this is what I tend to do I feel like a lot again a lot of people can. It's not just me. I hope it's not just me. If you your anger, it will eventually explode in an unhealthy way. That's true. This is I'll go ahead and tell you this is a phrasal verb that I feel like you I I think you've probably heard it before because it is quite common. We're talking about mental health, specifically when talking about anger. I think a lot of people do this and eventually, yeah, it's gonna you're gonna you're going to reach a breaking point. You're not going to be able to contain it and boom, you're going to be on edge and then at some point it's just going to explode and who knows what will happen then. But the meaning I forgot to even talk about the meaning to repress or hide emotions rather than expressing them. This is something I've been working on. You know, I think we all I think it helps to express how you feel and talk about it with someone. It's always good to release any of that anger or frustration. So, the phrasal verb that I was talking about, which I think yeah, I see many of these correct answers to when when it's when you bottle up your anger or bottle up your emotions, you repress or hide your emotions rather than expressing them. Once again, I feel like whether you think about yourself or you know someone else know someone over right here. Somebody who bottles up their anger and then at some point maybe maybe you see them and they seem a little on edge and then if they keep bottling up their anger, their emotions, then you're going to explode. Here are some common collocations with this phrasal verb. I've mentioned a few of them already. You can bottle up your emotions, bottle up your feelings, bottle up your anger, bottle up your grief, bottle up your sadness. All of this is it is negative. Of course, it has a negative connotation because it's not a good thing to bottle things up.

It's good to talk about them or find some way to get rid of that energy and blow off some steam so that you do not reach a point in which you say look I am just at my wits end and I completely bottled everything up. So here are just again give you a little review. There were 12 words and phrases that I wanted to focus on today uh as for your physical health and mental health. Those are the the two key things and I want you to review them, try to keep them and keep talking about myself right now. I do I mentioned I feel like I'm a little out of shape. I need to change my ways, get out more, be more active because I I want to I before I was telling myself that I should get in that I should get in shape by the summer. I think that's too late. So now I'm just going to try to get in shape by the fall. And hopefully, I think when you're not in shape, you could suffer an injury, especially if you are pushing yourself to the limit and then you get injured and then it's going to take some time to recuperate, but of course eventually you'll be back on your feet. And during that time, if you get injured and you're having to relax, take it easy, sometimes people can, you know, reach a breaking point. It's not good to sit around all day. You might feel like you are languishing in that instance and you might be a little on edge as if you are associating with people. Again, just trying to get a little review as I'm talking about this. If you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, I think some of you said languishing was new, then let me know. Hit that like button. I tells me I should do more of these lessons. I wanted to tackle this topic because I do think it's important.

We talk about it. You you hear it a lot in the news or podcasts, whatever. People are constantly talking about health and they should. And I think we often talk about our health, both physical and mental, and things that we need to do in order to take care of ourselves. So hopefully you can go out and use this vocabulary. Thank you all so much for joining me. Manuel, great to see you. Teao, Julia, uh, English teacher with Fernando. A lot of people, a lot of familiar faces. Love it. Natalya, thank you guys for joining me.

The Many Things We're Thankful For | HAPPY THANKSGIVING

I rely I don't know that's a good question I think it says we're live what's up guys thank you guys for joining us today we see some people in the chat let me kind of get this going right here so today if you guys bear with me for one second all right welcome welcome welcome I just want to say let's say hello to some people who have joined us okay so we're gonna go through these quickly hi lolly sonars Basu knew she honestly junior hello hello hello thank you guys for joining us on this Saturday today what we're going to do is because last Thursday was Thanksgiving so in the United States they celebrate Thanksgiving on the fourth Thursday I know some countries celebrated of November yes they celebrate it at a different time but in the u.s. it was this last Thursday so we thought that in recognition of Thanksgiving one thing that people do is that they'll kind of say the things that they're thankful for things that are happening in life that they appreciate and we kind of wanted to do that as well and share that with you guys so I mean obviously it's always good to be grateful yeah it's always good to remember that you're grateful sometimes you know we get bogged down with the heaviness of life and and things get crazy and we forget to be thankful for the things we have and I think this is a good reminder it's agreeing that back it's a good point to reflect and kind of think about everything that's going on in your life and especially the good thing so that you can kind of appreciate it and acknowledge those things so we made our list of things that we're thankful for and we want to share that with you and in the comments if you guys are joining us in the chat let us know like what are some things that you are thankful for in your life right now I know we've asked that before on a couple posts we've made but share with us and if you're watching this later again write it in the comments we love hearing from you guys let us know what are some things that you're thankful for so today's lessons more of a listening it's kind of a cultural lesson but also a bit of listening practice so you're just gonna listen to us having a natural discussion about this and if we come across any words or phrases that we think are yea difficult or useful maybe some idioms we'll try to let you guys know so if you're just joining us again hello today welcome we're talking about different things that we're thankful for so so we have prepared a list of things we are thankful for and we have not shown it to each other mm-hmm so we are going to see if we wrote some of the same things or not are completely different but yeah so we're kind of gonna go one and the other okay yeah we'll read some of your guys comments as well I see a few people commenting already about things that they're thankful for it's it's good so sorry I'm like leaning because I'm trying to read it to read you're reading comments at the same time yeah so usually and you know there's an expression ladies first so what do you have what's the first thing on your list and these are not by importance either they are just no they're not in a specific order but mine actually is this one is probably the most important one for me if you guys you probably know by now I am pregnant almost eight months pregnant at this point getting close so the thing that I'm most thankful for this year is my little baby girl that's in my tummy that's me too that was my number one yeah I said our daughter yeah our baby girl so you guys will get to maybe meet her next year so mm-hmm early June so yeah that was my number one - oh my god for them anyway yes January yeah so yeah that was my number one - or that was the first thing I thought of like thankful for our daughter and family so let's see some of your guys Lucia is so thankful for my family boyfriend and friends yeah I think that's probably the most common thing that I think people talk about in our hearts we just mentioned our daughter family friends is something that we want to be thankful for some mothers I'm thankful for many things all right good good good it's good to be thankful what are we drinking what am i drinking Oh me I think so thank you my giant shiny tee I'm thankful for tea too but that's not on my list is what's the due day it's the the third week in January January I mean there's no it keeps switching but changes a little bit at the end of January yes yeah so yeah it guys just keep writing make an ongoing list things that you're thankful for just let me as we speak you'll get ideas for other things that you're thankful for because sometimes it works like that when you hear somebody oh yeah I'm also thankful for that you know so yeah nalli wrote I'm thankful to be learning English with you guys thank you thank you we're thankful for for having you yeah so that's actually something useful again I think people tend to make mistakes with prepositions those tiny little words that get in the way of everything when you talk about things you're thankful for you always use it with the preposition for you're thankful for something so you guys are writing in the chat you can tell us you are thankful for whatever it is so I mean I'll read my okay because we are having our new baby girl right now our apartment is pretty small oh it's like small so whatever you see right now this is the whole apartment no it's very small like you make toast if we're done anyway we've been running around like crazy which is kind of an expression that people use when you're just super super busy we've been running around like crazy trying to find a new apartment and we finally locked one down and we now have a new apartment which we will be moving into the beginning of December so in like two weeks we're going to be transitioning into our new place and we will try to show you guys and maybe maybe you can join this process of moving which I'm not looking forward to but I am thankful that we have a new apartment and that is one less thing to have to worry about at this point so yeah yeah we're definitely thankful that because we have so many things in our list now I'm just so happy when we cross those things off check-in those boxes so getting closer to new apartment and check mmm yeah what else we got here is one life that's a good one yeah for life yeah it's good good time to be alive yeah for now I'm thankful for Game of Thrones yes the new seasons coming out it's coming out I thought it was 2019 maybe either way we're thankful for that as well sure what else we got thankful for being able to understand you thank you yeah this is something that people have talked about because when listening is such a challenge because we've done some videos on this I think when people are trying to practice their listening skills you only have like movies and TV and it's all going at the same speed which is if you're listening to native English speakers who are using slang expressions and idioms it just goes fast that's the only speed and I think because we're teachers were kind of used to speaking a little slower especially when we teach like beginner level classes and because of that now my cadence is very slow and even when I go back to the u.s. my family and friends tell me that like why are you why are you speaking so slowly that's the way I talk now do you want to share what else do you have okay so my next thing it's kind of tight in I think my first three things are connected it's it's family and I'll and I'll say what I mean I think this year with being pregnant and everything we we don't live close to family we're just our selves just the two of us here and our families all over the world and I'm just thankful that we've you know I think we've gotten closer to our family we've managed to see a lot of people by choice and a little bit earlier do some unfortunate circumstances but we've seen a lot of of our family and we were able to visit them and spend time with them and it's just so nice to be able because life is so short to have that time with your family yeah even when you're away yeah this even next month my family's gonna be my parents are coming out here sister so we're gonna see family around new years and that's gonna be great but but yeah it's really nice to be able to close to family what's what's weird well no clothes and that we were communicating more and the thing that I was gonna say is weird is that I feel like I don't know for you I feel like with my family we talk more now that were further away than when we lived in the United States yeah but in the same place though it's also different cuz such a big country mm-hmm that's I saw something somebody was writing up here yes my mother will bring family friends a smell of coffee that's such a good there's a chocolate nature rainbow such good things to be thankful yeah again it's a good time to like reflect and and you think about especially since there's a lot of you turn on the TV there's so much negativity there's so much like almost news is bad news so it's good like these moments too like oh let's let's acknowledge and talk about some of the good things mm-hmm I'm thankful for my mr. Wilson thankful for my family my health my job excellent thankful for your English lessons thank you so much thank you for English doesn't have more than 10,000 phrasal verbs yes there are many many many many many phrasal verbs and we will do more phrasal verb lessons in the future to try and help you guys out so okay my next one I am I think we both we're thankful for basically all of you guys we're thankful for all of your your support all of your comments for sharing with us for for being a part of our lives and helping us create this English learning community that we've been working so hard is that on yours too so yeah we want to thank all of you guys for for being here for learning English with us for practicing with us it's really useful and I want to give a special quick little shout out special thank you to some of our patrons out there who really are making helping make all this possible again we'll leave a link in the description you can check us out on patreon but it really goes a long way and helping us kind of build and grow this channel and put all these lessons together for you guys so you can go check that out if you are interested what about do you have another one yeah okay so this one's a little cheesy but if we're talking about being grateful I'm gonna share it okay I put wet so you guys if you don't know was if our rock which I'll take that's a you know that's a good compliment because somebody steady strong if you describe somebody as a rock I think of myself I would describe myself more as Anil I'm very I'm very organized very meticulous of like okay what do we need to do today let's accomplish these goals every day let's organize it on a spreadsheet and and I'm like party so I'm more creative and impulsive and like but as we've been going through this process the pregnancy like I've been trying to step up and do a lot of the work with with interactive English and our business and you've been doing a lot of the research of what we need to do things we need to buy what's important to have and and that's been like super useful and super helpful and stuff that I have and I want to be more involved in that but it's been a good we've been able to complement each other and in that way so that's been really good but yeah when you said that that was my next one especially my beautiful wife so wait let's read more things that people are thankful for let's see pronouncing your name oh yay great I'm gonna try not to do it cuz I feel like I'll mess up at this time okay let's see somebody was asking what's going on and if you're wondering if you're just tuning in and you just kind of checked in we are sharing things we are thankful for in recognition of Thanksgiving yes talking about different things we're thankful for in life in general and kind of want you guys to share with us and we encourage you yet to also share things you're thankful wonderful happy watching thank you stuff thank you happy Thanksgiving happy Thanksgiving to all of you guys out there even if you don't celebrate it it's what's the would you find some others you want to read okay yeah keep keep writing guys keep keep shouting it up let us know again think of different things that you're thankful for one question that I have for you which now I'll probably get into some more specifics like I said at the beginning when you think of things you're thankful for you know family friends work health those are always at the top of the list now I'm kind of curious is there something specific that you are thankful for somebody I mentioned like the smell of coffee and it's like something like that very specific can you think of something specific that you guys are thankful for write it in the chat let us know okay okay so my next thing should I share something specific sure sure well sure whatever you want done better I might not a little bit more general but I have a couple that are more specific so I'll say one that I think is very important it's random I know but being able to travel to see families and loved one this year because we we were having a conversation recently with somebody who basically they they're an immigrant and they can't they're at the refugee and then they can't go back to see their family and and it just you know it just it puts things in perspective where we've been able to in times like these where we were able to go see our families even though they're across the seas you know we're able to go visit and and that's just been I think it's it's just such a privilege that you know we're able to travel to see people to to connect with family with friends with loved ones i I don't know I'm very very very thankful for that I think that's one thing that I think a lot of like Americans probably take for granted is the ease of an ability to be able to to go back and forth across a lot of these different places let me give you I'll give you well I guess a more specific thing and it's a little more superficial kind of and I say superficial which means kind of like irrelevant it's not the most important thing in the world but it's been very beneficial and that is online shopping and the reason I say that is because preparing for the new baby we've haven't had time to go out and go to a bunch of baby stores and because of the internet and the ease of online shopping you know like it's so hard when you live in a country and you don't speak the language to try to translate things in this store and we don't have a car so like lugging all of this stuff around would be hard so yeah you're right online shopping then a huge component to Amazon yeah convenience in our lives lately which has been nice we're not sponsored by Amazon but they have been helpful so I'm thankful for being able to read excellent awesome what else do we have thank you guys well thank you guys Alissa you're welcome thing I mean again we really appreciate all you guys for being here for for watching our lessons for commenting and interacting with us which is basically again interactive English this is what we want to to kind of know you guys to meet you guys and connect and this is such a good way to do it what about do you want to read you have another one do you have any more yeah I have a lot more okay um well do I keep going with all these general things um give a specific okay um no you go okay I alright one thing which is a little more specific I don't know some of you may or may not know depends if you follow us on Twitter Instagram or Facebook which you should by the way but I recently completed a marathon and that was something that's always been on my bucket list and that's an idiom your bucket list are the things that you want to accomplish before you die because another idiom would be to kick the bucket and if somebody kicks the bucket it's a very informal way of saying that they passed away that this person has died and therefore another expression your bucket list would be things that you want to accomplish and running a marathon was one of the things that I wanted to do and I was able to accomplish that a few months ago and I doubt I will do it again but that's something I'm thankful I'm thankful for that yeah that's crazy I can't believe you did it it's insane I could not maybe we can all do it next year me you and the baby no the furthest I've gone was 30 kilometers and that was ended in tears so yeah a year before we dog painful I could not I mean I'm sure I could if I wanted to but I just don't want to okay so I will share my next one which is something that I've always been thankful for now but like just being part I wrote here of a multicultural family and what do I mean by that again with the family but I just mean I just mean so my family if you guys didn't know is Romanian but we live and we lived in the US and then Wes his family's American and I love learning from people I love exchanging like cultural information and and asking questions and learning about people and I think and now we live in a completely different country and I love always getting to know different kinds of people and I just I think I can't think of something that enriches your life more than then just connecting with people from all kinds of cultures yeah that's been a huge part of my life I'd say the last 20 years especially like teaching in all these different countries and and learning about different cultures and languages it's been huge and now like again with with you guys like being able to kind of hang a connection yeah and share a little bit about you know obviously we can share more about American culture and you know hence Thanksgiving and learn about other cultures and learn about you know other parts of the world and and things that are important and holidays and all of that stuff like I think it's it's absolutely priceless yeah yeah definitely somebody mentioned on their bucket list who has it I think was it lolly said on my bucket list I want to meet you yeah we hope one of these days I think we should try and plan like some sort of Meetup if we can and it I guess it all depends on the city and the location but we would love to be able to meet some of you guys who are out there who we keep commenting with it's like we have this virtual connection but let's see what else give you one more I didn't realize I was kind of Oh trying to look two things I guess that they're kind of the same one is that I'm thankful for is kind of the direction of you know our business and what we've been able to accomplish this year Interactive English has grown immensely and we have a lot planned for the future with this next year trying to do somebody who just asked about online courses right we are true trying to put that together and we want to do working on it yeah these online courses and figure out how it would work if we want to do these like live lesson courses or what there's still a lot of questions but we're very very thankful for the direction that this has been heading and all the opportunities that are now out there and that ties in with the other thing that I wanted to say which was the positivity that this has been such a positive experience and the community again we're so thankful for all of you guys that it's been so great to interact and meet you guys and get those comments and that positive feedback it really it really means a lot mm-hmm I have something like that's similar to that that you know just because of what we're doing I feel so thankful to be able to do what we love because we absolutely love love everything that we do we love putting lessons together we love working on all of this we love preparing things for you guys and we have so many ideas we just need time to not enough time to do it right to put it all there but we've I mean we've been teachers we've taught for a while and I always I think was also we both love teaching like we love it because we can help people and we see it happening and when you see that what you do works it's pretty rewarding so I'm really thankful for being able to do well we love education is something we've been very very passionate about which is something we had in common when we first met and it's something we want to continue doing and even trying to highlight more of on this channel we're trying to find different ways to maybe to do that yeah so yeah it's been really great so some people are saying oh we would meet in Cancun that would be a great idea it would be a great idea we should go to Canada partly you guys look so beautiful thank you appreciate that a lot of emojis loving the emojis we always like responding with emojis I try to write those in the comments as much as I can I from Kazakhstan hello hello people from all over the world do you have any others that's kind of like that kind of wraps up my list I think which is another good expression idiom to to to wrap something up it basically kind of means to get towards the end my last one is about living where we do live living here in Europe I am very thankful for it we if you guys know us and have followed us we have we used to live in California which is a wonderful place to live it's great beautiful stay mm-hmm however it is very very expensive and I don't know should visit but definitely bring your wallet yeah I'm not sure that we could have done what we're doing now if we were living there yeah it'd be a different dynamic yeah so I think living here is helping us do that just really facilitate interactive English and everything else that we're doing so absolutely absolutely so why don't we can just wrap up this lesson right now because we are actually getting ready to film another lesson yes soon as this is done we're just gonna keep keep keep going yep so thank you guys so much for being here and joining us today and keep writing to us in the comments because we love hearing from you guys and let me see if I can do this transition boom okay so please well you got to get in the frame over here there you go please like and share if you enjoy what we do and if if you think that we're helping you your English practice and improve write us questions it's a great way to practice and follow us on social media because again we post a lot of questions it's another place for you guys to interact with us and practice exactly practice makes perfect thank you guys so much for joining us today thank you for sharing thankful yeah thanks for sharing with us hope you have a wonderful rest of the weekend and we'll see you guys next time thank you

The Names of Different Nationalities | Learn English Demonyms

hello everyone welcome today I have another interactive English lesson for you with me my name is Wes glad to see you if you are new here so we're going to talk about a topic that I think is very useful it's related to vocabulary and specifically it is talking about the names of nationalities that's what I want to talk to you about today and some of this may be familiar to you but like I said this is important because I think we talked about people from other countries often in everyday English and what I want you to do is because I want to hear from you in the comments in the chat I want you to write your name and tell me your nationality where where are you from don't tell me the country give me your nationality because we have people from all over the world so in the chat in the comments write your name and your nationality just to start out with because I want to hear from all of you so when we when we go over this topic specifically what it is what I'm going to be teaching you today are demonym x' so you may be wondering well what is a demonym well that is a name used to describe residents of a particular place now you can have demonym that are talking about people from specific cities you could have demonym talking about people from particular regions or areas as well as particular countries and I think this is the most common type of demonym when you're referring to people from different countries often it's usually very similar to the country name but it is that's why I said it's a useful topic to be able to know these words now some of you you may already know some of these words but I'm going to make it a little more challenging because I have I've thrown in some questions for you a little trivia about some of these different places around the world now of course in this lesson I'm not I I can't go over every single country name every single nationality with you so I had to make a decision and I apologize the way that I chose which countries to talk about is that I've based this on the top 50 countries that have viewed our lessons the most so I looked at the lifetime views for this channel and I took the top 50 countries and that is the list I'm going to use which means I know I apologize I am going to end up leaving out a lot of countries and it may not be fair to because there are larger countries like India Brazil the United States they have a much larger population so of course they end up they end up being included on this list so I apologize if your country is not on the list but again this is a great opportunity to write that in the chat or write that in the comments tell me where you're from write your nationality which is another great way for people to expand their vocabulary just to throw out some hellos

yes yes Mena Spanish moderate Mexican men Vietnamese perfect eleven Armenian excellent so we have people here from all over the world that's great now let's just begin we're gonna begin with the question all right I told you I'm gonna throw in a little bit of trivia for you so if anything I think you should definitely learn something new from today's lesson so here's the first one and the question is related to the the list that you're about to see so and I'm sorry if i mispronounce this baku is the capital city of what if you know the answer write that in the chat write it in the comments baku is the capital city of which country do you think it is a country that is on the list that i am about to show you but I figured I'd give you a chance all right let's see do you know it Bukka was the capital city of if you're not sure I hope that you said I didn't know this either until I looked it up but Baku is the capital city of Azerbaijan so the first set that I have for you the top 50 numbers 52 46 we have these trees right here El Salvador Nigeria Netherlands Israel and Azerbaijan so if we're talking those are the names of the country now the names of the nationality are as follows somebody from El Salvador is Salvadoran nigeria nigerian the netherlands dutch now some people may say a hollander i realize again this is where i think you may know more than me because there sometimes there may be multiple names for one nationality and if that's the case please share with me in the comments I think often in English especially if you're from the United States people from the Netherlands they would just Saul to call them Dutch Israel Israeli is the nationality and Azerbaijan is Azerbaijani okay excellent so that is 50 through 46 now let's look at the next set of countries we have 45 to 41 Ethiopia Kazakhstan Kenya South Africa and Argentina now a person who comes from those countries the demonym the name of the nationality is as followed is as follows ethiopian kazakhstan e

comments and say yes that's me I am from or I am and then include the nationality let me know all right so let's continue so the next set numbers 42 36 we are counting down from 50 the top the the 50 countries who have viewed our videos the most and we're going over the nationality so Sri Lanka Singapore Somalia Peru and Colombia all right if somebody is from Sri Lanka we'd say there Sri Lanka Singapore Singaporean Somali Somali Peruvian somebody is Peruvian I think I saw somebody before they mentioned they were from Peru in the chat and Cambodia is Cambodian so again these are the names of the nationalities if you are referring to a person or group but people from one of these countries this is the name of the nationalities that is what you would say ELISA Peruvian and I'm there excellent perfect glad you can join us today so here we go all right I have we've gotten we've done the first 15 already so now I have another question for you again this country is coming up on the list so look at the flag this is the flag of what which country do you think so again I'm trying I tried to make these questions a little more difficult because I think some of this vocabulary these country names these demonym you may be familiar with already so what do you think about that flag that flag that is the flag of which country what do you think so I hope I hope that you said that is the flag of yes well duh excellent Nastia perfect this is the flag of Poland and of course Poland that is on our next set right here so we're on 35 to 31 number 35 is the Dominican Republic the Dominican Republic is number 35 the D are number 34 is Myanmar Algeria Poland comes in at 32 and Nepal is 31 so if we're talking about people from those countries all right this is what you would call the nationalities somebody's from the Dominican Republic they are Dominican from Myanmar Burmese now this little different because Bernie Burmese I think it's considered basically an ethnic group but just so you know Myanmar Burmese Algerian if somebody's from Poland polish and Nepal Nepalese all right so these are the names of the nationalities let's look at the next set number 30 is Ukraine and then Columbia France Malaysia and Iraq so if we're talking about nationalities from these countries we have Ukrainian Columbian French Malaysian and Iraqi so I like I said the names of the nationalities often they're fairly similar to the name of the country quite you find it quite often that you would just add an end to the end Colombia Colombian but there are other ones where you may just need to memorize and if you're asking yourself like well how do I learn these different not just the names of the countries but the names of the nationalities and the people I think the best way to do that is just to read if you are reading newspaper articles especially about world news I think you are going to come across these nationalities quite often when reading articles current events about world news and they refer to these nationalities so reading is a great way yes Lalli excellent I am French perfect you are on the list so again just want to let you guys know if you are looking to connect with us make another connection with us you can check us out on patreon there is a link down below in the description I'll throw a link in the chat right here it's just a way to support what we do here at interactive English join the team make that other connection with us you can check out that link so let's continue with another question and this is okay well we're got a few more questions for you so mmm is home to the world's tallest building alright which country well which country is home to the world's tallest building what do you think write your answer in the the chat or in the comments let me know so again this is a little trivia for you around the world I will give you a hint the city is I believe well unless I for actually no I that's it I was gonna say either yes Dubai but what is what is the country yes G foon so the United Arab Emirates often just referred to as the acronym the UAE is home to the world's tallest building and I knew I had the name up here I believe is called the bird's Burj Khalifa I probably mispronouncing that but the UAE is home to the world's tallest building and they find themselves in the top 25 at number 24 so number 25 on our list of countries that have viewed our videos the most we have Spain the UAE Germany Morocco and Australia I felt like I wanted to give a bit of a shout out and put a question on there about the UAE because that's kind of impressive the country only has I think there's less than 10 million people in the entire country but they are on the list excellent so if we're talking about the nationalities of people from those countries we have Spanish and Marathi German Moroccan and Australian and I was reading that I think in the UAE there might be more than one word to express the nationality but I think overwhelmingly I found Emirati is the one that I knew and I think would be most common when talking about that nationality um cows are yes I'm maracas and excellent perfect glad to have you with us today so I have another another question all right another little question for you just to throw at you so this question I

haseyo thank you for joining us and I taught I taught both children and I taught at a university here I just thought I'd share some pictures with you so those are pictures of me which is gosh over ten years ago the time it just flies by so that is my looks a little bit about my experience in Korea and Korea finds themselves in the top 20 so we have Italy Taiwan South Korea Turkey Bangladesh alright so if again we're talking about nationalities today people who come from these places and we have Italian Taiwanese South Korean Turkey I put two Turkish or Turk I don't know which one is more common if you are from Turkey please let us know Turkish or Turk or Bangladeshi alright so those are the names of the nationality somebody asked where did I teach in Korea I lived in the two different places I lived in Daegu as well as the city of Jung Joo which those those two places are pretty close alright so let's get into the top 15 all right we have Japan Egypt Russia Saudi Arabia and Mexico so if we're talking about people from these countries we'd have Japanese Egyptian Russian Tsao Saudi and Mexican so those are the names of the nationalities if you're joining us we're talking about the names nationalities and I'm using a list of the top 50 countries of people the top 50 countries that have viewed our lessons here at interactive English and yes we are entering the top 10 the top 10 countries so let's let's continue with another question the elephant is the national animal of what which country the elephant is the national animal of which country let me know write your answer in the chat in the comments what do you think the elephant is the national animal of I think I think some of this is maybe a little bit and perhaps an easier question I think elephants are very well-known in this country it's a country that I think a lot of people go to for for travel for tourism what do you think Wow many people saying India maybe uh this maybe I'm wrong I'd have to check I didn't hook this I know the one that I was thinking of is Thailand it is the national animal of Thailand is it this is it I'll have to check is it the national animal of India - I'm gonna have to look that up real quick everybody overwhelmingly said India but Thailand is what I'm looking for and Thailand comes in the top 10 so we have 10 to 6 we got Pakistan at number 10 thailand united kingdom Philippines and Indonesia so again if we're talking about the nationalities which is what this lesson is all about then we're talking about these names right here so we have Pakistani if somebody is from Thailand then they're saying Thai we just save Thai UK I think many of you know because there are many teachers English teachers from the UK and you'd say they are British or I think a little informally you could refer to somebody as a Brit when you're talking about just one person so one person a Brit British you could refer to it as just one person or many people either way I think British is probably a little more common from the Philippines you'd say that person is Filipino Indonesia Indonesia okay so we're entering the top five and let's see here is a question one more question before we go into the top five poutine is a dish that includes french fries and cheese curds topped with a brown gravy now this is a food it's a dish it's a meal and it originated in which country all right what this is a country that is in the top five I'm talking about poutine so I thought I'd throw in a little bit of a food trivia question for you which country is did this did this dish originated in French fries cheese curds brown gravy very delicious not super healthy yes actually perfect Jinwoon gertrudis Shing a star thank you for answering talking about jin-haeng Canada so poutine is a dish that originated in Canada and Canada is on our list they are number five so we have the top five countries of that viewed our video lessons Canada Vietnam Brazil India and the United States and if we're talking about the nationalities of these countries we have Canadian Vietnamese Brazilian Indian and American so I think again I was actually surprised to be quite honest because I hadn't really checked this before to see which countries have viewed us the most Brazil India I thought they would be in the top part of the list I was surprised that many people in the United States are watching these video lessons I know there's a lot of people there who are trying to practice and improve their English I don't know if they're native speakers are not so again this whole lesson let's just do a little bit of a recap is was about demonym x' and we're talking about the names of nationalities where people are from and a demonym is it's not a common word but this is you to describe residents of a particular place so if we're talking about these I'm just gonna go through the list for you right here I told you I was going to go through the list based on the top 50 countries that watched our video lessons so we have right here Salvadoran Nigerian Dutch Israeli Azerbaijani continuing in the list we had Ethiopian Kazakhstani Kenyan South African Argentinian then we have Sri Lankan Singaporean Somali Peruvian Cambodian trying to think go through which was and then 35 Dominican Burmese Algerian Polish Nepalese again if you're from one of these countries let me know write it in the write it in the chat or in the comments Ukrainian Columbian French Malaysian Iraqi that we had continuing on where is it yes Spanish Emirati German Moroccan Australian that we had let's see continuing with ooh here we go Italian Taiwanese South Korean Turkish Bangladeshi then it was trying to go straight Japanese Egyptian Russian saudi Mexican then we entered the top ten Pakistani Thai British or Brit Filipino Indonesian and then we got to the number the top five Canadian Vietnamese Brazilian Indian American again these are great words to learn in the comments in to chat right where you are from write your nationality especially if you didn't find yourself your country on the list if that's the case I hope that you will share these videos with people in your country so that they will get in the top 50 views for our channel but let us know it is a great way to build your vocabulary because I do think this is part of everyday English if you are talking about people from other countries if you're talking about current events I think this is great vocabulary to know because I think quite often you want to refer and talk about people from these different places and hopefully you have friends from some of these places as well so thank you guys so much for joining me today this lesson was a bit short and sweet again write to me in the comments tell me your name tell me your nationality and just say I am mm let me know where you're from and as always whoops hold on uh where am i where did I go there that's better thank you guys for watching please hit that like button if you enjoy what we do and enjoy learning with us I really appreciate you guys tuning in to these lessons these live lessons it's a great way to interact and really create more of a personal connection with you write to us in the comments thank you just give some shout outs real quickly Thank You Ernesto Mohammed min AEG hoon Saeed Elvis Yankee Doodle grace uh Michelle Mahmud DOS Caballero 1953 lolli sleepwalker Angela Lucia Nastya bent bent blondie sorry again if I mispronounce names thank you guys so much for joining me right your nationality post put it in the comments because I think again this is a great way to build your vocabulary the more you read about them even if it's a short sentence and someone says I am I am Filipino people see that and it really starts to sink in so please write to us in the comments let us know your nationality share with everyone else and we will continue to grow our vocabulary together hope you guys have a wonderful weekend and

The SECRETS to Understanding American FAST SPEECH

i understand you perfectly but tv movies music that can be very difficult to understand so this is a comment that i get quite often and right now i want to talk to you about why this happens so this is helpful if if you would like to speak faster but more importantly it's going to help you comprehend fast speech and really what it all comes down to is connected speech so i'm going to give you some sentences and we're really going to break it down and talk about what's happening so let's begin with our first sentence it is a very common question and that is how is it going you're not often going to hear many people say it like that and pronounce each individual word instead people are more likely going to say how's it going so let's look at what's going on the first thing you're you're going to contract how is and just say house all right now it ends with that final z sound and we're going to link that with the vowel sound in it and this is when linking often occurs when the final sound of one word is a consonant sound and then the beginning sound of the next word is a vowel sound so it's going to sound like how's it think of it like two syllables how zit how's it going all right and in going i'm really going to drop the g i'm not going to pronounce that ing and say eng i'm just going to say go in how's it going all right so let's practice i'll say it a couple of times i'll say it slowly you can shadow and and repeat after me and try and say it in the exact same way how's it going how's it going how's it going then i have another question for you which is where did you get that and once again people are not going to say it pronouncing each individual word instead they say where did you get that and this is a great example of assimilation and what that means is when you have two sounds that blend together to create a new sound and this occurs with the final d and did and the y and u they're they're going to blend together and you're going to get a j sound it is a voiced sound ja and it's going to sound like where did ya and notice that instead of saying you i

i'm going to pronounce it with the schwa and say yeah this is something that i do and i think it's pretty common in places like the united states where did you where did you get that and i also want to talk about that because i think if you're listening to somebody speaking very fast they may drop that t and it's just going to sound like that and your tongue is going to be at the bottom of your mouth people may say it with a stop t that in which case the tongue is going to then be touching the top part of your mouth so it's a very slight difference you can listen for it if i say it without the t that and with the stop t that when i say it now i'm going to say it without the t so let's practice again i'll say it slowly and then we'll get a little faster where did you get that where did you get that where did you get that then we have we are going to have to postpone the meeting okay so it's a simple sentence easy to understand but if somebody were to say this quickly we're gonna have to postpone the meeting so let's look at what's going on the first thing that people are going to do overwhelmingly they're going to contract we and are instead of saying we are we're going to say were and then next we're going to use some reductions going 2 is going to get reduced to gonna have 2 is going to get reduced to hafta we're going to have to and postpone i i think often people are not going to pronounce that t it's going to be a silent t postpone postpone the meeting and then i want to talk to you about meeting because the t in meeting i am going to pronounce it with a flap t which is more of like a soft d sound this is very common in places like the united states because that t it comes between two vowel sounds i'm gonna say it with a flap t meeting so let's say it slowly and then get faster we're gonna have to postpone the meeting we're gonna have to postpone the meeting we're gonna have to postpone the meeting okay it's just it's just something we have to do here is another simple sentence we live in an apartment we live in an apartment okay so this is a great example of linking so i've already mentioned that linking often occurs when the the final sound of one word is a consonant sound and then the beginning sound of the next word is a vowel sound so let's let's start linking some of these words and we're going to start with the v sound and live we're going to link that with the vowel sound in live in then the n we're going to link with that vowel sound in n live and n and then that other end we're gonna link with that schwa sound in apartment so if we're just focusing on those parts that we're linking together it's going to sound like the nana then an apartment we live in an apartment and and i the other thing i would say is when we're talking about linking these words together it's not it's not a very strong sound all right this is a very weak sound and and that is part of the reason why it's it's getting connected so you can kind of just run right through this part of the sentence so let's practice say it slowly and then we'll get faster we live in an apartment

we live in an apartment we live in an apartment okay and it's true yes right now my family and i we live in an apartment and then i have these two sentences for you it is time to face your fears just do it it's time to face your fears just do it so the first thing that we're going to do instead of saying it is we're going to contract that and we're just going to say it's it's time to often when when i say the preposition to i'm going to use the schwa and just say it's a very weak sound once again it helps me kind of just run right through the sentence it's time to face sure so face your this is another example of assimilation you have that s sound in face we're going to blend it together with the y in your and you're going to end up with a sh sound face sure face sure it's time to face your fears just do it okay so that second sentence just do it this is a good example of intrusion now intrusion is when you add a sound and the sound that we're going to add is a slight w to the end of do and when we add that slight w well then we can link it with the vowel sound in it and we can say it quickly just do it just do it so let's say it together it's time to face your fears just do it it's time to face your fears just do it it's time to face your fears just do it and maybe i i could say this to you if you would like to build your confidence when it comes to speaking or improve your overall speaking fluency i could say look it's time to face your fears and just enroll in my speaking course just click on that link down below in the description just do it okay so yes i am getting ready to start a six week mini course that's going to wrap up before the holidays at the end of the year and i also have a special end of year discount just for you because when you enroll you can use the voucher code speak 30 to get a 30 discount off the course and the course includes a weekly one-hour small group lesson with me because i will be your teacher you get to speak directly with me there are weekly lesson pdfs covering various topics we do different speaking activities there are also lesson preview videos to help you better prepare for class there are pronunciation video lessons a couple of resource guides a couple of audio lessons there is a lot just click on that link down in the description if you'd like to sign up

The TRUTH about Becoming Fluent in English

the truth about becoming fluent in english it's so important because i think for many of you out there that is what you want to do that's your goal you would like to achieve english fluency so today we're going to have a little bit of a heart-to-heart we're going to have a heart-to-heart conversation about how you can become fluent and and the truth i want to talk to you about the truth because i think there is uh well a lot of information out there that might mislead people and perhaps they think it's a little easier than it really is quickly i'd like to introduce myself my name is wes the channel is interactive english which is all about helping you trying to achieve your fluency goals with vocabulary lessons pronunciation lessons grammar lessons a little bit of everything when it comes to learning english so let's just begin with the first truth that i have for you which is you are not going to become fluent in just a few months now of course i think it's possible that you can greatly improve in a few months in a very short period of time and also there are some people out there that are very gifted when it comes to language learning and they may be able to achieve a high level of proficiency in a very short period of time for me that's not possible and i i imagine for many of you it's also not the same and i i tell you this because when i decided that i wanted to learn spanish and i that was one of my goals i wanted to become fluent and when i started i don't know how i got this impression but i thought you know if i could live in a spanish-speaking country if i'm studying all the time if i get a lot of exposure to the language probably in a few months i could become you know maybe i could become fluent and when i actually tried this it just wasn't the case so i think it's important that you have realistic expectations it doesn't matter if you are a beginner learner and you're just starting out or perhaps you're right in the middle of your language learning journey it's important to have realistic expectations because that's really what's going to help you move forward because if you're able to set short-term goals and long-term goals and work toward that the ultimate goal which is fluency you're just going to be getting closer and closer and closer because truthfully this this is not going to happen overnight you're not just going to start learning english or any other language for that matter and become fluent overnight that is not realistic but if you continue to practice if you continue to learn and you continue to improve by building vocabulary improving your listening uh practicing speaking you do all that then again you're going to be working toward the ultimate goal which i think is very possible for you to achieve which is english fluency the next truth that i have for you is perfect is the enemy of good enough now this is my version of the quote i think the uh original quote is attributed to voltaire the frame the famous french writer and philosopher and i think it's more like perfect is the enemy of best something like that now i i think that if perfect is a part of your well mindset if you think that's one of your goals my english needs to be perfect i would just get rid of that i would try to get that out of your mind because personally i think it's going to hold you back i think it's always great to strive to improve to to get better to to constantly improve your language skills but you need to realize that i think you're always going to make mistakes and that's perfectly okay i make mistakes in english i think i make quite a few mistakes to give you an example i grew up in the southern part of the united states and sometimes my wife will catch me saying this and she'll tease me a little bit sometimes i say like might could and when people say something like that it means the well the ability to do something i might say well you know this afternoon we we might go for a hike and it sounds it's a little strange it's not correct and yeah it's it's a mistake but it's perfectly fine i think my english is good enough it's good enough to uh communicate with others i can share my thoughts opinions and ideas and if i make mistakes that you know it's no big deal i move on and i think you need to consider this when thinking about well where you are at is my english good enough because if your english is good enough to carry on a conversation about a variety of topics if your english is good enough to read a book without constantly having to run to a dictionary if your english is good enough to watch a movie and you understand about 90 of it well then in my opinion i think that your english is good enough well that you can consider yourself fluent the next truth that i have for you it's it's my version of a popular expression you may be familiar with the expression and that is fluency is in the eye of the beholder now the real expression is beauty is in the eye of the beholder it means that that beauty is subjective maybe what i think is beautiful you might not think is beautiful fluency is the same way fluency is subjective just because i think that you might already be fluent in english maybe you don't feel the same way about your language skills and really there there is no one exam that you can take the head is just going to tell you okay yes you have now achieved english fluency congratulations let the party begin the truth is that the only one who's going to be able to determine whether or not you are fluent in english or any other language is yourself i do think that there are certain maybe indications certain things that you can look for to kind of uh tell whether or not well you have achieved fluency i i just mentioned before that maybe you can watch a movie and you understand 90 of it that may be one indication of english fluency but you are really the only one who's going to be able to determine whether or not you feel fluent in a language and i really think that the more comfortable and confident that you become engaging in english i think you're just going to know you'll know whether or not you have achieved your goals and whether you feel that you have a level of proficiency that you would consider yourself fluent so i hope you enjoyed our heart to heart conversation about english fluency and i'd love to hear from you let me know in the comments if any of this resonates with you if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i'll see you next time

The Ultimate Philanthropy: Giving Billions of Dollars Away | Reading + Vocabulary

hello and welcome to today's lesson my name is wes this is interactive english and the channel it's all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and and really just try to work toward english fluency and if this is your first time here please let me know tell me your name uh you can write it in the chat if you're watching this later write it in the comments i love hearing from new people uh here at the channel and i want to just quickly tell you what what we're going to work on today because we're going to look at some articles in english these are um online articles and the goal is trying to really build your vocabulary and look at some different articles and think about how we can build our vocabulary while we're reading and what we're going to do today is talk about something that i i think is a good topic something that's positive because i think when you look in the news there's obviously a lot of negativity out there there's so many things that uh so many problems that typically come up but this is going to be a little bit different because i want to talk about a philanthropist who has given away all of his money and this is we're talking about billions of dollars so which is a good thing i think any type of philanthropy is is excellent um no matter whether you are very rich or maybe you don't have so much money and you want to donate you want to volunteer or get involved i think all of that is wonderful so i have my as we go through these articles there's two of them that i want to look at we're gonna i have my vocabulary list that we're going to build and put together and i think when we're when you read about the same topic i think that's something that's very useful you're often going to get the same information but you're going to see the same words being used again and again and not only is that a good way to just build your vocabulary when you're learning new words but when you learn a new word it's useful to see that word again and the more that you read and you see that word or phrase you'll be able to put that up here in your active memory and then you'll just be able to use it correctly the next time you're speaking or writing uh i have the website which we're going to look at in just a moment this is the first article that we're going to be looking at and again it's all about just trying to help you build your vocabulary using reading which i really recommend that everybody do and we're going to try and build our vocabulary today and i will include links to the articles down in the description and i will also include the vocabulary words that we go through in today's lesson i will put those down in the description as well in case you would like to review so i do want to give a quick little shout out saw so many members here today uh and that's awesome uh lolly um uh gertrudis welcome thank you thank you for joining our community um putri surya thank you for being here um and then a lot of regulars too uh rose angela sleepwalker uh amity maddie uh eduardo hello what's up thank you um great to have you guys here i really appreciate everybody coming together and i i think this is great this is what the community is all about and everybody kind of just working toward that goal of improving their english skills so let's go ahead and begin and i told you what the topic is we're talking about um a philanthropist somebody and this is i guess it happened recently that um this person who was a billionaire and their goal was uh they wanted to die broke and now they're they say this person is officially broke i don't think they are officially broke and have like zero money um but they're they're definitely no longer a billionaire this person has given away billions and billions of dollars and i i want to just say that i think that there are many i think people out there like this that give away a lot of their money and i i think that's that's awesome um but i know that this person's getting a lot of attention because they are a billionaire um and they're giving away so much but i think whether you are a billionaire or whether you're somebody who again you're you're just trying to make ends meet and that's a phrase if somebody's making ends meet it means they're making enough to survive but even still those people will still donate uh they give money to support charitable causes and i think that is equally valuable and that should be also recognized so if you guys are out there and you are giving and being charitable that you know kudos to you i i give you props um and that's i don't want to get into too many slang expressions i did that in a previous lesson to give someone props is to give someone credit and and recognize their achievements and contributions so let's go on down here and i'm just going to read the first part and then we'll look at some of the vocabulary so just that little opening it says it took decades but chuck feeney the former billionaire co-founder um so let's just keep it simple tax free or paying no taxes so he created um this store let's go back because i want to talk a little bit about it the it was called duty-free shoppers this is a store that you would find at an airport so for some of you out there i'm sure that you have you have traveled internationally and you go to the airport and when you go and you're waiting at the international gate you're probably going to see a lot of duty-free shops and that means that when you buy something there you're not going to pay taxes and the reason for that is because typically you pay taxes for products that you buy in a country and because you are buying something a product could be a bottle of water or anything and you are getting ready to leave the country that's why you don't have to pay taxes and it's tax-free now food for thought because i look this up he was not the first person to start a duty-free business the first business that was duty-free was actually started in ireland and i believe it was in 1946. in 1946 in ireland that is when the first duty-free shop opened his business the these shops actually began in 1960 14 years later and he started this um this business which was called duty-free shoppers and i think the business just grew and you would find this business and many different places many different airports uh around the country around the world and that is how he made his money so let's go on and look at this next main part of the article right here so again i'm going to read it just follow along and we'll go ahead i'll highlight some words and then we'll talk about the meaning we'll add it to our vocabulary list so it says charles chuck feeney 89 who

co-founded airport retailer duty-free shoppers with robert miller in 1960 amassed billions while living a life of monk-like frugality as a philanthropist he pioneered the idea of giving while living spending most of your fortune on big hands-on charity bets instead of funding a foundation upon death since you can't take it with you why not give it all away have control over where it goes and see the results with your own eyes we learned a lot we would do thing we would do some things differently but i'm very satisfied i feel very good about compliment um completing this on my watch feeney tells forbes my thanks to all who joined us on this journey and to those wondering about giving while living try it you'll like it so this is what he said i want to highlight a few words in there and then we'll come back and the reason that i'm choosing these words i think maybe there are a little more or maybe perhaps advanced but this these are words that will help you understand other articles if you want to read about this same topic so we're going to look at a few we've already talked about what it means to co-found something he created it with another person um we're going to look at the words amassed he amassed billions because of his monk-like frugality we're going to talk about frugality as well and we're talking about he was a philanthropist so let's go back over to our vocabulary list and look at some of those words and i'll write down the meaning so here we are okay sorry uh i try to move this as seamlessly as possible but sometimes it's difficult uh because there's so many different windows open so if we're talking about to a mass it's a verb so in the article it said he amassed billions and that means when you amass to get a large amount of something often i think you will see this verb when talking about money somebody a mass they might amass a fortune in this case or they he amassed billions he was able to get a large amount of something frugality this is a a noun and it what it means it's talking about the quality of being careful with money so it said the reason why one of the reasons why he became so wealthy was because of his frugality it's a noun that's describing somebody who is just very careful with their money most of the time i think you will hear this word used as an adjective and i'm going to write it down and that is frugal i think this is the you again you can use these words as nouns or adjectives it's another great way to build your vocabulary so frugality is the noun but i think most of the time people use it as an adjective and say that someone is frugal and if you say someone is frugal it means that they are um very careful with how they spend money another way you could say it's a way of a polite way of calling someone cheap that they don't want to spend money so they they're they try to be frugal or maybe they have a frugal lifestyle i to be quite honest i also i try to be frugal i i don't want try not to spend a lot of money on things that maybe i don't need the next one it was a philanthropist so i told you at the very beginning that we're going to talk about this person he is a philanthropist and what this means you're talking about a um a person who helps the poor uh it's describing a person who helps the poor um especially by giving money so when i think of a philanthropist it's somebody who's helping but more likely they're helping because they're donating money and there are different ways that people can help they can they can donate money they can volunteer and actually work for the charity or the organization but when i think about somebody who is referred to as a philanthropist i think about somebody who is that that's specifically what they're doing they're they're donating money um all right so i i apologize i'm not able to really glance too much at the chat right now but i'll try to glance at it when time to time i know i so um somebody said the vid is unclear the streaming it's been challenging lately hopefully we can power through it but yes there may be moments when the the screen may get a little blurry i'm still working on it uh trying to work out all the kinks uh that's a good expression the kinks are just the problems so let's go back to our article and i want to look at a couple um a couple more words so we talked about philanthropists it said he pioneered this idea of giving while living and i want to look at what that means to pioneer something and then it said he pioneered this idea giving while living spending most of your fortune on big hands-on charity bets instead of funding a foundation upon his death so if you pioneer something let's go back over to our vocabulary list i'm gonna skip around a little bit uh i apologize so to pioneer something refers to um you're talking about the first to do something all right so this is something that at the time while he was doing this it really wasn't happening that much and i think this idea of giving while living is that instead of just getting all the money and then when you die donate it and give it away he wanted to do this while he was alive so he that so that he could control where the money goes and that's the idea i think of giving while living uh i want to talk about that other word even though i have it down there in the next one a fortune all right and if we're talking about a fortune it just really refers to a large amount of money all right he made a fortune with his business so let's go back over to boom um our article so hopefully again that this article it's easy to follow it's easy to understand as we look at these vocabulary words and then i want you to pay attention when we read the next article how many of them that you see again so let's just look at this last article right here all right so he started this thing giving while living that when you're alive you're gonna just keep giving your money away so over the last four decades feeney has donated more than eight billion to charities universities and foundations worldwide through his foundation the atlantic philanthropies when i first met him in 2012 he estimated he had set aside about 2 million for his and his wife's retirement that's still a lot of money um in other words he's given away 375

000 percent more money than his current net worth and he gave away and he gave it away anonymously while many wealthy philanthropists enlist an army of publicists to trumpet their donations feeney went to great lengths to keep his gifts secret because of his clandestine glow glow trotting philanthropy campaign forbes called him the james bond of philanthropy so let's look at this um this paragraph i want to pick out a few words that maybe uh might be a little more challenging so you see that he amassed a fortune of 8 billion he was giving it away while he was still alive he did set aside 2 million for his retirement which is the time when you stop working and you are able to live and try to take care of yourself so he gave away the money anonymously i want to look at that word because i help i think it helps you understand what kind of person he is so that word if we go back to our vocabulary list anonymously [Music] if you do something uh anonymously it basically means that one's identity is not known so someone's identity is not known and because of that they say it was like a clandestine operation um which if something is done like that it's done in secret and often i think of something like you're describing some mission perhaps you might hear it in a movie if it's an action movie and they talk about some clandestine operation but anonymously is the word that i want to focus on because i think it really kind of helps describe who he is because they said that many people who are wealthy what they may do is that they try to promote the the fact that they're giving so much money away so he didn't want to do that he was not trying to look for people who would say hey good job well done you're doing a great thing so he was doing this um anonymously all right so those are the first words that i wanted to look at um with this article and i hope that uh i hope that some of this made sense i want to look at some of your comments um uh about what you're saying yes me and ask to invest is to a mass uh i think when people invest money they they hope to amass more money they hope to get a larger amount of money so i'd say that investing is a way yeah to amass more money but not always because if you invest money you could get more money you could also lose it um let's see oh yes i can't be a philanthropist because i have no money i understand yes i think i think all of us would love to be philanthropist um but uh yes typically i think when you hear that word a philanthropist it's refers to a person who already has a lot of money and they're trying to give it away uh let's see um um please give me your contact number well i i you people can email me my email is pretty much well uh known if you guys join our email list then you basically have uh our email you could find that down in the co description below if you want to join our email list email is the best way to contact me i'm not really giving out my phone number um let's see uh alright so now that we have some of these vocabulary words that we started right here and again i will put this list down down in the description if you want to review let's look at another article that is similar all right and the reason why i want to do this is because i think you now understand the topic but it's really to see that how much well how many times you see these words again and again because i think if you want to build your vocabulary reading is a great way to do that and what i would encourage you to do is that if you are reading about some topic and you learn some new words continue reading about that topic because you're going to see that the words are used again and again and again and the more exposure you get to the the word uh the more likely you are to remember the meaning and understand that so that's why i want to look at another article talking about this same topic billionaire charles feeney finishes four decade long dream of giving away uh an 8 billion dollar fortune so already you see that word fortune that we've added to our list and it just means somebody who has a lot of money so let's just look at the first part um and then we'll pick out a few more words and we'll go through it and sorry i know uh some of you may hear emmy in the background she's not uh she's not too happy right now she just woke up from a nap so let's i'll read through it and then we'll look at some words so it says for years billionaire charles feeney had one goal in mind to give away his massive fortune and live the rest of his life broke now the 89 year old has fulfilled his wish according to forbes uh steve uh bertoni feeney has finished giving away more than eight billion in anonymous donations through his foundation atlantic philanthropies over the course of four decades forbes says feeney gave 3.7 billion to education and more than 870 million to human rights and social change or campaigns feeney who amassed his fortune after funding the famed airport retailer duty-free shoppers also gave around 62 million in grants to end the death penalty in the united states and 76 million to support the affordable care act obamacare the outlet reported feeney also gave back to his alma mater to build a technology camp alma mater cornell university and recently gifted them a 350 million contribution to build a technology campus in new york city according to forbes with nearly all of his fortune gone feeney officially closed down atlantic philanthropies this week that's why i think they said um it's over he's closed down his charity his organization because there's no more money left he's given it all away um we learned a lot we would do some things differently but i'm very satisfied i feel very good about completing this on my watch feeney told forbes many thanks to all who joined us on this journey he added and to those wondering about giving while living try it you'll like it so let's if we were just going to go back and look at this article after we've already started building our vocabulary list you can kind of see some of the same words we've talked about uh that he was giving away a fortune all right he got a lot of money he did these anonymous donations all right we talked about that word already it's very similar and again this is a way to build your vocabulary because the other article said that he did it anonymously if you do something anonymously that is that is the adverb because it ends with an l y n one's identity is not known in this case they're using it as an adjective an anonymous donation the meaning is still the same so uh what are some other words that we talked about in this article so again they discuss his business about duty-free shoppers duty is talking about tax and here is one word that i want to talk about grants because sometimes if people um somebody who is a philanthropist they have a charity an organization that will give grants um so he gave grants to different things and also he supported his alma mater so let's look at those two words we're going to add that to our vocabulary list let's go back over here we talked about the word fortune already i wrote it before in the other one so if we're talking about a grant um what this refers to is

let's see it's money given to a person or or um organization for a specific purpose all right i think often you may hear this word when people talking about like um doing research you have somebody who's a scientist or um they peep somebody finishes their phd and they're or they're doing their phd and they're doing research they may try to get a grant and they're trying to get support for their research and they're trying to get money so that they can continue doing their research that would be the specific purpose so that is um a time when you would often hear this word being used when talking about somebody looking for a grant to continue research now he donated money to his alma mater if we're talking about an alma mater it's basically the talking about the school the school college or university where a person studied all right and that is your wherever you went to university or college you would say that is your alma mater and the last one was that phrase i don't know if you remember that phrase from the article um

i did not highlight it so let's go back over here and he talks about um he was able to i feel very good com um about completing this on my watch about giving all of this money away he was able to do it on my watch and if you want to use that phrase if you say um you're going to do something on my watch or on your watch what that means let's go back over here it means that you are doing something um while um while someone while someone is on duty like they're working in that case because again duty has different meanings while someone is on duty or in charge of some situation all right and often you might hear this use this expression if you're in charge of some situation and you say look somebody's worried about something and you say it's not going to happen on my watch it's not going to happen while i'm in charge of the situation so in this case he said i'm happy i was or because i'm getting paid more money or i'm making a higher salary so in that case i don't think you would use um a max unless the job is just paying you a ridiculous amount of money and you can amass a fortune so i think when you're going to use that verb you're gonna hear it used with words like uh fortune or in this case um they they talked about amassed over a billion dollars with his company excellent good question um so i hope that some of these um words were new for you um and i hope that it was kind of easy to follow along now what i would say let's see all right um what i do want to say is that because we do these lessons from time to time where we talk about some current events and we talk about a topic we build vocabulary and something that my wife and i wanted to do with our channel was to then highlight a charity an organization we're going to make a donation and then i'll put the uh i'll talk about it and then put a link down in the description if somebody else would like to go learn more about the organization or make a donation as well and we've done this before i think we did it when we're talking about um we talked about the housing crisis and we did to help you build your vocabulary to understand because these are important things these are important issues an um that we think is doing good now because this topic is really just kind of general it's talking about philanthropy what i did is i went um i went to our community page and i posted a poll and i gave a few different options of saying okay which charity which organization should we highlight now i chose very broad organizations which i think are very they're they're well known and um many of you may be familiar with them typically in the future we're going to highlight a lot more smaller organizations but we'll probably leave that to a specific topic so uh your opinion and the poll came back right there um between the international red cross unicef the world food program amnesty international most of you chose the world food program which uh is an organization that is run by the united nations to help um help people help communities that are in need of food and they will do this when there are natural disasters they will do this when areas have um been hit by well things like famine or perhaps if there's a war going on the world food program will get in there so we're gonna make a donation to the world food program i've left links down in the description if you'd like to go there and learn more about it i think again i think any organization that is working to solve a problem in the world right now whether it's environmental hunger poverty it's it's good all right this is this is what we mean and today i wanted to talk about philanthropy as a topic because it is a little more positive instead of looking at so many things that are well problems that we have in the world right now but again in the future we will do this we will highlight another charity when we talk about some issue or a problem um so yeah keep an eye out for those lessons so uh i hope that you enjoyed the lesson i hope you found it useful and i i particularly hope that you learn some new vocabulary words and then again if you want to review you can uh review them down in the description i see some people like uh there's an echo i i apologize gosh i got the i got a lot of kinks to work out with the internet right now i'm gonna get on that before uh before the next one let me see all right i'll have to look at that and see what's going on sorry about the audio um i hope you have a wonderful week um thank you uh lolly uh thank you maggie for joining us jason just trying to get some shout outs roseanna um thank you guys hope you have a wonderful week i will see you next time

The Word ANTICIPATE | Build Useful English Vocabulary

Hello! And welcome to our global classroom. I know you've been anticipating this lesson. See how I just used the word "anticipate" in a sentence. That's the word! The word "anticipate" means to expect or predict something that might happen in the future. For example, I anticipate that this will be a very fun lesson. Here are some other things we can anticipate. If you're going on a trip to Hawaii, you might anticipate that the weather will be warm and sunny. Or if you go to dinner at your favorite restaurant, you anticipate that the food will taste great. Also, if you study with us, you anticipate that you will be learning English. Hola! Bienvenidos a nuestra clase.

Wes, we're teaching English here! So we've established that anticipate means to expect something that will likely happen. But anticipate has another meaning too. It can also mean to look forward to something. For example, each year I anticipate the winter season because I love snow. Another example. I eagerly anticipate traveling to Venice. What? Just kidding. Unfortunately, we have no plans to travel to Venice. Wes! Hint! What? Do you have any more examples? Of course! So...you anticipate more cuts? They anticipate little problems like this. It's my job to anticipate your every need. Congress, unable to anticipate the enormous capacity... Did you anticipate anybody breaching the cooling system? Any red flags? So what part of speech is the word "anticipate"?

Let's look at it in a sentence! In this sentence, "anticipate" is a verb and it comes right after the subject. Here's another example. What? Now that you know the meaning of the word and how it's used, let's check your pronunciation. The word "anticipate" has four syllables and the stress is on the second syllable. I want you to repeat after me. I'll say it, and then you say it. Anticipate. Anticipate. Wonderful! Great job! Okay. Now let's expand our vocabulary and look at a couple words in the word family. As previously mentioned, "anticipate" is a verb. But it is possible to turn it into an adjective. The adjective is anticipated. And it's commonly used with words such as "highly" or "most".

As in "the most anticipated" or "highly anticipated." Here's an example. Here's another one. Now let's look at another word from the anticipate family. If you want to say the opposite of anticipated, you just add the prefix "un-" to it so you get unanticipated. If "anticipated" means expected, then "unanticipated" means unexpected or something that took you by surprise. For example. You ready? It's time to practice what we've learned. Okay. I'm going to give you three questions. For the first two questions, I want you to listen to the sentence and say the answers out loud. Fill in the blank with either... We'll give you a few seconds and then tell you the answer.

Here's the first question. The answer is unanticipated. The key word in this sentence is surprise. This means I didn't expect it. The answer is anticipate. Because I love swimming, I anticipate I'm going to have a great time. Now, we have one more question for you but first we'd like you to do us a favor. "Like" the video if you feel like you've learned something new.

Next, in the comments below, we'd like you to use the word "anticipate" in a sentence. If you need a little time to think of a sentence, just pause the video. Did you write your comment? Okay. If you did, let's look at the last question. For this one we want you to click on the answer you think is correct. If you get the answer right, we'll let you know. If the answer is incorrect, we'll take you back to the beginning of this video. Watching it again will give you a better understanding of the word. Okay. Here's the final question.

Things You Should NOT Say to Women (in English)

hello and welcome to our lesson today today we are we have a special kind of lesson it's not grammar related it is it's more of a cultural conversation I would say because it has a lot to do with with culture and it's very specific to the Western culture and women from Western culture so the point of this lesson is educational and it's about learning how to express yourself how to express yourself when you want to speak with somebody in a professional kind of situation whether it's your teacher or whether it's whether it's somebody that you just met or a co-worker or anyone like that I think it will be very very useful so hello everyone if you're just joining us hello welcome our Salah work on i'm maanna welcome Patricia welcome thank you guys for joining our cultural lesson today today we're talking about things you should never say to women especially if you want to be polite that's kind of where this is standing in the meantime I had some questions for you before we start is why do you think it's important to learn about other people's cultural values so some of these things that we're going to talk and discover about talk about today and address today these are things that are considered inappropriate or maybe a little rude in like the US or maybe England Britain but they might be considered completely appropriate and great topics of conversations in other countries and cultures so to me this is fascinating how how different cultures have different things that you can talk about and there we go I accidentally hit the start streaming button anyway so we have different things it's it's fascinating how we can talk about some things in some cultures and we cannot talk about them in different cultures so that's my first question is why do you think it's important to learn about people's cultural values and my second question to you today is what are other topics that people don't talk about in your culture so what are some things that people don't really talk about you know in some cultures like in the US and does it necessarily have anything to do with women it's it's money so people in the u.s. don't like to talk about money yet in other countries it's like one of the first things that people discuss is how much you're making also in the u.s. people don't really like to talk about age and we'll talk about that a little bit in this lesson it's not really brought up but in other cultures it's one of the first things that people usually mention they mentioned the age they are because it's an important part of the conversation you address them in a certain way if they're a certain age so it's it's kind of very interesting to see what things people like to talk about and what people don't like to talk about so welcome our she'd a welcome Helen a nice Lasserre presentation from France Brazil Italy let us know your name is where you're coming from it's really nice to have some answer Laura yes because we have to respect every culture right so when you're talking to somebody from a culture it is nice to try to respect their culture and kind of try to understand their culture so I think I think that's very true thank you so if you guys are just joining just write down why do you think it's important to learn about other people's cultural values okay so there we go so like I said before to me this is a it's an educational listen it is kind of a compilation of things that have been that I've heard that have been said to me over the years many times and most of the time from people that were meaning very very well they're just trying to be concerned about certain things but they just didn't know that what they're saying could be inappropriate and that's the part that I think it's most important because when we try to communicate with someone and we mean well we definitely don't want them to get offended and that can be very a very important issue so and i'ma says it's really important to know how cultures are different because it's amazing to discover new things and be open-minded minded to other cultures that's right so that's that's exactly right I think I'm I'm of the same opinion I think when you learn about new cultures it's it's very fascinating for me to find out how different cultures think about different subjects and some some crazy things that could be offensive in one culture it could be a compliment in a different culture which is kind of it's it's it's fun to think about okay so but why am I giving this lesson about things you shouldn't say in English to someone well because like I said before you you may you may be your comment may be construed as rude or disrespectful which is definitely not something that we want to be so depending on the culture is something that can seem like it's a concern about someone it may not be appropriate and another reason especially if you have a cultural or a professional connection to somebody that you're talking to it could have serious consequences like you may lose your job if you make an inappropriate comment if you you may get expelled if you're working in a school so now we're talking it can get pretty serious so the point like I said of this lesson is to kind of hear some of the things that you shouldn't say and then just kind of try to avoid them so again I think I'm gonna show you what the first slide in a second and then I'm going to ask you and I'm going to ask you right now and you can tell me what are some things that you were asked whether you're a man or a woman it doesn't matter what are some things that you are asked that you didn't like so some things that you were asked throughout your life that you just did not like yeah I thank you aya welcome welcome welcome my shade from Sudan welcome I I yes thank you I'm glad you guys are enjoying this I had a lot of fun putting this lesson together because there were so many things that I was like okay we need to talk about this because without intention it can be offensive so thank you guys for joining and please write down whether you're a man or a woman it doesn't matter what are some things that you were asked throughout you know generally speaking that you did not like okay okay so going back to what you should never say to women number one in my opinion because it's it's the one that I've been told the most you look tired like this cat's right here so as a teacher I had so many students come into my office and I think I just had a bad office with some bad lighting because so many students would come to my office and be like teacher teacher you look so tired teacher you look tired and I I was like oh man I look tired but I spent all this time putting on makeup and so the point would you look tired and why it's not appropriate it is because it tells somebody that maybe they don't look good and the flipside is maybe they're not tired maybe they think they look great maybe they're very well rested and maybe they just think they look great and you just told them they don't look good now I understand that many cultures this comes from they're concerned about your health somebody's concerned they're showing that they care there it's it's a very nice thing to say to show but in the u.s. in the US and and in other Western cultures it is not polite to tell somebody that they look tired very nice so yeah we're talking about how much I earn you yeah a lot yeah that's that's not polite in the US either and asking a woman if she is pregnant and that's absolutely the same in the in the Western culture and I'll talk about why that is offensive as well in in the u.s. too it's just yeah it's definitely a big no-no so other ways people can ask you know like are you tired people have asked me teacher why your eyes so red maybe I have an allergy it can happen I know it comes from concern but I just be mindful it's not something that um that you want to ask some money so you look tired just forget about it don't mention them if you want to say something about what somebody looks like I would say stick with something super general like be very vague and just say you look well you look great if you have to say something but in general I would say try not to comment too much about what somebody looks like because it might get you in trouble so if you're very specific like you look beautiful it's again it's not appropriate because it might be your teacher it might be somebody else that you have a professional relationship with so you have to make sure that you don't that it's not unprofessional okay my second one hi long welcome welcome welcome so if you guys are just joining us we are talking about things you should never say to women in English and if you guys have anything to add that in your country people don't like to talk about or things that you were told or you were asked that you didn't like being asked please share them it is so much fun for us all of us to read them together and see how different cultures are I think that's very very exciting and one of the best things about doing a lesson such as this the renzo says that in Italy people in the south don't like to talk about value from territory and it could help self omim probes okay sorry hum okay so let's see so there's so many things that people don't like to talk about so please if there's something that people don't like to talk about in your country share it with us it will be fun to read together okay so the second one is are you sick and this is very similar to are you tired or you look tired because again maybe the person is not sick and that means that this is what they look like today and maybe you're saying that they don't look as good as they should and it's it's a little bit offensive to tell somebody so that's that's part of why we shouldn't although I understand that it could come from you might have a good reason maybe you want to help this person maybe you think you know maybe you're concerned you're thinking maybe they're not taking their vitamins or something like that but don't say anything like this okay welcome save us welcome to our lesson today I don't know if a mobile number yeah I wouldn't ask it really depends who you're talking to I'm talking of a very general kind of from a professional standpoint like somebody like like you would you would have a co-worker or a teacher or somebody like that that you have a professional relationship with so yeah definitely don't ask your teacher their mobile number because that is not professional and again if you guys are just joining write down some things that you are asked that you didn't like or maybe you want to share some things that you liked they that you were asked that you did like and we can see how that's different from culture to culture exactly privacy is the Patricia thank you for mentioning that yes when when we talk about our private lives it's not something that that you should that women like to just share so if it has anything to do with personal information and like I'll talk about like weight or like age or money or any personal details it's people don't or if they have a boyfriend or a husband or somebody like that it's it's not appropriate to ask oh yeah yeah you cannot ask if somebody got fat or definitely nothing with weight stay away far away from anything that has to do with a woman's weight because it can never go anywhere good you can never go anywhere good okay so the one that is coming up a lot and definitely you can see it online and people really finally are addressing this one is you should smile and why you shouldn't tell a woman that she should smile or ask her on the flipside why are you so serious or something like that it's because it's not something that you would tell a man it's just not something you don't just go to your your male teacher and say teacher you should smile it's it's usually just told to women and it's it's not appropriate so they're not there to smile they're just there to do their job and it's just not related to kind of to that kind of you don't have that relationship with them is just not appropriate okay so it's something that you have to be very careful about and just I would say be as profession as you can when you first meet a person because that it puts you it like kind of in the safe zone so if you guys are just joining us welcome and thank you we are talking about things you should never say to women and if you have some things to add the you know about things that in your country people shouldn't say or things that you know you shouldn't say please write them down because it's so much fun to look them over yeah please never ask a woman Helen very good point if if they are fat or why they got fat or how come they got fat just don't don't do it so if you have any other things to add like things that have you've been asked that you hated or things that you've been asked that you liked please write them down because it's fun to share okay speaking of weight to never never ask how much do you weigh now in some cultures this is now that it's welcome but it's more it's more discussed than in the u.s. really no one in the US should ever ask a woman or in a Western culture like that like how much do you weigh now I'm originally from Romania and in Romania for some reason people love to talk about weight they everyone's sharing I'm 55 kilograms I'm 50 kilograms I'm whatever I don't like to share how how much I weigh and I don't I think women are from magazines too to reading novels too everything about women were exposed to so much scrutiny about our weight that it's just we don't need to keep asking so please never ask a woman anything in relation to her weight not even if you think she looks skinny so because that can be a problem and I'll talk about that in a second so please don't ask about a girl's weight never never ever just be on the safe side don't say anything okay yeah so it's it's not a it's not appropriate in Egypt to call someone with their mother's name so that's very interesting yes so seeing some cultures that can be some things may be more appropriate than in other cultures so it's very very very useful to know if you're talking to somebody from the US especially in a professional environment what not to say and definitely never ask your coworker how much they weigh please okay and this is another one that in some cultures may be offensive and in others it may not be generally speaking in the u.s. people don't like to talk about how old they are in fact you often in movies and things like that you see people saying that they're always turning 39 and is there like fifteenth time to turning 39 so people really don't like to talk about their age so it's not good to put them in that position to ask them hey how old are you and again all of these questions that I'm asking I have been that I'm sharing you today I'm have been asked and I know for sure because I know the people who've asked me they don't come from a place of nobody's trying to be offensive but without realizing they can be especially if you're asking like in job interview oh my gosh just don't do it right so try to be just mindful of who you're talking to okay so again this can be rude in some countries if you're asking about age now I wanted to ask you if you guys are just joining us first of all welcome if you haven't answered yet please answer what are some things that people in your country don't like to talk about what are some topics that are not very open for discussion or as we call it taboo so things that we don't want to talk about we don't like to talk about we don't talk about our are cold tableau okay the is a personal one that has been told to me a few times and it has to do with makeup like you don't need to wear makeup and the reason why this is problematic or you shouldn't say it is first because just as a rule of thumb you should be careful on commenting on someone's appearance it's it's not good to do it especially if you don't know this person if you have a professional relationship with them you want to stay away from saying anything about what they look like and another reason is because you are saying that they're doing something wrong so it can be a little bit offensive for example you know you may be saying like oh you have too much makeup or something like that so when you're implying that somebody's doing something wrong that can be a problem the other reason is because you might hurt someone so women often wear makeup for different purposes some people are trying to hide scars like if they have some serious problems with their skin or maybe they had a traumatic event earlier from in their life and they hurt themselves and now they have a scar they're trying to cover so that can be a problem so just make sure that you don't mention anything about someone's appearance things they should do or shouldn't do because you could be hurtful or you could be offensive okay so we're kind of halfway through this I'm just going to go through them really quickly for the people who just joined today first one is you look tired or you look sick are you sick you should smile how much do you weigh how old are you and then finally not finally but we're talking about you don't need to wear a makeup yeah so it can be a little personal so to both women or men I would just in I think in general it I think for any person if you tell them that they look tired it can be construed maybe that you're worried about them or something like that so just don't worry don't worry about saying that okay oh another one that has to do with weight that again has been told to me are you sure you want to eat that like everyone who knows me knows I love love love chocolate like I love chocolate and many times sometimes students would joke around and be like teacher you keep eating all these cookies are you sure you want to keep eating cookies and and it it could be funny it could be funny but in the same in the same time it again relates to um that to the subject that women should only eat a little bit which it's kind of ridiculous we all know the women are normal people just like men and you can eat if you're hungry you should eat and and it's fine so please don't ask a woman if if they're going to eat that or if they should be eating that or anything that relates their weight or anything like that if you're just joining us write down the some of the things that that you would that you would not like to be asked they or the you were asked and you don't you don't like to talk about or that things that are that people don't like to talk about in your country any of these things it it is really fun to to kind of share and read okay another one that I've heard a lot about is a silly one I think but I have heard it so I'm sharing it with you please never say to a woman women are emotional or worse women are crazy um I think this is a problem because you're stereotyping you're making a statement about all women and clearly we don't know all the women so we can say that there are this so to say that women are emotional or more in more emotional than men that's even worse so just don't mention anything up something like this is just it's um it's just stereotyping and it's not good to stereotype like that and I can assure you that you're going to make somebody very angry if you tell them women are emotional or they're crazy so one or the other please just don't say it I have heard it and it's really hard to to to to get out of it so you can make somebody very very angry with this comment so just just don't oh this is a backhanded compliment if you guys don't know what backhanded means it is a compliment it's a compliment so you're telling somebody something good but then in the same time you're kind of offending with him you look great for your age so this is not good if you tell somebody they look great for their age it means that you think that they're old and like I said especially in the u.s. women are sensitive about their age so telling them not you look great but you know you're kind of old but you look okay even if you're old so it's it's a little bit it's upsetting so don't don't say this one the next one which may seem like it's a good thing to say knowing that you don't want to call women fat it's it's not a good thing so even if somebody looks like they've lost weight you are commenting on what they look like and on their weight and it makes them self aware also maybe they're going through an illness and they're sick and maybe they've lost weight unintentionally so maybe they did not want to lose weight and maybe they're going to something so even if you think you're you're complimenting someone you might not be so like I said please don't don't don't comment on someone's weight you shouldn't tell them you look like you gained weight you look fat you look like you've lost weight nothing about weight just never mention it nope just don't do it okay and yes latter I hate it too a lot of people say women are moody or emotional and it's just very stereotypical and

just not true so it's it's just kind of like saying that you know like it's you can't steer your type like that you can say all the women on the planet are a certain way and so I definitely agree it really it upsets me too a lot and there is no way that that can be construed as good okay pregnant are you pregnant now again there may be occasions when you look and see a woman that you think for sure she's pregnant like she looks very pregnant I'm sure she's pregnant can I ask no and the reason you cannot ask is because you may be wrong maybe she's not pregnant and maybe she has health problems or issues or even worse maybe she is trying to get pregnant but she can't because of infertility and then you're really hurting somebody so please please please don't ask about pregnancy or weight issues because it can be you can be mildly offensive but you could really hurt someone and that's really not what you want to what you want to say now the other thing I was going to say is if you do see a pregnant woman and she tells you she's pregnant and then you talk about it don't say like oh you look really big or you're you're about to pop or I think pregnant women when they're pregnant they're very aware of their situation they know they're pregnant and they don't need to hear how big they are from other people I think it's very it can be very upsetting so um yeah please don't ask and also sometimes you just have a big meal like I if you know sometimes you really enjoy yourself like we just had Thanksgiving and sometimes you eat too much and your stomach pain may come out you know you have a big meal and your tummy is bigger and that's okay but please don't ask don't ask somebody if they're pregnant it's just it's just not okay it can really make somebody very sad okay so these are the these are the things you should never say to a woman if you have any other others that you think you shouldn't say to women please please please write them down it will be fun even if you're watching now or later it's very fun for us to read anything other than weight loss pregnancy me women being emotional eating a lot of food wearing makeup aged or smiling or being sick or tired so if you have any of these or if you have any experience with people asking you these like you guys have been sharing it's yeah I see it it does make us feel bad Helen I agree completely I haven't been asked yet but I've been told so many of these things especially about my weight and about about looking tired and sick and people telling me that I look good for my age and so many of these things so it's generally not good it can make somebody very sad so um I just don't do it okay well that's it for today thank you guys so much for watching if you have any anything else to add about things that are inappropriate in your culture to say to women or generally the you know that have been told to you please share them with us I love to read them um oh yeah that got me in trouble too about giving our seat to somebody who I thought yeah that I was I had the problem when that's - okay okay well thank you guys so much no not see anything you can say many things if you really want to say something you can tell somebody you look great you look fabulous you look well but don't be very specific like your eyes are like I don't know especially and again I'm talking about a professional relationship so I'm not talking about what to say to your wife or your girlfriend although please don't tell your wife or your girlfriend that they look pregnant because that's not going to go well over well so but just be very specific with a very general with your with your compliments okay well thank you guys for watching and please if you found this lesson useful I like it and share it and have a wonderful wonderful weekend and I will see you guys next time thank you guys

Think You're Fluent? This English Grammar Quiz Will Test You!

today you are going to test your grammar skills so I have a quiz for you and this quiz ranges from the B1 level to C2 so really it is for intermediate to Advanced Learners and I want to see how much you know and if you are someone who enjoys improving your grammar skills Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so this is a quiz lesson which means I would like you to participate you can write your answers on a separate sheet of paper or even use the comments section I just love hearing from you I like seeing people participate in these lessons because after all this is interactive English so let's begin with parts of speech and I want you to tell me what is the predicate noun when you have this sentence right here mark became an actor so there are four words in the sentence one of these words is a predicate noun and that word is the word actor so a predicate noun is a noun or a noun phrase that follows a linking verb to provide additional information about the subject of the sentence in this case the subject of the sentence is Mark our linking verb became and that means the predicate noun is actor and in case you're wondering we're talking talking about Mark Hamill that is who is pictured right there from the movie Star Wars the next question is where are the chairs there are several in the closet I want you to focus on the word several and tell me if that is an indefinite pronoun or an indefinite adjective you only have two choices and I hope that you said the word several is an indefinite pronoun so let's talk about the difference between the two indefinite pronouns stand alone and do not modify a noun or pronoun here's an example for you he doesn't talk to anyone in that case anyone is an indefinite pronoun now indefinite adjectives are used to describe a noun in a nonspecific sense check out that example sentence he doesn't know many people so in this case many describes people in a non-specific sense because it doesn't tell us exactly how many people knows we just know that he doesn't know many people here's the next question it's just like Wes to show up a half hour late so in this sentence right here what part of speech is the word like this can be a little tricky because the word like it can have many different parts of speech but in this sentence we're talking about like as a preposition it means that it is typical or characteristic of and you may hear it used in a sentence like this it's just like someone to and then you're talking about their their characteristic it's just like Wes to show up a half hour late but the word like it can be tricky because it may be a verb a noun a conjunction an adverb and of course in this sentence right here it is a preposition here is the next question after a few minutes we found the key in the drawer so looking at this sentence I want you to identify the object of the preposition this is a little bit of a trick question because there are actually two objects of the preposition we're talking about the words minutes and drawer so after a few minutes this is a prepositional phrase minutes is the object of the preposition we found the key where in the drawer that is another prepositional phrase so the word drawer is also the object of the preposition so these are nouns that work with a preposition to form a prepositional phrase now let's test your knowledge when it comes to verb tenses I'm going to give you a sentence and I just want you to complete the sentence using the verb that I give you with the correct tense the movie M tomorrow at 8:00 p.m.

how would you complete this sentence and use the verb start so technically speaking you could complete this sentence in one of two ways we're talking about tomorrow so I I wouldn't say it's incorrect to use the future tense however in this case because we're talking about scheduled time it's more common to use the present simple the movie starts tomorrow at 8:00 p.m. we use the present simple when we refer to future events that are planned and they're not likely to change so a movie has a set time in this case it's tomorrow at 8:00 p.m. we'll use the present simple the movie starts tomorrow at 8:00 p.m. how about this one I for the bus for the last 20 minutes I want you to use the verb wait so think about the context think about the situation you are at this bus stop right here and you're telling this to someone else and in this case it would be appropriate to use the present perfect continuous I have been waiting for the bus for the last 20 minutes we're talking about something that started in the past has continued to the present right now and will likely continue into the future I've been waiting for the bus for the last 20 minutes here is another one yesterday nobody noticed when I M out of the room so the verb that I want you to use is slink so slink it's not the most common verb in the world I will talk about what it means but we're talking about something that happened yesterday it is finished therefore you would use the past simple and to slink it it means to walk away somewhere quietly so that you're not noticed and the past of slink is slunk yesterday nobody noticed when I slunk out of the room it's finished it happened and I slunk out of the room here's another one your phone rang while you were outside call them back I'm I'm giving you a choice here are you going to complete this question with are you going to or will you which one do you think is more appropriate your phone rang while you were outside call them back so in some situations you may use be going to or will to talk about the future but sometimes there are some differences like in this case so we're talking about prior plans something you intend to do therefore it's more common to use be going to your phone rang while you were outside are you going to call them back now to give you another example of a difference between will and be going to if you are making an immediate decision in that case it's more appropriate to use will now to give you another example of a difference between will and be going to would be immediate decisions in that case it's more appropriate to use will Let's uh stick with the phone my phone is ringing I I'm going to say I'll answer it it's an immediate sudden decision in that case I'll use will I will answer it I'll answer it so let's move on to plural nouns I'm going to give you a noun I just want you to tell me the plural form I'll give you a moment to think about it and then I'll tell you the answer so the singular is roof what is the plural form of this noun I hope that you gave me one of two answers you could say roofs or rofes either one of those is acceptable when talking about the plural of roof here's the next one fungus that is a singular noun what is the plural of fungus the answer is fungi that is the plural form of fungus here's another one entheses that is the singular noun what is the plural of entheses if we're talking about the plural form of this noun it is entheses entheses entheses then we have the singular elf there's one elf but there are many what the answer is elves there are many elves let's move on to some figures of speech and this this can be a little tricky but here is your first one he is as tall as a tree it's a simile I think you understand it but I I want you to tell me what is this sentence an example of a simile b irony C alliteration or D hyperbole a simile simile is the comparison of two things using the words like or as he is as tall as a tree here is the next one boom this this just that word alone that is an example of what a pleonasm b scty C anopia or D personification I I don't want to go through each one because I'm going to bring some of these back up in just a little bit but if I say a word like oh boom crack bang Splash those are examples of onomatopoeia this is when you use words that are used to represent sounds and they're similar to noises here's the next question the wind howled all night this sentence is an example of a simile B upon C personification or D sync truthfully the wind doesn't really howl that is something that a wolf might do but I may use the verb howl just to make my writing a little more engaging and in that case this sentence is an example of personification you are giving human characteristics to non-human things in this case the wind and saying that it howled all night now I would like you to write an example of alliteration any example of a alliteration I think that this is something that you know you're probably familiar with it so let me show you a couple of examples sheep should sleep in the shed you have that sh sound or Peter Piper picked a pi pickled peppers this is a tongue twister tongue twisters often use alliteration which is the repetition of the first letter or sound within a group of words all right it's time for a quick spell check I'm just going to give you a word and I want you to identify the correct spelling I'm telling I'm giving you the meaning as well so if you are feeling like you might vomit you could say that you are nauseous how do you correctly spell the word nauseous the correct answer is be nauseous it's a useful adjective if you have this feeling and you want to say that oh you know right now I feel a little nauseous how about this word right here this is a pretty common word we're talking about a day of the week Wednesday but it's a word that I often find misspelled now I hope that you chose C Wednesday uh again the spelling and the pronunciation don't really match but definitely a word you should know how to spell how about this word entrepreneur this is someone who starts a business I believe that this word is borrowed from French entrepreneur and the correct spelling for entrepreneur is B so keep in mind that the stress is on that final syllable when you're pronouncing this word entrepreneur entrepreneur and then we have the word narcissistic if you really have a lot of admiration for well for yourself then you could say that you are narcissistic and if you want to spell this word correctly you are going to spell it just like C narcissistic let's do some sentence Transformations actually we're going to do some keyword sentence Transformations and well what does that mean it means I'm going to give you a statement and I want you to use the keyword to complete this other statement so that it has the same meaning and I think this is really useful because we're checking your grammar and your vocabulary so you're it's kind of quizzing you on two different things so the first one is a question would you like to watch a movie I want you to complete that second question do you m movie and I want you word matter and complete the following sentence it's only they learn the truth what phrase would you use with matter when talking about well that you know the truth is going to come out it's only a matter of time before they learn the truth really has a similar meaning to they're going to learn the truth one day it's only a matter of time before they learn the truth how about my boss is determined not to give me a pay raise use the word intent when completing this sentence my boss m a pay raise and we could say my boss is in intent on not giving me a pay raise so the one thing I want you to keep in mind when you're using intent you're often going to follow that with the preposition on you are intent on doing something in this case my boss is intent on not giving me a pay raise so of course I would like to know how you did on the quiz let me know down in the comments I always love hearing from you if you you enjoyed this grammar quiz and testing your skills let me know by hitting that like button as always thanks for watching thanks for participating and I will see you next time so long

Think Your English Is Advanced? Prove It in This Grammar Challenge!

Let's talk about some confusing English grammar. And if you would like to improve your grammar skills, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And if you'd like to get the lesson notes here, check out the link down below in the description. Join our email community. From time to time, I will send you these notes so that you can practice and review. So, this is going to be a quiz lesson. I will give you a moment to think of the answer and then I'll tell you the answer and explain why this can be a bit confusing. So, here is your first question. I didn't wake up this early. Are you going to complete this sentence with a used to or be used to?

I hope that you chose a used to. I didn't use to wake up this early. We're using it as a verb. And there are several reasons why this may be confusing, but let's focus on using used to as a verb, which means it's used to say that something existed or repeatedly happened in the past, but does not exist or happen now. So, for the most part, because of the meaning, you're probably going to use this in the past tense, like in the example, I used to wake up early. I did in the past but not now. In our example, I'm using the negative did not. In which case, we'll follow that with the base verb us. I didn't use to wake up this early. What also makes this tricky is that used to can also be used as an adjective. It refers to something you're familiar with or accustomed to. I'm used to running in hot weather or I'm not used to running in hot weather. So, just keep that in mind. You can use this as a verb or as an adjective. Used to and be used to. Here's the next question. Your voice is soothing. Can you read this story? What do you think? To me or for me? Now, technically speaking, either one is correct, but this is my opinion. I feel like in this context, I think it's probably a little more appropriate to use a to me. Your voice is soothing. Can you read this story to me? And the key word in this case is soothing. This is my opinion. And because of that, I'd like to hear your voice. Can you read it to me instead of for me, which is like, well, I just don't want to be responsible for this thing. So, here are some examples as to when you might use to me and for me. I'm not going to go over all of these. You can check out that link in the description and get these lesson notes if you want to look at all of these different examples. But I would like to specifically look at these two right here. So, using to me when you're talking about your perceived opinion. This problem sounds difficult to me. I don't know how to do it. Okay, I'm really expressing my opinion and using to me versus for me. It's talking about how it affects you because maybe well I this problem needs to get done. Somebody has to do it. And I might say, well, this problem is too difficult for me. I can't solve it. Again, when thinking of the example, if I were to say, well, your voice is soothing, you know, can you read this to me? I think of it more as like you're you're talking about your opinion and you enjoy listening to someone and that's why I chose to me even though for me would also work. Now I realize that this still may be a bit confusing to me versus for me. But if you are ever in a position and you really want to know well which one's more commonly used a great resource is engram viewer.

two different words or phrases and you want to just know, well, which one is more common, this is a great resource. So, if I put in the statement, it's new to me versus it's new for me. As you can see, it's a little more common to come across it's new to me. Just something to keep in mind. Here is the next question. I started learning English in an early age. Are you going to complete this sentence with since or from? So the correct answer is be from. I started learning English from an early age. Let's look at the difference between from and since. You're going to use from to denote the starting point of an event, action, or journey. You're going to use since to indicate a point in time that continues to the present.

And and look at some of those examples. the doctor will be here from 10:00 a.m. tomorrow versus the doctor has been here since 10:00 a.m. We're starting at that point since 10:00 a.m. and continues to the future. The exhibition runs from March to May. All right, we're talking about that action, that event versus the exhibition has been running since March. Again, we're using it as a point in time. Here is your next question. We decided to go out in the rain. Are you going to complete this sentence with in spite of, despite, or are both of them correct? This is kind of a trick question because the correct answer is C. Both are correct. We decided to go out in spite of the rain or we decided to go out despite the rain. In spite of and despite.

And I've taken this from Cambridge's online dictionary. In spite of and despite have a similar meaning to although or even though. They express a contrast between two things. And I've given you a couple of examples. They arrived to the airport late despite leaving in plenty of time. Or they arrived to the airport late in spite of leaving in plenty of time. How about this one right here? She's in New York City. She'll be back tomorrow. Are you going to complete that with been to or gone to? The correct answer is gone to. She's gone to New York City. She'll be back tomorrow. So, what's the difference between been to and gone to? You're going to use been to to describe completed visits. All right. It's over. You were there and then you're back. I have already been to the store and now I'm back. or we have been to India twice in the last year. You're going to use gone to to describe a visit that you have not returned from yet. He's gone to the toilet. He'll be back soon. Or you just missed her. She's already gone to bed. So really, there is a distinct difference between been to in which it's completed versus gone to and you're not back yet. Here is your next question. Did you watch my new lesson? M YouTube. Which preposition are you going to use? In, on, or at. Hopefully, this was a little easier and you knew that the answer was on. Did you watch my new lesson on YouTube? Now, in, on, and at can really be confusing, and I'm not going to go over all of these examples, but in general, you're going to use in when talking about an enclosed space. you're surrounded on all sides.

We're going to use on when referring to a surface, something that is either attached to or touching something. And you're going to use at when referring to a point, a specific location, or position. So again, you can get the lesson notes and and really go through and look at some of these different examples. How about this one? There is a bear in our neighborhood sometimes rummages through our garbage cans. Are you going to complete this with that, which or who? And if you're unfamiliar with the meaning of the verb to rummage, to rummage through something just means to really look through something quickly and carelessly. These relative clauses can be tricky, but I hope that you chose a that there is a bear in our neighborhood that sometimes rummages through our garbage cans. So, let's talk about these relative clauses, that, which. So, in general, you're going to use that when referring to people, animals, or things.

You're going to use which when referring to animals or things, and you're going to use who when referring to people. This information is either going to be part of a restrictive clause, which means that the information is needed. So in that case, you're going to use either that or who. Or if it's a nonrestrictive clause, in which case the information is not necessary in order to understand the meaning, you'll use which or who. In our example, we're talking about a restrictive clause and we're talking about an animal. So in this case, I think that is the preferred relative clause to use. And I say preferred because if you chose which, you know, technically it is not incorrect. I think using which would probably be a little more common in British English. But because I'm from the US, I'm giving you that perspective. And in that case, that is the preferred relative clause. How about our next question right here? At the store, we need to pick up some fruit. M apples, bananas, and watermelon. Are you going to complete this with eg or IE? When making a list, you're going to use eg because it stands for for example. At the store, we need to pick up some fruit. For example, eg apples, bananas, and watermelon. So, eg, as I just said, stands for for example, I love eating exotic fruits. For example, durian, passion fruit, hornmelon, guava, and jackfruit. Yes, I love my exotic fruits. Whereas I am an abbreviation. It stands for in other words, the fact that they came up with something like I'm not even going to try to pronounce it. Um, in other words, the fear of long words because that is what the word means.

Shows that psychiatrists do have a sense of humor. And this is a a funny little example uh using this very long word. I'm afraid of spiders. That's called arachnophobia. What are you afraid of? Long words. He says that's called hippopotamus. I'm not even going to try to pronounce it, but it's just a it's a fun little joke that I wanted to share with you. Here is the next one. All applicants submit their resumes by the first of the month. Are you going to use must or have to?

Now in this context I think a must is the more appropriate choice. So must and have to they they are a bit similar but as you can see there are some distinct differences as to when it is more appropriate to use must and when it is probably more appropriate to use have to. So just as a quick example, you're going to use must when expressing something that is required. You must report to training camp by the end of the month. Whereas have to, you might use that to express necessity. I have to make a dentist appointment. So in this case, I really think it's expressing something that is required, which is why I would say all applicants must submit their resumes by the first of the month.

Preferred. She decided to quit her job immediately. Now, if I wanted to split that infinitive, I could say, "She decided to immediately quit her job." Or the preferred, "The doctor told me to check my blood pressure regularly." If I wanted to split that infinitive, the doctor told me to regularly check my blood pressure. Something to keep in mind. How about this one? Did you catch m fish today? Are you going to complete this with some or any? This may be a little easier but still confusing. I hope that you chose be any. Did you catch any fish today because we're talking about a question. So, some versus any. In general, we're going to use some when making affirmative statements. I have some extra pizza.

Now, there are some exceptions and I've also included some useful phrases if you want to check those out. But if we're talking about any, we're going to use that when making negative statements or asking questions like the one I just asked you. Did you catch any fish today? Now, once again, there are some exceptions and useful phrases with any as well. But let's move on to the next question, which is this. Which question is grammatically correct? Who do you believe or whom do you believe? Grammatically speaking, the correct answer is be whom. And I I specify that and say grammatically speaking because in spoken English, I think people often break this grammar rule. We're going to use who when referring to the subject of the sentence. We're going to use whom when referring to the object of the verb or preposition. I've given you some examples using both who and whom. But in this case, we're really talking about the object. Whom do you believe? And I I know that because I can then change it to a statement if I said I believe him. I believe her. Him and her, those are object pronouns. So, we're talking about the object with this question. Whom do you believe? Now, I mentioned that this grammar rule is often broken. And to prove my point, we can just check out engram viewer and I could put in the question, whom do you believe versus who do you believe? And as you can see, who do you believe is more commonly used? Again, that does not mean it's grammatically correct, but just something to keep in mind. So, here is a little review of all of the different grammar concepts that we went over.

This is why your English teachers encourage you to make mistakes...

Today we are going to give you some of the best advice when it comes to learning English. Before we begin, we'd like to remind you to please subscribe to our channel for more lessons on how to practice and improve your English. So today's advice is very, very, very important. And this will help you immensely in learning English. And it's something that is much easier said than done, but it is an inescapable fact. So the best advice that we can give you is don't worry about making mistakes. We make mistakes all the time. It's true. When it comes to making mistakes, you just need to accept it as a fact of life.

It's going to happen and that is okay. One of our favorite quotes is one by Albert Einstein. And he said, "A person who never makes mistakes never tried anything new." Very true. So the point is if you don't try something new, if you don't make the mistake, then you're never going to learn from them. And you can never improve. So when we started filming these videos we just kept making mistake, after mistake, after mistake. And we're still making mistakes today. If you're making a lot of mistakes, then that really just means that you are trying really hard. Which means that in the future you can correct those mistakes and make fewer.

Another great quote is, "The expert at anything was once a beginner." And this is true because in order to become an expert you have to start somewhere, which is at the beginning. And at the beginning you're going to be making a lot of mistakes and you learn, and you get better and better. And then you become an expert, and then you'll be able to help others correct their mistakes and improve.

Another piece of advice is don't feel bad and learn to laugh at your mistakes. We try to. One funny story about making a mistake is when I was teaching at a university in Korea. We were having a class discussion and one of the students was talking about a famous musical group called the Wonder Girls. And they had just had this hit song, and the chorus of the song is, "Nobody, nobody but you." I want nobody, nobody but you. I want nobody, nobody but you. But the student thought that they were saying, "Nobody, nobody wants you." Which is kind of completely the opposite message. And everybody kind of had a good laugh about it.

He did as well. You know he didn't mind. He was interested to learn the correct words that were being said in the song. And afterwards I told him, "You know, it's okay. It's an innocent mistake." And music is a great way to learn English and especially for listening and trying to identify the exact words that people are saying in the song. One experience that I have with music is I've been learning Spanish for quite a while and there is a famous bachata singer, Romeo Santos. And he has a song where he says, "Llévame contigo," which is take me with you. Llévame contigo, que no aguanto la aflicción. Llévame contigo, no seas malita y no no.

And, for some reason, I thought he was saying like, "No hable conmigo," which is don't talk to me. I remember when I told people that...like, yeah everybody thought it was pretty funny. And now that I think about it, yeah it is pretty funny. Take me with you. Don't talk to me. Now I know and when I sing along to the song I can say it correctly. Can you sing the song for us? I thought he was saying, "No hable conmigo." Llévame contigo, que no aguanto la aflicción. "No hable conmigo." Llévame contigo, no seas malita y no no. My listening is not the best. I think your singing is not the best. Yeah, my singing is even worse.

I also had a very public mistake. And this was again after years of learning English. In fact, it was in university in a big public classroom. I think there were about maybe 40 people. It was a literature class and at the very end we were reading a story where this character at the very end of the story kicked the bucket. We kept talking about different kinds of symbolism throughout the story, and then I ended up raising my hand in front of everyone and said, "I don't understand. Why did he kick the bucket at the end. Like why...?" It just didn't make sense. Why was there a bucket? Why was he kicking it? What does this mean?

You will start to internalize that information and correct those mistakes automatically when you start producing the language in speaking and writing. Yeah, at some point things will just sound wrong to you. And you say, "Okay, this just doesn't sound right. I'm not going to say it anymore." And then you realize, "Oh, I've corrected myself." So remember it is okay to make mistakes. Recommended even. You can see that...hey, things are no different for us. People make mistakes all the time and it's just part of the learning process. So in the comments below what we'd like you to do is tell us a mistake that you've made when learning English and how you've corrected it. I think it would be useful to look at what other people have written so that you can learn from each other.

Learn how people have corrected their mistakes and thus maybe fix your own mistakes. So everyone's just learning from each other. Sharing is caring. Thanks for watching and we will see you next time. Bye.

Try This! 5 Tricky English Adjectives Every Learner Should Master

Can you correctly pronounce these five adjectives right here? These are longer words which definitely makes them a little trickier to pronounce like the first one, unprecedented. This is a word that I think you'll hear more and more of. Things that are you just can't believe it's happening. It's unprecedented. The stress is on that second syllable. This lesson is un Well, there are there are many lessons like this so it's not unprecedented but you know what I mean. Preposterous. I just like saying that word, preposterous. You can certainly hear the stress on the second syllable. So if something is ridiculous, you can just say, "That's preposterous." Then there's simultaneous. You're going to hear all five of those syllables, simultaneous.

And the stress is on that third syllable. Say it with me, simultaneous. When things are happening at the same time. The next word is one that I really like, phenomenal. Of course that ph has a f sound and the stress is on the second syllable, phenomenal. I hope that you think this lesson is phenomenal. And finally, sophisticated. Whenever something is really complex, you can say it's sophisticated. Now that first syllable, you will hear more of a schwa sound which is an unstressed vowel sound, sophisticated. Of course we got that ph in there again, sounds more like a f, an f sound, sophisticated. This lesson Nah, it's not really sophisticated but [laughter] uh I hope that now that we've gone through them, it's much easier to pronounce these words.

UNLOCK THE AMERICAN ACCENT | Useful Pronunciation Tips

today i have 10 pronunciation tips to help you improve your speaking fluency and yes i am from the united states so some of these tips are more related to the american accent let's begin with number one and we're talking about elision in which you are removing sounds so number one you may not pronounce the t when it comes between two consonants and i'm sure you hear this when i say words like exactly or mortgage or christmas and this also goes for phrases as well if i were to say last night or mashed potatoes you don't hear that t at all number two let's stay with elision you may not pronounce the d when it comes between two consonants and again you hear this in words like sandwich or lands this also applies to phrases like used car or sand castle and notice that t is also gone in castle because it comes between two consonants so a couple of things going on with that one number three also part of elision you're going to drop that g in those ing words so it's really a difference between in and in taking taken normally i would say something like yeah i'm taking the day off and i think this is pretty common in just casual conversation with those verbs in the continuous tense playing watching dancing i hope that you are hitting that like button and subscribing to the channel so that i can become your teacher my name is wes and that's what interactive english is all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals number four and this one is definitely more american english you're going to use a flap t when the t comes between two vowels and a flap t sounds more like a soft d and i'm sure you hear it when i say words like water or beautiful and this also goes for phrases as well when the t comes at the end of the word and it's linked with another word that begins with a vowel so instead of saying something like we're going to meet at the office meet at we can link those together and now the t comes between those two vowels i can use a flap t we're gonna meet at the office we're gonna meet at the office number five be sure to pronounce those r's now this is a difference between american english and british english which is known for dropping those r's but in the u.s you want to pronounce those r's in words like father or whether or better and notice that flap t when i say better now some regional accents in the u.s such as like well the boston accent in the northeast they may drop some of those r's but in general just just go ahead pronounce those r's i have one quick announcement before we continue because if you are someone who would like to improve your speaking fluency well then you can join my speaking course just click on the link down in the description and when you do you will find a special discount code just for you the course is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally to help you speak confidently each week there is a different speaking topic you get a bit of variety we do engaging speaking activities help you build your vocabulary all of it to give you more confidence when you're having a conversation to help you speak clearly we always warm up each lesson with something related to pronunciation or connected speech and there are also pronunciation video lessons included in the course and this not only helps you speak clearly but i really do think it helps with your listening comprehension as well and speaking naturally you will learn some of the language nuances when to use certain words and phrases practice idioms as well as use a variety of ways to express some very common ideas so click on the link in the description if you'd like to join or learn more about the course and i just hope to speak to you soon now let's get back to those pronunciation tips number six don't be afraid to use the schwa sound especially with some very common words so the schwa sound it is an unstressed vowel sound it just sounds like uh you hear it in in words like banana banana you hear it in that first and last syllable now we can use the schwa in very common words like you which has two different pronunciations both are accepted when it's stressed you when it's unstressed and we say it with the schwa yeah so if i were to say like look at you okay you can hear that stress you if i were to ask something like um are you gonna write to me in the comments okay are ya gonna write to me in the comments i i say it with the schwa and i'm also making a suggestion as well are you gonna write to me in the comments number seven don't be afraid to use reductions there are certain phrases like going to and want to that often get reduced to gunna and wanna again you hear that schwa at the end so this is something that i think i end up doing like 99 of the time so if you want to speak like they do in your favorite tv show or movie then you're going to start using reductions number eight and this is a syllable stress rule so words that end in t-i-o-n or s-i-o-n it's pronounced as shun but the stress is going to come on the syllable before pronunciation comprehension all right i'm emphasizing a little bit so you can easily hear it pronunciation comprehension the stress is on the syllable before number nine another syllable stress rule words that end in t y c y p h y g y and a l the stress is going to be on the third to last syllable so electricity photography biology okay again i'm trying to over emphasize it so you can easily hear it but stress is on the third to last syllable number 10 keep an eye out for loanwords so these are words that are borrowed from other languages and english has borrowed many many words and often the word may keep its spelling and pronunciation and this is why sometimes you see a word in english and you think wow the spelling and the pronunciation they just don't match so to share with you a few loanwords that english has borrowed from languages like french champagne spanish marijuana hindi pajamas japanese samurai the the list goes on and on there are many many loan words just just keep in mind that the spelling and the pronunciation are not always going to match up i hope you enjoyed the lesson and learn something new again if you'd like to practice and improve your speaking with me click on that link down below in the description if you'd like to join my speaking course thank you so much for watching and i will see you

next time so long

USEFUL HALLOWEEN VOCABULARY | Words & phrases you should know

happy halloween all right so i hope that you are having a wonderful day i hope that you're going to have a wonderful halloween whether you are celebrating this holiday or not if you like halloween please go ahead hit that like button that'll tell me this is like uh this is actually part of my daughter's costume for tomorrow she's going to be a pumpkin uh it really doesn't fit on my big head it fits more appropriately on her she's right here uh i'll give you a little shot show you what she looks like um oh i thought you were gonna bring her okay never mind so we are going to talk all about uh halloween vocabulary words that are related to this this holiday uh so i have some some scary halloween vocabulary um ah here she is do you want to say hi to everybody that you can't see part of your new uh outfit uh for tomorrow her little pumpkin outfit say hi all right there you go excellent so before uh before we we jump into talking about all of these amazing words and phrases um i do want to let you know that there is still time if you would like to enroll in my upcoming speaking course that's all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly yeah speak naturally um i'm gonna put a link in the the description and i'll throw it right here in the chat as well if you'd like to join my speaking course if anything um if anything just check out the the landing page i didn't do this myself but um the person we had do this page did a really really nice job i thought so there's a bunch of more information about this talking about what's included in the course but the one thing the cool thing that i really wanted to share with you is because it's the end of 2021 there you can get a 30 discount if you use the code speak 30. you can get 30 off the course check out the page it gives you the the class times that are available um so again check that out um if you want to end 2021 on a strong note and and improve your your speaking fluency so uh i do want to say quick hello um good to see you lolly sleepwalker michelle leonardo yashar angela um christina abdullah catherine jude great to have you here i'll try to give some more shout outs as we go through the lesson because the way that we're going to do this because this is interactive english um we're going to be talking about the vocabulary i'm going to give you some questions and write your answers in the chat even if you're watching this later write your answers in the comments it's a great way to participate in the the lesson but also i think it does help you better remember these words if you're really trying to think about them before i just tell you uh what they mean so let's just go ahead and begin with uh with our first question right here so in stories as you see as it says a a dead person who comes back to life and sucks blood from other people at night it's basic i'm asking you like what what is this person called what do you call this person again all of these words are related to halloween this is a i think it's a word that you guys are probably familiar with i'm sure you've heard many of you have heard it before and the key the key phrase in there i would say is sucks blood okay what what do you think uh what what am i talking about um i'll give you a second to think of the answer and then i'll tell you excellent uh yes the correct answer is a vampire so a vampire there are so many movies and tv shows out there related to vampires somebody who's trying to to to suck the somebody uh the the blood um that's how they survive i guess but great job uh uh ruth juliana oh giuliana great to see you um breon lolly excellent the next question next halloween question that i have for you um for halloween people hollow out a pumpkin they cut holes in the side to create a face and then place a candle inside so what this is called what what do you call this it is a it is a phrase you can see some pictures of them right there what do you what do you refer to them as like basically the whole thing it's called a what and this is something that we we're gonna try and do tomorrow it's a fun activity i think especially if you're a kid and you create these um and you you hollow out take out the the seeds from the pumpkin put that candle inside make a face um what what's it called um all right excellent so the correct answer uh is a jack-o-lantern all right lolly great job a jack-o'-lantern so in this is what you would refer to like those the pictures of those pumpkins right there they are called jack-o'-lanterns a pumpkin that has has a face and there there's that candle inside i am going to i'm going to circle back to this later on so this will be a little bit of review but hopefully if you did not know this it's a great phrase to know because this is this is definitely a part of halloween okay let's keep going the next one is trying to get your vocabulary juices flowing and i have a word i've given you part of the word and well the meaning of this word it is a synonym for these other words right here it's a synonym for frightened or scared or frozen another word that you could use um another word that you could use is petrified so i think terrified if you said terrified you are you're absolutely correct um it also works it means the same thing it's another synonym and that word is that word is more common but if you want to use a word a little more advanced vocabulary that's not as common you could say petrified you were petrified and i think part of um petrified the meaning again that frozen part that you're you're so scared that you are unable to move so many people said terrified great job you guys got that right um no petrified uh but that's okay all right um hello ho hans excellent uh thanks for joining us good to see you nice to meet you um let's let's keep going with some more uh vocabulary words um hans and gustav welcome here is this um this is an adjective okay so it's an adjective that's used to describe a place or a person it means strange slightly frightening uh or making you feel uncomfortable all right so what what what word could you use to um describe a place or a person and and that it has that meaning so again part of this is just trying to get you to think of some of these different words that are often related to halloween these are words and phrases that if you are watching a movie or tv show which of course because it's halloween that is on tv you'll see a lot of them this is some vocabulary that that you will tend to come across um okay so i see some great answers in there so the word that we're looking for all right um describing a place or person is creepy okay so you could say that something is creepy um that it's as a place like it's strange it's slightly frightening or i think even if a person if you're saying like oh a person is is creepy then it's somebody that makes you feel uncomfortable some of the other words in there that you guys gave um spooky eerie again those work as well those are also great words that are related to halloween but we had one uh creepy who is it ah mr the sun and sleepwalker excellent catherine uh hamsa perfect the next the next question that i have for you and this one i think this one is um a bit more difficult uh so it's something that is impossible to explain by known natural forces or by science and you would refer to this as what okay so this is a more difficult word um i think it's probably you could say it's related to halloween but i think you this is probably something that you would probably find in more like movies that have like ghosts in it something that is unexplained um it can't be explained by science these natural forces so what what do you think um any any guesses what word would be used to describe what i'm talking about all right you guys uh you guys are close i see i do see one correct answer give them a shout out um perfect the answer that i was looking for the word that i'm talking about is paranormal so if you describe something as well this is paranormal um that that's what it refers to that you cannot er it's can be explained by science and often i think you might hear this word used um as a collocation with the word activity and you might say oh there's paranormal activity that something is going on that we can't explain and that's why i said maybe ghost something like that but keep an eye out for that collocation listen for it people will talk about paranormal activity all right so here is the next one this is well here's a it's a fill in the blank and let's say a is a meeting where people try to communicate with the dead and you would refer to this as what and again this is more advanced vocabulary it's not it's not a a word you're going to use in everyday conversation i imagine i don't think probably many of you have participated in a meeting like this um it makes me in a way think of the the game like the when you would play like the ouija the ouija board and you try to communicate with a ghost or a spirit but in general um this type of activity meeting um in which people will try to communicate with the dead uh what do you think i think when i when i give you the answer i think many of you are like oh yes i i have heard of that word i would say um i'm trying to think give you a hint like maybe more of a formal word for it um like i said it's not something that you people i think people that take this very seriously this is what they this is what it would involve so the word that i'm talking about in case you you're not sure maybe medium i know some people are saying maybe i'm not too familiar with it i'm talking about a seance so you could describe a seance as this meeting this activity in which people are trying to communicate with the dead through like chanting or could be some dances i i really don't know but you could say it's a seance but that's why i said like this would be like people that are really taking it more seriously um and participating and trying to do this you could refer to it as a seance and somebody asked if it's uh i think i don't know um gustav is it's a french word i don't it there is an accent marker over a seance so i'm not really sure i don't believe it is i i believe this word is borrowed from another language i'm not really sure um which if anybody can clear that up in the comments it would be greatly appreciated so let's continue i have some more um more words for you this uh i chose that picture because it looks um that picture looks a bit creepy okay so there's something creepy um in the shadows i want you to try to use a word to complete that sentence this is a word that um yeah is a bit uh it's a bit scary it's a bit creepy and you might hear it that that collocation in the shadows so again if you don't know think about like what what does your instinct tell you so i'm not telling you the meaning of this word i will tell you the meaning when i give it to you but do hans excellent so uh that's a it's another i'd say it is a little more advanced word it depends on the context but again thinking of these collocations to build your vocabulary lurking in the shadows lurking over someone's shoulder are ways that you can use that word all right um hi luca all right how are you so let's keep going on you guys i think you're doing great keep keep the answers coming um what do you call the process of forcing an evil spirit to leave a person or place by using prayers or magic okay what um so this is really even though it's a question i'm giving you the meaning the process of forcing an evil spirit to leave a person or a place um what do you call that and again this is a word that i think you're probably more likely to hear uh it movies like scary movies there's a very famous old movie that this was kind of um well it was kind of the title close and you guys are rocking this one so i'm just going to give you tell you the answer yes the answer is exorcism all right that is the process so great job um brayan pasek angela cece catherine uh juliana yashar lolly um okon uh ruth try to get more shout outs in there so we're talking about exorcism the movie that i was talking about um i guess you'd refer to the person is an exorcist and that was the title of the movie gosh i think how old that was back in like the 70s maybe um very scary movie a long time ago uh this next one what do you call this all right there's a picture for you um just just tell me no i'm not giving you the meaning nothing just that picture what is that called right there and the reason when you think of um i think again of halloween stories especially um like people from like a long time ago when they're scared they're like they'd go grab this and like let's go let's go get the evil person let's go let's go get that the witch or whoever and they would go and grab one of these and you would see them like marching in the street um using it to i guess they're they're gonna try to fight um with this but it's really it's a it's a farming tool um what do you refer to this as i think everybody's kind of right what i would say and the word that i'm talking for about um is a pitchfork so this is uh really like the farming equipment that somebody would use people are saying trident a trident is also um it does yeah it looks like that i feel like a trident makes me think more of like um poseidon the gree the the god that would have this weapon and they'd have like a trident so to me i think a trident i don't know and again i don't know if this is correct i think a trident would be more like a weapon whereas this is more for for farming uh you would use a pitchfork and that's why i said in movies um or tv shows it take takes place a long time ago people their farmers they would run and grab their pitchforks and they would mark and they'd run through the streets and be very angry so yes the word that i was looking for it is a pitchfork then we have um okay this is a little different some of you have already said that you've written this word so i know you know how to spell it but i'm going to give you a word i'll tell you what it means and i just want you to spell it so this is an adjective used to describe something strange and frightening in a mysterious way the word is eerie all right that's what it means if something is eerie it's strange or mystery in a mysterious way how do you spell the word eerie and it's a great word um it it's more advanced but i still think it's uh it's probably a little more common if we're talking about things that might um be scary like halloween so what do you think how do you spell the word eerie i know the first person to spell it correctly i know everybody's gonna going to see the answer of course um but excellent angela sleepwalker um baby jojo's lolly i i saw this word before people were writing it down when we were talking about the word creepy um or the the synonym which again eeries another one something that is frightening it's mysterious the the tricky thing is that there are two e's e-e-r-e-i and often to give you a little more information about this word how people use it they might use it with the word feeling like you would say i have an eerie feeling about this perhaps some situation instead of saying strange feeling you have an eerie feeling so that is a common collocation with uh with this adjective let's keep going why don't we shall we uh so here is your next question fill in the blank and i told you that we would come back to jack i i've already said that these um these pumpkins that are they're carved out they have this face they're called jack-o'-lanterns and it's believed that the jack-o-lantern the jack-o-lanterns they um their frightening faces scare away evil spirits so that whole idea is an example of what all right so hopefully i'm explaining this correctly that you're you're going to have an idea of what i'm talking about so the idea that these jack-o-lanterns those faces will frighten away evil spirits what would you call that that is a what all right and awesome you guys are rocking it uh yes uh saira sarah sorry i've mispronounced names sleek walker um we're talking about the word superstition all right so that is the answer that we're looking for and if you want to know specifically what a superstition means it is a belief that that people might have and that's not based in like scientific fact that it has not been proven there's no evidence to support this idea and you would call it um it's just a superstition it's something that people believe in and there's many superstitions out there uh like you see a shooting star and you make a wish or a four-leaf clover that's good luck that is an example those are other examples of superstitions but uh i think halloween in general there are quite a few superstitions i can't even say it quite a few superstitions related to halloween such as this one um right here okay so oh ceta said uh erie is a new word excellent glad glad to hear that you learned something new i always love it when people just walk away from these lessons just even learning one one new thing so hopefully there are some new words and phrases for you so little girl she's getting she's getting excited for halloween so one superstition claims that this is another this is a superstition that it's bad luck if you cross paths with this animal all right what uh what animal am i talking about uh specifically all right what would you say so it's another super this is a common one that's not it's not necessarily rooted in halloween it's just a superstition you guys i think seem to be very familiar with ran an alligator it's not an alligator we're talking about a black cat and i say it to be specific yes it is a black cat if you cross paths as far as i know with a um like a yellow cat or a white cat it's not supposed to be bad luck but if you cross paths with a black cat then the superstition is people think oh that's that's bad luck it's not it's not good luck um that is a more of a kind of a cultural question when it comes to halloween or superstitions in general so here we have uh i have another synonym question for you i'm using erie again a bit of review so a common halloween word that is a synonym for these other words right here and i keep in mind this is common all right it's a common word i've already seen some people write it um already thinking it was one of the other answers but uh so you could say chilling something is creepy we talked about that word at the beginning eerie that strange feeling this is another synonym um except this is a very common word um that you would hear that's related to halloween okay what do you think uh the answer yes uh yashar freyan lolly great job um that i i was looking for the word spooky so this is a very common halloween word if you say that oh something is a little a little spooky it's a little scary and this is a word i would be interested to know like the frequency that this word gets used when it's uh around halloween that probably there's this huge spike that more people are using the word spooky because i think other than halloween i don't i i don't really use this word that much but when it's time for halloween it's a word you might hear uh a lot more often then we have okay this this person right here who's that again just another another picture for you um what what would you call that i guess i guess i could say it's a person probably not but uh just looking at that hopefully that that looks familiar and you know uh what it's called so what do you think again write your answers um in the chat in the comments if you're you're watching this later um so uh i thank you guys you guys are right yeah you could call it death um but the answer yes lali that we're looking for specifically um some people put reaper and to to be this is the you'd say i guess the grim reaper um is i don't know i feel like in this i maybe like i said i don't um know if this is absolutely correct i know a reaper would be like somebody who would if somebody dies like they come up and it's like they collect the the dead after somebody dies and they say it's a reaper i feel like the grim reaper refers to like the the main one um which in this case other people like you said people would just refer to them as death like the the main one um all right so again grim reaper is what was looking for but again reaper or death i think that also works um vicky or gustav said you can't use the word spooky here interesting uh it's a trigger word wow interesting then uh i have another word uh well another let's see is it a word or phrase all right oh this is a word okay and this uh again this is i think good specific vocabulary all right miami she kind of crossed back and forth you probably hear her the sound a witch makes when laughing may be called a what so we're talking about a specific laugh that a witch would make if you're watching um a tv show or movie they have that very distinct laugh but it has a name and what would you call that that that that's uh that's my example for you i don't know if that helped at all when you heard me uh do that just now but what do you think so the answer that we're looking for is a cackle yes so great job uh lolly perfect uh sarah gustav hans um hottie yeah you would just say that this something cackling and i would think of a witch i really don't know anybody who their laugh in general is like a cackle but um again it's a great word if you want to be specific talking about how that a witch would laugh that okay so here is another word that i'm giving you kind of like i tried to give you these are collocations so it's an adjective that means like involving violence or blood it's kind of um i guess you could say it's a halloween word but you could use it in other contexts in situations as well and these are um like i said collocations you could say it's a movie or those are some um details and again the adjective means that it's involving violence or blood what um what adjective would go before the word movie or details like movie or um details what would you say i think the key word violence uh violence and blood all right and it's a little it's scary and yeah i think when i tell you probably you've you've heard of this i haven't seen anybody answer it kind of close sarah lolly that's close all right um unless uh unless i've made a slight spelling mistake uh which is always possible with my typos um so the answer were looking for gory all right you'd say something is a uh gory movie gory details um and it involves like violence or blood so gory you think of something that there's a lot of like uh blood and again are the words from today if you are on our email list i have a special halloween if you sign up today uh i have a special halloween treat i'm gonna send you these notes um everybody if you wanna sign up there's also a link down below in the description for that if you wanna sign up to the email list but if you do that today i'm gonna send those out to everybody on the list these um these these notes from this lesson so hopefully that out of these 16 words one of them is new and you learn something new today that is always um that's always my hope with any of these vocabulary lessons that i end up doing i um i hope you enjoyed the lesson i hope you guys have like i said at the very beginning a wonderful halloween whether you celebrate it or not and uh again if you guys want to practice and improve your speaking one last little shout out you can check out um the link down in the description if you'd like to sign up for speak for my speaking course all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly speak naturally you can check that out for more details and more information or if you have any questions just email me info at interactiveenglishvideos.com so uh lolly says six words were new awesome um yashar some of them were new and and the other thing that i would say if these are if these are some new words if tomorrow because tomorrow is halloween if you're watching something about halloween whether it's a tv show or movie or maybe you're reading something maybe go try to find an article related to halloween and see if you come across any of the words from this lesson all right any of these words right here so that's what that's your homework assignment so it's a great way to continue building your vocabulary um and really taking these words and putting them up here making it a part of your active memory so thank you guys for being here thanks uh angela lolly eudet muffin sleepwalker juliana good to see you um gustav hans cece god of sarah happy halloween um and i will see you guys in the next lesson

USEFUL LISTENING SKILLS | Main Idea - Key Details - Make Inferences - Interpret Meaning

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English which are channel it's all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I want to talk to you about a skill that is very important and that is listening but not only that I want to talk to you about different listening skills especially very important listening skills because listening I think is well it's something that you know it's part of the way we communicate we all want to have conversations and in order to do that we need to understand what the other person is saying it's very important and I want to practice some of these different listening skills with you today in order to help you improve your skills because to be quite honest listening this is actually this is my most challenging list skill when I'm trying to learn other languages I've studied Spanish I've studied Korean right now I'm trying to learn Romanian listening is always the most difficult for me I know everybody's a different learner but this is what's most challenging for me so this is something that I really need to practice when I'm learning another language so Before we jump into it I just want to say hello to everybody who's joined me in the chat if you are watching this now write your name in the chat if you're even watching this later write to me in the comments tell me your name tell me where you're from because I just love hearing from people especially especially new students so hello Julie rumah Ricardo Adan Lally Michael Angelo bethey Ramona hello welcome Robert thank you guys for joining me today I'll try and get in some more shout outs as the lesson goes on so we're gonna talk about listening today I'm gonna tell you about these different skills and why they're important how we use them and then again we're going to do a little bit of practice I want you to listen to me talk to you about a few things like we're having a conversation and we're going to see well we're gonna see how well you can listen to what I'm saying so this is all it's all about comprehension it's all about trying to understand the words that you hear the phrases that you hear the sentences that you hear and these are the skills that we're going to talk about today main idea key details making inferences and interpreting meaning those are the four different skills that I want to look at and we're going to go through them one at a time so first let's begin with main idea so when you think of the main idea what all it means is it is just trying to understand what is the point of the conversation why are you having this conversation like what what is it that you guys are talking about and I would tell you that you really need to comprehend the big picture now what do I mean when I say big picture because this is a great idiom in English it's a good expression if you want to use it and people talk about the big picture what that means is that you need to comprehend the the complete story the complete idea that is the big picture so when you are listening to a podcast or maybe you're listening to a song or you're listening or you're just having a conversation you need to comprehend the big picture the entire story the entire idea and that's going to help you identify the main idea now if you're talking about something that is like a very short presentation or a very short story often times you might hear the main idea at the very beginning people will start talking the and they're talking about a certain topic and they might just say the main idea the very first thing the very first few sentences you might hear the main idea if you're talking about a longer story for example maybe a movie and then then it comes down to what you really need to understand the different parts you need to understand the beginning the middle and the end the big picture and then that way you were you will know well what is the most important topic the main idea the most important topic so the other thing that I would tell you I'm going to throw another expression or maybe it's even perhaps a proverb at you to help you kind of think about the main idea of what I would tell you my suggestion would be this don't miss the forest for the trees so this is a proverb like that you can tell somebody else like you're giving them some advice don't miss the forest for the trees and what it means is that when you are doing something in this case you are listening to like I said it could be a song a TV show having a conversation the forest that is the big picture right there alright you need to understand the big picture the trees are those just tiny details so it's saying that don't don't get too hooked on those tiny details that you forget about the big picture don't miss the forest for the trees now you can use this proverb it doesn't just have to relate to listening you can use this to talk about so many other things perhaps you're doing a project at work and you need to do the entire project but you get stuck on these little details and because of that it becomes a bigger problem and somebody could tell you hey don't miss the forest for the trees so don't get too don't get too hooked on when you're listening that you're trying to just think about all of the specific details start with the big picture start with the main idea that that to me is the most important skill when it comes to listening is that you just want to understand well the main idea the main topic that is being discussed so let's go back let's practice this and we're gonna start we're gonna start out a little easier and then it will get a little more challenging so I am going to read something to you and let's just pretend like we're having a conversation right now and I'm going to say something to you and all I want you to do is me what do you think is the main idea what's the main idea all right so here we go we're gonna practice your listening all I want you to do is just listen and tell me what the main idea is so I would tell you this we're having a conversation and I might say you know I love eating pizza it's my favorite food because the combination between cheese and tomato sauce is spectacular there's a great pizza restaurant close to my home but recently I've been learning how to make pizza on my own because hands down pizza is the best okay so I just gave you that short little excerpt right there that's just a short little listening and I want you to tell me what is the main idea write it in the chat write it in the comments this is when I want I want you guys to participate all right what do you think is the main idea I will I will read it again okay so here we go I'll read it one more time think about the main idea ready I loved eating pizza it's my favorite food because the combination of cheese and tomato sauce is spectacular there's a great pizza restaurant close to my home but recently I've been learning how to make pizza on my own hands down pizza is the best all right so again I told you we're gonna start a little easier and then work into it I also wanted to point out if you heard that that expression at the end hands down if somebody says that expression hands down then that just means like for sure or definitely or absolutely that you want to say that like okay hands down this is the best so that is another great expression that you can use hands down to say definitely absolutely alright so the main idea again there there can be more than one answer we have eight and the delicious pizza yes katroo dish you love pizza Anna pizza is amazing Priscilla love eating pizza app excellent alright those so this is what I wrote down again there could be more than one answer but the main idea could just be well maybe you said eating pizza or pizza is the best or Wes loves pizza these are all acceptable answers but you were able to listen to what I was saying and then understand well what is the main topic and again I think that this I wanted to start with this main idea because I I think when you're listening to something this is the first thing that you should really keep in mind that you want to understand because if you understand the main idea that is going to allow you to follow the conversation it's going to allow you to more easily follow the movie whatever it is you're listening to this is the most important thing because once you kind of understand the main idea then you can move in two key details and and once you get those key details again that is going to improve your comprehension that's going to help you understand exactly what the person is saying to you and you're just going to get more information so this is the next skill that I wanted to talk to you about and that is key detail so when you think about key details what this means is that you are listening for groups of words or or groups or different phrases and you're trying to identify specific information and these details that you're listening to they could be well descriptive details you could be talking about adjectives those are very descriptive because they tell us about size they tell us about color they tell us about the shape so that is a great example of when you're listening to something if you hear adjectives those are those are good details those are key details that are going to help you understand what the story or what you're listening to details could also be things like well names dates any number for that matter that could be a very a key detail when you're listening to a conversation so the reason why I think details are also important and to try and help you along with this what I would suggest that you do is that you try to you know put a picture in your mind when you hear those adjectives put a picture in your mind when you hear a number put that number in your mind and and almost like treat it like you're watching a TV show or a movie because that's going to help you follow along with what the person is saying if you can put a picture in those your mind that's going to help you capture those key details and then when you need to you'll be able to better recall the information so what what do I mean when you recall the information because if you're having a conversation with somebody you want to be able to first understand what they're saying and then if you need to if you've identified some key details you want to be able to share that information maybe with another person or perhaps it's just part of the conversation you want to discuss it with the person that you're talking to so try to put a picture in your mind it's going to help you understand what it what you're listening to but it's also going to help you recall that information that is the important thing that I wanted to hit on when talking about key details so what what we're going to do is again I am I am going to give you I'm gonna tell you a story alright this is this is a true story it's a true story about me and I want you to listen to the story and the first time I will read it twice the first time that you listen to the story I want you to think about the main idea I told you that is the that's the primary thing that I want you to think about if you hear some details perfect I want you to think about the main idea and then I'm going to ask you a couple questions these questions are going to be about details from what I tell you and then I'll read it again and then see if you can identify those details are you ready so let's go here we go again all I want you to do you just need to listen right now and this is me telling you a story this is a true story from my life are you ready here we go so I'd say you know some time this was from a long time ago too I'll just tell you that sometimes my job it can be a bit manat I work at a golf course and pick up golf balls on a driving range I must pick up thousands of golf balls each day I start work at 8:30 in the morning and I head out on to the driving range then I take a short 15-minute break at a quarter to 11:00 lunch is at 1 o'clock sharp I usually pack a PB&J sandwich that's what I like to eat and then I go back out onto the driving range and then I finish work at 4 the time does not fly okay so

I said this is a true story from my past although I'm telling you the story as though this is what's happening now I use the present tense but this is true I used to work at a golf course it was the very first job that I have so again when you listen to that the first thing is just start what is the main idea ok and now I want you to listen for some key details ok so I have a couple of questions that I want to tell you right now that I want you to think about and perhaps you were able to easily follow the story and you remember those details now that's great if not then just listen for the information so the first question I have two questions for you the first question is this is right what time do I take a break and I'll give you

I'll give you some options do I take a break at 9:45 a.m. 10:45 a.m. or 11:45 a.m. what time do I take a break that is one of the details and then the second one is what do I eat for lunch ok so those are the two questions I want you to think about as I read it again those are the details that I want to see if you can pick out as I read this again ok so all you need to do right now is just listen ok listen to my story telling you about well my time working at the golf course alright so I guess I'd say you know sometimes my job can be a bit monotonous I work at a golf course and I pick up golf balls on the driving range I miss I must pick up thousands of golf balls each day start work at 8:30 in the morning and head out on to the driving range then I take a 15-minute break at quarter to 11:00 lunch is at 1:00 o'clock sharp and I usually pack a PB&J sandwich that's what I that's what I enjoy to eat eating I go back out onto the driving range and then I finish work at 4:00 the time does not fly ok so again this is a true story I this was the very first job that I had when I started working I was 16 years old and I was working at I was working at a golf course I worked at the driving range so I gave you two questions that I wanted you to think about and again because we're practicing our listening I wanted just to tell you those I wasn't going to show you the questions so the first question was this I said what time what time do I take a break and I gave you three options a 9:45 a.m. B 10:45 a.m. or C 11:45 a.m. what time do I take a break now some of you I hope you were able to extrapolate this because I was not that tricky but maybe a little bit I take a break at 10:45 a.m. excellent yes ADA and Samuel a sleepwalker nice now in the story I did not say 10:45 I said I take a break at quarter to 11 quarter to 11 15 minutes to 11 o'clock is 10:45 and this is where like if you are taking a listening test such as the IELTS or the TOEFL this is something they tried to do kind of not in order to trick you but to really test your comprehension they may take one detail but they're going to say it in a different way so I told you quarter to 11 but in the the question that I gave you I wanted you to see if you ant could identify that as 10:45 now the next question that I had for you I asked you I said what what do I eat for lunch all right that's right so that you love pizza yes I probably I probably should have put pizza but that is not true I did bring pizza with me to the driving range all right so yes I saw it it's circa rim excellent so what I eat for lunch is a PB&J so I don't know some of you may not be familiar with a PB&J this is I would say it's kind of an American thing and what what PB&J stands for it stands for peanut butter and jelly sandwich a PB&J and this is something that I think it's quite almond the common that kids would eat PB&J sandwiches I was 16 at the time they're very easy to make and I just I would put together a PB&J I would take it with me because I would get hungry out on the golf course so some of you put a sandwich that would be correct but if you really wanted to identify that key detail a PB&J sandwich peanut butter and jelly sandwich excellent all right so remember details that is talking about those those specific information those the names the numbers the adjectives that will all if you can identify them put a picture in your mind because again it's going to help where your comprehension and it's going to help you recall the information so next the next skill that I want to talk to you about is this one making inferences now if you don't know what this is what what this means when you make inferences is that you are using the information that you know in order to make a guess or to infer information that is not directly stated and this is so important when you really

it is but you can make an inference and infer well what is the weather like outside all right and what you should say yes tada perfect lol sorry if i mispronounce names the sleepwalker it's raining it's raining outside I get in the car I'm wet all right well why could I be wet there are different reasons why I could be wet maybe somebody threw me in a pool maybe it's raining but then when I follow it up and say you could hear that that pitter-patter sound hitting the window then that should tell you right there okay it's raining outside so I might not when you're having a conversation with somebody or you're maybe you're listening to a presentation in class or a presentation at work people might not always directly say every piece of information so this is where it's good it's good to be able to make inferences and infer other things to to better your comprehension okay so let's let's practice this and another I guess like you could say it's another proverb that I could tell you and this is something that you know to use and when it comes to making inferences I could say look read between the lines and when somebody tells you to read between the lines they're basically telling you to try to understand the hidden information that there are certain there's certain information that you could say it's hidden or in this case we're talking about listening that somebody does not say directly and you need to understand that you need to make inferences so I could say this proverb right here okay when it comes to making inferences all right listen to what somebody's saying and then read between the lines all right this is important but this is a great proverb that again you could use in a variety of situations if you want somebody to understand some hidden information you could tell them read between the lines all right so let's practice right now we are I'm going to read you a situation and I want you to listen to it and and try to make some inferences okay so what I would tell you is this before before we're gonna go through this slowly and I want you to think about the following all right I'm gonna tell you about two people and I want you to think about what's the relationship between these two people what is the relationship between these two people that I'm getting ready to tell you about in this little little story okay so again all I want you to do right now is I just want you to listen all right we're gonna go through this a little bit at time so what's the relationship if I were to start like telling you a story and I say you know they were walking along the pier side-by-side when he reached down and took her by the hand okay that's a little bit of information and you're thinking about the relationship what can you infer okay well these two people obviously know each other they're holding each other by the hand it could be they could have a romantic relationship they could be family members family members could walk hand-in-hand but but again they they do know each other now let's add some more to that all right so I'll start over again they were walking along the pier side-by-side when he reached down and took her by the hand they stopped at the edge of the pier and embraced they stared into each other's eyes listening to the sound of the ocean water below their feet okay so now I've given you a little bit more information to where you think okay it's a little bit of a romantic setting there they're looking into each other's eyes they embrace so it's probably not going to be a family member all right we know that there are some people saying okay dating a couple bromance possibly who knows they are in love but again there are many types of relationship what is their exact relationship even if they're in love all right are they boyfriend and girlfriend are they engaged are they a married couple okay so let me give you some more information suddenly he got down on one knee and he pulled a ring out of his pocket her face was glowing with happiness all right so now if you were to infer okay what is the if somebody were to ask you you hear that whole story and they say well what is the relationship between these two people all right he's proposing to this person so that means that that their relationship right now would be they are well they're like boyfriend and girlfriend they are a couple and he is proposing to her in which case they would become they will get engaged and it will be the their fiancée okay so this is where again you are listening to some information I did not say they were boyfriend and girlfriend but I'm giving you information so that you can infer that you can infer okay they're getting there he proposed to her they are not married they must be boyfriend and girlfriend now let me let me let me back up all right and read it to you a different way and I want to see what you can infer all right so again the question the question remains the same all right that I'm asking you what is the relationship between these two people and I am going to okay let me let's I'll start at the beginning all right I would say same beginning they were walking along the pier side-by-side when he reached down and took her by the hand they had just met months ago at a coffee shop and really hit it off all right now if you don't know what it means if this is a good idiom another expression to hit it off it means when two people instantly come friends or they instantly make a connection and they get along really well alright so I have given you a little bit of a different situation okay again I want you to make an inference okay and the question is the same what is the relationship between these two people let me read again and I'm gonna finish the story okay so I just want you to listen here's the entire story they were walking along the pier side-by-side when he reached down and took her by the hand they had met just a few months ago at a coffee shop and really hit it off as they walked her fingers brushed his ring a symbol of eight years of turbulence they stopped at the end of the pier and embrace they stared into each other's eyes listening to the sound of the ocean water below their feet okay

now I've given you a little more information and I didn't know let's see I don't know if you were able to pick up on it if I said well what is the relationship between these two people so again I told you uh if you caught those key details because I know that some of you guys are talking about that you know throwing out the main idea you could say okay love it first sight that they're their friends maybe they were classmate let me read it again see if you can pick out some key details all right they were walking along the pier side by side when he reached down and took her by the hand they had just met months ago at a coffee shop and really hit it off as they walked her fingers brushed up against his ring a symbol of eight years of turbulence they stopped at the end of the pier and embraced they stared into each other's eyes listening to the sound of the ocean water below their feet okay

I don't know if you guys caught that so remember I said they had only met a they had only met months ago alright the guy he's wearing a ring and I said it stood for eight years of turbulence if the guy is wearing a ring like I'm wearing right now what does that mean okay it means he's married so if they had only met a couple of months ago what could you infer all right these two people are not married you could say he's having an affair dun dun duh scandalous I know okay so in that case what I was trying to say is that these two people they're walking along the pier they met months ago they're holding hands he's wearing a ring that stood for eight years of turbulence if you don't know what turbulence means when you fly on a plane you know when you're flying on the plane and the plane gets really shaky and bumpy that is turbulence so if you say something is a little turbulent you say that it's bumpy it's rocky it's not steady in which case if the marriage is not steady then probably that that means there would be problems okay so in that case that that information that key detail right there would allow you to infer that okay he is having an affair that he would be cheating on his wife and that would be again making a different type of inference okay so let's look at the next part so that was all about that was all about making inferences again when you make an inference you are listening to the information and you're trying to make a guess about other information all right the last part that I want to talk to you about is interpret meaning now when I say that you when I talk about interpreting meaning this is a very broad topic specifically I want to talk to you about two things I want to talk to you about intonation and emphasis in order to help you interpret meaning whenever you're listening to somebody talk so when we let's start with intonation this is the rising and falling of someone's voice when I say emphasis I'm talking about you are stressing a word or a phrase to to give a specific meaning and what I mean by this to help you interpret meaning when we're talking about intonation and emphasis I'll give you another quote and this is something that I like to say that you know it's not what you say but how you say it so when you think about listening to information what somebody says that that may not always be the most important thing but the way that they say it the way they use their intonation their emphasis that is really going to help you interpret the true meaning of what somebody is saying okay now of course I want I want to practice this so I am going to well let me give you some examples when we talk about first let's look at intonation because I told you intonation is talking about like the the rising and the falling of someone's voice think about the question when you meet somebody I might ask you and say you know hey how you doing you know how you doing that is a very common question I want to know how you are so if somebody just says well how you doing then they just there it's a very simple question there's no intonation now I don't know if you've ever seen the show friends and the show friends there is a character called Joey and one of the one of his catchphrases was this this question and he would say it something like this he'd say how are you doing and he would say it in that way how you doing now when you say it like that when when the character would say it on the TV show the true meaning of that is something that it's more something romantic that that he is interested in this other person so he would see a beautiful woman and then he would say how are you doing like I'm not very good at saying that but if you were to watch the show friends the character Joey would always say how you doing and again it implies something romantic that he has an interest in this woman and again it's all about intonation that is the true meaning so you can you can say it in a way that again you get more information the same way think about a question okay when you think about a question usually there is a rising intonation at the end so we can also use statements as a question as well and that's going to give you a little more information think about this situation all right if somebody were to ask you like you know did you lock the door a simple question did you lock the door and somebody responds and says I lock the door now word or phrase to give it a specific meaning let's go back to that that question that I asked you when I said I locked the door kind of like you know unsure of this thing what if I were to say like add emphasis to I somebody says did you lock the door and I would say I lock the door it's almost like I'm questioning then like well wait I was not supposed to do it you were supposed to do it I lock the door no no no it wasn't me so here's another sentence I want you to think about this sentence a simple sentence and I just want you to listen to it I'm gonna say it with no emphasis and the sentence is she isn't driving to the park she isn't driving to the park you can listen to that you understand it put a picture in your mind if it helps she isn't driving to the park now if I emphasize a certain word it's going to change the meaning of the sentence so for example what if I emphasize the very first word if I emphasize she and I were to tell you well she isn't driving to the park what does that mean if you are going to now interpret the meaning of this sentence if I said well she isn't driving to the park that means that well she is not doing it somebody else's or what if I were to interpret the word and say well emphasize the word driving alright and I said well she isn't driving to the park how does that change the meaning she isn't driving to the park what do you think if you were to interpret that meaning cuz that changes it a little bit she isn't driving to the park if I'm emphasizing driving that means well she's not driving in a car she's going to the park in some other way maybe she's walking to the park perhaps she's taking the bus to the park maybe there there's a train or maybe she's riding a horse we don't know but if somebody emphasized driving then that's going to change the meaning a little bit so again emphasis is very important in understanding the specific meaning I could even say what if I emphasize the last word Park and I say well she isn't driving to the park what does that mean now I changed it again when I emphasized the word part she isn't driving to the park what does that how does that change the sentence if ice if I emphasize Park this is the place that means well she's not driving to the park she's driving to some other place we don't know maybe she's driving to the grocery store maybe she's driving to the mall but if I were say well she isn't driving to the park she's going somewhere else so again these are small little things that again I want you to keep in mind when you're talking about intonation and emphasis that's really going to help you interpret the meaning of what you hear when you're listening to not just a conversation but you're watching a TV show a movie you're listening to the radio anytime you are listening that people are going to use intonation they're going to use emphasis and this could change the meaning and that's really that's what I really want you to be aware of when it comes to those things so in basically what what I want to do is just quick little in review all right so we talked about these four listening skills right here main idea I told you this is the most important one this is the first thing that I think when you're listening to something that you should really try to grasp okay what is the main topic and then once you get the main idea see if you can pick out some of those key details and those key details that might allow you to make inferences and try to understand information that was not directly stated and then also as you're listening especially if you are listening to a conversation and somebody's talking or they're telling a story listen for that intonation and emphasis because it's going to help you interpret the true meaning the true meaning of what someone really wants to say so these are the four skills that we talked about today this is what I wanted to practice with you and I I hope this helps because like I told you listening for me this is my greatest challenge when I'm learning a language some of you might find listening pretty easy others might find it difficult but it is always good to practice and the fact that you're able to identify some of these different skills whether it's main idea or making inferences and we can just take one at a time and practice that this is going to help you then next time you are listening to well anything a TV show a movie and you want to identify the main idea and listen for those details all of it helps even just watching this lesson and listening to me right now you've been listening to me go on for over a half hour any time you are listening and getting exposure to the language that helps so I would encourage you surround yourself with the language try to get more listening whether it's listening to an audio book whether you're listening to a conversation or maybe you want to go out and listen to another one of our lessons it's all going to help so again if you enjoyed this lesson please I would appreciate it hit that like button down below thank you guys so much I just want to say thank you too let's see sleepwalker morgana a10 shim top thank you guys so much for joining me today couple things last things I want to mention if you guys want to connect with us via email you guys can whoops check us out right there there I just threw a link in the chat there's also a link down below oh one last thing we did start we did start doing YouTube join memberships we are now active on YouTube you can join up with a membership and during these live lessons there are some cool emojis that you can use some badges check out link link is in the description down below if you want to become a member thank you guys again Bojan franceska Kareem sandy I am on neckla hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you next time so long

USEFUL RESTAURANT VOCABULARY YOU NEED TO KNOW

Hello, welcome to today's lesson. Thank you for joining me. My name is Wes. The channel, it's Interactive English. The channel's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goal with so many different lessons related to vocabulary, pronunciation, grammar, a little bit of everything. And today, I think it's a very well, I said it's useful restaurant vocabulary. So, a lot of the words that I'm going to talk to you about today, I don't think this is probably I wouldn't say this is advanced vocabulary. I think it's useful because these are words that are quite common that the talking about the things you would see in a restaurant, the people you would see in a restaurant, perhaps some of the questions that they may ask you. I think it's very helpful and for some of you, I think this will be a bit of review. It's great to see so many uh members here, so many patrons uh as well as some uh students from Speak Up. Awesome. Now, the way that I'm going to do this is that typically if we're talking about building vocabulary, I think it's normal that somebody you might you might get the word and then you're going to look at the meaning and then maybe you'll get a picture to help you associate it with something. We're going to work our way backwards today. All right, we're going to do the exact opposite. I'm first going to show you a picture and then I'm going to give you the meaning and then I'll tell you the word and this is going to allow you because I want you to try to kind of again go back through the vocabulary that you already know to see if you know these words and I think many of them you will know and if you know them please write them in the chat participate the this is interactive English and I want it to be a more interactive lesson. So, let's begin with the first one. This is our first picture right here. You walk into a restaurant. These are two people that that work there. So, looking at those pictures, what what does this person do? What would you say is this person's job? And these are very important words that that you need to know. So, again, starting with the picture and then I'll give you the meaning, which is right here. It's a person whose job is to bring the food to customers at their tables in a restaurant. Who who is this person? And for some of these, I think I'll I'll try to give you some synonyms as well because not only will you might you might refer to some of these words just that one way. Some of them there are synonyms which I think are also helpful in building your vocabulary.

So awesome. I actually you guys already kind of beat me you beat me to the punch where you're giving me a variation of all of those words. Excellent. Uh lolli gratudrudis um sajad tertika ui. So the there are a couple different words that you could use if you're talking about the well the individual people. You could refer to um like a man or a woman. a man, you might refer to him as a waiter and a waitress, uh, a woman, a waitress. So, waiter and waitress, I think they're very common. If you want to use a word that's genderneutral, that it doesn't matter if it's a man or a woman, then you could just say that they're a server. And I think often in restaurants, restaurants would refer to the these people as servers because it really doesn't matter, man. But the customers, if you're talking um to somebody else uh and you know that your server is uh a man, then you might say, "Oh, I haven't seen the waiter in a little while." So, I think customers, it's pretty common that they may use the words waiter or waitress. But you could also say server means the same thing. Very common words, very useful um if you're going out to eat in a restaurant. Another because we're starting with people. The next one would be this person right here. Um, who who is this? This is another person who works in the restaurant. You can see by that picture that they work with food. What do you think? Um, is this uh I told you I'd say we're starting with the picture and then I'm going to give you the meaning and then I'll tell you the word. We're working our way backwards from what you may be typically accustomed to.

So, here's the meaning. All right. This is a skilled or trained cook who works in a hotel or restaurant, especially the most important cook. So, some of you I think I saw the word cook. Yes, this person is a cook, but we're talking about a specific cook and you're talking about the most important cook. And that most important cook is the chef. All right. I think all of you, most of you got that. Uh, give some shout outs to Kao. Awesome. Um, be happy. Perfect. Gustav, good to see you. Welcome. Glad you're here. So, this is again another person who works in the restaurant. Good to know. Uh, we talked about a waiter, waitress, chef, works in the kitchen, and these are two other people. Now I will say that the this is useful restaurant for a vocabul this is useful vocabulary for a restaurant and all restaurants around the world are a little different. They have different setups. I'm from the United States. So in general it's kind of like that. That's what I have in mind. Restaurants in the United States.

These are people who work at a restaurant. I'm not they're not in this case. They're not it's not a waiter or waitress. It's not a server. It's another person typically the first person that you would meet when you when you go into the door with your friend or family or whoever. What would you say? So I told you I would give you the meaning and the meaning is right here. So this is the person uh who greets customers as they enter the restaurant. Some of their other job responsibilities would be like they would take reservations. They might put people on a waiting list if there are many people who want to get into the restaurant and they would bring the like you or your group of people to the table and they would hand out the menus. What do you call these people? All right. I know a lot of people are throwing manager in there. They're not managers.

Sometimes the manager may do this. I I will give you that. But there is a specific name for these people. When you go to the restaurant, they would talk to you, they greet you, they say, "Okay, how many like maybe you have to make a uh they would make reservations, put your name on a wait list." What would you say? All right, maybe this is new for for many of you. So again, you have a choice if it's a like a man or a woman. You would say that uh the man may be a host or a hostess. host or a hostess at uh if we're talking about a restaurant. Some of you mentioned like uh a receptionist. Receptionist is more I think like at a hotel, somebody who's um down there like answering phones, helping out customers or like in an office, if we're specifically talking about a restaurant, a host or a hostess.

That's their job would be to take people to the table. Maybe they put people down on the wait list. And oftentimes I think you would see um you might see a manager, especially if it's very busy, managers would help out. They might do this um and they're helping out uh get people situated in the restaurant before the waiter or waitress comes around. All right, so today is all about helping you guys build your vocabulary. Um, this one, let me give you a little bit of context because you see that this is a group of people. And what I'm going for is what what would you call the group? So, we've talked about some people that work in the restaurant. If you go and you talk to the host or the hostess, they might ask you a very common question and they're referring to the group of people.

So, let me just go ahead and give you the the meaning for this. Maybe it will help you because yes, you could say customers, guests, but I'm talking about the specific group like whoa. Uh oh, no, I went too far. I think you guys saw that. So yes, we're it's a particular group of people who are involved in an activity. Um and we're going for the word Ibraim. Yes. Party. Party. So a very common question that you get to the restaurant and maybe the host or hostess is there and you want a table. They may ask you like how many are in your party. They're talking about the group that you are with. And you might say well there's two people or there's four people. But that's a very common question that a host or hostess will ask you. How many are in your party? And even if you're, let's say it's really busy and you're waiting for a table and they may announce the people who the table's ready for and they may say the last name and they would say like Smith, party of five, Smith, party of five. So again, they're talking about that group. Um, or

Stevens, party of three. Stevens, party of three. And they would make that announcement and you're going to hear them use that word again, party to talk about the group. All right. So, uh, again, party has different meanings. Of course, many of you, if you think about party, you're probably thinking about like the celebration, but in this case, at our restaurant, they're referring to the group, like the group that you are with. How many are in your party? Now, we're kind of going through this from the beginning. So, we we talked about some of the people. You go into the restaurant, the host or the hostess may ask you, "How many are in your party?" And then they're going to take you to maybe one of these places. And this is trying to make a distinction about where you might sit in a restaurant. I think you guys I think you probably definitely know this word up here at the top. So, let me know in the chat, in the comments. we're talking about where customers may sit in a restaurant. And the reason why I'm making a distinction is because this may be it may be another question that the host or hostess may ask you. They say, "Oh, would you like to sit in a m or they may give you a choice or sometimes people maybe they have a preference and you would tell the host or hostess like oh we have there are four people in my party and we would like to sit in a what? All right. Excellent. Uh Loi Louisa nice. Um, yes, we're talking about a uh table versus a booth. This is a table. I told you. I think everybody knows that. And this is a booth. Um, Gratudis asks, "Good question. You're talking about at home, a host or a hostess at home." I think if we're just talking about home, it would just be a host. Somebody is the host. You're not going to really differentiate between the gender. But often I think if you're talking about a restaurant, I don't know why for some reason people like for um they would say like the man is the host, woman uh hostess. But if it's just in general at the home like you are going to be a host for a party, I think you just say host.

I'm giving you pictures and then the meaning and then I'm going to give you the different words that you could use. So I said yes, it's a spoon, a fork, and a knife used for eating a meal. Collectively, we can refer to this as what? All right. What would you guys say? Um, see how many different words you could think of to describe this. Uh, I got some good ones. Yes. Abraham, sleepwalker, Eloa, be happy, perfect. Uh, Armando. I would say like just for me, the word that comes to my mind, which I think maybe I would probably say is more common than some of the other ones would be silverware. Silverware. Another word you could say utensils because people talk about eating utensils. I don't think that's as common. Cutlery is another one. Specifically, I think cutlery really involves like if you're trying to cut things um like maybe you're eating a steak or something. In general, you could refer to it as cutlery. I think cutlery would definitely have to include a knife. But if you you're just talking about um maybe a combination of uh I don't know a spoon and a fork, you could refer to that as silverware. In general, silverware is the one in my opinion I think would be the one that's u most commonly used. Like sometimes uh maybe it's not at the table and you might ask the waiter or waitress like, "Hey, we we need one more set of silverware." Um but yes, utensils, cutlery, those are also synonyms that you could use as well.

Then we have this um I gave you these are pictures. Maybe you might not see it uh at a restaurant. They may not bring you uh bottles that look like this, but this is an example of well drinks. What would you use? And the word that I'm thinking of I'm I'm try I want you to think of the word that you would see on the menu. Okay? So I'm trying to give you a hint. You see these are drinks and really the meaning is I'm talking about a drink of any type but what word would you see on the menu instead of um instead of like seeing drinks which you may see people might ask for like hey can I have the drink menu the waiter or waitress might ask you like what would you like to drink is a very common word but I think this is a word that you would see on many different menus it's not a word that you're going to probably use um speaking when you're you're talking. Uh so yes, excellent. Eloa, Shazada, Esther, Lai, we're talking about uh a beverage. Beverage is just another word for drinks. And beverage is a word that you will likely see on the menu. And then they list the different drinks that they have available. So, it's a good word to know, but it's not, again, beverage is not uh a word that you might use. Um, I'm trying to think of a context, a situation in which somebody uh maybe the waiter or waitress, your server might say it. They would say like, "Oh, like here they we have different uh alcoholic beverages or we have non-alcoholic beverages." if they're just trying to classify a set of drinks. But as a customer, it's probably not something that uh you may end up using, but you'll see it on the menu. Uh here is Okay, hopefully you can kind of tell um what what this stuff is right here.

In general, I would think of like salt and pepper, right? But there's a word that you can use to refer to salt and pepper as well as some other things. They are considered what what is the word? Um all right. So gastang beverage. Excellent. Yes. Beer please. What do you guys think? Uh let me give you the meaning. Maybe this will provide a little more context and clarity. talking about a substance such as salt. Um I say salt or pepper are the two most common that you add to food to improve the taste. What would you say? Not I know some of you is thinking spices, not spices. Again, this is um restaurant. They would be on the table.

This is the stuff you would find on the table. And it's probably a word that as a customer you're not going to really use, but if you work in a restaurant, you would probably use this word a bit more. What I'm talking about, in case you have not heard of this word, some of you may not know it. It's a good word. Condiments. So, salt and pepper are generally referred to as condiments. But then you might have some other like sauces um on there, maybe a hot sauce or ketchup or mustard, especially if in the United States, ketchup and mustard are very common. Um and you would just refer to them in general as a condiment.

Condiments. Uh so, and I'm sure like I said, many restaurants all over the world are a little different. I'm from the United States. So, that's kind of what I'm referencing when I'm talking about restaurant vocabulary. Let's continue with this next one. Now, let me provide some um give some clarity because yes, this is a menu, but I'm talking about a specific type of menu. And hopefully uh well, let me give you the meaning and perhaps that might make it a little easier. Yes, this is a menu. Um, but I'm talking about a menu when you choose uh each dish from a separate list instead of eating a fixed combination of dis dishes at a fixed price. So I think it's if you you know in the United States and you go to a restaurant, it's quite common that you order off of a menu and whatever you order it comes with these different things. But sometimes at some restaurants you order everything separately and that in that case you would refer to it as what? Typically we are talking about Zenat said fine dining. Yes, we're talking about probably restaurants that are more expensive. It's considered fine dining and in that case you would say the menu is what? All right. And yes, excellent. Lai banaz um we're talking about a menu and you would refer to it as all cart all cart. So in this case the probably if you as the customer you're asking questions about well does it come with this the the server may say oh everything is alloc cart that whatever you're looking at on the menu it's separated it has a separate price everything is alak cart so this would that's what I meant when I'd say it's a specific type of menu it's an alakart menu like everything is allocart then we have.

All right. Again, this is a very, you can tell I'm from the United States. I guess this is a very uh very American uh looking dish right here. And just look at the food and think about, I guess, to give you a hint when you would eat this food right here. When So, you go into the restaurant. We talked about the people you would see. The waiter, the waitress, the host, the hostess, the the chef is in the kitchen. They are going to ask you how many are in your party. You they take you to either a table or a booth. You sit down. You get your beverage. You order drinks. You have your condiments on the table, your silverware, and then you are going to get uh this food. This is it's a small amount of food eaten before a meal. And there are two different words that I think you could use. I think in the United States, one is more common than the other in my opinion. Uh, and I think you guys got uh most of the ones that I'm talking about, what I think of the word that I tend to use is uh an appetizer. But an appetizer, it's the same as a starter. I think this is another word that you'll see at on the menu. It's going to say appetizers or starters and it's going to list the different choices of food that you can have before you would have your main meal. You could say there are appetizers, starters. This is a this is a good example in the United States of food that people might order as an appetizer. I think they had some there's some quesadillas there, some hot wings, some cheese sticks. Yes, those are uh standard appetizers in the United States. Uh the next one. Okay, so now we're we're talking about food appetizers. This right here you would refer to as your what I think many of you know this word. You some of you wrote it for the last one. So you start with the appetizer and this is your it is to give you the meaning. It is the main dish of the meal. What would you say? It is your And I guess there Yeah, there are some words. Um, well, you said main course. Yes, it is the main course, but that's not the word I'm looking for. It's just one word. Uh, it is also I think it's a it's a word that you would see on the menu as well. Maybe some restaurants would say main course. Other restaurants would just say this one word. And what I'm talking I'm surprised I haven't uh seen it. Everybody is all about the main course. I almost feel like uh one person says main course and then another and then everybody's boom just piles on with main course. Uh the what I'm thinking of the main dish of a meal. It yes it is your main course or it's your entree. So that's another word that I think is pretty common that you would see on the menu. You have you would see beverage, appetizer or starter entre. And then they would list the different main dish uh dishes that they have available for you to choose from. So main course entree the same thing that main main dish of a meal. And I think I don't know I guess that's maybe some chicken. Uh this definitely looks like an alak cart menu right here. Then we have uh right here. Let's I guess we're sticking with that theme thinking that it's uh it's an alle cart menu. You maybe you get your your appetizer, your starter, you order uh your entree and then you have these right here. What would you what would you call these? This is another I think a good word. Um especially if you're talking about going to a restaurant in the United States, it's uh that many restaurants Yeah. they would have uh they would have this available or they the server might ask you about this. I'm talking about an extra dish of food for example like it says uh vegetables or a salad. It's served with the main dish served with your entree and it's sometimes on a separate plate. And if we're talking about like alak cart, I would then say it's it's typically on a separate plate or in a separate dish. All right. They're not uh Okay, you guys kind of close. Um not talking about like uh it's not dessert snacks. Yes, you guys got it. Excellent. Uh Angela Merta. Um you could say I think some of you be happy. Uh side dish. Uh lolli. Excellent. I'm just talk I would just say sides. You could say a side dish. Sure. But I think it's probably very common that um customers may ask like, "Hey, does it come with any sides?" Or maybe the server would ask like, "You can choose one side to go with your entree." And then you would make a a choice of what type of side you would like to have, but typically you could just say they're they're side dishes or sides. Either one. Perfect. You could use either one. Excellent. So, I told you that. Yeah. These words I think are very useful because I think they are common. I don't think they're very advanced. I only I only chose uh about 12, so not too many. I didn't want to go overboard. I kind of wanted to do that activity and kind of do things a little differently and showing you the picture, giving you the meaning, and then telling you the word. Just doing everything in reverse from what I think people would normally do when we talk about building vocabulary. Um, and doing it this way. I think it's always good to kind of try to get you to elicit the vocabulary and think about these words. So, these are very useful words if you're going out to eat in a restaurant. Words that I think you need to know. If you guys I hope you enjoyed the lesson. Also, just want to let you know if you guys want to show us some love, support our channel. Saw some uh lot of uh members and patrons uh with

There's different ways that you could refer to things, appetizers, starters. But I think especially now as well I think many countries are starting getting through this pandemic. Restaurants are starting to open. Where I live now um in Hungary they just kind of starting to open indoor uh seating again. So I think it's I think many people want to get back out there get go out to eat at a restaurant um start to normalize again. So this is useful vocabulary that I hope will help you out uh in the future. Thank you guys. Give some shout outs uh right now at the end. Thank you uh Lai Gustaf uh Gatrudis to Kayle. Thanks for being here. Um Esther, Elsie, Tenretica, Louisa, Mari, Hina, try trying to get as many shout outs. Zenat as I can throughout the lesson. Hey, one uh sorry if I mispronounced names, of course. Um, Tori, I hope that you guys enjoy the the rest of your weekend and of course I will be back next week with another live lesson to interact Back.

USE CONTEXT CLUES TO UNDERSTAND NEW VOCABULARY

hello and welcome to today's lesson thank you guys so much for joining me and today is a very useful English lesson I think it's very important so without further ado let me tell you today we are going to be talking about context clues and this is extremely important for your reading comprehension but I think it's also very useful for building vocabulary so those two things I think when you practice using context clues to build your vocabulary and understand whatever it is you're reading it's going to improve your overall English fluency and please I always encourage you guys to read as much as you can so if you are joining me again say hello in the chat love hearing from all of you even if you are watching this later please write your name in the comments tell me where you're from because I I just love hearing from you so hello hi Aidan sleepwalker Ahmad Mary Kareem Edward bate the ester Angela Carlos just trying to get out as many quick shout outs as I can Ricardo Layla thank you guys for joining me today and as I go through I'll try I'll try to get in some more shout outs there but I hope you guys are having a wonderful day I hope you are staying safe and staying healthy so we're going to practice using context clues today and the idea again is to give you some practice so you understand well what it means to use context clues but I also hope that you'll be able to build your vocabulary and maybe learn some new words today because as we go through this that's that's the idea we're going I want you to try to think about well what do these words mean you may already know some of their meanings and that's great you can just review them but but that's what I want to practice with you today so let's just start out by talking you know let me I just want to tell you what are context clues just give you a basic definition so what they are is that they are hints that an author gives you to help you understand the meaning of a difficult or unusual word within a book so the clues may appear within the same sentence as the word or they may come in the sentences before or after the word so you just keep that in mind often you find them within the same sentence but you could find them either before or after the word and if you kind of understand the whole meaning then you have a better chance of understanding well what does this word mean if there is an unknown word you have you have a better chance of determining okay this is probably what the word means and we all do this when we're reading because when you're reading no matter what language even now I if I'm reading a book in English I will read words that I may not know the exact meaning but I can try to put them into context and say okay it probably means this okay so what I want to do next this is kind of gonna lay it out for you what I want you guys to do and if you're with me even if you're watching this later I want you guys to participate and and write your answers in the chat write your answers in the comments as we go through these and you're trying to think about the meaning of the words so we're gonna do this in three steps there are three fingers there there um I want I'm going so we're going to find an unknown word but I'm actually going to give you the word I'm gonna tell you the word that what I think would be unknown and then we're going to look for the context clues and then I want you to see if you can guess well what is the meaning of this word based on those context clues what is the meaning so that is how we're going to do this I'm going to start just with basically one sentence at the beginning and as we continue and go through these it's going to get longer and longer and longer and I think it will get a little more challenging as well so let's just begin we'll start off slow start off with a simple example and the first sentence that I have for you is this okay so if your here's our sentence the movie was very bloody and grotesque so you know that well what what I'm talking about right now talking about a movie and then describing it so basically those like this is the word that I wanted to focus on grotesque you may know what it means but if if you're watching this you're like hmm I'm not exactly sure what that means let's let's look for those context clues I already mentioned that well what's the topic what are we talking about we're talking about the movie now what other word it can help us describe that bloody so those two words would be the the context clues and based on that okay a movie a bloody probably you can think well what does it mean grotesque it probably does not mean something that is funny or humorous what you would say is that it means something that is strange or unpleasant it is an adjective that is used to describe a noun and it means strange or unpleasant it's grotesque you could use it to describe a movie you could use it to describe food if you think something is very disgusting it's strange it's unpleasant you could say oh it's grotesque this is grotesque now I will tell you all of these meanings that I got I have taken these from Cambridge dictionary that is a dictionary that I like to use and I would highly recommend it and the reason I like can bridge is because I think they give a very easy definition to follow they use words that are simple and I think it's a very clear definition so all of the when I show you the meaning of these words I took all of them from Cambridge dictionary if you haven't checked it out I will throw a link in there right there - to Cambridge so the other thing that I wanted to say is again you may find some other context clues that might help you that I don't necessarily identify so even if I identify something that that maybe well maybe you thought of something else then that's perfectly okay there can always be more than one or two or three context clues so keep that in mind so let's start let's continue the next example that I have for this is right here so here's now we're moving into a little bit of a story and I could say dark clouds surrounded us the ocean was angry and lifted our boat up and down it was a perilous journey and few of us survived so I think just reading that you can probably put a picture in your mind which helps with your comprehension but what if you're thinking well I don't know exactly what perilous means what exactly does this word mean we know that it is an adjective because of the it's part of speech it's describing the word journey but based on what we just read what do you think this word means where do you think what do you think would be some good context clues alright so the ones that I would point out all right just to talk about those those these would be my context clues you could have you could use any of these so if you have dark clouds you know the ocean was angry oh that's not good and few of us survived so this is the situation that we're in and something is perilous yes I think you guys yeah you're rocking this alright perilous just means something that is extremely dangerous excellent anima Esther Aidan perfect rosalinda a mae throwing some shadows yes everybody said dangerous ceci murillo excellent great job Mary Gladys so again now you get the idea of what we're doing and it's going to get a little longer now and this is very common when you're reading so some of the other examples I have for you that are coming up there's going to be a little dialog in there as if people are having a conversation so let's go to the next one it's going to get a little more challenging and here is here's our little a couple sentences the boss will sly and clever during the interview he refused to admit the company did anything wrong therefore therefore he tried to obfuscate the truth so again I think you can read that or even listen to me say this and you can kind of get the main idea you know what's happening however maybe you might be looking at this and thinking well I'm not really sure what does it mean to obfuscate alright what what does this verb mean obfuscate this is actually a verb from one of our vocabulary lessons advanced verbs that I did a while ago so

I'm giving you this situation and I want you to think what what do you think this verb means what does this word mean obfuscate he tried to obfuscate the truth let's so again if you're reading something just like this the first thing you want to do is look for some context clues all right so these are some of the context clues that I identified all right so you're describing this boss all right he sly and clever okay sly not really a good word to describe somebody he refused to admit something so this person don't does not want to tell the truth so in that case he's trying to obfuscate the truth so in the example yeah you guys a lot of you are saying hide out there um trim twist the facts yeah I think again those are all great answers I think you're you're really getting this the can bridge to find this if you're trying to obfuscate the truth or some information you're you're trying to make it you're trying to make something more difficult to understand or comprehend so in this case the boss he doesn't want to admit it's an interview he doesn't want to admit everything's wrong so he's trying to think well I'm not going to lie but I'm just going to make the truth very confusing and difficult to understand so that maybe people don't think we did anything wrong and that way they're not going to be a little angry so I think that is its a collocation you might find it to obfuscate the truth that you're trying to make it very difficult to understand I think this happens a lot if like in talking about politics or some some kind of situation in which you don't really want people to know the truth and really what's going on so you try to make things more difficult than it really is and in this case obvious Kate the truth um all right so let's look again we're gonna keep moving along one thing I wanted to point out is I told you that this is primarily for for reading you could do you could use context clues and listening all the time I think we do this but we just do it quickly when you're listening you're it's moving so fast you don't really have time to go and point out and think about the different context clues you're really just trying to follow along the main idea but your brain does do that and you really do it quickly reading it's more of a reflective skill where you it's it's a it's something it's very reflective where you can stop you can go back you can look at a word then you can go back and look at the other words around it so this is a great way again to practice context clues build your vocabulary improve your reading comprehension so here we go now this is context clues and what I would say is this right here alright so think of the situation she suddenly appeared in Tom he looked shocked and then when he was giving his answer that I okay because of that you should try it you should be able to think okay if somebody he replies somewhat nonplussed then okay yes excellent answers uh Mary Asif excellent sleepwalk there I thought yeah all right if you are non plus then it means that somebody is surprised or confused that that that is just the way that that is their description so Tom in this situation he was shocked he didn't know what to say III don't know what you're talking about so you could say that he you know replied somewhat nonplussed all right he was a little surprised he was a little confused this is another word if you ever read the books Harry Potter JK Rowling she likes to use this word quite often you would come across it the way people say stuff or the way she's describing a character as nonplussed alright so if you're reading Harry Potter keep an eye out for that one okay so again we're going to make it a little more challenging I like to try and make it a little more difficult as we continue and see if you can try to understand that these different unknown vocabulary words by using the context clues so here's another situation it was well past midnight they had been working diligently to finish the project before the deadline I can't work anymore I'm beat he told her yeah it's getting late let's call it a day and finish up tomorrow she said again I think the situation very easy to follow I think you probably understand it but maybe you're like well there's a few words in there I don't know so I'm I'm highlighting these three for you again maybe you're familiar with them maybe not and if you're not let's see if you can find some context clues and see if you can determine the meaning of these words so the first one we got we have diligently beat and call it a day the expression so let's first let's take one at a time we're gonna start with diligently and the context clue that I would say okay finish the project before the deadline so think about this somebody is working diligently it is an adverb describing how this person works so if you're trying to finish something before a deadline what do you think how would you how would you be working if you're trying to do that um excellent uh sir it's Sylvia Russia sleepwalker perfect Mahmud yes if if you're talking about somebody who's working diligently again the the can bridge I'm giving you the can bridge meaning it means that they are working well well carefully and with a lot of effort they're working hard I would also again this is their definition I would also to me it also means that you're kind of working continuously to that you're working so hard that you're really not stopping you are very focused on this work and you are working diligently okay let's look at the next word which was in that discussion when the guy said you know I can't work anymore I'm beat so if somebody says I'm beat what do you think it means and I've given you these two context clues all right what time is it it was well past midnight and then basically what he said it's well past midnight and he says can't work anymore I can't do this I can't work anymore I'm beat this is an informal expression I guess you could say it's a little bit of maybe slang but I think it's very common I think people use this quite often when I you can put it into context and if somebody says I'm beat yes it means exactly sky Ricciardo crack crazy excellent Marilla Gertrudis if you're beat then it means that you are extremely tired it is an adjective and you would say somebody would just describe themselves you would use it as a predicate adjective as well somebody say I'm beat or oh he's beat somebody is extremely tired then that last word that other unknown word was call are word it's a phrase call it a day let's call it a day and the context clues that I have for you would be first one is getting late again referring to this time and then she's replying like we'll finish up tomorrow so it's getting late finish up tomorrow call it a day this is an idiom that I hope that based on that context you could easily determine that to call it a day the idiom means that you are it means that you are going to stop what you're doing because you just can't do it anymore and you often you use this idiom I think when talking about work that you are doing some type of work for at your job or it could be school and you are so tired you cannot continue somebody might say you know let's call it a day we can't work anymore let's call it a day and then we will continue later we'll call it a day so that is a good good idiom to know good expression because if you're working you're too tired to continue and you're working with somebody else you could tell them like look let's call it a day let's stop what we're doing all right so I got another one for you again it's a longer it's a longer paragraph and we are going to identify several different words so here is the the paragraph and as again think about the situation put a picture in your mind and try to think about well how these people feel so I said I told him we were not buying anything and that he should put the toy back he then proceeded to throw a tantrum it had been a very rough day and I was already at my wit's end I was in no mood to deal with his pure I'll behavior I took a deep breath and tried to relax after a few moments he calmed down as well so I think the situation is again rather it's it's not too advanced if you're listening to that if you're reading it ok I understand what's happening but perhaps there are these three words or phrases that you're not exactly sure what they mean but again if you're reading it's reflective you can stop and say ok let me look around and find the meaning of these other words and phrases to help me better understand this unknown word so we have tantrum at my wit's end and pure I'll all right so let's begin let's take this one at a time and talk about a a tantrum and I put the got those first context clues for you of think about the situation that leads up to this tantrum all right somebody's saying I told him to put that we're not buying anything today all right we're not shopping we're not buying anything put that toy back if you were talking to in this case is talking to assume like her little boy then what do you think their reaction would be he throws a tantrum and this is a it's a good collocation because we use this with the verb throw somebody throws a tantrum you could also say somebody has a tantrum so we use it with either throw or have and yes I think excellent perfect a 10-month read more guiana yes if somebody's throwing a tantrum it's again they define it Canberra jazz a sudden period of uncontrolled anger and I think this word is often used when when you're talking about children maybe again they get really upset all of a sudden and you could say that they are throwing a tantrum or maybe they're just oh they're really having a tantrum but I think it's commonly used with throw somebody throws a tantrum let's look at the next one this is a at my wit's end this is a an expression that I don't know if it's more of an American expression I'm not really sure if it's common commonly used in British English but it's an expression that you would hear you might hear it in a movie or a TV show it's not I'm not gonna say that it's super common but somebody might say you know I was at my wit's end they're describing the way they feel and here are some context clues that you know you you now know what tantrum means so he proceeded to throw a tantrum alright and already I'm saying it was a very rough day how do you think that person feels that it's it's been a really difficult day it's been a bad day and now they have a child who is throwing a tantrum and they say I was already I was already at my wit's end it's been such a bad day I was already at my wit's end what do you think that that would mean alright so again this is an expression that means if somebody says you know I'm at my wit's end it's almost like you're saying you're at your breaking point you are already at your breaking point and again the wake Ambridge defines it is you are so worried or confused that you don't know what to do next you're very worried you're very confused and you're like okay i'm i it's it's almost like you're you just you can't think of what you should do next you're kind of panicking and you could say you were you're at your wits end again i think of another way to another expression you could think about the meaning of this phrase is somebody saying i'm i'm at my breaking point many of you were talking about oh you're losing patience that's another great way to think about it that you are at your wits end you're at your breaking point you're you're losing patience and you don't know what to do next then we have that that last word pure oil I think in

I think in many some Americans may pronounce it as peril as well I think in British English is kind of more so how I'm pronouncing it pure I'll but they're talking about pure I'll behavior so again let's look at these context clues that somebody the child proceeded to throw a tantrum you were already at your wits end and then you were again you're trying to relax so they're describing the child's behavior as pure I'll so what do you think it means I think it's very obvious now I realize and I will tell you afterwards I don't think I used it in the right context and I'll explain that in just a moment but I think all of you yes I getting some great answers perfect one d3r at one end sorry they didn't get all that rumah mary a sleepwalker exactly gladys joseph perfect so if somebody is you're saying is pure i'll the adjective it basically means childish that you were behaving in a silly way and not like an adult the reason why I said that maybe I'm not using it in the right context is because of course a child is going to behave have childish behavior I think pure I'll is it's an adjective that would more commonly be used when talking about maybe a teenager or even an adult somebody who should be a little more mature and they're not acting like that they're not acting like an adult then you might refer use that adjective and say they have you know pure wild behavior or a pure wild manner or maybe making a pure I'll comment so again I think it's more commonly used to describe somebody who should be acting like an adult but is not acting like an adult so in my example I was talking about a child of course a child should have well it's not a surprise that their behavior was a bit childish so again this is so important like for your reading comprehension and it is it is such a great way to use in order to build your vocabulary because I always tell students especially you know building your vocabulary it improves your fluency because you can use more precise language when you want to describe your thoughts your opinion your your ideas and one of the best ways to do that is just to read is to read different books news or newspaper articles and like even today you guys were reading these examples all of it helps and I hope I really hope that you guys learn some new words today just watching this lesson so I thank you guys so much all of you for for joining me if you guys want to connect with us if you guys are interested in sponsoring and supporting interactive English we we now have both YouTube memberships patreon links are in the description we offer some different rewards and it's all the same whether it's on YouTube or patreon all those rewards are the same notice some patrons

US Election Aftermath (What happens now?) | Reading + Vocabulary

Hey everyone, welcome to today's lesson. My name is Wes and this is Interactive English, the channel. It's really it's just all about trying to help you practice and improve your English skills so that you can achieve English fluency. And if this is your first time here, I would love to hear from you. Please write your name in the comments, say hello. I love hearing from new people to our channel. So today I have a lesson that it's a little bit current events because as many of you know, there was a presidential election in the United States. And I wanted to talk a little bit about that. It's in the news a lot, what's going on. And in this lesson, we're going to look at several different online articles and we're going to read a little bit about the article and then I'm going to pick out some of the useful vocabulary that I think will help you better comprehend what it is that you're reading. But also this is going to help your listening because I'm going to try and highlight some of the words that I think are a little more difficult, more advanced.

And some of them that I think are very important and will help you if you want to learn more about this, if you're reading other articles or perhaps you're watching the news, you may hear some of these words and phrases. So I really just want to do this to help with your comprehension. I'm not really I'm not really going to get into my personal opinion about Joe Biden or Donald Trump. I Toward the end, I will share my opinion about what's going to happen maybe, what I think is going to happen. But I really want to focus on a few of these articles, talk about the election, what's going to happen next and kind of how it works. So I do want to say a quick hello to some of you who are with me. Lolly, as always, great to see you.

Um Elias, welcome. Orlando, so many people from all over the world. That's wonderful. I I do have a couple of things I just want to show you. We have our vocabulary document which I'm going to be picking out some of those words from the articles and after this lesson I will put all of these words down in the description as well as links to these articles in case you want to finish reading them and review. We're not going to read the entire article. The other thing I want to show you is if you want to learn a little bit more about the the US election and how it works, I did a lesson about a month ago talking about the Electoral College system. I did the same thing. It was a vocabulary lesson and I was talking about some of the words that are relevant to the way that the US does an election as well as explaining how it works. So I will leave a link to that lesson in the comments. I'm also going to throw it in the chat right now. If you would like to learn about a little bit more about how the elections process works. So there's a link right there in the chat if you want to check that lesson out and that's more explaining, well, how do we do this? How do we work our system? Today I want to focus really on what's going to happen now. Where do we go from here? So of course I told you this is kind of a a reading and vocabulary lesson and there's so much information out there because you could do just a quick Google search and you're going to find all of this information. are so many different articles about it. It's it's a current event, something it just recently happened. So you're going to find a lot of different news out there. But because we're going to focus on where do we go from here? What happens next? This is the first article that we're going to talk about which is Here's when the results of the 2020 election will be finalized because I know some of you are thinking about, well, okay, the election is over. Yes, it is over but it's not finalized, okay? So that's a little bit of a distinction and let's read some of this and we'll pick out a few vocabulary words that I think will help you. So the first thing that we're going to talk about is let's just read some of this together right here. And then I'll talk about a few words. So it says Joe Biden is the president-elect of the United States as NBC News projected Saturday, but the results of the election won't be finalized until January. When Americans cast their ballots for president on November 3rd, they weren't voting directly for Biden or the incumbent Donald Trump Donald Trump. President Donald Trump, but rather for their state's electors. Members of the Electoral College cast their votes for president on behalf of their states. Then Congress convenes to count the electoral votes and announce the results of the election. So let's look at a few words from this that may you may think would be useful, okay? So here I have right here. Okay, I got to move around um quite a few of these screens. So this is that first um that first article. Here's when the results for the 2020 election will be finalized. I want to look at these first two words right here. So it says that they projected that the winner will be Joe Biden. To project, when it's used as a verb, it's talking about you're calculating an amount in the future

So that's another word when talking about politics that you're likely to come across. Somebody might mention the incumbent. So in this case, the incumbent was Donald Trump. So let's look at the next part of this article and see what it has to say. This is going to help you understand what's going to happen next, okay? So it says in a controversial move, Trump has refused to concede the election and is mounting efforts to challenge ballots in multiple states even as tabulation continues. Here are the key steps in the electoral college process between now and inauguration day. So let's look at that word to concede because this is a word that if you're listening to the news or you're reading other articles about the election right now, that's probably something that you're hearing that Trump right now has not conceded the election. So what that means if you say that someone's going to concede, it means let's go back over to our vocabulary list. I already have it written down. To concede means to admit unwillingly that something is true. So when you concede an election, you're basically admitting, yes, the election is over, I lost and I concede the election. So that has not happened yet. But it really it it does not have to happen in order for Biden to become president. So it's more it's more of a custom, a tradition that the person who loses would concede and congratulate the winner. It hasn't happened yet. The other word that it's talking about is let's talk about inauguration. I have it written down there. I didn't have these in the the order but so it said that um they're wondering if this will happen before inauguration.

Inauguration is talking about the ceremony of officially putting somebody in an important position. In this case, you're talking about becoming president and they have a presidential inauguration, this ceremony. I think many countries around the world when they if you select your political representatives, your president, your prime minister, there is probably some type of inauguration, the ceremony. That's what it's called. So let's look at the next part because I want to talk about, okay, well, what's going to happen next? So right now it says that um the the votes are in. So each state has the votes that they've received. People cast their ballots. And now the states will need to certify the results. To certify to certify something means, I put it on our vocabulary list, means to say that something is true. So the next step is that states have Most of it will happen this month. The states will certify the the results and say, yes, it's true, it's accurate that this is the results of our election. So that is the next step. I know that part of what's been going on Trump they they were trying to challenge it. They're trying to stop or slow down the states from certifying the election. But this is probably going to happen this month. The states will certify the election the the results and they'll say that it's true. We're going to fast forward ahead because I want to talk about the next step. Once the results are certified what will happen then is that the electors uh on December 8th, that is the last day for the states to resolve any kind of disputes or disagreements.

Uh they have until December 8th because on December 14th the electors will cast their ballot. As I said, we we have a really kind of screwy system in the United States if you're not familiar with the Electoral College. So, people cast their votes um and then each state has a number of electoral votes or electors. Electors are the people. So, let me give you an example just really quickly. Uh California has 50 electoral votes. So, the state of California because it has the biggest population has 50 electoral votes. So, the state will choose 50 electors. 50 people that will cast the vote on behalf of the voters. So, because Joe Biden won California, those 50 electors are then in in what the the way it should work is they will then cast their vote for Joe Biden, those 50 electoral votes. And that is what determines who is president. So, hypothetically, hypothetically you could have electors decide to say, "Look, I know that the people chose this. I'm going to vote a different way." That is very uncommon. It does not really happen. I want to say that um some if you are an elector and you you basically promise to vote the way that the the people in the state have voted. If you go against that and you don't do it, I think that um you could even get in trouble. That there might be some kind of penalty. I don't know if you have to pay money or go to jail. Um but you could get in trouble. But those voters will cast their vote on behalf of the the state. And what I mean it by on behalf of is like the people in California, they voted for Joe Biden.

So, the elector is going to they know that. So, they are they're going to cast their vote for Joe Biden on behalf of them. You you may be wondering, like I said why does the US do this? Uh the reason why I think they wanted to have one final check that if the people in the US voted for somebody who was uh who they should not get voted in, the electors was like one other check to possibly stop that from happening. But in this case the electors have been chosen. Once the votes are certified on December 14th they will then cast uh the official vote. Um and at this point those votes will uh go for Joe Biden. I don't know that if you've seen the the counts that they are projected. Again, those are projections like they're guessing that it's 306 to like 232.

Those are the electoral votes. So, that is what makes it official. So, hopefully hopefully this makes a little more sense as to what's going to happen from now into the future. That the states will then certify the results this month. And then on December 14th the electors will cast their ballot. And then in January you have the inauguration. Okay? So, that's a lot to take in. All right. All right. So, I want to look at another article and pick out a few more words that will help. Again, if you guys are just joining me, um we're talking about uh it helping you improve your comprehension to understand the aftermath of the US election. What's going to happen from now until January when uh the new president is comes into office, which is at this point President-elect Joe Biden. So, let's look at the next article. Uh so, that's kind of a little bit of a history. All right. I know like like again, it's always interesting conversation cuz people are very uh people are very they have very strong opinions, I think, when it comes to politics. And it's uh everybody a lot of people are very divided. Let's let's look at the next article. Okay? So, the next article and I'll again, I'll pick out some vocabulary from this article. It's really talking about um mm right here about conceding. So, I told you right now that um Trump has not conceded the election. To concede is kind of to admit that, "Okay, this is this is true. This was fair. Um I I lost the election." He has not conceded and he's challenging this in court. And they're trying to challenge this. So, I want to talk This is talking about um kind of no modern presidential candidate has refused to concede. Here's why it matters. Really, I want to highlight some of the vocabulary that I I think is very useful in this that these are words when talking about politics I I think are very common. So, it says, "No modern presidential candidate has refused to concede. Here's why this matters. The formal concessant concession speech has played a vital role in even the most divisive elections from the Civil War to Bush v. Gore." So, you know what it is to concede. It says it's a vital role. Vital is a great adjective that means something is important. And it says, "One of the most divisive elections." This is an adjective that I think you'll you'll come across a lot if you're reading about US politics or possibly even uh politics in your own country. And people talk about something or someone, maybe a person is divisive. And what it means to be divisive uh if we go back to our vocabulary list, uh let me move this down so you guys can see this list of vocabulary words and then we'll talk about them. Divisive is describing something that causes great disagreement within a group of people. So, you could just I I think often you might use it to describe a person. It can be divisive.

Some people uh people think Trump is very divisive. And I think it's it's interesting with US politics, especially when thinking about um Trump because what I would say is the the things that people hate about Donald Trump, his critics, the things that they hate about him are almost the same things that his supporters love about him. So, you have uh a lot of disagreement between the critics and the supporters because some of the things that the critics would hate are the same things that the supporters love. And it's really hard to bridge uh that gap in between. But I want to look at some more words from this article as we go through it. So, okay. Here we go. Let's go down a little bit. I'm not going to read the whole article. I just want to pick out some of the vocabulary that I think is useful when talking about the the US election. So, it says, "Even though Joe Biden has secured enough votes to become President-elect of the United States, President Donald Trump has given every indication that he won't accept the results as fair. Trump has uh Trump also has refused to commit to a peaceful transfer of power." Both moves would be historical first if Trump refuses to concede even after all legal challenges are resolved. US history has seen a handful of bitterly contested elections, most recently in 2000 when Democrat Al Gore called Republican George W. While their first conversation was congenial, the second was tense with Gore famously telling Bush, "You don't have to get snippy about this." Um let me so, let's see how much more did I want to read? Okay.

No presidential candidate has ever refused to concede defeat once all the votes were counted and legal challenges resolved. For the country's first uh hundred years or so conceding a race wasn't part of the process at all. Here's how the loser's concession went from non-existent to essential custom that all candidates have observed, albeit So, let's look at some of the vocabulary for this. They're talking about um Trump has not conceded and so far has refused to commit to a peaceful transfer uh of power. That's another word that uh a phrase that I think you you might hear if you're watching a news program and they might talk about uh a peaceful transition of power. It's when the leaders of a government peacefully hand over control to newly elected leaders. Probably I I you you guys understand this. You probably heard it. It really means exactly what it says, that there is a peaceful transfer of power. You're transferring it to the new elected leaders.

They mentioned the the word contested. So, to contest something as a verb is to say that something is unfair and you try to have it changed. So, right now Trump is contesting the elections. In this case, they used it in this article, they used it as an adjective saying that it is a contested election. So, you could use it as a verb to contest something or as an adjective, the meaning is the same. So, a contested election is when one person, in this case Trump, is saying that it's unfair and they're trying to get it overturned. Uh so, they mentioned that in the past you also had a contested election in the year 2000 between Al Gore and George W.

And in this case, they're saying it's custom, albeit although some concessions are not as graceful as others. Some of them are a little more controversial, that maybe there's a little more anger, emotion involved, like like the one in 2000. So, again, these are some great words to know if you're trying to understand more about what's going on with these elections. All right, I have another article that I want to talk about, which is recent, because again people Trump is contesting the election. He does not agree with these results, but right now Biden is projected to win and as I showed you in that first article, this month the states will certify the results. They'll they'll come out and say, "Yes, this is right."

will then cast their final vote and then it becomes official and then the inauguration would be in January. So, let's look at this last website because again, they're all right now they're talking about um uh they're mentioning fraud and issues like that. So, these are some words that I wanted to do, but this was something that came out really recently, um which is not helping Trump. So, this is an article um which you can see. It says, let me move it down so you guys can see the title. So, it says, "Trump's own officials say 2020 was America's most secure election in history." And I say that it's not helping Trump is because even in the government uh the Department of Homeland Security came out and made a statement and said, "Yes, the election was fair, that there was no widespread fraud." So, I'll just read the the um the I'll just read this part again and then I want to pick out a word or two.

It says, "Trump's own officials say 2020 was America's most secure election in history. Homeland Security put out a statement with state and local officials that countered the president's fraud claims." Okay? I want to look at those two words, countered the president's fraud claims. To counter something and fraud. Those are the first two words that I have for this article right here. So, if we go over here, again, I have a list of words. We'll go through them a little bit at a time. So, to counter something um is to react in the opposing opinion or action. So, when you're countering it, you're you're giving um the opposing view. For example, you might hear it used in the term counterargument.

Somebody is presenting an argument and then another person gives the counterargument, the opposing view. So, the the Homeland Security gave the counterview. They're saying, "No, no, no, there was no fraud." Um and they countered his view that fraud um was committed. If you don't know what fraud is, it's um again, it's a word you probably are hearing a lot of if you're listening to US politics and what's going on. Trump is claiming fraud that it it's the crime of deceiving people. It's a very broad term. It's not specific. It's just saying that the that there was some type of crime. So, let's go back to the article. Um I have some more words that I want to share with you.

And we'll see what this says. Um Okay. So, again, I'm going to read some of it and then uh we'll look at the words. I'm not going to read the whole article. I will leave these um articles down in the description if you want to read them. Again, reading is such a good way to improve your English skills and it's a great way to build your vocabulary because my hope is that if you learn some of these new words and you continue reading about the US election, you're probably going to come across these words again and then you'll come across it again and again and again. And suddenly you you now understand this word. You're putting it up in your active memory. Okay, so, let's let's go to where is it? Let me read this article right here.

Um Okay. It says, "The 2000 Where is it? Wait a second. Uh Okay. The 2020 US election was the most secure in American history, according to US election officials. Um The November 3rd election was the most secure in American history. Right now, across the country election officials are reviewing and double-checking the entire election process prior to finalizing the result. The the coordinating bodies on election infrastructure and security said in a joint statement issued by the Department of Homeland Security Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency, CISA." All right, that was a lot to uh That was a lot to big sentence to get through. The statement directly contradicts President Donald Trump, who has made unfounded allegations of widespread voting irregularities and fraud.

The president is using these claims to challenge the vote counts in several key states that deliver President-elect Joe Biden his apparent Electoral College victory. The Trump campaign has filed dozens of lawsuits, some of which have already been dismissed, but the barrage of legal action and Trump's false claims, often bolstered by right-wing media and some of the president's allies in the Republican Party, have undermined overall faith in the electoral process and in the safety and security of US elections. Okay?

let's look at a few of these words. The first one that I wanted to talk about was that they again, this is talking about the DHS. They came out and gave a counterview saying there was no fraud and they put out a joint statement. So, the joint statement was with the Department of Homeland Security Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency. So, this was the first word that I wanted to point out, joint. So, if you say that something is joint, it's belonging to or shared between two people. So, they put out a joint statement. You may hear somebody use joint um if they're talking about joint custody is another phrase that you may hear this in. With um the next one they're saying about unfounded allegations. Okay?

The next part that I want to say, dismiss and bolster, was in that last paragraph. So, it said that Trump has filed many lawsuits. Many of the lawsuits have been dismissed. And they're saying that some of the the claims, the fraud claims are bolstered by right-wing media. I want to talk about those two words, dismissed and bolster. So, if we go back to our vocabulary list, to dismiss means that you you're saying it's not important, it's not worth considering. So, if you're talking about like um like the law and uh lawyers and you have a lawsuit, this is a word that you will commonly hear. You might hear that the lawsuit was dismissed, that it was the judge decided it's not worth considering and they dismissed the lawsuit. So, that is a good verb to know if you're reading something that has to do with the law or a lawsuit um such as this case because Trump has filed lawsuits. Many of them have been dismissed. But they say that these claims of voter fraud are bolstered by right-wing media. If you bolster something, another good verb to

to learn in case you didn't know what it meant, it means to support something and you're trying to make it stronger. You're trying to bolster this claim, okay? So, these are some good words uh to know which I think are very common if you're again, you're reading something about the US election or you're trying to understand, well, what's going on? What's happening with all of this? These are some good words to know. Again, I'm going to put all of these words down in the description after the lesson along with links to the article. The words will be there in case you'd like to review. These are very useful words for um for understanding what's happening. So, the one thing I want to say again I'm going to give you I'm going to share my opinion uh about where what's going to happen in the future um and where this is going to take us. But I do want to say if you guys like if you like what we do here at Interactive English and you want to show us some love, you can support our channel with a YouTube membership or on Patreon. Links again to those are are down in the description below.

So, let me let me give you my view. Um I was trying to give this lesson and not really get into my personal opinion about uh Trump or Biden. help you more easily comprehend the information that you might be reading or listening to later on um in the future if you're listening to anything about politics. So, what I think is going to happen um this is just my view. As I said, the next step is that this month the states are going to certify the results. I think that some of them like uh in Georgia, they're doing a recount. At this point, re is a great uh prefix to learn to means to do it again. So, they're counting again to make sure it's right. But I think most of the the the states are going to certify the results. All 50 states will certify the results and they're going to come back and say that yes, uh this is the outcome uh of the election that Joe Biden won.

electors that were chosen, I think they are then going to cast their votes for Joe Biden and the result is going to be the same as what's projected right now. I think it's going to be 306 to 232. And then in January, there is going to be an inauguration for Joe Biden. That's what I think is going to happen. But then let's move further into the future. What's going to happen to Donald Trump? Because I know there's a lot of speculation um about what's he going to do uh next, what he would do. And this is just my view, my opinion because I think Trump he loves the spotlight. He comes from TV, that is his world. I think that people view the US politics a little bit like uh reality TV. He uses those phrases like stay tuned, we'll see. It's like trying to keep people like tuned in for next week the same way you do with a TV show. So, I think that's kind of going to continue. And what I think he's going to do, I think he's going to concede, but I think he's going to concede in his way, which means I think at some point Trump will give a concession speech, but it's not it's going to be different than all the others because I think he this is my view. I think he's going to concede and say, yes, the uh we lost this election because it was rigged and because it was fake. So, I still think that he's going to say he's lost because that I think he's still going to say because there was this fraud um even though those allegations, just to review, those allegations are unfounded. All right? It's always good to review some of this vocabulary. So, I think he's going to concede um in his way. I think there will be an inauguration for Joe Biden uh in January. And then afterwards, I think Trump is going to still try to to keep the spotlight. I think Trump will people talking about maybe doing some type of media company like a perhaps a TV show or a podcast. I think he's still going to stay actively involved in politics.

And what I think because he's the TV guy, I think he's going to end his concession really and probably say that he's going to try and run again in 2024. So, the next election in the US will be four years later in 2024. I think he's going to uh to say that he's probably going to run. Again, he's not going to make a commitment, that's not what they do in TV. You need to keep that suspense. He'll say, probably, we'll see, stay tuned. And I think he'll do that for the next few few years in order to to stay relevant to uh for people to listen to him. He'll say, I'm going to run. And my prediction is that in 2023 or in early 2024, he's not going to run for re-election. That's just my view. I think he's going to continue to say, stay tuned, we'll see, stay tuned. And then I think he's going to uh decide not on the topic. I think maybe we'll do uh maybe a cultural lesson on Thanksgiving because Thanksgiving is right around the corner. So, thank you guys again. Uh Lolly, thanks for being here. CC, uh Angela, Bomba, uh Kareem, Hassan, hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend. I will see you

US Regional Vocabulary You Need to Know (+ Lesson Notes)

this lesson is about the United States which is where I am from and I want to teach you some Regional vocabulary which I think is useful for any Foreigner who may be living there as well as anyone who is just going to visit the US so if you enjoy building your vocabulary Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so I want you to participate in this lesson all right I want you to think about what vocabulary word or phrase would you use to describe these certain things and here is the first one okay what would you call this if somebody were to ask you hey would you like a all right we're talking about a carbonated beverage so overwhelmingly in the United States and I think in English throughout the world people are going to use the word soda and just say yeah would you like a soda now a long time ago in the 1800s Wendy's carbonated beverages first came out people would use the phrase soda pop it's not common nowadays most people have just taken that first word soda and they've just run with it however in some places in the U. S such as some of those Midwestern states like Wisconsin and Minnesota people may say pop would you like a pop and they're talking about a carbonated beverage now if you're from the south which is where I grew up you may hear people just use the word Coke and I know Coke is the name of a brand this coke was invented in Atlanta Georgia has deep roots in the South and it's so popular so well known that people may use the word Coke when referring to any carbonated beverages would you like a

Coke would you like a soda or maybe would you like a pop so I've given you this map right here just to give you an idea as to where people may use these different words that does not mean this is my disclaimer that if you're in this area that everyone is going to use this word I told you most people in the U. S are going to say soda there there are many transplants across the country which is another great word it refers to a person who moves to a new place therefore there's a lot of mixing going on you're going to hear people in different parts of the country use a variety of words based on where they grew up or their own experience so this map is just to give you a general idea as to where you may hear people use some of these different words and phrases and if you would like to get a copy of these beautiful lovely Maps well check out the link down in the description because when you join our email Community then you can access this lovely ebook with this different Regional vocabulary let's look at the next one what would you call these insects right here these small little insects that I think technically they're beetles and they're related to the glow worm because their butts light up so what would you call these small insects right here they're actually it's real they're really beautiful to watch in the evening there are two different words that you may hear people use I think most places throughout the United States they're going to say that these insects are fireflies however if you're in the South again which is where I grew up people may call them lightning bugs and this is actually something that I have experience with because when I was younger uh I would visit family in North Carolina and see them and I'm constantly hear and talk about lightning bugs and it wasn't until I got a little older that I heard people talking about fireflies and I realized oh it's it's the same insect we're talking about the same thing so you may hear people say fireflies or lightning bugs if you're in the South let's stay in the South for just a little bit and I want to see how well you know your Southern dialect because most people throughout the United States would refer to a group of people as you guys and it doesn't matter if it's a group of men and women or only a group of men or only a group of women it's pretty common to refer to that group and say you guys except in the South you may hear people use this instead it's a contraction I imagine you've heard this word watching well TV shows or movies and in the South you may hear people say y'all this is a contraction stands for you all and it's just reduced to y'all y'all want a Coke and then we can go to the park and watch the lightning bugs that is that's something somebody may say and they use all of those phrases right there now I catch myself using both from time to time I grew up in the South but I've lived in many other places throughout the United States most of the time I would say you guys but every now and then I catch myself using y'all now in the United States many people live in the suburbs they live in homes and sometimes they may have this informal event in which they sell used items sometimes new things just right out in front of their home there's no business license needed they just take their some of their used stuff and they set it up right in front of their yard and people may walk by and sometimes they they buy something and this is called what do you think there are three different phrases that you may hear people use garage sale yard sale or tag sale okay so I think uh in general most people are going to use either a garage sale or a yard sale there is that one little tiny spot in the Northeast that may say tag sale and I think this is more common in the state of Connecticut I actually used to live in Connecticut back when I was in Middle School and I would see signs sometimes people would put up in front of their yard that says tag sale we're having a tag sale but most people are going to say either garage sale or yard sale and they would they may put up a sign in front of their yard advertising this informal event don't confuse this with the larger market in which there are many vendors selling different things mostly used things but that market is called a flea market so just remember a garage sale yard sale or even a tag sale is an informal event in which people are just selling things right out in front of their home and how about this next one what would you call this there there are two different answers and I think both of them are are pretty common throughout the country so you could say either one and nobody's really going to give it much thought but the two different phrases that I'm talking about are either trash can or garbage can the only thing I'd really like to point out is you can see on the map it seems like the Pacific Northwest has a stronger preference for for saying garbage can while I think many other parts of the country would just say trash can personally I feel like I use both of them if we're talking about some like one that's inside the home I think overwhelmingly I would just say trash can if it's outside the home then maybe I might use either one but that's just me personally and just to teach you one more vocabulary word the place where you dump your trash can or garbage can is called a dumpster all right right there and this you will only see those outside here's the next one what would you call this right here there are three different words or phrases that you may hear people use throughout the US two of them I think are are much more common than the third one so overwhelmingly I think people especially on the East Coast are going to say water fountain on the west coast I think you're more likely to hear people use drinking fountain and you can see that little bit of purple right there in certain places in the Northeast as well as in the midwest people may call this a bubbler but it's not as common as the others most of the time people are going to say drinking fountain or water fountain and this candy right here that many children love is called what do you think there are two different words people may use I I know what I used to say back when uh I lived in the South so most of the time people are going to call this a lollipop because that is the actual name of this hard candy it's a lollipop however a long time ago informally people started calling it a sucker because you would suck on the lollipop nowadays if people use the word sucker you're more likely to hear this in the South or even a little bit in the midwest but just be careful because the word sucker it's also an informal word referring to a gullible person that you can easily trick and you could say this person is a sucker so just keep that in mind it's a word that has multiple meanings how about this right here what would you call this roadway and I this can be a little tricky because I think people often may use them interchangeably so you may hear people call this roadway either a freeway or a highway but there is a difference between the two and I think even many Americans might not know the difference it's one of those things uh in which all highways are freeways but not all freeways are highways okay sounds like a little bit of a riddle it's kind of like uh both thumbs are fingers but not all fingers are thumbs one of those types of things so let me let me explain the difference so the subtle difference would be access to the road because highways there are larger roads they may have multiple Lanes of traffic but there could also be cross traffic as well and you may have to stop whereas freeways have controlled access which means there's no cross traffic you're not going to have to stop and generally you may have to go up a ramp in order to get on a freeway but even though there's a difference people may use them interchangeably especially on the East Coast however on the west coast it is more common for people to use the word freeway and keep in mind you do not want to confuse these words with interstate and once again some people may end up using all three words interchangeably but an interstate is like a freeway it has controlled access except it's going to cross from one state to the next now something that you may not have have known has to do with the numbers because whether you're talking about a freeway a highway or Interstate if the number is odd then it's referring to a roadway that goes north south and if it's even then the roadway goes east west just a little food for thought now let's take a trip to the grocery store what would you say this is so overwhelmingly most people in the United States are going to call this a grocery cart that phrase is most widespread but there are areas that may use the word carriage such as in the northeast or even buggy in parts of the South or Midwest but pretty much anywhere you go you could just call this a grocery cart now you may not always be in a grocery store but still use this cart in which case people would just refer to this as a shopping cart and if you go to a playground you may see this what would you call it because in the U. S you may hear people use a couple of different names so I think most people in the U. S are going to call this a teeter-totter and I believe that's also what they would say in Canada as well but when I was a kid in the South I would hear people use the word seesaw and I believe people would also say seesaw in British English so it's this is an instance in which Southern dialect and British English overlap and it's it's interesting because when I think of other parts of the Southern dialect like y'all it just much of it sounds seems very distinct from British English except if you're talking about a seesaw so I hope this lesson has been insightful because language it does it gives us a glimpse into the culture and I know many of you who watch these lessons you live in the U. S or you travel to the US often and learning the different names of these these very common things I think it can help so you'll know whether to ask someone for a soda or a pop or the next time you're traveling somewhere you'll know if you're on a freeway or a highway or the next time you go to a playground you'll know if those kids are on a teeter-totter or a seesaw if you enjoy the lesson and learn something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Understand EVERYTHING in English | Improve Your Listening

When it comes to learning a language listening is so important. So today, I want to talk to you about some different ways on how you can improve your listening skills to better your comprehension. Often, the first time we are exposed to a language, any language, it is through listening. We hear it being spoken, or we hear it on TV or movies. So it is so important that we improve our listening skills and understand how to improve our listening skills in order to comprehend the language and better understand the words and sentences that we are hearing. So today, I'm going to talk to you about some different tips and different strategies that you can use to become a better listener.

The first suggestion that I have for you is to pay close attention to the content words. Now if you're wondering well, "What are content words?" These are words that actually have meaning. And because of that they really help us paint a picture in our minds. And that makes it easier for us to understand what it is we're listening to. So content words would be like adjectives. And you're thinking about the size, the color, the sound, the smell, the feeling. They're also nouns - the people, the places, the objects. As well as the verbs - What actions are happening? What are the actions that you're hearing? Don't worry so much about the smaller words - the articles, the prepositions.

Really focus on those content words, and then use them to put pictures in your head. If it's a podcast, if it's a TV show, or even in just a general conversation, if we're able to identify and understand these content words, and actually put an image in our mind, we're going to understand exactly what is being said. And that helps us improve our overall language fluency.

The next suggestion, which is very important, is to become an active listener. So for most of us whenever we're listening, it's passive listening. We're listening to a TV show, or a movie, or music, or a podcast, and you're not really required to do anything. Just listening and trying to understand. When I say become an active listener, this means that it requires you to do something. You have to actually respond to whatever it is you're listening to. And that response might be answering a question. That response might be doing a summary. That response might be actually speaking to somebody and having a back and forth conversation. When you become an active listener, then you're really exercising those muscles and trying to understand exactly what you're hearing.

Because there is a response. You will need to do something after the listening is over. So this is important for having a conversation because you want to understand and you want to respond to them. It's important if you are preparing for a school test, or the IELTS, or the TOEFL. Because you have to answer questions based on what you hear. So it's important to try to become an active listener and practice your active listening skills to improve your overall comprehension.

Now you don't have to do anything completely different if you want to practice your active listening skills. You can use those same sources that you're using for passive listening and just change them into an activity in which you become an active listener. So for example, if you are watching a TV show or a movie, then you can practice by trying to make a prediction about what's going to happen next. You can also use online resources and do some listening activities and then have to respond to the questions that they give you. Even here at Interactive English, we have different video lessons to help you practice your active listening skills. And I will put those up above, and I highly recommend you go check those out.

The next suggestion I have for you is to listen and follow the signs. So whatever it is you're listening to if it is a presentation, if it is a TV show, or even just a conversation, you have somebody trying to take you from point A to point B. And all along that path is the conversation that you have to understand. So in order to get from point A to point B, you need to follow the signs. Often when we're hearing something things are told in sequential order. And that means they're using transition words like first, also, in the beginning. And if you're able to recognize these signs, and the transitions, and where they're taking you in the conversation, you're going to be able to more easily understand what it is you're listening to.

So you need to be able to recognize these transition words and follow the signs that's going to take you from one part of the conversation, to the next part, to the next part, into the next part. A great way to practice this skill is by listening to different presentations. Because when somebody is giving a presentation, again, they want to tell you a story in sequential order. They want to take you from one point to the next. And in order to do so, they're going to use those transition words. And that's a great way to practice and see if you can identify the different signs that are going to help you get from one idea to the next.

Another very useful suggestion, which is one that I tell students all the time, is to listen at your level. I also say the same thing for reading. Read at your level. Because when students read something that's way too difficult, well, they don't understand, and it's not really helping them improve. And this also goes for listening. We have so many students talk to us and say, "You know. When I'm out on the street listening to English, it's very hard to understand." Or when I'm watching the movie and I'm not using subtitles, it becomes very challenging to understand and follow along the story. And that may be because you're trying to listen at a level that's a little too difficult.

Perhaps you don't understand all of the content words that you hear. You're not able to put those pictures in your mind. And then you don't understand what you're listening to. On the other hand, we have many students comment on our channel and say, "Hey, I understand everything that you just said." I completely understand what you're saying in these lessons. That means that that is a great level for your listening skills. And it's great to practice those skills and listen to something at your level. Listen to these lessons. Listen to other videos in which people are speaking maybe at a little bit of a slower pace. That is a great level for you to practice your listening skills.

And build your listening skills as well so that in the future you're going to watch that TV show, you'll watch that movie, and you will understand just about everything that is being said. Of course, I think it's perfectly okay to challenge yourself and to watch all these different movies, and TV shows, and listen to music. That is great. It's still good practice. But again, I think you benefit most from listening to something at your level, and following a long speech such as mine so that you can build your skills over time and improve. So that you can more easily understand fast speech later on in the future. Please. Please. Please. Please. Try to listen at your level.

Right now, what I'd suggest that you do is try to practice those listening skills. Practice those active listening skills. And I've put together a playlist for you guys right here that you can check out. Because these are some lessons that are going to help you practice your listening skills, and help you practice becoming an active listener. If you enjoyed this lesson and found these suggestions useful, please hit that like button. And leave us a comment because we just love hearing from you guys. Thanks so much for watching, and I'll see you next time.

Unlock Your English Fluency with These Speaking Hacks

I have some useful speaking hacks to help you dramatically improve your speaking skills and it's a little hyperbolic I'm exaggerating because well these are not secret hacks these are just things that you should be doing and I hope you give me a chance to convince you that you should be doing these things because well much of what I'm going to talk about in today's lesson these are things that we do in my speaking course which is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally if you're interested in joining or would like to learn more check out the link down in the description so the first speaking hack that I have for you it's just one word and that's shadowing we're going to spend a little bit of time on this so again allow me to convince you so shadowing is when you listen to something and you try to say it in the exact same way you're using the same pronunciation the same speed the same intonation the same emphasis so think about singing a song you're not just going to say the words like you're just reading it you're going to actually try to sing it and say it in the exact same way hold me closer and I feel nothing so my recommendation would be to listen to something say it and let your ears do all the work let's take uh well the song by The Beatles Let It Be you're not just going to just say these words let it be let it be let it be let it be that is not shadowing you're trying to say it in the exact same way let it be let it be let it be let it be and I'm not gonna keep singing I know I'm not a very good singer but you get the idea and when you do this you end up working on things that you may not realize that you're practicing so let's look at the T in let we're going to pronounce this as a flap T that t comes between two vowel sounds so it's gonna sound like a flap T which is more like a soft D let it and we can take that consonant DS sound and link it with the vowel sound in it and linking is part of connected speech let it let it let it be when you're shadowing you you don't necessarily have to study and learn about the flat t or even linking you're just going to do it naturally as you say it the same way that you hear it again let your ears do all the work listen to the following where did you meet him for the first time where did he come from who is he in just those few sentences there were several things going on when it comes to Connected speech assimilation Elysian and linking and again it's good to know these things and understand them but it's not necessary in order to practice so let's let's break this down where did you meet him for the first time so that final DN did we can blend that with the beginning Y sound in you that's assimilation and when they blend together you get a j sound where did you where did you now meet him that H it's it's going to have lied and that's part of a legend this is when sounds get removed and this can often happen with the H sound in words like he him or her when they come in the middle or at the end of a sentence now the final T in meat we can we can use a flap T and then link that soft D sound with the vowel sound in him so it's going to sound like medium medium let's let's listen for it where did you meet him for the first time and then the next two questions we also have illusion and linking where did he come from who is he so that H is going to a lied and then we can link that D sound where did he come from and the same with that final question who is he and then we can practice and say it in the exact same way say it with me right now where did you meet him for the first time where did he come from where did you meet him for the first time where did he come from who is he I have another sentence that I want you to Shadow but my name is in it so I should probably go ahead and introduce myself if this happens to be your first time here my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals if that's what you'd like to do please subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher and the next sentence that I want you that we're going to work on and I just want you to go ahead and say it first and say it out loud here's the sentence okay now I want you to say it in the same way that I do you're not going to get away with this Wes now once again there are a couple of things that are going on which you're just shadowing you might not be thinking about the first thing that I want to point out is the contraction you are your contractions are very common in spoken English and it's just a more natural way of speaking the same goes for reductions going to is going to get reduced to gonna you're not gonna and well people use reductions again it's a more natural way of speaking it also helps give the language that Rhythm and flow and that's what I want to get to right now so English is a stress time language what does that mean it means that as you're speaking you're going to be stressing certain syllables and words and the time in between them it's approximately the same so I'll say this again and I'm going to clap for each stress you're not going to get away with this Wes so I'm clapping on not the second syllable in a way and then my name Wes and then everything in between it's going to get shortened in order to fit that pattern you're not going to get away with this Wes and well this is what's going to help create that nice Rhythm listen for it you're not going to get away with this so far you're never gonna get away with this stand so when you're shadowing and you're saying things in the exact same way there is a lot that you end up practicing and there's also a lot that you can practice with short video clips speeches presentations audio books YouTube videos if this is not something that you're doing I recommend you try it it's also very important that you continue to build your vocabulary and I think it really helps if you focus on a specific topic and I think it's even better if you focus on a topic that interests you because these are the conversations that you're likely going to have you're likely going to talk about the things that you're interested in and reading is a great way to discover the vocabulary that you should learn so if you're gonna read you should stick to the same topic and the more specific you can be I think the better because then you'll learn more specific vocabulary related to that topic so let's well let's choose a topic and say that we're gonna well read some things about inflation that is our topic so if you don't know what inflation means inflation refers to the rate of increase in prices over a given period of time and what I would encourage you to do is not just read one article about inflation read multiple articles because when you do this you're going to start to recognize a pattern of words that get used again and again and that tells you that okay this word is important when it comes to this topic and just to show you what I'm talking about we don't even need to dive into the article I can show you this just reading the headlines turkey Cuts Benchmark interest rate despite rampant inflation B of A warns hot inflation might run rampant for another 10 years fed hikes interest rates amid rampant inflation despite recession risk rampant inflation takes a bigger bite out of food gas budget I'm sure you know the word that I'm getting ready to teach you and that is the word rampant this is an adjective that refers to something that is getting worse quickly and in an uncontrolled way so even if you knew what this word meant before I showed you these article headlines now you know that this is a collocation when talking about inflation and people may talk about rampant inflation so when you read different articles stories comments posts that are all related to the same topic this is a great way to discover important vocabulary that you should learn when it comes to improving your speaking you also need to get a variety and let me tell you what I mean because this follows up on building your vocabulary so what I'm referring to are synonyms or phrase cases that have the same or similar meaning now there are many different phrases that you can use to introduce your opinion like in my view I'm of the opinion that or I have no doubt that so it's good to learn different phrases and get that variety because even though you can use any of these phrases to introduce your opinion they're not always interchangeable so if someone were to say in my view it's very similar to in my opinion it's also very commonly used if someone were to say I'm of the opinion that this is also similar except it sounds it's a little more formal so it's not as often used as something like in my view and if you were to say I have no doubt that well this really expresses certainty and it's just really emphasizing what you're getting ready to say I have no doubt that you should hit that like button okay I'm just really certain that this is what you should do it's just my opinion in the past I had a student who loved to use the word moreover this is a transition word that you can use if you want to add more information it sounds a little more formal so it's not a word that's commonly used in just everyday conversation however when I would speak with this student they were constantly saying moreover moreover moreover and I had a discussion with him and telling him hey it's great if you could use a variety of words to say the same thing also in addition furthermore when you use a variety of words and phrases even to do something as simple as expressing your opinion it's going to make your conversations your presentations your speeches more appealing to The Listener and that's important it's also vital that you build your confidence this is key when it comes to improving your speaking skills so building confidence is something that takes time and practice and you know you could relate this to to just about anything Sports work let me give you a scenario let's say that you are going to take place in a competition in one month now on one hand you don't practice at all for the entire month and on the other hand you practice a little bit each and every day in which scenario do you think you would have more confidence in your abilities of course I'm sure you chose the the second option in which you practice a little bit each and every day so I don't think I need to convince you that practice is a good thing so let's talk about how you can practice today we live in a world in which many people would like instant gratification and that can be challenging when talking about something like building your confidence however if you're looking to give your confidence a real boost I I have a suggestion for you what I would recommend is that you get outside your comfort zone within a comfortable and environment and let me explain what I mean by this so when you get outside your comfort zone that means that you are pushing yourself in ways that you're not used to and that could mean well giving a presentation in front of a group or perhaps you're talking about a topic that you you don't know much about or maybe doing a role play or making up stories when you push yourself to do something and then do it and accomplish that goal well then that can build your confidence but there can be a downside because when when you get outside of your comfort zone sometimes it can make people nervous a little anxious and that that's why the next part is important you want to do this within a comfortable environment that's going to make it easier for you to get outside your comfort zone and this is this can really give your confidence an immediate boost it's one of those I can do anything if I put put my mind to it type of approach but you don't always have to build your confidence in this way you can also do it slowly over time you probably feel more comfortable talking about the things that interest you maybe you've had these conversations before and that's great I want you to keep having them because repetition is a good thing and and this goes back to the practice that I was talking about and you can relate having casual conversations to giving a presentation the more you practice a presentation the more confident you're going to feel that well when the it comes time you're going to give a great presentation and the same can be said about having a conversation the more you have conversations about a specific topic the more vocabulary you know the more comfortable you feel well talking to others about this topic you're just going to feel more confident engaging in conversation so so there's more than one way to do this you just need to put in the time and put in the practice you should also learn to move past your mistakes now I think you should care about correcting your mistakes it's great if if someone points them out and you know we we all learn from the mistakes that we make but I don't want making mistakes to give you anxiety to the point where it just becomes more difficult for you to communicate and that's what I'm talking about when I say move past them just know it's okay to make a mistake if you can understand the correct way of saying something make a note of it and then the next time just try to use it correctly recently I had a student and we were talking about travel and she said last year I made a vacation to Disney World and I told her that if we're talking about a vacation then you'd want to use the verb take to take a vacation this is a common call location and then as we continued our conversation and we were talking about a different vacation she's self-corrected and used the verb take and this is the best thing you can do we all make mistakes I make a lot of mistakes you may not see many of them especially in these videos because I just edit them right out but it's okay it's part of the learning process and we move on I hope that you really give some thought to some of the things that I've talked about in this lesson and I really hope that I've given you some ideas as to how you can practice and improve your speaking skills and again if you're interested in joining or checking out my speaking course click on that link Down Below in the description please hit that like button if you well liked this video Lesson as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Unlock the American Accent: Speak Smooth, Natural English Now!

Let's unlock the American accent or I want to help you unlock it if that is one of your speaking goals. And the first thing I want to say, of course, is that you should never feel like you need to speak with any particular English accent. There are many varieties out there. Many of them are lovely. But I've heard a lot of people tell me they either live in the US or they work with people in the US and therefore they they would like to emulate the American accent. And if that's the case, then this lesson would be for you because I want to look at a dialogue and break things down and talk about how people in the US would say them, which is where I am from. And if you are someone who enjoys learning about different English accents and having a better understanding of them, please subscribe, turn on notifications.

The channel is Interactive English. It is all about helping you reach your fluency goals. The other thing I'll say very quickly is if you want to get these lesson notes right next to me, click on the link down in the description, join my email community, and then you'll just have them for future reference in case you ever want to practice. If you're already a part of the community, I've sent them to you and you can check your inbox. So, here's the dialogue. And I want to start out I'm just going to read through it rather quickly and then we're going to look at each part and talk about what's going on. We're going to do a deep dive.

And as I say it, I want you to practice with me. This is I I don't want I don't want you to just sit there and listen. This is not a passive learning exercise. I want you to participate. I want you to be actively active and I want you to speak and say this out loud and we'll go through each one, practice it a few times, and then at the end, we're going to go back and we're we're going to say this dialogue together, you and me. Okay? So, I I am going to ask and I'm going to check from time to time if you are actually participating and saying these sentences out loud because that's that's what I want to hear. All right?

So, let's go ahead and look at this first Well, no, I said let I'll I'll I'll say the dialogue so that you can at least hear it once and then we'll go through each sentence. So, the way I would say this is, "What do you think we ought to do this weekend?" "Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert." "I'm leaning towards a movie cuz I don't want to make it but I don't want to make a decision right now." "Sounds good."

Now, saying it just like me maybe is a different thing. That can certainly be challenging depending on what we're talking about. So, let me show you what we're talking about. We're going to start with this first question right here. "What do you think we ought to do this weekend?" "What do you think we ought to do this weekend?" As I'm saying it, I hopefully let's talk about what's going on. "What do you think we ought to ought to" this is another reduction. There are many of them and I will talk about some of the others in just a second, but ought to you could reduce to ought to. And those T's you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flat T. Americans, we love the flat T. This sounds more like a soft D.

Your tongue is coming up in the same position. The tip of your tongue is going to be behind your top front teeth, but it there the tongue is not going to hang out there. It's just going to boom flap. Boom flap. ought to ought to ought to ought to. And you should feel your tongue doing that, flapping against the top and then coming back down. And that's why it's going to sound like a soft D sound. things that I want to point out with this question. "What do you think we ought to do this weekend?" To give you the phonetic spelling because maybe it it'll make it a little easier to see the pronunciation. What do you you can see that I am reducing that what is going to be more like a what. The T and the D these are overlapping sounds. In this case the D is going to take control and you're going to hear that what a what a you. The do it's this is the word that really gets reduced. I'm going to I'm reducing the whole phrase, but do is going to sound more like duh. It has that schwa sound.

The schwa sound is an unstressed vowel sound. Typically sounds like uh. And you when that's reduced, it's going to sound like ya. What a ya what a ya what a ya. Just say just say this right now. What a ya. What a ya. You could say what a you. That's perfectly fine if you want to stress you, but if somebody's speaking a little faster, you might hear that them say it with that schwa. What a ya. What a ya think we ought to So, I'm spelling it with that flat T. ought to do this weekend. Let's say it together. Let's say it slowly. So, I'm going to say it twice slowly and then at a normal speed shadow say it with me. Let's say it slowly. What a ya think we ought to do this weekend?

What a ya think we ought to do this weekend? I'll speed it up. Let's say it at a normal speed. Ready? "What do you think we ought to do this weekend?" "What do you think we ought to do this weekend?" And this is essentially a drill exercise. You take a question like this and you just say it again and again and again and try to keep these things in mind. "What do you think we ought to do this weekend?" "What do you think we ought to do this weekend?" "What do you think we ought to do this weekend?" Maybe the more I say it, you're just going to internalize it and try to and you could say it just like me. So, this is the first sentence. This is the first question in our dialogue. The response from the other person is, "Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert." "Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert." Keep in mind that I I want to talk about this in just a second. That that that comma there after well like that pause.

"Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert." I'm making another pause in there and that's that's the reason why I'm mentioning this right now, but let's we'll we'll practice that when we say this together. What's happening in this uh this uh God, well, I think I made a typo. I find these all the time. I didn't mean for uh this to be a question. It should be a statement. So, just ignore that question mark at the end. really intrusion occurs and this is something that is very slight. I told you we're doing a deep dive right now, but if you have these two vowel sounds and I I wanted to include it because the other part there's more intrusion here.

See a. See a. Intrusion is when you add an extra sound. Listen for the sound that I'm adding between these vowels and that is what allows us to connect them together, to link them. See a. See a. See a. And I'm I'm trying to emphasize that ya. There's a slight Y sound between them. See is a front vowel and when you have this front vowel like see, then you may add a slight slight ya sound, which allows then we're going to connect it. See a see a movie. "Well, we can go see a movie pause it. I'm before the conjunction or I am going to separate it into different thought groups. This is a way of organizing your speech for the sake of clarity. And even though I don't have to, it's not a rule, I'm going to make a slight pause there just because it's easier to understand. "Well, we can go see a movie slight pause or go to a concert." Or is another word that is often reduced and it's it's going to sound a little more like er. It it's not a word that you're going to emphasize. Like if I were to give two options, chicken or beef, Coke or Pepsi, and you can hear more of an er in there instead of an or. And then go to a. So, go to we have that T. I'm going to change it to a flat T. It's also reduced even though I didn't I I should have written it down. Two is going to be sound a little more like tuh. Um or no, in this case sorry it it won't because of intrusion. That's the other thing that I meant to say. So, two uh go go to uh I'm still going to use that flat T. Go to uh.

Listen to that phrase. Which sound am I adding? Go to uh. Go to uh. I'm trying to emphasize it right now. A slight W sound. When we're talking about a back vowel, I don't know why this is my back vowel. Go to that ooh sound. Ooh uh. You're going to add a slight W. So, front vowels a slight ya and back vowels a slight wa between the two vowels. Go to go to go to a concert. Just say that last phrase. Go to a concert. Go to a concert. Go to a concert. Let me show you the phonetic spelling and hopefully it makes it a little easier. "Well, we can go see a movie there's that see a slight pause or go to or go to a concert." "Or go to a concert." "Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert." I guess you could turn it into a question if you wanted to.

As far as well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert. Depends on how you ask it, but really I meant it for to be a statement. So, I want to practice this now. And then I'm going to ask you all if you're practicing, and if you are practicing, I just want you to write the word speaking. So that I know that I'm not sitting here talking to myself, which is sometimes what happens. So let's say this slowly two times. I want you to shadow and say it with me. And then we're going to say it twice at the normal speed. And remember I'm going to make that slight pause between movie and or, or I'm going to say it more like er cuz it gets reduced.

Let's say it slowly. Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert. Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert. Now, now let's say it at a normal speed. Ready? Two times. Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert. Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert. Let me know if you're participating and you are actually saying these sentences with me, practicing your speaking skills. Because we're we're going to say this dialogue together in just a moment and write the word speaking in the chat or in the comments so I know I'm not speaking talking to myself. Thank you.

All right. Ramla, Alima Dev, all right. Thank you. I appreciate excellent. Keep up the good work. There are two more sentences that we're going to dive into and I want to talk about what's happening. I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. I wanted to highlight the phrase like to lean towards something. In case you're unfamiliar with it, I think it is a useful phrase when you want to express that you are interested in something and you're likely to do this particular activity. So you have like two or three or four choices, but you're indicating which one you're likely to do or which one you prefer to do and that is what you are leaning towards. I'm leaning towards a movie. That I'm indicating my preference in this example.

So let's talk about what's going on as far as connected speech goes. Now, I'm leaning, you hear that ing? When talking about verbs in the continuous tense, a lot of times people in the US, such as myself, I'm going to drop that G. Let's just get rid of it. And this may happen because I actually think it's easier to say lean in and using that n sound than leaning. In is easier to say than ing. This is not a fixed rule. You do not have to drop the G. You could say leaning towards is fine, but you're going to as as I practice this, I'm just going to say lean in, lean in towards. Towards a.

We can link that final consonant sound in towards with that article a. Towards a. Towards a movie. I'm leaning towards a movie. Slight pause. I'm going to pause it again before that conjunction. In this case, grammatically speaking I should have used a comma, but hey, that's okay. I'm we're talking about spoken English and I will make that slight pause. But I. Except I'm not going to say it like but I. I'm going to link these two words together and the T in but, because it comes between two consonant sounds, I'm going to pronounce it as a flat T. But I. But I. And this is a I think this is a phrase that's commonly used. You talk about something and then you say, well, but I don't want to do this or but I learned this the other day. But I but I but I. So but I is a good phrase to just say again and again and again, linking it and using that flat T. But I don't want to This is one of the most common reductions. Want to is going to get reduced to wanna. Make a. Once again, we can move that consonant sound over. Make a. I don't want to make a decision right now. I changed I kind of reworded uh that last part because one thing that I think is very common and I hear slight mistakes is the collocation make a decision. Very quickly I want to point out often I hear like take a decision. And in British English you might hear people use take, but even in British English, I think it's overwhelmingly more common to use make. And I think in some languages it's just like a language translation thing, but anytime we're talking about a decision, I want you to use the word make, which is why I included that phrase in this dialogue.

Make a decision. Make a decision. Make a decision. Again, the more I say it, the more you're just going to keep it in mind and the next time you're having a conversation, you're just going to say, well, yeah, I haven't made a decision or I need to make a decision. And you're going to use that verb make. So here is the the phonetic spelling. If it if it helps to ignore that, then just do it. Just focus on the the the words in white, the actual words, but really really really focus on what I'm saying and the way that I'm saying it. I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. Let's say it I'll say it again slowly two times like that. Say it with me.

Want you to practice these sentences. I told you this is a practice lesson. So let's say it twice slowly. I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. That's slowly. Let's say it at a normal speed two times. Shadow. Say it with me. I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. And that last clause, you can really move right through it. But I don't want to make a decision right now. Sounds a little like sing-song if I wanted to turn it into one. But I don't want to make a decision right now.

I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. The last statement or actually two statements, sounds good. Just let me know what you want to do. Sounds good. Just let me know what you want to do. All right. I said it differently those two times, but I want the thing that I want to point out you'll see in just a moment. So, what's going on? Sounds good. That that part sounds good. Nothing that we need to really think about. Just let me. So just when the T comes between two consonants, it may elide. An elision is just the omission of sounds or syllables. So just let me. This is a reduction. It's going to sound like lemmy. Lemmy. Just let me know. Just let me know. Just let me know. What you.

Now, assimilation is when you you basically the simplest terms I I would like to put it is just these sounds they blend together. You get this other sound. So the T and Y when they're next to each other, it's like you're going to have a slight ch sound in between them. This is not a fixed rule. And I told you I said the two sentences differently. The first time I did not blend them together. I just said just let me know what you want to do. And then the next time I said just let me know what you want to do. So what you want to do. Want to we can reduce to wanna. What you want to do. What you want to do. Can you hear that ch sound?

What you. Or you could say what you if you want to emphasize you versus ya. What ya versus what you. So again, there I I think one thing when you really get into it and dive deep, there are different ways that you're going to hear native speakers pronounce these sentences. And I I What I really want to hammer home right now is that don't think of this as a fixed rule. There are different ways that you can do it. What you. What you want to do. So here is the phonetic spelling. it two times slowly and then two times at a normal speed and then we're going to practice this dialogue together.

Sounds good. Just let me know what you want to do. Sounds good. Just let me know what you want to do. Hopefully if we're saying it slowly, it's easier to practice. Now we're going to speed things up. Normal speed. Ready? Sounds good. Just let me know what you want to do. Sounds good. Just let me know what you want to do. And that ch sound, it is very slight. It is not stressed. It's not a sound that you're really going to notice or pick up on. It's not emphasized. It is a slight ch sound. That again, that's what's really allowing us to to connect this together. Part of connected speech.

Now that we've gone through each of these four amazing, lovely sentences and I've talked about what's happening in each one, let's say it together. I'll go ahead and say it one more time. I'll say all of them right now and then we're going to practice this. So, I'll I'll go ahead and say all of them. What do you think we ought to do this weekend? Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert. I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. Sounds good. Just let me know what you want to do. Okay. This is a conversation that I had last weekend, which is why I'm I'm sharing it with you.

Let's practice this together and then you can let me know if you participated and I want you to write speaking in the chat or in the comments. All right. I don't want you uh uh I don't don't don't bail on me now. All right. Let's Let's have this conversation. I will start out and I am going to say A. I want you to say B. And then we'll switch. So, I will begin. Are you ready? Here we go. What do you think we ought to do this weekend? I'm leaning towards a movie, but I don't want to make a decision right now. All right. Excellent. Excellent. I trust that you were having this conversation with me. Let's switch it up. I want you to say A and now I am going to say part B. So, A, you can go ahead and begin.

Well, we can go see a movie or go to a concert. Sounds good. Just let me know what you want to do. Well played. All right. Give, you know, give yourself a thumbs up. All right. Don't not just me. Hit that like button for yourself if you were practicing and saying these sentences with me. See a lot of people already yes indicating that they were speaking. Nice, Nicola. Um Lorenzo, Jim, perfect. I love I love knowing that other people are are practicing and working on your speaking skills because like I said, this may not be for everyone. I do think even if you are not interested in modifying your accent and that is perfectly fine. I I really do think it still helps with your listening comprehension because if you're you're probably going to end up watching a movie or TV show or listening to a podcast or a news broadcast and the person is going to be from the US. And this is the way that they're going to pronounce different words and phrases and use connected speech. It is common not just in everyday casual conversation, but it's common at work. It's common when people give presentations. It is ubiquitous. Ubiquitous is a word that I've taught before in several vocabulary lessons. It is everywhere. Connected speech is ubiquitous. So, I hope that this made sense and I hope you learned something new. I just hope you felt like uh it was a good practice lesson. Remember, you can get these lesson notes clicking on that uh link down below. And if you enjoyed the lesson and learned something, please hit that like button. Lolly, I think you absolutely deserve a thumbs up. All right. You and I both, we deserve we deserve that thumbs up. So, I will have more lessons like this in the future because when it comes to an English accent, I think it's good to go over a range of words and phrases and when I do these dialogues, of course, there's only so many different words and phrases that I can use, but uh I'll keep doing this in the future cuz it seems like a lot of people are interested in this or they've asked about it. So, thank you so much for joining me uh joining me today. Thank you for participating in the lesson for all of those that were speaking with me. Uh I really appreciate it. I hope you have a wonderful rest of the day and I will see you soon for another lesson in the future.

Upper-Intermediate (B2) Expressions | Strengthen Your Vocabulary

let's see if you know these B2 Expressions which are more Upper Intermediate and they are very common Expressions so let's find out if you need to continue building your vocabulary or perhaps it's the other way around and I want to start with that expression the other way around this means the opposite way or in the opposite order and for the most part you're going to use this expression at the end of a statement and let me give you a cultural example so in the United States which is where I'm from if it's your birthday then maybe your friends and family will take you out and they will pay for your meal however in other countries it's the other way around whoever is having their birthday they may take out their friends and family and that person the host will pay for pronunciation very quickly I just want to point out that the article the ' has two different pronunciations a strong form the and a weak form the' in this case we're going to use the strong form the because the next word begins with a vowel sound the other the other way around well I don't know how they did things in that City but in this city handmaidens wait on ladies not the other way around Indians ain't supposed to feel sorry for Cowboys it's the other way around then we have an expression that I I feel like I often use whenever I want to share my opinion and that is as far as I'm concerned so this is a way to share your personal opinion about something it's a little more polite a little more formal a little more professional but you can still use it when you're out with friends so let me give you my opinion about different things as far as I'm concerned English is a very useful language to learn as far as I'm concerned Coke is better than Pepsi and as far as I'm concerned the US will win the next World Cup that's not really my opinion but I I just want to support the team as far as I'm concerned right here with you and the boys this is Paradise as far as I'm concerned when you jumped through that Wormhole you were doing your job the car is driving home W as far as I'm concerned I would never forfeit my control of the wheel when pronouncing this phrase just be aware that linking may occur this is when we link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word so think about the phrase far as I'm we can link those three words together and it's like we're moving that consonant sound over to the next syllable far as I'm as far as I'm concerned so I would say as far as I'm concerned you should subscribe to the channel turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so go ahead subscribe I think it's very important that you continue building your vocabulary at all cost well maybe not at all cost but that is the next expression that I want to teach you at all cost is used whenever you want to say that something must be done or avoided whatever happens even if it's very difficult or causes a lot of problems so this is a great phrase when you want to emphasize something maybe you want to avoid something at all cost or protect something at all cost or win at all cost now there is a slight debate as to whether or not the word cost should be singular or plural for the most part it is more common to use the plural form cost with an S according to the grammarist at all cost is the more correct form of the phrase and is most common in both spoken and written English the letter s in cost should not be omitted to help give you a better idea as to how this expression is used in context I have some news headlines for you Warren Gatlin hits out at springbox and their win it all cost mentality crypto four altcoins to avoid at all cost according to experts Panda Express menu items the staff avoid at all cost so if you like to eat at Panda Express this is probably an article you want to read for pronunciation I want to talk about the flap T because this is a distinct part of the American accent I I told you I'm from the US so the final T and at you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T it's going to sound like a soft D because the t comes between two vowel sounds and then I can link that flap t with the vowel sound in all at all at all cost just listen for it yeah but what about no mercy you us to win at all costs your mission is to protect the code at all costs next we have the expression to take someone's breath away which means to be very beautiful or surprising so you would say that something takes your breath away it could be a performance a meal a work of art and it's just a great way to add emphasis the phrase was widely popularized in the '80s by the music group Berlin who release their hit song Take My Breath Away which they made for the movie Top Gun I don't want to play have an open mind or we need to keep an open mind and of course open mind this is a noun phrase but you can also use it as an adjective it's also very common if you want to say that someone is open-minded when pronouncing this expression more linking may occur so have an open we can link that phrase together as well as keep an open we can link that together as well just listen for it I just hope you'll have an open mind at the Great Pumpkin you should keep an open mind things set in the circle have a surprising way of coming true yeah it's freshwat you e people actually eat that crap it's very popular just have an open mind and keep an open mind here then we have lose track this means to no longer know what is happening or not to remember something and often you're going to follow this with the preposition of to lose track of someone or to lose track of something and a common collocation with this expression is to lose track of time he always loses track of time meet a girl you lose track of place and time sorry I lost track of time you lost track of time you have to tell me when you're going to be home late when pronouncing this expression there's more link thinking track of I try not to lose track of time but it definitely happens a pain in the neck you can use this expression when you want to say that someone or something is really annoying I might say well one of my students is a real pain in the neck and I'm I'm not talking about you of course not this is just an example or commuting downtown is such a pain in the neck so when I gave you both of those examples I added a little emphasis and you can do that if you want to say something or someone is a real pain in the neck or such a pain in the neck another idiom with the same meaning would really just be replacing the word neck with the word butt or ass pain in the butt pain in the ass now it is a little stronger and I would say that you need to know your audience because someone could very well get offended especially if you say there're a pain in the butt or a pain in the ass but there is more linking that may occur we can link the final consonant sound in pain with the beginning vowel sound in in and this can be a bit challenging linking a final n Sound with the preposition in pain in pain in the neck give it a try pain in the neck excellent she's a big pain in the neck if I had wanted a proper maid I would not have hired a headstrong opinionated pain in the neck like you next is the expression up to a point this means partly or to a limited degree so so basically you're really just establishing a limit I could say I will tolerate his laziness up to a point or her story was true up to a point or your method worked up to a point to give you a better idea as to how this expression is used in context I have some more news headlines for you Locust raised in high gravity grow freakishly strong up to a point using AI to reduce collisions at C is a good idea up to a point Wildfire smoke drives a rise and er visits up to a point for pronunciation I would like to point out that intrusion may occur this is when you add a slight sound between two vowels in order to link them together so to to ends with a back vow so we can add a slight W that W sound in between there to link them together to up to a point can the Wagon train go any faster uh up to a point excuse me we're here because you said you have a plan I do up to a point this little performance you're putting on will only help you up to a point to cross someone's mind this means to think of something and often you may use it in a question like did it cross your mind to hit the like button you know just just something to think about or people may often use it in the negative if I were to say I forgot to take out the dog it just didn't cross my mind here are some more examples Hey when we sell the Bitcoin are you going to pay your dad back all the money you took from him over the years never even crossed my mind wait you think I'm spy the thought has crossed our minds yeah the pronunciation is pretty simple and straightforward to cross someone's mind so let's just move on to the next expression which is to break the ice this means to make people who who have never met before feel more relaxed with each other so you could use this idiom whenever you have a group of people who don't know each other and say let's break the ice or we need to break the ice you could also use the noun phrase Icebreaker as well let's do an icebreaker when pronouncing this idiom remember I told you that the article the has a strong and weak form once again we're going to use that strong form the because the next word begins with a vowel sound to break the ice it's my first day as city manager so I'm holding open Office hours to break the ice so to break the ice we brought cupcakes and then there's to break someone's heart which really has two meanings the first one would be to make someone who loves you very sad pretty much by telling this person that you stopped loving them I could say she said that she wanted to see other people and it just broke his heart and in this context I I could also change it to an adjective and say he is heartbroken it can also be used when you want to refer to an event or situation that makes you very sad so let let me give you an honest example I have a little girl I'm a parent now and really since then any that involves children if it's a tragic event it just really breaks my heart if it is you know doesn't matter if it's a shooting a natural disaster any tragic event it really breaks my heart when children are involved so this is really an expression that you can use to capture that sad emotion and that feeling when something breaks your heart I know it was you Fredo you broke my heart you broke my heart my date Mary Joe kumy left the senior dance with another guy broke my heart gave me a home gave me a name and in return I've given in my life and to see it like this breaks my heart once again I think the pronunciation is pretty simple and straightforward to break someone's heart so let's move on to our next expression can't be bothered I I will say that I think this is more commonly used in British English but you may hear people in the US use it as well I can't be bothered this means that you are too lazy or tired to do something I can't be bothered to work over the weekend or and this is true I can't be bothered to iron my clothes or I could say I can't be bothered to cook tonight now to really drive the meaning home I have some images of animals that can't be bothered blah blah blah rules of the house I can't be bothered I I really love this one koala can't be bothered or when you can't be bothered to turn your head for pronunciation I I thought I could point out some of the differences between American and British English that vowel sound can't versus British English which is going to sound like can't can't can't can't be bothered can't be bothered I can't be bothered that's actually a really I think a really bad example of a British accent and yeah I maybe I just can't be bothered to improve my British accent but let's see if you can hear the difference if you can't be bothered to do homework the only thing people are going to trust you with is grunt work what about Marissa Marissa can't be bothered she's too busy running around with that tattooed new friend of hers I won't stand up because I can't be bothered all right well if you can't be bothered I'll have a sandwich now for a little review I hope that this lesson took your breath away and you were amazed at just how much you learned and I would love for you to continue building your vocabulary at all cost that that may be a little extreme and perhaps it's the other way around and and you don't want to overdo it because you can learn new words every day up to a point because then it it could become too much but I I suppose you are you're already familiar with some of these expressions and in that case as far as I'm concerned it's always good to get review I've really enjoyed teaching you this vocabulary and you know what they say when you're having fun it's easy to lose track of time so I should probably start to wrap things up and of course you can continue building your vocabulary by watching another video Lesson I suppose that has already crossed your mind please don't tell me well I can't be bothered because if you were to say that it would just break my heart now even though I can sometimes be a pain in the neck or even a pain in the ass I hope that you enjoyed learning these expressions with me if you enjoyed the lesson and learned something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Upper-Intermediate (B2) Phrases to Build Your Vocabulary

hello and welcome to another lesson in which I am going to test your vocabulary and see just how much you know when it comes to some very useful and common English phrases and the reason why I say useful in common is because these are all more Upper Intermediate phrases B2 phrases B2 refers to Cambridge's framework um where you have A1 A2 B1 B2 C1 C2 so B2 is more Upper Intermediate which means that these are phrases that I think are a little more common so hopefully you are familiar with some of them many of them will see just how much you know because I am gonna I'm gonna present this as more of a quiz lesson and again my goal with all of this is that you learn something new and as we go through this please write your answers in the chat right your answers in the comments because I just love hearing from you and that's what these lessons are all about just participating and it's just more active learning so the before we begin because we're talking about building vocabulary I did want to let you know if you're interested in building your vocabulary and practicing your speaking skills then there's still time if you would like to join my upcoming speaking course it's all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly speak naturally you can check out the course page there's a lot of information about the course um you know costs time schedule availability so I will link that down below in the description and I'll even put it in the chat so okay so I just threw that in there right there as well if you're interested in checking that out so let's just let's go ahead and jump into it uh with our first question okay so I'm gonna present this to you in a few different ways the first part I'm going to give you the phrase and then it's just multiple choice you know a b or c what do you think and then I'll tell you the answer I'll talk a little bit about the phrase and try to give you a little more information about how it's used in context because I think when building your vocabulary and learning these phrases as well as others um this this is when I think you can really understand the these phrases a bit more so what do you think all right I'm seeing some great answers in the chat all right excellent so the correct answer is B because of a situation mentioned in that case so let me give you an example to so that you better understand um the meaning so again if somebody says in that case you're really referring to something that was already mentioned or discussed so check out this little dialogue right here like a and b I'll have some apple juice please well sorry we ran out of apple juice okay in that case because we've already talked mentioned about the situation in that case I'll have uh some orange juice okay so just remember that you're often going to use this at the beginning of a statement because you're referring to something already mentioned like well in that case I'm going to do this instead or I'm going to have um you know this is what I think so just keep that in mind you're referring to something that was already mentioned excellent you guys rock that one I feel like again B2 um I think you guys will know quite a few of these and that's good it's always good to get review these phrases like I said they're common they're important so what do you think with respect to that's your phrase do you think it means a in connection with something B admiration for or C politely what do you think a b or c we're talking about the phrase with respect to so I I this one may be maybe a little more challenging but I I feel like how do I say it's maybe a little more formal but this is one you may find newspaper articles um and I'll get to that in just a moment but yes I see a lot of great answers the answer is a in connection with something with respect to so you may also have people say with respect of means the same thing either one is okay in this case I just included with respect to um so I mentioned that it's it's a phrase that maybe it's a little not more formal but I I wanted to give you an example using news articles and in this case not really necessarily in the article but also headlines so I have two headlines for you that uh use this phrase and again it means in connection with something the first one's talking about uh Bishop Bode and cardinal Lori is there a double standard in Germany with respect to mishandling of abusive priests all right so again a double standard is referring to um well you have one standard for one group of people but then a different set of Standards or expectations for another and they talk about a double standard so is there a double standard in connection with the mishandling so with respect to the other one down here you may not be able to see it so I'll just read it it says I'm talking about Singapore in talks with Morocco to buy carbon credits it says however both countries have to control their carbon emission levels with respect to International guidelines set to track climate and then it goes on and on so it's talking about controlling those emissions in like with respect to in this case it's a little more informal makes me think like more dialogue so the answer might as well um a little this one wow varying different different answers so the answer is actually C you're you're you use it to suggest doing something and I'll add a little bit to this I couldn't fit it all in the meaning so you use it to suggest doing something often when there's nothing better to do and it's like well you know we might as well do this all right so you're you're basing this off like on the the situation at hand so think of these examples right here uh somebody goes to meet a friend um and they say like well you know maybe they weren't planning to stay there and you think well as long as we're here we might as well get a drink all right as long as we're at this place all right I'm suggesting that we do something because maybe we have nothing better to do in this situation it's almost like you're waiting for someone um and you're like well we might as well do this while we're here or even in the second one they're going to be late so we may as well start eating now you may have noticed that instead of using might I replaced it with may they have the same meaning you could use either one might as well may as well so I wanted to point that out in that example so they're going to be late we may as well start eating so you're suggesting that you do something and again not always but often because there is uh nothing better to do so it's a good phrase good phrase especially I think more for for like spoken English the next one okay in a row all right what do you think remember write your answers in the chat in the comments I want you guys to participate so in a row is it talking about a one after another without a break B making a boat move through water or C to argue consecutively especially loudly what do you think this phrase means again this is a B2 phrase and don't be fooled because again a lot of some of the words in this phrase they have multiple meanings um I'm trying not to give you too too much of a hint um so what do you think and it said B2 this is all more upper Upper Intermediate all right so the answer is a we're talking about one after another without a break so let me give you some examples you're talking about something like happens in a row now row again as a verb to rho that was the second meaning like you're you're moving through water and then the other one the fight loudly that's another um it's a word with multiple meanings but the pronunciation changes a row you're going to have a row like an argument with somebody but if you're talking about the phrase in a row one after the other like he's called in sick four days in a row the team has won the championship three years in a row happens one after another often this is going to be used with some sort of like time uh days months years and again because you're talking about one after the other typically you're going to use it with numbers like well two three four five uh you're not often going to hear it with like large numbers unless you're talking about maybe a smaller increment so let me give you an example like again days months years days would be the smallest increment but if I were to say something like well we have not uh we haven't had an accident at work now for 556 days in a row so again you could use it with a larger number but typically you're going to hear people use this with uh you know smaller numbers two three four five in a row so that was the the multiple choice portion now I'm going to switch things up this time I am going to give you the phrase and I'm only going to give you maybe one or two words that are part of the phrase and I want you to guess it and to help you guess what the phrase is uh you can use the picture so look at this one right here all right what would you say what phrase am I talking about and of course then I will tell you the meaning I'll talk to you a little bit how it's used and and give you some examples now there may be there there may actually be a couple of different words that you uh you may be thinking of so you take something into um what do you think look at the picture that that is really trying to help you decide well what what goes in that blank how how can you best complete this sentence take something into um and that to be perfectly honest there are two different words that that you can use they have a very similar meaning the word that I'm looking for uh is account to take something into account and what this means is to consider or remember something when judging a situation some of you said to take something into consideration I think that's perfectly okay that is another phrase for some reason when I was looking these up it lists this as the B2 phrase to take something into account and even when I checked on uh Google engram viewer to see which one is more commonly used uh this is the one that ends up being more commonly used uh that you're going to find more often to take something into account look at the example that I'm I'm giving you down here if I were somebody were to say look look I hope my boss takes into account the fact that I worked an extra weekend when I asked for some time off next month so in this case it's like I you're saying that your boss your hope that they consider or remember that you work some extra time an extra weekend when they're they're going to judge that situation about okay should I give this person time off the other thing that I wanted to point out is that I followed it with the fact that sometimes you may use this phrase and then follow it like takes into account the fact that something happens in which case you're talking about the situation so I hope my boss takes into account the fact that I worked an extra weekend when I asked for some time off next month and in this case again this would be interchangeable with consideration I hope my boss takes into consideration the fact that I worked an extra weekend you could also use that one as well so again those you mentioned consideration perfectly fine the next one what do you what do you think very very short uh short phrase right here behind um and I think this is probably some of these may be a little easier and then at the end it is going to get um more difficult the last part of this quiz that I have for you so what do you think we're talking about behind what is the phrase that I'm referring to based on that picture so there is a blank space here there so it's really [Music] um and just one word that's missing and we're taught and that word is the word bars behind bars so you can see those bars right there it's like a jail that's what it looks like because that's what the phrase is talking about if you say Behind Bars it just means in prison and I again I've given you some examples with some news headlines and this is I think fairly it's a fairly common phrase when you want to talk about someone who is in jail in prison uh like it says Bannon uh they're talking about Steve Bannon I don't know how many of you follow like American politics uh but Steve Madden gets four months behind bars for defying 16 January 6 subpoena and if you're not sure what a subpoena is a subpoena is an order that you have to appear in court so he defied that order and now he's going to spend four months behind bars the next one uh down here it says man faces 25 years behind bars for illegally converting Bitcoin to US Dollars it's talking about a money laundering scheme but in this situation when you're talking about Behind Bars yes somebody did something illegal and they're going to go to jail they're going to go to prison and spend some time Behind Bars the next one um what do you think I I don't know I think this one many of you will get so we're talking about on um and then that dot dot dot is like kind of a you know there's some information that would go in there and then you're going to follow that with on hmm and to help you out what do you think I tried to find a picture that would best maybe represent this phrase I don't know if I I did a good job I haven't uh seen any answers just yet so on on what do you think I think when I tell you the phrase this is a phrase that you you've probably heard before it is casual colloquial this is one that I think is great um when talking about spoken English and the phrase that I'm referring to is yes on the one hand and then you would talk about like whatever you're gonna say and then on the other hand you have this situation so again in this picture you can see it's like she's considering two different options she has her hands up so on the one hand on the other hand so this is used when you are comparing two different facts or just two opposite ways of thinking about a situation uh so I I gave you an example um down there that is me and Emmy on the one hand I'd like to stay up and relax with a movie but on the other hand Emmy is going to wake me up early in the morning so in this case I it's like I'm comparing two opposite way opposite ways of thinking like again I'd love to stay up but on the other hand I'm I'm going to get up early and that's not going to be very pleasant if you don't get a lot of sleep at night so on the one hand I'd like to stay up and relax with a movie but on the other hand Emmy is going to wake me up early in the morning so that is the that is an example using this phrase and just to add to that picture right there that picture is us standing on a bridge at about I think it's like 5 30 in the morning we had just returned from the U. S completely jet lagged Emmy was getting up at like three o'clock in the morning so spending some time inside when the sun came up walked outside she was riding her bike and that picture is from yeah I think like five o'clock in the morning somewhere thereabouts the next one this one I didn't want to give you a word because I think it would have made it too easy so I gave you some letters that are well part of the word and I still think you're probably going to get it just looking at the picture so in looking at this picture I I would tell you to give you another hint not that you probably need it um you know what noun first noun that comes to mind in the first verb that comes to mind what's what's going on so I don't think you needed that hint in order to know the phrase that I'm talking about again it is a B2 phrase it is considered Upper Intermediate and it's a phrase that I think you um probably most likely have heard only because this is one movies TV shows that comes up quite a bit because talking about relationships so the phrase that I'm talking about referring to you can see the verb break all right which would be that first word the next blank would be someone because it could be any any person and then heart that is the noun break someone's heart and if you break someone's heart it means that well to make someone who loves you very sad and it's like ah you know if I say you broke my heart then you're I'm just telling you that that you you made me sad um it could be for a variety of reasons in this case it said usually by telling some a person that you stop loving them and again in that case it doesn't mean always like you tell them like you say it out loud you could tell people in different ways um and they could uh it you know you could say oh you you broke my heart the example I wanted to give you was from the the movie The Godfather um there was a line in there he says you know I know it was you Fredo you broke my heart you broke my heart and this is when Michael Corleone gives him the the kiss of death like he knows it was Fredo that betrayed him and you know their their family so he's like it you know it breaks my heart this was a I think a pretty well-known line from the movie but a great example again of saying of using this phrase to break someone's heart the next part of this quiz which I think is going to be more challenging is I am going to give you the meaning and I just want you to think of the phrase all right what phrase do you think I'm talking about and again it's not a word it's not just one word it's a phrase two or more words so and I think this will be a little bit more difficult even though again I think many of these phrases you've heard of and you you may be familiar with so this is the meaning to make the situation even more unpleasant or difficult what phrase could I and and there may be other phrases as well that have a similar meaning I don't know if they would be B2 phrases we're just focusing on uh the B2 phrase so we're talking about to make the situation even more unpleasant or difficult what do you think and I know like I said this is a little more challenging so I'll give you a hint as you're thinking about it there's your hint so um matters so matters is going to come in the middle of the phrase so once again like like I said if seeing some great great uh great answers there there could be more than one word or phrase that has this same meaning but there's just one specific um phrase that I'm talking about that is considered a B2 phrase Upper Intermediate vocabulary so the answer in case you're wondering is to make matters worse to make matters worse we can use this when referring to well making the situation even more unpleasant or more difficult think about the context that I'm giving you down here like a wedding there's a lot of planning that goes into a wedding a lot of things can go wrong and if we're just in the moment talking about it like oh the wedding caterer canceled on us and to make matters worse the best man suddenly got sick and is in the hospital so it's like there's now a problem because the Caterers canceled and then now the situation is be is worse to make matters worse because the best man is now in the hospital so you may also hear people use instead of matters things to make things worse that is another phrase that you can use has the same meaning I just wanted to point that out but in this case we're talking about the phrase to make matters worse all right so I told you yeah this would be a little more challenging just getting the meaning and then trying to come up with a phrase so the next one is it's you you would use this phrase to show that you think or feel the opposite of what has just been stated okay think of um this would be a transition word and those transition words you can use them to um talk about the order of events you can use them to add information you can also use them some of these transition words or phrases we're talking about opposite that is a key word in here so this is a phrase used to show that you think or feel the opposite of what has just been stated there's your hint okay um on the um what do you think so it has the same meaning as a word like however but again this is a phrase so we're talking about the opposite and the answer which uh is seeing now excellent on the contrary and I think this is a little more uh formal you would hear it more you would find it in writing uh you you could hear people would use this in spoken English as well probably a little more common to use a word like however but again you could use this phrase to to state that you think or feel the opposite like um here's my little dialogue again not many people not many people like these English lessons and I would say hey on the contrary people hit the like button all the time okay so that would be like my um my reason for thinking the opposite like on the contrary hey people hit that like button all the time and perhaps I'm subtly suggesting that you you hit the like button if you enjoy building your vocabulary and and learning these new phrases so please yes go ahead hit that like button but on the contrary um is a good phrase to know and there are different ways again expressing that you feel like however on the contrary um so this is a good way to build your vocabulary if uh this is a phrase you're not familiar with the next one there's not much information uh that I'm giving you here as far as the meaning goes approximately almost okay what phrase uh would mean approximately or almost I'll give you a hint this is a binomial pair I've done many lessons in the past talking about these binomial pairs these binomial Expressions we have two words that are joined by a conjunction and that conjunction is usually and or or and it's a some of them are fixed phrases uh like this one and to give you again to kind of start you know jogging your memory to get you suddenly thinking of something there's your hint so I'm giving you the the part of this binomial bit or so you have or um and I really think these phrases are useful they're very common they're a little more um colloquial so I think you're more likely to use them in spoken English but not not always all right so there okay I'm gonna give you some more information because I see some great answers the the correct answer is more or less all right this is a binomial pair more or less it means approximately it means all most

now it has a similar meaning to give or take okay give or take would more closely resemble approximately the only difference is that give or take you're you're likely to use that when talking about numbers um I have uh well you know he is you know 60 years old give or take a few years so you're going to use give or take if you like talking about numbers you can also use more or less talking about numbers as well so in that case they're interchangeable but you can use more or less talking about other situations and that's why this phrase is more common than saying give or take so let's look at these examples uh if I say she more or less started the business on her own okay I'm saying like she almost did this on her own maybe she got a little help but really more or less she was she did this she put this business together um by herself I cannot use give or take in this situation because well first off we're not talking about something that's countable we're not talking about numbers so we could not use give or take here the next one where I say hey you know we're more we're the same height more or less um in this case we're talking about height which would be a number so in that case you could say yeah we're the same height give or take uh but again more or less it both of them are binomial pairs this one is more commonly used this is our B2 phrase then we have uh and I think maybe you guys uh we'll get this one so we're talking about this is the meaning for a long medium or short period of time in the future what phrase has this meaning and I think it's a common one um for a long medium or short period in the future I'll go ahead and give you a hint and put in a word for you which I don't think you needed uh but there it is so um term okay what there well I don't want to give you another hint but uh there are actually three different phrases when it comes to this meaning and I will explain why so we're we're talking about the future a period of time in the future and the reason why the meaning is talking about long medium or short is because we can use each of those words in this phrase so we're talking about the phrase in the long term or the phrase in the medium term or the phrase in the short term so it really depends on the period of time that we're referring to most often people are going to talk about something that's going on in the short term which is you know more the immediate future or in the long term which is more the distant future people may use in the medium term it depends on the context and the situation but more often you're likely to hear people talk about something that's going to happen in the short term or in the long term so the example that I wanted to give you is talking about the stock market and say well the stock market may be volatile in the short term all right in the immediate future but the market will certainly Rebound in the long term in the distance future it's going to come back it's going to go higher at least I hope it is because things have been uh things have been pretty bad lately so it may be volatile in the short term but in the long term I am optimistic that it's going to rebound and come back so these I think are great phrases to know and to use when you want to reference that that period of time so here again just to give you a little bit of review these are the phrases that we talked about in today's lesson these are all Beach two phrases which I hope maybe you learned one or two new phrases if you knew all of them then that is awesome it's always good to get a little review and try to get a better understanding as to how they're used because like I said these phrases are certainly pretty common and just one more plug again if you would like to build your vocabulary and practice um your speaking skills you can click on the link in the description if you want to check out my speaking course link is down below so I I really appreciate you guys joining me today like I said the goal with all of these lessons especially when it comes to vocabulary is that you just you learn something new and you get something out of these lessons learn a new phrase go out try to listen for them or even practice using them the next time you're having a conversation so give some shout outs uh because I haven't been able to mention too many names thank you for being here Lolly always great to see you takayo hello good thanks for joining um Julia Ennis Maria um Gustav thanks for being here's the nuts a lot of familiar faces uh today uh Alexandre um Wint sorry if I mispronounced names kariel um thank you for joining me and I will see you in the near future I because I'm I'm going to come out with more video lessons in the short term in the medium term and the plan is to continue coming out with more lessons in the long term so uh I hope to see a lot of you I hope that that you will see a lot of me uh in the future so thank you for joining me have a wonderful day and I

Upper-Intermediate (B2) Phrases to Supercharge Your Vocabulary

let's learn some incredibly useful B2 phrases which it's more Upper Intermediate and I say these phrases are incredibly useful because they're very common now some of these phrases it's possible that you've been using them all along but I promise that you will learn something new so let's begin with a phrase that I just mentioned all along this means from the very beginning and it's a great phrase because you can use it in a variety of situations and really it's interchangeable with the meaning from the very beginning so when you use this phrase it just allows you to be more concise and use fewer words I could say I knew all along that their relationship had problems or maybe that was the plan all along so instead of saying from the very beginning I can just simplify it and say all along when pronouncing this phrase linking may occur and this is extremely common in spoken English this is when you link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word so we can link that final consonant sound in all with the beginning vowel sound in a long and it's almost like we're just moving that consonant sound over to the next word or syllable all along all along I want you to listen for it you're right all along Frank you had them all along it's been there all along now ever since you started learning English perhaps you have enjoyed building your vocabulary all along and if you really do enjoy building your vocabulary Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so the next phrase that I have for you I really want you to keep this in mind because I use it all the time and I'm talking about the phrase keep in mind you can use one of two verbs the verb keep keep in mind or the verb bear bear in mind they both have the same meaning which is to remember a piece of information when making a decision or just considering a matter and this is a phrase that as a teacher I use all the time I'm constantly telling Learners hey keep in mind and then I tell them the information I want them to remember as a way of emphasizing it so generally you're going to use this phrase at the beginning of a statement now to be perfectly honest I think that I use the phrase keep in mind more often than I use bear in mind and I think others do as well you can see this using engram viewer which allows us to compare the frequency of different words and phrases so it's a bit more common for people to say Keep keep in mind and I want you to keep in mind that throughout the lesson I am going to teach you the meaning of these different phrases talk a little bit about how they're used in context and bear in mind I'm going to tell you how to pronounce them just like me so when pronouncing this phrase more linking may occur I told you it's very common in spoken English and we can link that final consonant sound in keep with the beginning vowel sound in in keep in keep in mind you can do the same with bear bear in mind keep in mind bear in mind now here's something I want you to keep in mind if you want to improve your overall fluency it's important that you develop your pronunciation for Clear communication and that's why I want to talk to you about the sponsor of today's lesson which is Elsa speak this is a great app to help you fine-tune your pronunciation and if you're unfamiliar with it let me show you how it works you just download the app create an account and there's so much that you can do practice daily lessons improve pronunciation study by topic let's say you're going to take an exam like the IELTS and you've been studying all along but you want more practice well Elsa has these great study sets to help you with that so we can practice well daily routines and start saying some of these very common collocations do exercise daily routine have breakfast but I think one of the coolest features is being able to practice words and phrases that you want to learn so maybe we want to practice the phrase keep in mind and I can say keep in mind this will help you fine-tune your pronunciation and then we can listen to it keep in mind this will help you fine tune your pronunciation and practice saying it keep in mind this will help you fine-tune your pronunciation now let me show you what it looks like if I make a mistake and I mispronounce some of those vowel sounds cap on Min this will help you fun tone your pronunciation as you can see you get instant feedback which then allows you to try and make adjustments and right now when you click on the link below and download the Elsa speak app you can get seven days of the pro membership for free or you can use my discount to get 85 percent off a lifetime membership or 40 off a one-year membership so check out the links and discounts Down Below in the description if you would like to learn your mistakes and improve your pronunciation and before you know it you'll sound just like a native speaker now let's get back to our B2 phrases and the next one that I have for you is at your convenience this just means when you want and I could say I would like to schedule a meeting at your convenience and there's also a great collocation with this phrase these are words that are frequently used together and that collocation is at your earliest convenience so really I'm just emphasizing that this needs to happen soon I would like to schedule them meeting at your earliest convenience when you pronounce this phrase assimilation may occur this is part of connected speech it's when two sounds they blend together to create a new sound so in this case it's like the T and Y blend together and you get this CH sound and we can place that slight CH between the words at in your at your convenience now this is not something that's always going to happen you may hear someone say at your convenience but keep in mind assimilation may occur and you'll hear that slight CH sound at your convenience once again just listen for it you may transport aboard at your convenience please call me back at your earliest willing to meet you at your earliest convenience then we have the phrase to keep someone company this just means to stay with someone so that they're not alone and really this phrase is used in a positive way because if you tell someone to keep this person company it shows that you care you want to help this person you don't want them to be alone and I really appreciate you keeping me company as I teach these phrases I don't want you to leave because then I'll be alone and I'll just be talking to myself so if you are happy to keep me company you can let me know by hitting that like button when pronouncing this phrase elision may occur and this is when sounds or syllables get removed so it may occur with the first letter of the possessive pronoun him or her it's like that H just gets muted and then we can link the consonant sound with the vowel sound so instead of keep her it's going to sound like keeper keeper company keeper company keeper company instead of keep him that H gets muted it's going to sound like keep him keep him company keep him company I volunteer to keep him company so then why don't you keep him company I really like this next phrase because it's something that I try to do and that is set an example this means to behave in a way that other people should copy so I try to set a good example for my daughter I think that's something that parents do teachers should try to set a good example bosses and managers should also try to set a good example and I keep saying the word good because this is a common collocation with this phrase to set a good example and you could also say to set a bad example but it's more commonly used with the adjective good and I think this is one of the few times in which a positive phrase is more often used than a Nega native phrase to set a good example but to help you better understand how this phrase is used in context I have some news headlines for you China can set an example for the asean no nuke treaty company Saks top performer to set an example for others and to sack someone this is an informal way of saying that someone got fired subsidized train tickets Germany and Spain set an example for pronunciation there's two things that I want to talk about the first one is that the final T in set I am going to pronounce this as a flap T this is very common with the American accent when the t comes between two vowel sounds I'm going to pronounce it as a flap T it's going to sound more like a soft D and then we can just link the entire phrase said an example set an example say with me set an example excellent then we have the phrase to have an eye for something this means to be good at noticing a particular type of thing so maybe you have an eye for beauty or perhaps you have an eye for fashion or you have an eye for details or you have an eye for a good bargain

let's see what what else can you have an eye for quite an eye for the pretty girls you do have an eye for other people's mistakes we have never built a pattern before or a print because you have to really have an eye for print when pronouncing this phrase we can link the three words have an eye it's going to sound like heaven I and then the word for in spoken English it's common for it to get reduced and it's a weak sound and that vowel changes so instead of four it's going to sound more like fur to have an eye for something to have an eye for something at ease I'm telling you this because it's our next phrase and I also want you to relax I want you to feel free from worry so you may definitely hear this phrase being used in a military context it would be used as a command and in general a person of a higher authority would say this to someone of a lower rank who is standing in position and they'll say at ease and they're just telling this person to relax at ease at ease headies there are also some great collocations with this phrase someone may look at ease or feel at ease or seem at ease he really looked at ease during the job interview you could also put someone at ease when she texted me that she got home it really put me at ease or you could also put someone's mind at ease planning for the wedding has been so stressful I wish there were some way to put my mind at ease thanks but you should know we're a little concerned about this being used in weapons well let me put your mind at ease what we use it for is none of your business for pronunciation that final T and at because it comes between two vowel sounds once again I am going to pronounce this as a flap T and then we can link that flap t with the vowel sound in ease at ease at ease then we have the phrase in due course or in due time you can use either noun they have the same meaning which is at a suitable time in the future so typically you're going to use this phrase either at the beginning or end of a statement I could say we will announce the grand opening in due course or in due time we will announce the grand opening as far as usage goes both phrases are roughly equally used personally I prefer to say in due time but just looking at their usage over time it's really fascinating how language changes when pronouncing this phrase it's pretty simple and straightforward you're just going to say one word right after the other in due time in due course and then there's the phrase fair enough I really like this one probably because I use it quite often and it's used to say that something is reasonable or acceptable and typically you're going to use this phrase in a back and forth conversation well you just said you didn't care about the push-ups I changed my mind wasting your time old man the last thing I need is another Sensei fair enough I don't think as much I can teach you right now anyway for pronunciation there's more linking we can link the final consonant sound in Fair with the beginning vowel sound in enough fair enough fair enough and then we have to get on someone's nerves it means to annoy someone a lot this is an idiom that's used in casual conversation when something or someone is bothering you typically people use this when talking about themselves and they'll use the possessive adjective my so instead of saying that someone is annoying me I'll say that someone is getting on my nerves also you're likely to use this in either the past the present or the present continuous Wes got on my nerves at the party last night in the past or sometimes Wes gets on my nerves a general truth in the present or Wes is getting on my nerves it's happening right now the present continuous I really hope that I don't get on your nerves I suppose if I do you can hit the dislike button but I'd much rather you hit the like button at your convenience of course when pronouncing this phrase two things that I want to talk to you about that final T and get I'm going to pronounce this as a flap T and then we can link that flap t with the vowel sound in on get on to get on someone's nerves next is the phrase in that case which I really like because you're going to use this in a conversation it means because of a mentioned situation so it's a great phrase when you're having a conversation and you're referencing something that was mentioned and reacting to it let's say you tell me it's cold outside and I say in that case I'm gonna wear a coat or maybe you tell me you don't have anyone to hang out with it's a little lonely so I say in that case I'm going to keep you company here are some other examples I'll give Stella a lifetime of love over these next eight months in that case welcome to the family son I think she's out well in that case Eric I can't do that with her in here for pronunciation there's some co-articulation going on this is when you have overlapping sounds because the final consonant sound in in your tongue is roughly in the same position when you're pronouncing that voice th in that so it just allows us to smoothly move from one word to the next in that in that case otherwise it's pretty simple and straightforward but I keep talking to you about pronunciation because this is something you really need to practice and then practice some more and do it all over again which is the next phrase that I want to teach you all over again this means to start again from the very beginning and it's a great way to add emphasis instead of just saying again and there are also some useful collocations with this phrase you could do something all over again there was a mistake with the design so so we had to do it all over again you could also start something all over again people showed up late and interrupted my presentation so I had to start all over again from the very beginning for pronunciation we can link the entire phrase link those final consonant sounds with the beginning vowel sounds all over again all over again so I really want to stress just how common linking is because as you can see with many of these phrases it's likely to occur and now for a little review because as a teacher I want to set a good example because review is just going to help you remember these phrases and I want you to keep in mind that as you review and practice these phrases in due time they'll become a part of your active memory and in that case you'll be able to easily use them whenever you're having a conversation so I really appreciate you keeping me company throughout the lesson and I would encourage you to watch another video Lesson and you can even choose because I know that you have an eye for finding the right lesson for yourself and you know if you don't want to watch one right now I understand you can watch one at your earliest convenience fair enough so I'm going to wrap things up before I start to get on your nerves but I really hope you enjoyed the lesson and learned something new if you did you can let me know down in the comments thank you so much for watching and I will see you

next time so long

Upper-Intermediate B2 Vocabulary Every Fluent Speaker Knows

Let's learn some B2 vocabulary to help you supercharge your fluency. And I say that because these are words that you will actually hear and use when you're in a conversation. And if you are someone who wants to develop your overall English fluency, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It is all about helping you reach your fluency goals. Now, let's begin with five essential B2 nouns. And the first one is well, it's one that I really like and I use it quite often, and that is nonsense. This refers to words, ideas, or behavior that is foolish, ridiculous, or or just makes no sense. So, often you can use this noun to dismiss something as well, not logical, or it's just not true. And you can add emphasis to this noun with some great adjectives and say something is absolute nonsense or it's utter nonsense or pure nonsense. Now, keep in mind this is a non-count noun. So, you're not going to use it with an article and say uh nonsense or add an s to the n. If somebody were to do that, I would just say that's nonsense. To give you an example, I could say the new company policy is absolute nonsense. It's just going to create more paperwork for everyone. Nobody likes paperwork. And this is something I would say I would say that is absolute nonsense.

We have the technology to build a portal into a an alternative universe.

Why? That's absolute nonsense.

Communications detailing your relationship with Nazi high command.

That's out of nonsense.

Then there's stopover. This is a short stay in a place in the middle of a long journey, usually between flights. And some common prepositions that you may follow this noun with is a stopover in this city or a stopover at some airport. So I could say, well, yeah, I had a stopover in Los Angeles or I had a stopover at LAX if I wanted to use the airport. Now, in the US, which is where I'm from, you may hear people use the word layover instead. And really, they are interchangeable, but a slight nuance is that when I think of a layover, I I definitely think of a shorter break, maybe an hour or 2 hours or 3 hours. Whereas a stopover, it could be a shorter break, but also a much longer one. Maybe you even have to spend the night. To give you an example, I could say, "I prefer a direct flight," which is true. I I always prefer direct flights, but a stopover in Singapore can be quite refreshing if the airport is nice. I have never been to Singapore, so I don't know anything about the airport, but if it is nice, then yeah, I would not mind a stopover. You want me to go to Paris?

Paris with a quick stopover in London.

I was on my way to the Harrisburg coat outlet to buy an irregular coat, but it required a stopover in New York City.

Tragedy. I'm trying to say it with more emotion because of the meaning. It refers to an event causing great pain, suffering, or distress. Think about a serious accident or crime. And there are some common collocations with this noun if somebody's talking about a personal tragedy or a great tragedy or even a national tragedy. Keep in mind that you're not going to use this with minor inconveniences. It's really when talking about events that cause true sadness or suffering. If you're referring to a tragedy, I could say it was a terrible tragedy when the museum burned down because so many wonderful works of art were lost forever.

It's a tragedy. A real tragedy.

Now, this goes beyond personal tragedy.

And you can do that on Skillshare, who is the sponsor of today's lesson. In case you don't know, Skillshare is a platform where you can take creative classes taught by professional graphic designers, accomplished educators, successful entrepreneurs, which makes it the best place to learn a creative skill, or just pick up a new hobby. Not only can you take classes to build your vocabulary, improve your grammar, learn more about pronunciation, but on Skillshare, you can take a wide range of classes on any topic that interests you. And of course, you can learn about these topics in English. Very recently, I took a class on goal setting called Stop Overwhelm, a creative guide to goal setting with AI, Trello, and Chat GPT.

and going through the classes and actually doing the project helped me map out the goals that I plan to accomplish this year as well as understand how AI can help me streamline the process and just work more efficiently. This is something that I find fascinating and want to learn more about. But I would recommend that you explore classes that truly interest you, whether it be travel, design, cooking, because that way you will practice and develop your English skills as you learn about one of your passions. It's a win-win. And right now, Skillshare has a special offer for you. The first 500 people to click on the link in the description or scan the QR code will receive a one month free trial of Skillshare. So, click on the link to get your free trial, take some classes, improve your English as you learn about one of your creative passions or about a topic that may help advance your career. Let's get back to our lesson. And the next noun is dose. This refers to a measured amount of medicine that is taken at one time.

And figuratively, it can also refer to an experience, usually an unpleasant one. Quite often, this noun is going to be followed by the preposition of a dose of something. And there are also some common collocations with this noun if referring to a small dose of something or a heavy dose of something or even the recommended dose. And there is a common phrase that you may come across from time to time which is a dose of your own medicine. And this is more figurative referring to you being treated in the same bad way that you treat others and you get a dose of your own medicine.

Now, for the most part, you're going to use this noun in a medical context. I could say the instructions say to take two doses if the pain doesn't go away within an hour. Your mother received a heavy dose of vaccine that wasn't meant for an adult. We've got to get back at them for what they did. Yeah, give them a dose of their own medicine. Then there's rehearsal. This refers to a practice or trial performance of a play or some other work, generally for a public performance that is going to occur later on. And there are some fixed phrases that are very useful with this noun. If somebody's talking about a dress rehearsal, then that's really referring to the final practice before the public performance. Or if you hear in rehearsal, it means at that moment, then you know people are currently practicing. If a group is in rehearsal, the band sounded a bit disorganized during rehearsal, but the actual concert was flawless.

We're in rehearsals. It's a live action musical tribute to The Dark Crystal. Oh my god, Gavin. Shh.

We're supposed to be quiet during rehearsal. I don't believe I've ever heard of a wedding dress rehearsal before.

Now, I want to teach you some powerful B2 verbs. And I'm emphasizing powerful because I think they're incredibly useful. And the first verb is distinguish. This means to recognize the difference between two or more people or things. Now, often you're going to distinguish between A and B or distinguish A from B. To give you an example, I could say it's difficult to distinguish between the real brand and a knockoff. Or, it's difficult to distinguish the real brand from a knockoff. They mean the same thing, but often you're going to distinguish between two things or distinguish one thing from another. To give you a little more context, here are some news headlines. Language models cannot reliably distinguish belief from knowledge and fact. Five pointers to distinguish between chemistry and compatibility. And finally, Britain struggles to distinguish between protest and terrorism. Here are some more examples. But I guess when one's young, it seems very easy to distinguish between right and wrong. He can't distinguish bagels from donuts.

You're having a hard time distinguishing fantasy from reality.

Then there's the verb treat. This verb actually has three different meanings.

And we're going to talk about all of them because they are all at a B2 level. And the first one really refers to behavior because it means to behave towards someone in a particular way. Now, I think that we should all treat each other with respect, and I'm sure that you agree. Now, to give you a phrase that has well, certainly a negative connotation is to treat someone like dirt. And that would mean that well, someone is being treated very badly. Where I come from, guests are treated with respect. His home situation sucks. His foster parents treat him like dirt. It also has a medical meaning which is to give medical care to a person or to give medical care for some disease. And quite often you're going to use it with the preposition for to treat someone for some disease. I could say the doctors treated the patient for a rare disease.

Regardless, you interns are the future of this hospital. If you don't treat patients, you won't learn.

It may also refer to something special.

And in this case, it means to buy or pay for something for someone else as a gift. And in this case, you're frequently going to use it with the preposition to to treat someone to something. So, I could tell you, you should treat yourself to another vocabulary lesson once this one is over because I want you to learn more. I want you to develop your overall fluency. And it's always good to get a heavy dose of interactive English.

You're going to buy it and you're going to wear it out of the store, okay?

You're going to treat yourself. Then there's exploit. This verb has two different meanings. It may mean to use something well in order to gain an advantage. And in this case, it's a little more positive or maybe neutral. Or it may mean to treat someone unfairly. And I'm using that verb again to treat as far as behavior to treat someone unfairly and make them work and really not pay them that much. And of course in that case it has a negative connotation. So it really depends on how you want to use it. I think often in business it's a little more positive if a company is exploiting resources. For example, I could say the company is looking for new ways to exploit the potential of social media marketing.

That's good. It's smart. It's efficient. Primitive but effective. It's just exploiting an abundant resource. If we're talking about exploiting people, that is always bad because we're talking about treating them badly. For example, I could say critics argue that the fashion industry exploits low-paid workers in developing countries. So really, depending on which meaning you're going to use will depend on whether it's positive or negative. Let me call and arrange a wet t-shirt contest. It exploits women.

I warned her. She made a choice. You exploited her. Next is the verb wander. This means to move slowly around a place without a specific purpose. And often you may follow it with a couple of different prepositions. You may wander around a place or even wander through some place like a park or a city. Don't confuse this with the verb wonder. They have completely different meanings. Even though the pronunciation may sound a little similar, but you wonder something, then you're thinking about it. Wander. It has an a. So, think a for action. You are moving around without a particular purpose. Here is a fun example. At least I thought it was entertaining. Not all who wander are lost, but I probably am. And yes, sometimes that's true. If I want to give you an example sentence, I could say, "We spent the entire afternoon wandering through the narrow streets of the old town." No, this is why you don't waste 45 minutes wandering around the Valentine's Marketplace. And as we wandered, we picked up new people along the way until we ended up here. Then there's mumble. This means to speak quietly and in an unclear way, which makes it difficult to understand. Now, often someone is going to mumble and they're mumbling because they are either tired or annoyed or nervous or shy and you're not going to be able to understand them that well. And just keep in mind this is a more descriptive verb than just saying somebody is speaking quietly because really it's like you can't even make out what they're trying to say. Some common collocations with this verb include to mumble incoherently or to mumble under one's breath. And I think when you use that phrase, it's because you are frustrated and you don't want the other person to hear what you're saying. Maybe your boss tells you to do something and you mumble something under your breath because you don't want your boss to hear. To give you an example which I think happens you know a lot parents and children because my parents would say this to me from time to time stop mumbling and speak up I can't understand a word you're saying I mean who does that does what are you mumbling about being an adult like did you just do that little kid mumble under your breath thing let's move into some descriptive B2 adjectives like forthcoming so this has a couple of different meanings It could refer to something happening soon or if we're talking about a person, someone who is willing to share information or help. So, if we're talking about an event in the future and we want to say it's happening soon, then I could share an example with you and say we are very excited about the forthcoming school events. We have not heard back yet from France, but we expect their approval to be forthcoming. You violated federal law when you sent agents onto the reservation. That investigation is forthcoming. If we're talking about a person, you could say that, well, they're forthcoming and sharing information. But it's also common to say the opposite and say they are not forthcoming and they are not providing information. Either way, we're really talking about communication. So, I could give you an example and say the witness was not very

She's sharp, but she doesn't know anything. Oh, no. She's more than sharp. She's a human lie detector.

That is Winston Bishop, who was our new assistant. Tell you what, he's sharp as a razor. Then there's worthwhile. This refers to something that is useful, important, or just good enough to be a suitable reward for the money or time spent.

And often you're going to use it with the structure, it is worthwhile to do something. So this is stronger than just saying something is good. It really implies that there is some effort and you're receiving a benefit. I could say it is worthwhile to watch these lessons and because you're developing and improving your English and you're getting that value. Here is a fun example. Coffee makes it possible to get out of bed. Chocolate makes it worthwhile. And yeah, I think that's true. I love chocolate. Only worthwhile if you're going to use it regularly. I came up with this example because we actually got a home projector. And yeah, I think it is worthwhile. We will probably use it every weekend or every other weekend. And yeah, in that case, I definitely think it's worthwhile.

Boy Scouts. Boy Scouts of America.

This is a worthwhile organization.

Getting a good person out of government is a worthwhile endeavor.

I've been griffin 30 years. I never got any. Then why are you doing it?

Seems worthwhile, doesn't it?

Then there's last minute. I think this is an adjective that we can all relate to because it refers to happening at the latest possible time before an event. And there are some common collocations like a last minute change or a last minute decision or even a last minute cancellation. I hate it when airlines make these last minute cancellations. Now you'll notice that when I'm using it as an adjective before the noun, there is a hyphen, a last minute decision. If we're going to say something like, well, uh, the decision was made at the last minute, there's no hyphen, but we're also changing the part of speech. In this case, it's a noun phrase if we're talking about the last minute. Something to keep in mind. One other thing that I will say about this phrase is that even though it could refer to something that is exciting or spontaneous, I think quite often it's used when talking about something that's more stressful or even a lack of preparation. I could say I made some last minute changes to the presentation. And in that case, it may imply that I wasn't fully prepared or I was unsure of myself and therefore I made some last minute changes. But you didn't tell me you were coming.

It's a last minute decision.

Obviously, this morning's budget memo reflects some last minute changes before our hearing.

Next is self-confident. This refers to feeling sure about your own ability to do things and be successful. Now, quite often people may use the noun self-confidence. But if we're talking about the adjective self-confident, be careful not to confuse this with arrogant because even though the meanings may be slightly similar, arrogant definitely has a negative connotation where you think you're better than others. Whereas self-confident is more positive that you just really are sure about your own abilities and it's generally seen as a good thing if someone is self-confident. I could say and this is true. Living in a foreign country has made me a more independent and self-confident person. And in that case, it really does have a positive connotation. They're smart, self-confident, and articulate as we've raised them to be.

Just say if you replace Harvard with a nice 22-year-old grad student, your self-confidence will soar.

Now, let's turn our attention to some useful B2 adverbs like simultaneously.

This refers to something that is happening or being done at exactly the same time. Now, it's a longer word, so I want to talk about the pronunciation quickly. Simultaneously, it has six syllables. The stress is on that third syllable. simultaneously. Say it with me. Simultaneously. The other thing I'll point out is that it really has the same meaning as the phrase at the same time. Perhaps it's a little more formal, maybe even more precise if you say something is happening simultaneously. To give you an example, I could say the software allows you to stream to multiple devices simultaneously at the same time.

Now, this little bastard hacks into anything that's on the digital network. That means every cell phone, satellite, ATM machine, and computer simultaneously. Who's in these days? Simultaneously inspiring and disconcerting.

Then there's the adverb preferably. This is used to indicate that one choice or way of doing something is more desired or liked than others. And often you're going to use this at the beginning of a phrase and then add a condition. And there are some common prepositions that follow this adverb. Maybe you want to do something preferably in some location or you're asked to submit something preferably by some deadline or maybe you want something preferably with certain features. So this is really a soft requirement. It's not necessarily mandatory. I could say we were looking for an apartment in Vienna with three bedrooms, preferably near a park. This was not a mandatory requirement. It's just something that we wanted. You're one of those millennials that thinks they can get whatever they want whenever they want. Preferably with free shipping.

What I want is to clear this furniture, preferably in silence. Say three things. Paid rent, some form of insurance, and TV. Preferably cable with DVR.

Then there's eagerly. This means that you are doing something with a lot of excitement, interest, and enthusiasm because you just want you want this thing to happen. And there are some common adverb verb collocations like to eagerly await or to eagerly anticipate or maybe even to eagerly accept something. It really does have a positive connotation. worried. So to give you an example, thinking about students and school, I could say the students are eagerly awaiting the start of the summer holiday. I know my little girl is eagerly awaiting the summer break. When Miss Vaky first asked me to chaperon the girls on this trip, I accept it eagerly. All his adoring subjects eagerly awaiting his return. Willingly. I like this adverb. It means that you are doing something because you want to do it and you're happy to do it and not forced to do it. Once again, there are some common adverb verb collocations like to willingly accept something or to willingly participate or even willingly cooperate. And if I want to say the opposite, I'm going to use the prefix un. Unwillingly. So, it does suggest a level of consent and cooperation. Here is a fun meme. I just like the picture of the cat when you were going to do the dishes willingly and then your mom tells you to go do them. I think we can all relate to this when we're going to do something willingly but then somebody tells us, "Yeah, go do that." And it just feels forced and you no longer want to do it willingly. To give you another example, many parents willingly contribute their time to support school events. I haven't really done this to be quite honest. It has not been forced, but I can't say that I have done it willingly.

I need to think about that. Arrest them. I shall go willingly. Whatever punishment awaits. So, you see, Mercer, every man has a price he willingly accept. He lives right here in Greenale. Willingly. Why?

Next is patiently. It is an incredibly important word. It means you are able to wait for a long time and accept difficulties without getting angry or upset. And a very common collocation with this adverb is to wait patiently. Here's an example. I'm waiting patiently. And really, this is a classic adverb of manner. Really showing your temperament during an action. If you are waiting patiently, you have to wait patiently for the paint to dry before applying a second coat. And I'll be perfectly honest, I don't really enjoy waiting. So, uh, a lot of times I'm not able to wait patiently, and it is something that I not that I don't do willingly. I guess you could say that.

Day after day, she hung from her web and waited patiently for an idea to come to her.

On his way.

Oh, damn. Why we're waiting patiently?

Whiskey. And so after waiting patiently to be relevant again, our heroic narrator steps back into his leading role. Now, I told you at the very beginning, these are incredibly useful words. Try to listen for them. Preferably, try to actively use them. They're really going to help you get your point across as well as sound more natural. If you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time.

Upper-Intermediate Phrases (B1 + B2) You Definitely Need to Know

I'm going to teach you some common phrases that you absolutely need to know they're that common and I'm going to tell you the meaning talk a little bit about how they're used in context as well as go over the pronunciation so you can say them just like a native speaker we will begin with some B1 phrases which are really at an intermediate level and then move into some B2 phrases which are mostly Upper Intermediate and I promise you will learn something new so let's begin with the phrase in advance this means before a particular time or before doing a particular thing and often you're going to use this phrase at the end of a sentence or Clause I could say we should prepare the presentation in advance I think it's smart to do things in advance or maybe I tell you don't need to pay for these lessons in advance okay you really you don't need to pay for them at all they're free now when pronouncing this phrase there is some linking that may occur this is when we link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word so we can link the final consonant sound in in with the vowel sound in advance and it's almost like we're just moving that consonant sound over to the next word or syllable so it's going to sound like in advance in advance I want you to just listen closely for that linking we're book months in advance we don't do solo acts I've got nothing for you okay thanks Mar you deserve a wedding day that unlike our children was planned in advanced now if you would like to get notified when I come out with new vocabulary lessons sometimes in advance not always then please subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English which is all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so let's continue now is not the time to take it easy and that's the next phrase that I want to talk to you about take it easy so you could say take it easy or take things easy and these phrases have a couple of different meanings and we'll talk about both the first meaning is to rest relax or avoid hard work and and you could really use either but as you can see it is more common to just say take it easy so I could say when I'm on vacation I like to take it easy and yes that's true or my doctor told me I should take things easy everyone recovers differently I'm still taking it easy it also means to stay or become calm and in this case you're really going to use take it easy and you will use it more as a command so I I could say hey don't be mad take it easy or take it easy you need need to calm down just calm down all right take it easy calm so you may be wondering what is it like what what does it mean in this case let's dive into some grammar right now with this phrase the word it is referred to as a dummy pronoun or a dummy subject it really has no specific meaning it's just a grammar function when pronouncing this phrase the final t in it I am going to pronounce it as a flap T it's going to sound more like a soft D and this is very common with the American accent because I am from the United States and it often occurs when the t comes between two vowel sounds and then we can just link this entire phrase and it's going to sound like take it easy can you hear that soft D take it easy now if you are someone who likes to relax and take things easy while practicing s English because well that's a great way to learn the language then there's an amazing app that I'd like to tell you about Elsa speak who is the sponsor of today's lesson this useful app will help you fine-tune your pronunciation and practice your speaking skills and right now I want to show you some of the cool features when you join Elsa premium because now you can have a back and forth conversation using their AI feature welcome to Elsa AI please select one of the following role plays I can even create my own scenario I want to have a conversation with a good friend at their apartment talking about my upcoming job interview and I feel a little nervous hey it's so great to see you thanks for having me over I really appreciate it because you know to be honest I I'm I'm a little worried about my job interview tomorrow what are you specifically worried about well I I'm just a little nervous because I think there's a lot of competition and I I really could use this job and I really want to stand out I completely understand have you been practicing your responses to common interview questions I'm familiar with some common interview questions that employers might ask but I think I could probably use a bit more practice you just need to believe in yourself and show them what you're capable of you've given me a lot of good things to think about for my interview tomorrow but I really need to get going I appreciate your help of course anytime and good luck with the interview roleplay completed we are Computing your

the next one that I have for you is in the end this means finally eventually after something has been talked about or discussed a lot or or really it's like the final result in a series of events or just the final conclusion after considering all relevant facts and often you're going to use this phrase either at the beginning or end of a sentence or Clause we were thinking about eating Mexican food but in the end we decided to get sushi so that was the final result or I could say in the end we are all English Learners after taking all the facts into consideration yeah I could say that because I learn new things about the language each and every day now don't confuse this phrase with the phrase at the end which is really referring to a specific point at the end of some activity like at the end of the story or at the end of the movie let me show you some news headlines so you can get a better idea as to how this phrase is used in context in the end we will remember not the words of our enemies but the Silence of our friends I think this is a well-known quote from Martin Luther King or this is from soccer in the end Spartans were on the mark and then succession finale explained Logan W again in the end great show in case you haven't seen it for pronunciation the only thing that I want to point out is that the article the ' has a strong and weak form the weak form is most common you will use the schwas sound that unstressed uh when the next word begins with a consonant sound and you'll sayth the strong form the you will use when the next word begins with a vowel sound like it does with our phrase so you will say in the end in the end I hope that you pronounce this phrase correctly the next phrase drag and drop we're talking about computers now this means to move something from one area to another while using the mouse and this is actually a binomial pair this is when you have a pair of words linked by a conjunction like the phrase loud and clear drag and drop which is a relatively new phrase because we're talking about computers and who knows maybe this phrase will become outdated at some point because things change quickly when it comes to technology but often you'll use this phrase when talking about files documents or pictures just drag and drop the files to upload them when pronouncing this phrase keep in mind that the conjunction and is often reduced in spoken English and it's just going to sound like n and then we can link the final consonant sound in drag with that beginning vowel sound so it's going to sound like drag and drop drag and drop to make a face I like this phrase because it it means to make a a strange expression with your face especially to show that you don't like someone or something and and that's really the key here you're making that face to show that you just don't like this person or thing let me give you some examples you may make a face when someone takes your favorite toy you may make a face when you eat something you don't like you may make a face when your best friend starts dating your ex-boyfriend here it burns brother got but why are you making that face I wasn't making the face we gave him the drinking talk apparently it didn't take Line's making a face you're making that face again I didn't make a face I just um there's a party for uh someone I know for pronunciation once again there's more linking this is so common in spoken English we can link the final consonant sound in make with that vow sound with the article a make a to make a face I hope that you are not making a face while watching this lesson the next phrase or I should say phrases wait a minute wait a moment wait a second and you can use these phrases in several different situations these phrases may be said when interrupting someone or when you're trying to get someone's attention or when you have suddenly thought of something important one thing I want to point out is that you're not literally talking about a minute a second or a moment you'll just use these phrases when you find yourself in those different situations so let's use these phrases in those situations just to reinforce the meaning so let's say you're trying to get someone's attention anyhow I am out uh wait a minute I'm sorry I yelled you I was too proud to admit I was lonely how about when you suddenly realize or think of something well mystery solved wait a moment and of course when interrupting someone they look even better on Ben's floor are you hitting on less for me wait a second just turn around what for pronunciation the final T in weight I am going to pronounce it as a flap T once again it's going to sound like a soft D which is very common in places like the United States and then we can link that flap te with the vow sound in that article uh wait a minute wait a moment wait a second can you hear that linking let's move on to some B2 phrases and I told you at the beginning that these phrases are more Upper Intermediate but still commonly used in conversational English and the first B2 phrase that I want to teach you is to make matters worse and you could really use this phrase with to or without to without to it means to make the situation even more unpleasant or difficult and really you would use this when advising someone I could say be careful or you could make matters worse or keep your mouth shut or else you'll make matters worse dangerous as this is involving the NYPD can make matters worse when we use to with this phrase it's used to say that something has made a bad or difficult situation even worse so we would say the bad situation and then add to make matters worse and into something it also means to meet someone when you are not expecting it so you are out somewhere on the street and you run into a friend and it was not planned let's look at some memes and jokes using this phrase so you can see how it's used in context I like this first one my girlfriend ran into her fitness instructor while on vacation small world yeah I don't know if they just ran into each other and it was unexpected anyway the next one he ran into my knife 10 times so yes this is a joke I don't think anybody wants to run into a knife once again mostly you would use this when talking about cars and you run into someone or run into something and then I ran into my ex today I was so so excited I backed up the car and hit him again so this uses both meanings in order to be funny and create the joke like you ran into your ex like you unexpectedly met but then really it's referring to actually hitting this person with their car when pronouncing this phrase more linking will occur we can link the final consonant sound in run with the beginning vowel sound in into run into to run into someone or to run into something then we have the phrase from out of nowhere or we could just say out of nowhere this means very suddenly or unexpectedly this is an adverb phrase that you would use to give more information or even add emphasis and often you're going to use this phrase with the verb come I could say the horse came out of nowhere to win the race or the flying object appeared from out of nowhere and it just appeared suddenly for pronunciation the final te and out I am going to pronounce it as a flap te and then I can link that with the vowel sound in of out of out of nowhere just listen for that flap te and linking a businessman and a woman little dog came out of nowhere and forced him on and right before he's about to throw the first pun Katie comes out of nowhere steps right between us and starts screaming the lyrics to Hotel California next is the phrase neither nor and you can use this phrase to talk about two or more things that are not true I could say I have neither the time nor inclination to get involved in someone else's drama and this is a little bit of a cocation to have neither something nor inclination to do something and inclination is just referring to your desire so I could say that I have neither the time nor inclination or I have neither the resources nor inclination or I have neither the energy nor inclination to do something let's look at some more news headlines so you can see how this phrase is used in context neither the us nor China seem intent on meaningful diplomacy despite interests neither students nor employers favor skills over a college degree and neither science nor religion support overturning row and in case you're wondering this is referring to the court case in the United States Ro v Wade which has to do with abortion when it comes to pronouncing this phrase I think it's pretty simple and straightforward you're just going to say both of these words neither nor neither something nor something else neither nor on top of something this phrase means in addition to something especially something unpleasant so you're going to say something unpleasant and then use this phrase and follow it with that we missed our bus and on top of that the next one we took had mechanical problems my girlfriend's dead and on top of that it's that time in late summer before football starts and there's no basketball we're going to make your clients whole a check for the 46 and change right now and on top of that we'll give you another 46k to cover your expenses I know basically nothing about Vietnamese cuisine and on top of that I got Co a few months ago and I lost my sense of smell and taste for pronunciation surprise surprise more linking may occur we can link the final consonant sound in top with the beginning vowel sound in of top of on top of something and then we have the ladder this means near or towards the end of something and and that's really the meaning of lad but because we're talking about something specific we're going to use this with the article the the latter and there are some useful collocations with this phrase we can talk about the latter part of something construction will begin in the latter part of the month or he got injured during the latter part of the match I could also talk about the latter half of something I was born in the latter half of the 20th century or the latter half of the movie was much more captivating for pronunciation there are two things because I've already mentioned the strong and weak the' in this case we're going to use that weak the' with the schwas sound because the next word begins with a consonant sound and of course you will hear me pronounce those t's as a flap T the latter the latter part of something the latter half of something now for a little review and I am warning you in advance that I am going to use many of these phrases just to to reinforce the meaning so so I'm thrilled that you have made it through the latter half of the lesson because you know some people think they have neither the time nor inclination to watch a 20-minute video and on top of that some people think that building vocabulary it's just not that important and I completely disagree and to be honest it even makes me a little angry and I have to tell myself wait a second Wes you need to calm down take it easy and of course I'm hopeful that in the end people will realize how important and valuable it is to build your vocabulary the same way you realize how important it is and therefore you will continue to improve your English fluency so I

I got to wrap things up here and I look there's no need to make a face I'm sure that's the last thing that you want to hear but I'm confident that we will run into each other again very soon and we will especially if you watch another video Lesson if you enjoyed the lesson and learned something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Use CONTEXT CLUES to Build Your Vocabulary

hello welcome to today's lesson in which we are going to talk all about building your vocabulary with context clues and if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary I'd appreciate it if you go ahead and hit that like button because honestly context clues this is a great way to understand and really you're just taking the information that you have to infer the meaning of words and phrases that you might not know so let's well let's start with that I just talked about the meaning but I'll go through this real quickly context clues are hints that an author gives you to help understand the meaning of a difficult or unusual word within a book the clues may appear within the same sentence as the word or they may come in the sentences before and after the word now even though when people think about context clues they really associate it with reading because that is reflective you're able to look at the sentences before and after really think about it in order to better understand the meaning of an unknown word or phrase but because you love a challenge uh we are going to practice today with both reading and listening we're going to start with reading and then we'll move into listening which I think is a bit more difficult but really it's a three-step process and I know there are four numbers there just bear with me the first thing you need to do is find the unknown word then you're going to look for those different clues either before or after and then you're going to try to infer the meaning based on your understanding of what is being said before or after the unknown word and then finally you can join my speaking course this is a nice little transition into me making the announcement that yes you can join my speaking course it's for intermediate to Advanced speakers it's all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally you can also use the code speak20 to get a twenty dollar discount and I know like yes rafella good to see you in there also uh part of the course I'll post this down put that in the chat but there's also a link down in the description if you'd like to learn more about the course find out about time and availability but of course I would love to be able to speak with you so let's begin with reading I think it's a little easier and it's a good way to start out and I'm not gonna give you I'm not going to overwhelm you with a bunch of information really these words are all within a sentence so we're going to start simple and then try to make it a little more difficult but I have 12 different words and phrases for you and again with all of these lessons my goal is that you learn something new so hopefully some of this vocabulary will be new for you these are Advanced words and phrases so don't think that they're the most commonly used words in the world again I tried to choose stuff that maybe you wouldn't be familiar with like this first one we should be cognizant of the fact that every complaint is not a

Justified complaint and you get that that angry angry cat right there so you should be cognizant of the fact that every complaint is not a Justified complaint I told you we're going to start out a little easier and here's some multiple choice does this word do you think it more similarly means critical aware or suspicious think about the sentence look for those different context clues again if you're able to understand just the main idea you can kind of put it together one thing I would say is that I think does help is identify the part of speech as well are you talking about a verb an adjective a noun and that'll give you something to go by so you guys uh maybe the multiple choices make it a little too easy great job Lolly rafella Sylvia Manuel Elisa the answer is be aware if you are cognizant of something you are aware of something keep in mind with both of those words you're often going to follow it with the preposition of and I the only difference I would say is cognizant is probably a little more formal overwhelmingly people are just going to use aware in this case but the answer is be aware here's the next one I have a few multiple choice questions and then I'm going to take away the multiple choice and I want you to just write the meaning so here is the next question that I have for you doubts were cast on the veracity of her alibi doubts or cast on the veracity of her Alibi of course I've highlighted the the unknown word this is the word that I want you to think about well what does this word mostly mean in this context and if you're able to again understand that context okay what what's going on in this situation I think it's going to help you pinpoint the meaning and I'll just go ahead and say I think a keyword in there a key well context clue would be the word Alibi and if you understand what an alibi is this is a noun even looking at the picture we're talking about like a situation law enforcement if somebody has an alibi it's someone who can attest as to whether or not someone was doing something or was at some place so when you're talking about an alibi um older article talking about it when I think Trump was president and he was tweeting at uh I think Theresa May so Trump angers UK with truculent tweet to May and the next one I think this one's a little more recent Prince Harry Meghan Markle do not seem to win anything with their truculent Behavior so there is quite a bit that I think you can pull from as far as well trying to gauge well what is the meaning of truculent so even in that first headline right there angers so I think in that case you can kind of tell well okay this word has a negative connotation and even in that next one they're not going to win anything with their truculent Behavior so in this case it's referring to their behavior in a negative way and all right you guys I think in this case you could do a process of elimination because I made a mistake down there which I just see right now ABC that last one affable uh should be C and affable has a positive connotation uh means friendly so we can rule that one out and you're really just deciding between a and b and I think most pretty much all of you excellent Lolly rafella uh uh gen Tran nice well done the answer is B antagonistic so truculent means that somebody is being well unpleasant antagonistic it has a negative connotation and I will say that I think in that second news headline you may hear it being used with the noun behavior and somebody talks about a person's truculent Behavior they're unpleasant antagonistic behavior that is a collocation with this adjective now to make it a little more challenging again this is reading I I think the multiple choice makes it a little maybe too easy I'm gonna give you the sentence I'm highlighting the the word or phrase that I want you to think about the meaning and yeah I want you to just write down your best guess as to what this phrase means again sometimes all right you may already be familiar with it so just this sentence right here I'm in charge and I'm calling the shots based on what you know about this sentence this situation if you will what do you think it means to call the shots I'm in charge and I'm calling the shots once again let me know write your answers in the chat and even if you're watching this later write it in the comments these are practice lessons that's what it's all about to actually allow you to practice your English skills so I want you to just write the meaning what you think the meaning is of to call the shots there's there's more than one answer because there's different ways that you can explain and talk about the meaning of these words and phrases so I have some answers like okay who's the boss a lot like controlling the situation um on who will decide so the one deciding excellent so the key word in there is somebody is in charge if somebody is in charge well what does that tell you about the situation that tells you that this person is going to make all the decisions that uh influence any situation they're the boss they're in charge they're going to make the decisions they are going to call the shots this is an idiom that you could use the next one I think this one's going to be a little more a little more challenging if one speaks without knowledge one ends up pontificating from Prejudice rather than from a reasoned opinion this is well I'll go ahead and tell you you can probably you know the part of speech just reading the sentence pontificating in this case they're using it as a gerund but generally speaking it's a verb to pontificate and use the clues surrounding this word think about the meaning of the sentence and what do you think that verb or what do you think it means to pontificate try to take it like a one step or like just several steps uh like start with identifying the part of speech adjective noun verb then think well is this going to have a positive connotation or a negative connotation and just build onto it from there instead of just trying to come up with the meaning right away so if one speaks without knowledge one ends up pontificating from Prejudice rather than from a reasoned opinion and I'm already wow I'm already seeing uh some good answers right there as far as so nice job uh Elisa Sylvia um Lisa you hit on a word that I've that

I think when it comes to this verb you find in several different meanings um when you look in online dictionary so if you're pontificating again let's break this down pontificating from Prejudice Prejudice has a negative connotation so I think we can tell that if you're pontificating it's not a good thing because you're speaking without knowledge again not a good thing when you should be speaking you know from a reasoned opinion in this case so to pontificate means you're expressing your opinion in A pompous way there's that word pompous pompous refers to someone who they just think they know more than others and it's not like they have a lot of knowledge and experience to back up their opinion they just feel that well I'm right this and and I think this is a useful word it's not the most common word in the world to pontificate but associating it to well many things that are going on today I think a lot of people pontificate online they talk about things they share their opinions about information that they don't really know much about and they do it in a way that's rather pompous like I know everything don't question me and really they're pontificating instead of speaking from uh knowledge and real experience and having a reasoned opinion so this is a good word to know but again it's more advanced it's not one that you're going to come across all the time all right here is the next sentence that I have for you on weekends I sometimes do banal activities like cleaning my shoes or defrosting the freezer and I've heard I saw two different pronunciation banal is saying banal banal sometimes I feel like dictionary.com when I looked at looked at it they had banal I don't know I don't think I would say that it's a distinction the pronunciation between U. S and British and British English um but yeah I would just say banal banal activities so looking at this sentence you can tell right away this is an adjective and we're trying to think what does this adjective mean on weekends I sometimes do banal activities like cleaning my shoes or defrosting the freezer and I only put that second part in there because this is something I did a little while back I defrosted the freezer had to get all that ice out it was just getting too too cluttered but I would say that is a banal activity great job all right you guys are you know already picking these out I trust that you're not looking these words up as we go through this but if you are hey it's okay again as long as you learn something new then I'm gonna declare Victory but great job Lolly rafella dull ordinary um uh consci mundane learn skills rudimentary excellent so again there are several other adjectives that you could use the to describe the meaning of this word boring ordinary not original mundane so just because it's not mentioned there I think still you get the overall general idea if you spend time you're cleaning your shoes or defrosting the freezer these are not exciting activities and yeah that you could say like Yama said they're uninteresting um the next part that I want to look at is listening so again just to be clear when you think about context clues people are really going to associate that with reading however because you guys have done so well I wanted I want to challenge you and I want to test your skills when it comes to listening and of course it's much more difficult when listening because it's moving a lot faster it's not reflective it's not like you can go back and listen to it again unless you're watching a video but if you're in a conversation you just have to do this in real time and just pick out that unknown word and as long as you're following the conversation you can kind of get an idea as to what that unknown word or phrase might mean but I have a quick question for you just out of curiosity um what do you think is more difficult between these two skills would you say reading or listening which one uh which is the most difficult uh skill for you I'm going to add that which is the most difficult skill for you and yeah it's a poll you guys can you know let me know what you think so the first one again we're going to start with some multiple choice and then I'm going going to give you some words that I just want you to listen to it and then you're gonna write down what you think the meaning is so this is actually it's very informal I think it was considered slang a while ago now I don't know if it's kind of gone um more become more mainstream what we're talking about the word janky all right let me give you the sentence and you tell me what it means either a b or c some people have told me that my mic is kind of janky so I'm thinking about replacing it I'll say it again some people have told me that my mic is kind of janky so I'm thinking about replacing it and you can just write ABC I think that again based on that statement it's pretty straightforward I'll say it slowly and then we'll talk about those context clues some people have told me that my mic is kind of janky so I'm thinking about replacing it so if I'm thinking about replacing something then that should tell you right away that okay this is not good this is not positive it has a negative connotation and I'm saying something is janky so we're talking about an adjective that's describing a noun in this case we're talking about my mic so really I would say broken is a little too far on the extreme if it's broken um it just wouldn't function in that case a legal limitation I was going for a knockoff but I think as most you said the the answer is a bad quality if something is janky it's really talking about something that is bad quality great job Jen uh consci uh learn skills nice rosegar the the only thing that I would say about this is often I think people may use this to refer to electronics I think that that's kind of what I came across but that's not always the case I've heard people talk about clothes that are janky shoes Electronics computers in this case I'm talking about my mic that is part of that if it's janky it's just bad quality it's not that good so the next one mockish and for this one once again I'm just gonna give you some news headlines and see if you can infer what the meaning of it is so I have three different headlines that I want you to listen to and then write down what you feel like the meaning is again write it in the chat or write it in the comments later again I just want you to participate so the first one is from inews and the headline is Joe Biden's Ireland visit is a mockish tour of smiles Shamrocks and gaps the next one is from the guardian and it's talking about the hollers review Marcus John Krasinski comedy feels like a long sitcom I then have another article from the guardian the space between us review cosmically mockish teen romance so there were three of them I'll say them again the first one from inews Joe Biden's Ireland visit is a mockish tour of smiles Shamrocks and gaffs the next one is talking about I believe this is a show the hollers and it's a review the haulers review Marcus John Krasinski comedy feels like long sitcom and then the other one also a review I don't I guess this show the space between us cosmically mockish teen romance so just listening to those what do you feel like it probably means mockish the most you don't have any bad quality you're an excellent teacher thank you demos I appreciate it all right so once again I think you guys are able to put all of this together and rule out the ones that we're not talking about the the answer in this case is overly sentimental so we're talking about C sentimental really in an exaggerated awkward or false way and now that you see that meaning and you're thinking about those headlines hopefully that makes a little more sense like the uh Biden's visit is a mockish tour of smiles it's Shamrock's gaffs it's just exaggerated it's awkward or in the other two headlines those reviews talking about a comedy or a book or a story and saying it's mockish just sentimental in a false way overly sentimental all right the next one I have one more multiple choice and then it's gonna get uh I think a little more challenging so the word that I want you to listen for exigent and the sentence in more severe cases exigent circumstances may require that the animal be removed for Veterinary Care I'll say it again in more severe cases exigent circumstances may require that the animal be removed for veteran Veterinary Care just listening to that I know that you're trying to hone in on the word exigent what do you think would be the best meaning for this word in more severe cases exigent circumstances may require that the animal be removed for

Veterinary Care I think there are well different context clues before and after so the first one severe cases again not a good thing that should tell you about the situation we're referring to and then that the animal removing the animal for veterinary care if an animal is not well okay we it's important it's urgent that we get the animal to this other place where they'll get better care and I just gave you the answer B great job uh CZ Lolly uh Manuel rafella if something we're talking as exigent it means urgent I feel like fortuitous means fortunate that's very very positive we could rule that out and unusual it kind of fits in there but it really just doesn't fit with the overall situation we're talking about exigent circumstances meaning urgent or pressing circumstances will require us to do something different in this case take the animal to the veterinarian to get uh better care all right let's make it a little more challenging I'm going to take away those multiple choice options and I want you to listen to the sentence and tell me well write the meaning of the word bamboozle what do you think it means so the sentence is I got Bamboozled into telling them my credit card number I got Bamboozled into telling them my credit card number just listening to it again what's the part of speech I got Bamboozled into telling them my credit card number generally speaking bamboozle viewed as a verb to bamboozle someone so this person got Bamboozled and that last part really is the main context clue I'll say it one more time I got Bamboozled into telling them my credit card number so if you're telling someone your credit card number unless you're talking to your the credit card company it's probably not a good thing you shouldn't you shouldn't be revealing your number so if you got Bamboozled into telling someone your credit card number there are a number of different words that you could use to describe this verb uh I think good ones uh oh starlink fooled is good swindled I saw that one um tricked is another one fool cheated all of those work so to bamboozle someone whoops right here and here's the answer I got bamboozled into telling them my credit card number you're tricking or deceiving someone Often by confusing them that is another word I saw in there like confusing them but if you're bamboozling someone really again you're you're tricking and deceiving someone there's some type of trickery involved and in this case you're deceiving someone into getting that credit card number to bamboozle someone all right and the next one I don't know Manuel he wrote the word and we're we're going to go straight to that one so Manuel I hope I think you should uh uh know this one uh the next one here it is oh for some reason those got switched around I hope I didn't screw that up and reveal the answer I don't know why those got turned around anyway cajole this is the word I want you to think about and tell me write down the meaning and this is actually a word from a lesson that I did a little while back I don't want to give it away but this was one of the words cajole so I'm going to use I'm using my little gar my little girl Emmy as an example in this sentence and I would say my daughter often cajols me into buying her ice cream I just can't say no to that face my daughter and this is true my daughter often cajols me into buying her ice cream I just can't say no to that face it happened yesterday and I'm confident it may happen today as well so if you are cajoling someone to cajole it's a verb and I said she often cajols me into buying her ice cream I just can't say no to that face I think uh listening to those words and phrases that surround cajole you can kind of piece it together and yeah great job Sima Rafaela learn skills Rachel we're talking about cajoling someone we're talking about persuading someone to do something the only thing that I would add when I say oh I just can't say no to that face cajoling someone you're persuading them to do something typically by talking nicely to them I said by Pleasant talk but really you're speaking to someone in a way like you're trying to flatter someone oh I like what you're wearing today oh you're so nice you're so amazing and they're just talking to you in such a nice way and that's really how they're persuading you to do something and in this case my daughter cajols me into buying her ice cream by saying oh you're the best dad in the world um so I would say that cajole in general because you're talking pleasantly to someone I don't think it really has a negative connotation I don't know if I would say it has a positive one um but maybe more neutral but your to cajole someone into doing something all right so here is the next one this is an idiom toe the line what do you think it means I want you to write your answer in the chat or in the comments and let me give you some context toe the line the boss is a real jerk so if you want to get ahead at this company you'd better learn how to toe the line the boss is a real jerk so if you want to get ahead at this company you'd better learn how to toe the line I think this is an idiom that you would find more in the U. S an American idiom what do you think it means if somebody is trying to toe the line or in this case this person would be getting advice and telling you'd better learn how to toe the line and again maybe if you've never heard of it that's good you'll learn something new this is an idiom so mostly you're gonna hear it probably in spoken English as opposed to in in writing in a book so I'll say the sentence one more time we'll talk about my boss is a real jerk so if you want to get ahead at this company you better learn how to toe the line the fact that the boss is a jerk that's part of the the clue right there so you want to get ahead what type of person would you need to be if you want to get ahead in a company in which the the person above you is just a real jerk so you probably going to need to do what's expected of you you know somebody your boss is going to expect you to do the work not cause trouble not cause problems and that's really what it means to toe the line to do what you are expected to do without causing trouble for anyone and you're learning to toe the line if this phrase is new for you that's great let me show you that there were 12 words and phrases from this lesson again I tried to choose ones that were a bit more advanced so these are not words that you're going to come across all the time but it's just practice using some of those context clue to infer the meaning that's a great way to build your vocabulary again if you enjoyed the lesson I'd appreciate it if you'd hit that like button and if you learned something new let me know down in the comments I always love uh hearing from you let I'm curious because I can see uh the results I'd asked you guys like what what's your most difficult skill listening reading 70 of you said listening and I would also say that I am in that camp as well actually listening is possibly the most difficult skill for me my ears are just not that good so I really appreciate you guys being here thank you for joining me today I hope you enjoyed the lesson I hope you learned something new and of course in the future uh I'll try to be back with some more engaging lessons whether it involves vocabulary grammar pronunciation um but I just want to say thank you guys good to see you lolly uh kanji CZ always learn something new that's great just give a few quick shout outs at the end um Rafaela good to see you and I will be seeing you uh next week in the speaking course and again if you're interested in joining my speaking course check out that link down in the description uh Sylvia as well nice good to see you Alex uh yeah I could keep going but uh I hope you guys have a wonderful rest of the day and I will

Use PREFIXES to Build Your Vocabulary

hello hello hello welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English and it is the place that you want to be if you're looking to learn and improve your English skills and today I have a very cool lesson for you because it is a lesson that many of you have requested this is a lesson that you guys chose that you wanted to learn about and that is this I am going to teach you and talk about how to build your vocabulary with prefixes that's what we're gonna discuss today we're gonna talk about what prefixes are what they mean how we use them and specifically how they can help us expand our vocabulary and we can just learn new words new words new words and really really grow our vocabulary and improve our English fluency now Before we jump into it what I want you to do is I want you to write your name in the comments in the chat tell me where you're joining me from and even if you're watching this later we just want to hear from you write your name say hello we love hearing from you guys hi you Lisa jr. Rosario Kiara Samantha hi I'm Vivian Bassam welcome thank you guys for joining me today now let's really jump into the lesson so we're talking about prefixes we're talking about just a part of a word so really we need to take words and and break them down as much as we can and then we can add to them now what I mean by that is this look at this word right here the word is in action in action and I tried to just break it down by using that little pick that pencil image there so we have our root word which is the smallest form of the word and that is act now to act is basically mean something something's happening we can add the suffix tion action now it means like it gives movement we think that something is happening and moving around and there is action if we add the prefix to that in action it changes the meaning altogether and it basically means well no action is happening nothing is taking place so when we talk about this we need to understand that words can be broken down into different parts even the word prefix can be broken down into two different parts we have pre which basically means before and fix means to attach prefix we're talking about attaching letters before a word which is the prefix and that's going to change the meaning of those words so that is what we're going to look at today we're gonna do I'm gonna talk about some common prefixes we're gonna talk about what they mean I'm gonna give you some examples and at the end we are going to practice what we've learned so let's start out with just a basic question about what are prefixes as I already said those are letters that we add to the beginning of a word and that creates a new word and meaning now what it helps us build the vocabulary is that if we learn the meaning of the prefix then that's gonna help us determine the meaning of the words that it goes before because you're gonna see these prefixes the same prefixes again and again and again look at this example right here everybody knows probably the word happy what does it mean happy well if you want add the prefix to that unhappy it basically means not that you are not happy now anybody can all you could always say not happy the effort that makes sense but if we want to to use it in one word we use the prefix on and say something you know it makes me unhappy you don't like it so we are using the prefix unn to change the meaning of happy so what I want you guys to do right now as we go through this lesson all of you guys that are in the chat or even if you're watching this later and using the comments as I go through some of these prefixes I'm gonna give you tell you the meaning I'll give you some examples I want you to be thinking of other words that have this same prefix and write them down write them in the chat write them in the comments because what I want to do is just build this list of vocabulary words for people to see because like I said we use these prefixes the same prefixes with with so many different words so as I go through these I want you guys to write some words that you know that you that start with this prefix so fittingly because my example was unhappy let's start with on the prefix on un now if we see this prefix before a word it's basically gonna have one of three meanings it's going to be mean it's going to mean either not remove or reverse and I've had these example sentences right here so again if you're in the chats or use those comments what are some other words that use this prefix that start with on

let's see let's see how many words that we can get so I tried to think of some example sentences using common phrases that you might see or hear and the first one like you say somebody might say you know I have some unfinished business alright we have some unfinished business to attend to it means that it is not finished where there is more business that we have to do unfinished not finished the next one can you undo the spell now this might be something that maybe you'll hear it or if you're watching a Harry Potter movie or read it in the books and somebody's talking about a magic spell and you want to reverse it you want to undo this spell and then the last example sentence is we need to unpack our suitcases so you can pack a suitcase and put clothes in or you can unpack the suitcase and remove them and take the out so these are three different examples of how we can use the prefix on we have some other great examples unusual unreal unstable uncomfortable excellent thank you guys for sharing perfect let's look at the next prefix this one right here D is dis this one means not or opposite of and it's challenging because there's many there's a lot of prefixes that mean not and and again this is where it's important to just practice and practice and practice so that we understand which prefix goes with which words so try to again think of some words what are the words can you come up with that begin with dis so here are my two examples right here we were dissatisfied with the meal if you're satisfied you like it you're happy if you're dissatisfied you are not happy you don't like it you were dissatisfied with the meal or if we're talking about sports and the competition and you could say the cheaters were disqualified from the competition they were eliminated they were removed from this competition they they were they were disqualified so again great examples disabled dysfunction disagree there are so many examples and this is a great way to again have everybody see these words and create this list now let's look at these right here this is a lot to take in so I just lumped all of these together ill em in here and when you see these they they have the same meaning it's either going to mean not as I said there's many that have this meaning me though so they'll either mean not or without so when you see these prefixes attached at the front of a word it's gonna mean not or without and there are many many examples out there and I'm sure you guys write those in the comments so my examples theft is illegal something is not it's illegal or somebody might say somebody's somebody's taught telling a ridiculous tale a ridiculous story and you're thinking about the events that happen you say well their story seems improbable to me probably didn't happen it did not happen it's not probable it's improbable or he felt insecure during the presentation if somebody feels insecure they're not comfortable they're not happy so they maybe feel insecure because of some event and the last one down here this is a very common word that you would see irresponsible if somebody is not responsible they're irresponsible and somebody might tell you don't be irresponsible all right always you should always be responsible don't be irresponsible okay so again there's many many different words inconvenient irresistible imbalance excellent thanks for sharing with us jr.

so these are all words that there's many words that they'll mean not or without let's look at the next prefix that I want to go over out so if you see this one and I know I'm going quickly today we're going through these fast and then we're gonna practice some but again it's always good to practice these because it's gonna help us build double our vocabulary because you're learning a new word if you see out it's going to mean that you go beyond or you're talking about outside of something so in my first question right there do you think you can outrun me can you outrun me can you if we are running can you go beyond what I can do can you go beyond me and the answer to that is probably you can because hey I'm not very fast and I feel like I'm a little out of shape and don't have much endurance so many of you out there could probably outrun me the next one out they outlasted the competition so if you're talking about outlast it does it makes me think of courts or athletics and you outlast someone else or another team or your opponent they outlasted the competition or you like my picture right there the when I think of an outlaw I I think of the Wild West you know Cowboys and back during that time when people were outside the law they were outside the law they were referred to as outlaws he is an outlaw that is a perfect image right there of an outlaw the next prefix that I want to show you guys is this one right here Otto and if you see Otto before a word then it just means self okay self is what it means for example I love reading autobiographies a biography is a story about a person now an autobiography means that that person wrote the story about themselves they wrote that story there their self all right it's an autobiography another common word that we see this with is you could say right now everything is on autopilot a pilot is a person that flies a plane and there's a function autopilot it means the planes flying itself but we also use this word when we're talking about basically any system that we're discussing and say you know things are on autopilot right now everything's moving along by itself it's on autopilot so those are some useful words with Auto and there are many many others out there automobile autobiography automatic many words that you will see that use this prefix now let's look at today's tip done tada and today's tip is this you might be asking yourself right now well Wes how do we how do we learn these what's the best way to learn prefixes and what I would say is the the best way to do this because there is no rule there's no rule of like okay if a word begins with this letter you're gonna use this prefix there's no rule like that what I would say is you should learn prefixes just like we're doing right now learn them as you might learn new words what is the meaning because once you learn the meaning of a prefix and then you see that prefix later on attached to another word it's gonna help you figure out what that meaning is because if the prefix means not then basically you could just and you know what the other word means that then you'll know like unhappy then you'll know okay this means not happy so it's important to learn the meaning of prefixes now once you've learned the meaning I think a great way to identify and think of okay well which prefix goes with which words the best way to do that I think is with reading and listening and I would think reading is even better because again listening is a very it's it's a very fluid motion when you're listening to a conversation nobody's gonna stop and be like wait wait wait let me identify that prefix but when you're reading it's more reflective you can stop and think about the word and actually pick out the prefix and see how it's being used and see the word that it's being used with because as you see these these words you're taking that information in and once you take that information in you are understanding it then you're more likely to use it correctly the next time you were speaking and you're having a conversation so what I would suggest to you is the next time you are reading something you are reading a book you are reading a story even if you're reading a short little article online see if you can identify some of the different prefixes because I guarantee you you will see something you will see many of them if you're even reading a short article and that's going to show you okay all right we use this prefix with this word and you're going to take that information in you'll be able to remember it and then use it the next time you want to either speak the language or right so that is my tip for all of you guys now let's look at let's continue our list and talk about some more prefixes now let's look at this one de if you see these two letters before a word it's gonna have the following meaning it's going to mean lessen or change or off now again in the chat in the comments what are some other words that you can think of what are what are some other words that are have this prefix before it here are some of my examples the land has devalued for years if something D values it means that the the value is going down down down down down in you it's lessens the value lessens its devalued you can also this is uh this is my Star Wars reference someone deactivated the hyperdrive if you deactivate something then you are turning it off alright it is deactivated and then finally this is something that all of us probably should do from time to time we should debug our computers because as we surf the internet our computers can pick up these different bugs and we need to change and lessen and get rid of these bugs and we want to debug the computer so again there are many many other words that you might see with this depreciation depression there there's so many out there and it's great to be able to understand these prefixes now this next one is a very common one and I think many of you probably know it are e if you see this before a word it just means again all right re when you see re it means again for example many times as a teacher in the classroom students would write stuff they would write papers and I would often have them I would show them some corrections and say look it really helps you should rewrite this rewrite this correct your mistakes it's going to help you and in this sentence I had to rewrite the business proposal I had to write it again or the student reapplied to graduate school you can reapply to something you can apply again so if you see our e it just means again next we have miss this is another very very common one and if you see miss it just means incorrectly or badly so again I tried to think of some common common sentences somebody might tell you look you you misinterpreted the message you misinterpreted the information it basically means that if you misinterpret something you interpreted something incorrectly you thought you knew what you were doing or you thought you knew what the meaning was but no it was not correct it was incorrect you misinterpret information you misinterpret the message you can also misbehave the child misbehaved last night in this case it means badly all right misbehaved is behaving badly and finally this is another common sentence that you might hear or you might even tell somebody and say whoa wait well there's been a misunderstanding there has been a misunderstanding that the information that we were trying to understand it's incorrect all right so there's been a misunderstanding something is incorrect and then you try to resolve it so these are some very common ways that we can use miss alright there's this is a very very common prefix that you guys will see attached to the front of many many words now a lesser known prefix but one that is still very relevant is omni I so you're not gonna see this one as frequent but if you do it's great to know what it means because it's usually attached to these larger words and I think most of us could put the the meaning in context but it's always good to know so if you see Omni in front of a word it's going to mean all or every so

I'm NIT present so if something is present if something is omnipresent it just means it's everywhere so buses are an omnipresent noise throughout the city maybe there's so many buses around the city you always hear the sound of the bus it's an omnipresent noise it's everywhere or the satellite emits omnidirectional signals so satellites typically emit signals now if those signals are going out in every direction you could say it's omnidirectional so Omni means all or every it's a lesser known one but it's great it's great to know and understand because you might see this one later on now another prefix I have this one is just for fun okay it's mostly with spoken English you don't really see it in writing in its this uber and I almost think it's kind of like slang nowadays now uber means very over or beyond it's a German word so this is something that English has borrowed from German and people will use it as a prefix to to certain nouns or adjectives to mean very over or beyond and like I said most of the time you're just gonna you might hear this in spoken English maybe people that are typically younger because it's more to me it's a little more slang than it's not formal language at all it's very informal but I wanted to give you some examples so you can see how it's used in context they you could say somebody they went to an uber fancy restaurant yesterday and if something is uber fancy it means it's very fancy but also beyond to the point where it's probably unnecessary that something was you bur fancy you know it's not necessary it was really really fancy but that's how you would use it with that adjective then you could say then oh oh wait then I just caught one of my mistakes not than tha and it should be then th en then we went to this uber cool club alright so if something is very cool and you really want to emphasize it you might hear some people talking and having conversation say oh this was an uber cool Club and there's my picture of a club but it's been a while since I've been to a club so I I cannot relate to this I have not been to any Buber cool clubs so now that we've discussed the meaning of these some of these different prefixes let's practice what we've learned da da da it's time to practice I hope you're ready alright so what we're going to do is I am going to give you the prefixes that we talked about and I'm just gonna give you a sentence and I want you to complete the sentence which prefix are you going to use so really look at the word that it's being attached to some of these are gonna be easy others might be a little tricky and all I want you to do you don't have to write the whole sentence just write the word and I would ask you write the full word because again that that really it helps us take in that extra information because we're writing out the word that it's the pre that that we are attaching the prefix to so write out the whole word and even if you're watching this later I want you to participate use the comments like it's a piece of paper and just write the words and then once we're done hit comment alright so I know that you were interacting and that you were participating in the lesson so my first question to you is this one right here alright here are the prefixes that we talked about I did not include uber on this list because again like I said it's more slang we don't use it that often and especially we don't really use it in writing so here is my sentence we can't break into the bank that's mmm we can't break into the bank that's mmm now our word is possible so which which prefix are you going to use with possible I want you guys to write that in the chat or even later in the comments and try to write write the full word write the word so again you're taking that information in which prefix is used with which word it just helps it's great to do most of you said excellent you guys Rock the answer we can't break into the bank that's impossible we can't do it it's not possible we say something is impossible next let's look at this one and this could be a real situation for many of us that experience cold weather it's so cold outside we need to mmm the windows and when I was doing this think about you getting into a car you're getting into the car and you have the the windows the windshield and you need to mmm the windows the word is frost which prefix are we going to use with frost think about that it's cold outside what happens when it's cold outside what happens to the the window sometime all right which prefix are you guys going to use write the word in the chat I want to hear from you guys or even in the comments yes most of you chose the right prefix we're going to use the prefix de all right defrost which basically again it means to lessen it's cold it's so cold outside we need to defrost the windows we need to defrost them all right next question for you guys is something this is a very very common sentence if you're making a phone call and you are calling a business and you are asking for somebody you might hear this sentence sorry he's mmm to talk right now he's to talk right now we're talking about the word available which prefix are we going to use with available and again the key here is again somebody saying sorry alright so sorry he is mm to talk right now which what's what's gonna go in front of those words right that in the chat write it in the comments yes most of you excellent job we're talking about somebody who's unavailable sorry he's unavailable to talk right now unmeaning somebody is not available let's look at this one all right this one maybe it's a little tricky we thought the movie started at 8:00 p.m. I guess we were mmm all right we're talking about informed we thought the movie started at 8:00 p.m. I guess we were mmm which prefix are we going to use with informed okay the reason that I say this is tricky and because again it's always great to identify prefixes as prefixes with different with words is because sometimes we can use different prefixes with different words and this first part we thought the movie started 8:00 p.m. so if they were thinking something then that means they got some bad information let's look at this question right here all right we love her work she's in mmm part of the team we're talking about the word dispensable if something is dispensable it means that you know you can get rid of it all right now there's a little hint here I've given you a hint because basically I gave you the article and all right so again if we're talking about and then you know that the word is going to start with a vowel sound okay so which word goes ahead of that if somebody's we're talking about dispensable you can get rid of but you love her work you don't want to get rid of her she is an indispensable part of the team indispensable part of the team all right so this is a great way to practice we are learning the meanings of these prefixes we're seeing words that they're used with and then we're practicing that because as we take this information in chances are next time we have a conversation and we're using these words and we want to say something we're going to use the correct word we're going to use the correct prefix with that word and again I think it's very very important reading is a fabulous way to do that so the next time you're reading I really suggest that you try just take a moment and try to find some prefixes and see which words they're being used with so as always if you guys enjoyed this lesson hit that like button we really appreciate it if you like learning English with us we always want hit that subscribe button and turn on the notifications so that you get updates whenever our new video comes out whenever we do these live lessons because we want to keep growing our classroom also please share this lesson

Use These (B2) Phrases to Instantly Sound More Fluent!

let's learn some B2 phrases that you absolutely need to know and I say this because they are so common and I want to make sure that you are using them correctly and effectively like our first phrase all of a sudden it means very quickly or without warning and there are two things that I want to say about this phrase the first is that you're likely going to use it either at the beginning or the end of a sentence and the next thing is that it's very useful because this is a great way to EMP emphasize the fact that something happened suddenly you may even emphasize the phrase when speaking all of a sudden my pants fell down okay there there's no context but it really captures your attention or I got really tired all of a sudden great phrase to know and use for pronunciation linking will occur this is when we link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word and we can link the phrase all of a sudden and people are going to say say this a bit quicker and they're really just going to pronounce it all together all of a sudden it seems like all of a sudden so much is happening well it kind of happened all of a sudden it was a spur of the moment you know all of a sudden you care what happens to me Sudden Valley just sort of implies that something awful could happen all of a sudden now if you would like to build your vocabulary improve your pronunciation develop your grammar skills Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so subscribe keep watching because who knows all of a sudden you may forget what you've learned so you need to continue practicing and watch these video lessons because you may miss out on some very useful phrases like our next one the last minute this means the latest possible opportunity for doing something and there are some great collocations with this phrase these are words that are frequently used together so you may do something at the last minute in this case we're talking about the specific time I submitted the report at the last minute or we checked in for our flight at the last minute you may wait or leave something until the last minute he waited until the last minute to board the train or maybe someone asked you why do you leave everything until the last minute if you like to procrastinate then probably you've heard somebody ask you this question for pronunciation the only thing that I wanted to point out is that a lesson will occur this is when sounds or syllables get removed so the final T in the word last it's going to be light it comes between two consonants so you're not going to hear it the last minute I want you to listen for it the town of Woodbury was supposed to host it this year but because of recent flooding they cancelled at the last minute didn't anticipate so many people losing their nerve at the last minute now let this be a lesson to you don't always leave things until the last minute now learning these phrases is important but it's also essential that you pronounce them correctly and practice using them when speaking and I have an amazing app that can help and I want to quickly tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson Elsa speak this is a great app to help you fine-tune your pronunciation and if you're unfamiliar with it let me show you how it works and I want to show you a really cool feature when you join Elsa premium because you can have an in-depth conversation using their AI feature as you can see there are many AI conversations but we're going to create our own role play hi welcome to L which kind of roleplay scenario would you like to do I want to have a casual conversation with a close friend over the phone and I'm deciding whether or not to apply for a new job opportunity hey there so I heard about this exciting job opportunity you're considering tell me more about it yeah it's something that came up all of a sudden but it looks interesting and I'm thinking about applying but I haven't made a decision just yet that sounds great what kind of job is it it's a sales position and I have a little experience but I don't know if I'm really qualified you should go for it your experience will be valuable and it could open up new opportunities for you yeah you're right and I definitely don't want to wait until the last minute to apply you should take the chance and apply it could lead to some amazing opportunities for you thanks for the confidence booster I think I'm going to go ahead and do it so I appreciate it but I got to go now and I'll talk to you later and let you know how it goes good luck with your application can't wait to hear how it all goes role play completed and then after the role play you get a full assessment of your conversation giving you meaningful feedback when it comes to pronunciation vocabulary and grammar so click the first link below or scan the QR code on the screen to download Elsa for free and get 7 Days of a premium membership for free or you can use the other link to get a 50% discount on a

the sake of the children and if we're talking about for someone's sake I could say I hope that you're right for both our sakes or maybe you're thinking I should hit the like button for Wes's sake yes it would it would it would help me when pronouncing this phrase just keep in mind that the word for is often reduced it's unstressed therefore the vowel sound may change and it's going to sound a little more like fur and then we can link the phrase sake of and it's like we're moving that consonant sound over for the sake of someone or for someone's sake she was my mother too mother gone for the sake of you baby you don't have to pretend other women aren't attractive just for my sake well I'm glad it turned out to be somebody else for everybody's sake once and for all let's break down the myths and destroy the lies and Distortion for your sake for their sake then we have by far which means by a great amount now often this phrase is going to come after the verb to be and we're going to follow it with a superlative which is an adjective or adverb indicating that something has more of a quality than anything else in a group so I could say English is by far the most commonly used language in the world and teaching English is by far the hardest thing that I've ever done but it is by far the most rewarding as well and of course you are by far the best student that I've ever taught and I hope that this is by far the best vocabulary lesson you have ever seen and if it is yes you can you can hit that like button when pronouncing this phrase I think it's pretty simple and straightforward

by far here are some more examples I am by far the most qualified person they interviewing you have to let me study that machine of yours is by far the most magnificent invention I've ever seen in my life all the things that Bart might do for money this is by far the most legal this is why out of the five dads that I have had you are you are by far my favorite I'll take that next is the phrase as far as I know or you could say so far as I know and this is used to say what you think is true even though you do not have all the facts now you may end up using this phrase as a standalone statement someone ask you a question and you respond and just say as far as I know this is what I think is true but you may also often use this at the beginning of an independent clause I could say as far as I know my daughter still believes in Santa Claus or so far as I know you have already subscribed to the channel I like to think that it's true even though I'm I'm not sure but if you haven't done so please you can go ahead and do that now we have these two phrases they mean the same thing but I would like to share with you which one is more commonly used so we can check out engram viewer to see how frequently these phrases are used and as you can see it's more common for people to use the phrase as far as I know for pronunciation more linking may occur we can link the three words far as I when saying the phrase as far as I know or so far as I know let's listen to some more examples as far as I know yeah there's only two ways you can injure your neck mhm there's no one to blame here but Oscar as far as we know your staff wasn't hurt but the patient's abdomen was open he's stable as far as I know then there's can't take your eyes off someone or something this means to not be able to stop looking at someone or something and it is a great phrase to add emphasis I could say I can't take my eyes off that dessert it just looks so good for you music lovers there is a famous song from 1967 we're going way back Frankie belly Can't Take My Eyes off of you you're too good to be true can't take my eyes off of you I'm not going to keep singing this song cuz my voice is just wrong okay I don't want to I don't want you to take your eyes off the video for pronunciation I want to highlight the word can't because there is a difference between American English can't and British English can't now you're going to hear me say can't and if you listen to many online dictionaries you're going to hear that te get released however most people are going to say this with that nasal sound and then follow it with a stop te so your tongue is going to come up behind your top front teeth and block the flow of air can't the other thing that is happening is that more linking will occur we can link the phrase eyes off Can't Take My Eyes Off Of You I Can't Take My Eyes Off Of You right now that that is true you're just too good to be true can't take my eyes off of you oh my God I can't take my eyes off this Li on woman is absolutely mesmerizing it's the ring you can't take your eyes off it then we have an incredibly useful phrase to take advantage of someone or something this phrase actually has two different meanings one positive and one negative now the positive connotation is actually a B1 phrase which means to use the good in a situation like you're going to take advantage of an opportunity when using this phrase in a negative way which is the B2 meaning it refers to treating someone badly in order to get something good from them so if someone is taking advantage of you or you are taking advantage of someone else it's not a good thing to help you better understand this phrase I have some humorous memes that I want to share with you like this one if you need someone to take advantage of you I'm your man or how about this one please explain to me how not letting you take advantage of me is being mean and finally whenever you feel taken advantage of at work just remember how lucky you are to be stupid enough to tolerate it for pronunciation there's more linking this is just commonly used in casual conversation we can link the phrase take advantage of and we're moving that consonant sound over to take advantage of someone or something he's taking advantage of her didn't exactly sound like anything was happening against her will last night and I think that Ryan knows that and he's taking advantage of you I think you are wrong because I'm doing it too I'm taking advantage of Pete like you're taking advantage of Tracy then there's as a result of something this just means because of something and the phrase is really interchangeable with the meaning and it's also interchangeable with the phrase due to and in my opinion I feel like as a result of may sound a little more formal I could say I hope that you build your vocabulary as a result of watching this lesson I could say due to watching this lesson or because of watching this lesson all of them work and it's good to get a little variety but to help give you a better understanding as to how to use the phrase as a result of here are some news headlines San Francisco museums brace for layoffs as a result of the city's budget deficit Pope Francis remains hospitalized but doctors say he's no longer in imminent danger as a result of pneumonia pneumonia and in this case imminent just means immediate and finally chick sail soaring as a result of ongoing egg shortage West Texas feed store say for pronunciation we can link two different phrases as a and result of as a result of listen for it as a result of our success I'm getting a seat on the High Council I made a promise as a result of the promise I have to stay on us it simply says you won't hold us responsible if you die as a result of gross negligence then we have to be in your 50s this is the period in which a person is aged 50 to 59 and of course we're really referring to any 10-year period it doesn't have to be your 50s I could use this phrase to say well someone's in their 30s or 40s or 50s 60s and so on really you would use this phrase to approximate someone's age and you're just guessing and you have that 10-year period so let's have a little fun right now and play a little guessing game I am going to show you the picture of a well-known person and I just want you to guess this person's age you have a 10-year window right there so let's begin how about Leonardo DiCaprio what do you think I hope that you said he's in his 50s because yes that that is true he's in his 50s how about Joe Biden what would you say I think everybody knows yeah he he's old Joe Biden he's in his 80s how about Cristiano Ronaldo famous footballer he's been playing for quite some time he is in his 40s Taylor Swift famous musician she is in her 30s Pope Francis I know that yes he is old he is in his 80s and finally what do you think what about me what would you say I am not in my 20s I'm not in my

30s I'm not in my 50s so hopefully by process of elimination you would guess that I am in my 40s that's true not going to tell you my exact age but for pronunciation the only thing that I want to point out is that more linking may occur with the verb to be if you say someone is in their 30s or 40s or 50s or if you're talking about a group of people they are in their 30s or 40s so just something to keep in mind here are some more examples can't even tell when the disease would hit you if you do have it could be in your 70s like your mom or could be sooner could be sooner the mullers and the enzers indicates he was in his 40s and then there was this dermatologist and she looked like she was in her 20s she's like in her 50s hey you're Nifty 50s yeah one way or another great phrase it just means in some way that is not known yet and it's almost like you're expressing confidence that something is going to happen I could say I am going to pay you back one way or another all right I'm going to make it happen or One Way Or Another We're going to get out of this mess and I'm just expressing that that confidence once again for music lovers you may be thinking this phrase sounds familiar and that may be because of Blondie's hit song One Way or Another one way or another I'm going to find you I'm going to get you get you get you get you one way or another I'm going to win you going to get you get you get you you you get the idea and I feel like I'm such a terrible singer I'd be better off just playing the actual song even though I might get a copyright strike for pronunciation I just want to point out that the word or is often reduced and when that happens the vowel sound's going to change slightly instead of or it may sound more like er one way or another and then we can link the final consonant sound in that r with the vowel sound in another one one way or another just listen for it everything's going to work out one way or another we'll get that money one way or another this rival we have to stop one way or another sooner or later one way or another the gods have a plan for us then there's to make a fool of someone this means to trick someone or make someone appear stupid in some way now someone could be a reflexive pronoun and in that case it's like you're you're doing it to yourself I could say I got drunk and made a fool of myself so in that case the subject and the reflexive pronoun we're talking about the same person someone may also be used as an object pronoun and in that case it's like someone else is doing it to you she made a fool of him in front of his friends or I sometimes I ask you to hit the like button and I could say please don't make a fool of me if you if you don't do it I'm I might just feel stupid so please don't make a fool of me for pronunciation there are a couple of phrases that we can link make a and fool of to make a fool of someone I'm sorry it's taking me this long to figure it out but I promise done making a fool of myself let him make a fool out of himself no he will make a fool out of you you won't make a fool of me any longer oh I'm embarrassing him you're making a fool of yourself then there's the phrase one by one which means separately or one after the other I could say the children exited the classroom one by one or over time the apartment buildings have been built one by one I've been talking about music a lot in this lesson and of course there is a famous children's song the ants go marching one by one don't worry I'm not going to sing it I don't want to hurt your ears but fun fact this is an American folk song to the tune of the Civil War song When Johnny Comes Marching home and here is a fun meme that I wanted to share you see these soldiers marching and one person starts singing the end go marching one by one and then someone else says shut the up Carl so I I just thought it was humorous and wanted to share it with you for pronunciation it's pretty simple and straightforward just say each word one by one here are some more examples one by one come in one by one one by one I'm not going in there than began to wrinkle and go black one by one plopped to the ground at my feet they all Dove down from the high Pier One By One or my son will kill you all one by one now I hope that you don't make a fool of me and go on and do something else I want you to keep watching these video lessons one by one so you continue to build your vocabulary and as a result you're going to learn a lot of new words and phrases so please do it now for my sake don't wait until the last minute and I I'm not trying to take advantage of you this is by far the best way to improve your English fluency as far as I know you see how easy it is to use these phrases in casual conversation and I hope that you go out and do the same if you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new you can let me know by hitting that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Use These Advanced English Phrases to Sound Like a Native

to cross that bridge when we come to it or to cross that bridge when we get to it. It means to deal with a problem if and when it arises. And really an emphasis on the if and when. Because basically what you're saying is that you're you're not going to stress out over a future problem because it might not ever occur. Instead, you're going to focus on the present and deal with issues as they come up. That's like step 37. And we're still on step four. Cross that bridge when we get there. We shake hands, and forget all this ever happened. We'll cross that bridge when we get to it. Then there's to get the short end of the stick. This means to be treated unfairly or to get the worst outcome. So, this idiom originates from the practice of drawing straws or drawing sticks. You hold them out, people choose, and whoever gets the shortest stick or shortest straw has to do the undesirable task. So, in that case, it it really means what it says. You're going to get the short end of the stick.

He's the one getting the short end of the stick, letting somebody like you get away. To throw someone under the bus. It means to blame, betray, or abandon a person for selfish reasons. And I I think we can all relate to this idiom. I think about my family. I have a little girl and a baby boy. And let's say we're eating at the dinner table and I find some food on the floor. I might say, "Hey, what happened? You know, why is this food on the floor?" And my little girl Emmy, she's very quick to throw Luca under the bus. It wasn't me. It was him. He's the one that did it. And she'll throw him under the bus.

Are you telling me that if I throw you under the bus, you're going to drag me with you? Husband and wife are supposed to help each other, not throw each other under the

Used to vs Use to | Confusing Grammar You Should Know

let's talk about the difference between used to and use to now they they can be a little confusing not not necessarily when speaking but when trying to determine which one you should use in writing and i say they're not really they're not really confused when speaking because the pronunciation is the same and i will come back to that a little bit later on but for right now let's uh let's focus on used to because this is definitely the most common one that you are going to use when speaking or writing and i think well used to alone can be confusing because well dictionaries may look at it different ways cambridge has used to as a modal verb merriam-webster says that used to is an adjective as well as a verb macmillan dictionary has used to as a modal verb oxford learner's dictionary also says that used to is a modal verb and dictionary.com has it as an adjective as well as a verb let's first make a distinction between used to as a modal verb or verb and used to as an adjective now the the grammar is different the part of speech but also the meaning is different so right now let's let's get rid of the adjective forget about the adjective let's just focus on used to as a verb or modal verb and i keep saying verb modal verb as you saw some of the dictionaries uh have it listed differently and that is because in some ways used to acts like a modal verb and in other ways it it really doesn't but whether or not used to uh is considered a verb or a modal verb the meaning's the same and let's talk about the meaning because that is very important and what this means is it's talking about something that was repeatedly done in the past or or even a situation that existed in the past but the the thing is not done anymore or the situation does not exist anymore today in the present so i could we'll give you some examples talking about myself i could say i used to live in south korea that that is true that is a situation that existed in the past and when i lived in south korea i used to run around this lake twice a week bum on lake i used to run around it twice a week and that is something that i had done repeatedly except for the winter uh in the winter it was a bit too cold so during those months uh i used to sit on my ass i could say that sometimes not always in those sentences used to is a modal verb it is a helping verb and i already told you that it has some similarities to modal verbs like it has one form it's not conjugated so i said i used to live in south korea if i change the subject to he it's not going to change he used to live in south korea but used to it it can act differently from your average modal verb for example with modal verbs you're not going to follow it with two so i can say something will like i can swim or it will rain or you should write to me in the comments i just love hearing from you you should write to me in the comments now with all of those sentences we have the modal verb and then we follow it with the infinitive the base verb there is no two an exception is used to i use to run around the lake and well even if i wanted to change the subject and talk about myself in the third person to show that the form is not going to change i could say in winter west's use to sit around on his ass but sometimes all right so two is going to come before the base verb and that's why i think if you're if you're trying to think about it i think it's best to consider used to as just one phrase try to think about it together as one phrase used to questions and negative statements also make used to different from other modal verbs because if well if we're talking about questions typically we can just use the modal verb to create a question can he swim will it rain and if we're talking about negative statements then you're just going to use not with with a typical modal verb he cannot swim or it won't rain but this is not the case with used to of course used to it just has to be different than all the other modal verbs and i think this is also when people might say okay it acts more like a verb because if we're talking about questions used to it refers to the past so with questions you're going to use did and if you're going to make a negative statement then you're going to use did not so if we're going to use it uh as a question i could ask you did you used to study english and if i want to say a negative statement then i could say well i didn't used to have hair like this and that's because i used to shave my head but more importantly than my shaved head is that you now see that used to has changed the spelling has changed to use to and this is what i want you to remember if we're talking about questions and negative statements you are going to use use to and you're going to spell it u-s-e i told you that the only to hot weather all right i'm just it's just something that i'm used to i'm not used to cold weather it's just something i'm not that familiar with and in this case because used to is an adjective it's not going to change whether we're talking about questions or negative statements you are always going to spell used to like this u-s-e-d uh another thing that i want to tell you about used to as an adjective just giving you another example i do not think any of us were used to staying inside for so long during the pandemic and i think that's true i think we can all relate to that sentence and the thing the thing that i wanted to point out with this sentence is that you you may often follow used to with a gerund and you're used to doing something like i'm used to taking the bus in the morning or i'm not used to working late but even though we were not used to staying inside during the pandemic we had to get used to it and i just gave you an example right there of it being used with another verb that is not the verb to be and that i think is also it's a common usage to get used to doing something or even people using it as an imperative statement giving a command and you're telling somebody get used to it but just remember used to as an adjective has a different meaning than used to as a modal verb or verb that's the one thing that i really want you to remember from this lesson and i yes it's confusing but i think over time the more you listen the more you practice you're just going to get used to it if you enjoyed this lesson and learn something new please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and i'll see you next time

Useful Adverb Collocations to Build Your Vocabulary

today i am going to teach you 50 different collocations and if you don't know what collocations are those are words or phrases that are frequently used with other words or phrases and there there are many different types of collocations you can have verb noun collocations you can have adjective noun collocations but in today's lesson i want to talk to you about adverb collocations the idea again is not for you to memorize every single one of these i think you may already be familiar with many of them so a lot of it will just be review but it's just getting that exposure so that you know which words go together so let's begin with the adverb strongly this is it's often used to emphasize some of the more common ones would be well you could strongly condemn that you really are are upset with someone and you might strongly condemn them for for doing this thing or perhaps you could strongly disagree with someone you it's not just your normal level of disagreement you want to emphasize that and say that you strongly disagree you could also strongly suggest something that you want to make sure that this person well probably does what you are telling them to do so you may strongly suggest something now if you want to add a little more to it and really kind of tell them look look this is what you should do then you might strongly recommend something so suggest and recommend they're pretty similar but i think recommend has that extra little like well okay this is what i think you should do so you could strongly suggest something but if that person doesn't listen then you might strongly recommend it you could also strongly support someone if you want to show an increased level of support you would strongly support them the next adverb is fully and this adverb is kind of just like talking about something that that's complete for example you could say that you are fully aware that you know everything that's going on around you and you are fully aware of some situation for example i could say that i am fully aware that you are not going to memorize all of these collocations but in that case i strongly suggest that you keep practicing that maybe you re-watch the lesson again because that is just going to help you build your vocabulary you could also say that that a person if you're describing them they are fully awake they are they are definitely awake they are completely awake but you want to say they are fully awake i hope that you guys are fully awake right now as you are watching this lesson you would also use fully to say that something perhaps a a program or a machine it is fully operational that everything works it's fully operational and finally you can use it with the adjective upright and say that that someone may be standing fully upright i i always try to stand fully upright but it doesn't always happen and and i end up slouching like this but i i try to stand fully upright the next adverb that i have well it's actually two adverbs that can be used interchangeably and those two adverbs are absolutely and utterly now you can use either of these adverbs when when talking about the adjectives that i'm about to teach you but sometimes i think it may be more common to use one over the other and as we go through these i i will tell you which one so both of these adverbs they they kind of mean like like definitely or for sure for example you we can use it and say that someone is absolutely alone or utterly alone either one works but in this case i think it's probably a little more common to use utterly and say that well they they are they are utterly alone sometimes it's not good to be alone so let's let's put a positive spin on it and i could say that somebody could be absolutely amazed or utterly amazed i think either one of these adverbs goes well with this adjective if you again just want to add a little flavor to it and say well you know i i was absolutely amazed when i saw the movie it was incredible i was absolutely amazed or you could well we could use it with the adjective appalled and say that you were maybe you really didn't like something you thought it was terrible and you were absolutely appalled by this thing or utterly appalled again either adverb i think goes well with this adjective we could say that something or or even someone is absolutely beautiful or utterly beautiful i think in in this case i i guess for me i would tend to use absolutely more often than i would use utterly if i'm talking about something that's beautiful i'd probably say that it is absolutely beautiful you could also be absolutely convinced of something or utterly convinced and and in this case i think both of them are quite common but well i'll tell you my personal take i and this i think i would probably use utterly then we could use these adverbs with the adjective devastated that that maybe you could say we were absolutely devastated we were utterly devastated when we heard the news i think either of them go very well with this adjective you could also say that a person might be absolutely furious or even utterly furious between these two adverbs i would probably go with absolutely but either one works absolutely furious utterly furious then we could describe a person's feeling and say that they were absolutely miserable or even utterly miserable both of them work well so if you want to really say that a situation was bad perhaps you got caught out in the rain and you were stuck there and you got soaking wet and you just felt absolutely miserable these adverbs also go well with the adjective ridiculous and you could describe well either a person or probably more often a situation and say that it that it was absolutely ridiculous or utterly ridiculous and finally you could use it with the adjective stupid and again describe a person or even a situation and say it was absolutely stupid or utterly stupid both of them work well especially if if stupid is just not good enough and you really want to say just how stupid it was you could say that it was absolutely stupid or utterly stupid then we have the adverb deeply and this is it's just talking about a great amount for example you could use it with uh the adjective concerned and you would say that you are deeply concerned about something or it's quite often used with regret and you might deeply regret something if you really want to say that you are well you you really are upset about this and you you wish that it had never happened you could start out and say well i deeply regret that this thing happened then we could use it with the adjective divided and say that well perhaps people are deeply divided i think if you're talking about politics that is a great example you could say i can't believe that that people are so deeply divided that they won't listen to each other they strongly disagree and they are deeply divided and i am utterly amazed at how absolutely ridiculous it is sometimes that people are so deeply divided and finally we can use it with ashamed and you could somebody could say that they are deeply ashamed about something so with all of these keep in mind that they they all kind of have a negative connotation it's not talking about something that's overwhelmingly positive if you are saying that that people are deeply divided or you're deeply concerned about something or you deeply regret it or you're just deeply ashamed so keep that in mind next we have the adverb highly and this really well it kind of means the same as very you're talking about a degree and i think it does have more of a positive connotation to it so we can start out and you might say that something is highly unlikely that it's probably not going to happen you could say it's highly unlikely that this thing will happen you could also use it with recommend that you highly recommend something now this is a little different than strongly recommend because i think when you highly recommend something you're kind of telling that person that well you think this is the best it is the very best and that's why you highly recommend it if you strongly recommend it you do think it's really good but it's kind of like you're you're maybe pushing it a little more on that person and you really want them to do it so they they are a little different in that way but if you think something is great it's absolutely the very best you could highly recommend it we could describe a situation and say that well maybe it's highly unusual that is a common collocation as well as highly controversial that this it's it's not just it's not just controversial it's very controversial it's highly controversial we could also say that something is highly sophisticated it's it's very complex it's detailed maybe we're talking about some advanced science and we say wow this it's just highly sophisticated or you could describe a person and say that they are highly educated that they have gone to university they have their masters their phd and you would describe this person and say well they are a highly educated individual perhaps then you could describe a person who is highly educated and say that he or she is highly intelligent they're they're not just very smart they are highly intelligent and sometimes if a person is highly intelligent they may get a job in which they are highly paid that they are earning a lot of money and they are highly paid at their job now let's kind of go in the opposite direction and talk about the adverb grossly it means pretty much the same like very you're talking about a degree but i say that it's kind of in the opposite direction because most of these collocations have a negative connotation for example you could say that something is grossly exaggerated that it's really it's not close to the truth that some story something that happened and you'd say well it was grossly exaggerated or maybe you're describing a person and say that they were grossly negligent that they made a mistake they were negligent but it was a very careless mistake and you could say that they were grossly negligent we could also use it with the adjective inaccurate and say that something is grossly inaccurate if somebody's telling a story that was grossly exaggerated you you could then say wow that is just grossly inaccurate that is not what happened it was grossly inaccurate we could also say that somebody may be grossly mistreated and that is not a good situation if somebody is mistreated and if they are mistreated well really bad then you could say they are grossly mistreated you could also describe a situation and say that something was grossly unfair it just really wasn't fair it was grossly unfair or perhaps say that someone was grossly reckless that they didn't care about what happened to others and they were grossly reckless their behavior was grossly reckless or you could use it and say that a person might be grossly misled that they were not told the truth they were led to believe something that was grossly inaccurate and in this case you could say that they were grossly misled and finally we could say that well something or even someone was grossly underestimated and in the case of describing a person maybe that sounds a little surprising and like oh we we grossly underestimated this person's value they surprised everyone and that would be a good thing but if you're talking about a situation perhaps that you were trying to plan for something but you grossly underestimated what would happen and in that case that would be more of a negative connotation and you might grossly underestimate the results which means you were wrong and yeah that that that might not be a good situation then we have the adverb mildly which really just means slight or or not much and you could say that a person is mildly upset they're just a little upset they're mildly upset or maybe they are mildly concerned about something there's something that they should be a little concerned about and you could say that they are mildly concerned or perhaps a person is mildly surprised by something that happened so this is a great adverb to again just give that that extra little bit of information and use mildly to describe that maybe the way you feel you're mildly upset you're mildly concerned or you're mildly surprised then we have the adverb widely and this it's a great adverb i like using it because it really just means like universal it's talking about everything or everyone and you could say that something is widely available that you can find this thing anywhere everywhere it's widely available or maybe you want to say that you're talking about some information that everybody knows about and you'd say that it is widely known and finally we can use it with accepted and say that something is widely accepted everybody accepts this information as the truth it is widely accepted and finally we have the adverb perfectly it is another great adverb and to make some very common collocations in which you're saying that well things are okay but i think it's used in the context that somebody might be saying the the opposite and then you're trying to say no no no it's like this for example you might use it with the adjective normal perfectly normal somebody might be trying to say that well things are a little strange this is a little weird and you would say well no no no everything is perfectly normal so for example perhaps i know many of you you're you're learning english it's quite uh it's quite common to make mistakes but it doesn't make people feel good so i could then say hey don't worry about it it's perfectly normal to make mistakes it's not strange it's not weird it's perfectly normal you could also say that that something is perfectly acceptable that that this thing is just fine it's perfectly acceptable or maybe you could say that somebody is perfectly willing to do something they're willing to do it they are perfectly willing to do it and again maybe it would be used in a context where somebody is may you think that they're not willing to do it and they say no no i'm perfectly willing to do this thing so i hope that that all of this made sense i know that i gave you a lot of collocations today but again the idea is not that you you're going to memorize each and every one of these over time you are going to learn all of these different collocations and not only that you will be able to use them correctly i am utterly convinced that this will be the case you will learn all of them because you are highly intelligent i'm going to end it right there so i hope you learned some new collocations today i will be utterly devastated if you didn't and they'll be a little deeply concerned that's not true it's okay everything's perfectly normal all right so long

Useful Beach Vocabulary to Improve Your Fluency

today I want to teach you vocabulary that you will use the next time you go to the beach because that's where I am right now everyone my name is Wes this is Interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I have a vocabulary lesson for you because I am at the beach I am at siesta key in Florida the Gulf Coast beautiful beaches so I thought this would be a great opportunity to teach you some useful vocabulary words that you may want to use the next time you go to the beach or you may hear somebody else using these words if they're talking about the beach so the first word that I want to teach you is the word tide and this is just referring to the rising and falling of the water level so if the water level is rising then people will refer to that as high tide if the water level has been falling then they will refer to that is low tide and this usually happens twice daily and the reason why the water level at the ocean is rising and falling is because it is caused by the pull of the Sun and the moon on the earth so often you would hear it used with those two words high and low high tide and low tide the water is in it's high tide if the water is out then it's low tide the next word that I want to teach you is the word current and this can be used to describe the way that water moves it's moving in a particular direction you could also use it to describe the wind but since we're at the beach people might often talk about the oceans current and describing the direction in which the water is moving now you may often hear this word being used with strong if you want to use an adjective to describe the current that's how it's commonly used people might say well there is a strong current usually to say that it could be a little bit dangerous if you want to go out swimming and say wow the current it's really strong be careful another useful word which deals with the current is undertow so this is the current that is below the surface of the water and it's moving in a different direction than the surface current so the undertow is under the surface of the water for example people might say well there is a strong undertow that if the current on the surface is moving in one direction the undertow underneath may be moving in another direction which could be a little dangerous people are out there swimming and if the undertow is pulling out into the ocean then people may find themselves drifting further out away from the shore now if you're walking down on the beach many people just walk barefoot but you may find people down there that are wearing either sandals or flip-flops and I wanted to quickly talk about the difference between sandals and flip-flops so sandals are when you have it's like an open shoe that has a sole and it's attached with straps these straps go around your feet and those are called sandals whereas a flip-flop is a shoe that is loosely held by this this

y-shaped strap so right now for example I am wearing flip-flops let me show you right here those are my lovely flip-flops I also have a pair of sandals but this is common Footwear that you may find people wearing when down at the beach now let's talk about some people or things that you will see when you are at the beach so a person who works at the beach is a lifeguard this is the person whose job it is to make sure that people are safe for those who are out swimming in the water stay safe and that is a lifeguard and they typically work in like this stand right there and that is a lifeguard stand and they sit there and they've watched all the people swimming in the ocean and just make sure that they're safe now an animal the bird that you often find that the beach is a seagull so these are these white birds that you can see in the background right here flying around those are seagulls you find them flying all around the water they have the word seed in their name so these are the white birds that you constantly see if you're at the ocean flying around the seagulls you may also see sand dunes those are the dunes the mounds that you would find before you get to the beach so back here let's see you could see there are some sand dunes they're not very big but those are just like the small little mounds of sand they're called sand dunes if you want to talk about sand and use a quantifier you would talk about grains of sand the beach it's full of sand but if you want to talk about one piece of sand then you would say it is a grain of sand just one one little piece a grain of sand if you want to talk about trees that you would find at the beach those are probably palm trees these are trees that are without branches and they have fan-shaped leaves at the top and you can see in the back right over there there are some palm trees now a boat that you may find at the beach there are many different types of boats but this is one that you may see out in the water or even parked up on the sand and that board is used where the ocean comes up on the sand and in the ocean thumbs up on the sand they leave this little layer of water that people will throw the board down on and jump on the board and just glide across that thin layer of water that is a skim board finally well you can't talk about the beach without talking about what people wear so universally people would wear swimsuits and you can use that word to describe what a man or a woman would wear but you could be a little more specific so if we're talking about what women might wear a type of swimsuit is a bikini this is a two-piece swimsuit or if the swimsuit is only one piece then that's actually what people refer to it as a one-piece now those are relatively general terms there are more specific words for swimsuits that women might wear but those are two common types either a bikini or a one-piece now if we're talking about what men wear you could say swimsuits it's very common you may also hear people say trunks swimming trunks or if you're talking about a specific swimsuit that's a little more tighter its form-fitting that is called a speedo and this word actually comes from the brand speedo that is the brand name and it has become the name of this type of swimsuit a speedo so there you have it those are some common and useful words that you can use the next time you are going to visit the beach I hope that you learn some new words if you did please hit that like button and write to me down below in the comments tell me what do you like to do when you visit the beach do you like to go surfing perhaps you want to ride on a catamaran let me know down in the comments below thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time

Useful Business Expressions to Sound More Professional

- Today, I'm gonna talk to you about some business expressions that we use all the time. That's coming up. The expressions that I'm going to teach you today are used quite often. These are business expressions that we use no matter whether we work in an office, a restaurant, a school. These expressions are universal. So, let's begin. The first expression is this one, ASAP, A-S-A-P. It's an acronym that stands for as soon as possible. We say this when we really want to express urgency that we need something immediately. You might hear somebody saying, I need this thing ASAP or you could say all four letters, means the same thing. I need it A-S-A-P, right now, immediately, ASAP.

- A-S-A-P, that means now. - Call me back ASAP. - I want you outta here A-S-A-P. - I'll get that to you A-S-A-P. - Darryl and I need to see you in his office ASAP. - So you can all get in your constructive compliments A-S-A-P. - Sergeant, let me know who's available ASAP. - The next business expression is to go the extra mile. This means that someone is doing more than expected and they're making a special effort to achieve some goal. Someone can go the extra mile. - I go the extra mile. - Never let it be said I do not go the extra mile To look at the big picture means to look at a situation as a whole and that you are able to see all of the important facts.

In different situations, you might hear somebody say we need to look at the big picture or somebody might tell someone else, like I was telling you, I think you need to look at the big picture. - You know, just step back for one minute and look at the big picture. - So, let's look at the big picture right now. These Business English lessons are gonna really help you unlock your potential in the workplace and take your English to the next level because you're going to feel more comfortable speaking English with co-workers or even customers. You're also gonna feel a bit more confident the next time you go in for that job interview or you have to give that presentation.

And you'll also feel more capable when it comes time to write that important email or even make that important phone call. Now, if you're worried about fitting these lessons into your schedule, don't worry. You can start now or any time in the future and book classes around your schedule. Weekends, evenings, mornings, no problem. It's up to you because Lingoda offers classes 24/7 and that is another useful business expression. 24/7, it means 24 hours a day, seven days a week. A person might use this if they're talking about their availability and say you can contact me 24/7. Or a business might use this to say that they are open all the time, 24/7.

- And it goes, the park is open 24/7. - So, enrolling in this course will give you 90 group classes over six months. That's a lot of learning. And if you wanna try it out and see if it's right for you, you can even take a free trial class. The cost of the 90 classes is as follows. So, for 90 classes, let's just do the math real quick. That's only 11 Euro per class. That's a great investment and that's exactly what this is. You're investing in yourself. But because you are learners of interactive English, Lingoda is offering you a discount of 50 Euro or $50. When you sign up, you just need to use the voucher code, InteractiveBE, BE like Business English.

InteractiveBE and you will get a discount of 50 Euro or $50. For more information on everything I just said, check out the link in the description and use that voucher code to get your discount. What are you waiting for? It's time to get the ball rolling and that is our next expression. To get the ball rolling means to do something to start an activity. You're basically saying let's begin. Often, you would hear someone just say let's get the ball rolling or it's time to get the ball rolling. - Let's get the ball rolling. - I'll tell you what I think just to get the ball rolling. - And to get the ball rolling, I will tell you the darkest secrets.

- The next expression, pass the buck. When someone passes the buck, they are basically shifting responsibility to someone else. They're passing the buck. We use this at work when we're talking about someone who they don't wanna do their work and they want to shift responsibility to another co-worker and they would pass the buck. - I think you're passing the buck. There's always someone higher up Where you can pass the buck - Try not to pass the buck. It's not good, you're not gonna make friends that way. One of my favorite expressions is back to the drawing board or you could also say back to square one. What this means is that you are admitting that an idea or a proposal has been unsuccessful and that you have to just start over again and create a new idea.

- Tried to get some, but it would've taken months to clear up the red tape. - Most of the time when you hear this, it's talking about government. People use it to say that there's just too much bureaucracy and government. You want to do something, you have to go through all this red tape. It can be pretty annoying. Another expression, which is one of my favorites is I need it yesterday. As a statement, it's gonna sound confusing, but when somebody says this they really want to show a sense of urgency that something needs to happen right now. Actually, it should have already been done, which is why they would say I need it yesterday.

- I need to know it yesterday. - Pick it up and bring it to the hospital. We need it yesterday. - Maybe you're talking to a co-worker or even your boss and you say, when should I have that ready for you? They might be a little upset and say I need it yesterday. You should've already done this thing. So, if your boss tells you I need it yesterday, you better do it ASAP.

Another great expression which is also a statement that you would just say to somebody is I'm afraid I didn't get that. The reason why I think this is so useful is because it's a way of clarifying information especially when you're talking on the phone. So, if you're speaking to somebody on the phone and they're telling you something and maybe you're trying to write it down and it's going too fast, you could say, I'm afraid I didn't get that. - I'm sorry, I didn't get most of that. - I'm sorry, I didn't quite get that. - So, if you're on the phone and you want to clarify the information that somebody is giving you, then you could just say, I'm sorry, I'm afraid I didn't get that.

If you enjoyed learning these business expressions and you feel like you've learned something new, please hit that like button. Also, don't forget to check out the link in the description if you'd like to get the ball rolling and really improve your Business English. Use that voucher code, InteractiveBE to get your discount.

Useful COLLOCATIONS in English (+ Lesson Notes)

all right welcome to today's lesson and we're just gonna hit the ground running I just have I have this first question for you right here we're not gonna waste any time but we're we're talking about collocations in English so these are words that are frequently used together so how would you complete this sentence right here if you don't answer this question I might um into tears okay I'll give you a moment to think about it and then I'll tell you the answer and and talk a little bit about it and share some other example sentences with you as well so what do you think how would you complete this sentence and this is a collocation so the answer I hope that you said would be the verb burst all right I I might burst into tears so this is a verb noun collocation and here are some other examples down here like last night he burst into tears or we were laughing so hard we burst into tears one thing to keep in mind when talking about the verb burst in the simple present burst simple past burst and the past participle is also burst burst burst burst just keep that in mind so I mentioned that today we're going to talk about collocations this is a great way to build your vocabulary it's important to know which words are frequently used together because that's really going to help your overall fluency sometimes I notice people will use an adjective with a noun that it's like okay those aren't really commonly used together and then I would say okay probably this would be a better word to use so these are great phrases to know and we are going to begin oh and I'd like to say if you like building your vocabulary Please Subscribe and turn on notifications so that I can become your teacher that is what I would like to do I would like to help you build your vocabulary and also if you would like to get a a copy of these lesson notes all of these collocations check out that link down in the description I will also throw it right there in the chat and the first we're going to start with some verb noun collocations like the the other one that I just gave you burst into tears the next question is this right here all right how are you gonna where these will range from more intermediate to Advanced phrases which is why I said this is like B1 to C2 vocabulary more intermediate to Advanced in in that range so I really want you to um attention and this is something that yeah I would say to you pretty much any any learner if I were teaching them and say okay I really want you to um attention when you're talking about the noun attention frequently you're going to use it with the verb pay all right see a lot of great answers I really want you to pay attention and I also would like you to participate in the lesson write your answers in the chat or even in the comments if you're watching this later so this is a very useful collocation talking about paying attention he has difficulty paying attention are you paying attention often I think people may end up using this in the continuous tense because they're talking about right now in this moment like hey are you listening are you paying attention great phrase to know the next one is this one right here okay I'm going quickly I'm going to go through these quickly I have great news where um a baby all right what verb are you going to use with that noun all right we're talking about I'm giving you the noun which is a baby what what verb are you going to use I have great news we're um a baby and this is a a word this is a phrase that I'm sure you've heard TV shows movies maybe you've had have friends and they've you've been in this situation so the correct answer is have all right we're having a baby now I will say that there are that there may be more than one answer with some of these it's not like this is the only verb that you can ever use with the noun that is true I see some people putting expecting that is also a verb that you can use we're expecting a baby however the only thing I would say is I think in this context if you're talking to someone I think they're probably more likely to use the verb have but that being said there is nothing wrong with saying expect we're expecting a baby um often I feel like if you were to use the expect I feel like people might use that one more in a question like oh are they are they expecting a baby are you expecting so again there is more that there may be more than one answer and I'll try to I'll keep that in mind as we go through this but a lot of great answers perfect here's another one and this one is it's a common noun you're talking about a presentation and sometimes I hear people use uh different verbs with this one but yesterday he um a great presentation so what what answer uh what verb would you use when you're talking about a presentation and trying to give you that picture thinking okay it's like it's happening um it happened yesterday there he is right there he um a great presentation so this is the answer all right excellent we're going through these perfect I don't think this one maybe it wasn't as uh difficult the answer is gave all right to give a presentation yesterday he gave a great presentation again if you want to be real technical the answer it should have been in the past tense I saw a lot of those uh answers in the past which is perfect so is here's some more example sentences when are you going to give your presentation or right now in the continuous tense she's giving a presentation on human rights to give a presentation excellent then we have this one which I think could it may be a little trickier I feel like every time I say that everyone gets the right answer the crash a lot of damage to our car so you can see the damage right there so the noun is damage what verb are you going to use before that noun to um damage the crash a lot of damage to our car so what do you think write your answer in the comments in the chat I just want you participating all right this is uh interactive English this is a time to you know to participate be a part of these lessons so I would say again this is another one there are more than there's more than one answer so what I was going for in this case was to do do damage the crash did a lot of damage to our car but you could also use the verb cause something causes damage I I gave you some more example sentence down there did the storm do damage to your home um you could replace that with cause as well did the storm cause damage to your home or this is a phrase that you may hear the damage has been done and in this case you somebody's talking about well look it's too late to change what happened the damage has been done and we're using it um in that the present perfect so you're using the past participle in that case you you're if you're you saying this as an expression you would not replace that with cause you would just say hey the damage has been done we can't change the pass we just have to move forward but the damage has been done got something to keep in mind the next one okay you really need to um a decision so for for this one uh again I would say there are a couple of different verbs that you could use to give you a hint um I'll just let you I'm letting you know I am from the United States so in the United States it's uh more common to use a a certain verb what do you think this is a slight little difference between uh American English in British English because I again either one is correct but the answer again I'm from the United States people are going to use make when talking about a decision this is the preferred verb in British English I think it's very common people would say take a decision both of them are perfectly okay I'm I'm using make because like I said I'm from the US this is typically what I would say so you really need to make a decision and then using it in a question up there have you made a decision or she really makes quick decisions so the next one that we have she's not good at um secrets she's not good at um Secrets think about uh that that picture right there what verb are you going to use when talking about secrets so I think there's one that's very common she's not good at um secrets the verb that I hope that you are thinking of is the verb keep to keep a secret so keeping I think awesome you guys were using it again in that context you're not good at doing something now in this case I'm using it as a gerund which is technically a noun but still The collocation Remains the Same to keep a secret she's not good at keeping secrets or somebody could ask you the question can you keep a secret or somebody say hey we shouldn't keep secrets from each other all right let's move in to some adjective noun collocations and this time we're going to switch it up so before I just gave you the blank and I wanted you to complete the sentence now I'm going to give you a little bit of a hint uh I'm gonna give you a synonym for the missing adjective so I don't know I think uh maybe this will make it I mean this will make it easier I thought maybe it was going to be pretty difficult so I wanted to give you that information but here is the first one I'm going to take a um shower all right what adjective would you put in there that really it has the same meaning as short time so once again we're talking about a shower this is our noun you're going to use that with the verb take to take a shower but if we want to be a little more specific which is what adjectives really help us do they just they're very descriptive we can talk about a yes a quick shower excellent I'm going to take a quick shower if I were to say this though I would reduce going to to gonna I'm gonna take a quick shower I'm gonna take a quick shower and this is not something yeah it's not something I like to do I end up I like taking nice long showers that's just me then we have this one I think this is a little more difficult because this phrase is not as commonly used the Titanic sank on its um voyage so Voyage is our noun and the adjective the the meaning of it is the the first attempt you're talking about the first attempt at something specifically it has to do with sailing uh sailing a ship you're talking about a voyage that trip so maybe I'm guessing if you've seen the movie Titanic I'm sure this phrase is used in that movie I don't know if you would remember it um the Titanic sank on its um Voyage when we're talking about a ship and the ship is going um you know to won't go on a voyage you might use it uh you might be more descriptive and use this adjective all right I see one answer uh just be careful with spelling we're talking about uh the maiden voyage so the Titanic sank on its mated maiden voyage this is the first trip that a ship will take and you could refer to that as its maiden voyage we were on the cruise ships made in Voyage or the yacht completed it's made in voyage so I I think when you're talking about Voyage this is a word that's commonly used of course there are words that are similar in meaning like I saw some answers like inaugural um I I feel like if you're going to use like inaugural you you might more commonly use that with the noun trip like the inaugural trip but in this case Voyage I think it's pretty common to say made in Voyage so hopefully with this one maybe you learned a new phrase the next one and this also there are two there are two different adjectives that you could use if somebody says shhh the baby is um asleep and it has the same meaning as deep what do you think there are two different adjectives that I I think people might commonly use so I I imagine you probably can guess both of them uh and again this is a great way to build your vocabulary being very more specific talking about well the type of sleep and the two that I was well think of the first the answer that I put um was sound asleep but fast is also another um adjective that you could use when talking about the noun asleep I even included it down here in one of the example sentences so I could also say I was sound asleep when the alarm went off you're in that deep sleep or it was noisy but I was fast asleep all right you're you're in that deep sleep so both of those are common commonly used when talking about the the noun asleep

the next uh the next collocation which is one that I I think this may be a little more challenging but also I think it's one that you might hear from time to time so it's probably not as common to talk about like made in Voyage because that specifically would refer to a ship but in this case we're talking about an obligation we have a obligation to protect the planet I think um if you're an environmentalist then you would definitely agree with this the missing adjective has the same meaning as well virtuous virtuous would be a synonym for this okay what uh what do you guys think we have a um obligation to protect the planet so the answer is and I think I see so good answer excellent um so we're talking about a moral obligation you have a moral obligation to do something this is a common collocation when you're talking about that noun obligation so I could also use it in these examples down here there's a moral obligation to tell you the truth or I have no moral obligation to help you but in this case again we're talking about a moral obligation this is one uh I think they're probably maybe a few different adjectives you could use because there are many words that have the same meaning as like well very bad but we're talking about the noun pain he was in um pain after the fall what word do you think would uh would you use before that noun pain he was in pain after the fall and I think all right excellent a lot of you are getting this one kind of checking the spelling because it is a longer word so we're talking about uh the answer that I was looking for was excruciating and the reason why I I chose this specifically is because there there are not many times where you're going to use the adjective excruciating it's very descriptive but when you do use this adjective I think you're frequently going to follow it with that noun excruciating pain but again there were some other great answers um the other words that you could put severe pain uh great pain there are quite a few words that you could use but just keep in mind uh if you want to say something hurts you know really badly you could say you are in excruciating pain so it's a Well really emphasizing that word the next one he always looks like he's in um thought at the office I think this this one's probably a little easier so the the word is a synonym for profound and I think even just thinking about that a synonym for profound it gives it away right there but we're talking about the noun thought he always looks like he's in thought at the office he always looks like he is in deep thought at the office I gave you some more examples here she was in such deep thought or I paced around in deep thought and you may often use the preposition in before this collocation to be in deep thought so that is a phrase that is commonly used with this collocation uh all right now oh okay I think there's another one um and this one's a good one at least I think so sometimes I'll give my boss some um criticism so the noun is criticism what what adjective are you going to put before this noun and it means the same as worthwhile so this is I don't want to give it away this is a great phrase for when it comes business English I think a useful collocation because I think sometimes we need to give criticism we need to offer some criticism but there's a specific type of criticism and that's what uh I'm getting at so the answer is constructive constructive criticism so I I mentioned this is great for business English because you don't it's not good to criticize someone but I think it's fair to give some constructive criticism that's going to help the other person improve uh if you guys have any constructive criticism for me you can write that down in the comments uh I would say I'm open to receiving constructive criticism or please offer some constructive criticism nowadays I think on online YouTube yeah typically you just get some criticism sometimes it's not very constructive so let's look at some adverb verb collocations and this I think is a little more challenging because we're talking about adverbs that is the missing word and now I'm not going to give you a synonym but I'm going to maybe give you a few letters to try and help you think of the adverb and come up with the adverb so let's just get right to our first one I was waving to get their attention I'm giving you three letters and all of those other blanks those those should be letters so this is a longer word I was waving to get their attention when talking about the verb wave what adverb may be used with it so and with these adverbs again they're very the you can use them in different places I think this is the only one that I've put after the verb the other examples they're going to be before the verb but I was waving nice got some answers perfect frantically I was waving frantically to get their attention um or you were waving frantically to get some help or he waved his arms frantically to stop traffic if you are unfamiliar with the word frantic it means kind of in a very emotional kind of panicking way so if you're doing something frantically you're doing it quickly you are perhaps panicking a little bit so if somebody's waving frantically they really are trying to get someone's attention the next one this time it's coming before the verb we're talking about the verb remember she remembers what happened so I'm giving you four four letters in here the a g and the l y at the end the l y is not much of a hint because many of these adverbs these are adverbs of manner and many of them end with l y so the answer all right that we're looking for perfect is vaguely she vaguely remembers what happens so it vaguely means that just a little bit or not much so in this time if if you say that you vaguely remember something you don't remember it well or you don't remember much of this thing so I could say I vaguely remember seeing the movie like I don't recall going there that evening or we vaguely remember our first date like where did we go what did we do um that you just don't remember much you vaguely remember something another adverb that you can use with the verb remember is this one right here it's kind of the the opposite of vaguely remember uh and you could use this adverb I um remember what he told me so again I'm giving you those three letters in the middle of the word and everything else is blanked out so how how would you complete this sentence right here and I I gave you a hint it's pretty much the opposite of when you vaguely remember something in this case you well I don't wanna I I end up I keep talking I feel like I end up giving away the answer or giving away hints so all right excellent uh some great answers perfect so this one uh is the answer is distinctly all right you see that t-i-n in the middle of the word you distinctly remember uh something it means that you clearly remember what happens you definitely remember this thing I distinctly remember what he told me or I distinctly remember what she wore or we distinctly we distinctly remember our first date all right just changing that sentence from before so those are those are some great collocations with the verb remember if you don't remember something you could say I vaguely remember it or if you definitely remember it and it's very clear in your mind you could say I distinctly remember the next one is with the the verb priced all right the computer is um priced what what adverb are you going to use and I've I've given you kind of part of the beginning of the word the EAS so I think when you're talking about the way something is priced you may commonly use this adverb in which case you are saying that it's fair um that you don't have a problem with it and again maybe I'm giving you some of these hints because I see some great answers because you would say it's reasonably priced uh here are some other example examples the meals were reasonably priced or I think that the car is reasonably priced now these sentences you see they're all written in the passive voice so again I'm using the past participle something is priced it's reasonably priced and I think when talking about the something being reasonably priced often you may find this using in passive sentences because you don't really need to say well who the agent is who is the person doing the action in this case the computer is reasonably priced I assume that we know it's the store that that came up with the price that's selling the computer then we have this one um it's not a good situation if this happens he um forgot her birthday and I feel like you probably are gonna guess this one because I think it's common when talking about the verb forgot and you would use this adjective or this adverb sorry to well it would give emphasis to the that verb that situation like oh

if you're apologizing for something and like I um forgot so he forgot her birthday I gave you a few letters even though I don't think you really needed these letters to Guess that the answer is completely he completely forgot her birthday so if you want to again emphasize the fact that you forgot something and again I feel like you would use this especially if you were perhaps apologizing for something like oh I completely forgot about the meeting I'm so sorry or she completely forgot to sign her name in this case it was it was a mistake then we have this one all right and maybe I'm wrong when I when I say this but just as an example using uh this adverb verb collocation I um doubt that you got all these correct or that you got all of these right I um doubt that you got all of these little bit of emphasis with these adverbs these adverbs and adjectives are great for emphasizing um verbs and nouns you could say that you seriously doubt something so again if you want to get a PDF copy of these lessons you get all of these collocations you can join our email Community click on that link down in the description just to try and do a little bit of review off the top of my head if you don't click on that link and join our email Community then I might burst into tears but I'm confident that you are going to make the right decision and join me on your English learning Journey because in the future I'm gonna keep putting out new lessons and I'm going to try to give you the best presentation that I can if I'm talking about vocabulary or grammar and I you know obviously I would not say that you have a moral obligation for watching these videos or even hitting the like button but that's something that I I always ask you to do I ask you this lesson and I distinctly remember asking you in the last lesson to also hit the like button and I know it's okay some of you may be thinking look I you know I'm sorry I completely forgot I understand that happens um but once again please hit that like button I hope that you make the right decision and I I really hope that you learn something new because I can tell just by the level of participation in this class that you were really paying attention so again I really can't think of any more ways to use these again and let's ever say okay I gotta go I'm gonna go take a quick shower so I'm gonna wrap things up thank you guys for joining me today again these are very useful phrases to know it's a great way to build your vocabulary thank you rafella lolly takayo give some shout outs because I wasn't able to do it during the class um Laura Dania um Vicky Gustav thanks for being here and joining Ava uh hashir Julia Alex um thank you thank you thank you Danny hope you guys have a wonderful day I'm just gonna wrap things up and I will

Useful Collocations to Greatly Improve Your English

Hello. Welcome to today's lesson. I was gonna say it's been uh I feel like it's been a little bit of a little while since I've done a live class, but today I think is a very useful class for building your vocabulary because we're going to be talking about collocations. And if you are not familiar with collocations, what this means is it's referring to words that are frequently used together. So you can have adjective noun collocations, you can have noun noun collocations, adverb adjective collocations. There are many out there. But the reason why I say this can be very helpful for building your vocabulary is because you are learning the way that people will just naturally use the language when they're talking about things. whether they're maybe describing something and you're using the words that people commonly use together. So, I I feel like the the actual words that I'm going to give you are not too difficult, but hopefully some of these collocations will be new. But, of course, this being well, one of our our normal lessons, I want you to participate. I want you to write your answers in the chat. I also want you to write it well in the comments if you're watching this later. Um, it's interactive English. So yes, I want it to be interactive. I want to hear from you. So let's let's go ahead and begin with the first one. Where is it? Right here. Okay. So this is uh the way I've done this. I'm giving you the sentence and there's one blank and in that blank space I'm giving you a synonym. So you see the picture, the guy stepping on some gum and it says, "I can't believe I made such a mistake." So in that blank, I had the word large.

Okay, we're not talking about a large mistake. What is the common collocation? Large is a synonym for this word and then I'll give you the answer and highlight the collocation. So, in this context, and I've tried to give you pictures to kind of put yourself in that in that situation if this happened to you, like, oh gosh, this was a mistake. All right, excellent. Um, so yes, Lai, good to see you. Uh, Sleepwalker, um, Vivian, Angela, the the correct answer is big. Now I also saw Tayo I also saw Teayo wrote huge a huge mistake I would say that is another uh another collocation if you're talking about a mistake probably big and huge are the more common words the difference would be huge is more it gives a little more emphasis so you have a big mistake if you have a huge mistake then yes it's just that much greater but I'd think huge is also um also relevant. So again, you you get the idea now. What I want you to do the collocation in this case, big mistake. All right. So the next one, uh some of these I think this one I think is maybe a little easier. Some of them I think will get a little more challenging. Um here we go. So you you see this ice cream there? Well, you only see three right there, but it says you can choose from a mr range of possibilities. An range of possibilities. In that blank space, I put the word broad. So, broad is not the answer. Broad is a synonym for this other word which is part of the collocation. All right? It's a It's a commonly used phrase. And yeah, I think uh because collocations, these words are often used together. You guys are doing great. I think you're probably more familiar uh with some of these phrases.

Uh excellent, Lai, Teao, Vicki, Gustav, good to see you. Um so another word for broad which would fit this sentence and is part of the the collocation is wide. Many of you wrote that answer. You got it. So, we're talking about you can choose from a wide range of possibilities. So, wide range of something. I should include of in there as well. A wide range of something is a common collocation when talking about um you know this degree like this range that you can choose from. All right. So, I did want to make a quick announcement. If you um you know want to have a wide range of possibilities when learning English, one thing you can do is join join our email community right there. I'll send you some cool stuff from from time to time. You can be a part be a part of the interactive English family. Um some send you some videos uh some ebooks as well as like course discounts things coming up. So you can check that out. Link is down below. Um here's the next one. All right, while we're at it, we're going to just run right through these. So, you see the picture, there's an airplane there, and somebody would say something like, "Next week, um, I'm going to m a flight to New York." I'm going to m a flight to New York. So, the the word that I put in there, the synonym, I just say get. So, you're not going to say I'm going to get a flight to New York. I mean, you can. It's not very common, but there are there's one collocation that I'm looking at. There's actually again there are other answers as well. I'm I'm noticing that because you guys are putting some of the other ones in there. So, there are different ways that you can you can say this. Um, but uh I think you guys put one of them in there, which is uh perfect. So in

Um, it's just metam. Nice. I didn't see too many catches in there. I thought as soon as I started seeing take uh Vivian yeah as soon as I started seeing take I was like okay yes but take that's that's a good answer as well take is a good answer I [snorts] will accept that the next collocation well the next question that I have for you right here you can see this picture very dangerous so if somebody if there is a I don't know you're in a dangerous situation or just some environment and somebody says we should go if we stay here we we're in m danger danger the synonym that I to help you out threatening okay so something is is threatening danger I'm basically telling you what the danger is part of the collocation so in this situation somebody's like look we should go if we stay here we're and m danger. Which word goes before danger? This is an adjective. Um, again, I think there probably are some others. Um, even if it's not the answer I give you, there may be other words that could fit in here just fine. Um, but there is one particular one particular answer that I am looking for. And again, please write your answer in the chat. I love hearing from you. I want you guys participating. Don't see too many not everybody is as quick to answer this question. Uh which maybe hopefully then it's new for for some of you. Um I see a couple of correct answers. Yes, Sleepwalker. Uh Aika. Um the the the answer that I was looking for was grave.

So, we should go. We are uh we're in grave danger. If you're in grave danger that it's it's very serious and it's very well, like I said, it's threatening. All right, you're in grave danger. Um grave was the one that we're we're looking for, but there are other adjectives that you could use um with danger. I saw some people put mortal in there. Mortal danger is another collocation. Um, are you ready? So, here is the next one. And actually, in the the speaking course that I teach, we actually just talked about this word um last week. So, or this week is when we're talking about in this case, the lawyer won the case because she made a m argument. And many of you might be thinking, well, strong argument. Strong argument is a collocation. But this this is not the answer. I've strong is the synonym. So I want you to think of another collocation with argument. You can make a strong argument. That is a good collocation. But think about uh what other word could you use? And and in that context, somebody who is a lawyer, they want you to believe what they're saying. They're trying to convince you of something and they're trying to make a m argument.

So strong, it's not strong, not strong, but what's another way that you can say this when you're talking about an argument? Okay. So again, I don't see before everybody was giving all the same answers. Now I see uh um some different answers. So you could say um I think a strong argument is a common collocation. A convincing argument is another collocation. Those words are commonly used together. But the answer that we were looking for is compelling. So Bokai Bokai Wang Tayo Vicky Gustav excellent. Um um Jacinder uh is that let's let me just go right here. Ah um is that I don't know maybe Christian. I'm not sure. Everybody has different user uh names out there. So, we're talking about compelling. So, a compelling argument is it is another it's a strong argument, but really gives good reasons um as to why you should believe them. And it's like, wow, that that's um a compelling argument. So, compelling argument, strong argument, um convincing argument, those are all collocations. But in this case, I was looking for the word compelling. It is a good, it is a great adjective, I should say. If something is compelling, so compelling uh somebody that compelling means that that there it's basically convincing because there are strong good reasons for it. So this like if you're talking about a compelling argument, they're giving good reasons as to why you should believe them. It's compelling. The next one, [snorts] um, I think this one's relevant in the the United States, in many countries in Europe. Um, people are mivided along political lines. So the people are mivided along political lines. The synonym that I'm giving you are the word that I'm giving you intensely. So it's not intensely divided but what else? It's a common collocation. Um intensely is just a a synonym for this. So people are divided along political lines. And this one I think is I I think this is one that uh you will hear quite often um especially in this context talking about politics. So have some [laughter] of course you know that there should be uh it is an adverb that should go in there. Um one of these ly words. Uh I see couple of correct answers. the the answer that I'm was looking for is deeply. If you're talking about um being divided, you could say people are deeply divided along political lines. Uh so if if you're talking about people or groups of people and you say they are deeply divided, then they really do not agree with each other at all. So deeply divided uh is the collocation that I was looking for. But again, like I said, you could use other adjectives in there. Um, extremely divided would be another phrase that people might say. So, but in this case, I was just looking for deeply. People are deeply divided. So, hopefully, again, if uh even if you didn't get that, hopefully some of these are familiar that you recognize it when I give you the answer and say, "Oh, yes, deeply divided. I've heard that before." Again, collocations.

So it could be used in different ways but either way it is a great collocation crystal clear. The next one because I have several more is right here. If somebody were to say um maybe think of it the context you're giving a presentation and everybody's looking at you. So you're giving this presentation and you say I would like to m your attention to the graph and the word that I'm giving you the synonym is bring but you don't want to you wouldn't say I don't I want to bring your attention to there's a a word in there that you would commonly use in this situation. your I don't want to I almost keep giving away the word but I would like to m your attention to the graph and the word that I gave you is bring um so I think many of you oh cut this so again in this case um we're talking about drawing someone's attention to something so this is I think a common phrase that you would hear If somebody's trying to tell you, hey, I want you to look at this right now. Like, I would like to draw your attention to this thing that I'm pointing at, this graph, this word, whatever it is that you're trying to explain that you want other people to notice, to look at. I would like to draw your attention to something, to draw someone's attention to something. Um, so I think many of you got that, but be careful because I know like paying attention that is another collocation that you're listening, but in this situation, you would like to draw your attention to something like bring your attention over here and focus on that.

Um, I hope that makes sense. So the next one, here we are. Um, you see this guy on the phone, uh, looks very frustrated, looks, um, imagine he's saying this to somebody else. The person he's talking to, it's very upset. He maybe does not want to hear anymore. And he says, "I believe I have heard m enough." And the word the synonym that I have for you is entirely. But you're not going to say entirely enough. That is um that's not really that's not a collocation. But the one that I'm going to tell you that is definitely a collocation. In this situation, somebody's like, I I don't want to listen to you anymore. I have heard enough.

And this one uh I do think is pretty common. I don't know if I can really think of other collocations that would go before enough um in this particular context, but I saw a lot of great answers. Anetta, Vicky, Gustav, um Aika, the the answer is quite. And again, I'm trying to give you the context to make it easier. If somebody's a little frustrated, they're upset, they don't want to listen anymore, they say, "Look, I've heard quite enough." And that um would be the collocation. Quite enough. And in this case, again, you're you're kind of fed up. You're not Yeah, we've I've had quite enough. I've had quite enough of it. I'm not going to take it anymore. [gasps] Then we have where is it? Right here.

Um, we've been here for for hours. So, these people are waiting. We've been here for hours. This is a complete m of time. I think this one is very common. I'm sure you've probably heard it before, but still, it's a great collocation to know, one that you can use. the the synonym that I put in there was misuse, but you we're not going to say this has been a complete misuse of time, even though you could say it. It's more common to use another word instead, which again is a very common collocation. So, which word would you use in there? Um, you've been waiting around for um you you've been waiting around quite a long time and you don't want to wait anymore. You're basically you're you're a little upset by it. So, let's see. Okay. I I think most of you got that. We're talking about waste. Okay. A waste of time. So, if something is a waste of time that you just don't believe that um this is important, that this is valuable at all, and you say, "Wow, it's such a waste of time." So, this one, you guys rock this one out of the ballpark. Excellent. Um, but I told you this is a very common collocation when talking about time, a waste of time. Then we have, um, think of this situation. This person, you see, they're holding their knee. They're in pain. They fell down. And I could say he was in pain after he fell down. And the word, the synonym that I'm giving you, terrible. But I don't want you, we're not going to say terrible pain.

Um, he was in pain after he fell down. So, what's another synonym in this case um for terrible? What could you say? This is a word that you would often find with pain. And it's another one that I think is common that I'm guessing you've probably heard this before. uh see these these answers rolling right in. Um so it makes me think yes, this one was a little easier. So we're talking about excruciating excruciating pain um really emphasizes how um how painful it is. And again that when talking about pain there are other um collocations. You could say that um somebody was in great pain or maybe there they had severe pain. So there are a lot of other words that you can use but in this case if you want to say um something you know add emphasis to it and talk about excruciating pain um is something that's really serious. It's really bad. So like, oh, he was in excruciating pain after he fell down.

That was that was the collocation that we're looking for. So hopefully maybe this one would be new for you if you if you didn't know it. Excruciating pain. Then um you have we have this picture of a nice little steak dinner. And if somebody were to say like maybe you are the customer at the restaurant um maybe I'm the server or perhaps uh I've been here before and we're friends. We're eating there. Oh, you should get the steak. People recommend it. Another one that I'm pretty sure you've heard before. The the synonym that I'm giving you is greatly. But you're not going to say people greatly recommend it. Instead, you're going to say people recommended. Another adverb very common when talking about recommend. And just throw out some. You guys are rocking this one too. Sleepwalkers, Feta, Lai, uh, Natada, Muffin, Bang, Anora, Anetta.

Um, so many so many good answers for this one. Yes. So, the we're looking for um Vicki, Gustav, Moses, highly. Highly is the word um the adverb. So if we're talking about recommending something and you are passionate about it, this is a word that you would often use like oh I highly recommend this or I really I highly recommend that you do something or experience something or try something and you highly recommend it. So it really adds a lot more emphasis to it. So it's a great collocation great collocation to know. Then I have another sentence for you. We're going through going through quite a few uh collocations today.

So they're shaking hands and I could say we really need to m the deal today. There are actually two collocations that I can think of with this one. So the the synonym that I'm giving you is finish. All right? So I'm not going to say we we really need to finish the deal today. You can say that. Sure. But there are uh there's another collocation that I'm thinking of. Um and there's actually there there's two other words that you could use. We really need to m the deal today. So we're talking about finishing this deal. What's another way that somebody can say that without finishing without saying finishing the deal? Um there's I told you there's two different answers that I think would be pretty common. other common collocations. You guys are you guys basically got both of them. So the the one that I put down here, we need to close the deal today.

Or the other one that I was thinking of seal the deal. Either one of those to close the deal. To seal the deal, it means we need to get this finished and have it over with and done with. So you could say we really need to close this deal today or we really need to seal the deal today and it's finished. It's complete and it's over. Uh, you guys did great on that one. Let's Let's do another while we're still here. All right. So, here, this one maybe is a little maybe this one's a little more difficult. We'll see. So, the picture says speak truth. But if somebody were saying this to you, put yourself in this situation. If I'm telling you this, um, and I want you to be honest with me and I say, "Look, you can tell me the truth.

I want you to speak. And the synonym that I'm giving you is openly, but I'm not going to use openly. Again, speak openly. You may hear people use those words together. But there's another um there's another collocation that I that I have in mind. Um so what what would you say? I know. Uh, [laughter] [gasps] speak frankly. Yes, you could say that. Uh, that that also goes, but it's actually there's something else I'm thinking of. Um, that again, telling somebody, look, it's okay to tell the truth. Say what's on your mind. Um, but yeah, I see frankly would work, but the collocation that I was looking for was freely. I want you to speak freely. And you can say what's on your mind. Don't worry about getting in trouble. Um, but you could tell somebody like, look, I want you to speak frankly. Um, and be honest. Tell me what happened or speak freely. Like, don't be afraid um of what somebody else is going to say. And there again, you could also say, I think honestly, uh, that also works. I'd like you to speak honestly. Um, that's another one. Thanks for throwing that in there, Vicky Gustaf. Uh, so yeah, there again, like with many of these, there are other words that you could put in there. Um, but very, very useful, very useful phrases. And then I have a double for you. Okay, there's two in here. Um, so this person looks, you can see in the picture, very happy. Uh, they look very healthy. And it says, "We're happy to report that he had a m and m recovery." So the two words in the blanks, a m and m recovery, one of them is fast. A fast recovery and a complete recovery. But I don't want you to say fast and complete. Those are just the synonyms. So instead of saying a fast and complete recovery, we're happy to report that he had a m and recovery.

What are those ms that I'm I'm saying? So these are again words that you would use with uh when talking about a recovery. So there are two that I want you to try to think of um in this case. So what do you guys you guys are [laughter] doing great doing great. Um please if you guys are getting these like hit hit that like button let me know let me know that you guys are uh getting the correct answer. It kind of tells me tells me that we are on the right track. Um so I think you guys uh got this. So, if you're talking about recovery, the first one, fast, I think there are two that you could that you could use. A quick recovery or a speedy recovery is another one. And that's actually the the answer that I was looking for. You could say quick um or speedy, but I said speedy instead of a complete recovery. This is a very, I think, common collocation talking about a full recovery. So, we're happy to report that he had a speedy and full recovery. All right. So, if you if you guys if you were if you got many of these, let me know. Hit that like button. Or even if you learned some new collocations, um, hit that like button. Uh, always helps me spread the word, spread these lessons. You can also let me know in the comments how you did. I'm always interested to hear how well people did. These are all of the collocations that we talked about today. There were 15 questions. um in total and these are all I believe there were 15 questions but these are all the collocations from today's lesson um for those who are the like members patron subs sub subscribers I will email I will will I will put these up there for you guys to have so again this vocabulary up with other collocations. Like I said, there was more than one answer to many of these questions. and thinking of them. But this is great. Just gets the vocabulary juices flowing, which is what I want. So, I just want to wrap things up and tell you I hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend. Um, and I will see you guys next time. Quick, some quick goodbyes. Goodbye. Uh, Lai, Vicky, Gustav, to Kaio, thank you for joining me. Sleepwalker, um, Muffin, uh, Yakbin, Angela, uh, so many familiar faces. Casia Sveta, thank you guys. All right, I gotta go now. Um, I

English Expressions that are all related to babies to cry like a baby if you say that somebody is crying like a baby then that that just means that they are crying and I often think we use it in the context that somebody is complaining about something I remember just crying like a baby crying like a baby or crying like someone in college what are you complaining about to sleep like a baby and and what it means is just to sleep really well she will sleep like a baby and sleep really well at least that's what I'm hoping when it's done I'm going to sleep like a baby you ready to continue the lesson to have a food baby and what this means is that when somebody eats a lot of food they eat a very big meal too much they might say I have a food baby oh March I'm giving birth to a food baby

Useful English Expressions | Rain, Rain, Rain

It's raining outside. Which means... It's a good time to talk about some rainy expressions. So today I have to go out and run some errands. And because it is raining outside, I thought this would be a good time to talk to you about four different rainy English expressions. The first one that I want to talk to you about is an idiom. And that idiom is...

Now this is an idiom used to just say that it is raining outside. But usually it is talking about very heavy rain. When it's pouring down outside, you would say it's raining cats and dogs. And right now, it's not really raining cats and dogs, but it is kind of raining sideways, which kind of sucks. Boy sure is raining cats and dogs. When it's raining cats and dogs outside, and the rain... Is that alright. Just...raining cats and dogs there. I just soon not go back in it. Coming down like cats and dogs.

The next rainy expression is... And this just means to say or do something that ruins somebody's plans. So for example, maybe you are very excited about seeing a movie and then your friend, who has seen the movie, tells you it's really bad. And now you're just not as excited about it because your friend rained on your parade. So, it's not good to rain on somebody's parade. Try not to do it. Hey, don't rain on my parade. Junior, nobody's raining on your parade. I'm just keeping an eye on her for a while. Don't rain on my parade, okay. Because I'm living my dream. Hate to rain on your parade pal, but we thought we'd even the odds.

Hey man, I don't want to rain on your parade but we're not going to last 17 hours. The next one that I want to tell you about is an expression. And that expression is... And this just means that when something happens, it is immediately followed by something else. And usually it's talking about something bad or negative. So for example, say that you get into a car accident. And then right after that you learn that your home was broken into. And those are two bad things. And you could say, "You know. When it rains it pours." And it can also be used to talk about things that are positive as well.

When two things happen one right after the other. When it rains it pours. When it rains it pours. Let's get you cleaned up and home. When it rains it pours. When it rains it pours, huh. When it rains it pours. The final rainy expression is... And this just means to keep something, usually something of value. And that's usually money. And you are saving it for a time when it is really, really, really...absolutely needed. And you must have it. You save it for a rainy day. So set some aside. Save it for a rainy day. I was...I was going to save this for a rainy day. Jesus! My mom taught me to save for rainy day.

Save it for a rainy day. So there you have it. Those are four English expressions that have to do with the rain. So now, we'd like to hear from you. And in the comments, let us know what you like to do when it is raining outside. Usually I like to stay in and watch some movies. But today I had to go out and get a few things from the grocery store. So, let us know what you like to do. We love hearing from you guys. Thanks for watching, and we'll see you next time.

Useful Expressions & Idioms All About HOME

Today, we're talking about home expressions and home idioms. Right now, we're in my hometown for the holidays. This is the city where I was born and spend first 15 years of my life. And after that, I moved to the US. But because we're here...because this is still my home, we are doing some expressions about home and idioms about home. How does it feel to be home? It's okay So Ioana is going to give us the grand tour of Timisoara. Ooh, Donuterie. Whoa! Jesus, what's going on? Attack of the pigeons. The first expression I want to talk to you about is "Home sweet home." And this is something we say after...maybe we've been traveling a little bit, and we finally get home, and we have the nice feeling that we belong in this place.

Home sweet home. Do you feel home sweet home? I feel home. Another expression that is very similar in meaning to home sweet home is "There is no place like home." And this means that home is the best place where you can be. It doesn't matter how far and wide you travel, you always love to come back home. I believe this comes from the Wizard of Oz. It's a quote about Kansas. When Dorothy traveled to Oz and she kept wanting to go back to Kansas. There's no place like home. I don't understand why Dorothy wanted to go back to Kansas because, honestly, Oz sounds like a much better place. But whatever - to Dorothy there is no place like home.

There's no place like home. What happens in the movie? In the movie, I don't know. In the book she ends up going back to Kansas. How? She...with her silver shoes I don't have...I'm not Dorothy. There's no place like home. You're supposed to click them. Oh. I don't know why she does it. I think she like jumps up and then says there's no place like home. That looked like a jumping jack. Probably one of my all-time favorites is there... Wait! What's the expression? Oh, home is... Another great expression, which is probably one of my favorites, is "Home is where the heart is." And this has nothing to do with a physical place.

But everything to do with inside. And what I mean to say by that is any place you are in the world that you love, or any person that you're with that you love, you feel home with them. You feel comfortable with them. You love that place, and it feels good. It feels right. And that's what it means. Home is where the heart is.

The next expression I want to talk to you about is a "Homebody." It's really just a word. A homebody is a word used to describe a person who likes to stay home. They don't like traveling. They don't like, maybe going out, being social. They just like to stay home, be cozy with a blanket and a book, maybe. That's a homebody. Just somebody who really enjoys staying home. What's that big building in front of us? The Opera House. What? The Opera House. This is how the people of Timisoara get their water. Should we...should we go by there? Because we haven't been.

Our next expression is "Nothing to write home about." And to put it in one word, it kind of means meh. Which...it's usually what we're talking about reviews. Like we're reviewing a movie that we saw or we're talking about a drink that you just tried. And somebody asks you, "How was it?" And you say nothing to write home about. It just means it wasn't horrible, but it wasn't great either. It was just kind of...meh.

Our next expression is something that "Hits home." And this means something that you can resonate with. Something that you can relate to. For example, if somebody makes a comment and you have...maybe a childhood experience with that, you can say "It just really hits home." It means that it affected you, and you can really resonate with that. And many, many, times it is negative. It hits home.

Our next expression is "A home away from home." And this refers to a place. It's a place that is not physically your home. But just a place that feels very very comfortable just like home does. And it can be, you know, if you're living in another country that can be your home away from home. Another example is if somebody's always working and they really, really, really enjoy working, maybe their office is their home away home.

Another home expression is "Home team." And this is a sports expression. And it means...it usually refers to some kind of sports team that is in your hometown. Whether it's basketball, baseball, football, soccer, soccer, or whatever, your home team is the team that is from your hometown. What's Timisoara's home team? Oh gosh...it's Poli. Poli Timsoara. It's a football...a soccer team. Alright. Are you a big fan? I...no. It's your home team. We hope you enjoyed this video about home expressions and home idioms. And now we want to hear from you. So please, please, please in the comments below, tell us about your home town. Things you like about it. What's there to do?

Please share. We always love hearing about our students and their lives and culture. Thank you so much. And I'll see you next time. Bye.

LESSON 657 OF 749

Useful Expressions to Tell a Great Story | Time Order Words

Previously on interactive English. Which answer best completes the sentence? I would be 88 years old. All right. Whoa, Whoa, Whoa, Whoa. That's not what we're talking about today. Today I'm going to teach you all about time order words. Hey everyone. My name is Wes. This is interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English and that is what you want to do. Subscribe to our channel. We put out lessons every week that will help you take your English to the next level. In today's lesson, I want to talk to you about time order words, which are so important to help you improve your speaking fluency. And the reason I say this is because we use time order words when when we're telling a story, we use them when we're giving a presentation because these are words and phrases that transition between different events and ideas and they help people follow along with with what another person is saying. So I've broken this lesson down into a few different categories, which you can see here. So first we're going to talk about before, what are some different ways that you can discuss the things that happened before an event or before the story that you're getting ready to talk about. Then we will discuss first, all right, how, what are some different ways that you can say first when you want to begin your story or begin your presentation. Then we'll look at different ways in which you can say next, how you transition from one idea to the next as well as some different ways you can say sometimes. And then last we're going to talk about last and and some of the useful ways that you can tell people that your story is coming to an end.

Your presentation is coming to an end and you want to tell them what happens last. Let's begin with before and the very first word that I said in this lesson previously. That is the first time order word I want to talk to you about. And when you say previously what you're talking about is the events that happen before and you're kind of recapping the information from before so that people have a better idea of what you want to tell them right now. And when I think of the word previously, I think it's often used in TV shows when you're watching a series and they want to remind you about everything that happened before.

You might hear that word previously and I always remember the show lost. I don't know if you've ever seen that show, but it would always begin on lost muesli on lost previously on lost. And then it would tell you about all the events that happened before so that you, you are ready to watch the show now. But you can also use this when you're talking about maybe maybe you're giving a presentation about research that you did and you want to tell them some of the things you did before you started doing the research. So you might say, well previously we identified the different methods we wanted to use it for collecting the information. And you would tell people this so that they understand the research that you want to present to them. Another common phrase is not long ago and if you say not long ago, then you're talking about the recent past, and this may vary.

It could mean a few hours, it could mean a few days. You really just have to put it in context when somebody says, well, not long ago, something happened and that's going to help you understand what the person wants to tell you right now. Or if you're talking about something that happened a long time ago, then you're talking about very far in the past could be hundreds of years, thousands of years, a long time ago in a galaxy far, far away, and if that sounds familiar and it should, it's because that's how star Wars begins. The key word that I want you to focus on is a go because this is also where I think learners make simple mistakes. I've often heard learners say things like, Oh two days before or three weeks before I did this thing and I would have to remind them that in that case they want to use a go two days ago, three weeks ago when you want to talk about the past and say that something happened before. Another great time order word is prior to and when you use prior to you actually want to use it with some event or something that took place. So for example, you could say prior to the meeting we had a conference call in which we discussed our yearly goals. So before the meeting, prior to the meeting something happened, and again you need to say the event that it is prior to the start of school, prior to the soccer match, something happened prior to filming this lesson, I was doing a live lesson and that is that is a true story.

We do live lessons on Saturdays. You guys should check those out if you haven't already. Now let's look at first when you want to begin your presentation or begin the story that you are going to tell others. You can use the phrase in the beginning or at the beginning. Often these may be used interchangeably but there is a slight difference at the beginning would refer more to a specific time whereas in the beginning would be talking about a time period in general. Let me give you a couple examples. So I could say at the beginning of class I was sitting in the front row, so that is talking about a very specific point in time.

At the beginning of class this is where I was sitting and then if I wanted to use in the beginning I could say, you know in the beginning class was so boring, so dull, but then it got super exciting and we were all so thrilled to be learning some new things and I hope you guys are thrilled to be learning time order words and if you are let know, hit that like button. So in that example, I am not talking about a specific point in class, just kind of referring to the beginning of class in general. So that is one difference between at the beginning and in the beginning. Then we have the phrase at the onset and onset just means you know the start of something and you want to say at the onset when you want to say those things that happen first. Often this is followed by the preposition of at the onset of winter, the temperatures were really cold at the onset of this lesson I, I did a little parody off of lost when I said previously on interactive English at the onset of the lesson. Okay. All right. All right. Let's, let's just move on to the next phrase or phrases and that is from this point on or you could say from that point on, and again they are a bit different. So when you say from this point on you were talking about right now you are having a conversation with somebody and you're telling him from this point on, I will be completely honest.

Now if you're talking about that, which is often referring to like a distance, something that's farther away, you can use that when talking about things either in the past or the future. So if we're talking about the past, I could say from that point on, I've been completely honest. It happened at some indefinite point in the past, which is why I use the present perfect. But still it happened in the past. From that point on, I've been completely honest or if I want to express this and say it in the future, maybe I'm talking about some 0.2 days from now and I'd say, okay, you know, from that point on, I will be completely honest with you.

From that point on, I'll be completely honest. Now let's look at some words and phrases in which we can say next, which is a very popular and common word. When you want to transition from one idea to the next, some very common words, which I think many of you already know are our words like after then or later. And I don't want to focus on those too much because I think it's a bit easy. You probably know how to use these when transitioning from one idea to the next, but we can add a word to make it a little more precise. For example, let's take after and I could add the word right, right after and when I say that something happens right after then that that gives you more information, you know that that it happened immediately. Right after I got to work, my boss just started yelling at me. If I want to use another phrase that has the same meaning, you could say as soon as, and as soon as again, it means that something happened immediately. As soon as I got to work, my boss started yelling at me. We can also add another word which has a similar meaning and that is soon after. Now the difference between right after and soon after would be just that that time period. If somebody says right after, I think it's immediately soon after means, well, some general time period in the beginning, soon after, so right after I got to work, my boss started yelling at me and then soon after he yelled at me, I just quit.

I stopped, I went home and then we can add a different word, which is shortly, shortly after, and that really just has the same meaning as soon after you're talking about something that happens in that general time period of the beginning. Shortly after, and I could continue this story and say shortly after I quit my job, I found another one her, me. Then we have consequently, now this is a word that's used to say that something happened as a result of something else. So it is similar in that you're, you're saying something happened next, but it's specific in that it's a result of another thing happening. So consequently in that case is very similar to saying. Therefore for example, maybe I am going to play a football match outside and it starts raining and I could say, well you know, it started raining and consequently we had to cancel the match. So canceling the match was a result of it raining. So I can use consequently to connect those two things and say that canceling the match happened. Next, it started raining.

Consequently we had to cancel the match. Now let's look at some different ways to say sometimes, which is a very common adverb of frequency because things don't always happen. Sometimes they don't never happen. I'm using it right now. You just want to say things happen sometimes and I want to teach you three phrases that you can use and you can use them interchangeably and it they just mean the same thing. So the first one is from time to time, from time to time, I like to eat pizza, which, which is true from time to time. I like to eat pizza.

Another great way of saying this is to use the word occasionally. Occasionally I like to go for walks outside. Yeah, it's something I like to do. It relaxes me. I enjoy it. I like to do that occasionally. We can also use the phrase every now and then, same meaning sometimes every now and then I what? Every now and then I make eggs for breakfast. Also a true story. I don't always do it. I just do it every now and then. Occasionally I'll, I'll also have cereal and from time to time I'll eat oatmeal. All right, so those are some great examples and now you know what I like to eat for breakfast and finally we come to last.

When you want to say what's happening at the very end you want to say what happens last? I already used one of the words that I wanted to tell you and that is finally so a good way when you start to end a presentation or you end a story, you can use either one of those last or finally. Another way of saying that is just you know at last, at last something happens and when you hear that phrase at last, then again that tells you, okay, we're at the end. Personally, I noticed that I, I like to use finally when I'm going to wrap something up and bring it to an end. I just say finally most of the time I don't really say last, I'm not really sure why, but I just prefer to use finally another way that you can say it and I think it's a little more professional. You would probably hear it in presentations or maybe if you're reading an essay, somebody might say in conclusion in conclusion and then they will give you the end of whatever, whatever it is. But like I said, I think it's something that's more common in a presentation in a more formal setting. People might say in conclusion and then tell you the end of their presentation and I want to throw another one in there and that is eventually, and you can use this to talk about things that happened at the end often as a result of something else. Eventually this thing happened and when we use eventually it does. It makes me think of the end. There is some kind of closure. Eventually this is what happened. For example, I could say that, well my my friend, they got really sick. They, they were in the hospital, they were there for some time and they had to take some medication but eventually they got better.

And in that case I think eventually is a word that you would hear more in just everyday conversation when somebody's talking about you know, the events in their life and things that happen and when you want to bring it to an end and talk about what happened last, you could use eventually. Eventually this thing happened. So prior to this lesson I was reviewing my notes and in the beginning I was really trying to stress to you the importance of time order words that they're so useful for your speaking fluency when you're giving a presentation, when you're telling a story. And consequently, I hope that you've learned some new words that you can then go out and use when, when you're having a conversation and trying to tell your own story because you will use these words from time to time.

I promise you every now and then you're going to need these time order words and phrases. So in conclusion, I'm just trying to use these words again so that you can see how they're used and just to show you that yes, they are very important. They're very useful when you're having a conversation or even in a more formal setting like work or school when you're giving a presentation. So let's practice a little bit in the comments. I want you to tell me about your day. What did you do today? And I want you to use some of these time order words. I look forward to reading about your day and learning a little bit more about you, just as you guys have learned about me, as such as the things I like to eat for breakfast. All right.

Thank you guys so much for watching. I hope you learned something new and I will see you next time.

Useful Food Idioms for Delicious English Fun

Are you hungry? I hope you are. Hungry for knowledge. Thought that wink would come out better. I thought I'd have a sexy wink. It just looks like I have something in my eye. So let's learn some food idioms. If you want to improve your English, have fun, and learn even more idioms, subscribe to our YouTube channel. We love making these videos to help our students improve their English skills Today we are talking about some super-common food idioms.

Now when I was preparing for this lesson, there were so, so many food idioms to choose from. But these ones are the ones that I heard again, and again, and again. So they're very, very common. You can hear them everywhere. And it's fun because who doesn't like to talk about food. Yeah exactly. Everyone likes to talk about food. Now, I'm going to do my disclaimer that I do for every idiom video that I make. You can use idioms at any time. You can use these idioms at anytime. But just keep in mind that idioms are a little bit more informal. Don't use them on job applications or any kind of formal English context.

So keep that in mind and come on. Let's have some fun with food idioms. The first one, number one, is bread and butter. One of my favorite food combinations. I'm going to say that a lot in this video because I kind of love all food, especially good food. You know. Like good bread and good butter. Well bread and butter means somebody's main source of income. It just means how somebody makes their money, their main source of income. For example, for Wes and I teaching is our bread and butter.

Number two...cool as a cucumber. I love this one because cucumbers are among my favorite vegetables. And I am always cool as a cucumber. No, I'm not. Because somebody who's cool as a cucumber is calm and relaxed. And I am known to be a little stressed sometimes. So I always tell myself, Ioana, be cool as a cucumber. And it works like half the time. But that's what it means, very calm and relaxed.

Number three...not my cup of tea. And this means it's just something that you are not interested in or something that you just don't like. Naturally, I love tea. Oh, maybe I should... I'm back in... Now this is my cup of tea, and it's huge. As you can see it's as big as my face. And I love tea, so having tea is my cup of tea. But...if that makes sense...I'm just going to... I'm sorry if that's confusing. I'll give you another example. Hold on. I need to have my tea. Number four...in a nutshell. And in a nutshell means in the fewest possible words. So if you can imagine a little nutshell. It's very, very small.

I'm imagining like a little pistachio They're very, very small. So in a nutshell just means very little. Saying something in as few words as you can. Number five...to put all your eggs in one basket. This is a piece of advice which means that you shouldn't concentrate all of your efforts and resources in one area. Because that means that you could lose everything. And it could refer to anything from feelings to money to hopes and dreams, and things like that. So don't put all of your eggs in one basket. Number six...spice things up. Notice how I said that. This one gets me happy because I love spices. Of course, I told you I live food.

But to spice things up means to change things. Change a boring routine into something more exciting. To change things up. This expression is commonly found when we're talking about relationships. And I mean romantic relationships. Maybe sometimes you want to spice things up. And you want to do something different like go on a vacation or do something crazy with your loved one. So to spice things up means to make things a little bit more exciting and different than you normally do. Number seven...bring home the bacon.

Now, I'm not a huge fan of bacon and I know a lot of people are going to be like, "What? Ioana, are you crazy? Why don't you like bacon?" I don't really like it. But I'm a huge fan of this idiom. To bring home the bacon doesn't refer to actual bacon, but instead to material success like money. Bring money. Make money. That is really what it means. Bring home the bacon. Bring home the money. Make money. That's what it's about. I don't know why I got so excited. I don't even really like bacon that much. Number eight is a lemon. And I have a story about this one. When I was younger, I didn't really know what a lemon was supposed to be.

And I kept hearing car commercials. And they kept talking about, "You won't get a lemon." And I just kept wondering what is going on. Why would I want a lemon?" Why would I buy a lemon at the car dealer? It was very confusing until I found out later that a lemon is something that doesn't work very well. Usually we talk about lemons when we refer to machines or cars. So a car that just doesn't work very well, it's just called a lemon. I don't really hear it about people. Like we don't say, "Oh that person's a lemon." It's mostly about things that don't work. You do not want to buy a lemon.

Number nine...spill the beans. Now this means to reveal secret information. But you don't just reveal it, you kind of do it in discreetly or by mistake. That's like when you're spilling something. It's not usually intentional. So it's not something that you want to do to spill the beans. It's just like you don't want to spill beans. You don't want that. You got a mess. And number ten, our final one for today, is cheesy.

Now you're probably thinking cheesy is good. Right? Who doesn't love cheese? Cheese is great. So cheesy must be even better. But it's not. It actually doesn't have a good connotation. Something cheesy is usually inferior, or cheap, or of low quality. Now cheesy can be used to describe many things from feelings to people to objects. So you can have a cheesy smile, which is not good. Or you can have a cheesy outfit, which is also not good. Or maybe you can have or say a cheesy pick-up line, which is really, really not good. So even though we love cheese, we do not want to be cheesy. I've said this word so much that now I really, really, really want some cheese.

Okay, so now that you've learned all of these ten new, beautiful, fabulous food idioms, I want you to use them. So please, please, please write a sentence in the comments using one of these wonderful 10 food idioms that we learned today. And if you want to choose more than one, go crazy. Choose two or three. You are more likely to remember these words. In fact, I guarantee that you'll remember them. And if you want even more practice, join our social media classes. They are so much fun, and you will learn so much. So do it. Join it. Join! Now I hope you've enjoyed this lesson and that now you will spice things up and use some of these idioms in your everyday conversations.

Thanks for watching, and I'll see you next time. Bye.

Useful Games to Help Practice & Improve Your English

hello hello hello I hope you guys are having an amazing fabulous wonderful day and I'm glad that you are joining us because we have a super super super awesome lesson today because we're gonna do something special we're gonna do something a little different than what we've been doing in the past so again if you're just joining us write your name in the comments let me know where you're joining us from and today without further ado we are going to talk about games okay but we're not just going to talk about games because that would not be nowhere near as fun we are actually going to play some games we're gonna play some different games so this lesson is good for people that are teachers of English because you know I think most of us pretty much all of us will play some games in the classroom but it's also good if you are an English learner and you want to practice your English because like I said we are going to play some games and I'm gonna test your knowledge and see what you guys know and you can practice your English as we go through these games so what's up everybody Marco how's it going good to see you amano mohamed yes men from Turkey excellent we got a lot of people from all over the place so this is really going to be a worldwide game that we are going to be playing today because people are from everywhere so and if you're watching this video later again you can play along as well write your answers in the comments this lesson will be for everyone so let's play some games well but before we do actually before we play some games I quickly want to talk well why should we play games okay so the first reason that I think we should play games is because the games are they create an interactive environment just just like that above me interactive English and we want these games they really get us involved in the learning process and the other thing it will do is it will encourage participation because oftentimes when we play a game students are in groups people and groups you have competition and you have to really participate in the activity in order to play the other thing that it does which is really really really really really important is it elicits critical thinking and this is so important because problem-solving really it really exercises our brain when we use problem-solving and that is basically what games do that's what games do for us they elicit our critical thinking another reason that one right there number four is that it increases our motivation you're more motivated to learn it's a better learning environment because well you're playing a game and you're more relaxed and you have fun well relaxed kind of number five which is that it lowers your anxiety because you're not worried about a test you're not worried about the right answer the wrong answer you're just playing the game and there's really not a right or wrong and you just have fun which is the last one it is we like games because they're fun which is why they exist which is why we play them so again if you guys are just joining us in the chat let us know let me know where you're from Felipe from Brazil welcome Mohammad Lata hello excellent we got a lot of people here davia jr. excellent good to have you guys here so today as I was saying we are going to play some games and I am going to ask you guys you guys are going to have to participate and give me some of the answers because that's that's kind of how these games are going to work so let's talk a little bit about what are some different games that we play again this is this can be useful for if you are a teacher of English or even an English Learner because again we're actually going to play some games and you really need to participate okay I'm watching alright so some of the different games what are some popular games I've just written down a few and again these are games maybe you are familiar with maybe if you don't know you could always google these games and see exactly how they're played Scrabble for language learning for English it's great for spelling pictionary again that that visual learning which is really good that's one of my favorite ones I would always do this I love to do this in the classroom I would take it a step further I would do animal pictionary and have people choose like two animals and they have to combine the animal they have to draw one animal that looks like two of the different ones and you have to guess the two animals so that was always fun charades where you're actually using motions again where you're making the gestures with your body memory game that's also good for exercising the vocabulary muscles when you learn new vocabulary words bingo of course hangman is another one kind of for especially like beginner learners where you're trying to get them to think of new words Simon Says again that's another one especially if you're learning parts of the body Simon Says touch your head Simon Says touch your feet and another one that's just more of a conversational one we have a lot of different games 2 truths 1 lie where you write down three things two of them are true one's a lie and everybody just has to guess which one is the lie and try to figure it out and it really is a communicative activity because you're doing a lot more speaking so these are some games that you can use in the classroom these are games that you can just play at home with your or your family but they are not the games that we are going to play today but so the games that we're gonna play well the first one is this one scattegories okay so scattegories so as you can see I'm gonna show you go over how to play it and then we are actually going to play it and you're gonna need to write your answers in the comments okay so how to place categories is pretty simple okay there is a list of categories and then you are given a letter or I am going to give you a letter and you have to think of a word that begins with that letter okay so it's pretty straightforward and the categories often most of the time in the classroom I would keep them pretty vague pretty general like those that I have listed like city food sport clothing name animal car country and they just have to think of a word that starts with that as part of that category so for example if I gave you the letter T and it was name then you would think of a name that starts with T like Tom or something like that okay so you can make these categories more specific depending on the level of the the classroom or your students or the learners but we're gonna keep them pretty vague right now today so are you guys ready alright so I'm just gonna give you one category and a letter and I just want you to UM poom-poom just write those words write as many words as you can that that apply alright so the first one is this okay so as you write them I'm gonna I'm gonna jot them down so city and your letter is B give me the name of a city that begins with the letter B and the idea is to write as many as many as you can alright so give me the name of a city that begins with the letter B as you guys go through this I am going to try I'm gonna try to write your names okay I'll write your answers all right Wow okay getting the answers already yes excellent but as Ilya Bulgaria excellent what else do we have ah Barcelona I was just there you wanted I were just there what's the name of a city again that starts with B alright so just write those in the chat remember wait wait Brazil's a country so know this we're just going for cities right now what are what's the name of some cities that start with C are not seeing B the letter B let me give you an American city that I think may be like Boston Boston is an American city we have butene city all right what else what else do you guys have are there any other cities that begin with B we have what are we a bad mom oh yeah Budapest perfect excellent alright so what are what are some other cities any other cities that start with B I'm just gonna jot a few more down ah good one that's a good one Bogota alright so I'm just writing down some of your hand so I'll try to whoops okay all right what are the Birmingham yeah that's another one that's in that's an Alabama excellent Bogor Indonesia alright excellent so you guys perfect Beijing excellent so there's a lot of different cities out there and typically we're playing in a little differently because usually you'd give all the categories and the groups would go through and they'd write one for each one and you try to finish as quickly as you can this one for this activity we're just again we're exercising our creative thinking trying to think of okay what are some different cities that begin with the letter B that was perfect alright so the next one that I have for you guys what I want you to do is let's do this one okay how about all right food with the letter C okay what are what are some foods what some food that begins with the letter C okay any any it could be any type of dish maybe even a meal or any just any kind of food that begins with the letter C and again I'm gonna write your answers in there excellent starting to get some already coconut perfect alright anything else what else do you guys got carrot excellent ooh excellent couscous uh cheesecake perfect that's one of my favorite desserts cheesecake what else what else do we have that starts with C oh that's a double point right there those are two points if you can give me two words chicken curry all right that's a that's double the points right there because you got two words cheese excellent very simple all right anything else that were that ah of course you want as favorite chocolate all right so perfect excellent so these are all food words that begin with the letter C and you guys this is something that it's often it's really fun to do with a group of people and you have one group against the other group and you go through and you try to write them as quick as quickly as you can and then you would count up the points usually you only give somebody maybe I don't know maybe less than a minute to think of them and then you count up the points and and see what's the one who's the winner so again there's a lot of them caviar chips cauliflower cupcakes another bonus word excellent so this is how to place categories it's a good one to play in the classroom to really get people thinking of vocabulary words that that start with that letter so it is a fun game to play I recommend it ok so again thank you if you just joined us we are well we're playing games because why not because it's a lot of fun if you like playing games remember hit that like button please also share this lesson once it's wrapped up so are you guys ready for the next game that I want to play with you and this is more this is definitely more of an English game I guess maybe you could do it in other languages but it's this game right here ok we're going to play mad libs now maybe you haven't heard of mad libs before it was popular in the United States a long time ago I don't know if it still is but the idea behind mad libs is that you take a story some paragraph and then you take words out of that story ok and for example say that you take an adjective out alright and then you give somebody a list of that words they have to think of maybe an adjective a noun kind of like the list I got it on there like a silly word a plural noun and somebody else will just they just think of words off the top of their head and then we take those words and we plug them back into the story and the end result is that it you get this funny story it's an entertaining story so marieeee interesting and fun and creative it's especially popular I think younger learners like children would love these activities and love these games so we're gonna give it a try all right so right now in the chat I want you to think of those those things right now tell me give me a silly word alright right down right right a silly word into the chat for times sake and then I'm gonna go ahead and start plugging some of these in so give me a silly word also right and adjectives all right right right some different adjectives in the chat so we can start collecting these words and then we'll plug them into the story okay so write an adjective also finally give me give me a plural noun okay so funny word alright jerk okay wonderful perfect alright give me give me some adjectives silly words this is perfect also a plural noun and remember a plural noun would be a noun that ends with s not always but like boys glasses pants or a plural noun could be an irregular one like people or children okay so write those in the comments that's another one snotty alright so let me show you the game alright so here let's see okay so here we have our mad libs game alright and we are going to play we're gonna do this one right here which is it's called sick note so I think most of us may be familiar with this idea is when you are sick at school when you're sick you you don't go to school and many times you have to bring a note to school saying you know what was the problem why were you not at school and it's a sick note you bring a sick note to school so we are going to do this sick note right here alright so I got some words that from you guys already let me see what else you got for me okay and then we're gonna put these in there so I also want you to think of an illness okay think of an illness that's another one that we need as well as a place okay let me figure that I'm gonna take a jerk and put it right here when we'll do jerk let's use snotty that was one I like down here I saw wonderful was a good adjective little also think of a name give me a name somebody give me a name could a name of a person could you know just a regular name or it could be the name of somebody famous all right any anybody any name these are some other things we need to fill in the rest of it okay so what do we have a headache okay headache that's good right now okay headache let's our oh wait I actually I like diarrhea mmm gosh I wonder mmm what else do we have named Stuart miss Chen I'll tire okay let me see what else we got here okay so let me fill in so named okay okay let's go with will go with Stuart all right Stuart can even give me a plural noun a place we need a number as well if somebody wants to write a number what else do we have here let's see Oh Taj Mahal okay I like that place okay we'll use that one Taj Mahal they spell it right okay so what else do we need we need a number we need a plural noun and another adjective give me another fun adjective all right just write those in the chat okay Fabio was first 118 all right another adjective and a plural noun and we will be set okay exquisite that's a good that's a good one all right what's a plural noun all right get somebody give me a plural noun cats dogs whatever box is exquisite okay and okay we're gonna go with kittens sure there we go all right so once we have this filled in and we have our list of words then we'll take it and we'll go go mad and then I'll read the story so says dear school nurse jerk Stewart will not be attending school today he has come down with a case of diarrhea and has horrible kittens and a and a wonderful fever we have made an appointment with the little doctor snotty who studied for many years at the Taj Mahal and has 18 degrees in pediatrics he will send you all the information you need thank you sincerely mrs. exquisite all right so as you can see it's kind of just a funny little paragraph or note I will put a link to these games in the comments afterwards in the description so you can kind of go check them out but it's a great game to play especially if you have a group of people and you are practicing especially like those parts of speech what like thing having people think of an adjective or a plural noun or a place it's it's a great way to use English in that way all right so the other game that I want to play with you guys is this one okay is jeopardy alright so this is it's actually it's a TV show type game some of you maybe you've played it but basically they you have different categories with points okay and the lower the point the easier the question the higher the point the more difficult the question and somebody would pick a category and a point value and then you get a question and you have to see if you can answer that and you must answer the question in order to get the points that's how we play jeopardy now jeopardy is a great it is a great great game I think when I've used this in the classroom students the everybody loves it it's great because you can work on a lot of different skills because you get to choose the categories the only thing is it is a little more work to put in but you know that's okay so let's play some

Jeopardy why don't we all right so let's see let me see if this works okay all right you guys you guys up there with me alright so you can see my jeopardy board I put in English jeopardy I whip this together this morning and we have one two three four five categories in five different point totals word sounds prepositions idioms what am I so in the chat somebody choose one which category and which point total do you want to use and I will click on that question okay so let's see who's first give me a category and a point total and again if you're watching this later you can you can play along with us use the comments as basically like a piece of paper write the answers down in there and then once it's done just hit comment submit the comment that way I know that you're you know you're participating you're participating in what's going on so okay

I have a double one there somebody said preposition preposition okay preposition 4:40 okay let's we'll do that one all right so preposition 440 I will just click on this okay some of these may be easy maybe they're difficult alright I don't know it says don't go take me you alright take me you what would you say is it around with or by what do you guys think the answer is write it in the comments okay what do you think don't go take me you all right we've got some good answers in there so let's then we can go in here and most of you said be with we can check out ding ding ding all right you got it the answer is B with okay very good so I saw somebody else had put words for for T so let's go look at this one right here all right okay what does it mean to perspire means to hmm what to perspire means to what do you think it is again there's a little time don't worry about the time write your answers in the comments in the chat and if you're watching it later on just yeah write your answers as we go through this that way I know you you were participating along with us and you weren't just you know just watching it so what does it mean to sweat to dance or to swim what do you guys think alright to perspire all right all right you guys whoa pretty everybody's pretty good so most people with a sweat and the answer is yes it means to sweat to perspire all right guys where are we going next where where are we going next what else somebody give me we have words ten all right let me let me try that okay let me this is an easy one okay again you can make them as easy or difficult as you want the lower the point value the easier it is so what's a synonym for big all right is it a tiny be large or see happy which one of these is a synonym for big all right that that that should be that this should be an easy one all right okay all right we got it we got a minute all right perfect so mostly everybody was saying be large that is the correct answer excellent so what else did we have I saw another one on here that I wanted to draw a different one somebody had put what am i 450 okay let's go let's go check that out so here is your question question all right I'm rain mixed with ice what am I is it sleet snow or hail I'm rain mixed with ice what do you guys think that is rain mixed with ice sleet snow or hail all right everybody's put in I think this one maybe maybe you guys haven't heard that maybe this is a new word if it's raining but it's a little mixed with ice it's sleet we would say that it is sleet because usually once it hits the ground it turns right to ice snow is actually it is frozen it is ice there was our little ice crystals so rain mixed with ice would be sleet so hopefully that might be a new word for you guys somebody else had put I think idioms 4:30 is that one that I saw on here idioms 4:30 yes okay we're gonna go idioms 4:30 what does it mean break a leg break a leg means what good luck hurt yourself don't mess up what does it mean if somebody tells you hey you know break a leg break a leg I don't know maybe if you've heard this idiom before but somebody might tell you hey you know break a leg what what does it mean break a leg what do you guys think some people all right a not sure okay yes if somebody tells you to break a leg this is something if you're you're getting ready to do a performance of some sort you're doing you're getting ready to do something and somebody tells you break a leg they're basically kind of saying you know good luck they're wishing you good luck you know do well good luck break a leg what's another one give me let's do maybe a couple more what's another category in point total I'm just starting to realize maybe this the random ones you guys are picking seems like a lot of the answers are a I don't know why but that's not how it is for all of them so let me know where should we go next sounds 450 there it is okay so sounds 450 okay the most common English vowel sound is what which one of these sounds is the most common sound do you think it's a B or C all right this is kind of testing your your knowledge your of phonetics because of these different these different symbols you might see these when you're studying pronunciation and learning how to make these different sounds which one do you think a B or C I've got some different different responses in there alright so in case if you're not sure the answer is B all right it is the schwa sound so that upside-down e that is the schwa sound all right that is the most common vowel sound in English and we did a whole video lesson on the schwa sound which you guys hopefully you will check out alright let's do one more one more where where should we go what do you guys think what's another category in point total all right interactive English what am i 4:30 alright we will do this one what am i 4:30 okay here's another one I am sharp like a knife what is sharp like a knife is it a razor a brush or spatula what do you think what is sharp like a knife write your answer in the comments sharp like a knife what do you guys think all right it's gotten so I get so good answers in there something that is sharp like a knife is yes it is a razor razor so you get the idea again this is how to do these games and how to play these games so again games are just it's a really important part of learning and I hope that you guys can use games to go out and play and improve and especially practice your language skills I will leave a link in the description to these games so if you want to play that jeopardy game you can I'll give you the link you can go to it and you can you know test your knowledge and then write to us on Facebook or Twitter let me let me know how you guys did all right so I hope you guys appreciated that game it's a little different really appreciate you guys watching and being with us here today again please hit that like button if you enjoyed these games if you enjoyed playing games and share this video with others so that they have a chance to practice their english as well if you have any questions or comments again write those to us we try to get back to as many people as we can and you can also check out the social media down there Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat and of course right here on YouTube you can find us here so thank you guys so much lotsa mono favio mohit yes-men murder thank you thank you thank you guys for joining us and we will see you guys next time all right have a great day

Useful Idioms You Absolutely NEED TO KNOW for 2025

I want to teach you some important and useful idioms that you can use in 2025 now this vocabulary has gained popularity often reflecting social issues Trends or even cultural shifts and I don't want to waste any time let's just go ahead and get started because I want to hit the ground running and we'll begin with that idiom right there to hit the ground running this means to immediately work hard and successfully at a new activity and it really has a positive connotation so this is a great idiom that you can use when talking about work or just any activity that you're really excited to do the project begins next week we really need to focus so that we can hit the ground running so whenever you want to stress that you're going to work hard and right away this is a great idiom that you can use like I said I don't want to waste any time let's start building your vocabulary I just want to hit the ground running I hope you don't mind me starting on these documents I just wanted you to hit the ground running first he does become eligible next year I want him to hit the ground running now if building your vocabulary and learning new idioms is a goal that you have this year then please subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is West the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and if you subscribe to the channel you will not regret it you're going to learn so much it will really be a game Changer and I want to talk about that idiom because it is becoming more and more commonly used to say something is a GameChanger you can use this whenever you want to say that something significantly Alters a situation and and mostly in a positive way so this is a great phrase that you can use to add emphasis robotaxis are a GameChanger this will be the future of Mobility so in general we're talking about a new development that has a massive impact on a situation and in that case you can say that something is a GameChanger now you of all people like this I'm going to use lowfat ingredients Game Changer if you follow me I swear to you it's a game changer hey looking at the 65 in 4k huh it's a game Changer throw shade now I'll be honest this is an idiom that I don't really use it is more informal and probably used mostly in the United States and because it's more informal it may not be as commonly used as some of these other idioms however it is definitely gaining in popularity but this is a an idiom that you're more likely to come across on social media but what it means is to subtly disrespect or criticize someone so it really does have a negative connotation and I mentioned that you're more likely to come across it on social media here's an example Jason kid throws shade at the Celtics our group was ready to go they were ready to celebrate and in a way he is slightly criticizing the other team basically saying they weren't prepared which is why they lost here's another fun example because I think it's good to have a laugh this is a a fun way to build your vocabulary I don't always throw shade but when I do it will be to your face and not on Facebook do you know you're throwing shade behind her back so what' you just stop by to throw shade we're having fun doing sister stuff today I learned to throw shade then we have under the radar this means not attracting attention or discreet and this is a great idiom because I think we can all relate to it sometimes well many of us are in a situation and we try to fly under the radar she was not a well-known musician and for the most part her music went under the radar that suddenly changed when one of her songs went viral there are a couple of things I want to say about this idiom the first is that there are some common collocations some verb idiom collocations and often you will use this with verbs like to be under the radar or to fly under the radar or to go under the radar or even to stay under the radar the next thing is that you may also use the phrase below the radar or beneath the radar they they have the same meaning but as you can see they are not as commonly used for the most part people will use the phrase under the radar it's under the radar we've been living in this no man's land for the past month flying under the radar nobody around here knows me we can fly under under the radar because of the news we need to stand under the radar then we have the idiom to rain on someone's parade this just means to spoil someone's enjoyment and I I'm sure that you can think of a time when someone rained on your parade and they just spoiled and ruined this good time I could say right after I got a promotion I received some bad news it really rained on My Parade so this idiom really means what it says you have this parade which is the enjoyment and then the rain comes and it spoils everyone's good time now you may also use this idiom to premise some bad news for example I could say I hate to rain on your parade but and then I spoil everyone's enjoyment or I'm sorry to ran on your parade but it's like you're kind of softening the bad news and basically telling someone that you're going to spoil their enjoyment the last thing I want to do is uh rain on your parade sorry I don't mean to rain on the parade I find parades to be impotent displays of authoritarianism romance is never perfect but don't let me rain on anyone's parade breaking the internet this is a phrase whose popularity has really skyrocketed because it means causing a major viral sensation online did you hear about the latest political controversy it's breaking the internet this is a phrase that really has become popular due to social media and social media is not going away anytime soon so this phrase probably won't either because nowadays the way that we consume information is via the Internet so if you have a video a post a meme that really takes off then you can say it's breaking the internet all right let's break the internet he's all over my Instagram now you're about to break the internet good I hate the Internet it's working we're going to break the internet fomo fear of missing out I really like this acronym it refers to the anxiety a person feels when missing out on some social event or experience and this is an acronym that I think we can all relate to I think we've all experienced fomo at one point or another I could say a lot of people are buying Bitcoin because of fomo to give you a little more context using this informal acronym here are some news headlines Bitcoin rally stalls creates entry point for fomo investors this follows up on the previous example but I think this is an acronym that often gets used when talking about the stock market how Coldplay fomo could lead to burnout I suppose they're talking about the music group Coldplay and finally fomo leads to shopping addiction here are some more examples oh man some of our friends are at a rooftop in Brook Brooklyn oh somebody's got fomo and I'm watching their Snapchat stories it's like fomo 24/7 thank you for coming to celebrate Meredith bet she's in heaven right now with some serious fomo at the end of the day this is an idiom that I think I use quite often and it means when everything is taken into consideration it's kind of like saying ultimately so really you're going to use this idiom after talking about a series of events and then you'll use the idiom and then state the most important information in this lesson I want to teach you some useful idioms I'm trying to give you a variety of examples and at the end of the day I just hope that you learn something new one thing I want to point out is that this expression is similar to the phrase in the end don't confuse it with the phrase at the end which refers to well a point really at the end of something the britannica dictionary talks about this at the end is used in the idiom at the end of the day which means something similar to in the end when everything is considered however at the end is most commonly used more literally as a prepositional phrase followed by of to refer to the end of a specific noun this is just something to keep in mind because I do hear people confuse these from time to time and in this case I just want to highlight the idiom at the end of the day at the end of the day all that matters is what you think at the end of the day we are all just trying to get by at the end of the day you can't depend on anyone else but you The New Normal I don't know why I feel like I hear this phrase every other day now but it refers to a state of things that is accepted as usual and maybe I hear it more and more often because there are a lot of things that are different than before some of them a little weird but they're becoming accepted and you could say it's the new normal according to a recent poll many Americans believe that remote work is The New Normal this is a funny joke using this phrase so I wanted to share it with you he says I swear Karen if you say new normal one more time getting frustrated that she keeps mentioning this new normal as she's holding this mask 21st century family coming through this is the new normal over the past several days there has been increased IO chatter but that is the new normal but scared is sometimes good unless it becomes The New Normal in which case that's no way to live clapback this is also an informal phrase that's mostly used in the US so it may not be as common as some of these other idioms but still gaining in popularity and what this refers to is a quick sharp response to criticism here's an example I'm not afraid to clap back at the haters who criticize my English lessons this is not true uh there are haters out there but I tend to ignore them and I I Don't Clap back everyone in this office wants to F at you and they're planning a prank clap back under the weather this is a great idiom well I mean it's not a great thing but it's a great idiom to use it means that someone is slightly ill so I like this idiom because I feel like I use it quite often instead of saying that well I feel a little sick I'll just say I feel under the weather I woke up this morning feeling a little under the weather so I went back to sleep often you may use this idiom with an adjective like little or bit I'm feeling a little under the weather or I'm feeling a bit under the weather okie dokie and what seems to be wrong with them with twinkle it's just a bit under the weather yeah yeah well hmer and bar well they're under the weather mhm I'm sorry I I've I've been a little under the weather in the driver's seat this refers to being in control of a situation and and really the IDI means what it says because if you are in the driver's seat then you control the car but in this case we're referring to some situation Mark likes to act like he's in the driver's seat but Jessica is the real leader of the team I will admit sometimes I like to be in the driver's seat and control the situation it really just depends but other times I will gladly sit in the back go to sleep and let someone else control the situation negotiations are all about trolling things about being in the driver's seat and another lifetime starts right now with you in the driver's seat now I hate to rain on your parade but I really need to wrap things up but if you'd like to continue building your vocabulary maybe you're experiencing a little fomo you're welcome to watch another one of my video lessons because at the end of the day it's all about helping you reach your fluency goals if you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long by

Useful Idioms in 60 minutes | Greatly Improve Your Vocabulary

Today, you are going to learn a lot of idioms, and many of these idioms are from the United States, which is where I am from. My name is Wes, and the channel is Interactive English. And if you enjoy learning idioms, please subscribe, turn on notifications, so that way I can become your teacher. So, I am going to tell you the meaning of the idiom, talk about how it's used, give you some example sentences, and what I've done is I've taken the very best of idiom lessons and put them together so that you can learn many idioms in just 1 hour. So, let's begin. Today's lesson is all about money. I want to talk to you about money. This is a very important topic. Many people out there, they love money. Everybody wants money.

We all need money in order to survive. So, I want to teach you some common idioms and expressions that are all related to money. I will tell you the idiom and then talk about the meaning, and I'll also try to discuss how you would use this idiom, and then finally, I'll show you some video clips so that you can see how the idiom or expression is used in context. Now, keep in mind, I am from the United States, so some of the idioms may be specific to the US. However, I think that that they are very common and well-known that people all over the world from other English-speaking countries will likely understand these idioms and expressions as well. So, the first idiom or well, it's more so it's just a word. First word that I have for you, and this one I think is more specific to the United States, is the word buck.

informal word, and a buck is just talking about a dollar. One buck is $1. Now, you would use this word, I think, mostly when talking about smaller amounts of money. You're not going to hear people talk about 1 billion bucks. That's you know, people would use dollars in that case. But if you're talking about a small amount of money, people may say bucks instead of dollars. Like, "Hey, do you have a couple of bucks? Or can I borrow a few bucks?" And that's how I think most people would use this word when they want to say a dollar, instead they're just going to say a buck. Well, I gave him a few bucks. I mean, I only got a couple bucks.

I mean, a few bucks. Okay, whatever. Look, if you're hungry, man, I can loan you a buck. It'd be worth a few bucks. Can I hold my ride? Just want a quick look, see? Pay you back. A buck, eh? have to cost an arm and a leg, and this just means that well, it just means that something is expensive. So, instead of saying that well, this you know, that car it's really expensive, you could say well, it cost an arm and a leg. I think people would use it when they're describing something that's expensive, but in a way, I think they're also saying that they don't think it's worth that much money, that it cost too much.

It should not be that expensive. So, when you say well, something cost an arm and a leg, you're you're basically saying that it's too expensive, that it should not cost this much money. But in general, it's just it's just really expensive. These lessons, they don't cost an arm and a leg. They're they're free. This is an advanced computer system. Cost an arm and a leg. Cost an arm and a leg. Cost me an arm and a leg. It's got GPS navigation, 200-W stereo system. Christian, get rid of the old sandwich vending machine in the lobby, which cost us an arm and a leg to rent and no one use it. Then we have the expression pony up. And if you tell someone to pony up, you're you're just telling them to pay money, and it's it's money that they owe, that they should pay, and sometimes it may be to settle a debt. And you tell this other person like, "Hey, okay, you need to pony up. You need to pay some money." So, this is a very it's a very informal expression, but it's one maybe you would hear somebody use this if you're watching a TV show or movie, and somebody needs to pay money for something, and the other person might say, "Hey, okay, you need to pony up. You need to pay your money. You need to pony up." party, and you're the CEO, so pony up.

No, if anyone should pay, it should be you. This thing with Bobby goes to trial, we're going to have to pony up some serious upfront cash. What you should do is have him sponsor you for the dance. Ask the manager to pony up a couple hundred bucks. Yeah, $10 a dance. So, if she makes it through 20 dances, you need to pony up $200 towards her class trip to DC. Then we have the expression put your money where your mouth is. And this is one of my favorite expressions, and it just means that that it could mean a couple of things. It could mean that somebody is spending money in order to improve a bad situation, that that someone needs to put their money where their mouth is, or you could say that that you are telling somebody that they need to spend money so that that you know that they mean what they say, and they're not just talking.

That instead of just talking, talking, talking, you'd say, "Okay, look, put your money where your mouth is. You need to spend money to show me that you are being serious, to show me that what you're saying is true. It is believable.

Put your money where your mouth is." And again, I I guess I would say that this expression doesn't always have to be talking about money and spending money. In another way, it's telling somebody to basically well, do what you say. If you are talking and saying all these things, and the other person, maybe they don't believe you, then they might say, "Look, okay, let's see you let let put your money where your mouth is. Let's see if you do what you're saying. Put your money where your mouth is." Put your money where your mouth is. I say to you. 10 votes. Five against five. to have a little drink. Come have a drink with me and see who's more of a laugh, yeah? Put your money where your mouth is. I wouldn't want to get any exhaust on that pretty face. I got you put your money where your mouth is. Next is the idiom to make ends meet, and this just means that you are earning enough in order to live, that you're not you're not making a lot of money, and you have all this extra money lying around. If you make just enough in order to live, then you could say that you are making ends meet, or perhaps you may hear somebody say, "Well, you know, we're just trying to make ends meet. We're trying to make enough in order to live, to make ends meet." Would you describe your financial circumstances? I was struggling to make ends meet. You're a waitress. For 6 years. And I could never make ends meet. Tara and I are trying to buy a house, and we're, you know, struggling to make ends meet. She put in the in the bushels and stuff and sell it, you know, because they had to, you know, make ends meet and stuff. The next expression is to be loaded, and loaded it's just an adjective, and it's used to describe someone who has a lot of money, who is very wealthy. You could say, "This person is loaded. He's loaded. She's loaded." I think well, many of us out there, we'd like to be loaded because well, it's nice if you don't have to worry about money, because there there are many of us out there just trying to make ends meet. We just want to make enough money. Although, it'd be nice one day to be loaded.

Hey, you Travis. Hey, can you get that five you owe me? My man is loaded and loaded. He's loaded, is that it? The Sappersteins are loaded. some? The stuff we smashed is worth nothing compared to that thing. These guys must be loaded. Then we have the expression to look like a million bucks. Now, first I I want to tell you that before I said that you don't use the word bucks when talking about a large sum of money, except except with this expression to look like a million bucks, or you could say to look like a million dollars. It means the same thing. But when you use this expression, you are saying that a person looks very nice.

They look very elegant, and you're talking about most of the time I think it's talking about the way they look, the way they're dressed, the way they've styled their hair, and you could say, "Wow, you look like a million bucks." This is a it's a way that you can give a compliment to someone. You look like a million dollars." I I like I love it if somebody were to tell me, "Hey, Wes, you know, you look like a million bucks." It would it would make me feel good. And right now, I want to tell all of you, I've no idea what you're wearing right now, but doesn't matter. I think you you look like a million bucks. You look like a million dollars. I just wanted to let you know.

Come on. You look great, okay? You look You look great. You look like a million bucks. Yeah. Terrific. Wonderful. You look great. You look like a million bucks. Damn, darling, can I say you look like a million bucks? I have never been able to wear that dress cuz I just couldn't pull it off, and now you just look like a million bucks. Then I have a couple of phrases that mean the same thing, and that is shell out and fork over. And you can use these interchangeably, and it just means to pay for something. And you may hear somebody say, "Oh, you need to you need to shell out some cash if you want to buy this thing that cost an arm and a leg, or you really you need to fork over some money if you want to purchase this thing." Again, you can use these two phrases interchangeably. They are very informal, so I don't think you're necessarily going to use them all the time in conversational English, but try to listen for them the next time you're watching a TV show or watching a movie. To shell out, to fork over, to pay for something. to get Big Belly White to shell out for a huge repair job while Lucky Jimbo gets a paid vacation. Yeah, he most certainly is. People will fork over eight grand for that. Well, I've been on the phone all afternoon. Oh, yeah? Had to shell out $5,000 to the brick offs. Next is the expression rags to riches. So, if you say that somebody went from rags to riches, then you are just saying that in the beginning they were very poor. And then later on they became very wealthy. So, you're describing a person's situation over time and you could say that they went from rags to riches or that that they have a story that is rags to riches.

They were poor and then they became rich. Rags to riches. So, what is the secret of this rags to riches story? Here they come now, the rags to riches Cinderella contenders. Like a true rags to riches story, but I've always found little class to be just so much more real. Then we have the idiom bread and butter. And if you are talking about somebody's bread and butter, then you are just talking about their main source of income. And that that would pretty much be somebody's job. And for example, I could say, well, you know, making these English lessons on YouTube, it's our bread and butter. This is the the primary way we are are trying to make a living. Right now we're we're making ends meet, but hopefully maybe a lot in the future at some point we'll be loaded and it will be a story of rags to riches. I just want to give you a quick little review because I think the more you hear these idioms and expressions being used, the more likely you are to remember their meaning. So, if we're talking about bread and butter specifically, you're talking about the the way what what somebody does to make their living and to make money, their bread and butter. Restoration antiques.

It's my bread and butter. I'm a scientist. My ability to think is my bread and butter. Then we have foot the bill. And to foot the bill just means to pay for something. You are paying for some bill. When I think of of this idiom being used, I think it's often used to describe a situation in which someone else might be paying for this thing. Someone else is footing the bill. You could use it when if talking about yourself that you're trying to pay for this, but I think quite often it's used when you're you're referring to another person paying for this thing. So, for example, maybe if uh the the next lesson I show up with these expensive clothes and I look like a million bucks. And you think, wait a second. I know that that these YouTube videos, this is Wes's that's his bread and butter.

He's just making ends meet right now. I wonder who's footing the bill. Who's footing the bill? You would not have to do a thing and Felipe will foot the bill. You got your money's worth. What? I foot the bill while you played Mother Teresa. We estimate the damage at $75 and frankly we think it's terribly unfair that other taxpayers should foot the bill. Next is the idiom break the bank. And to break the bank means that you are you try to buy something that really it it costs too much and you cannot afford it and you could say that, well, it's going to break the bank. You will go into debt because this thing costs too much, cost an arm and a leg, you can't afford it and it's going to break the bank. Or maybe you're trying to tell someone that, well, hey, don't worry. I can afford this. It's not going to break the bank. So, you may hear this idiom being used in either the affirmative or the negative. So, in the affirmative you'd say, well, it's going to break the bank. We can't afford it.

Or if you want to reassure someone that you can afford this thing, hey hey, don't worry. It's not going to break the bank. But to break the bank means that you can't afford it and you will likely go into debt. Are you looking for a mattress that won't break your back or the bank? If you want to be like me, you got to make snap decisions. We're going to break the bank at the Monty Burns Casino. Then we have the word penny pincher. It is a a compound noun because this it's talking about a person who really tries to save all their money. And they they really just don't like to spend their money and you could say, well, yeah, this person is cheap. You could say he is a penny pincher or she is a penny pincher. They just really want to save all their money and they don't want to spend anything, a penny pincher. How can you afford a maid on what I'm overpaying you? Oh, well, you see, Mr. Penny Pincher, I I mean to say You got another job on the side.

Then we have the expression pick up the tab or pick up the check. And that they mean the same thing and it just means to pay for a bill, to pick up the tab or pick up the check. Often I I think of a restaurant and perhaps at the end of the meal the bill comes and you might say, hey, don't worry about it. I'm going to pick up the check or I'm going to pick up the tab. I am going to pay for this bill. To pick up the tab or pick up the check. okay. Uh you're going to pick up the tab, right? Great. up the check. I'll have to pick up the Cuz you're Little James. So, there you have it. Those are some great idioms and expressions that are all related to money. in Paris, the city of lights or the city of arts and culture. So, today we're going to talk to you about some idioms and expressions that are related to art. And culture. That's coming up. It's a gorgeous day out, perfect day to see all the sights of Paris. That's is the Louvre, one of the most famous museums in the world. Check out this view right here. With the Eiffel Tower. Or kind of. It's right there. So, since we are in Paris, which is a city very well known for its art and culture, we're going to talk to you about some expressions and idioms that that have words related to art in them. Of course.

So, the first expression I want to talk to you about is to paint yourself into a corner. And when somebody paints themselves into a corner, that just means that they are put into a situation where there is no or there are very few good outcomes and they are painted into a corner. It's not a good place to be. Which I bet she regrets it. He's painted himself into a corner. But Nick has been painting me in a corner since we were kids. We painted ourselves into a corner. And now they have to paint ourselves out. So, there's a famous saying that goes a picture is worth a thousand words and what this means is that you can have a complex idea that can be expressed in just one single picture. Better expressed in fact than a description. So, there's so much more that a picture says than words can say. A picture's worth a thousand words.

A picture's worth a thousand words. A picture's worth a thousand words. A picture's worth a thousand words. Another expression is to paint the town red. And when you go out and you paint the town red, that just means that you are going out and you are partying and you are celebrating in a very lively way. As an example, you would say, you know, let's go out tonight, let's paint the town red. The world is your oyster. Kick up your heels. Paint the town red. Smithers, don't you know how to paint the town red? Oh, we're going to paint the town red tonight. Let's paint the town. We'll shut it down. Another expression is to see the big picture or to look at the big picture. And this just means to see the situation as a whole. Uh because sometimes it's a very important to instead of like looking at little details to look at the situation as a whole and that means to look at the bigger picture or to see the bigger picture or the big picture.

So, we are just chilling on a bench as you can see behind us. Oh, where is Where did you That's the other way. I can't show you. There we go. That's the Eiffel Tower. So, we're going to we're going to share our favorite things about Paris right now. What is your favorite thing about Paris? The food, hands down. That was going to be mine. Everything. The food is just like the ingredients are simple, high quality and just well put together. I I like the croissants or here the croissant. Just Why is your nose so red? Cuz we were out in the sun all day yesterday. Somebody got us What's your favorite sight? I like the Versailles, the gardens. They were I I thought they were really really impressive. Wes, tell me your favorite French word.

French word? Mhm. I've been saying uh mercy. Mercy, okay. Yeah, I've been using that. Okay, what about Favorite French word? Um amour. What? Amour, I don't know how to pronounce it. Favorite English channel? Interactive English, obviously. All right, let's keep moving. Another expression that I say quite often is you just say, "What's wrong with this picture?" And when you're asking somebody what's wrong with this picture, it means that you're asking this person or group of people to identify what what is wrong with this situation and seeing if they can identify it. So, you're kind of asking them in a sarcastic way. What's wrong with this picture? Guys, what's wrong with this picture?

Something's wrong with this picture. Can't be simple as it seems. Look at this sorry, miserable squashed thing. Can anybody tell me what's wrong with this picture? So, this is an expression that's also a question and it goes, "Do I have to paint you a picture?" And it's it's not it's kind of like when you're trying to explain some something to somebody and they just don't don't get it at all. It This is kind of asking like, "What else can I do to make you understand this?" You you're trying to make it more clear for them. What else can I do to make you understand this?" Another idiom is saying that something is like watching the paint dry. This is a simile because we're comparing two things and you're saying that something is like watching paint dry. So, you're talking about something that is very boring, it's dull, it's tedious and it takes a long time.

So, another expression is to paint a mhm picture. And why I made that mhm sound because you can change the adjective. So, something can paint a terrible picture, can paint a bleak picture, can paint a rosy picture. And what this means is to describe something in a certain way. Um and many times it's used in a negative way. So, when you you if something paints a terrible picture, it means that things appear to be pretty bad. Painting a pretty graphic picture in training. You continue to paint far too bleak a picture of Laura Niel. You painted an extreme picture. These particular circumstances paint a thorough picture of the horrific events in Samoa.

Hope you guys enjoyed learning these expressions and getting a glimpse of our trip to Paris. So, since everyone is so excited for the World Cup, I thought this would be a good opportunity to talk to you about some popular soccer idioms and expressions. And yes, I said soccer because I'm an American even though the rest of the world pretty much says football. Not sure why we say soccer, Americans just do, but we we do a lot of things that don't make much sense. Keep in mind that even though these idioms are related to soccer and sports, they can be used in a variety of different situations and context and I will show you that and give you some examples as we go through these expressions. The first expression I have for you is to keep one's eye on the ball. So, when you're you're playing soccer or just about any sports, you need to look at the ball. You need to know where it is and you have to keep your eye on it. So, this basically means that you really have to pay attention and stay focused to the activity that you are doing.

This could be used not only in sports, you could use it in business as well that you need to stay focused on what you're doing or even in school, you need to pay attention, you need to keep your eye on the ball. Keep your eye on the ball. I'm going to keep my eye on the ball. Emily and I have a future with a plan. Maybe that's true, but you need to keep your eye on the ball.

The next expression is a little similar, but it's still different and that is to be on the ball. So, if you say that you are on the ball, it just means that you are really alert and you are aware of everything that's going on that that you're doing things right and you say, "You know, today I'm I'm really on the ball. I'm really sharp, I know what's happening, I'm focused, I'm on the ball." One of my favorite idioms is to get the ball rolling. And when we say this, it means that we want to start something. So, it means pretty much exactly what it says. So, if we have a ball and we want to start rolling it, then we get the ball rolling. We start moving along. Many times I would walk into a classroom and we're getting ready to begin class and I'd say, "All right, guys, let's get the ball rolling. Let's begin." I'll tell you what I think just to get the ball rolling. dollars and 27 cents. Wow, look at you, you did pretty well.

It's the key. It could break into any system. I met a girl. Oh, really? Spending all this time with her and she is a game changer. It's kind of a game changer. Come on. We need a game changer. This next idiom is one that I think I also use a lot and that is a game plan. So, if you have a game plan, it means that you have a strategy for doing something, that you have a plan of action that you are going to execute in order to succeed. You must have a game plan. So, if you're playing soccer or or any sports for that matter, you need to have a game plan, you have to have a strategy to win. And in business, you need a game plan if you're going to do some negotiations. In school, you need a game plan if you're working on some project, even if you're organizing an event for a friend, you need a game plan. So, in soccer, there are referees out there on the field and they carry a whistle and sometimes they might blow the whistle. And when you blow the whistle on someone, it means that you are you're calling this person out for doing something wrong, maybe something even illegal and you're reporting it to the proper authorities. You can blow the whistle on another person, you could blow the whistle on a company, on an organization. If somebody's done something wrong, you can report it, you can let everyone know and you are blowing the whistle on that person or company. We can also change this idiom around and make it a noun and say that someone is a whistleblower. And if someone's a whistleblower, then that person is the one who reported the wrongdoing that is happening. They're a whistleblower. Blow the whistle on someone. Never blow the whistle on family.

And thanks for not blowing the whistle on us. You called me the other day. You were going to blow the whistle, right? Another great soccer expression, which is also it's relevant to any sports out there is to say, "We were robbed." And to be robbed means that something happened that was unjust, that that you don't think is fair. Maybe you just barely missed the goal or maybe there was a penalty and you disagree with it, you'd say, "Ah, we were robbed." A very common expression is to take sides. So, if you're thinking about soccer, you have two different sides of the field, one team is on one side, the other team is on the other side and you take sides. You are cheering for one team. So, if you are taking sides, it means that you are supporting one over the other. And this is very common because it's used often when when two people disagree about something and another person is there and they're trying to figure out, "Okay, who do I agree with? Whose side am I taking?"

Everyone's taking sides and splitting into groups. Well, if Bernadette's on Amy's team, I pick Howard. I'm not taking sides. Fine, because I'm stuck with Raj. I'm sorry. All right, take his side. I am not taking his Well, whose side are you taking? are besties, someone should apologize. I don't want to take sides. One could be forgiven for thinking you're taking your family's side in this debate. I am taking their side. Next is to be on a roll. And if a sports team is on a roll, that just means that they have been very successful lately. They've been winning a lot. They have a streak of success. So you guys are learning these idioms and expressions and you're learning so much English. I could say, "Yeah, you know, you're on a roll. Keep it up. You're doing great. You guys rock." Today we're talking about 10 dessert idioms.

Yeah, they're all related to dessert, but they all mean different things. If you want to relax with a piece of cake and an English video, subscribe to our channel. Hungry yet? Number one, piece of cake. It just means that something is very, very easy, just like eating cake. This lesson is a piece of cake. And every task you undertake becomes a piece of cake.

Number two, to have your cake and eat it, too. This idiom means you cannot have it both ways. You can't have your cake and still eat it because if you eat it, it's gone. You don't have it anymore. I have it and I'm eating it and now oops, it's gone. And this relates to life by telling you that you cannot have everything that you want. Think of somebody who maybe is working all the time, making a lot of money to get a really nice house. Um but they can't enjoy the house because they're always at work. You can't have your cake and eat it, too. We travel a lot, but it's part of our work, so we're not on vacation when we travel. You can't have your cake and eat it, too.

Number three, icing on the cake. Icing on the cake means something that makes something good even better or something bad even worse. So it really um amps up a situation. I had a bad day at work, but the icing on the cake is that the car broke down on my way home. It felt so great. I just wanted to go in and hit four for four and qualify for worlds one last time. And um winning was just icing on the cake. Number four, to sugarcoat something. This means to make something seem better, more pleasant, or more acceptable than it is. To sugarcoat it. When my friend asked me what I thought about her new haircut, I had to sugarcoat my response so I wouldn't hurt her feelings.

You don't have to sugarcoat it. I get the drill. Number five, easy as apple pie. Mhm. What this means is that something is really, really, really easy, just like eating pie. So sometimes you see it um as easy as apple pie or sometimes you just see it easy as pie. Uh so so sometimes it has the apple and sometimes it doesn't. But it really just means that it's as easy as eating the pie, not making it cuz making it's a little difficult. Learning English with us is as easy as apple pie. Number six, flat as a pancake. I really like this one. I don't know why. It's probably one of my favorites. Um so you know a pancake, it's very, very flat. It doesn't have any ridges or any bumps or anything. It just means that something is very, very flat.

My hometown is flat as a pancake. There are no mountains or hills. Flat as a pancake, huh? Number seven, nutty as a fruitcake. Now, I don't have a fruitcake to show you because I couldn't find one today, but you have to trust me, they're very nutty. They have a lot of nuts. But when we say that someone is nutty, it also means that they're a little crazy. So when someone is nutty as a fruitcake, it can mean anything from just being a little silly to completely crazy. Nutty as a fruitcake. Don't pay attention to Wes. He's nutty as a fruitcake. Well, I can save you the trouble. You're nutty as a fruitcake.

Number eight, that's the way the cookie crumbles. Now, this idiom really means that's how life works. I can't believe I didn't win the painting contest. Ah, well, that's the way the cookie crumbles. I'm Bruce Nolan and that's the way the cookie crumbles. Number nine, to sell like hotcakes. This means that something sells very well or is very, very successful. Every time a new iPhone comes out, they sell like hotcakes.

Number 10, to have a sweet tooth. A person has a sweet tooth loves sweets. They love desserts. Okay? So for example, I have a huge sweet tooth. I love all kinds of desserts and sugar and my favorite is chocolate. Yuana has a huge sweet tooth. She prefers sweets over food. Here you go, Sonny. Little something for the old sweet tooth. So that was it for the 10 idioms. I hope you like them and I hope you're not too hungry. Now it's time to practice what we've learned. I want you to look at the sentence and choose the best answer to complete the sentence. Say your answer out loud. My exam went great. I finished quickly because it was Is it A, flat as a pancake? B, nutty as a fruitcake? Or C, easy as apple pie?

The correct answer is C, easy as apple pie. When an exam is easy, you probably finish it quickly. So during this lesson, we ate a lot, but we learned even more, no? Now you have 10 dessert idioms that you can use anytime, not just when you want something sweet. I think this lesson was as easy as apple pie, don't you? If you think so, too, please give this video a thumbs up. Like to express hope and inspiration, then this lesson is for you. Hey everyone, my name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today I want to talk to you about some idioms that you can use to help give other people some hope and inspiration, especially if they've been feeling a little down and just need that extra encouragement to get through some situation in life. So the first idiom that I have for you is keep your chin up. So this idiom means that you want to encourage someone to you know, stay positive if they are going through a difficult situation. You want them to keep their chin up. And the this idiom comes from well, when people feel a little sad, typically their head might be down. So you're telling them, you're basically saying, you know, "Keep your chin up. You know, things are going to get better." And you just want to give them that little bit of encouragement to stay positive in some difficult situation. Keep your chin up. Often I think it's used as a standalone statement. It's kind of like you're giving somebody a command and saying, "Hey, you know, keep your chin up, all right? Things are going to get better. Stay positive. Keep your chin up." Anyway, keep your chin up. You keep plugging and uh good things will happen. Keep your chin up. Don't stop caring. Hey.

I'm going to keep working on that for you. Just keep your chin up. The next idiom is, you know, hang in there. And this idiom, it also means to it's to encourage someone to keep trying, especially when they are going through some difficult situation. To to keep trying, don't give up. Just just hang in there. You can do it. When I think of somebody using like hang in there, I think that that person is doing something that they're actually doing some kind of work or activity and they're actually they're doing something that they don't want to do and they are having to endure this thing. So you may hear this used again as just a standalone statement. Somebody saying, you know, "Just just hang in there.

Keep your chin up." So again, these are are very useful idioms to offer that hope and inspiration. have a plan and I am going to save our jobs. Just hang in there. Please just hang in there a little longer. Okay. Just hang in there. Next is the expression break a leg. And this is used just to to tell somebody good luck. So instead of saying good luck, you can just replace it with this idiom and say, "Break a leg." So you would often hear it right before somebody is getting ready to do something such as a performance. And instead of saying good luck, you say, "Break a leg." They're getting ready to start the competition.

Could be a a sport competition, an academic competition. And before they begin, you could say, "Hey, break a leg." You could even use it together with good luck and say, you know, "Good luck. Break a leg. I believe in you. I want to give you that that hope. So, just go out there, do your best, break a leg. Grab your scripts, people. We open in 20 minutes. Break a leg. Thank you. Break a leg, Chef. Circus floor on a wire no wider than a human thumb. It is time. Oh, break a leg. Then we have in the bag. And if you say that something is in the bag, it means that that you are sure of success or or you are sure of accomplishing something.

And if somebody says, you know, the sky's the limit, then it just means that there is no limit to your success, to your aspirations. And this is a great way to offer someone some inspiration by telling them, you know, to keep going, that they can continuously grow and develop and succeed. And you can express that by saying, you know, "Sky's the limit." For example, I could try to offer you some inspiration if you're having some difficulty and tell you, you know, "Just just keep going. I hope you keep learning with us throughout this year. There's so much that you can achieve and accomplish and grow. The sky's the limit." Well, I turned this one into a functioning boyfriend, so sky's the limit.

What do you want for your birthday, Bing Bong? It's okay. I'm good. Come on. Sky's the limit. Dream big, my boy. Then we have the idiom the world is your oyster. And again, I think this is often used as a stand-alone statement, and somebody would just tell another person, "The world is your oyster." And what it means is that that this person, the person that you're telling this to, will have many different opportunities to do things in their life or their career. There are so many choices that they will have. You could tell them, "The world is your oyster." Often, I think it's used when you're somebody is talking to a younger person. That they have their whole life ahead of them, and they can do all these different things, and you can express that by telling them, you know, "The world is your oyster." You have so many options, so many choices.

Take advantage of it. The world is your oyster." I'm telling you, kids, from now on, the world is your oyster. I could do anything. All bets are off. World is my oyster. You're a beautiful young girl. The world is your oyster. Next is the idiom, and this is one of my favorites, and that is light at the end of the tunnel. And somebody would say this when they want to express that the situation is going to improve or it is going to end, especially if it is a difficult or challenging situation. It will improve or it's going to end. That is the light at the end of the tunnel. So, think about the exact meaning of what this would say. So, if you are in a tunnel, it's very dark. It's a little scary.

Nobody wants to be there. You are looking for your way out of this tunnel. And then you see this light up ahead, and you know that that it's going to end or things are going to improve. That is what will basically, again, what it means, light at the end of the tunnel. And the reason why I really like this idiom is because I think you could use it in any situation. No matter how bad or horrible it is, you can always try to find some sort of light at the end of the tunnel. And it's a great way to offer somebody that hope, the light at the end of the tunnel.

But, I finally feel like I'm at a place where I can see the light at the end of the tunnel. The light at the end of the tunnel is the finish line. This is just my luck. Then we have the statement there's plenty of fish in the sea. Now, this is a statement that's used for a specific situation because what it means is that you are basically telling somebody who has ended their relationship that that they should stay positive and that things are going to be okay because there are plenty of other people out there that they can have another romantic relationship with. So, I think you would hear this idiom or even use this idiom often when somebody has ended their relationship and you're trying to reassure them that "Hey, things are going to be okay. Don't worry about it.

You will meet somebody else. There's plenty of fish in the sea." Now, you could also say, just to throw in a little bit of grammar, there are plenty of fish in the sea because fish can be both singular and plural. So, no matter what, the meaning is still the same. There are plenty of fish in the sea. Or you're trying to reassure somebody else, "There's plenty of fish in the sea." Point is, you're the best guy I know. You'll get over her. Plenty of other fish in the sea. Another sign from the universe that I'll never find love. Hey, come on, pal. There's plenty of fish in the sea. I say there are plenty of fish in the sea. Then we have to look on the bright side. And if somebody says this, it means that you should be cheerful and positive even though some kind of bad situation has occurred.

And usually when somebody tells you, you know, "Look on the bright side," they will then tell you something to stay positive about or something that is, you know, good news or cheerful even though there's been some terrible situation. So, let me give you an example. Say that somebody has lost their job. That's a bad situation, and somebody might be you know, pretty sad or down about that. And you want to give them a little bit of inspiration. So, you tell them, "Hey, look on the bright side." And when you say this to your friend, you need to tell them why they should be cheerful. So, in this case, maybe you say, "Hey, you know, look on the bright side. You have always wanted to move to this other place, but you couldn't do that. The job was keeping you here. Now you're free. So, look on the bright side. You can move to this other place, try to find a new job. It's what you've always talked about doing. Look on the bright side." I look on the bright side.

I mean, at least you won't have to live with this ugly chair. Don't cry. Look on the bright side. We get to see our lives flash before our eyes. If all our hair falls off, our wives won't want us anymore. Well, there you go. Look on the bright side. Then we have the idiom pull yourself together. All right. And this is uh this is an idiom that means that you need to gain control over your emotions, and you need to start acting normal again and behaving normal. So, I think often it may be used as like a command. Somebody telling you, you know, "Pull yourself together. You need to pull yourself together." If something happens and you are angry or you are frantic, and you start you know, you you start panicking, then that is when another person could tell you, "Hey, you know, pull pull yourself together. You know, start behaving normal so that you can solve this problem." Or you could even use it and talk about yourself, and you're telling someone, you know, "I need to I need to pull myself together. I I need to get it together and start behaving normal so that I can solve this problem and get my life in order. I need to pull myself together." Three hours ago, you made the situation worse. Russell, pull yourself together. Pull yourself together, Diddy. Pull yourself together. You know what? I could actually use a drink just to pull myself together. Next is fingers crossed. And this just means that you are telling somebody that you hope that they will achieve something that will happen in the future or something successful will come to past, and that that you've got your fingers crossed.

So, you can say this to somebody else if they are telling you the things that they want to do, that they want to accomplish, and you should say, you know, "Fingers crossed. I believe in you. I'm hoping for you." Or you could say that about yourself, that you wish something will happen in the future that that would be good for you, and you're trying to kind of express a little bit of hope in your own situation, and you could say, you know, "I've got my fingers crossed. I I have now uh I I I lost my job. I I tried to look on the bright side. I have moved to this other place.

I have applied for a new job, and I'm waiting to hear back from them. I got I've got my fingers crossed." Good luck on your tenure review. Make me proud. Fingers crossed. I hope that your your interview went well. Mhm, fingers crossed. Okay. Well, let's just say this is going to be great. Fingers crossed. Then we have blessing in disguise. And this just describes a situation that appears bad at first, but actually turns out to be pretty good. And often, I think it's used to reflect back on a past situation because something was bad and then since then, you know, some good things happened. So when you think back about that first bad situation, you could refer to it and say, you know, it was a blessing in disguise. Let me give you an example and we'll stick with that same story, all right? Somebody loses their job and they try to look on the bright side and they move to a place that they've always wanted to live.

They they applied for a new job, kept their fingers crossed and and got that new job. And then let, you know, maybe they met the love of their life and they got married and they had a family. It's a blessing in disguise." I got fired from running the Sweet'em's Foundation. Thanks to me. Hey, blessing in disguise. I took a job at this accounting firm. So you see, George, the whole incident was a godsend. You mean a blessing in disguise? Yeah. What I'm saying is maybe this is a blessing in disguise. I don't know who the father is. What? So now I I want to do a quick review as I offer you an inspirational message, okay? So I would tell you I I know that learning English can be challenging and difficult, but I I want you to keep your chin up because even though it it may feel that you're not making any type of progress whatsoever and that you're not improving, you really are. You need to take comfort in the fact that your skills are getting better and better each and every day that you practice. So there is a light at the end of the tunnel and that light is English fluency. So keep doing what you're doing, keep watching our video lessons, keep practicing a little bit each and every day, write to us in the comments. I want you to just hang in there and keep working hard and don't give up because the to be perfectly honest, when it comes to learning another language, there is so much that it will help you with about whether it's getting a job, meeting other people. There's so many ways that languages can help us learn and grow. Sky's the limit. So I hope you enjoy this lesson, learn some new idioms as well as feel a little more inspired perhaps after my message, all right? If you did, then hit that like button down below. Let me know. Are you hungry?

I hope you are. Hungry for knowledge. Thought that wink would come out better. Thought I'd have a sexy wink, but it's just the way I have something in my eye. So let's learn some food idioms. If you want to improve your English, have fun and learn even more idioms, subscribe to our YouTube channel. We love making these videos to help our students improve their English skills. Today we are talking about some super common food idioms. Now, when I was preparing for this lesson, there were so so many food idioms to choose from, but these ones are the ones that I heard again and again and again, so they're very very common. You can hear them everywhere and it's fun because who doesn't like to talk about food? Yeah, exactly. Everyone likes to talk about food.

Now, I'm going to do my disclaimer that I do for every idiom video that I make. You can use idioms at any time. You can use these idioms at any time, but just keep in mind that idioms are a little bit more informal. Don't use them on job applications or any kind of formal English context. So keep that in mind and come on, let's have some fun with food idioms. The first one, number one, is bread and butter. One of my favorite food combinations. Going to say that a lot in this video because I kind of love all food, especially good food, you know, like good bread and good butter. Well, bread and butter means somebody's main source of income. It just means how somebody makes their money, their main source of income. For example, for Wes and I, teaching is our bread and butter.

Working in the factory is his bread and butter. Number two, cool as a cucumber. I love this one because cucumbers are among my favorite vegetables and I'm always cool as a cucumber. No, I'm not. Because somebody who's cool as a cucumber is calm and relaxed and I am known to be a little stressed sometimes. So I always tell myself, Yona, be cool as a cucumber. And it works like half the time. But that's what it means, be calm and relaxed. She remained cool as a cucumber in the stressful situation.

Number three, not my cup of tea. And this means it's just something that you are not interested in or something that you just don't like. Naturally, I love tea. Oh, maybe I should I'm back in. Now, this is my cup of tea and it's huge as you can see. It's as big as my face. And I love tea, so having tea is my cup of tea. That That makes sense. I'm just going to I'm sorry if that's confusing. Um I'll give you another example. Hold on. I need to have my tea. Okay. Going to bed after midnight is not my cup of tea. Number four, in a nutshell. And in a nutshell means in the fewest possible words. So if you can imagine a little nutshell, it's very very small. I'm imagining like a little pistachio.

They're very very small. So in a nutshell just means very little, saying something in as few words as you can. What happened at the meeting? Tell me in a nutshell. Number five, to put all your eggs in one basket. This is a piece of advice which means that you shouldn't concentrate all of your efforts and resources in one area because that means that you could lose everything. And it could refer to anything from feelings to money to hopes and dreams and things like that. So don't put all of your eggs in one basket. When planning your investments, it's unwise to put all of your eggs in one basket. Number six, spice things up. Notice how I said that. This one gets me happy because I love spices, of course. I told you I love food. But to spice things up means to change things, change a boring routine into something more exciting, to change things up. This expression is commonly found when we're talking about relationships and I mean romantic relationships. Maybe sometimes you want to spice things up and you want to do something different like go on a vacation or do something crazy with your loved one. So to spice things up means to make things a little bit more exciting and different than you normally do. They spiced things up by taking a romantic getaway. Number seven, bring home the bacon. Now, I'm not a huge fan of bacon and I know a lot of people are going to be like, "What, Yona, are you crazy? Why don't you like bacon?" I don't really like it, but I'm a huge fan of this idiom. To bring home the bacon doesn't refer to actual bacon, but instead to material success, like money. Bring money, make money. That is really what it means. Bring home the bacon, bring home the money, make money. That's what it's about. I don't know why I got so excited. I don't even really like bacon that much.

We both bring home the bacon. Number eight is a lemon and I have a story about this one. When I was younger, I didn't really know what a lemon was supposed to be and I kept hearing car commercials and they kept talking about, "You won't get a lemon." And I just kept wondering, what is going on? Why would I want a lemon? Why would I buy a lemon at the car dealer? It was very confusing until I found out later that a lemon is something that doesn't work very well. Usually we talk about lemons when we refer to machines or cars. So a car that just doesn't work very well, it's just called a lemon. I don't really hear it about people. Like we don't say, "Oh, that person's a lemon." It's mostly about things that don't work. You do not want to buy a lemon. Oh, no. It's clear that he bought a lemon.

Number nine, spill the beans. Now, this means to reveal secret information, but you don't just reveal it, you kind of do it indiscreetly or by mistake. That's like when you're spilling something, it's not usually intentional. So, it's not something that you want to do to spill the beans, just like you don't want to spill beans. You don't want it, you got a mess. Shh. Don't spill the beans, it's a secret. And number 10, our final one for today is cheesy. Now, you're probably thinking, cheesy is good, right? Who doesn't love cheese? Cheese is great, so cheesy must be even better. But it's not, it actually doesn't have a good connotation. Something cheesy is usually inferior or cheap or of low quality.

Now, cheesy can be used to describe many things, from feelings to people to objects. So, you can have a cheesy smile, which is not good, or you can have a cheesy outfit, which is also not good. Or maybe you can have or say a cheesy pick-up line, which is really, really not good. Hey, you know what would look good on you? Me. Are you tired? No, why? Cuz you've been running through my mind all day. You know, it's dangerous for you to be here in the frozen food section. Why is that? Because you could melt all of this stuff. So, even though we love cheese, we do not want to be cheesy. I've said this word so much that now I really, really, really want some cheese.

Useful Idioms with the word TRAIN

we are at a train station getting ready to get on a train so I thought I would teach you a few different expressions with the word train and the first one is to say that something is a train wreck this means that well you're saying that something just was terrible it was horrible I gave a presentation and it was a train wreck it was just it was really bad the next idiom is to lose one's train of thought and this means to kind of temporarily forget what it is that you were talking about or what you were doing and often there's maybe some sort of interruption uh like sometimes happens with her she interrupts me and then I might lose my train of thought and I forget what I was doing and then you could say that you're well you're stepping in front of a moving train for someone and often people would use this in the negative say they're not going to do this because it means you're making a sacrifice in order to protect someone else and they may say look I'm not going to step in front of that moving train so those are some train expressions

Useful LOVE Idioms to Improve Your Fluency

What words do you love? Do you love idioms? Today we're talking about love idioms. Welcome and thank you for joining us today. Today we'll talk to you about 10 love idioms. And these are idioms that don't necessarily have the word "love" in them. But they are used to describe love and relationships. If you'd like to practice more with us please make sure to join our social media classes on Facebook, Instagram, Snapchat, and Twitter. So the first love idiom is "to fancy someone." And this is mostly used in British English and it means to like someone and their company. So it's not just to like someone but to enjoy spending time with them.

So if you enjoy spending time with someone and you really like them, you would say that you fancy them. You fancy that person. Number two is to fall for someone. And to fall for someone means to develop romantic feelings for someone over a period of time. It could be a short period of time or a long period of time. But that's how you say that you fall for someone. So number three is head over heels in love with someone. So this one could be either head over heels in love or just head over heels. And it just means completely and deeply in love with someone. When somebody is head over heels in love with someone else, they cannot think of any other person.

This is the only person on their mind. It's all that you think about. You're very, very, very, very, into this person. So you would say that you're head over heels. Number four is lovey-dovey. Have you heard this one before...lovey-dovey? I hear it quite a bit and it's kind of a way that people act. It really describes how people act and how people are. So you could say that two people act very lovey-dovey with each other. That means that they're very affectionate and they really show their affection towards each other. But very strongly, very much. And sometimes it's more viewed as a negative thing. Like they're so lovey-dovey. It can be almost a little too much.

But it's an act. It's how you act towards each other. Number five...to be smitten. It means to be strongly attracted to someone. It's almost like you were smacked by love. And now you're super in love with this person or very, very attracted to them. Number six...to get hitched. This is used quite a bit and it means to get married. To get hitched...to get married. Number seven...to tie the knot. This is another one that's just a synonym for "to get hitched." So it also means to get married. To tie the knot. Number eight...to go through a bit of a rough patch.

Now this can be used as to go through a bit of a rough patch or to just go through a rough patch. What it means is when a couple is having trouble, a period of problems in their lives, you know something goes bad and they're constantly fighting or arguing or they just have some issues. We're saying that they're going through a rough patch or a bit of a rough patch. This usually means when you say that that the period is finite and that things are going to get better. Number nine...double date. Double date means an activity that two couples do together. So it can really mean any kind of activity.

But many times it just means like a date like going somewhere, to a picnic or to the movies or to a bar. Just two couples hanging out with each other... it's a double date. And finally number ten...on the rocks. On the rocks is a relationship experiencing difficulties and is likely to fail. On the rocks doesn't necessarily have to describe a relationship between a couple. But it can really be used to describe any kind of relationship. Like if you don't get along with your mother or your father you can say that your relationship with them is on the rocks. So do you remember all of these love idioms?

Let's see! Let's practice them. Please use one of the words that you've learned today one of the idioms to describe this picture right here in the comments below. Please make sure to be creative. If you want to use more than one, you can. And I think it's going to be interesting for anyone reading the comments to see what other people have written. But also it would be fun for us to see if you guys come up with something super creative. It's all good. It's all practice. So thank you for joining us today. If you like the video please give it a thumbs up. I hope you learned something new and I hope that you get to practice these love idioms with a loved one.

Now go out there and fall in love. See you next time!

LESSON 664 OF 749

Useful Listening & Speaking Activity | Describe Words Around the Home

Hello and welcome to today's lesson - Describing Nouns! In this lesson, we are going to describe nouns that you will find around the house. This lesson will help you practice your listening and speaking skills. These nouns are at a beginner level. However, we encourage all learners to give it a try because it's a great way to practice your speaking. For this activity, Ioana is going to describe six different nouns to you. You will have ten seconds to guess and say the answer. Each of these nouns is something that you will find around the house. Remember, this activity is to help you improve your listening and speaking skills. This is why it's important that you speak.

Let's see an example before we start. Ioana will describe a word to me, and I will guess the answer. Here's the word. You're ready for this? Oh, I'm ready. Okay. Here we go. This is something you sit down on. It has four legs and a back. You will find these around the table or at a desk. Do you know what I'm talking about? I think the noun you are describing is a chair.

Now that you know how the activity is done, let's begin. Ioana will describe a noun to you, and you will try to guess that now. Remember to say your answers out loud. And after we finish, I will go over the answers with you. Ready? Let's get the clock up there. You find many of these around the house. At night, people turn them on because they give the light. Sometimes, they're next to your bed and you use them to read. Can you guess what this is? This is something you will find in a dining room. This is something with four legs. People eat there. People put their food on this. Can you tell me what this is?

This is the place where you sleep. On it, there are sheets. There are pillows. There are blankets. Children love to jump up and down on this. Many times people say, "I'm tired I'm going to..." There are many of these around the home. You open and close them and go from one room to the next. You can also lock these if you don't want people to enter. Open and close. What is it? This room in the house has a sink where you brush your teeth or wash your face or wash your hands. It has a shower where you wash yourself. This is a piece of furniture you find in the living room.

You sit on this and people will watch TV or a movie. This is big enough for two or three people sit on it. They're very comfortable. Hopefully, you're able to give an answer to all of those. Feel free to do the activity again. And if you would like to, you can pause the video and go back to the start of the activity.

Now, before I reveal the answers to you, I'm going to replay some of the key words that Ioana used to describe the nouns. At night, people turn them on because they give light. A lamp is something you turn on to light up a room. That is the answer. People eat there. People put their food on this. A place where people sit and eat is at a table. That's the answer we're looking for. This is the place where you sleep. On it, there are sheets. There are pillows. There are blankets. The place where you sleep is on a bed. You open and close them and go from one room to the next.

Something you open and close to go in and out of a room is a door. This room in the house has a sink. It has a shower. The room that has a sink and a shower is the bathroom. You sit on this and people will watch TV or a movie. A sofa or couch is somewhere you sit to watch TV. I hope you enjoyed this activity, but now it gets better because it's your turn. We're going to switch roles, and you are now going to describe the nouns to Ioana. She will then try to guess the nouns that you are describing. Make sure to speak up, be creative, and most importantly have fun.

Ready? Here's your first word. I think you're talking about the refrigerator. Ready for the second word? Here it is. I know this one. It's a kitchen. Great job today! We hope you enjoyed this activity. And if you did, give us a "like" down below. And finally, remember that sharing is caring. Please share this activity with your friends, your classmates, anyone that you know who is trying to practice and improve their English. So please keep practicing by watching our lessons. We'll see you next time.

Useful Listening Phrasal Verbs to Improve Your Fluency

Listen up because today I am going to teach you some very useful phrasal verbs. What's up everyone? My name is Wes. This is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I want to teach you some phrasal verbs because we use phrasal verbs all the time. They are so common in everyday conversation and today I'm going to teach you some phrasal verbs that are related to listening. These are listening phrasal verbs and the first one that I have for you is listen up. I said it at the very, very, very beginning of this lesson and all it means is to listen carefully.

It's just you're telling somebody or a group of people to listen carefully. So when I think about this phrasal verb being used, I think about maybe a coach talking to a group of players. They might want to get their attention and tell them, hey everybody, listen up. What I'm about to say is very important. Or maybe a teacher would say it to a group of students. They want the students to pay attention and they tell everybody, listen up. Listen Up. No one mention Richard Roper again. Listen up. I don't have to tell you what this game means. Listen up. I'm hearing a lot of whispers and rumors. All right, listen up, listen up.

Now when you listen, you are secretly listening to their conversation. You are secretly listening to what they're saying. We can also make this a three word, phrasal verb with the preposition on and listen in on someone. Looks like Gary and Gerty are about get briefed on the Yukata assignment. We should listen in. I can only assume that you're listening in. You've been listening in on our conversation. Tell the FBI agent listening in on this call Then we have here about, so to hear about something or maybe you hear about someone is is just to receive information about this thing or or person did you hear about what people are saying in the comments?

You should go check out those comments and while you're down there just write us comment because we love hearing from him. I know I hear about people who are with hearing about how did you hear about that? Hello, how did you hear about us? The next phrasal verb is here from and you hear from someone. Now this phrasal verb has three different meanings. The first meaning would just be you are receiving a phone call or a message or maybe even an email from another person. Did you hear from your friend which would just be like, okay, did they call you? Did they write you? Did you hear from them? Will I hear from you? Did you hear from the doctor? Did you hear from your friend?

Did you hear from Bobby? Did you hear from Superman? The next meeting is just to listen to a person or or even a group of people talk about a particular topic. For example, maybe the school faculty is going to hear from the students about some issue that's going on at the university. You would hear from these people we still have from tonight's featured guest. As we begin our service, we will now hear from her daughter and finally it means that if somebody is angry then then you're just going to tell some other person about it. I think it's often used in the context. Somebody angry and they say, you're going to hear from my lawyer. I'm going to tell my lawyer about this thing that I am angry about.

Or maybe somebody didn't apologize to, to you and you say, you know, if, if he doesn't apologize then, then he's going to hear from me. I'm going to let him know about this. You have two weeks. Otherwise you'll hear from my lawyer, But you'll hear from my attorneys in the morning. You'll be hearing from me Sherlock. You will be hearing from him, Mr. Scott. Okay. Wow. I can be very, very persistent. Then we have to hear someone out and when you hear someone out than you are just listening to this person. You are listening to what they have to say and and you let them finish. You are not going to interrupt this person because you are hearing them out.

Think people frequently use it when you're, you're maybe having an intense conversation or a discussion with somebody and you want this person to listen to you and you just tell him, look, hear me out. Listen to what I have to say. Hear me out Before you say or do anything. Just hear me out. Just hear me out. It's called Hinckley Cold Storage. Just hear me out. Just hear me out. All right. They're playing cards in them and I read his hand blind And I hope all of you hear me out and listen to the lesson until the very end, because if you don't, then you're, you're going to hear from me.

You're going to hear about this. Another great listening phrasal verb is here of, and you can hear of something and you are just receiving news about this thing or about this event. For example, uh, I was shocked to hear of the sad news or you could hear of someone and you're receiving news about this person. For example. I haven't heard of anyone. All right? I don't know anyone who would not hit the like button for this lesson because phrasal verbs are amazing. They're wonderful. I haven't heard of anyone who wouldn't hit that like button, which is a way of me trying to tell you to hit that like button. So why?

Why don't you go ahead and do it? You ever hear of superman. You ever hear of KFC? The king shall hear of this. Pittsburgh Crawfish. Every hear of us? Now I won't hear of it Mo. You're a fabulous catch. Then we have pick up. Now the phrasal verb pickup has many different meanings. I just want to talk to you about the meaning that's related to listening. So to pick something up is just to hear a sound. You could also pick up a scent as well, but when it comes to listening you would pick up a sound and what I think about is somebody who, who's trying to listen carefully, maybe they have their headphones on and they're trying to hear, listen in on a conversation and they were like, oh, are you picking anything up?

Have you, have you picked up the sound? Can you hear anything? Or maybe you're trying to listen to things happening in, in outer space and you're trying to pick up some sounds. You're trying to pick something up. Try the scanner. See if you can pick up anything. Don't worry Cap. I can handle it. It's all yours. If the scanner pick up anything, report it immediately. I tried to get a fix on Alphazentura according to Will's calculations. Picked this up instead. How about we talk about that other thing as mission Abdul picked up on those little radio.

The next listening phrasal verb is tune in and to tune in means to listen to and watch a TV show or maybe a news broadcast or, or even a video lesson. I really appreciate it that that all of you tune into our video lessons and and hear me out. I am really grateful for that. Thank you. Tune in next week called the exciting conclusion. Phil here. If you have tuned in for WNYX is regularly scheduled. Can you tune into the cockpit frequency? Yea, why?

The next phrasal verb, and this is probably my favorite one on this list, is to tune out and when you tune out, you just, you stop paying attention, you stop listening and you can tune someone out or you could tune something and you're, you're just not listening to this thing or this person anymore. And I really hope that you are not tuning me out right now because you've heard about something else exciting going on. Don't, don't, don't worry about that. Just just stay with me. I want you to hear me out all the way until the end Children. Okay. Tune out. Some secrets are coming out, right? Some adult one's.

Look, when usually Amy complains about her coworkers, I just tune her out. It's just one more shift. Just tune her out and she'll eventually leave you alone. And then we have, well this is not a phrasal verb, it's just an expression, but, but I liked it so I thought I would throw it in there and it is to hang on to someone's word. Often I think the, the entire expression would be to hang onto someone's every word and that just means you are listening very carefully to what someone is saying because somebody is saying something that is so exciting. It is so captivating that you just want to listen to every single word that this person is saying and you are hanging on to every word.

But he hangs on your every word. I'm asking. I'm telling you, take that responsibility seriously. I guess it's because we all want to believe that what we do is very important that people hang onto our, every word. I now the leader of thousands of people, they all hang on my every word. So listen up. Now that you've tuned in to this lesson and you've heard me out, now I want to hear from you and I want you to write to me in the comments, and if you understood this lesson and you feel like you can go out and use these phrasal verbs, then let me know in the comments and I just want you to write, I am hanging on to your every word. That way I know. Okay, this person was listening carefully. They were not tuning me out and, and they have learned something new. Thank you guys so much for watching. I hope you enjoyed learning these listening phrasal verbs and I will see you

Useful Pet Idioms to Improve Your English Fluency

Today, we're going to kill two birds with one stone. You're going to watch a really fun video, and I'm going to teach you six different idioms at the same time. Incredible. Are you ready? If you want to improve your English, have fun, learn about new idioms, phrasal verbs, pronunciation - SUBSCRIBE TO OUR CHANNEL. Subscribe. Do it. It's going to be great. Today we have a super exciting lesson. We are talking about animal idioms, specifically pet idioms. So if you have a pets, or like pets, or want to know about pets, or just want to improve and expand your idiom vocabulary, keep watching. You can use these idioms at any time. Just keep in mind that idioms should not be used for essay writing or academic writing in general.

Are you ready for the pet idioms? Here they come. Number one - Catnap. Oh, I love this one because I take so many catnaps. Catnap means a very short nap that you take throughout the day. Like cats do. That's okay. I can get plenty of catnaps here at the office. If you've ever seen a cat, they sleep all the time throughout the day. All the time. You look around. Where's your cat? It's sleeping. It's taking a catnap. And you can take a catnap too. The second idiom that I wanted to talk to you about today is to kill two birds with one stone. And this means to get two things done at the same time.

You can do two things at the same time you are killing two birds with one stone. Perhaps we can have the Pharaoh solve the problem of Solomon. And kill two birds with one stone. In addition to giving you kids a lift. I'm also on my way to a funeral. Killing two birds with one stone. I don't know where it comes from. It's a little cruel to kill two birds with one stone but also if you think about it...efficient. You only use one stone to kill two birds, so...yay. The third one... the third pet idiom is pull a rabbit out of a hat. It means to do...to surprise everyone by doing something very clever.

And this one is very cute. It reminds me of kids' magic shows. Hey Rocky, watch me pull a rabbit out of a hat. See! Nothing up my sleeve. So if you've ever seen a magician pull a rabbit out of a hat, they take out a little rabbit, and everyone is surprised, and the kids have these amazed faces. That's actually where the idiom comes from. Do you like guinea pigs? I hope you do because this next idiom is...guinea pig. And what it means is to use someone or something as a subject of an experiment. He's using patients as guinea pigs. My first guinea pig. So many times we say that someone or something was used as a guinea pig.

Or we use someone as a guinea pig, or you were used as a guinea pig. It just means as an experiment Number five - dog eat dog world. This pet idiom has a little bit of a negative connotation. And we use it when we try to explain that somebody will do anything and will stop at nothing from getting what they want. The view of the marketplace is that it's a dog-eat-dog world of hostile competitors. I come from like the dog-eat-dog world of show business, man. I mean, it's like every man for himself getting parts or movies and number one and all that kind of stuff. Our final pet idiom for today is for all of you fish lovers out there because it is fish out of water.

Somebody who is a fish out of water is someone who is uncomfortable in a certain situation. I'm a fish out of water, lion out of the jungle. He a fish out of water, lion out of the jungle. And I think it's safe to say that we have all been fish out of water at some point in our lives. Okay, wonderful. So we've learned these great pet idioms, but now it's time to practice them. I want you to use one of the idioms from this lesson and write a sentence in the comments below. Go ahead. Do it! I'll wait. You could also tell us about any pets you have or any pets you'd like to have.

For example, I would love to get a cat and we could take catnaps together. How great would that be? Oh my god. I want the cat so bad. I love animals. I'll be looking forward to reading your comments. I hope you learned some new idioms today. If you did, please give this video a thumbs up. Also, if you like animals please share this video with all of your friends and everyone you know who loves animals and maybe wants to learn some idioms too. Thanks for watching and we'll see you next time. Bye.

Useful Phrasal Verbs to Easily Talk about Clothing

Welcome. Welcome. Welcome. Today I have a really cool lesson. We are talking about phrasal verbs related to clothing. Before we begin, I just want to make sure that you really pay attention to these. Phrasal verbs are both easy and difficult. What makes them easy is that you just have a verb and a preposition. And all you have to do is memorize them. But the problem is that many times we forget which preposition goes with which verb. And that is when we mess up the meaning. And this can be actually very confusing. One of the best ways to learn phrasal verbs is to learn them by category. And a very important category is clothing because we use these phrasal verbs very, very often in English.

Whether we are putting clothes on or taking clothes off, we want to make sure that we are using these phrasal verbs correctly. So let's get to it. Let's learn some phrasal verbs about clothing. Number one is PUT ON. And "to put on" means to start wearing something. Simple as that. So for example, if I'm cold, I might want to put on a jacket. Or if I'm going to a nice event I might want to put on a nice dress. Or I might want to put on my nice boots. Put on.

Number two is the opposite of put on and it is TAKE OFF. And "take off" means to remove clothing. I've heard many learners of English use this incorrectly. Many say put off. Please don't mix these up. They're very important. We use them a lot. We talk about them in our routine. You put something on. But then when you get warm, you take it off. Put on. Take off. Put on. Take off. There you go. Now you are masters at this. Are you ready for the next one.

Number three...BREAK IN. And this means to wear something new to make it a little bit more comfortable. We can break in and new clothes or new shoes. For example, many times when we buy new shoes they're a little tight here and there, so we want to wear them so they can kind of fit to our feet. We are breaking them in. Number four...TRY ON. And "try on" means to put something on if you want to see how it fits and how it looks. For example, when we go shopping many times we will try on some clothes to see how they look. This will give us an idea whether they look good or maybe not so good.

Many times something looks amazing on the hanger. And then you try it on and maybe it doesn't look so amazing. We try them on. We try on the clothes. Number five...THROW ON. Now to "throw on" means to put something on very quickly. You just put it on very quickly. Like Superman. Wait... Is Superman very quick? Who's quick? Spiderman? The Flash? Yes. You are putting on an outfit like the Flash. So you have to be very, very quick about it. You throw it on. Sometimes, maybe if the alarm rings and you just keep hitting snooze, and then you eventually wake up. And you realize you're late. You might have to throw on some clothes because you have to get to work on time.

Number six...BUTTON UP. Now to "button up" means to fasten something with buttons. So if you're wearing something that has buttons like a sweater. No, sweaters don't. Like a cardigan. Or like a button-up shirt, or anything that has buttons. When you close those buttons you say you button up. Number seven is DRESS UP. This verb has two different meanings. The first one is to put on clothes that are a little bit more formal than the clothes you usually wear. For example, we might want to dress up for somebody's wedding. Or we dress up for a job interview. Or maybe we'll dress up for some kind of formal event. The other meaning of dress up is to put on clothes that make you look like someone else.

And we do this for fun. For example, many, many children dress up for Halloween. We like to put on a costume, and we dress up. Number eight is DRESS DOWN. Now this is the opposite of dress up. So if you dress down, you wear clothes that are less formal than the clothes you usually wear. I hope now that you have a really good understanding of these phrasal verbs. And I hope that you can use them correctly when you put your clothes on in the morning.

Now here's how I want you to practice these verbs. When you get ready in the morning, say what you are doing using the correct phrasal verb. Whether you're putting on a shirt, or trying on some new jeans, or breaking in your new pair of shoes. If you've enjoyed this lesson and feel like you've learned something new, don't forget to share it with your friends and anyone who's trying to learn English. Thank you for watching, and I'll see you next time.

Useful Phrasal Verbs with GET | Vocabulary Lesson

Today, we are going to talk to you about three different phrasal verbs and their different meanings with... Hello and welcome to our global classroom. We have an amazing lesson for you today on phrasal verbs. But first I'd like to remind you to join our social media classes. It is a great way to practice and improve your English skills. Phrasal verbs can be challenging for learners of all levels. And this is because one phrasal verb might have several different meanings. Such as the ones we will talk about today. And it's usually the preposition that follows the verb that trips people up. But hopefully after this lesson, you will have a better understanding of these three phrasal verbs.

And feel a little more confident using them in conversation or writing. One thing to note about these phrasal verbs is that they are inseparable. And that just means that the object that follows the phrasal verb cannot go between the verb and the preposition. They must stay together just as they are right now. So we're going to tell you how each of these phrasal verbs is used, give you the meaning, and some example sentences. And at the end we'll do a practice. So let's begin. First, let's begin with GET UP. This phrasal verb has two meanings. The one that you may already be familiar with is to arise from bed and get to your feet.

Don't confuse this with "wake up" which is the moment when you stop sleeping and open your eyes. GET UP is when you physically get out of bed in the morning. Me...personally, in the morning and then I just spend, you know, 10 or 15 minutes in bed and then I get up. So a common way to use this phrasal verb is... Another meaning of GET UP is "to climb or be elevated to a higher position." So if I'm down here, maybe I need to get up there.

The next phrasal verb I'd like to teach you is GET AWAY. This means to "move away from something or someone." Many times this phrasal verb is used in imperative sentences when someone gives a command. GET AWAY can also mean "to leave or escape." And this could be used literally or figuratively. We can also add "with" to "get away" and then we have a three-word phrasal verb. GET AWAY WITH This has a slightly different meaning which is "to escape the consequences of something." Maybe you do something bad and someone tells you... The final phrasal verb I'd like to look at is GET OVER. This means "to recover from something." Usually an injury or illness and return to your normal state of health.

GET OVER also means "to overcome a situation or an issue that is causing problems." We hope you have a better understanding of those three phrasal verbs, but now we'd like to practice what we've learned. So this is going to be a listening comprehension activity. I'm going to say a sentence without the phrasal verb. And I want you to point to the correct phrasal verb that completes the sentence. I'm going to say each sentence twice and then I will reveal the answer.

Let's begin! Number 1 - Ioana is so tired. What time did she _____ this morning? Ioana is so tired. What time did she _____ this morning? The answer is GET UP. We are talking about getting out of bed and getting on your feet. So you should have pointed at GET UP. Number 2 - I'm so sad. I can't _____ the fact that I lost my job. I'm so sad. I can't _____ the fact that I lost my job. In this sentence, we're talking about overcoming an issue, so the answer is GET OVER.

Number 3 - My little brother is always bothering me. And I can't seem to _____ from him. My little brother is always bothering me. But I can't seem to _____ from him. The answer is GET AWAY. In this sentence, we're talking about putting distance between me and my little brother. Number 4 - I don't how the cat was able to _____ there. I don't how the cat was able to _____ there. We're talking about the cat being in a higher or elevated position. So the answer is GET UP.

Number 5 - They've been working really hard lately so they decided to _____ for a few days and go to the beach. They've been working really hard lately so they decided to _____ for a few days and go to the beach. The answer is GET AWAY. We're talking about taking a vacation and escaping for a few days. GET AWAY Number 6 - I know you're scared. But you need to _____ it and face your fears. I know you're scared. But you need to _____ it and face your fears. When you're scared, you need to GET OVER or overcome your fears. So GET OVER is the answer. Hopefully you did really well on that practice.

And please feel free to try it again and listen for the missing phrasal verb. This is a great way to practice your listening comprehension skills or you could say the sentences aloud and that will help you practice your speaking and pronunciation. And remember...SHARING IS CARING. If you enjoyed this lesson, please share it with your fellow English learners. Thanks for watching! And we'll see you next time.

LESSON 669 OF 749

Useful Phrases to Express Your Opinion | Build Your Vocabulary

Let's talk about some very useful phrases that you can use when you want to share your opinion and I think this lesson is really important because you want to have a little bit of language variety when it comes to your speaking fluency and I think sharing your opinion is something that we often do in just everyday conversation so the first two phrases that I want to talk to you about are I think and I believe these are two very common phrases that people use when expressing their opinions one thing I will say is that it's a little more common to use I think we know this because well you can see it right there on the graph and throughout the lesson I am going to reference Google Engram Viewer which displays a graph showing how frequently phrases occur in a corpus of books and this is good because it allows us to compare different phrases like I think and I believe the one thing I want you to keep in mind is that this is taken from writing and spoken English it is a little different it's more informal but this will still give us a general idea now you may be thinking I know these verbs this is easy I use I think and I believe all the time so let me teach you something that maybe you did not know about these verbs both think and believe may be followed by a that clause which would be your direct object I think that she's away on vacation some people believe that we are not alone in the universe you should know using that is optional but you're more likely to use it with belief and this is because think is more of a reporting verb so in informal spoken English it's often dropped I think she's away on vacation now believe it's more referring to your mental process so you're likely to follow it with a that clause some people believe that we are not alone in the universe and we can also add emphasis to these phrases using adverbs and then it's like we have an adverb verb collocation and that does not mean that you're always going to use the same adverbs with both think and believe so let me let me give you some collocations with these verbs you could say I truly believe or I firmly believe or even I strongly believe that you should hit the like button okay that's just my opinion if we're talking about think uh I could say well I honestly think or I really think or I definitely think you should subscribe to the channel and turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel Interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and in my opinion this is the best place to do just that and well right there that is the next phrase that I want to talk to you about in my opinion and this is another very common phrase that people will use in both formal and informal situations so it's a great phrase to use if you are in a meeting or giving a presentation it's simple it's clear it's easy to understand and I think most people would use this adverb phrase at the beginning of a statement when they're getting ready to introduce their opinion so how does this affect spoken English it's going to create a separate thought group which means there's going to be a short pause just listen in my opinion the moon is made of cheese in my opinion socks and sandals are a great combination in my opinion you should check out my speaking course so you should hear those slight pauses right after I say in my opinion and that last one is true in my opinion you should check out my speaking course I truly believe that it will help you practice and improve your speaking skills and I definitely think you should click on the link below because when you do you will find a special discount just for you the course is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally each week there is a different speaking topic you will learn vocabulary related to that topic we do engaging speaking activities we warm up each lesson with pronunciation or connected speech there are also pronunciation video lessons included in the course in addition I will teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases just click on the link below if you'd like to sign up or learn more about the course and yeah

I hope to speak to you soon in my honest opinion you will love it and that's what I want to talk to you about now I want to use a couple of adjectives to create some more collocations in my honest opinion and in my humble opinion so once again we're adding emphasis and if you say in my honest opinion you're just directly telling the person that you're trying to be honest you're trying to be sincere in my honest opinion you are an amazing person I think it's wonderful that we all hear that from time to time that's just my honest opinion okay so maybe you noticed I used the phrase once at the beginning to introduce my opinion and then I used it again but this time at the end of a statement that is just my honest opinion so you can use either of these phrases at the beginning or the end of a statement and then when you say in my humble opinion well then you're telling someone that you're not trying to be proud you're just you're just sharing your thoughts and i think you may often use this one when you want to express an opinion that well is not rude but perhaps it could be difficult to share i have had people share their opinions about well some of these lessons and previously somebody said you know you should get a new microphone because your audio isn't that great now i can take this opinion and soften it up a little bit and say in my humble opinion you should get a new microphone because the audio isn't that great all right it's just it's a little more it's it's just easier to take in when somebody says look in my humble opinion i'm not trying to be too proud and i took that person's advice and that's why i bought this well this nice lavalier mic then we have i'm of the opinion this is another phrase that you can use that has the word opinion but it's just not as frequently used because to be of the opinion is really a much more formal way of saying i think or i believe and as you can see when we compare this phrase with in my opinion it's it's just a lot more common to say in my opinion still it's good to get a little language variety and make all of these phrases a part of your speaking vocabulary one thing i'll say about this phrase is that you will follow it with a that clause so i could say i'm of the opinion that you should watch another video lesson and i'm not telling you what to do that's just my humble opinion next is the phrase in my view and this really just means the same thing as in my opinion it's not as commonly used and you can see right there over the years it's been close and and the battle is still raging but in my honest opinion and this is really my honest opinion i think if somebody says in my view it just sounds a little more formal than saying in my opinion however you can use this in any situation now we just talked about getting a little language variety because in my view it's important to use different phrases when expressing your opinion you don't want to continuously say the same thing over and over and i i firmly believe that okay

the next one is from my point of view and this just refers to the way that you see a situation you know your point of view now i will say to be careful with these prepositions in and from because i have heard some learners confuse these and they may say from my view or in my point of view so if we're just talking about someone's view use in in my view if we're talking about point of view use from from my point of view so point of view from point of view from and point of view from if i say it enough times i think it's just gonna sink in and you'll say yes from my point of view now you can use this phrase to introduce your opinion but i think often people will use it at the end of a sentence and say something like try to see things from my point of view you know try to understand my opinion about the situation and in my view i think some people have difficulty seeing things from other people's point of view and i'm just trying to use both of them right there and then there's as far as i'm concerned i like this one and i use it every now and then it's another way to introduce your opinion especially when somebody asks you a question or or they just want to know your thoughts also i really think that it slightly emphasizes your opinion about something um like if somebody says why are you leaving the meeting as far as i'm concerned this meeting is over or what should i wear to the interview as far as i'm concerned you should dress to impress or should we wait for her to get here we told her to be here at seven o'clock so as far as i'm concerned we should go ahead and start eating so in each of those examples it's like i'm slightly emphasizing my opinion about this situation and in my view you should continue to build your vocabulary and learn new phrases because it's all going to help your overall fluency and i truly believe that you will be able to use these phrases because quite often we want to share our thoughts and opinions with others and of course i am of the opinion that if you learn something new you should hit that like button and that that's just my humble opinion and you may be thinking how long is this charade going to last and we just keeps saying these phrases and using them and reviewing and if that were your question then i would say yeah as far as i'm concerned we need to wrap this lesson up so i hope you enjoyed it i hope you learned some new phrases remember to check out that link below if you'd like to learn more about my speaking course and i will see you next time so long

Useful Phrases to Say "I'm tired." | Build Your Vocabulary

today I want to talk to you about a very common statement in English it's something that people say all the time you've probably even said it and that is I'm tired so you already know what this means if somebody says I'm tired but the way that we're going to build your vocabulary is learning different ways in which you can express this feeling because not all of them are the same you can think of somebody saying I'm tired as as like an umbrella and underneath that there are different situations and different contexts in which you would want to use these different phrases to express that feeling and that's how we've broken this down instead of just throwing at you a bunch of different statements that mean the same thing I want to talk to you about the situation we're going to take one situation and talk about different ways in which you could say that you're tired and it means the same thing so for example when you think of somebody that says I'm tired then probably you think of a lack of sleep that this person hasn't slept and as a result of that they would say I'm tired so if we're talking about a lack of sleep there are different ways in which you can express that the first one is I'm sleepy so if somebody says I'm sleepy it means the same thing as I'm tired and that you need to get some sleep you are tired and you need to go to sleep now when we're talking about somebody saying I'm sleepy I think it's it's used in a situation that you're sleepy you're tired but you can't go to sleep just yet so let's just pretend that maybe you're working on some project at night it's getting late into the night you haven't finished yet and somebody asks you you know oh you know how you doing how do you feel and you say you know I'm I'm a little sleepy but

I I just need some coffee I just need something to stay awake so I can keep going so that's how I think of somebody using that statement and telling someone you know oh I'm sleepy I'm feeling a bit sleepy you could also say that somebody looks sleepy and that they they look very tired their eyes are closing and they're like oh you know he he looks a bit sleepy I don't think it's a good thing to necessarily tell someone you know oh you look sleepy it could be uh you know it could even be a little offensive depending on the situation the context so just keep that in mind and be careful before you just go tell somebody you know hey you know you look sleepy I speak from experience because I've had English Learners tell that to me at like the middle of the day and they're like oh you know teacher you know you look sleepy and I haven't been sleeping

I don't know maybe it's just the way I guess that I looked that day but at the same time it's not something you often want to hear so just make sure that you are using it in the appropriate situation the next one is it's a bit more informal and that's just I'm beat so if you tell somebody that you know oh you're beat it just means that you are very tired that you really need to get some sleep you're very tired and you just say you know oh like I'm I'm beat I'm ready to go to bed I need to get some sleep I'm beat another statement that that means the same thing and is probably a little more commonly used if you want to express that you were very tired and that is just I'm exhausted so if you really need to get some sleep you've been you haven't slept in a long time and you could tell somebody you know I I'm just exhausted right now I I don't want to stay up any longer I'm exhausted I need to go to sleep then we have I'm pooped and this is it's also more informal and I think maybe that it's it's not as common you're not going to hear uh everybody say this one when they want to say that they're tired I I don't generally say it so if anything you know you can use it if you want but it's more for your comprehension in case you hear it if you're watching a TV show or a movie or you might be having a conversation with somebody and they're very tired and they tell you know ah I'm pooped so if somebody says I'm pooped it has nothing to do with going to the bathroom it's talking about getting some sleep because that person is tired I'm poop finally if you are very tired because of a lack of sleep instead of saying I'm tired you could say you know I can barely keep my eyes open so think think about it it means exactly what it says if you are so tired and you're going to sleep you're starting to close your eyes and you're trying to fight it off I can barely keep my eyes open you are very tired exhausted beat and again in in this context I think of somebody they would say it because perhaps they're trying to stay awake just like I mentioned when somebody says you know I'm sleepy I think of them perhaps trying to stay awake in order to finish something perhaps they want to watch something who knows whatever it is you're trying to stay awake just a little bit longer and you're having a very very tough time doing it you could link down in the description so now let's get back to our vocabulary lesson then there is an expression which is British English you might hear it if you are traveling in the UK or maybe you're watching some TV show or movie that takes place in the UK and people are speaking British English and they might say I'm knackered so if somebody says I'm knackered it means that they are tired it's not something that I say or that you're likely going to hear in the United States but just so you know I'm knackered is the same as I'm tired so all of those expressions can be used when you're talking about a lack of sleep the that somebody says I'm tired they need to get some sleep you can use any one of those expressions and I try to give you some more specific information about the the situation in which you may use these but now I want to talk to you about a different category that people would still say I'm tired and that is when you are overworked and in in that sense I'm talking about when somebody is overworked physically or they are overworked mentally in either case you can use these next expressions to convey to say I'm tired first I want to point out that some of the Expressions can be used in in multiple ways for example we're talking about the statement I'm tired you can use that to talk about all of these categories at the same time if we're talking about somebody who is overworked physically or mentally you can also say I'm beat I'm exhausted I'm pooped again in this case I'm pooped is not going to be as common but you you may hear it from time to time I'm beat is still informal and I'm exhausted is probably the most commonly used between those three if somebody is talking about being mentally tired from work they've been working too hard and they want to stop and they want to go home you could say you know I'm I'm just exhausted or if you're talking about being physically tired you are overworked physically if you have been running a marathon if you're running a marathon and you get to the very end you are really really tired you might tell somebody oh you know I am exhausted I can't do any more exercise I am just exhausted so I think you would commonly hear this being used when people are talking about playing sports basketball soccer anything where it is just some real physical exercise that they're doing afterwards they might say you know I'm I'm exhausted you may also hear somebody say I'm drained if they are overworked physically or mentally then you could just you know I'm drained and and what it means is that you were just drained of energy you have no more energy left you are so tired because uh you are overworked physically or mentally you are drained well the last few weeks I've been feeling weak just drained of energy [Music] full energy physically I feel like I could demolish a tank mentally I just feel I feel so drained anymore you know I feel vigorous like I could ride my bike around the park a lot of people trying to drain me on my energy I hope that you're not drained and this isn't too much for you because I I still have quite a few Expressions that I want to go over so if you're feeling sleepy just go get go get some coffee do some jumping jacks try to wake up so so that you can continue learning these Expressions another great expression is I'm worn out so if you are physically or mentally tired and you say that you're worn out I think it's it's often used in the context of you're you're trying to say okay you need to relax you need to take a break so I'm worn out I'm gonna go uh outside for a walk uh you know I'm I'm a bit worn out so I'm just gonna walk instead of run so when I think of somebody saying I'm worn out often I think that they're implying that they to take a break and that they're going to take a break because they're tired next is I'm spent and when somebody says I'm spent that obviously they're tired but it's like they have spent all of their energy so in that way it's a little similar to you know I'm drained I'm drained of energy I have spent all of my energy and there's nothing left because I have done too much physically or mentally and you could just say I'm spent all right I can't do any more I'm spent I am not spent I was just teaching you the expression and we will continue with burnt out I'm burnt out and if somebody says you know I'm I'm burnt out again they they just there's no more energy left they have been overworked so instead of saying I'm tired you could just tell somebody you know I'm I'm burnt out and you could think of it in the context of of a fire a fire is raging and there's a lot of energy and then after some time it burns out and when it burns out there's there's nothing left there's no more and and that's how you would feel if you want to tell somebody I'm tired I'm burnt out and that's how you would feel as well if you are just so tired you could tell somebody you know I'm I'm burnt out then we have I'm done and when I think of this I can see it being used more in the context of work or they're just working so hard on something and they hit that breaking point they're so tired and they just say you know I'm done it's finished it's over I'm done I'm tired I'm not going to work on this anymore you could also say it I think when when talking about a physical activity again the the the meaning is still the same that you're not going to continue anymore you're you're you're tired of whatever it is that you're doing whatever sport you're playing and you just tell people you know I'm done that's it I'm done I'm not going to continue I'm I'm tired I'm done I think we've all been there before and I it also entails a level of frustration that when I'm frustrated whether it's empty or there's fumes in the car either way it's not going to go much further neither are you and you could say you know I'm I'm running on empty I'm running on fumes finally you could tell somebody I'm on my last legs and if you say I'm on my last legs again you're you're just so tired because of the the physical activity the work you you can't go much further you could say I'm on my last legs we can also use this expression in the context of of health and somebody talking about like they don't have much longer to live for example maybe you have a a pet an old dog or an old cat that is going to pass away somebody might say you know you know they're they're on their last legs they don't have much longer left they've lived a long life but in that context you could say that they're they're tired in a sense and they don't have much longer to live I'm on my last legs it's my Aunt Shirley she's on her last legs you must be on your left leg I haven't been this exhausted since I stayed up all night with my first Tesla coil now I want to teach you a couple of more expressions in another category and that is getting sick so I I think all of us can relate to that when we don't feel very well and we're starting to get sick I I think it's normal we feel tired you could say you know I'm tired but instead of saying I'm tired and you want to convey that you're perhaps starting to get sick you could tell somebody you know I'm feeling a bit run down so in that context you're telling the person that you're you're so tired and you're not feeling the best that you might get sick in the near future and it doesn't have to be really sick but maybe you're just coming down with a cold and you'd say you know I'm I'm feeling a bit run down lately at work I've just been exhausted there's too much going on I've been running on empty for quite a few days now and because of that I think I'm starting to get a little sick I'm feeling a bit run down or you could tell somebody I'm feeling fatigued and fatigue that's just a synonym for tired but it's used in the context of health and somebody feeling like they're going to get sick so instead of saying I'm I'm feeling a bit run down you could just say you know I'm I'm feeling fatigued lately I'm just feeling fatigued and I need to get some rest so that I take care of myself and hopefully I don't get sick then I want to teach you two more Expressions that are well they're kind of in their own category and the first one is dealing with medicine so sometimes when you take some medication you're going to feel tired it has some effects when somebody takes medicine and they feel tired I think it's it's common that somebody might say you know I'm I'm feeling drowsy I'm feeling a little drowsy I'm tired the reason that you're feeling drowsy is because of some medicine that you have take taken its cause you to feel tired and you could tell somebody you know I'm I'm I'm feeling a bit drowsy if you were in the U. S the UK Australia Canada any English-speaking country and you go to a pharmaceutical store and you find some medication often you may see uh on the the Box it'll say drowsy or non-drowsy this will make you feel tired or this won't make you feel tired so again if somebody says I'm I'm drowsy it makes me think that they have been taking something that's making them feel this way that's making them feel a bit tired next is one that that is very common and it's talking about travel so when you travel by plane and you travel a long distance you're going to change time zones and that change in time will affect your body it'll affect your your brain and you could say that you are jet lagged so when you travel a long distance uh for me we we travel from from the United States to Europe you know we change time zones and it takes a a couple days to adjust to the new time zone and during that time you could say you know I'm just I'm jet lagged I'm jet lagged I'm feeling really tired it's going to take some time before I adjust to this time zone so when somebody says I'm jet lag it I know that they have either just returned from a trip or maybe they just they're at the start of their trip but they've traveled a long distance they're trying to adjust to the time from traveling by plane it's not talking about a boat it's not talking about a train or a car it's when somebody flies and they're adjusting to the time zone you could say I'm jet lagged Mom I'm tired okay I have airplane mode [Laughter] he's jet lag you want to go monitor some dinner uh I'm actually pretty jet-lagged probably gonna just catch up on some sleep this jet lag I can't sleep how you feeling exhausted maybe it's the uh the jet lag so now you've just learned uh many different ways to say I'm tired which is so useful because again that statement somebody's saying I'm tired it's very common and you can still use that if you want to it's perfectly okay but if you want to be specific in certain situations it's good to know these other Expressions so that you can accurately express your your thoughts and opinions and ideas and give that extra little bit of information for example if you want to tell somebody no I'm drowsy then I know they've taken some medicine if somebody says you know I'm you know I'm a little sleepy then I know they need to go to bed or I'm jet lag they've just traveled a long distance or I'm pooped I had noticed that one because I don't hear it as often but I I understand what it means I'm pooped I'm tired I'm exhausted I'm drained all right there are so many different ways to say I'm tired and now I would encourage you to go out and try to use them but also actively try to listen for them as well the next time you're watching a TV show or watching a movie and see if you can listen for these Expressions because people use them quite often all right wow we we just covered a lot of ground today I'm I'm drained that was that was a lot of work and because I'm I'm drained I'm exhausted I I think I need to go to bed I'm feeling a little sleepy I'm I'm running on empty I'm on my last legs all right so I that that that's all I yeah I'll just go to bed all right I'll see you next time

Useful Proverbs to Share WISDOM | Advanced Expressions

today I want to teach you some very common proverbs that will help you share a little bit of wisdom with others that's coming up hey everyone my name is Wes from interactive English videos dot-com and we are all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I want to teach you some common proverbs and if you don't know what a proverb is they are these short little sayings that will offer some wisdom advice or just state some obvious truth today specifically I want to focus on proverbs that will help you share some wisdom with others and they really help you describe a certain situation so the first one that I want to teach you is when in Rome do as the Romans do and what this proverb means is that when you travel in another country you should act and behave just like the citizens of that country it's quite common that this proverb will get shortened to just when in Rome so if somebody makes a comment or statement saying when in Rome that's what they're talking about this whole proverb when in Rome do as the Romans do let me give you an example so in some countries like China Japan Korea people may eat using chopsticks and you are getting ready to travel there and you know that you're going to be eating out at restaurants and maybe you you have never used chopsticks before but somebody says you know when in Rome okay when you go there you need to try and use chopsticks you need to try and and really become a part of that culture while you're there so I think this is a great proverb it is a very wise proverb because it's going to help people really become more accepted when they are traveling in another country and there's just less likely to do something that is inappropriate or possibly even offensive because you're really trying to behave just like the citizens of that country When in Rome do as the Romans do or just say when in Rome I'll take a Manhattan and kick the vermouth in the side with a pair of steel-toed Wow quite a drink order oh well when in Rome then we have the proverb two wrongs don't make a right and this proverb is you're basically talking about somebody who might want to get revenge on somebody else so if somebody does something bad to you and you are upset and you want to get revenge then somebody else might say hey two wrongs don't make a right if you try to do something wrong and do something bad to this other person it's just going to make things worse so I think often in life we all experience this situation where somebody does something bad to us and we think oh you know I want to get back at this person and that's when somebody could tell you look you know don't don't worry about getting revenge two wrongs don't make a right because you're more likely to just make that situation worse two wrongs don't make a right somebody ought to rule a gambler's career the way he ruined Krusty two wrongs don't make a right back don't the next proverb is absence makes the heart grow fonder okay so this proverb I think is talking about two people that maybe are there they're separated for some reason so absence is talking about two people being apart from each other and it makes the heart grow fonder when you are away from this other person you may be more likely to think about them you may be more likely to miss that person and that's what this proverb is saying that when people are away from each other especially your loved ones you could say you know absence makes the heart grow fonder so this is I think a very wise proverb especially offering maybe somebody a little bit of comfort when they saying that you know you understand what they're going through if we are away from our loved ones or the people we care about you can say you know I know absence makes the heart grow fonder we we often think about and miss those that we care about a lot especially when they're far away absence makes the heart grow fonder they say that absence makes the heart grow fonder arm or my thoughts turned to head and finally failed a pain of imprisonment then there's the proverb money doesn't grow on trees and in this case you are telling somebody who typically spends a lot of money that hey you know money is not easy to get you have to work hard to obtain it it's not like it just grows on trees and you have just an abundance of money that you can take and spend so you're trying to offer somebody a little bit of wisdom and remind them that you know money is important you need to be careful you need to be wise in how you are spending that money and you're trying to tell somebody look you know money doesn't grow on trees it's difficult to come by so you need to be careful on how you're spending your money money doesn't grow on trees they only do you have any concept of money at all mine doesn't grow on trees you know next is the proverb patience is a virtue and I think well I guess I would say this is one of my favorites because I think it applies to me this is something that I think I need to remember because a virtue is just talking about something that is excellent it is an admirable quality if somebody is virtuous so you're saying that patience the ability to wait for something is a virtue and I think that we all find ourselves in certain situations in which we just don't want to wait any longer we must act right now and in that case somebody may say look patience is a virtue you need to wait you need to be patient and like I said I think of myself sometimes I I don't like to wait I just want to do something now I want to finish something right away when I I think in the back of my mind I know that it's good to be patient and that it would be good to wait and I would have to try and tell myself look you know patience is a virtue it's a good thing to be able to wait don't give up easy do you this is a virtue then we have the proverb early bird catches the worm and you you could probably understand this proverb based on exactly what it says that birds may be they're going they need to eat worms in the earlybird the one that gets up first in the morning ahead of everyone else is going to get that meal is going to catch that worm so if somebody's trying to share this bit of wisdom with you they're saying that you know you need to work hard you need to be number one you need to get there before everyone else and then you will you'll finish what you need to finish or you will get the thing that you are looking for for example maybe you want to go see this very popular movie and it's opening day and you're not sure if you're going to get tickets or not you could say hey you know early bird catches the worm you need to get there early you need to wait in line because patience is a virtue and then at the end you will likely get that ticket early bird catches the worm get their head you're not the only early bird gets to work then we have the proverb beauty is in the eye of the beholder and what this means is that the beholder is talking about the person who's looking at something it's talking about their point of view what they think so if you say beauty is in the eye of the beholder it just means that everybody has a different opinion as to what is beautiful or what may not be beautiful because something that you think is beautiful perhaps a painting may be I don't think it's that great and then we could say well beauty is in the eye of the beholder that we all have a different opinion about what Beauty means it's different for each and every one of us so in that situation where you may disagree with someone about well what is beautiful you could then say you know beauty is in the eye of the beholder we can we can disagree as to what is beautiful or not beautiful beauty is in the eye of the beholder who's the more gorgeous than you Oh name one person well after all beauty is in the eye of the beholder right then we have the proverb the grass is always greener on the other side this is another proverb that you may often hear shortened people would just say the grass is always greener and what it means is that you are you are thinking about some other person's situation and you think it's much better than your own even though that's not true and you would say well the grass is always greener on the other side with that person's situation because maybe maybe this person has a great job maybe they have a lot of money and you think wow their life their life is so easy - so difficult and you know that may not be true perhaps this other person has many other problems that you might not know about so in that case I think you're trying to give somebody a bit of wisdom and tell them like look you you should be happy with your situation even though you think that this other situation is much better that you know it may not be the grass is always green it's funny I used to stand in here and wish I was out there now I'm out there I wish I was in here the grass is always greener next is the proverb a picture is worth a thousand words and this proverb simply means that a picture often has a stronger message than than words that may describe a situation so instead of just reading about some situation it's better to have a picture it's more meaningful it's more powerful it has a stronger message than those words and in that case you could say well a picture is worth a thousand words and typically we're talking about pictures that could be very profound and are often about some important topic for example maybe poverty or war or you you catch somebody cheating or doing something wrong and there is a picture of that and you could say well a picture is worth a thousand words this picture has a very strong message it's a very disturbing picture they say a picture's worth a thousand words but I say nothing beats a picture and a thousand words so now I'd like you to go out and share this wisdom with others share this lesson with others who you know are trying to practice and improve their English skills and I would also encourage you to try and practice using these Proverbs because they are quite common when describing specific situations and especially if you want to offer some wisdom to your friends your family or even your colleagues if you enjoyed this lesson and you learned something new please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time

Useful Proverbs to Share WISDOM | Build Your Vocabulary

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson which i i think is a very fun lesson because i want to teach you different proverbs to help you share some wisdom and if you don't know what proverbs are they are these well short sayings or statements that people will use to either share some wisdom or give some advice or just say something that isn't obvious truth so specifically in today's lesson i want to focus on sharing wisdom i want to focus on those statements that if you find yourself in a situation where you want to share some wisdom with another person then these proverbs are perfect for that so the first proverb that i have for you is beauty is only skin deep and what this proverb means is that someone's character their intellect their all of their inner qualities are more important than his or her outside beauty and their physical features so you could say beauty is only skin deep now the reason why i say that you can use this to share some wisdom with another person is that i think if you are if you find yourself in a situation where another friend is going through a difficult time romantically or with a relationship and they really like this person they're very attracted to the way somebody looks but after dating them they realize okay it's not going to work they're just not going to connect with that person and maybe they're a little sad about that because they're they're really attracted to the outside appearance and then you could you could tell that person you know beauty is only skin deep you know what they say beauty is only skin deep and and kind of remind them that those inside qualities those are the most important not the outside appearance if you had an ounce of self-esteem of self-worth of self-confidence you would realize that as tried as it may sound beauty is truly skin-deep the next proverb is every cloud has a silver lining and this proverb i think would most often be used to give some reassurance to someone because what it means is that every bad situation or something that has a negative impact there will always be some good that may come out of this and you'd say every cloud has a silver lining and if you want to think about it in terms of exactly what it says think about if you're outside and it's a cloudy day and you start to see that silver lining which is the sun which tells you that eventually the sun is going to come out it's going to be a beautiful day and everything will be much better so in that case if somebody is going through some kind of bad situation and you want to tell them that well even though there is this bad situation there there may be one or two small good things that come out of it and you could say every cloud has a silver lining when things are sad you just have to be patient because every cloud has a silver lining comes man george doesn't want to play with me i know but every cloud has a silver lining then we have the proverb every dog has its day and i i really like this proverb because well what it means is that even someone who is very unfortunate someone who is very unlucky they will still have success at some point in their life that is when you can use this proverb and really you can capture that situation and say well every dog has its day when you want to tell that person that you know i know you've had you've been having a rough time lately so it's good that you you got some success every dog has day the keys are inside i guess every dog has his day as a future veterinarian you should know that every dog eventually has his day then we have the proverb one man's trash is another man's treasure and what this proverb means is that if somebody thinks that something is junk it's trash they don't need it anymore and they're going to throw it out some other person may think it's valuable they can use it they can find something to do with it and in that case you could say well one man's trash is another man's treasure and i like this proverb because i think there are there are times in all of our lives when maybe someone wants to throw something out or they want to get rid of it but you say wait wait wait i i can use that i need that i'll take it and in that case then you could say you know one man's trash is another man's treasure one of my girlfriends threw a party where all the women were asked to bring a man they weren't interested in somebody brought bob and the rest is history oh i love that one woman's trash is another woman's treasure next is the proverb rome wasn't built in a day and what this means is that if you are working hard on some project that it's going to take a long time to complete and it's almost like you're telling someone that they need to be patient because i think we've all been in that situation before where we are working very hard on something and we want to finish it quickly someone else could then tell you and say relax take your time rome wasn't built in a day and i really like this proverb because i think it's very useful because whether you're talking about work or school or something that's going on at home there are many different situations in which you can use this if you want to tell someone that it's going to take a while to complete this work so they shouldn't stress out about it they shouldn't worry about it it's going to take some time you can tell them you know rome wasn't built in a day must take it slowly a room wasn't built in a day i know is the minivac ready take it easy boss after all rome wasn't built in a or knock off the philosophy will you then we have a very common proverb which is ignorance is bliss and what this means is that if you well if you don't know about something then you really don't need to be concerned about it in other words if you are unaware that something is happening then it's not going to cause you stress you can just go on with your life you have no idea this is happening and somebody might say they may describe you and say well ignorance is bliss you are completely unaware of it and because of that you can just continue on with your life you're not you're not worried about it at all so i think it can be well it can be used in both a positive and negative way it really just depends on the situation so let me give you an example so hopefully it'll make a little more sense i think this can really be said about food because they're i think we go to the grocery store we buy food and we don't always know exactly where it came from and i think sometimes we don't want to know where it came from and in that case you could say well ignorance is bliss i don't want to think about it because then well i may not want to eat it ready get started one moment subject appears well rested and enthusiastic apparently ignorance is bliss i know that when i put it in my mouth the matrix is telling my brain that it is juicy and delicious you know what i realize ignorance is bliss the next proverb is you're never too old to learn and i really like this proverb because i i think it is i think it is absolutely true and and all it means is that you are you are inspiring someone to learn something and do something new because you're trying to tell them that hey it doesn't matter how old you are you should continue trying to learn new things you're never too old to learn and i would say this to somebody if they want to learn a musical instrument if they want to learn a new language this is something that that i would try to use and encourage other people especially as as they get older i know i'm starting to get older and sometimes i feel that something well it may be too difficult i'm not going to do it and in that case i would want someone to tell me and reassure me and say look wes you're never too old to learn you should try this you should keep learning you're never too old to learn well you're never too old to learn something new yeah mother nature's finest killer mr win one is never too old to learn from a master mr kid and because we just talked about the proverb you're never too old to learn i think it's relevant to teach you this next proverb which well maybe it's more of an expression and that is you can't teach an old dog new tricks and the reason why i think this is relevant is because it kind of means the opposite of you're never too old to learn what it means is that someone has been doing something a certain way for a really long time and because they've always done it this way it's hard for them to change you cannot get this person to change even if your way is much better and in that case you could describe this person and say well you can't teach an old dog new tricks and i think that i think all of us could relate to it if we are just used to doing something one way it's easy for us we know how to do it and even if there is a better way it can be difficult to change and in that case that is that is the situation in which this proverb would be relevant you can't teach an old dog new tricks hey you want to try something no come on no no i guess you can't teach an old dog new trick because there's no limit to how neat your handwriting can marge i don't know you can't teach an old dog new trick inspirational what have we learned well we have learned that you can't teach an old dog new tricks so i hope these proverbs were easy to understand i hope the lesson was easy to follow and you can perhaps try and go out and use these proverbs if you find yourself in a specific situation but especially i i hope that you try to listen for them the next time you're involved in a conversation or you're listening to a podcast a song a tv show a movie you will hear them from time to time i am going to end it on that note right there have a wonderful day and i will see you next time

Useful SPEAKING Phrases to Build Your Vocabulary

wow speak of the devil i i was just talking about you out loud to myself that's that's not true but speak of the devil is the first phrase that i want to teach you in this lesson so what it means is well you would say this when the person you were talking about suddenly appears so if you and i are talking about um i don't know donald trump and then suddenly woman man camera tv very insightful and then we could say well speak of the devil donald he just suddenly appeared so it doesn't really have a negative or positive connotation it does let that other person know that well you were just talking about them but it's a it's a fun phrase when you happen to be speaking about someone and then that person just suddenly shows up and in this lesson i am going to teach you some super useful phrases with the word speak or speaking and if you enjoy learning some very useful vocabulary then i suggest that you subscribe turn on notifications so that way i can become your teacher my name is wes and that's what interactive english is all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals the next phrase that i have for you is so to speak and you would use this phrase to draw attention to the fact that you are describing something in a an amusing or strange or or figurative way instead of just saying things directly if i were to say something like look we need to be on the same page so to speak so to be on the same page is an idiom that means you you need to understand what each other is doing you need to agree on things but instead of saying that directly i could use that idiom and then follow it with so to speak or if i were telling you a story that wow i almost fell down the mountain it was like i was looking death straight in the face so to speak so again i'm i'm telling this story i'm trying to describe it in a figurative way and i can use that phrase so to speak here are a couple of other examples to help you get a feel for the context them are you sticking so to speak i believe lecture has even seen a woman in eight years and oh are you ever his taste so to speak and then we have the phrasal verb speak up and this has two different meanings the first one is it it means you're asking someone or telling them to speak louder that you can't hear them like hey i can't hear you please please speak up so you may hear people use this like in a meeting or when somebody's giving a presentation if if somebody's not speaking very loudly then some other person might say hey hey i need you to speak up we can't hear you or maybe if somebody is on the phone and they're having trouble hearing the other person they might say hey can you please speak up i'm having trouble hearing you the next meaning of this phrasal verb is to share your opinion or really just say what you think so it can be used in the context of well you're encouraging someone to share their opinion like yes i really think you should speak up and and say what's on your mind or perhaps there's maybe some regret that you didn't say something and you might say something like well i i should have spoken up at the meeting i didn't say anything but yeah i should have spoken up and right now i want to say what's on my mind and tell you about my speaking course which is called speak up and it really works with both meanings like i'm telling you hey you can speak loudly and confidently or just telling you hey it's okay share share your opinion and you should speak up and if you are interested in practicing and improving your speaking skills then please click on the link down below and when you do you will find a special discount just for you the course is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally each week there is a different speaking topic i will teach you some useful vocabulary related to those topics we do engaging speaking activities we warm up each lesson with something related to pronunciation connected speech there are also pronunciation video lessons included in the course and i will teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases so

click on the link below if you'd like to sign up or learn more about the course and yeah i just hope to speak to you soon so let's get back to our useful phrases with the word speak or speaking and the next phrase that i have for you is speak for yourself so this is something you say to someone to say that the opinion they just expressed is not the same as your opinion so it's like someone else is speaking for you and maybe they're using the word we and they include you and they're sharing their opinion and you you don't agree with their opinion and you could tell them hey speak for yourself i just don't agree with you so if someone were to to say you know we think that this english lesson is just terrible we think it's terrible and you're like no no i don't agree with that you could say speak for yourself i think this english lesson is

use it with plural nouns as well with phrases like well the facts speak for themselves that well you the facts are clear and no more information is needed here's another example this is a news headline it says benbocker says track record speaks for itself so again they're talking about well the type of work they do their track record speaks for itself and then there's a new book neil hamilton lets land speak for itself so the information is clear nothing further is needed yes the land speaks for itself and then there's speak volumes and this means to provide a lot of information about something without using words maybe you want me to speak up and express my opinion but i stay silent perhaps i'm afraid and you could then tell me you know your your silence speaks volumes so this is a statement that you may hear with with this phrase someone's silence speaks volumes that they're being very quiet and that that is just giving you a lot of extra information without using any words here are a couple of other uses with this phrase you play your cards right all the work you did over the past few months will speak volumes for you because he's usually such a chatterbox no but it's different now it's more a verbal nonverbal he speaks volumes with his eyes and then i have a collocation for you which is technically speaking these words are commonly used together and what it means is that you are clarifying something with extra details and more information so i could say i get up early in the morning technically speaking i get up at 5am so i'm just giving extra information and clarifying exactly what time i get up the other thing i would say about this collocation is that you're you're generally going to use it at the beginning of a statement so here are a couple of other examples so the headline is u.s economy contracts and then they clarify this at the very beginning using technically speaking this negative economic growth and then they then talk about what it looks like and the reasons for this the next article a guide to fighting jet lag so the headline is talking about fighting jet lag and the article begins technically speaking and then clarifies what jet lag is and why it occurs so i hope that the quality of this lesson speaks for itself and even though you don't have to tell me directly if you hit that like button it speaks volumes and i also hope that you learn some new vocabulary which is going to help you speak english perfectly so to speak and i love hearing from you so it would be great if you want to speak up in the comments down below and just yeah share your your opinions let me know what you think and i'm just trying to give you a little bit of quick review but that's all i got for today thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Useful Shopping Idioms So You Can Shop Till You Drop

- Do you like shopping like I do? Because if you do, I have some new shopping idioms for you. That's coming up. Hello and welcome. Today's lesson, I believe, is very useful because we are talking about shopping idioms. Because this is a very, very common subject, you are going to hear these idioms all the time. What I'm going to do is I give you the idioms, a little bit of an explanation, like how and when they're used and then an example sentence. So, let's get to it. Our first idiom is window shopping. To window shop means to just look in the window of a store without buying anything and just look and see what is there.

This is probably the one I like the least. The reason is because when you window shop for something, you don't actually shop. You don't actually go inside the store and buy stuff. You just look, which I guess it can be fun sometimes, but most of the time, I think it's more fun when you actually buy things. - We've got a lot of window shopping to do. - [Jerry] Plus, this is the perfect time to catch up on my window shopping. - I'm very well aware that there are many people who like to window shop and the only thing I like to window shop for is I think furniture and interior design stuff.

That can be fun. It gives me ideas. How about you? What do you like to window shop for? Do you like it, is it annoying? What do you think? The next idiom is rip-off, a rip-off. This is used as a noun or a verb. So, something can be a rip-off or somebody can rip you off. Either way, it's not a good thing because when something is a rip-off, it means that it costs way more than it should, way more. - What? What a rip-off. - I got ripped off! - A rip-off is an informal way to say that somebody's stealing from you. So, if something's a rip-off, you almost feel like somebody was trying to steal money from you.

That's how much you're paying for this particular item. It's a rip-off. The next idiom is shop till you drop. You might have heard this one. I hear it in movies all the time. Everyone always talks about how they like to shop till they drop. I think it's a catchy idiom because it rhymes. It just means to shop for a really, really long time until you become exhausted. If you have ever shopped till you dropped, you know that feeling of the end of your shopping day when you're just tired and ready to take a nap or something.

The next idiom is retail therapy or shopping therapy. You could say either one, they mean the same thing. What this means is to shop to make yourself feel better, so just what it sounds like. This is just something that we do if we've had a bad day or if you've had a rough time. Sometimes, you just need a little retail therapy or shopping therapy.

The next one is bargain hunting. When you bargain hunt, you are looking for deals. That is what a bargain is, is a deal. Bargain hunting means actively searching for really, really good deals on things that you shop for. - Anyway, now, we are going bargain hunting. - I'm not gonna blow this by bargain hunting. - I like finding good deals, but I don't think I have the patience to always go bargain hunting.

The next idiom is to shoplift. This is a little bit of a bad one because it involves a crime, which is never good. To shoplift means to steal something from a store. You shoplift. If you take it and hide it and walk out with it without paying for it, it's not a good thing. Don't shoplift. Fit like a glove is our next idiom. We usually use it for clothes or some article of clothing because when something fits like a glove, it means it fits you perfectly. It looks like it was meant for your body. It's the perfect size, the perfect shape for you. - Fits like a glove. - 58 years since I wore this uniform, still fits me like a glove.

- Everyone loves to find something that fits like a glove. It makes us feel great. Our next idiom is like a bull in a China shop. I know it sounds like a mouthful, but it's a very specific idiom. What it is, it's what you imagine it to be. If you imagine a bull in a China shop, he would destroy everything because everything is breakable. It's porcelain, so they break. - I'm obviously gonna have to go talk to my bull in a China shop. - You're coming in here like a bull in a China shop. - The idiom means the same thing. If somebody behaves like a bull in a China shop, they are acting recklessly, they are acting clumsily, they are causing trouble.

Our next idiom is a shopping spree. The shopping spree is a short period of time in which somebody buys a lot of things. The word spree, it just means a short period of time and it shows a lot of things that are happening in that short period of time. Our next idiom is pay through the nose. This one's really funny for me for some reason. I just imagine taking our money out of our noses. It's actually not that funny in real life because when you pay through the nose, it means you end up paying a lot of money for something usually more than the fair price. - Make them pay you through the nose.

- PAC, they'll pay through the nose for it. - It's not really a fair price that you're paying. You're paying a lot more than that. It's not such a good thing. Okay, I hope you have a better understanding of these 10 idioms, but now comes the most important part. It's time to practice. I have some questions for you using these idioms and in the comments, I'd like you to answer them. You can choose to answer one of these questions or two or all three of them. The more you answer, the better it will be because you get to practice more idioms. So, here they are. The first one is, Or do you have something that fits you like a glove?

Let me know the answer to any of these in the comments and be sure to write in full sentences using the idiom that I mentioned. Remember, idioms are an amazing way to improve your English fluency and if you're looking to further improve your fluency, check out our secret lesson. It's linked in the description. Thank you for joining me today. I hope you had a great time learning some new English idioms. Thanks. (laughs) Oh my gosh. That's it. Thanks for watching our lesson today. I'll see you next time.

Useful Shopping Phrasal Verbs to Improve Your English

Who doesn't love shopping? I know I do. But you know what's even better than shopping? That's coming up. Welcome. Welcome. Welcome to our lesson today. I have a super fun one. We are talking about shopping phrasal verbs. Of course, these are very useful phrasal verbs because we have to go shopping all the time. We need food. We need clothes. And that is why these verbs will come in very, very handy. Because we can use them all the time. So let's begin. The first one is SELL OUT. So this means...they sell out it means they don't have it any longer. That the store doesn't have something any more and it's not available to buy.

And many times we use it with "of." They sell out of something. So maybe you go to the store and they sold out of mushrooms. It happened to me the other day. They sold out of hummus, or eggs, or something. This is also a very common word to use with different events. For example like a show or a concert. Number two is TRY OUT. And this just means to test something to see if you like it. And of course this is going to be more applicable to shopping trips that involve clothes or shoes. Because you want to test those items out before you buy them.

Number three is PICK UP. And this just means to buy or grab something from the store. When you pick something up from the store you're not spending a long time in there. You are just grabbing what you need and leaving. Easy as that. Number four is almost like number three but slightly different. It's PICK OUT. Not pick up, pick out. And it has a completely different meaning. It just means to choose. This is why phrasal verbs are so complicated. It's because you switch the preposition and suddenly the meaning changes. But pick out means to choose one thing. Number five is MARK DOWN. And this one is among my favorite ones because when stores mark something down it means they reduce it in price.

Which calls for a happy dance. Happy Dance! They marked down the prices. That's...I'm sorry about that. That's really what it means. The price goes down. It's marked down. I love this dress, and they marked it down 50%. Number six is to LOOK AROUND. And this one can also be fun. It just means to browse around without a plan. You don't have a shopping plan. You're not there to just go in, buy something, and get out. You're just looking around. You just want to see what they have. Maybe you can get a new dress. Maybe some new shoes. It doesn't matter. You don't have a plan. You're just looking around. Number seven is to SHOP AROUND.

And when you shop around, you compare prices between two or more stores. And we usually do this with more expensive items. Like a TV, or a computer, or a phone, or things like that. That are worth a lot of money. We don't want to go in the first store we see and buy it. We want to shop around. Number eight is SHELL OUT. And this means to pay a lot of money at once. And maybe sometimes a price that just doesn't seem or fair or too much. So this one is not among my favorite phrasal verbs because nobody wants to shell out a lot of money at once. Number nine is to BLOW MONEY ON (SOMETHING).

And this is also not among my favorites because it means kind of to spend money wastefully. Number ten is TAKE BACK. And it means to return something to the store. Now I think Wes will agree that I do this a lot. Or I used to do this a lot. If it's defective or it doesn't fit right, many times we can take it back. Okay, now that we've learned it's time to practice. So in the comments, write down the answer to one of these questions. Let us know. And you can answer all three questions if you like. I hope you found these phrasal verbs useful. In fact, I'm sure you did because they're very, very useful phrasal verbs and we go shopping all the time.

Thank you so much for watching. If you liked it, please give it a thumbs up. Thanks for watching and I'll see you next time. Bye.

LESSON 676 OF 749

Useful Signposts to Improve Your Listening Comprehension & Speaking Skills

welcome to today's lesson which is going to be very helpful because I'm going to tell you some useful words that will help you become an amazing listener but also a very effective speaker that's coming up [Music] what's up guys my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills and like I said this is a very useful lesson because it is about both listening and speaking it's going to help you become a better listener but also if you're going to be able to use some of the information that I tell you today it is going to help you become a much better speaker especially when it comes to presentations and we give presentations all the time if we are at school or university but even at work in a business setting we give we may give different presentations so the way that I'm going the way we're going to do that is by talking about signpost and more specifically we're going to talk about how to follow the signpost and and signposts are just what they look like they are signs that tell us the direction that we need to go signpost will tell us where we need to go and they help take us from one idea to another one so if you are joining us today I want to hear from you guys say hi say what's up in the chat tell me where you're from even if you're watching this later I just want to hear from you write your name say hello um and I will try and say everybody's name hello Shiva L Diego Valeria Renee Haley how are you welcome welcome welcome um Ria welcome to today's lesson which again it's going to help you guys with your listening and speaking skills and at the end we we will also do a bit of a practice so Le let's just reiterate what what are signposts let's look at that again so what are signposts those are words or phrases that people use to move between ideas and show The Listener or reader what has just happened or what is going to happen next now when we're talking about signpost there are many different reasons that that we use these more specifically like I said just to to change from one idea to the next but there's many reasons why we might be how we might be changing ideas and and these are four of them right here now I'm not going going to give you all of the signpost within each one of these there are many I'm going to give you some of the more popular ones and this will probably be we will do more lessons using signpost in the future because again it is so important to help you become a better listener as well as a more proficient speaker so the first one that we're going to talk about is changing direction if we want to move in a different direction what are some signposts that we can use or what do we need to listen for also number two emphasizing a point if we say something and then we really want to make sure that our audience knows how important it is we will emphasize the point we can also add a similar point and this is common if you're talking about something and you are giving details and examples you might want to use these signpost in order to add a point and then finally summarizing which if we're talking about presentations we would often do at the end of a presentation or if you are listening then you might listen for these words that tell you okay the presentation is getting ready to end so it's really important that you are able to identify these words if you are listening to somebody speak and it's also it's also great that you understand these words so that you can use them if you are giving a presentation or you are having a conversation and you are trying to move the person you're talking to in One Direction or another so that everybody understands what's going on so let's first look at oh and as we do this what I would ask you guys to do in the chat um is is give some examples because I think some of these words you you're probably familiar with so in the chat write some examples write some sentences we we just want to hear from you guys and it's great for others to be able to read that and and see how these are used in context and of course I'll give you guys some examples as well so let's first look at changing direction to change direction one of the most common words is that one up there however and we use however to talk about like it it contrasts the previous statement so you're saying something different that that contrasts the statement before it so for example I'd say I love eating out at restaurants however something I don't love which contrasts that however it can get really expensive and notice with all of my examples I've put the signpost at at the very front of the sentence now they are not always used at the front of the sentence I've just done this so so that you can see how they're used and really clearly see how we're changing ideas and how we're changing Direction so I love eating out at restaurants however it can get really expensive this is true conversely this is a good one and you you'll see again a lot of these words they're they're used in more academic context or you would see them if you are reading newspaper articles so this is a little more advanced and we're I'm going to test you on that a little bit later so conversely it reverses the statement that was just made so for example Le the medicine didn't help conversely it made my condition worse so it's not like you're saying you're like however like you're contrasting it with the previous sement you're you're reversing it you're almost you're going in the opposite direction that this thing did the opposite conversely it made my condition worse now let's look at a couple others on the other hand so this is when you want to describe two two opposite actions all right um on the other hand you you're describing two opposite ideas I want to take a vacation okay on the other hand I have so much work to do those are two opposite ideas vacation and work I want to take a vacation on the other hand I have so much work to do it's true and the other one another point to consider is this is a phrase this is an expression and it's basically it it changes the focus to a different idea so it's saying like Okay yeah yeah one other thing to that that you need to know one other thing one other point to consider is so for example if we we have that picture down there of the beach it's summer and people travel during the summer so somebody might say you know something that's not good is it's really hot it's hot during the summer some people don't like being outside and then some somebody could say another point to consider is that summer travel spots may be crowded in addition to being very hot outside these places might also be crowded so we are changing the focus to this different idea excellent so let's continue let me show you now this is really how you'll be able to see some of these used in context these are some examples these are real examples that I found for you they are from articles that are are pretty recent as well so that first one is from the Tampa Bay Times and again this is talking about how we're changing directions and just all you can do is just the reason for this is to see these examples and see how they're used in context by some measures African-Americans are employed close to the highest rate in modern history on the other hand they are still much more likely to be unemployed than the rest of the population so again again on the other hand we're showing those two different ideas now again remember conversely we're talking about it it's reversing moving in the opposite direction I I don't know how to pronounce that somebody in China may know this company pin pendo China's latest e-commerce giant to list on the NASDAQ which is a stock exchange found that the initial public offering is not a Panacea now Panacea is a word it means a solution that it is a remedy to help something it's not a common word but that's what it means so they found that the initial public offering to go public was not a Panacea a remedy a solution conversely it did the opposite it's listing has drawn attention to the company's counterfeit products and investors are not happy so again these are some really great examples so that you can see how these signposts are are actually used and those are real examples so let's continue and talk about emphasis all right and again uh I want to hear from you guys think of some examples just write those write those in the chat and if you guys are just joining us we're talking about signpost to help you improve your listening skills as well as become a more effective speaker if you're able to use these signposts correctly so when we want to emphasize something we we could use furthermore so it's basically saying in addition to what was said you are adding some other information that's going to help we appreciate it when you like our lessons furthermore we enjoy reading your comments so again I'm I'm emphasizing those two things as well as being a little suggestive all right we appreciate it when you like those comments and hit that like button furthermore in addition we enjoy reading your comments when you guys just say hey what's up my name is so and so um and we just love hearing from you guys you can also use moreover which again some of these are synonyms as well I saw somebody had asked about um talking about however and but again those basically they're interchangeable however and but have the same meaning moreover has the same meaning kind of as also moreover uh also or more importantly if you're talking about ideas and then building on top of that you should study English a little bit each day that's my suggestion moreover let's another suggestion you should practice using interactive activities such as this live lesson such as this lesson because we are going to practice at the end I have some different ways to practice to see if you guys were if you guys were paying attention and know how to use signpost so again these are great ways to express emphasis to other ways to express emphasis in fact all right you are emphasizing that something is true the truth of an assertion the truth of a statement and this is a ridiculous example Wes loves pizza in fact all right emphasize it how much does he love pizza in fact he eats it for breakfast lunch and dinner okay so it's emphasizing this truth in fact all right uh this is not true however all right contrasting it that is my favorite pizza right there a pepperoni pizza that is that is true my favorite pizza is pepperoni we can also use this phrase right here it is also important to highlight okay again we are drawing attention to another detail that that follows one it's also important to highlight how much Wes enjoys eating spaghetti all right don't don't just think about the pizza it's also important to highlight how much he enjoys eating spaghetti excellent so again these are great signposts in order to add emphasis so let's look at some real life examples the first one from uh Business Insider in 2018 I still use a desktop all right let's emphasize that in fact I actively prefer using a desktop over a laptop the next one is NASDAQ which again is that Stock Exchange so a lot of stock and stock stuff and financial stuff in here growth revenues um growth in revenues was driven by strong performance of segments further the company witnessed robust organic growth of 12% moreover all right also more importantly Acquisitions contributed 5% to Topline growth these are some great real life examples that that reinforce what how to use these signposts and what these signposts mean so also let me take a quick little break to tell you we are now on patreon so again if you guys like what we do if you want to show us some love and support check out our patreon page we have some cool rewards and a link is in the description so let's continue and talk about some more signposts and now we're going to move to similar points if we're talking about adding a similar Point all right this is one that I use all the time and would tell one of the first ones that I would teach students and tell them like hey this is a great one to use in your writing it's great to use in your speaking in a presentation and it's good to listen for if you're listening to somebody speak in addition you are mentioning something that that's connected to to something else what was just mentioned so for example I will teach you signpost in addition I will provide you with examples just like this sentence right here I will teach you signpost in addition because these are connected I will provide you with examples also is like I said some of these are interchangeable also basically means the same as in addition except I think also is probably a bit more informal so you would hear it a lot in colloquial speech but I think if you wanted to be more formal if you're giving a presentation or in your in your writing

I would go with in addition but also same meaning we teach grammar pronunciation and vocabulary let's add to it also we teach you a little about American culture so this is true our videos teach you English but we we also try to throw in some some cultural stuff as well so let's look at some more similarly we use similarly to um indicate similarity between two ideas so if we're talking about things that are bad smoking is harmful similarly drug use has negative effects on one's Health these are two bad these are two things that are not good for our health so we can use similarly to to draw the similarity between these two ideas um another word that's pretty much almost interchangeable likewise likewise just means in the same way often we can use both likewise and similarly you know interchangeably the country has inefficient public transportation okay it's inefficient the country's inefficient public transportation likewise the roads and bridges are in poor condition so you're talking about two things that that are negative and we're adding another Point that's that in this case which is something that's not good let's look at some of the other examples all right so some more examples of adding similar points right here all right New York Times in addition to disturbing Wildlife all right so they've given you the first point now they're going to give you the second in addition to disturbing Wildlife Mr ranky faces several other charges included including being intoxicated to a degree that endangers himself or others unreasonable noise and keeping an open container of alcohol in a vehicle according to court documents so in this case you know Mr ranki has some problems okay next down below Forbes from Forbes um magazine for instance in order to make your CTA buttons pop out keep the size of the rest of the text smaller similarly the size of the headings should be slightly larger than the body of the than the size of the body text in case you're wondering CTA stands for a call to action when you guys do things that we do we always we always give you a call to action something we want you to do for example I always tell you guys hit that like button hit the like button that is a call to action I'm asking you to do something so in this case it's saying the the CTA needs to stand out make the text size bigger similarly the size of the heading should be larger than the um body of the Tex so these are great examples s that that you guys can see how it's used in real life and and I think the next time that you are reading an article and newspaper definitely look for these signposts try to see if you can identify some of them and and again understand okay this is where it's taking me this is where the article's taking me the author is taking me or even if you're listening to a presentation like a TED Talk listen for these signposts because we use them all the time let's look at the last part summarizing this is one of my favorites that I would always very simply always teach students when you're talking about the end you're you're getting to the end of your point or you're getting to the end of your presentation or your essay this is a great one talking about in conclusion okay in conclusion you're kind of summing up and when you hear that in conclusion or if you read in conclusion or if you say in conclusion then then you're telling the person okay this is getting ready to end all right so this is a great one to know like in conclusion the price of oil will continue to rise so perhaps I was talking about oil and why how the price is changing and why the price is going up and then I can end it and say you know in conclusion the price will continue to rise finally is another good word to use we're we're interest introducing that final Point okay so we're kind of summarizing lot we maybe summarizing things that we were talking about or or we're just kind of getting to that final point and if you're talking about your day maybe I'd say like I did this first next then and finally we ate dinner at an Indian restaurant okay so those are good words in conclusion finally some other good signpost are these two right here to summarize so if you say to summarize and you hear that then you know okay they're getting ready to end and and give kind of a brief brief summary of the main points the main ideas to summarize our European Vacation was exciting and educational okay that that's a very short that's a very short summary but just to give you the idea and again overall is a bit similar I think in this case overall I feel like it is a little more informal and you might hear it more in everyday English to summarize is a great one for a presentation or in your writing um but again they're very similar so overall is taken as a whole and I could say if we're talking about the dinner I could say you know overall the chicken dinner was Bland and without much flavor all right overall taken as a whole let's look at some examples um that first one up there Kelly Blue Book says you know in conclusion the bottom line is that if a vehicle is found uh that is over 10 years old has the right price looks attractive and fits your needs a loan will likely be available from a bank credit union or other financial institution assuming that your credit is good so again in conclusion we we're summing up what what the article was about and again like I said the the you find these all the time so the next time you're reading an article look for some of these see if you can identify them this one's from Seeking Alpha which is another Financial magazine uh to summarize the quarter all right to summarize the main points of the quarter we continue to make strategic Investments against our key growth initiatives and we've made important progress on Project fuel our enterprise-wide initiative to transfer the company's business and c and the cost structure so like I said I think these signpost the they're they're not too too difficult to learn I think they're very valuable to use especially because we use them a lot when we're we're talking about more indepth conversations more advanced conversations so it's a great place to start to learn these so that you can you can follow these conversations a little easier you can follow these presentations if you're listening to a presentation uh as a TED talk or you're listening to somebody give a presentation at work or school or wherever all right so my next question is are you guys ready to practice are you ready to practice what you've learned and I've seen a lot of great comments um so let's practice and I have some questions for you so here are some of the signposts we talked about I told you that this is going to help with your listening um and speaking if you can use them but right now I'm just going to test you're listening so I'm going to read something to you and in there's a blank space and instead of the blank I'm just going to do like a a pop and I want you to think of which signpost would correctly go in that blank so this is a little challenging because you need to listen and understand most of what's being said and then write that in the chat I'll say it a couple times so are you ready the first one that I have for you is this okay here we go we could take the train to San Francisco and get there in six hours we could fly and get there in one hour all right I I will read that again ready we could take the train to San Francisco and get there in six hours we could fly and get there in one hour all right so which which signpost is going to help us transition adequately but from one idea to the next all right write write your answers in the chat and again I know this this may be a little more um difficult and there might be more than one correct answer because like I said some of these are interchangeable and you you don't always have to use uh of the one over the other so one more time we could take the train to San Francisco and get there in 6 hours we could fly and get there in one hour I'm seeing some great great answers from you guys um thank you guys for answering uh Fernando Salam Anita muhamed Patricia thanks for your answers let's look at this what I had all right I had we could take the train to San Francisco and get there in 6 hours hours okay that's one option all right another idea a different idea on the other hand we could fly and get there in one hour all right that's just what I used I think you could use however is also another one that would go um I saw some of you put also I think you you know that would fit too you could that's another option but I think in this context it it's better to say like however or on the other hand because you're you're kind of comparing the two we could take the train and it takes 6 hours how on the other hand or however we could fly and get there in one all right so let's do the next one all right ready I'm going to read this to you um again bear with me I'm having to like switch back and forth a lot between screens so ready in order to improve your English skills you should establish shortterm goals you should try to study a little bit each day okay ready in order to improve your English you should establish short-term goals you should try to study a little bit each day which signpost goes in the middle of of those two ideas and and helps us move from one to the next which one do you guys think in order to improve your English you should EST establish short-term goals you should try to study a little bit each day again I think there you might find more than one answer um excellent Patricia Fernando muhamd Nish uh Julia we have this in order to improve your English you should establish short-term goals moreover we're adding another point you should try to study a little bit each day if you said in addition um I think that would be fine also again that's correct I just chose moreover again you're kind of it gives it a little more emphasis that moreover so let's look at the next one I have one more listening for you and then I have another a different practice so the other listening that I have for you is this one ready they usually cook dinner at home when he is traveling she usually eats out okay they usually cook dinner at home when he is traveling she usually eats out okay which which signpost kind of connects or like would really help uh go between those two ideas they usually cook dinner at home I'm guess talking about a husband and wife um boyfriend girlfriend whatever they usually cook dinner at home when he is traveling she usually eats out what what do you guys think what would go in that one one all right um all right some good answers what was looking for is this one so and there's some others you could use they usually cook dinner at home conversely when he's traveling she usually eats out all right because these are I was trying to go kind of two opposite ideas you eat at home what's the opposite of that what's the complete reverse of that would be eating out so conversely he when when he is traveling she usually eats out again in this context if you said however that's perfectly fine um that would make sense uh so again it's not always one or the other let's do some more practice are you ready so in this one this is a little more challenging I've given you again this is a real example I'm going to read through this and tell me which signpost goes in that in that yellow blank right there so why in the world would we shut down the one thing that's made everything else possible Franklin asked explaining that the joint wasn't shutting down anytime soon Franklin Barbecue is expanding its offering by the end of the year we're opening up a tractor trailer outside of Franklin he said the 1971 airstreamer trailer which won't have okay I kind of cut it off because we didn't have to keep going so which one do you think uh would would appropriately go in that blank write it in the comments and again even if you guys are watching this later join in write the com write write your answers in the comments we want to hear from you all right what what do you guys think this this is a little more challenging because again we're getting into the these articles where you don't have the entire context I've tried to give you as much as I could um so you're talking about something that people thought was shutting down all right and then it's m Franklin Barbecue is expanding its offerings all right why would we shut down so what we're looking for in fact why in the world would we shut down something that's made everything else possible The Joint wasn't shutting down soon okay it's it's the opposite in fact in fact all right we're expanding so again remember we can use in fact to to emphasize that point all right in we you know we're not shutting down why would we shut down we're expanding so let's look at that was a little more difficult let's see if this one maybe is a little easier all right Fortune the decision is a welcome one in part because Jones's News Channel Infowars has contaminated our media and political discourse with paranoia and stupidity M Jones deserves to be flushed because he inflicts harm on his targets most notably The Grieving parents of the Sandy Hook massacre who have faced a harassment campaign from Jones Jones supporters who claimed their child's death was a hoax this is something that's been in the news recently like I said these are examples that that I've taken pretty recently all right do you guys have any thoughts what do you think all right we're they're shutting down this news channel contam contaminates the political discourse and paranoia bones deserves to be flushed all right what do you guys think all right some good answers in there that they have is likewise all right you're you're adding something similar all right he is contaminated the political discourse likewise Jones deserves to be flush because he inflicts harm on his targets all right so he's contaminating the media likewise he is in in inflicts harm on his targets so let's look at one more all right and this is I give you a little bit of a title it's from The Daily Norseman this is talking about American football to give you some context the offensive line is in big trouble why it might be true for starters the offensive line was a pretty large concern heading into Camp M the Vikings which is the name of a team are literally looking for starters because they're currently down to three of them the middle of the line is gutted with Nick Easton Pat alen and Mike remers all sidelined okay again this is a little challenging which one goes in there for starters all right it was a concern heading into the season what do you guys think could adequately go in there also all right so for starters the offensive line was a pretty large concern heading into the camp what's something else also the Vikings literally looking they are literally looking for starters they are looking for other places because they have trouble um with this offensive line again that might be more challenging because you might not follow American want to hear from you guys and join our social media classes we are on Facebook Twitter Instagram and again if you want to help us show some love check out patreon it's always there so thank you Muhammad uh Muhammad Fernando Victor Vincent Anita uh thank you thank you thank you guys for joining me today Molly I really appreciate you guys being here and we will be back next week uh for another live lesson hope you have a great week and we'll see you next time

Useful Speaking Phrasal Verbs for Better Communication

Today I'm going to talk to you about phrasal verbs that have to do with speaking. That's coming up. Many of you out there would like to practice and improve your speaking skills. Many of you would also like to learn phrasal verbs and learn how to use them. So in today's lesson, I'm going to combine those two ideas, and talk to you about phrasal verbs that deal with speaking.

Let's start with the verb TALK. And the first phrasal verb I have for you and possibly the most common is TALK TO. And when you talk to someone you are directly speaking to another person. I suppose that you could also talk to some thing as well. Most of the time we're talking about another person. You talk to someone. This is very similar to another phrasal verb TALK WITH. And they're basically interchangeable. You are speaking directly with another person. Talk to. Talk with. The only difference is that talking with...it really implies that there is another person you're having a conversation with. So for example, I could talk to myself in the mirror.

I wouldn't really say talk with because there's no other person involved. So that's why I think it's a little more common to talk to someone or something. Now if you are out there and you are looking for somebody to talk to or talk with, I highly recommend that you check out Lingoda who was kind enough to sponsor today's lesson. For those of you who may not be familiar with Lingoda, they are an online language school that offers courses in English, and German, Spanish, and French. And all of their courses are taught by highly trained professional teachers who are all native speakers. I have some first-hand experience learning with Lingoda because I took some classes in Spanish and the teachers and the lessons were great.

And it was a really, really good experience. They offer both group and private classes. And they're available 24 hours a day. And that's important because it doesn't matter where in the world you live teachers and classes are always available. Upon completing a sufficient number of courses you can receive a CEF our certificate showing your level of comprehension. And then you can use these certificates for university, for visa applications, your CV. There are many different uses.

Now Lingoda has kindly offered everyone here at interactive English a discount of $50 or 50 euro. All you need to do is click on the link in the description and then put in the code WES. That's my name. Just put that code in. Simple as that. And the next thing you know, you will be talking to a native English speaker. The next phrasal verb using talk is to TALK (someone) UP. Notice that someone goes in between the verb and the preposition. And when you talk someone up, then you are just speaking very enthusiastically about this person. So if you're in a group of friends, you can talk him up, you can talk her up.

Maybe you could talk me up and tell everyone about Interactive English. Another good example is like in in a job interview. You go in there and you want to talk yourself up because you want to show them that you're the best. To talk someone up. Another phrasal verb which is not so good is to TALK BACK to someone. And this means that you are replying to someone in a rude manner and you're not being polite. So for example, if there's a conversation and somebody tells you to do something, and you don't want to and you're angry. You might talk back to this person. Often, you hear it in situations like children talk back to their parents.

Maybe employees sometimes talk back to their boss. But when you're talking back to someone, you are not being very nice. And more often than not, you should be polite in these situations. But instead you're talking back. Now let's look at SPEAK. Because there are several phrasal verbs using this verb. The first one I want to talk to you about is SPEAK UP. And this just means to raise your voice and make it a little louder. So often, if you're having a conversation somebody might ask you to speak up because they can't really hear you well. They don't know what you're saying. You might hear this when talking on the phone.

Because there's other noises and maybe it's difficult to understand somebody. So they might say, "Hey, could you please speak up a little?" We can change this meaning completely by adding another preposition to make it a three-word phrasal verb. And that is SPEAK UP FOR someone. And if you are speaking up for someone, then you are just defending this person. So you may want to defend this person because they're being attacked, and you want to speak up for him, or speak up for her, or maybe even speak up for yourself.

Another phrasal verb, which is so, so, so common is this one right here. And that is SHUT UP. Now, this phrasal verb is important because it does have a couple of different meanings. The first one, which I think most of us probably think of, is firmly or angrily telling someone to be quiet. You don't want this person talking anymore. You want them to close their mouth. You don't want anymore sounds coming out. You might tell them "Shut up." The other way that this phrasal verb is used is kind of to express disbelief. So somebody says something that is outrageous. That you can't believe it, and you might just say "No. Shut up."

Shut up. Really? Shut up. So in this case, it's not really used to be rude or mean. You're basically expressing your disbelief. You can't believe what you're hearing. Shut up Now I want to practice what we've learned. And in the comments, I want to hear from you. So I want you to write a sentence using one of these phrasal verbs. And to help you out, you can even answer one of these questions. Write to us in the comments. Practice using these phrasal verbs. Because to be perfectly honest, that is the best way to remember the meaning and really understand how to use them. I would please ask you to talk up Interactive English.

You can share this lesson with your friends, your classmates. Anybody you know who's trying to practice and improve their English skills. And also don't forget to click on the link in the description to get your discount and start talking to a native English speaker. Thanks so much for watching, and I'll see you next time.

Useful Speaking Tips to Help You Prepare for the IELTS

hello and welcome if you guys are joining us this Saturday it's Saturday afternoon when I am in Budapest and today I have a fun lesson for you it is called um IELTS speaking tips so if you're not taking the IELTS or have no idea what the IELTS is do not worry I will let you know and this lesson is not just about the IELTS speaking tips about the IELTS but it's also about general speaking tips so let me begin if you guys are just joining us welcome let us know where you're from where you're writing from what's your name we're always glad to see to have our students join us hi Marco welcome welcome to our lesson hello Patricia welcome so today we're talking about the IELTS and general speaking tips hi Russia so if you guys are joining us please make sure to tell us how are you doing how are you feeling today do you know what the IELTS is have you ever had to take an English test before so I'll repeat some of these questions in a second so that uh that is our topic today the IELTS speaking tips and IELTS is an English test if you are wondering what is going on what is the IELTS if you've never heard about it then now you know it assesses your English proficiency so I am NOT a singer okay not because of my microphone no it really helps with the voice so again if you guys are joining us let us know what you're writing from what you're doing how are you doing and if you know what the IELTS is and if you don't know have you ever had to take an English proficiency test or any kind of language test so the IELTS is I'm going to say this really fast the International English language that I couldn't say it sorry is the International English Language Testing system and what it is it just really tests your English level it's like the title says it's international so if you need to somehow prove that your English is at a certain level many employers will ask their employees to take this test students sometimes have to take this test for admission and university it's it's very esteemed everyone we like it's kind of a standard test everyone really respects the scores from an IELTS test and other tests that you may have heard about that are kind of similar to the IELTS are the American TOEFL or the TOEIC these are similar tests but opals very similar except it's it's more of an American test IELTS is more British and Australian accents but everyone can take it and you can use any kind of accent you want you can use an American accent if you'd like so again welcome are you guys my question for you today is have you ever had to take an English test and if you have what was it have you ever had to take the IELTS and if yes how did you do how did it go and if no would you would you be interested in taking one okay so please let us know in the comments I'm very curious hello if you're just joining us again let us know where you're from and what's your name and it's always exciting to see all these countries oh my gosh Egypt Philippines Brazil France Indonesia wonderful so it's really great to have you guys so this IELTS test it's not a it's not an easy test I wouldn't say but I I think it is fairly accurate in in assessing your English but the reason why I'm going to explain this in a second who this who this lesson is for it's not just for IELTS speakers because the test really assesses your speaking your listening your reading and your writing so all four skills it really does a good job I think at at assessing this so if you want to improve your general English especially your speaking today I have some good tips and also some test taking skills so it's kind of in the middle okay so see so yeah you guys have been taking some of this test I Fabio I think it is a little difficult but just like any other test the more you prepare for it the better you will be I think it does a good job at assessing the language but I think if there are some some tricks and if you're taking the TOEFL there are pros and cons against between the IELTS and the TOEFL some people like to speak to a person and that's that's the main difference between the IELTS and the TOEFL are speaking to a person versus speaking to a computer I think they're very similar so I wouldn't say one is easier than the other I think it depends on if you prefer if you're more nervous when you speak in front of the person then it's probably easier to take the TOEFL because you speak in front of a computer but if you're more of a people person and enjoy speaking to a person then it might be easier to take the IELTS and it's also about the listening whichever accent you find easier the America TOEFL is an American accent and IELTS is an English accent for the listening parts so whichever you're more used to that that might be easier for you okay so who is this lesson for this lesson is for anyone taking the test obviously if you're taking any other kind of test because these tips apply to everyone who is preparing for any kind of English test if you want to improve your speaking skills please please please keep watching because I have some tips on how to improve communication or even your presentation skills in English tips for writing a yes I will talk I think I'm going to have a lesson on writing tips later on but you'll be surprised because some of the writing tips in English apply very well some of the speaking skills in English apply very well to writing because they're their English speaking BA speaking and writing in English are very similar they follow patterns and they follow rules so if you if you keep listening you're going to find out some really helpful tips okay so my first tip for today is be prepared and this should be the first tip for any kind of test ever that you're ever ever ever going to take so please always prepare I've heard stories I've had a lot of students who have taken these these tests and they went and they just went there and they had no idea what to expect don't don't do that please research what your test is how much time you have for each of these what to take with you you can you take a pencil can you bring a watch because for example for IELTS you cannot bring a watch so all of these please make sure to research ahead of time now for the speaking test here there are three parts to it and it's a total of 11 to 14 minutes usually and the topics are very common they're just things like work education communication computers internet childhood food happiness flowers they're just very very random topics they're very common topics but there are topics that sometimes you may not expect because it can be anything art it literally anything so you have to be very prepared and you have to know what the examiner is looking for because they're looking for specific answers for specific triggers that we're going to talk about so for that I would say read example answers the Internet has so many good resources for this where you can type in and see some of the topics that are out there and then you can just read the topic and how somebody would answer that will help you very much in trying to come up with with a good answer and of course practice a lot and you can practice with online prompts like I said you can find if you type in IELTS speaking prompts you can find a lot online you can my suggestion would be to print out a list just print it out and then cut it with scissors and you have these small strips of paper with the topics on them and fold them and put them in a cup and then a way to test yourself would be to just take one and then just speak because if you have them all in one paper I think it makes it easier and you don't want to make it easy on yourself you want to create as close of a test environment as you can because that way you become more prepared so again we are talking about how to prepare for the IELTS or for any English speaking test so if you guys are just joining us that's what we're doing please if you just--just--just just joined our conversation write your name where are you coming from because it's really nice for us to see and for everyone to just kind of get to know you so we're talking about how to be prepared there are many ways to do it like going online and finding good information I would say to use if you're going to go online to make sure that you're using sources or resources that are reputable for example one that I found that I really like that I'm going to leave in the description is IELTS Liz comm it's a very good one useful one and has very current topics so if you're wondering like what were the more recent topics of conversation you can have them there at least for speaking I found that it was very useful now be careful there is a lot of bad advice online I have noticed a lot of bad answers and a lot of bad advice so don't use it just because somebody has been to the exam it doesn't mean that they have good answers or know what is the good answer so please use reputable sources when you're training if you really want to be very serious about it and you want to buy a book use the one from Cambridge because that's who makes the test and make sure to use a really good really good material so something that is you put there by a teacher not by some other student and make sure that they know what they're talking about very important okay and the last tip too in order to be prepared is to time yourself I've done this to students many times and sometimes it's actually very difficult because when you time somebody they think oh I have so much to say about this topic so much and then the problem is they're different time limits so sometimes you don't have as much as you think and then you only speak for forty-five seconds and when you have to speak for a minute and a half and that's a problem because when you don't speak enough the the person the examiner is going to think you don't have enough to say but again this is applicable to generally to testing yourself is to see how prepared you are and it will help you kind of get better at elaborating on a topic which is very useful now this tip tip number two I really like this one because it I love writing in English and it's similar to writing this is how when speaking is similar to writing and this is when English is different than other languages so I'll say this English is different so when you speak in English especially for an exam but in general when you have to have a presentation when you have to give some kind of official speech any answer they have to give in a debate for example or anything like that you have to follow a structure in English and it's the same with writing I know in many other cultures many times you don't immediately say the main idea or the conclusion that you want to get to I know that's true but in English you have to you have to immediately state your opinion you immediately state the answer to your question and then back it up with examples very very very very important okay so you have to make sure that you follow this rule first you state your idea then you give examples and this goes for any answer that you have and the more examples the better but please don't go off-topic in English I will say for an answer to be relevant and good you can any any one of your sentences has to be related to your main idea if you're talking about something completely different and it's not directly related to your main idea it's not relevant and it's signals like oh this person is kind of ranting they're just talking about something else so make sure you stick with this structure it's very important and very useful and again this is useful not just for the IELTS but for any kind of other presentation you have in English or any other kind of answer that you have to give or they have to elaborate on welcome welcome everyone again today we're talking about speaking tips for the IELTS so if you're taking the IELTS please watch this these are very useful I believe but not just for the Isles in generally a general firfer for improving your speaking skills in English and this this is another really good one stay current so what do I mean by stay current I mean read newspapers watch the news do anything you can to stay informed and the reason for this I have so many reasons why you should be doing this of course I mean in English why should you do this because you as I wrote here you need example so whenever like I just talked in the previous point where you have to give your main idea and then you have examples some of these topics are going to be about things like like space exploration or technology or they're going to be topics that you may not be as familiar with as you'd think so you need when you're watching the news and you just kind of try to stay informed you get ideas you get examples and you can use all of these examples in your when you speak in your question in your answer so not only you have things to talk about when you stay current but also your vocabulary will improve so the more you hear the more you listen the more you read the more you find out there pay attention to the world around you in English the better your vocabulary will will become and also you will have more topics of discussion and this is is the same for the writing section of the test you always have to have ideas you always have to have examples and this is a great way to get examples and ideas by just reading the news being informed and it will help you improve your vocabulary as well okay so my first tip use good English and what do I mean by use good English many things that I mean by good English so I'm gonna start with with the first one which is don't be too informal so in order to when you go to any kind of a speaking exam it's a speaking exam so you're welcome you're welcome to use a little bit more of an informal language then you would writing but you know don't go in there saying hey buddy I I know this this may sound like oh of course you but I've had

students that I've known who because when they're learning they're learning so much of the colloquial English so you have to make sure that you're able to separate the formal and informal contexts so make sure that you're not too informal that you're just it's just like an interview but don't don't don't overdo it don't be too informal um my second tip under this category is to vary your sentences oh my gosh this is so important when you speak English well any native English speaker we use complex sentences you use simple sentences and complex altogether you use transition words which I've also put here so you have to be able to use a variety of these mixed-up synonyms synonyms are super important we have I don't know if you guys have seen but if you haven't you to check out our some of our synonym videos so we have good words bad words happy words and academic words these are all synonyms that are very helpful their academic and you should use them instead of words like good or bad because it will automatically make you sound a lot more advanced in your English and if you have to prove to anyone that your English is advanced it is now it would be this time when you have to show that you know that you are advanced that your proficiency is very high that you can use all of these words and you can use complex grammar structures and this would be the time to do it so again if you guys are just joining welcome thank you have you ever taken the IELTS is the question of the day if you have how did you do if you haven't have you taken any other tests or do you think you're going to take these it's very interesting for us to know okay so I said to use idioms because idioms when you when you use them you show that you have a high proficiency or high understanding of the language and how it's used in the local local context but I would say not to use too many idioms like don't use one per sentence because you may sound it sounds a little awkward so idioms are used but they're used sparingly they're not used very very often so make sure that to know that you're okay you can use them but just don't overuse them so don't try to show off too much with your knowledge it's very important okay let's see I mano says I'm afraid of the TOEFL exam what can I do I'm mano I would suggest you to be prepared the more you prepared the more you will become confident and the better you will be at speaking so prepare by speaking read those topics outloud practice with a friend if you if you have wonder will is willing to listen to you test yourself time yourself make sure that you know everything there is to know about the exam so that's I think the most important tip is just be prepared the more you practice something the better you become at it and that's just true for anything okay and the last tip I have for you guys today are some things to keep in mind my first one is use your voice and I mean like speak by voice I mean your individual voice make sure you know be yourself speak like you would don't don't try to sound too scripted or too robotic or because your intonation it will just not sound natural so just be yourself speak don't worry about it too much but be prepared because it will come natural to you once you're prepared now the second one is be confident and confidence comes with being prepared so that's why it's very important the topics that you can find online just topics and I'll show you I have a I actually have an example here actually I can just show it to you guys so this is one of the topics and what it looks like where it says describe a piece of advice you recently received the topics are very very random but they tend to come up again and again and again so if you know what the topics are and what people could ask you the more you practice the more you will know kind of what to answer so it's very important that you practice and then your confidence will come and you'll be able to express yourself and when you are confident you sound like you're doing better so I cannot tell you how many students I've had that their English was pretty high but their confidence was really low and when they spoke because they were a little afraid of speaking I thought they were a much lower level and you remember you only have a few minutes with this person make them count please please please be confident prepare and you will do wonderful and my last tip is think fast you have to think fast like this one here describe a piece of advice you recently recently received you should say when this happened who gave you the advice where the advice was how you felt about about the advice oh my god what if you can't think of any advice when was a Eli's given advice like I don't know I haven't thought about advice so maybe like all these things are going on through your head you cannot change topics you have to choose the topic that is being given to you so what do you do well you can do a couple things just think really fast if nothing comes to your mind I'm sorry but I would recommend to lie and the reason is because they don't care honestly if you're telling the truth nobody cares if if this is a real piece of advice if it's not nobody cares if you believe in this what your opinion is this does not matter it really truly doesn't matter all the examiner cares about is your English how well can you defend your point how well can you string sentences together how well can you speak so it really really really does not matter if you believe in this if this advice whatever thing you're talking about actually happen if this is your opinion doesn't matter your opinion your the way you speak matter so that is the only thing that matters so again think fast if you can't think of an example make one up it's okay just make sure make sure that you answer all of the points on the paper or try to address all of them so again thank you guys for joining these are some of the tips that I was talking about today I'm gonna go over them really quickly for the people who just joined the first one is to be prepared make sure that you practice a lot and the more you practice the easier this will be become the second one which applies to all of our old speakers of English is to follow the structure of English don't state your idea your main idea last make sure you state at the first the first thing so state your main idea than an example than another example and never go on to off-topic so it's very important that you give examples that are relevant and that all of your sentences connect stay current because this is how you get it apples watch the news read this will improve your vocabulary and also will help you expand your knowledge give you more ideas and help you think fast help you come up with these ideas when maybe you're not you're caught off guard use good English vary your sentences use synonyms don't use the same words over and over again because this shows the examiner and everyone that your command of English is much higher used transition words like eventually finally more over things like that these are very useful to learn use them the examiner would like that a lot use idioms don't you overuse idioms because it will sound strange and lastly keep in mind to use your voice be confident do not shy it's your time to shine be happy you know you're speaking to a person they want to hear your thoughts it's great don't forget to think fast and just kind of it might seem crazy but enjoy it you know enjoy the the opportunity that you have to practice your English to use your English so it's your time like I said to shine so that's it for today thank you guys for watching us for joining our class today it's always exciting it's always a fun Saturday when I get to talk to you guys thank you again if you found that this was useful if you know anyone who's taking the IELTS or any other test if you know anyone who is a little bit shy and is afraid of speaking please share this lesson with them I think it was very beneficial again thank you guys so much don't forget to to join our social media classes and I hope you guys have a wonderful wonderful Saturday or Sunday or weekend for us it's Saturday afternoon I know for other people it's Saturday evening so again thank you guys and I will see you next time bye

Useful Speaking Tips to Improve Your Fluency

hey everyone my name is wes from interactive english which is all about helping you practice and improve your english skills and today i want to talk to you about speaking because i know there are so many of you out there who want to improve their speaking and they really want to practice speaking with others and i want to give you some tips i want to give you some helpful tips that will allow you to improve and develop your speaking so the first tip that i have for you is try to focus your speaking and what i mean by that is perhaps focus on a specific topic because i think when people are i know it can be challenging because when people are speaking and they get into a conversation sometimes they they may not know where that conversation is heading and that can be difficult to follow but if you're able to focus your speaking like on a specific topic then you can really concentrate on on what you want to say about that topic the thoughts and opinions that you want to express it's very similar like when you're giving a presentation you are focused speaking about that one topic the next tip that i have for you is to always try to practice speaking when you learn new things and this goes for everything so for example when when people learn new grammar often i think people learn and practice grammar using a book and they may write a lot but you really need to practice speaking as well when you learn a new verb tense or you learn about a new part of speech you need to use that in speaking because it's going to help improve your fluency but it's also going to help you better remember the grammar and how to use it correctly uh that also goes for new vocabulary as well many people might look up a word using an online dictionary and they read the meaning or perhaps they read some sentences using the word make some flashcards but you also need to practice speaking and using that new vocabulary some of those new phrases those idioms and expressions practice using them when you're speaking because again that's going to help you better remember the information the third tip is to well practice speaking clearly and that that can be a little challenging because it encompasses a lot because when i say speaking clearly i'm not talking about accent because i can understand english accents from all over the world i'm talking about pronunciation uh intonation emphasis um reductions contractions and you want to speak clearly so that everybody can understand what you're saying and you need to practice those things because when people if they mispronounce a word that may cause some confusion so it's very important that you practice those different parts of speaking clearly pronunciation intonation emphasis it's really going to help others understand what you're saying and then my final tip is all about confidence because i think when when some people try to engage in a conversation they they may be a little afraid to speak because they think that the other person maybe they think they won't understand what they're saying or perhaps they feel like they they cannot fully express what they want to say and they just lack that confidence and the best thing that you can do in order to build your confidence is practice but you need to be in the right environment in order to practice you need to be in an environment where you feel comfortable you feel relaxed and you are just not worried about making mistakes and you feel that you can just speak and have a conversation and and that is the best way to build your confidence is just practice practice and more practice notice that with each of those tips i talk a lot about the need to practice the need to practice speaking and i have the perfect solution for you because interactive english just launched its first speaking course called speak up this is a 10-week course in which we will get together once a week for 50 minutes and we're going to focus on a different topic answer a bunch of questions learn new words phrases idioms expressions work on pronunciation as well a little bit of everything and it's just about getting you as much speaking practice as possible and because you're going to be speaking so much it's really going to help you build your speaking confidence so this is a course for for intermediate to advanced learners you have until september 15th to sign up for the course because classes are going to start on september 17th and 18th so you have until september 15th check out the link in the description to learn a lot more information about the course which is really going to help you improve your speaking as well as just develop your overall fluency skills so check out that link down below to learn more about speak up and i i just hope to speak to you soon so long

Useful Sport Idioms to Improve Your English

- If you are someone who loves sports, then you are definitely going to love this idiom lesson. What's up, everyone? My name's Wes. This is Interactive English which is the place that you want to be to practice and improve your English skills. And the way that you are going to improve your skills today is by learning some new idioms. I'm going to teach you some idioms that are related to sports. That doesn't mean that you can only use these idioms when talking about sports. They can be used in a variety of different situations and I'm gonna talk to you about that today. And as I teach you these idioms and tell you the meaning, I'll give you some example sentences as well as show you some videos so you can see how these idioms are used in context.

So let's begin. The first idiom is a tennis idiom and it is the ball is in your court. And what this means is that it is up to you. It is your responsibility to do something or to make a decision. The ball is in your court. So example, when you're playing tennis, you hit the ball to somebody else and then the ball is in their court. It's up to them to act. So this can be used in a variety of contexts. It could be used in business in a negotiation. For example, maybe you make an offer to buy something and then you'd say well, okay here's my offer, the ball is in your court. It is your responsibility to make a decision now or tell me what you want to do.

And we often use this idiom as just a standalone statement and you would tell somebody, you know, the ball is in your court now. It's up to you, the ball's in your court. - Call me back. If you want. (sniffs) Ball's in your court. (audience laughing) - I said no which means right back in the driver's seat. - So the ball is in his court? - The next idiom is to get off the hook. And if we're talking about hooks, you can probably guess that this is a fishing idiom. When you're fishing, you use a hook to catch the fish. So if the fish gets off the hook, then they are able to escape danger. They're able to escape punishment.

And that's exactly what this idiom means. You are escaping responsibility for something that you are no longer responsible for this action that happened that was bad or wrong. You are no longer going to get punished for this thing. You are able to get off the hook. - I don't have a choice. I guess I'm kinda hoping you'll come back over the rail and get me off the hook here. - So for example, when I think of this idiom because I'm a teacher, I think of students that when they don't do their homework and maybe there's a punishment and they're trying to think of an excuse, I might tell them and say, you know, you're not gonna get off the hook that easy.

- You are not getting off the hook that easy, mister. - And that is a common sentence in which you might hear this idiom being used. That you would tell someone that you're not going to get off the hook that easy. That you need to be held responsible for something that happens. You're not going to have it completely removed. You're gonna have to suffer the consequences a little bit. You're not gonna get off the hook that easy. Then we have a baseball idiom, go to bat for someone. To go to bat for someone means just to defend somebody. So in baseball, when you go to bat for another player, that you're basically helping that person out.

They don't have to bat because you're going to do it for them. You're going to help that person. You are going to defend them. - Just go to bat for them. - I'm tired of going to bat for you and your show. - I wanna thank you for going to bat for me last week. - Next is a hunting idiom and this idiom is used quite often and it is to give it your best shot. And often people would just say it as a sentence and just say give it your best shot. And this means that you should just try your hardest. Do your best. So when you're hunting, even though I'm not a hunter, you are shooting something and you want to give it your best shot. You tell people this all the time whether they're doing sports or business.

You would tell them and encourage them and say give it your best shot. - Well, go ahead and give it your best shot. - [Harry] Come on then Nigel, gimme your best shot. - Stupefy! - Okay, O'Connor, gimme your best shot. - So for example, I would tell you guys this. If you're thinking that learning English is too difficult, I don't know if I could do it, I would encourage you and say, you know, give it your best shot. Just try your best. That's all that we're asking you do, give it your best shot.

Next is an idiom that comes from horse racing and that is the home stretch. And if you're talking about the home stretch, you're talking about the end. So when talking about horse racing, at the end of the race, you might hear somebody say the horses are coming down the home stretch. They're getting close to the end. And you can use this when you are getting close to the end of something, specifically when you're about to complete something or finish something. So with this lesson, I'm just about halfway through it. I'm not quite in the home stretch just yet. - We're almost done, home stretch. - This is the home stretch. All we gotta do is focus. - Hang tough. You're in the home stretch.

- Next is a golf idiom and that is not up to par. So in golf, you have a score that you try to get for each hole and if you match that score then that would be par. So that's the average score. That's what you want to do. If somebody's not up to par, then that just means that they're not good enough to do a job or a position. And you just don't have the skills or abilities to do something and somebody might say, you know, yeah, you know, this work, it's not up to par. - So if I'm not up to par performance-wise-- - Jim, this isn't exactly a turn on.

- [Pete] There's a thing called Proposition 48 says that if your grades aren't up to par and you take the SAT, if you score 700 or more, you can get into college. - I hope these video lessons are definitely up to par for you guys. I hope so. Next is a boxing idiom, to throw in the towel. And in boxing, if somebody throws in the towel, then that just means they give up, the match is over. And that's exactly what it means, to give up something. So if you're tired of doing something, you don't wanna do it anymore, you'd say, you know, I'm just gonna throw in the towel. I'm done, I give up.

Or you might hear it being used that somebody's, you know, they're trying to encourage you and tell you not to give up and they'd say don't throw in the towel. Don't throw in the towel just yet. Keep going, keep working hard. - They're throwing in the towel. He says once the debts are paid, there won't be too much left. - Round after round, I kept getting Frank in to patch me up. And he's talking about throwing in the towel but he ain't my manager. He can't throw in nothin'. - Maybe it's time to throw in the towel. - If you guys are thinking, you know, I'm done learning English, it's too difficult, I don't wanna do it. I would tell you, don't give up, don't throw in the towel just yet.

And I'm not gonna let you off the hook that easy. I'm always going to encourage you and tell you to keep going and give it your best shot. (chuckles) And I'm just gonna keep using these idioms over and over so that you'll remember them. Let's just keep going. We're coming down the home stretch which means we're getting close to the end but don't leave just yet. I have some more great idioms for you. And this next one is a football idiom. It's an American football idiom. And I'm sure some of you might be rolling your eyes like, uh, American football. (chuckles) Nobody watches that. But this idiom is a good one and it is blind sided.

And if somebody is blind sided, it just means that they did not see something coming. They did not expect this thing to happen. You were blind sided by something. So for example, somebody might tell you some news that is shocking, like, oh they're getting a divorce. And you're like, oh my goodness. I was just blind sided by this. - It's like you're as blind sided by this as I was. (audience laughing) - I can't believe she blind sided me like this. Being so nice and friendly to my face. - So when you're blind sided, it's not really a good thing. It's something that you weren't expecting and you would be blind sided by something.

So we often use it with the preposition by. I was blind sided by this thing that was not good and I was surprised. I was blind sided. Then we have a basketball idiom, slam dunk. This is probably a phrase that you've heard before especially if you're a basketball fan. In basketball, a slam dunk is when you take the ball and you slam it and hang onto the rim. Yeah, I can't slam dunk the basketball. I can't jump. So if something is a slam dunk, then it just means it's a sure thing. It's easy to do, it's easy to accomplish. You know that you're gonna do this thing and you say, well, you know, it's a slam dunk.

So you're watching this video right now and I'm thinking like, hmm, I wonder if they're gonna hit that like button. But I know, (button pops) but I know, you know, it's a slam dunk. It's a sure thing. You're gonna hit that like button. Right? Unless you think this lesson's not up to par. - It's a slam dunk. - I hope it's a real slam dunk. - To me, this decision is a slam dunk. - The next idiom is call the shots. This is a billiards idiom because when you're playing billiards, you often have to call your shots and point to the pocket where you want to shoot the ball. So if somebody calls the shots, it just means they are making the decisions.

You might often hear this idiom in business because there's a hierarchy of people from the boss, the manager, and then you. And your boss would call the shots. They would be making the decisions. - I call the shots, I do what I wanna do. - So you're calling the shots now, huh? - Gonna see nothing but the bench this year. - He ain't callin' the shots. You'll play. - So I'm a bit curious if you knew some of these idioms already. I hope that you weren't completely blind sided by these idioms and I hope that you can go on to use them and try to use them and give it your best shot.

Just choose one, give it your best shot. Which one do you think it means? Click on the correct answer. Or the video's just gonna end.

LESSON 681 OF 749

Useful Study Phrasal Verbs to Improve Fluency

Watch the original lesson on YouTube

- Today we are going to study study phrasal verbs. I'll explain that in just a moment. What's up everyone? My name is Wes. This is Interactive English which is all about trying to help you guys practice and improve your English skills. In today's lesson we are going to talk about phrasal verbs, but phrasal verbs that are related to study, so that's what I meant when I said we are going to study study phrasal verbs. So the first phrasal verb that I have for you is think through. And this just means to carefully consider the possible outcomes of some situation, and you might say, you know I just need to think it through.

You need to think something through, and really consider it before you make a decision. - I just want you to think it through. - Still thinking things through. - What is there to think through? - Just try and think things through. - Let us think this thing through logically. - I don't want to decide just yet. I really want to consider things. You want to think it through. It's always good to think things through before you make a decision. The next phrasal verb is pick up, and you can pick up something or you can pick something up, and it just means to learn something. And often I think we use it when we're talking about a language or a musical instrument or even an activity.

So for example, I would say that I am trying to pick up Romanian right now. I am trying to learn Romanian, and many of you are trying to pick English up, which is why you're here. - You can't just walk up to those guys. You have to get out there, and learn the moves, get into their head, pick up the speech. - Picked up English faster than I could teach it. - I got bored, I thought I'd pick up a new language. - I'll be back, I've never seen anyone pick it up that quickly. - Do you have a special tool for these? - If it has to do with my hands, The next phrasal verb is a pretty common one, and that is cheat on.

You cheat on something, and this just means to act deceptively or unfairly when you are completing a task. So you can cheat on a quiz. You could cheat on a test or cheat on an exam. I don't recommend that you cheat on anything at school, but it does happen from time to time, to cheat on something. - What, you're cheating on your conversion test? (audience laughing) - When I was a kid, I always played by the rules. I never cheated on a test. - I regret to announce that someone in this class cheated on yesterday's exam. - Then we have a three word phrasal verb, read up on, and when you read up on something, then you are increasing your knowledge about a topic by reading about it.

So you might read up on history if you want to learn more about that. You might read up on a person. If you're trying to find out more information about them, you would read up on something. - I read up on my history, thanks for the tip. - [Instructor] This will all be on next week's midterm, so I suggest you read up on it. - I've been reading up on your family's culture. - I've been reading up on this whole Iraq War situation. - Then we have go through, and this is a great study phrasal verb because when you go through something, it just means that you are scrutinizing it.

You are looking at it very carefully, so you might go through a paper or you might go through a report that you wrote and you're looking for mistakes. So when you go through something, you are looking at it carefully. I always hope that you guys go through the comments and read them because it's another great way to practice English and practice your reading skills as well as learn more about each other. - I could go through the Panama papers. - We have to go through those documents. - I took the liberty of going through your address book. - We still have the books of Pherian to go through. - Then we have two phrasal verbs that actually have the same meaning, and those phrasal verbs are hand in or turn in.

So when you hand in something or you turn in something, it just means that you submit something. You give it to the teacher. You hand in your homework. You turn in the paper. You hand in the essay. You turn in your presentation. So when you hand in or turn in something, you are just giving it to either your teacher or professor. - Do you realize what would happen if I hand in my homework in your handwriting? - Anyone failing to turn in any homework assignment will be penalized one point off their final grade. - Hey, I want to email you my paper before I hand it in. - This is the first paper she's had to turn in.

She's bound to falter a little. - The next study phrasal verb is fall behind, and this is a good one even though it's not a good thing. You don't want to fall behind because when you fall behind it means that you are not current or up-to-date with some information or even some task, and you're really lacking in comparison to the other students, so when you fall behind it's not a good thing. But sometimes it happens, and you might say, yeah, I just fell behind, or I've fallen behind. - Boys are falling behind in every subject! - You need to make school more challenging or else my son will fall behind.

- We're falling way behind. - You haven't exactly been helping. - Is there any company that doesn't have a product in production? - And I hope that you guys have not fallen behind and that you understand every one of these phrasal verbs, but if you have fallen a little behind, that's okay, because then you can just go through the lesson again and again and again until you have picked up every single one of these phrasal verbs, and I'm just gonna keep saying them and repeating them over and over because that's just another great way for you to remember them. The next phrasal verb is drop out, and when you drop out that means that you leave an activity or a program without completing it.

And often people use it and they talk about dropping out of school. When you drop out of school, you just leave and you don't complete it. - Everything else, I fail. I dropped out of school. - So you're dropping out. - No, I'm going to public school. - You dropped out of college? - I heard you dropped out of school. - I went to university for a year as well before I dropped out, so I'm a quitter. - Don't drop out of school. I definitely don't recommend it. I think you should work hard and turn in everything that your teacher asks you too (chuckles). At least that's what I would want from my students.

I always want them to hand in their assignments. The next phrasal verb is hand out, and this is a common study phrasal verb because you hear it a lot in the classroom. To hand something out just means to distribute something. You are passing something to the other students in the class. So oftentimes, teachers would hand out an assignment or they would hand out a test or they'd hand out a quiz, or, yeah, most of the stuff that they hand out, it's not stuff that (chuckles) learners are excited to get. Nobody wants a quiz or a test, but we gotta do them, and as long as you read up on all the information, then you should be fine. - True, I've been handing out assignments, and the kids turn them in and everything.

- What kind of homework are they handing out in the first grade? - Why don't you hand out the schedules? - That means we have to hand out the preparedness packs. - The next study phrasal verb is catch on, and to catch on means that you understand what is meant or that you understand how to do something. So maybe somebody might have a difficult time catching on, and they have trouble understanding some material. - And you're not going anywhere. - Of course not, I'm already there. - You'll catch on. - But all our professionals have college degrees. - I catch on pretty quick. - You've got to wait until your contracts are up, I get it.

- You catch on slow, you'll fit right in here. - I'm sure that you guys catch on quickly and you understood these phrasal verbs, but if you didn't catch on, that's okay. Just go through the lesson again, and just think it through. Think through these phrasal verbs, and try to understand them. Maybe you might want to read up on them so you have a better understanding and hopefully the fact that I've been repeating all of these phrasal verbs helps you remember their meaning a little bit better. So now I have an assignment for you, and I want you to turn it in, and the way that you're going to turn it in to me is by writing a comment.

And all I want to know is something very simple. I just want to know if you caught on to this lesson. So if you understood all of these phrasal verbs, if you understood my explanation of these phrasal verbs, then in the comments write, I catch on quickly. That way I know you understood these phrasal verbs and maybe feel a little more confident the next time that you are studying with others, or the next time you find yourself in a classroom. These phrasal verbs can be used in many different contexts. Thank you guys so much for watching. If you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button,

Useful TRAVEL PHRASES That You Need to Know

let's learn some indispensable travel phrases that you really should know and these are phrases that are some of my favorites that you can use if you're talking about a holiday you're getting ready to take or a holiday that you took in the past and of course if you would like to access the lesson notes that are right here check out the link in the description join my email Community if you're already a part of it check your inbox I have sent them to you so this is going to be a quiz lesson and I would like you to participate write your answers in the chat if you're watching this later I want you to write your answers in the comments this is after all interactive English my name is Wes and that that's what it's all about is trying to help you reach your fluency goals so if that's what you'd like to do please subscribe turn on notifications that way

I can become your teacher so let's let's go ahead and jump into it without further ado here is your first question to start out I'm giving you part of the phrase and I want you to complete it but I'm also giving you the meaning down below so in this case the meaning is to leave a place or begin a journey what phrase are you going to use that has that meaning it is a little more casual it's a little more informal but one that I think you'll definitely use in conversation or you're certainly going to come across it if somebody else is talking about travel and you want to say okay let's let's leave let's get going let's hit the road so if you're going to hit the road then it just means you're going to leave you're going to begin a journey you could use this when you're you're traveling but even if you're on your way to work or something you're like okay I'm gonna I'm gonna hit the road and I'm gonna get going and I'm going to leave um excellent great job I'll try to give some shoutouts as we go through this to give you an association with this phrase there is a famous song by Ray Charles it's called Hit the Road Jack In this case Jack is just an informal like B for anybody and I I imagine some of you have heard it that hit the road Jack and don't you come back no more no more no more no more hit the road Jack and don't you come back no more I apologize for my singing but go listen to the song it's a great song very well-known Ray Charles Hit the Road Jack what do you think M stop it means it will it refer I'm giving you the word stop uh because in the meaning it refers to a stop as during a trip for fuel food uh or a rest or just to use the restroom so really any type of stop one might make specifically for those things you are going to say let's stop and you can use the picture there as a little bit of a hint and thank you lolly great voice I appreciate it uh I don't I don't get that very often so in this case the stop that we're talking about and the other thing that you may notice I'm I'm really going to try to give you more information with these phrases so that uh again it's all about building your vocabulary many of you said Pit Stop yes that is the correct answer we're often going to use that with the verb make to make a pit stop if you didn't use M it's okay but I wanted to give you that that extra bit bit of information so if you're traveling you're in the car and you want to say Okay I I need to use the the toilet I think we need to make a pit stop or I'd like to get a snack can we make a pit stop so you're going to use that verb with this phrase just to give you a little context I feel like this image I thought it was a little humorous this is what a pit stop looks like you stop the car the family the kids running out of the car going into the store buying some you know whatever it is or or using the restroom and it is a pit stop so good phrase to know especially if you are someone who likes taking road trips because generally you're going to use this phrase when you're you're traveling by car excellent love love those hearts keep it keep them coming guys here is the next one in giving you the first word which is not much of a hint but the meaning is far away from any towns cities and just where few people live and I don't want to give it away by saying too much but that is the meaning far away from any towns and cities and where few people live you could say that you are in what I think when talking about travel this again is of course I think all of these phrases are commonly used and the phrase that we're looking for well done uh too Miranda we're talking about in the middle of nowhere so if you say that maybe you you got a hotel you stayed at a hotel out on the lake and you were in the middle of nowhere all right you were out in nature there was nothing around you were in the middle of nowhere so there are some other collocations with this phrase that I'm giving you down below you might say you're you're talking about traveling somewhere and maybe you say we got lost in the middle of nowhere there was nothing else around or maybe you describe where somebody lives and say well they live I v I was visiting a friend who lives in the middle of nowhere or maybe you go somewhere like I said you stay at a hotel on the lake and you are you are staying in the middle of nowhere or you might find yourself in the middle of nowhere so those are some common cations with this uh phrase if you want to accurately describe some place that's far away from any towns or cities and you are in the middle of nowhere here is the next question I'm not giving you any part of this because I feel like this is one that maybe is a little easier one that uh you'll probably be able to get but I think it's commonly used probably a phrase that you've heard of before to make a journey without taking a lot of heavy things with you in this situation what is it that you're doing so you're taking this journey you're not bringing a lot of heavy things and therefore you are doing what and I think this is something that when when we travel I think many of us want to do this but at least for me it's very very difficult to do because as I start this process of getting all of my things ready and I pick up my suitcase I think H okay or my backpack like uh it was not successful in this endeavor so if you're not bringing a lot of heavy things then you could say that you are going to travel light or to pack light either one of those Works they both have the same meaning travel light Pack Light and like I said I think it's something we we all want to do but I think you're capable of doing this especially if it's a short trip you go for a weekend somewhere you say yeah I was I'm going to just pack light or I'm going to travel light to give you a little more context there are some news headlines for you I don't know if you can see them but I'll read them to you it says travel light after 50 seven stylish packing habit hacks for carefree Adventures travel the next one travel light with these 34 carryon travel light with Uber X XL I don't I didn't even know that is now a thing Uber XXL I guess it's a very large car that you could then yeah you could bring a bunch of bags a lot of uh different suitcases and you don't travel light it's not a problem so again common phrases and that is in part what it's all about I want to give you vocabulary that you can actively use which is why I said this is indispensable and this is vocabulary that you really need to know here's the next one the meaning is to lose or cause to lose meaning or Effectiveness when translated into a different language style form Etc when passed through or when pass through a third party and I'm giving you one of the words in but this is relevant because if you are traveling somewhere else especially you go abroad you're in a country in which somebody the people speak a different language you're trying to communicate this is something that can happen from time to time and I think we've all been in that situation so what would you say when you lose the meaning or it causes this to happen or it changes it a little bit it's not as effective due to I don't could be language translation or some other you know you're trying to be funny and it just does not come out the the same way so in this case the the phrase that you can use well done fatty acid uh Miranda Lost in Translation so again this was more so when another language is involved which in this case would mean that you're you're traveling abroad you're in another country another language another culture and this is something that can happen because I feel like English should be more entertaining as far as learning English should be fun even a little humorous I've given you some examples down there of well these different signs that you could say okay something was Lost in Translation again if you can't see it I'll I'll read it to you the first one it looks like it's a sign at the airport but what it says in English it says eating carpet is strictly prohibited and of course I think what they want to say is eating on the carpet or eating over the carpet is strictly prohibited instead of actually literally eating that carpet but uh I don't know that carpet it looks kind of delicious to me so maybe it that's what they wanted to say and then the other one is just a little bit of a meme it says if I were German I would run because the sign says Germany is now cold cut sausages so it's something I guess you could be a little concerned about if you are German so I I think that you you travel abroad and of course I've seen this before for when many signs are translated into English whether you're talking about at an airport or especially at a restaurant and things yeah they tend to get lost in translation it is something that happens and now you know the phrase to describe that situation what do you think M uh on perhaps I'm giving you a little too much information and you'll be able to to come up with the phrase it just means to hurry so if somebody is saying like Okay we need to hurry or you're just telling someone look hurry up or you need to hurry you could use this phrase and said instead it is a synonym but I think in this case instead of saying hurry when you're traveling it's a phrase that I think you're more likely to come across because you're really I think the really movement is involved um so instead of saying like to hurry you could use this phrase instead and what I'm referring to is the phrase well done Fabio uh safira we're talking about the phrase to get a move on Julia um aot nice to get a move on means to hurry so maybe we're traveling together and I tell you look we really need to get a move on we need to hurry or maybe I'm just telling you or you know giving somebody a command like look get a move on all right we need to hurry and I wanted to I thought this meme was funny that is a clue that I'm giving you right there so the the phrase that we're talking about and again I'm giving you that verb because often you're going to use this with that verb well done uh Takaya Loi um to take a shortcut we will get there faster if we take a shortcut I think anytime you're traveling uh people are always on the lookout for a shortcut a way to get to their destination faster and you could just call that a shortcut and often you're going to use that with the verb take let's take a shortcut so it means a route that is more direct than the usual route or a quicker way of doing something in this case we're talking about travel in this lesson so it would really be that first part of a meaning like uh a more direct route but if you're doing some activity maybe you're putting something together assembling it and you oh I found a shortcut and in that case then it would be referring to a quicker way of doing something here are some examples talking about like a more direct way I mentioned already we will get there faster if we take a shortcut or maybe you're telling somebody look you can take a shortcut across the field go go this way and yes you'll be able to take a shortcut what do you think I have a m in Denver on my way to La so in this case we're talking about well I'll go ahead and tell you we're talking about traveling by plane I have a m in Denver on my way to La you could probably infer that based on this you know Denver on your way to La that right there is actually a picture of Denver International Airport

Dia so I your your final destination is La but what do you think I have a m in Denver on my way to La there is a you could use another phrase I see a lot of people say like layover layover would work in this context that is another word you're talking about travel that's actually not the one that uh I I put in there but it does work if you have a layover in someplace you have this temporary period where you are going to relax but uh there is another one that that you could use so let me go ahead and give it to you in this case I was just talking about a connecting flight so if you want to use the phrase connecting flight flight then you are stopping somewhere temporarily in which case you have a layover and then you are going on to uh La there again there are other ways that you can say this and I'll put it down there so if you said layover that works but a connecting flight is a flight train or something that leaves at a suitable time for you uh to take it to continue your journey after you have traveled on a previous flight or train so really you have a connection a lot of times you might say you could say a stopover as well that also works I see that in the chat but uh to talk about two different ways to refer to this I have a connecting flight in Denver on my way to LA or I have to connect through Denver on my way to La um so again you could connect through a city on your way to another one and that tells the person that you're going to stop that you have a layover or you have a stopover and then they going to continue or you could use connecting flight so again all of those words and phrases are generally used to refer to the same thing it just really depends on the way that you want to phrase it as whether you have a layover or a stopover or a connecting flight or you're going to connect through some City on your way to your final destination what do you think uh in in this one in this case there there is just one uh response that I'm looking for if someone were to say I love to avoid crowds therefore I prefer to travel off what uh what phrase completes this you can see this picture right there this very perhaps some secluded beach in the middle of nowhere and there's not many people around and that's why somebody says look I prefer to avoid crowds therefore I prefer to travel off so I I I guess you could include the word travel as part of this because often yeah you're going to use it with that verb and Well Done uh saw some great answers fatty acid teayo uh Julia we're talking about off the beaten path so if you travel off the beaten path that in that case you're we go ahead and give you the meaning you're really going to a place that maybe is not known or popular with many people I know that when I like to travel if I have a choice between going to some very crowded well-known City or going somewhere like a town that may be more off the beaten path that's what I would choose to do I would rather avoid the crowds go see someplace that maybe is not as well known and therefore I could say yeah I like to travel off the beaten path or off the Beaten Track either one of those

is okay and what I wanted to point out here this is a resource that if you watch these lessons I definitely bring it up uh from time to time if you're ever in a situation and you want to compare the usage of certain words or phrases you could use either one and you could use engram viewer to to put it on a graph so I can put in off the beaten path off the Beaten Track and it basically shows you how commonly used are in comparison to one another in this case it's really the same and you could use either one and they're used at about the same amount of frequency you could say I said I like to travel Off the Grid yeah Off the Grid is another phrase that's very similar the only thing I would say about Off the Grid in that case it makes me think it is somewhere that yeah very remote I think of someplace that is really nobody else is around and you are in the middle of nowhere in that case in that if you are off the grid what do you think because of the traffic accident we had to make a slight detour and I'm giving you the word slight even though it's not absolutely necessary to use as part of this phrase however I think that you may use this word if you're talking about this travel phrase and you can see the road there so this is one that pertains to driving for the most part not always I think anytime you're trying to travel to a destination you could use this phrase but quite often I think you would use it in the context of driving and you're going somewhere by car so we're because of the traffic because of the traffic accident you know you're not going to go maybe the direct route in that case you're going to possibly take a slight detour to take a detour or to take a slight detour um all right Joo welcome all right thanks for uh becoming a member joining the team I love it so here is the meaning if somebody takes a detour uh a different or less direct route to a place that is used to avoid a problem in this case in the example a TR uh the a traffic accident or to visit somewhere or do something on the way so if you're avoiding something you're going to take a detour but if you perhaps maybe go out of your way because you want to see this other place before you go on to your final destination you could still use this phrase yeah we wanted to visit this Lake that um you know is kind of out in the middle of nowhere because it's off the beaten path so we took a little bit of a detour on our way to this major city that you are traveling to and I'm just going to review and keep using these phrases because you can certainly use them uh multiple times if you're talking about traveling and visiting someplace all right love seeing these emojis thank you guys so this is a funny I I again I don't know if you could see it these images are a little small so I can give you some context and tell you what's on it it's supposed to be funny because you can see on the orange sign it says detour and it's pointing in this direction but just below it it says it's a dead end and it says no outlet and it's like wait a second how is it you want how is that a detour to go right into the dead end anyway let's move on to the next one we are making M because of that shortcut so I'm bringing up that word we've talked about a shortcut already is a more direct route to get to your final destination who doesn't love taking a shortcut on their way to somewhere so if you take a shortcut I I don't want to give it away what what is that doing to the time that it takes you to get there which is why I have the picture there of this hourglass because I I'm bringing that into the I'm giving giving you a little bit of a hint so you take this shortcut what does that do to the time um and maybe I shouldn't have mentioned the word time because it's kind of uh giving it away so if you take a shortcut and you're just wanting to comment that uh yeah we're making good time because of that shortcut this is a very common phrase when you're traveling somewhere and you want to basically say that you're ahead of schedule or you're yeah you you're just going to get there early and perhaps you're happy about that you say oh yeah we're making good time now here are some other examples because you're just you're basically able to complete a trip quickly I already gave you this example sentence we're making good time but because of that shortcut you don't have to use the word good you can use another adjective instead we're making uh or we made great time I think it only took us an hour and 15 minutes so you can make good time you can make great time and it has a positive connotation because you're just getting somewhere FAS and who does not like to get to their destination quicker I know I do especially if I'm traveling by train I just don't like I just don't care for airline travel I'd much rather uh take a road trip or uh go by train what do you think on our road trip we took a little detour all right we've already talked about that phrase we decided to route and drive up the coastline on our road trip we took a little detour we decided to take the M route which is part of the expression that I want to highlight and drive up the coastline this is a picture of the California coastline if you ever visit the state of California and you're taking a road trip I highly recommend you well you don't have to take a detour maybe it is but you go up Highway one and go along the coastline it's gorgeous and you can see Big Sur which is actually this is where the picture is taken from but uh in that case if you are driving along a highway or you take any route that is very beautiful it's lovely and that's the reason you're taking it you could say that you are taking the scenic route and this is a phrase that's kind of fixed um actually you could take we could take a scenic route as well we could use the article uh um if it fits in that like let's take a more scenic route but uh you are often going to use it with the verb take we're going to take the scenic route up the coastline and visit and see Big Sur so I mentioned detour could be because of an accident or it could be because you want to do it so in this case if you take a little detour because you want to take the scenic route it works here is a funny uh shirt I I'll again I'll read it for you if you can't see it but just the definition of a scenic route is a way that is not the fastest way but that has beautiful scenery and if you are not in a hurry and you're not looking to take shortcuts then yeah perhaps you would like to take the scenic route uh I said if I'm driving I feel a little more like I can take my time and in that case generally I don't mind taking the scenic route this shirt says I'm not lost I'm just taking the scenic route so if you're going somewhere and maybe somebody says well you're you know I I you know we're we're now lost in the middle of nowhere you can say look we're not lost in the middle of nowhere I I just decided to take the scenic route look around it's all this nature uh it's very beautiful and you're taking the scenic route here is a review of the travel phrases that I wanted to highlight again these are ones that I like to use that I think are really relevant in conversation if you're talking about uh trip that you took or even one that you will take you can use these phrases from time to time whether you're flying taking a car train it really depends on the the way that you're going to travel but uh these are ones that you can certainly use and you will hear uh if you're having a a conversation about travel if you enjoyed this lesson and you learn something new whether you learned some of these phrases or even uh talk talked about those collocations please you can let me know by hitting that like button and uh yeah that's what it's all about is just building your vocabulary taking a topic that I think we can all relate to and adding to it a little bit at a time so I really appreciate all of you joining me today I hope that you found this lesson useful and I will see you in the future with another

Useful Technology Phrasal Verbs for Surfing the Internet

Today, I want to talk to you about some useful phrasal verbs that you may use every day. That's coming up. What's up everyone? My name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills. And today I want to talk to you about some useful phrasal verbs that are related to the computer, to the internet, to technology in general, which is why I said you may use these every day because we use the computer all the time. So the first phrasal verb that I want to talk to you about, well actually a couple of phrasal verbs that have the same meaning is log in and sign in.

And what this means is just to access a computer or even a site using a name and a password. When you first start using the computer, you may need to log in and then if you perhaps want to go to a website, you might have to sign into that website. Anonymous 821 signed in to multiple accounts on standing by. I logged into Hoytsman's computer and flooded it with Thai pornography. Then we have to click on and that just means to move the mouse over to an application to a link and then you select it. You click on the application or you click on the link, Just click on the enchanted boots to put them on.

I don't know. Can I see them in another color? Just click on them. Next we have scroll up and scroll down and this just means to move to the top or bottom of a site or a text. So for example, If you're using a document you might need to scroll down to find more information or keep reading or maybe if you miss something then you would scroll back up. Okay, wait a minute. What happens if you scroll down? How about if you scroll up? You can also scroll through a site or a document and this just means to go through it. To go up and down. Usually because you're looking for some specific information and you are scrolling through the site. In order to find the information that you need.

I will take a silent face journey as I scroll through this comment section. And scroll through the onscreen menu. You should scroll through the pictures on my husband's phone. So because we're talking about computers, the internet technology, I want to tell you about a great opportunity to help you improve your English. And a way that you can do that is by taking some online classes with Lingoda, which is a language school where you can take lessons in English, German, Spanish or French. And I've even studied at Lingoda. So I can tell you it is a great place to learn a language. So with lingo Goda you have many options when it comes to learning English and if you'd like to learn a lot in a short period of time, then I would suggest that you check out the Lingoda sprint because this is the best way to quickly improve your English skills.

Now Lingoda two gives you two different options to choose from. You can take the sprint in which you'll take 15 classes a month for three months, so you will pay each month. If you take each and every class and successfully complete the sprint, then you will be eligible for a 50% refund. Now if you're thinking, I, I really want to challenge myself, I want to learn as much as I can, then I would recommend the super sprint in which you will take one class each day for 90 days. So every month you will pay for the classes. But if you take all 90 classes and successfully complete the super sprint, then you will be eligible for a 100% refund. Now when you sign up, you will need to pay a 49 euro deposit in order to secure your spot.

But this 49 euro will be taken off your first month's payment. But for all of you here at Interactive English, you can use the voucher code SPRINT7 to get a 10 euro discount on your deposit. So click on the link in the description to find out more information about costs, schedules, as well as how to get that 100% refund and of course use that voucher code SPRINT7 to get your 10 Euro discount and really begin taking your English to the next level.

The next phrasal verb that I have for you is to back up and oftentimes you're talking about backing up your computer or backing up your hard drive and this just means to keep an extra copy of information for safekeeping. Every now and then I need to back up my computer. I need to save that information in case something happens or maybe you say you're going to back up your hard drive, which is where the information is stored and you are going to back everything up because you definitely don't want to lose it. It's always smart to back up your computer. Every time it's triggered, I get a text like a Google alert, I don't even know what you're talking about.

You know he backs up his hard drive every night, right? What are you doing? Backing up the hard drive. It's a good habit to get into. Next is hack into and when somebody hacks into another computer or even a site, then that just means they are illegally accessing a computer or they're illegally connecting to some kind of network. So it's not a good thing. I hope that you are not trying to hack into someone else's computer in order to steal information, but this is a phrasal verb that you may definitely hear if you're watching a movie or a TV show and somebody is trying to illegally access some information. They may hack into the computer or maybe hack into the network.

He hacked into our system. You hacked into her computer. I'm hacking into the phone's camera now. That's it. That's a livestream. Monica hacked into our server. Okay. Please don't tell me that you hacked into end frames system. I won't tell you that. Well did you hack into it or not? Sheldon, that computer is used for national defense hacking into it is a federal crime. Then we have the phrasal verb run out of and this just means to decrease the supply of something. When talking about computers, it's common to hear someone say that they are running out of space. They use the computer all the time. They're storing all this information and photos and they begin to run out of space.

Now this is a phrasal verb that you can use in a variety of different contexts, but it has the same meaning. For example, you might run out of gas if you're driving a car or maybe here at home I might run out of milk, which is true. I am running out of milk so I need to go to the store. The supply is decreasing. But when you're talking about a computer, people would say they're running out of space. Apparently the net has run out of webspace and they don't have enough bytes left to add my name.

Now, if you're trying to create more space, you might use the phrasal verb free up and you're trying to free up space and make it available so that you can continue to save photos and other information on the computer. You need to free up some space. We can also use this phrasal verb and a variety of other situations as well. For example, you may need to free up some of your time and you make it available so that you can do other things. But when talking about computers, it's all about the, the space that you have, the memory. Most of the time people free up space by deleting things, but just make sure that's why it's good to back everything up so you don't lose anything.

You're making a choice to destroy it, to never see it again. You choose to delete because you need to free up space because you don't want it anymore. Next is the phrasal verb pop up. To pop up, which means just to suddenly appear. So I think it's normal nowadays if you are using the internet, that an advertisement will suddenly pop up and it just appears, so this is a phrasal verb to pop up, but it can also be used as a noun because that advertisement, the one that pops up is referred to as a pop-up. It's called a pop-up. But the action to pop up is a phrasal verb. And I keep saying pop up so many times. I hope that this is not confusing.

Yeah, except when you update the software, a little window pops up and you click okay to actually go inside there, but I've seen those ads pop up on my screen. Then we have opt in and opt out and this just means to choose to receive messages. So if you opt in, then you are saying, yes, I will receive some messages. If you change your mind and say, I don't want to receive any messages any longer than you can opt out. Opt in, opt out. What value can we offer now to the user to entice them to download the app and opt into our network? This is the butt whisperer 9,000. Cushion track.

Dog walk side path. A must. Liability opt out button. Keep them coming. And drill Sergeant mode. We also have the phrasal verb filter out and this just means to remove unwanted email messages. So if you receive emails that, that you don't want, you're not interested in these messages, then you may try to filter them out so that you just don't receive them anymore. Google always filters out my emails. They think I'm a bot. And when we said someone should probably help Eric by filtering out any negative comments he mentioned you by name. Then we have three phrasal verbs that mean well, they all mean the same thing. So this should be easy and that is turn off, shut down and power off. And it just means to, to end a session on the computer and you just stop using it.

So if you're not going to use the computer anymore, you can turn it off or maybe you'll shut it down or perhaps you'll power it off. You can use any one of these three. In my personal opinion, I think turn off is probably the most common, followed by shut down and then power off. It's still used, but I don't think it's as commonly used. And I'm probably going to hear from a bunch of people in the comments say, I always say power off. I love using that one. You can use any of them. Don't worry about it. They all mean the same thing. Turn off, shut down, power off. Turn off the computer and come downstairs.

I'm going to need your gimble angles Jack. Before you shut down the computer. Energy probe. Shut down, Alex. Shut down. Power off. Then we have plug in, which is a phrasal verb specifically talking about plugging a power cable into a socket. Plug in. So if you need to charge your battery then you're going to need to plug it into a socket so that you can continue to use the computer. I don't, I don't think your computer's plugged in. I'm sorry guys. What are you doing? Plugging in your computer. Then we have print out and if you are printing something out then you are making a copy of something from the computer.

I need to get everything ready so I can start using it again. But you will see this phrasal verb when you start using a new program for the first time, you will need to set it up on your computer. You install it, you set it up, and then you can start using it. We set up a voice activation system on your computer. I'm going to need so much help setting up my computer. I'm like a total grandma. Then we have keep up with. And this is probably my favorite phrasal verb because I think it applies to me. This is used when talking about technology because what it means is to maintain the same of something and often I think it's talking about like knowledge or changes and it really applies to technology because often people, well people like me, he might say, you know with so many changes happening and it's moving so fast, it's difficult to keep up with all of these changes. It's difficult to keep up with all of these updates on the computer. It's difficult to keep up with with all of these different forms of social media. So if you're like me, then yes, it may be difficult to keep up with all of these changes. I've been trying to keep up with her, but I'm an old ass. What do you like about Ryan? Ryan keeps up with all the latest technology trends and he's very honest with me when I put on weight. And I hope that you have no problem keeping up with our lessons because you don't have to sign into anything in order to watch our lessons.

Now, there may be an advertisement that pops up from time to time and you may have to watch it. But that's just about it and I'm just trying to use these phrasal verbs again and again because that's just going to help you remember their meaning. If you enjoy this lesson and learn something new, please hit that like button. And as always, thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time.

Useful Time Expressions to Help Improve Your Fluency

hello hello hello how's it going I hope you guys are having an awesome day out there my name is Wes this is interactive English and we are always coming out with new and different lessons to help you guys practice and improve your English skills and today I have a very very cool lesson for you we're going to talk about something that is commonly used all the time every day so it's a really important lesson and that is time we're going to talk about time and telling time some of the the useful words and expressions that we use when we want to say what time it is and again this is very important because as I said we we used this every day we're constantly thinking about well what time it is everybody has a busy life so the this is very important stuff that we want to know and again if you're joining us please say what's up in the chat of

Rosario Lou and Vivian hey how's it going Patricia glad that you guys can join us and even if you're watching this later just say let me know your name where are you from write it in the comments love hearing from you guys and glad to have you with us so today we're going to talk about telling time and some of the useful words and expressions that we can use when we want to say what time it is it's gonna start out it'll start out a little easier and this is this may be stuff you already know you're familiar with but then it's gonna get a little more difficult and especially once we get into some of the expressions that we use when telling time because you don't want to just say the same thing anybody you don't want to say the same thing anybody ask you hey what time is it you want to be able to give different responses because it just helps out with your overall fluency so the first thing that I wanted to show you guys and talk about today is the 12-hour clock and the reason I want to talk to you about this is because that's what we're going to use when I'm when I'm talking about saying time we're going to use a 12-hour clock and the reason that we're going to use a 12-hour clock is because well that's what most english-speaking countries use and if you are listening to music or watching TV or movies and listening to English more than likely you are gonna be you're gonna hear people talking using a 12-hour clock and so let's let's go back a little let's back it up give you a quick little history lesson so the 12-hour clock how did it come about and I'd be curious to know in the chat or in the comments what do you guys use do you use a 12-hour clock or do you use a 24-hour clock which one which one do you use what do people in your country use let me know let me know in the chat I'd be interested to hear from all of you so the day's originally long time ago the days were divided into two different cycles and that makes sense you had the daytime and then you had nighttime and the the time was tracked depending on the position of the Sun in the moon historically you had ancient Egypt you had the Romans you had the British Empire all used the 12-hour clock the 12-hour cycle and then when clocks came about many clocks as you can see my clock down there in the corner began using a 12-hour analog dial and when I say the dial it's just that picture down there and they would use Roman numerals the twelve Roman numerals to represent the time for the 12-hour clock so all of the words and expressions that we use today that I'm going to teach you about it refers to this 12-hour clock okay so very interesting all right Bradley I used 12-hour clock at my country Brazil they used the 24-hour clock okay Marco says 24 hours more comfortable yeah that's true it's very interesting Egypt's the 12-hour clock it's very interesting to see what everybody's doing as I've lived in different countries I've become a little more used to a 24-hour clock so both of them are very familiar but again with with english-speaking countries I don't know why everybody just uses the 12-hour clock Britain the United States Canada Australia so again for the for this lesson we're going to talk about and discuss things based on that 12-hour clock so let's start out with something simple and easy because we all we love simple and easy don't we and that is just saying you know the basic time how do you say the time so when you have your time kind of like we have this clock right there you're going to say the hours first you'll always say the hours it's and then the hours followed by the minutes okay you say the hours and then the minutes so in the shots in the comments I want you to write down and write out your answer what time is it right now using this method just the hours and the minutes all right what what time is it right now and see if you can spell see if you can spell the numbers instead of just writing the numbers cuz that's pretty easy okay what time is it right now let me know in the chat so let's look at this my nice beautiful digital clock right here and use that as an example so the hours that's on the tenth so it's you're going to say the hour all right look at that one that I have down there for you you're gonna say the hour seven and then zero you're going to say o again seven oh eight what time is it it's seven oh eight so if the numbers are 1 to 9 the minutes you're going to say o 701 702 703 I was recently teaching a student and just asking them what time it is I was more curious about the time difference because we were in two different locations and the student told me they said it's five five and I was thinking for a second wait a second I knew what he meant because I knew what time it was here and I knew he meant five oh five and then we had a nice little discussion about saying the time so again if that that's zero if the numbers 1 to 9 the minutes you're going to say 708 and I wrote that as an example kind of I'm putting it in quotes because it's it's like you're saying the time speaking and I I do want us to speak today okay I want you to speak we're gonna make this a little a little bit of a speaking lesson later on once we do the practice and then the last example down there what time is it the hours and the minutes it's 11 12 all right what time is it it's 11 12 the one thing I want you to know with if you're saying time like this okay we say this with in the morning in the afternoon in the evening so when we use those time expressions in the morning in the afternoon in the evening oftentimes we oftentimes we're using we're saying time like this we're saying the hours and then the minutes okay it's ten twenty nine in the morning it's ten twenty nine in the evening okay so if you want to add that other time expression it makes it more specific so you know whether it's the morning the afternoon or the evening a lot of often you can just use this based on context because if people are outside then you most likely know if it's daytime or nighttime but sometimes we're inside and we lose track of time and somebody might say yeah in the morning in the afternoon in the evening especially if they want to emphasize this like like it's really late in the morning and you've been sleeping in late so this is a very simple easy way of doing stuff you say the hours and then you say the minutes now let's look at some time words okay and this is talking about the various parts of the day and these are some good words that that indicate a period of the day that that you should be able to conceptualize and know okay what time are people talking about so in the chat or in the comments let me know I want you to write tell me what is your favorite part of the day and why what's your favorite part of the day and why that is my question to all of you all right right now let me know what is your favorite part of the day so let's let's go around let's go around the whole circle so this day that I have right here would be based on a 24-hour site okay so it's it's a full day and let's start at the top right there at noon or mid day which would be 12 p.m. sorry for the the graphics I tried to make it look like the the yellow for the Sun during the day and then down make it a little darker at night it didn't turn out as well as I'd like but you get the idea so

12 p.m. right there up at the top would be noon we would just say it's noon or midday more commonly I think people would say noon I don't hear a midday as much so people often say noon instead of saying 12 p.m. so once we move once the time moves after that then we are into the afternoon alright and that's a very general time period that there is no specific time like oh it's from here to here it's just after noon that's what it's based on and that is the the day time period until the Sun is going down and when the Sun Goes Down you have the sunset which I think most of us are probably familiar with that word sunset when the Sun Goes Down you have the sunset and after the sunset there is this short period where it's still light out we can see and it's not dark just yet but the night is coming quickly so it's that period from when the Sun Goes Down you have the sunset and then there still light before it gets dark and that is dusk that is what we refer to as dusk and it can also be called twilight that time period where there still light but the Sun has gone down it's Twilight it's dusk once the sun goes down then we are into the evening which is my favorite part of the day because you can kind of kick back relax and enjoy other people are saying the evening as well excellent Maria some people in the mornings okay very cool very cool again let me know what what's your favorite part of the day so once you get into the evening that is when people have dinner they relaxed maybe they watch some TV and then they go to bed and at 12 a.m. that is midnight okay so we have 12 p.m. would be noon all right around lunchtime and then the opposite would be 12 12 a.m. that is midnight and then after midnight you're kind of you're moving back into what people consider morning that it's the early morning and then we go back around and before the Sun comes up this is also important before the Sun comes up it starts to get light you don't see the Sun but there's light and that is what is dawn people can also refer to this as Twilight as well because Twilight is basically any period where there's light but the Sun is either up or but the Sun is still down so it both dusk and dawn you could refer to as Twilight even though I think most people think of Twilight around dusk once the Sun Goes Down so you have dusk and dawn dawn is the time right before the sunrise and then once you have the sunrise then people most of us commonly just refer to that as morning and then you're back at noon and it just goes round and round and round and the time never stops even though I think many of us would like it to stop sometimes so again if you're just joining us welcome we are talking about telling time and the different expressions and words that we can use to tell the time and afterwards I have a little practice for you some of you oh my favorite part of the day is sunrise ooh very cool I am not much of a morning person so I'm not a huge fan of the sunrise I like to sleep in so let's get back to telling time and I want to look at this and talk about half hours so when we're talking about our 12 hour clock all right a lot of times things are broken into different intervals different minutes and a common one is a half hour which is 30 minutes and if we're talking about a time that is right here 30 minutes past the hour then you would just say half past half past and then the hour it's 30 minutes past the hour it's half past mmm and then you'd say the hour so for this okay that 3:30 now this is where let's let's practice some speaking right now I'm gonna say geez what's time what time is it I want you to say the answer I want you to tell me the time all right this this is it's 3:30 we're gonna use 3:30 and I just want you to speak the answer and say it out loud if you're if you're

if you're with us right now or even if you're watching this later everybody wants to practice a little more speaking speaking speaking so now's your chance to do a little speaking and just practice it okay so I'll ask you again what time is it you should say it's half past three all right what time is it 3:30 it's half past three all right let's look at the next one 8:30 I'll ask you you can tell me hey uh what time is it did you tell me did you tell me the time I hope you did cuz it you should say it's half past eight so if it's 30 minutes past the hour most of the time we're just gonna say half past it's half past one it's half past two it's half past three it's half past four so thirty minutes we would use half past in the comments right now in the chat if you were speaking out loud I want you to write the words speaking I want to know if you were actually talking to me and having a little bit of a conversation okay if another thing to point out just so you know a little difference between some of the the British English American English we'll talk about this throughout the lesson but in British English some people may say they may just say half eight so if somebody says half and then the hour that's what they mean they mean thirty minutes past the hour so eight thirty it's half past eight some people in Britain might say it's half eight I remember traveling a long time ago and the first time I heard this I asked somebody from Britain what time it was and they said I think like oh it's half 5:00 and for a second I was trying to think I was like hmm do they mean 4:30 or do they mean 5:30 I wasn't quite sure but if somebody says half and then the hour they mean it's half past that time so 8:30 would be half eight

9:30 would be half 9:00 and of course a very common way that we talk about the time is to give estimates to give approximations so again there's my digital clock right there we can estimate things with about you can always do it if it's 10 29 you don't have to say again the hours and the minutes it's 10 29 you can use about and just estimate it's about half-past ten and then you know that okay it's about 30 minutes past 10 o'clock it's about half past 10 so that is how we can use the half all right so if it's thirty minutes we're going to use half past let's look at the next one another increment very commonly used would be 15 minutes so if we're talking about 15 minutes past the hour it's 15 minutes past the hour we would say it's quarter past and then whatever the hour is okay it's quarter past the hour so again I want to do this a little little speaking right now I'm just gonna I'll give you the time I'll ask you what time it is and just say it out loud practice using these because these are great expressions that that people use all the time instead of saying 215 okay so let's look at that one first 215 what time is it you should say it's quarter past two it's fifteen minutes past two it's quarter past two let's look at the next one okay are you ready 5:15 what time is it it's quarter past five ten fifteen what time is it it's quarter past ten again I want you to practice saying these out loud I don't I I don't it doesn't matter where you are if you're at home if you're on a bus if you're at school if you're at work practice saying these out loud even if you're watching this later on it's always good to get a little bit of speaking practice and actually pronouncing these words and saying it out loud because that's another great way to help you remember the information so 15 quarter past would be 15 minutes past the hour Americans down here a side note for this one Americans also use after I think I probably since I am from the United States I probably use after more than I use past I would say in this example my clock over there you can see I'd say yeah it's quarter after 1:00 it's 15 minutes after 1:00 o'clock so you could use either past or after if you want to say it's it's 15 minutes past the hour but after it's more so I think an American thing than it is a British thing but just so you know food for thought it's quarter after 1:00 it's 15 minutes past 1:00 it's the same okay so again if you guys are doing this practice if you're saying this out loud I want you to write just right speaking in comments so I know that you guys are actually participating and saying this stuff and repeating afterwards also I have another question for you do when when you're talking about time in in English do you use these already do you use half past are you using quarter hours to save the time because again this is something that we do everyday that it's so common all the time to use half and quarter so this is talking about quarter past fifteen minutes past the hour now let's look at if it's fifteen minutes until the hour 15 minutes until the hour you are going to use to or till which would just kind of be shortened for until till it's quarter to the hour it's quarter till the hour so again let's just practice let's practice speaking a little more let's look at that first one I will ask you what time it is and just give me give me this response 4:45 that's the one we're starting with 4:45 what time is it and you should say it's quarter till five you could also say it's quarter to five let's do 9:45 what time is it it's quarter to ten its quarter till ten both mean the same thing and 11:45 what time is it it's quarter to twelve or you could say depending on the time you could say it's quarter to noon it's quarter to midnight depending on the time of day twelve it's either going to be noon or midnight those are other ways to express 12:00 p.m. and 12:00 a.m. so we can use two or till when we want to talk about that it's almost at the hour almost at that point another thing I probably more common I used to I don't know why I don't really use till that much I would always just say it's quarter to one quarter to two quarter to three quarter to four quarter to five I personally just used to I don't know which one you are more common you you are more comfortable with you can let us know let me know in the comments I'd be curious okay some people are when I'm doing it aloud perfect excellent thank you for participating excellent let's look at oh that other note my side note down there for you that Americans will also may also use of and this one I think can be pretty confusing it depends where you are from in the country I don't really use of I've heard it before but people might say it's quarter of two that means that it's 15 minutes until two o'clock its quarter of two so if you ever hear that when you're watching a movie or watching TV then you'll know it's 15 minutes until that our quarter up to a quarter of 3/4 of four it's more of an American thing I don't think it's as common so let's continue hello again if you guys are just joining us great to have you with us let me know your name and where you're from we are talking about time and time expressions and different ways that we can say the time so let's look at using time alright using time wisely so I kind of wanted to give you a visual of past or after as well as two or till so again that that clock that hour can be divided into two different parts if you're talking about the first the first part of the hour all right 1 to 30 minutes you're you're you're you're going to use past or after when you're talking about the time if you want to say the minutes and after and then the or once it goes over that half-hour then you would use to or till and then whatever the next hour is so I hope that kind of gives you a little bit of a reference as to how the clock is divided and how people are going to use past and after and - until and again if you guys use these let me know write it in the chat do you guys use past and after - until it's great to learn it's great to practice because again we use this all the time excellent so let's look at a also I wanted to point out just for one thing if we're talking about if we're gonna say again morning afternoon evening remember that we're not really going to use that you you're not going to use it's it's quarter after 1:00 in the morning it you could I think it sounds a little strange if you're gonna use those time expressions in the morning in the evening in the afternoon remember it's most commonly used with this form right here when you say the hour and then you say the minutes it's 10:20 9:00 in the morning it's 10:20 9:00 in the evening so that's something to keep in mind if we're going to use those expressions let's look at just some more examples using past after 2:00 until so I hope that you guys can see these clocks down there it's a little small but I think you can kind of get the idea as to where things are at so let's look at that first one right there the the shorthand is almost to the 7 the longhand is on the 8th so we're gonna say it's 20 to 7 it's 20 to 7 it's 20 minutes until 7 o'clock it's 20 to 7 or you could say it's 20 till 7 the next one right there with both hands are pointing to the one we'd say it's five after one five after one or you could say that's that's more of an American way of saying it you could also say it's five past one five minutes past the hour five minutes past one o'clock it's five after one it's five past one again if you are gonna say in the afternoon it'd be more it's fun if it's it's 10:55 in the afternoon that's what I think would be more commonly used with in the afternoon let's look down here these clocks right here the long hand is on the five and the short hand is in between the two or three so it's a it's twenty-five past two it's 25 past to the the other thing that I wanted to tell you guys when you're using these you know that the clock is divided into twelve numbers all right so it's basically five minutes we use these a lot when we're talking about these five minute increments 5 10 15 20 25 35 we use that a lot so we'd say it's 25 past 2 it's 25 after 2 to say it's 2:25 and then the final one over there that clock in the corner it's pointing to okay it is it is almost 11 o'clock the long hand is pointing at the 10 so we'd say it's 10 till 11:00 ten minutes until 11 o'clock it's 10:00 till 11:00 or you could say it's 10:00 to 11:00 all right so excellent oh thank you jessabelle from the Philippines love this video well excellent I'm glad that you guys are finding this useful hello hello lene RK I see some new people in here hope you guys are having a great day again thank you for joining us today on this Saturday or even if you're watching this later thank you for joining us let's let's do some practice and again I want to make this a speaking practice so I'm going to give you a time and just ask you what time it is and I want you to think of all the different ways that you can say it and see how many that you can say if you don't want to say if you want to write them down write them in the chat write it in the comments I would recommend try speaking it it's great to say the language but if you want to write it that's fine as well just it's it's good to participate and get involved in this process is the only thing I want so let's look at the first one all right are you ready and boom okay so I want you to say the times out loud or if you want to write them it's fine so again I put it in quotes you just say it's mmm okay what are the different ways that we we could say this this is the time right here I'll give you a moment and then and then we'll go through them and I'll show you the different answers I'll show you what I have so if you look at the clock and you see this time and somebody asks you right now I say what time is it can you can you tell me what time it is what are some of the different answers that you could give what time is it what do you think what time is it so I hope again so you're ready perfect all right yes yes yes VidCon Mohamed

Aquino perfect Murillo excellent so some of the things you could say if somebody says what time is it and this is the clock all right the first one you could just say the hour and then the minutes it's 2:15 okay it's 2:15 the p.m. so it would be 2:15 in the afternoon what time is it it's 2:15 in the afternoon you could also say as some of you wrote the chat it's 15 past two 15 minutes past 2:00 o'clock you could also say it's 15 it's Fitz it's quarter after 2:00 is another one we talked about those quarter hours it's quarter after two also it's quarter past two that was another one so you can use any of these examples you could say it's 2:15 you could say it's 15 say the minutes past the hour it's 15 past 2:00 or you could say again 15 we just say it's a quarter it's quarter after two it's quarter past two again quarter after it would be that that's that's more made that's the American Way of saying it so the next one are you ready here it is this is the time this is a time that I really hate to see because it's too early so my question for you is what time is it what time is it tell me what time it is what are some different things that you could say what are some different things you could say if you see this time what time is it and say the answer is out loud it's hmm what time is it all right let's look at let's look at a few of these so first I would say okay it's 6:40 again just saying the hour and the minutes it's 6:40 in the morning all right its morning time usually I'd say it's 6:40 in the mm maybe throw some profanity in there morning because I am NOT a morning person I would hate to see this time we could also say it's 20 to 7:00 all right it's 20 to 7:00 some of you wrote that in there it is 20 to 720 that perfect Vivian Nick brad.leah perfect excellent way to go so it's twenty two seven twenty minutes to two seven o'clock or twenty minutes or twenty til seven twenty minutes until seven o'clock excellent let's look at another one um what about this time right here what would you guys say you see this on the clock and I ask you what time is it what would you tell me can you tell me the time all right for this one there are different ways that we could go about it so let's look at a few of them what we could say is just say the the hours and the minutes it's 11 48 okay you could also say it's 12 minutes all right that's what's missing all right it's 12 - and again we're gonna go to 12 p.m. so you could I put a red line through it because again not many people would use this because it just sounds a little awkward and redundant it's 12 to 12 or 12 till 12 technically that's correct but we wouldn't really use it because of the numbers that we're talking about 12 and 12 more common this is when somebody would substitute 12 p.m. for noon and you could say it's 12 to noon or 12 he'll noon or again if we want to use about and give an estimate you're good to say it's about 10 to noon or you could say in that case it's 10 to 12 10 til 12 that's perfectly fine all of those are all of these answers are fine I just kind of marked out 12 to 12 because again it's just it sounds a little bit like a redundancy and it becomes a little more confusing so people put in there it's 12 to noon perfect it's 12 to midday that is also perfectly fine excellent excellent you guys are rocking it let's do another this time right here what would you say for this time what time is it what time is it you can say your answers out loud or write them in the chat or if you're watching this later write your answers in the comments write them down use the comment section like it's a whiteboard and you can practice and use the language that's the most important thing what time is it so this one what we are talking about a half-hour so let's look at the different ways we can say this again we can always say the hours and the minutes it's 5:30 it's 5:30 5:30 in the evening this would kind of depend on the time of year it's winter right and house so it still gets dark early so I would say it's 5:30 in the evening in the summer when it stays light longer then I might switch and say it's 5:30 in the afternoon so it really depends on the time of year again 30 minutes we'd say a half past it's half past five it's half past five in the US you could say half after five I don't think it's as common usually with after it's it's mostly those quarter quarter hours or as I said in Britain they might say it's half five which means it's 5:30 the most common one would just be it's and that is that period of time where there is just there is light out and you can kind of see but the Sun is nowhere to be found and people might often refer to that as Twilight we have 1/2 hours if it's 30 minutes we're just gonna say half half past half past the hour it's half past 3 half past 4 half past five that is a good one to know and same with quarter if it's 15 minutes then we're gonna use quarter it's quarter past whatever the hour is a quarter past two it's quarter past five it's quarter past 10 and as I said Americans like me will sometimes use after instead of past if it is 15 minutes until it reaches a certain hour we're going to use to or till my personal preference I often use to but as those examples 4:45 its quarter till 5:00 9:45 it's quarter to ten 11:45 it's quarter to 12:00 or quarter to noon quarter to midnight whatever time of the day it might be so those are some other expressions and again just showing you how we use past and after 2:00 until and it's most commonly used with those increments of you know 5 minutes 10 minutes 15 20 25 that's a common way of expressing the time so I really am glad that you guys join me today please if you have questions write them in the comments once this video gets posted if you're watching this later again say what's up let us know where you're from right any comments let us know what time it is what time are you watching this lesson please again like and share this video help us spread the word and as always you can join our social media classes we are active well let's start here Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat and of course right here on YouTube so we appreciate you guys being here with us today Braulio Eduardo Murillo long Maria I'm sure I threw sorry if I miss some of your comments as well sometimes not all of them pop up so thank you guys again for participating and being here and we will see you next time have a great weekend

Useful Tips on How to Build the Perfect Resume or CV

today I am going to talk to you about how you can build the perfect and ideal resume or CV that's coming up what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is the place that you want to be if you are looking to practice and improve your English skills now today's lesson is one that has been requested by many of you and it's more of a business English lesson because I'm going to talk to you about some useful and common sense ways that you can go about in building your perfect resume or CV we're going to talk about how to build the perfect resume or CV and this is useful I think to everyone out there many people who are watching this channel are English language learners and they would like to apply to an international job and they would like to have build a CV or resume in English and even if you're an English native speaker everybody out there is applying for jobs or they're going to look for a job in the future and you need to have that perfect resume or CV because you just want to improve your chances when you actually start looking for a job so I say common sense ways to help build your resume or CV because these are things that that all of us should be doing and I don't think sometimes not all of us do these things and I'm also guilty of not doing all of these things but I want to give you these useful tips and suggestions on how you can do just that so if you are joining us please in the chat write your name tell me where you are from or even in the comments later on just if you're watching this later write your name in the comments tell me where you're from I just want to hear from all of you guys and let's just begin so the first thing that you might be wonder is well what's the difference between a resume and a CV they're pretty similar because both of them are it's just a way of highlighting who you are your education your work experience your accomplishments but there are some some little differences and let's have a look at those right now so a resume is just going to be a quick summary of your skills and experience it's usually one to two pages oftentimes it's just a single page it's something that's really short really brief and and highlights the the number the top things that you want to share with this company that you're applying for and resumes I think are more common in the United States and Canada I think many parts of the rest of the world they typically ask for C B's and C these are just in it's a little more in-depth it gives a little more more details than a resume and it talks about your achievements and it's usually two or more pages now I say two or more I don't mean that you know C B's are typically ten or twelve pages that's a bit too long I think on average a CV might be three or four pages but it really depends it's going to be different depending on who you are because if you're younger your CV is maybe going to be a little shorter in it then if you're older because if you're older you probably have had more jobs you have more experiences and therefore you would highlight those and you would have a longer CV so again whether you're writing a resume or CV keep that in mind they should be varied they should be detailed and they should really talk about the highlights the things that you really want the this person to know about you okay and if you're wondering well which one do I use when I'm applying for a job I think most of the time if you're a look at if you're applying for a job in the job description it'll say whether you should submit a resume or a CV and just look for that if they ask for a resume then you no if they ask for a CV you know that as well so my first question for all of you guys which I want you to write in the chat or even in the comments later on is this one right here how much time do you spend on creating a resume alright how much time do you spend on creating your resume or CV let me know in the chat do you spend one hours two hours three hours four hours how what how do you go about doing this and then I'll share with you my experience alright what what I do and for me personally doing a resume or CV it's not something that I can sit down and do at one time period I usually do it over multiple days sometimes even a week and what I'll do is I'll start on it one day I'll do a little bit the next time the next day I'll do a little more and then I'll do a little more the next day until I feel like it's finished and everything on it is perfect because it is something that you really want to check and you want to make sure it's correct so typically I end up spending you know a fair fair bit of time doing this so the first tip that I have for you guys okay the first tip that I have for you is this one right here and that is to know your audience know who you are giving your resume or CV to know your audience that's what I mean by that and there are two things that I think you should keep in mind when it comes to knowing your audience the first one is this alright in which country is the job or business located alright which company are you applying for is an American company is it a company from Europe and the reason for this is because not all resumes and CVs will look the same depending on the country a CV in Brazil could look very different than a CV in Mongolia and you need to know who your audience is where is this job which country it is in because then you can find out well how does it how do people in this country typically do a resume or CV that's very important to know and understand it's also important to know which field or industry are you applying to which field or industry and the reason for this is because again if you're doing a resume for architecture that can look very different than a resume for computer science or coding so you want to make sure which field or industry what type of resume or CV is common and relevant and useful for that industry and in order to do both of these that leads me to my next tip and suggestion for you which is so so so so so important and that is do the research ok don't just sit down and write the resume make sure that you do some research first and find out as much information as you can about the company as much information as you can about the location the resume type the style what is it that people are looking for and some of the things that people might be looking for is this so if we're talking about a resume you might know as it is it going to be a chronological resume that lists things in order is it going to be a functional resume that has your highlight has highlights your achievements or accomplishments also what's what's the format of the resume or CV going to look like is it going to have a pitch should you put a picture should you not have your picture what about the headings should you put your education first or should you put your work experience first do the research to find out which is the best resume or CV for the industry or field to which you are applying and a great way to find out some of this information is to use Google images as a reference that is a quick and easy way to do just that so just to show you this I'm gonna show you a comparison because I just typed in into

Google Images two things I typed in America resume and German CV so just looking at these pictures let's see how they are different so let's check those out right here well here we have the German CV okay so here is a picture here's just some pictures that come up of the German CV and here's the American resume America resume German CV America resume German CV just by looking at those two okay whoops what can you guys what can you guys see the difference I think probably the first thing that that you should have noticed is that the pictures okay on the American resume there weren't really that many pictures on there I think maybe it show two on the German CV most of them had pictures of the applicant pictures of the person who's creating this CV so this is a good way Google Images is a good way to find some of this information out and get a lot of different samples so you can read other people's resumes and kind of see what they look like and at the end of this lesson I have a little treat for you because I am going to show you my resume and you can see kind of what that looks like and get a feel for it so the next tip that I have for you is this one right here and that is to use action words use action words before we did a lesson that was more about action words that are adjectives that you can use for business interviews for your next job interview and I will link that up in the card up above if you want to check that one out but when I'm talking about action words I'm specifically more talking about this using action verbs and also for grammar writing inactive sentences so the reason we want to use action verbs like develop create manage implement structure because these verbs stand out if somebody's skimming through a resume or CV these are words that typically jump off of the page and they're more interesting to the person who's reading it they help emphasize your education your experience as well as your accomplishment so it's very important that you use the right words when you are writing when you are writing your resume or CV be very careful of that also you want to make sure that you are using active sentences don't don't use the passive voice the reason for this is because active sentences they're easier to read and plus in an active sentence you're highlighting the subject doing the action and in this case because it's your resume it's your CV the subject is you you want to highlight that you are the person that is doing this action so be sure to write using active sentences all right okay the next one that I have for you and this is so so so so important is no grammar or spelling mistakes okay you should make sure that there are no grammar or spelling mistakes on your resume and CV that means that you need to check it again and again and again and again and again before you submit it and I think it always helps send it to somebody else ask them hey can you look through my resume real quickly can you read my CV and get some feedback see if they find any typos any spelling mistakes any grammar mistakes and the reason that you should make sure it's perfect is because this is this is somebody's first impression of you because they're gonna get your resume they don't know who you are and this is their first impression it's a reflection on you and if there is a typo if there are a lot of spelling mistakes or grammar mistakes the first thing that I would think is why why didn't this person make sure that everything was correct that everything was in order that if they didn't put the care in time into doing their resume or CV maybe if I give them a job and a task to do how do I know that they're going to put the time and care into doing that job so again make sure that there are no grammar and no spelling mistakes before you submit your CV and you always need to revise it again and again and again it's so so so important the next tip I have for you is something that has been a little difficult for me I think it's something I often overlooked and it can be really challenging and that is to try to network try to get your resume and CV out there to the world it's for as many many people to see as possible because that's only going to help your chances of getting a job the more people that have your information and the ways that you can go about trying to network as I said share your resume and CV share it with your friends share it with your colleagues so that if somebody becomes aware of a job maybe they can go ahead and forward your CV or resume to this prospective employer also you can use platforms like LinkedIn that's a great way to to list your education your experience and your accomplishments it's more developed for working professionals for business professionals so make sure it's updated on LinkedIn and again keep it updated and this is something that I think all of us forget I do as well if you work somewhere for a few years and then you go back and you look at your resume or CV and think oh wow this is old I need to update it keep updating your stuff make sure it is current you don't want to turn in and submit things that are old and again this is another thing sell yourself I just put that down there that's a very America I think when people are trying to sell themselves and really say this is me I'm the best person for this job please please please hire me but I think it's always good to sell yourself and really highlight your education your experiences your accomplishments on your resume and then network network network network that is only going to help you when it comes to finding a job and making sure that you have you are in the best position to get hired for that job so what I want to do now is let's let's have a look at my resume okay I want to I want to show share with you some of my resume and we'll have a look through it and I'll see because I think there are some things that I need to do to change it around to make it better because I think again this is something it's an ongoing process we can always make and improve our resumes and CVS so let's let's first have a look so this is a resume from from this year okay now right here you can see that I've blocked out my my address and my personal email because again you know if you guys want to get a hold of me it's not that difficult you can cut leave comments here and you want and I usually respond but this is a chronological essay because I'm putting things in chronological order with the starting with the most recent so my education and even my work experience down here at the very bottom my resume is two pages you can see that my teaching started in Korea in 2006 and seven at an academy and then I went on to work as a visiting professor at a university that's when it started okay that about a little over ten years ago and then the chronological order it it just moves up to where we are today now again I put my education first as an educational instructor trying to show okay this is University of San Francisco where I got my ma I have a certificate at UC Berkeley and I got my undergrad a long time ago well a kind of a long time ago at the University of Colorado now my work experience again my most recent interactive English perfect and I go through you can see I've had a number of different jobs but depend again this is chronological order there's other things that if I wanted to change this around and write more of a functional resume and highlight maybe I'm applying for an administration job this would be something I'd want to highlight I was the director of an intensive English program in Berkeley California I was before I was the director I was the academic coordinator at that school so I have some administrative experience so if I was if I were applying for an administrative job then that might be something that I'd want to highlight and create more of a functional resume now let's look at some of the language and nitpicks some of the language that I use in here some of the verbs okay we have okay implement develop alright manage these are good verbs that that stand out when somebody's reading through this utilize complete I think if I were to make a critique of mine I think facilitate that's another good one sometimes I use the same verbs over and over again I think it would help me to use different words I use conduct and implement quite often as you can see here's conduct down here again but these are some of the action verbs that I use throughout my resume I think they're good but probably I think it would be beneficial if I use some different ones now I highlighted again the education and work experience first on the second page these are other things that I would like people to know about me but maybe it comes towards the end it's it's not what I want people to see first I have some volunteer experience that I did in Coast Rikka as well as here are some workshops that I attended professional development I actually think probably this should come before my volunteer experience I could move that around because I think that's more relevant to any teaching position that I'm applying to languages also travel Mithu fine Who I am Who I am as a person so that is a quick sneak peek at my resume and again I'm this is a way of me networking a little bit because I'm sharing it with all of you so and sharing that but again even in looking through my resume there are things that I think I can go through and is this in the comments section let me know what's your dream job what dream job would you like to have if you could have any dream job in the world and you were going to fill out and complete a resume or CV for this job what what job would you guys like to have I just love to hear from you guys write that in the chat write that in the comments so as always thank you guys so so so much for watching I appreciate you being here with the Deepak long Bassam Sebastiano Kiara that daki thank you guys so much for joining me sorry if i mispronounce some names please as always like and share this lesson especially if you enjoy what we do here at interactive English and don't forget join whoops they're up here join these social media classes we're on Facebook Twitter Instagram we are posting stuff all the time to help you guys practice and improve your English skills thanks so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Useful Tongue Twisters to Help You Practice Pronunciation

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is wes this is interactive english and if this is your first time here please say hello to me in the chat tell me where you're from or even in the comments down below if you're watching this later write your name tell me where you're from i'm always i'm always interested to hear from new people and of course it's great to see some very familiar names and i'll get to those in just a second but i want to tell you what what we're going to do today and i want you to practice speaking that is the goal for this lesson i want you to practice speaking and you're really going to be working on your pronunciation and the way that we're going to do that is with some tongue twisters i have five tongue twisters that we're going to look at that we are going to practice together and i i think it should be well i think it should be fun interesting entertaining so the first well there is my uh title slide tongue twisters uh i want to begin by well i'll tell you what a tongue twister is and then we're going to start with some that i think maybe are a little easier and then we're going to move up to some of those that are more difficult but before we look at the first one of course i want to say hello to some of you who are here with me lolly always good to see you uh necklace cc yashar uh ten kritika nice to see you nyan uh mean boomi angela welcome uh mavia arturo as we go through these i'll try to uh get some more shout outs in there because again i want you guys to practice saying these out loud and then i want you to tell me what you what you think of them did you think it was easy or difficult because that's one thing about tongue twisters is that it some people may find some of them to be very easy and others will be very difficult and it's going to be different for for each person so let's begin talking about well what what is a tongue twister in case this happens to be your first time hearing of this phrase

i'm sure most of you are familiar with uh these statements and sentences because you probably have them in your native language as well so a tongue twister is it's a sentence or phrase it that is intended to be difficult to say especially when it's repeated quickly and often so the first few that we're going to look at are are very short and they're really phrases that are meant to be repeated again and again and again and i think with all of these tongue twisters it's it's good to try to say them quickly that's that's the goal that's the um that's the thing you want to do is to try to say them as fast as you can which is what also makes it very difficult because this this could also it's very difficult for me as well so i told you the the reason why i think this can be useful is well i i think if you are able to identify some difficult sounds because i think in any language there might be some sounds that are a bit challenging so if you can identify one or two of those sounds and then look up if you can find a tongue twister that has that sound and you're able to practice that that's what i would recommend doing to practice your pronunciation and then what you should do because i don't think you need to say tongue twisters every single day what i think would be very helpful is that if you find one that you want to work on maybe for a month or a couple of months write that down put that in your if you have a vocabulary notebook or a vocabulary folder write the tongue twister in there they're typically not very long and then whenever you go back to review old vocabulary words if it's maybe once every two weeks just practice saying that tongue twister or once a month practice saying that tongue twister and it's really just getting uh getting exercise for your mouth you're you're really working out your tongue so let's uh let's begin with the first one all right this one right here and this would be a good example of if i said if you can identify some sounds that are difficult in english if i've taught many learners before they have trouble with the r and the l the the r and the l so in in that case if this is you this would be a great tongue twister for you to practice on your own uh and you try to say this try to say it three times okay so i'll say it you can hear my terrible uh the terrible job that i do at saying these tongue twisters and then i want you to practice saying these out loud uh i want you to do this with me okay so this again it's rl um you see those uh you see those sounds um those letters appear quite often the r sound remember your tongue is in the middle it's kind of pulled back like you're smiling er and then the l the tip of your tongue is behind your tum your top front teeth so red lorry yellow lorry so i'm saying it a little slowly um red lorry yellow lorry all right and then i'm going to say it three times quickly and then i want you to say it three times quickly so i'll do um red lorry yellow lorry red lorry yellow lorry red lorry yellow laurie all right that's actually i think one of the better times that i've i've done this now so now i told you i want you guys to practice speaking in this lesson i want you to say this out out loud three times i'll give you uh maybe about six seconds i'm i'm just gonna wait while you say this ready go okay that little moment of silence i hope i hope that you were saying this tongue twister out loud uh what i want you to do is let me know how difficult you think this this tongue twister uh this tongue twister is for you so on a scale of one to five if you thought it was easy one would be the easiest and five would be the most difficult so think about for you did you think this was easy or difficult just get you can write a one to five so i know one would be the easiest five would be the most difficult all right so um hopefully uh you guys were able to do that oh hey

mon how are you good to see you i just say hello edgar marty welcome good uh nice to see you here uh excellent i i like everybody's like yes i'm done uh i was able to do that yashar says easy breezy all right excellent um neon was challenging so this is a good one for that rl pronunciation and you say it i i think the faster you say it and if you continue doing it um it might i'll try and see uh red lori yellow lorry red lorry yellow lorry red lorry yellow lorry you have red laurie yellow lloyd and it sounds like le lelo lori uh lello rory and you kind of just start mixing those up all right okay so wow i'm i'm uh janissa it was easy omid was a four okay a little challenging um okay necklace was not too easy okay so this is uh this is good a little bit of a mix i told you it's gonna be different for everyone let's look at the next one okay so stupid superstition so this can be challenging you have that st letter combination in each of those words stupid and then station and then you also have like the stu stupid and then it's switching to just the su sound stupid super okay and the reason why i chose this one if you don't know what a superstition is it's something that people might believe in where and there's no real evident there's no facts or scientific evidence to show that this is true so for example maybe i think um oh okay like uh i'm i'm a little nervous about the lesson every time before i do a live lesson i i kiss my pen for for good luck all right it's a superstition it's not true it's just an example and some people might say as a collocation well that's a silly superstition or people might say well that's just a stupid superstition so this is actually a phrase that i think people will use when talking about superstitions because some of them are very ridiculous and you might refer to them you might think that they are stupid so this is actually a pretty good phrase and it is also a tongue twister so let's practice uh saying this one saying it three times i'll say it three times and then i want you guys to say it ready and i'm gonna say it as quickly as i can all right stupid superstition stupid superstition stupid superstition okay all right now i want you guys to practice i'll give you five seconds are you ready go okay all right i hope i hope you were able to do this one easily and naturally and say this out loud that is my expectation for this lesson that you are speaking out loud right now i don't care where you are even if you're at home or on the bus just just start just use this opportunity to practice speaking so same question with this one let me know what you guys think was it easy or difficult for you give me one to five one being the easiest five being the most difficult what did you think of this one and i told you uh i told you at the beginning remember it's gonna get a little more challenging uh as we go through some of these so oh i want to say hi uh dorcas valerie excellent welcome good to see you um all right i love tongue twisters a lot of people saying they're not superstitious i am also i'm not very i'm not a really superstitious person either um but it's a good word to know uh lolly thought this one was hard okay all right uh takaya good to see you four alright so this one is a little more challenging um some of you maybe had an easier time with it again these are all they're going to be different for each one of us because i think some sounds are going to be more challenging depending on our native language uh muhammad said it was five uh who else uh ismail a two okay so this is a good phrase i think that you may hear somebody say if they're talking about a superstition they say oh that's just a stupid superstition or a silly superstition those i think would be some collocations with the word uh superstition all right are you ready let's let's get make it a little longer right now here's the next one this one is um it's a little more famous i think at least at least in the united states this is a tongue twister that i think is pretty well known that when i was a child um

i would you'd come across this tongue twister um and people might say it so this is one that i'm a little more familiar with so in this case we're practicing it's just that p sound that and i know some people might have trouble with uh minimal pairs like the p and the b sound the real the big difference is that the p is voiceless there's no vibration and the b the b is a voiced sound so this one is really just focusing on the p so let me i'll say this and then i want you to say it i'm going to say it as fast as i can um i'm going to time myself too because then i'm going to give you twice as long when you practice this okay so i got my stopwatch ready and you can listen to me say it and then i want you guys to say it ready seconds are you ready and go all right say it out loud 15 seconds as fast as you can you should be speaking right now okay a few more seconds and stop okay all right i hope uh i hope you were able to finish this uh tongue twister and same question again i kind of want to gauge which ones are a little more challenging for all of you one to five one being the easiest five being the most difficult how did what did you think about this one was this difficult for you or did you think this was easy one to five let me know uh well holly thank you yes i told you i've been practicing i've been working on this one uh boomi says it's too hard dorcas it's difficult all right now i got some uh lin now i get some fours and fives up there this is a little more challenging i think because it is longer you have um you got a lot of the that p in there a lot of a lot of alliteration okay so oh dark set is one all right valerie wow all right impressive so for me this one actually is a bit easier than some of the other ones i think in part because i have said this many different times i i'm very familiar with it so this for me would be a little bit easier now i'll say it one more time just in just uh just to show off a little bit so peter piper picked a peck of pickled peppers a peck of pickled peppers peter piper picked if peter piper picked a peck of pickled peppers where's the peck of pickled peppers peter piper picked all right and you just get that ppp sound coming out rapidly all right uh i hope that and again this is one that you could look up practice on your own uh if you think it is a little challenging and again this is a fun way to practice your pronunciation as well as again speak speak out loud many people tell me oh i have nobody to speak with well this is you can kind of speak out loud with yourself i hope you're speaking with me as we practice this right now one thing that i imagine some of you may be wondering you may be wondering what is the most difficult tongue twister out there i'm glad i'm glad that you asked that because if you were to look that up online i have a couple for you right here here is according to the guinness book of world records i i told you i think that it's really going to be something that's personal for you i know i have an easier time with some tongue twisters than other ones and then i know other people think i think it's difficult other people think oh that's easy i don't know how they came up with this um but this one i think it is i think it's pretty challenging so we'll practice this uh right now and we'll we'll see okay so let's see i don't know let me see uh uh oh voice is gone let me know if that the audio comes back let's see if i can look at this the second time in a row i've had some issues with the audio um audio seems to be should be okay all right somebody says it's back all right i apologize i'll have to uh look at what's going on maybe it's my internet connection something dropped let's just practice saying this one and this one is not these are words that you're not really going to use together it's really just because of the sounds all right audio's back excellent all right the sixth six wait sorry i already messed it up okay the sixth sick cheeks sixth sheep's sick all right i'll say it one more time the sixth the sixth sick sheik's sixth sheep's sick all right i'm having a tough time saying it slowly all right i would like right now let's have you i want you to practice this uh out loud say this slowly or quickly

it's up to you um depending on how much you want to challenge yourself so i'll give you a few seconds i want you to say this out loud right now okay i'm i'm trying to imagine like i'm listening to you say this out loud uh let me know what do you think again one to five one being the easiest five being the most difficult so mine's like no way i can't do it this one is very i i think it's very challenging that's i think sixth uh just in general that ordinal number uh that xth is a very challenging sound the sixth six sheik's sixth sheep's sick all right yashar said it's a three all right not two not too bad um uh ten critiques says it's difficult but it's not all right five takayo yes so i told you i think for for some of you um i'm a judge wow a one okay i'm impressed some of you maybe think some of these are easier and others are more difficult all right so this was according to the guinness book of world records but everybody has a different opinion and i there was a disagreement about the world's most difficult tongue twisters there we go now it should be working i apologize this was just a a silly mistake i added this to uh when i use obs for these live streaming and you have to add like a web browser you have to add the camera and i did this right before the lesson started and of course i forgot to add the microphone that is the reason why it's gone out there's actually there was nothing wrong with the settings i was just um a bit of an idiot okay so this you should be hearing me now what all i was doing while you guys were probably listening to me awkwardly speak silently to myself i was just reading this and talking about how they did this study at mit and they found this tongue twister right here to be the most difficult one for people to say so let's look at this tongue twister and practice saying it so according to mit researchers this right here is the most difficult tongue twister that many people had problems with pad kid poured curd pulled cod okay again this is a this is a sentence you're not really going to say this for any reason whatsoever it's just a tongue twister because the stat the sounds are are difficult to say it quickly and you're supposed to say it 10 times i'm not going to say it 10 times i'm just going to say it three times i'm going to try to say it three times and then i'll ask you guys to do the same so you can listen to me make a fool of myself right now as i try and say it three times quickly pat kid port kurt pull cod pat kid port curled pro paul pad had kid port kurt pulled cod okay i uh of course i stumbled there so i want you guys try to say it out loud i'll give you five six seconds uh say it as quickly as you can practice speaking ready go okay all right again let me know how you did what did you think of this one um one to five one being the easiest and five being the most difficult what did you think of this one so i wanted to show you guys both of these two right here that were at least deemed the most difficult tongue twisters in english um what did you think of this one lorena says the hardest ever uh gia says it doesn't seem that hard okay omen says it's the easiest one all right lynn not so hard he sees laughing i for me i would say this one was the hardest of all of these this uh the six six sheep six sheep sick this was the most difficult for me because it just it feels awkward trying to say these words together so uh again i think one thing that um one thing that tongue twisters i said at the very beginning it's different for each one of us uh even for all of you it seems like some of you think that some are very easy for you and others are difficult it's not the same for each of us but again this is a good way to practice and i think people when they think of pronunciation one thing people say ask me is like well how do i practice what is one way that i can practice my pronunciation this is an example using tongue twisters to practice speaking out loud if you can find a sound that maybe you think is difficult or even a sound that you're working on right now if it's the r and the l um i told you you can go back to this first tongue twister we talked about and actually practice your pronunciation it's not something you have to do every day it's not even something you have to do every week but maybe just practice it once a month or something just a different tongue twister really just to exercise your mouth that that's what uh that's what this is all about so uh one thing i want to say uh oh the voice is gone again maybe i'm gonna have to gonna have to keep checking what's what's happening with some of this i apologize at the issues with the the audio today two weeks in a row there have been uh the issues with the audio all right uh if you guys enjoy what we do here at interactive english want to show us some love saw some members uh and patrons today there you get a youtube membership patreon there are links down below in the description really helps uh helps keep this going uh really helps us what we do here at interactive english uh i want to just give some shout outs lolly uh great to see you me the most difficult is the r all right excellent so the i would suggest like that tongue twister i think there are a few more out there uh tongue twisters with the r that you're able to practice some of those i would just do you could do google searches for tongue twister uh r sound and you might find a few different ones that you could just practice saying so i really appreciate you guys being here with me today i appreciate even more that you were participating in today's lesson that you were actually practicing speaking out loud um and there you have it you were actually speaking english today even um and you were you were talking to me okay so thank you guys so much for joining me um boomi angela suhana lin tankertika anuga enuga sorry again if i mispronounce names nyan i hope you guys found this uh useful i will write some of these uh tongue twisters down in the description if you kind of want to review or if it makes it easier for you to uh look at them in the description so i will include those down below and again just yeah practice every now and then this is a great way to do it good to see you thank you uh takayo good to see you um fatima thank you esther mean uh was it gia yashar hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend i'm just gonna end it right there you guys did a great job today and i will see you

Useful Verbs to Talk about the SPRING

so spring is here it's my favorite time of the year so I wanted to teach you some very common and useful verbs that you can use to talk about the spring that's coming up everyone my name is Wes from interactive English videos calm and we are all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I I want to help you build your vocabulary as well as improve your grammar because I want to teach you some very common and useful verbs that you will hear and that you could also use if you are talking about the spring and you can use these verbs in a variety of different ways it's not always just to talk about the spring and and I will talk a little bit about that as we go through these verbs so when you think about the spring you probably think about flowers and plants so a very common and useful verb that you may hear is blossom to blossom and this is just talking about when flowers are produced that there are trees and the trees will begin to blossom the flowers appear it's very bright it's beautiful lovely colors and you could say they are they're starting to blossom and another verb that well I think of flowers in this case would be to sniff somebody might tell you that or they might ask you hey why don't you sniff these flowers they smell really nice and you can sniff the flowers this is another verb that I think you would often hear if you're talking about maybe perhaps an animal think about dogs they might sniff it's the they're taking that small short breath and they're trying to smell something and they would sniff if we're talking about plants you might use the verb sprout and if you have a seed and it starts to sprout its just talking about it is starting to grow and when you put in the ground and you start to see the plant you could then say yes the plants they're starting to sprout and then there is another phrasal verb that you could use and that is team with and you might be talking about an area that is teeming with flowers and in this case team with means it is it's full of something full of activity full of life and you could say that well the garden is teeming with flowers but you could also use this phrasal verb if you're trying to describe some area like the like a park and you can say well it's it's teeming with people it is full of something to team with when you think of spring you probably also think of growth so some verbs that we can use to talk about growth would be flourish and if you describe something as flourishing then you're saying that it is growing successfully you're saying that it's very healthy and it is starting to flourish so a garden could flourish you could also say that a business is flourishing and it's growing successfully to flourish then we have the verb to rejuvenate this means that it's ascribed something that is starting to to look better it is growing it is developing and it's starting to look better it's starting to look healthier and you could say that that it is rejuvenated and in this case I think of spring the trees start to blossom and the flowers come to life and ever everything around us just begins to rich it starts to look better and look healthier to rejuvenate and then we could also say breathe life into something and this is more of an expression but it's talking about you are you are bringing something back to life and it is growing it's developing it's healthier and in this case if something may be dying or it's struggling you could try to breathe life back into this thing to make it look better make it look healthier and you want to breathe life into something but in the spring you may also think about animals so some verbs that you might use with different animals the is like a merge you could say that animals start to emerge in spring and this just means that they start to become visible again for example you could say a bear might emerge from its cave it becomes visible again now if we're talking about specific animals or insects and the verbs you might use with them you could say that birds chirp you could also say that crickets chirp these would buzz and frogs would croak so those are some different verbs that you might use with specific animals or insects in spring eggs also start to crack a chicken's eggs will crack and didn't have those baby chickens and this is when you would hear the expression a spring chicken and a spring chicken is talking about just a young person and often you might hear it used in the context of somebody trying to say that they are not young anymore and they'd say I'm no spring chicken for example I can say yes I'm starting to get older I I am no spring chicken oh not anymore I'm not a young person and of course in spring there are many activities that people might do for example people might mow the grass and you would use that verb to mow people might also have have a barbecue and you could say they are having a barbecue or you could just use barbecue as a verb and you could tell verbs you may use for example to melt if you are changing from winter to spring and you live in an area where there might be a lot of snow then the snow will melt you could also use the verb shine to shine because I think spring there are more sunny days and in that case you would use you would use this verb more often to shine the sun is shining you could also say that the the temperatures it's starting to warm ah that is a useful phrasal verb to warm up is just talking about the weather becoming warmer and then if it's raining outside you could use verbs like drizzle this just means to rain lightly it is just it is drizzling outside or you could also say sprinkle that it is sprinkling and it is just a light rain so drizzle and sprinkle you could use them interchangeably it is just talking about light rain which you may encounter in spring so those are some very common and useful verbs that you may hear if somebody's talking about the spring or you could even use if you're having a conversation about the spring so in the comments let me know what is your favorite thing about spring let me know and maybe try to use some of these verbs just to get some practice if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time

Useful Vocabulary for Job Performance (Lesson Notes Included)

Hello and welcome to today's lesson. I have well it's a vocabulary lesson for you in which I want to teach you different words and phrases that you can use to talk about a person's job performance. So these are words and phrases that are related to work. These are words and phrases that you'll come across in the workplace. And this is a quiz lesson for you because I'd like you to participate. Write your answers in the chat in the quiz. And if you would like to download the lesson notes and join our email community, there's a link down in the description. And if you're already a part of our community, then uh check your email because I have already sent them to you.

So let's begin with some positive words. So I've I've positive adjectives. So I've broken this into different parts, positive, negative. So, I'm going ahead and giving you that information. So, the first one, uh, positive adjective that you could use to describe a person. This is a little bit of a fill in the blank. I've given you the meaning down there, and I just want you to tell me the word. What word is missing in this case? She's intelligent, hardworking, and for some of these, there may be synonyms that you think of. So, there there could be more than one answer. However, I'm I'm just going to focus on one word. And this word means having an agreeable or pleasing personality. And I think a key word in this is personality. Someone you can talk to. You get along with this person easily. They are very friendly.

What's a word that you could use to describe this person? And I think this is a good adjective that you could use to describe yourself. If you go in for a job interview, uh this is a good word to to know to talk about. So the word that I was thinking, it's one word. All right. Uh like I said, there's different ways that you could uh different words you could think of. Personable. So if you say that someone is personable, you're referring to their personality, the way they are, just a pleasing personality. It's a good person to be around. And like I said, this is a great word if you go in for a job interview and you talk about yourself, like different words to describe myself. I'm hardworking. I'm personable, which tells the the the others uh the employer that you can easily get along with others.

But like I said, I see some answers in there. Yeah, amiable, cheerful. Those could those could work as well. But maybe if this is a new word for you, then that's great. How about this one? He always does a m review of his work. We're talking about someone who is detailed and careful. And I think a key word in this is the word review because this is an adjective noun collocation. You may often hear people use these words together. He always does a m review of his work. when you're talking about the work that someone does on a paper, on a project or however that they they they're really careful, they really give a lot of details.

What do you think? And like I said, this is a collocation that I think you may hear. So meticulous is a good word. It's also means you pay close attention to detail. That's true. But yes, Jocelyn, that was the word that we're going for, a thorough review in this in this context. And once again, think about that collocation. Generally speaking, you might describe someone as meticulous. It's not often used with the word review. I think more more often people would talk about somebody doing a thorough review and a detailed review.

the next one because I have quite a few of these that I'd like to get through. How about this one? Her numbers are always right because she's very m I almost said the next part of the word. You see, you see that hyphen in there, and that's kind of a hint, but it's a word that means paying close attention to all of the small particulars when working on a task. And some of these meanings, I I had to change a few words because the answer was well, part of the word was in the meaning. So, think about it. What again? This is a word that has that hyphen in there. So, what do you think if somebody's paying small close attention to the small particulars? And I almost said it just then, which adjective would you use? And again, think of somebody who works a lot with numbers.

Of course, they this person would need to be very meticulous, very thorough. Yes. Excellent. Uh, Vina Iona. Uh, Alona. Yeah, I the the answer that I was going for was detailoriented. And really the the thing that I want you to think about is the second part of that word that oriented because this is you may hear somebody say that they're detail oriented. They pay close attention to the details. They are maybe somebody is resultoriented that they really focus on the outcome and less about how you get there. And somebody's resultoriented and that oriented is really referring to like okay this is the focus. What do you think? That's the focus. So the next one and again this is a little challenging to to hone in on the word that I'm talking about because like I said there are when it when it comes to talking about some of these adjectives there are many synonyms and other words that may also fit in there. Many of his colleagues admire his mapproach and the meaning of this word is you're you're trying to control the situation rather than just responding to it after it happened. So it's like you're you're addressing the situation like right away or even before you think something is going to happen and you're not just waiting around. This is a positive word. I think a lot of employers like people who you could describe with this word. Uh, excellent. Teao. Uh, yes. Um, Talal, I'm talking about the word proactive. So, if somebody's proactive, you're not just waiting around or sitting around to get orders or somebody to tell you what to do. you're just going ahead and doing it and you're responding and you could say that you're very proactive like you're very proactive when it comes to problem solving. Great word to know. The next one I think I and then we'll get into some negative negative words. She often has many m ideas and the meaning of this vocabulary word is using new and different methods. I think this is a word that many of you are familiar with. I don't know if the meaning is enough of a clue for you to to guess it, but you're talking about new different methods. And I I think this is an adjective that you you would often hear with the word ideas. And I would say to give you another hint, I feel like this is a word that's associated with technology as well. When talking about tech companies, new technology, people may think of this word. She often has many m ideas. So nice, the correct answer. Excellent.

Vicky Gustav, good to see you. Welcome, Jocelyn. Uh Aviva Olga. Yes, the the word that uh I was looking for innovative and it's very positive, new, different, innovative ideas, things that can really change and and help the business for the better. And once again, you may hear this word when people talk about technology because again, it's new, it's different. Then let's move into some negative words. I have some negative adjectives that I want to share with you because when when you talk about somebody's job performance, it's not always positive. You may be talking about one of your colleagues that maybe you don't feel like this person is doing a very good job. So these are all words that have a negative connotation.

During the during meetings, he is sometimes. So the meaning of this word is not giving attention to someone or something. I think this is a pretty common word and a word that gets used around the workplace because it happens. People may not pay that much attention or they're not really focused on what they should be doing and they're daydreaming. And you could say that somebody is what during meetings he is sometimes what do you think if somebody is not paying much attention you could say that they are I don't see the word so I'm going to go ahead and tell you guys yeah distracted sure maybe that might be a reason again this is a a word that would definitely be more negative in this case I would say somebody is inattentive. Inattentive. So you could take away the prefix and you could use this and says that somebody is very attentive. But I I think more often people are going to use this uh in the negative and say that somebody is just really inattentive and you can't trust this person to get things done and focus on the work they should be doing. So again, my goal with all of this is that hopefully you take away one or two or three new words from each of these lessons. Then we have this sentence right here. She's m and does not think things over before acting. What would you say? For those of you who are currently in my speaking course, this is a word that we talked about a couple of weeks ago. you're likely to do something suddenly without considering the results of your actions. There I think there are two words that you may think of. One of them is commonly used and I'm actually going for the other one, but we're talking about somebody who just does something suddenly and they don't really consider the results of their actions.

So the the two words I'm talking about are of course synonyms. And I will tell you it's not the word impulsive. But again, this would fit that description. Somebody who's impulsive. What's a synonym for impulsive? I actually think that this has more of a negative connotation than than saying somebody is impulsive. more generally you're you're always going to use this more in a negative way. So the word the synonym for impulsive that I'm talking about is the word impetuous. So if somebody's impetuous, they're acting they're not thinking about what the results are. And you're you're acting when you should probably think carefully about this. And the reason why I say it's more negative than a word like impulsive is because I think impulsive you can use in a variety of different ways. You could say somebody is an impulsive shopper. You're not really going to say someone is an impetuous shopper.

That's not that common. So typically again if you're saying somebody is impetuous I think often you may be talking about in the decisions that they're trying to make and they make an impetuous decision. word impulsive. Then we have the next one. Are you ready? And this one is a word that it's probably a little more difficult. He was criticized for his mandling of the situation. Not skilled or effective. That's the meaning. And I know it's not really giving you a whole lot because there are a variety of words in which you could say, you know, that mean like not effective. But again, there's one word that I want to talk about. It has this meaning and is another, I would say, more advanced word that you could use if you're talking about the way somebody's work ethic or the way they conduct their job and you're talking about their job performance. some situation and the oh this was like the their mandling of the situation. I would say that uh poor is a good word because this is that's a common collocation the poor handling of a situation. That's very common. That's not the word that I'm thinking about or that uh I'm I'm giving you. Poor is a very common word. It's used with many collocations, but that is a that's a good guess. So the the adjective the and again there are others that you could throw in here but the one that I'm thinking of again if it's new for you that's great inept. So if you talk about someone's inept handling of a situation which I think is another collocation probably not as commonly used as poor handling but it just means not skilled not effective. So, if you describe somebody and talking about their ability as inept, that yeah, they're just not very skilled or competent. Uh, incompetent, I'd say, is another word that you could use that would mean like the same thing. That's also good. Excellent. How about uh this one? This this is actually I think for many of you, I'll go ahead and tell you I think this is probably going to be a new word, which again, it's good. I think uh it's always good to try to learn a new word or two, build your vocabulary. Sometimes she's difficult to work with because she's a little I know the sentence doesn't give you much context. the meaning behaving in a slightly unfriendly and too formal way. And you could talk about this when referring to somebody's personality and like like they're a little cold.

Cold. They're not friendly. It's basically the opposite of personable. What's an adjective that you could use? And again, I think that this may be a new word for many of you, but it's a good word to describe someone specifically who is acting this way. They're unfriendly and and maybe it's just yeah, a little too formal, which is why I think it's a good word when talking about work or somebody's job performance. And yes, uh, excellent, Joselyn. Um, New Yen, excellent. Perfect. Uh, Julia, the word that I was thinking of, uh, standoffish. If somebody is standoffish, you could say that they're unfriendly. They're not easy. This person's not going to open up to you. Like I said, it's pretty much the opposite of someone who is personable.

All right, so let's do another one. During the interview, we discovered that he was m when talking about his prior work experience. What word could you use that means that a person is slightly dishonest? They're not speaking the complete truth. And this happens, I think, during a job interview. We like to embellish our our skills and abilities, but you don't want to to lie completely about your experience. So, in this situation, you discovered that someone was they were being what? And it refers to them being slightly dishonest that you're they're not giving the entire truth. This is another word that I probably would use to describe like a a salesman, perhaps a used car salesman. You can't really trust them. I I think generally they may be dishonest because they just want to sell you the car and you could say somebody is m.

So the word that I'm looking for, the adjective disingenuous. So if someone is disingenuous, it means that this person is not being really honest and they probably lied. And you can't really trust this person if you're saying someone is disingenuous. It's a synonym. I saw the word insincere. That's another word that you could use to fill in the blank with this sentence. And they are a synonym. Somebody's disingenuous. They're insincere. You can't really trust them. they may not be telling the whole truth. Okay, now let's switch it a little bit and talk about some positive phrases. And these are all collocations. These are words that are frequently used together when talking about someone's job performance. So the first one, she regularly regularly m the and does things before anyone has to ask.

So we're talking about someone who is to they're they're the first one to do something, especially to solve a problem. And I think this is a phrase that you would often hear at work. Somebody's talking about their an employee in a positive way and say this person regularly the so that bolded part the 'the' is part of the collocation. So you have a verb noun collocation. If somebody is the first to do something you're talking about solving a problem. Nobody has to ask. In this case, a word that would describe uh this person as well, an adjective would be someone who's proactive. All right, see some good answers. Nice. Uh Aviva, Joselyn, Kevin, well done.

Takes the initiative. So, this is a positive phrase if you want to talk about the way someone's performing their job and they go ahead and do something and they're willing to take the initiative. And that's a a great way to describe someone. Then this is this is more of an idiom. He's the type of person who will go the and maybe I've given you a little too much with go the which is part of it. And the meaning is you're making more effort than is expected of you. What would you say? And like I said, this is an idiom that you are pretty much always going to use when talking about like pretty much work.

It means to think about something carefully. And you're really just trying to avoid any sloppy mistakes. And I was about to I was about to mention something that probably would have given it away and I don't want to to to do that right now. So, she's really careful and close m to and this is probably somebody who is working with numbers. Uh, somebody who needs to or should be meticulous. And I was going to bring it back and say detailoriented, but detail is a part of this phrase. And I think many of you got it. Excellent to Joselyn, Kevin. someone who pays close attention to detail and they're really thinking carefully about what the work they're doing and they really avoid those sloppy mistakes to pay close attention to detail. So pay attention is a common collocation and you pay close attention to detail very common phrase.

Here's the next one. He there's two words that are missing right there m in completing work projects on time. So we're talking about someone who is has a feeling of satisfaction which you have because you you've done something well. What phrase completes that? And I know it's a little more challenging. I'm not giving you much uh with just providing the word in there but once again I think this is a phrase you've probably you you have heard of and once I tell you you'll be like oh yes so when somebody has just real satisfaction for the work that they've done and they can m in my work or in this case in completing work projects on time.

So close. I would say instead of takes pleasure in that's close. Uh again, this is a a positive phrase. Um I don't want to say brag. Brag has more of a negative connotation, but I'm talking about someone who yes, takes pride in completing work projects on time. you if you take pride in something, this is a phrase you're going to follow with that preposition in and you really just feel proud of whatever work that you're doing. You take pride in doing something and you would follow that with a gerand like you see in that sentence. Take pride in completing. All right, the next one. This is I think a little more informal which is also relevant to work. I know at least in the United States, which is where I'm from, work is can be a fairly casual environment. She's willing to do any task and is always ready to

for the M. That's a phrase and for the is a part of it. So the meaning is you're making a personal sacrifice for the collective benefit of your colleagues. because we're talking about in relation this in relation to work. But you could use this in situations that are not related to work or your job, but really trying for to make a sacrifice for the collective benefit of your friends or family. But if we're talking about your colleagues and somebody, you know, nobody wants to do this thing, maybe this project, nobody wants to work on it, but the the company needs someone to do it. And then you are going to make a personal sacrifice. And you could say you're going to for the M.

Well done. Nice Jocelyn. Uh Ellis to take one for the team. So if you take one for the team, it's a personal sacrifice. Again, it's a little more informal, but it depends on the situation. It is definitely a phrase that that you could use. If somebody is making this sacrifice and they say, "All right, yes, I'm gonna take one for the team. I'll do it. I'll take one for the team." The next one, uh, well, okay, let's move into some negative phrases. So, those were all positive collocations when talking about job performance. Let's look about Let's look at some negative ones. All right, here's the first one. the company had to let him go because he wasn't m his once again I'm not giving you much of the phrase this is another idiom this is an idiom that I believe I've talked about in uh a video lesson before and what it means is that you're you know to do things that you should be doing as part of a group of people who are working together often I think people are going to use this in the neg negative to say someone is not doing the things they should be doing. They're not helping out. They're not getting their work done on time, the the responsibilities that they've been tasked to do. And you could say someone is not. [Music] So the answer or the idiom that I was going for again and this is commonly used when talking about work especially when talking about people who are working together on a team pulling his weight.

If someone is not pulling their weight, they're not doing the like what they are expected to do. And in that case, generally someone else may need to to step up and do the work and go the extra mile. So once again, this idiom often used when talking about work. And in this case, if somebody has something negative to say about their job performance and yeah, this person's just not pulling their weight. How about this one? I think this one's a little easier because I've given you very most of the phrase. She certainly has a m of commitment to her work to not have a strong interest in your work or desire to succeed. What word completes that phrase? It's a common collocation.

And the the the the word that's missing is the one that I really wanted to highlight because I feel like this is a word once again that's common when talking about work job performance and this is a phrase that uh you may hear and yes you guys got it. Excellent. Emeraldal Olga FCO. Perfect. We're talking about someone who has a lack of commitment. And anytime you want to say there's a lack of something, there's just not not enough. All right? There's no there's no strength in doing this. So, it's not a good thing if your employer or supervisor, manager or boss says that you have the a lack of this, a lack of commitment. So, lack is a good word to know.

expectation is that they should be there and they're a no-show. But you could use this noun outside of the work environment in talking about a friend or family member who just never shows up. Oh, I think they're they're a no-show. The next one, which is a common phrase, it seems that she is often three missing words. And that picture, it's a little bit of a hint. The meaning is to do something or happen later than planned or expected. What would you say that? And and I feel like I use this phrase quite often when talking about my work or the things that I hope to accomplish uh throughout the day.

Certain things like, okay, I want to do this and then I'm going to do this. Oh, no. I'm I'm not going to complete it. I'm those three words. This is the phrase that I would use to talk about this. And I told you that you could use that picture as a little bit of a hint. It seems that she is often what do you think a negative phrase to talk about this situation? So the the key word when I said you could use the picture running is the first word of this phrase because you see this uh woman right there, she seems to be running down the street. And if you again things are happening later than planned or expected, then you would say that you're running behind schedule.

And this is kind of a a fixed phrase. So you're not going to uh you know, you wouldn't you wouldn't say behind her schedule. I see that like you would just say that I'm running behind schedule or he's running behind schedule. She's running behind schedule. Let's not try to run behind schedule. And you would use these three words together to talk about again let that you don't want things to happen later. But like I said, I think we can all identify with this phrase. There are certain things that we want to get do done work or otherwise and we may be running behind schedule. Great job. Uh Alamo ad Rafella, nice Dimmitri. So I I think maybe it's a common phrase. So, I feel like you you may have uh that one might have been a little easier. How about this one? He just can't.

Again, three missing words. It's a very common phrase. When I show it to you, I'm sure you'll be like, "Oh, yes, of course. I knew that phrase." But it means to manage, deal with, or control the demands and stress of a circumstance. And this is one in which I did change one of the words circumstance because it would have just given it away. So I use the synonym circumstance instead of the other word because I didn't want to make it too easy. But somebody who is unable to manage, deal with or control the demands and stress of well maybe a variety of different circumstances. say he just can't what?

So, it's a little challenging, I know, because I'm not giving you much of the phrase, but once again, I feel like you you've heard this before. Handle pressure situations. So, again, in the meaning it said or control the demands and stress of a situation, but I think that would have made it too easy. But if you say that someone can't handle pressure situations, that that's what it means. And you could turn this into a positive and saying and talk about somebody's job performance and saying, "Wow, they're really great at handling pressure situations." So, it it could go either way. All right. So, here is a review of all of the words and phrases from today's lesson. And like I said, if you want to get these lesson notes, click on the link down below in the description, join our email community, or if you're already a part of it, I am just going to go ahead and send them to you. So, we talked about 20 different vocabulary words or phrases, some positive adjectives, negative adjectives, as well as some positive phrases and negative phrases. all of them that you could use to talk about someone's job performance. I hope that you learned something new. If you did, I would really appreciate it if you go ahead and hit that like button. I'm sure some of some of you were already very proactive, very proactive, and you went ahead and did that because I think it's great that you guys take the initiative. And I'm sure you're going to continue to build your vocabulary because I know a lot of you are willing to go the extra mile when it comes to learning new words and phrases.

And I'm trying to be honest when I say that. I don't want to be disingenuous because I think it is very important. And I'm going to do my part. I'm going to try to pull my weight and come up with new lessons each week. Many of them vocabulary and just, you know, I'll I'll never be a no-show. And I try to make these lessons very thorough. And I just keep using some of these just to give you a little review in using them in context. So, I hope that you all have a wonderful day. And I

Useful Vocabulary for Social Media (Facebook, Instagram, & Twitter)

if you use social media I want to teach you some very useful words to know hey everyone my name is Wes from interactive English videos dot-com and the channel it's all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and we are also on different social media platforms like Facebook Twitter and Instagram so hopefully hopefully you can find us there and the reason why I'm telling you that is because today's lesson is all about helping you build your vocabulary because I want to teach you some useful words that are all related to social media so let's begin with our first word which is engagement now some of you may be thinking like we'll wait engagement that is talking about a promise to marry someone which is true that is that is also an engagement but if we're talking about social media it refers to any interaction that you have with the platform so anytime you like something or dislike something or you write a comment or you share something that is considered engagement then we have the word meme and the reason why I want to teach you this is because it's very popular on social media and what it refers to is an image or it could be a video that is typically humorous and it is shared widely on social media and there are all there are all different types of memes out there for example there you may see different cat memes cats are always those are always great memes you can find memes that relate to popular TV shows or movies such as Game of Thrones because you know who does not love finding the perfect avocado or of course there are memes that that involve babies because babies are are just very cute and it's just hilarious if they really thought these things so there are many different types of memes that are out there but if you you see this picture with some kind of witty or humorous comment then you know that that is a meme then we have the word follower this is a noun because it's talking about a person who is tracking or or following some other person group or maybe some organization on social media and you would say that that this person is a follower and I think if people are on social media sometimes they they want to get many different followers and you could also use it as a verb to follow someone in which case you are are connecting with that person group or organization to follow now if you are following someone and then you decide to stop then that brings me to my next word which is to unfollow now this is a verb which means that you are no longer tracking or following a certain person group or organization you're not following them on social media anymore and you unfollow this person so again that is a verb and for some reason it's not used as a noun there is not a person who you call an unfollow er alright that does not exist so keep that in mind you can talk about a person who is a follower and they follow others or if you want to stop then you could unfollow that person to unfollow someone is also over but there's no unfollow er next is a very common word which is feed so if somebody is talking about the feed it's it's it refers to the page that updates regularly and it's showing you the latest information that that's on this platform and typically when you go on to Facebook or Instagram that's that's pretty much where you begin you start at the feed and people would use this word and talk about maybe they were scrolling through the feed and they were looking at different pictures or comments or somebody could say something like oh something just popped up on my feed and I thought it was very interesting so if somebody's talking about the feed they're they're referring to that that page that updates regularly and it shows them the latest information then we have the word hashtag which is basically just this symbol right here and people use the hashtag with another word or you could use it with a phrase but there are no spaces and it's used to describes just some topic some general topic that if people want to search for information about this topic they can use a hashtag plus the name of the topic and then hopefully they'll find out the latest information that involves this topic that is how people would use hashtags so down below you can see that I've included some hashtags in this video hashtag interactive English hashtag vocabulary hashtag perfect avocado because again who doesn't love the perfect avocado then we have the word fishing and this is a very important word because it is a terrible thing so notice the spelling this is different from fishing with an F in which you're trying to catch fish however the meaning is a little similar because fishing pH you're trying to catch people you're trying to catch them in some some scam in which you pretend to be another person or perhaps you pretend to be from some business and you're trying to get information from others you're trying to get their passwords perhaps some secret information because they want to steal from you and that's what we call phishing mostly I think people may be familiar with this word when talking about emails because you receive some email that is basically a scam and they're trying to get you to give them some personal information but this is happening more and more on social media for example somebody may say something and Oh congrats you're a winner and they want you to click on some link or maybe they write something in a comment and say that somebody has posted some crazy photo of you and they include a link and they want you to click on it and that's how it all starts and they try to scam you get your personal information phishing next is the word cyber bully so this is a word that I think is becoming more more common and again it's not a good thing because it means that you are using the internet specifically social media in order to send hateful or harmful messages to others and you're basically you may be threatening other people and you call that person a cyber bully so instead of just when most people think of a bully they think of a bully at school this is a bully on the Internet a cyber bully then we have the word handle so this is talking about the name that someone is known by on social media that that is their handle so for example here are here's our social media right here when we started using these platforms the name interactive English was not available so we had to choose a different name which his interactive engg we had to shorten English so this is our handle our handle is interactive in now if you did a search for interactive English on on Facebook or Twitter or Instagram you are likely going to find us but because the the interactive English was not available we had to use a different handle so a handle that is just the name that somebody goes by then we have the word campaign which is a planned activity to achieve a particular goal or some aim and it's basically like a marketing campaign but it's become very popular on social media and people might talk about some Facebook campaign to raise money for a cause or perhaps some some campaign on Twitter that involve social justice so there are so many different activities out there there are so many different campaigns out there that might try to raise money or awareness and it happens all the time on social media so this is a very common word that you may see nowadays next I have an acronym for you which is DM and that just stands for direct message and that's talking about a private message that is sent on social media because somebody might tell their audience their followers to a DM a direct message a private message

I the I guess people people have sent us DM I'm guilty I don't really end up checking them I apologize if you have sent me a DM and I have not responded but that's why on social media we we really haven't been using DMS that much so I hope the next time you are looking through your feed you come across some of these words and you understand them because you watch this lesson if you enjoy this lesson engagement it's a really it's a great thing please hit that like button always love to get some engagement and as always thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time

Useful Vocabulary to Talk About Sounds | ONOMATOPOEIA

today's lesson is really just about one word and that is onomatopoeia [Music] hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel that is just all about trying to help you practice and improve your english and achieve your fluency goals and over the years i have done so many different lessons but i have never done a lesson like today talking about onomatopoeia now this is a word it's a fun word that you're you're not going to use this word in everyday conversation but you may use onomatopoeia so the meaning of this word is what's important what it's talking about is that you can use onomatopoeia and use a word to represent a sound so for example if you're telling a story and instead of you trying to imitate the sound the sound that that you heard and you're trying to explain it to someone else you may use this word instead and that word is what imitates the sound so sometimes these words are used as nouns and other times they may be used as verbs but they they're often related to something specific not always because you can use these words in a variety of ways and i will explain this as we go through the lesson i think the first one is a good example so the first word that i want to teach you is splash splash is really related to water it's talking about the sound of water if somebody says they heard a splash then i think well maybe something was falling into the pool or the lake people could also use this as a verb if they're playing in the pool and they're splashing each other so this is a good example of a word that is certainly a little more specific if you want to talk about the sound of water i think quite often you're going to use splash did you hear a splash you want to see a splash i'm going to show you a slap boom all right so boom is a word that you would use if you want to talk about a loud sound and often i think people may use that collocation and they talk about a loud boom i tend to think about perhaps an explosion oh my god what was that and then we try to get up powerbomb if i hear somebody say well there last night we just heard this loud boom i i might think there was some type of explosion a loud boom or you could use it to describe somebody's voice and say a person has a booming voice a very loud voice so what did this giant sound like huh i mean do you have a big booming voice or more informally people could use it to kind of say they're just they're they're trying to blow someone's mind they they tell them something that's shocking surprising and they just may say boom you got a script that's well written about the greatest fire in oregon history for 90 pages and you never see it live inside that fire for 50 pages boom hold on beep this is a sound that i think if somebody's using this word they're going to use it again and again they may say beep beep beep because what i think about if you're going to use beep i think about an alarm clock [Music] when you wake up in the morning the an alarm clock might make that sound that beep beep beep it's an annoying sound at least i think so uh because i don't like to get up then people may also use this when talking about uh perhaps a car horn if there's a traffic jam people are hitting that horn don't you remember me used to yell at me for uh beeping my car horn when i came over to pick up john they may use beep to describe that sound that just constant that beep beep beep but i think when people use this word if you're telling a story there's a good chance you're going to use it more than once it's going to be repetitive and earthlings i have some news [Laughter]

my bull crap meter is going crazy yeah it can be uh quite annoying crack all right this is the sound of something breaking that was a loud crack and you could be talking about a stick if you break a stick you'd hear that crack sound but even what i would tell you to think of would be think of an egg to crack an egg and you you hit it against the side of something you hear that crack and the egg breaks take an egg correct the wrist hmm thank you weep you watch one two three if you're saying that uh you're telling a story and that you hear something crack you're talking about uh something that's breaking this looks good what are you doing come on crack not gonna crack then we have pop a popping sound i think is to me it's more of like a sudden and loud sound think of popcorn all right if you are making popcorn you're preparing it if you're listening that's the sound that the popcorn makes that pop pop pop pop you could also use pop to describe things like perhaps fireworks or even gunfire if somebody is telling a story and they were really scared because the night before they just heard this pop pop pop and they thought it was gunfire so it's really talking about a sudden loud maybe even a little bit of a shocking sound that pop pop pop what was that pop sound well i had some hard candy in there but whatever momentum the president had coming out of iowa just like air going out of a pop balloon i don't remember seeing crows around here before big bastard that's why i got the gun i'm going to pop a few of them all right this is probably my favorite one uh that i'm going to teach you today yoink is talking about the sound of somebody grabbing something now this is a word that's not really used as a verb i think people will say this when they are actually doing that action you grab something from another person and you may just say yoink and i tend to use it probably a little more playfully when you're just having fun and you take something from another person i have the glasses yoink take those click this is a very very common word it's common sound and i think it really refers to somebody pressing a button and i think a long time ago uh the old cameras they you'd take a picture and click you'd hear that sound you just wasted your time and mine click i just captured the exact moment when you realized you had failed today i think people often associate this word with the computer you're you're clicking on a link and even when you're using the mouse you you press down and it makes that sound that click click the mouse with me three click zoom so this is a word that that's talking about a sound of well something that's going fast something that's moving fast maybe a car and you might hear somebody say that the cars were zooming by they were going fast or if you're telling a story and the you're talking about a plane overhead and it just zoomed right by [Music] and this word is talking about the sound of air and specifically i think people would use it if they're expressing shock or surprise like that is a gasp that is the sound gasp let's do a makeover i need you to arrange a meeting without ryan and pam knowing gasp are you talking about a secret meeting think if i was an escaped murderer where would i hide where oh i have no idea i just thought if i gasped i could force an epiphany slap so this is a word that you may have heard before but you can use it to describe the sound of two things hitting each other i think most of the time people might think of like like a hand like that that is a slapping sound and people may think about well somebody getting slapped in the face and you would hear that sound that uh well i don't want to hurt myself but ow yeah that you can hear that sound i don't okay i'm gonna stop slap slap boom what's wrong boom oh it's just this thing we used to do to get each other pumped up where we slap each other in the face you don't have to do it i want to go first with this make me slap him you call that a slap no booth so the next time you're telling a story instead of just talking about the things that you see use these words to talk about the things that you hear the sounds that you hear you can use on a monopia if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button or click that like button down below love to hear that sound as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time

Useful Vocabulary to Understand the US Election | Trump vs Biden 2020

let's talk about the u.s election so buckle up it's going to be a bumpy ride [Music] hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel that's all about trying to help you practice and improve your english and today it's more of a vocabulary lesson because if you haven't heard there is a presidential election coming up in the united states so i wanted to take this opportunity to talk to you about well how the election works and teach you some different words and phrases that i think are very useful that will help you better understand the election in case you happen to be reading about it or maybe you're listening to a news report this is useful vocabulary that will help so i want to start out by saying that i'm going to try to make this lesson apolitical which is a great word that means that it is not connected to a political party i i'm not really trying to promote one party over the other i'm going to try to make it a political but it is difficult to discuss politics without kind of sharing your opinion in one way or another i will say in my opinion because i want to talk to you quite a bit about how the election works i really don't like the way that the system works and i will explain why in just a moment so let's just begin with the basics in the united states it's really considered a two-party system and that is a phrase that you may hear a two-party system what it refers to is that two political parties really just dominate politics and on one side you have the republican party which is trump's party and they're viewed as more conservative and then on the other side you have the democrats which are viewed as more liberal and that party's leader is joe biden and if you are not affiliated or registered with one of these main parties then you are considered an independent and an independent is talking about a voter who is not registered with a political party and the i to be honest i am an independent i am not registered as a democrat as a republican i'm an independent and you will hear this word a lot because both biden and trump they want to get the vote of the independence and typically independents tend to have more moderate views and this is another common word because moderate refers to views that are not extreme and are often accepted by a larger number of people now you may be wondering why would anyone register to be identified with a particular political party well that's because in some states you need to be registered with that party in order to participate in the party's primary and the primary is just when the voters choose who is going to be the candidate for that party who is going to be the the party's leader essentially and the primary it's already done it's finished and you have trump who is the representative for the republicans and biden is the representative for the democrats but to put things in context for you most americans are not registered as either a democrat or a republican among registered voters 41 percent are independent 26 percent are republican and 31 percent are democrat but no matter if you're a democrat republican or independent very soon the election is coming and people will go vote or cast their ballot this is a phrase that it means the same thing as to vote so when the election gets here you're probably going to hear people talk about a couple of different numbers you're going to hear people talk about the popular vote and this refers to the total number of votes that a candidate receives and somebody somebody will win the popular vote however that person may not become the president i know it sounds strange that somebody could receive the most votes but they don't win what determines the next president is actually the electoral college vote so the electoral college is a phrase that you should definitely learn because it is something that you will hear people talk about so right now i want to take a moment and and teach you about the electoral college and this is really this is really the main reason why i said i'm not really a fan of the way that the voting system works so what the hell is the electoral college well in the entire country there are 538 electors or 538 electoral votes and in order to win the presidency a candidate must receive the majority which is 270. so that's the magic number both both trump and biden need to get to 270 or more electoral votes in order to become president now each state is assigned a number of electors or electoral votes and that is based on the population of the state so for example california is the state with the highest population and california has 55 electoral votes the next state would be texas texas is the second most populous state and they have 38 electoral votes and then you have a state like montana montana is a big state uh in terms of land but it has a small population so montana has three electoral votes so i know this is a little strange but just stay with me because the electoral college has been with the country since the beginning the u.s was founded in 1776 and it's it's pretty much always used the electoral college what has changed is the way in which we use the electoral college because right now 48 states have a winner take all and what that means is that whoever wins the popular vote in the state they get all of the electoral college votes it doesn't matter how close the race is so if somebody wins 51 to 49 that's a very close race but the person who got 51 percent is going to get 100 of those electoral votes and i know you're probably thinking to yourself well that's just silly that doesn't make much sense at all how did this happen well we've been using the electoral college system for a while but it really changed in 1824 this is the year that most states started using this winner take all approach and the reason that they were doing this was completely partisan and partisan is another very common word that you will hear it means that somebody strongly supports uh an idea or a party and they don't really carefully consider well what's what's best for everyone now there are groups across the country that want to change this they want to amend the process and amend is a great verb when talking about politics it means you want to change something critics of the electoral college would say that at the federal level when voting for the president depending on the state you live in your vote really just has no influence whatsoever so for example let's let's look at california california is a blue state and this is a phrase that if you hear about a blue state it is a state that is really it's controlled by the democrats so california is a blue state it has 55 electoral votes which will they'll go to joe biden now if you are a republican who's living in california then really your vote just has no influence and the same goes for democrats who may live in texas texas is a red state and that is a state that is just controlled by republicans so democrats voting in texas well you know it's not going to have much of an influence however democrats they're fighting hard in texas and they're trying to make it a purple state and a purple state is talking about well a state that has more of a mix of democrats and republicans and you don't know how the vote is going to go so you have blue states red states and purple states because if you mix blue and red you get more of a purple color regardless in our current situation i don't think biden or trump are that interested in the blue states and the red states because that's already been decided what i think they are truly interested in are those purple states which are more commonly referred to as swing states these are states that well they could go for biden and the democrats or they could go for trump and the republicans they may also be referred to as battleground states either one you're going to hear people use these quite often swing states or battleground states and across the country there well there are about 14 different swing states but i i think really there are only about seven or eight true swing states because some of these states will lean left which means they are more likely to go for biden and the democrats and the other states may lean right which means they're more likely to go for trump and the republicans in the swing states those are the ones that everyone is going to be keeping an eye on come election day really the only reason why biden or trump may go to a blue state or a red state is to fundraise for their campaign and when you fundraise you are just raising money for a campaign which is a it's an organized group of people that are trying to well trying to get someone elected and in the united states campaigns cost a lot of money do you have any idea how much the 2016 presidential campaign cost i'm going to tell you when everything was all said and done the two campaigns combined spent over one billion dollars some of that money that billion dollars came from pacs or super pacs and those are two useful acronyms so a pac it just stands for a political action committee and a super pac is just a super political action committee it's an organization that can raise money privately in order to influence an election which is a fancy way of saying that well the election is for sale well kind of

because the more you donate the more influence you have and there are limits as to how much a person can donate to a campaign but those same limits don't exist when a person or company wants to donate to a pack or a super pac and that's partly why presidential elections are so expensive let's go back to that billion dollars which is ridiculous it's almost it's like buying every person in the united states a cup of coffee and to be completely honest i think i would rather have a cup of coffee than just listen to a bunch of political advertisements because i think it is our civic duty which is a phrase that means it is it is our responsibility as a citizen to try to become informed about well what do these candidates stand for and and there are many ways that we can learn about candidates we can read about them we can watch them give interviews and talk about what they want to do and the changes they want to make we could also talk to our friends and family but that can be a little dangerous because to be perfectly honest civil discourse in the united states it's a bit toxic and civil discourse refers to polite conversation concerning ordinary citizens and and yes right now civil discourse in the united states it's at a bit of a low but still very soon everyone's gonna head to the polls and they're gonna cast their ballot and head to the polls that is a phrase that means their people are gonna go to a voting location and they're going to vote but because there is a pandemic there's going to be more absentee voting as well as mail-in voting and if you've been following the u.s election at all those are phrases that i'm pretty sure you've heard first you need to keep in mind that each state determines on its own how it's going to do voting so an absentee ballot this is when a person requests a ballot and election officials will send it to them and then they they mail it back uh and people do this because maybe well they're out of the country or perhaps somebody is just outside of the state that they live in and therefore they request an absentee ballot now other states when they say mail-in voting what they refer to that as is they send out ballots to all registered voters and then those voters they can either mail the ballot back or they can head to the polls and they can cast their ballot in person the reason why i'm talking to you about this is because well some people are claiming that the election will be rigged and this is an adjective that means that something is dishonestly arranged in order to get your desired outcome proponents would say that that this person just wants to maintain the election's integrity critics would say that this person is engaging in voter suppression and that is another phrase that that you may come across voter suppression is when you just do not allow people to vote what i would say and and this is not my opinion i want to stick with the facts is that there is absolutely no evidence of widespread voter fraud through the mail so people should not be worried about voting by mail all this does is just create a lot of drama because well i think it's fair to say that politics in the united states has become a little like reality tv and i think as we we approach the season finale november 3rd i think you can expect a lot of suspense because typically in a normal boring election which are the elections that i prefer one person will concede the election and to concede is to admit something is true someone will concede and they admit that okay i lost the election and then they congratulate the winner something tells me that this election might be a little different spoiler alert it would not surprise me if this election is contested and what that means if an election is contested it means that the validity of the results is challenged by the losing candidate so after november 3rd i i think it's likely that we may not know who the winner is it could take days weeks i sure as hell hope not it could take a while to figure out who the next president of the united states will be i know many of you may not be from the united states but i want to hear from you i want you to cast your ballot in the comments below who would you vote for biden or trump let me know down below in the comments all i would ask is

please please please let's keep it civil but let me know who you would vote for i will even tell you who i am going to vote for in the comments below i i will get things started thank you guys so much for watching i hope you enjoy the dramatic upcoming election and i will see you next time this is the pool there's water in the pool so i'm going to teach you some useful phrases to get your feet wet or you could say to to dip your toes in the water they both mean the same thing it just means to to try something to attempt an activity and and just yeah you're just giving it a try you just want to get your feet wet or dip your toes in the water to dive in head first so this just means that you are going to be just really committed to doing something you're going to start immediately and you're going to dive in head first so maybe there's a big project coming up yes let's just let's just do it we're going to start it we're going to dive in head first to keep your head above water this is just to survive a dangerous situation and it's a bit dangerous you just you need to keep your head above water because if you don't well then it's

LESSON 693 OF 749

Useful Weather Idioms to Build Your Vocabulary

Let's talk about the weather. Now this of course is a very common topic. We often talk about the weather. But what I want to teach you today is vocabulary idioms that are related to the weather because they have a word that has to do with the weather in the idiom. Now, that does not mean that the meaning of these idioms and the way that you would use it has to do anything with the weather. But as far as learning idioms, because they can be a little tricky sometimes. I think it does help to associate it with something. In this case, these phrases are associated with the weather and that can help you give you a better understanding of the meaning and then how to use it. So, I am going to talk about some idioms that I think are common. Others may be not as often used, but I still think they're great to know when it comes to improving your listening comprehension or reading comprehension. And if you would like to get these lesson notes that are right next to me, click on that link down below in the description. Join my community and uh you'll have access to them.

If you're already a part of the community, check your email. I've sent them out to you. And of course, if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. And I know some of you want to build your vocabulary, learn more idioms because you hear them often in casual conversation. If you watch Netflix or you're watching a movie, you're definitely going to come across these idioms. I'm giving you a sentence and I've taken the idiom out. I see people already answering which is good and I want you to complete it with the idiom.

The picture is I was trying to associated with it. I thought it'd be a little too easy if I give it gave it to you right away. So I blurred it out a little bit. I'm feeling m so I decided not to go into work. Think about the reason why maybe you wouldn't go to work and because of that then think of the idiom that means the same thing. This one is incredibly common and I see all these excellent answers. Great job. Uh Angela Lai, good to see you. Uh feeling under the weather and I think this is one that in my opinion you definitely need to know. I think it's a great one to use. when you're under the weather, you're feeling a little sick or unwell.

The key word here is little. And if you are incredibly sick to the point maybe you need to go to the hospital, in that case, you may not use this idiom. But for most of us, as you're you know, you go about your lives, most of us get a cold or there's there many times when we just don't have to seek, you know, emergency medical attention, but we're just feeling a little sick. Maybe we go to the doctor, we get some uh antibiotics, whatever it is. Just to again to emphasize, you know, it's just a little sick or a bit sick. So not severely when you're feeling under the weather. I use this one all the time when people talk to me. Oh, you know, how's it going? You know, I'm okay, but right now I'm a little under the weather. Excellent. Well done. Uh, Jing, good to see you. Uh, I'll give some shout outs as we go through this.

I thought this was funny. So, again, I'll share some of these memes from time to time just to reinforce it. I can't go to work today. I'm feeling under the weather. So, in this case, you're talking about you're under some, you know, tough, difficult, horrible weather and you're just not feeling good. You feel under the weather. What do you think? I'm already now we're getting more now we're we're uh getting it's getting more difficult. I at least I think so. This is another this is an idiom that I think is very useful. It's not as common as the one we just talked about saying, you know, you're under the weather. Because often people are going to say like, "Yeah, I'm a little sick." This is just something that happens to everyone.

What do you think? Now the sentence itself may not directly like the negotiations is not going to tell you exactly which idiom that you may use, but the picture again I've blurred out because I I don't want to give it away. If you can kind of tell what's going on in this picture, it is a picture of a person kind of, but there's something going on there. His emotions. So, if you're in a negotiation, I think most people would say, look, let's take the emotion out of it. All right? You shouldn't be emotional when you're trying to negotiate. So, if someone is emotional and then it's going to what what's it going to do possibly? And you could say his emotions m his m during the negotiations.

So hopefully some of these are are going to be new for you as you go through this since uh I didn't see any answers. So maybe this is a little the the answer what I was looking for. You could say it clouds his judgment. So if you say that something clouds your judgment or clouds my judgment, it refers to just impairing your ability to think clearly, make good decisions and you could say it clouds your judgment. So if somebody is emotional and you're negotiating, it it could cloud your judgment and you're unable to make a good decision. So this is an idiom like I said it may not be as commonly used. It is very specific.

We're using the word cloud. Think about uh you know the in this picture the cloud is like kind of going all over his head. You can't really think clearly. You can't think straight. And you could say something clouds your judgment. And there are many situations that you may be in in which okay you think can't really think clearly and it and it clouds your judgment. If you have to make a decision, uh, you know, you're you're hiring somebody for a job, but then you have somebody who is applying for the job that you kind of know, maybe a little bit of a friend or a family member, it it could cloud your judgment because you know this person, you want to give them an opportunity and maybe you might not make the best decision. So there are definitely instances when somebody's not thinking clearly or they're not able to think clearly for one reason or another and then you could say something clouds your judgment, his judgment, her judgment, my judgment. So this is a great phrase to know. If this one, if this is new, again, you can let me know. Uh if you're learning new idioms, hit that like button. Or if you're with us uh today in the chat, you can hit those hearts uh likes and just uh again, learning something new. That's what it's all about. She m the surprise party and pretended not to know. So, I think you can kind of tell from the sentence, the what's happening and get an idea at least the the missing part what the meaning is and then try to think of an idiom that fits that that meaning and you could use the picture or help. So she m the surprise party and pretended not to know. So at this point you know that what goes in that blank she she knew about the surprise party and pretended not to know. She got some information about it. Somebody told her.

Who knows? So, we know that that is the the situation that she found out this information from somebody or in some way and then pretended not to know. What idiom, what phrase could we put in there when you are learning about some information or you receive it? Uh, again, most of the time I feel like somebody mentioning it, maybe it was an accident. So, we're not talking about like like blow off or blow away. No, nothing with that verb. So, in this picture, you can kind of see this person, the the cloud. I don't know if you can see those other lines and we're really talking about the the wind. So, the wind is part of this and the answer.

Excellent. I saw one. Perfect. Uh Joanna Jing, perfect. Got wind of something. To get wind of something is when you hear a piece of information, especially something that somebody was trying to keep secret. So it could be a ver in this case we're talking about a surprise party or maybe another instance the company is going to lay off some employees and somehow the employees got wind of this news and maybe they you know they were upset but in that context they get wind of it and they learn something they get some information that they were not supposed to have and you get wind of something. So, this is another idiom that I feel like is very specific. It's still good to know because one that you will come across casual conversation. Somebody's telling a story. It's a great way to add emphasis and oh, I didn't want this person to know, but somehow uh she got wind of it or he got wind of it and you're using this idiom.

Let's see. To give you a little more context, I even though idioms are more informal, you don't typically use them in writing and it's not I wouldn't encourage you to necessarily you you still come across them. I even you can even find news headlines in which they're using some of these phrases. So, here's some example more context to help you better understand the meaning. Fiji police get wind of unreported drug cases in schools and they learn about it. They get wind of this or cancellations flood in for uh killed our hotel as guests get wind of lockdown. This is years ago talking about the the COVID lockdown but the this is happening and tourists people get wind of it and then they cancel their plans that some country may be in more of a lockdown. And then finally, his his Hot Wheels set won't last uh long once collectors get wind of it and they find this, they learn about this new, I don't know, prestigious set and then they'll want to buy it and to get wind of something.

Let's look at the the next one. I think the picture can help you. I blurred it out a little bit, but uh I think you maybe can still piece it together. The rumor created a m eventually damaging the company's reputation. So the company's reputation was damaged. Started with this rumor and it's almost like as things went along, things just kept getting worse and worse and worse.

Now you see the article uh there. So this is a going to be a noun. We're using this as a noun phrase. But the rumor created a eventually damaging the the reputation. So something that starts out small in this case rumor. Most rumors start out small but then they can spread quickly and when they spread quickly more people get wind of this information. Perhaps they start to believe it and then it gets you know worse and worse in this case for this company. And you see the picture there. If you're not able to tell, those are snowballs and it's rolling down the hill. And as it goes down the hill, it's getting bigger and bigger and bigger.

The company is confident it can of economic uncertainty. So, you have some economic uncertainty. You don't know what's going to happen. And that's a that's a scary situation. But in this case, the company is confident that it can do what? So this is another idiom that's well related to the weather even though we're going to use it in different context. And this is certainly one that I think you will hear and you might again I think you can definitely use it uh in your own life when talking about a situation telling a story and these are great phrases that you can use to be descriptive to add emphasis. So all right feel like sometimes just giving you a little more time to think of the answer and uh respond to these.

Uh yes we're talking about to weather the storm. If you are able to weather the storm, then it just means that you are able to continue doing something despite serious problems. The company is confident that it can weather the storm of economic uncertainty. So think about any situation in which there are problems, but you're basically saying, I'm going to be able to handle this. I can deal with these problems. I'm I'm going to be able to weather the storm. And there are many different situations that could apply that this could apply to as far as a problem you might have at work or uh personally and it's going to it's you're going to have to endure it for some time. But if you think you can get through it, yes, I I will be able to weather the storm. Uh, I wanted to give you this is a fun I'll use this from time to time just to to point it out as far as using chat GPT. And if I want to give you more context or even if you wanted more context yourself, you could go to chat GPT and say, "Hey, give me five sentences with the idiom weather the storm." So, what I really wanted to point out is even though the idiom is talking about the weather and we're talking about a storm, you you're not you could use it when talking about the weather as far as there's a storm coming up and you're like, look, okay, we're going to need to weather the storm. And you could use it in that context, but most of the time it's some other problem that somebody might be talking about. And for that reason, I I wanted to give you some of these more some of these other examples using this idiom like the first one, the small business managed to weather the storm during the economic recession. That is that tough period. Or the number number two, they faced a lot of criticism, but the team weathered the storm and came out stronger. a lot of criticism, but they weathered the storm. Number three, with patience and persistence, we can weather the storm and get through these tough times. That's a little more vague, but still you're able to use this idiom. Number four, the the marriage wasn't perfect, but they weathered the storm and stayed together for decades. Uh, I think that's a good example in thinking about marriage having its ups and downs. You have good times and then you have other difficult times in which case you need to weather the storm. That's a good association uh for this idiom. And finally, the politician had to weather the storm of public uh of public backlash after the scandal broke. If there's a scandal, whether you're involved or a company or in this case a politician, they you may need to weather the storm and try to get to the other side. So, great idiom. Hopefully, again, if this one's new, you can let me know. hit that like button and I can do more of these lessons or again tells me right now you're learning some new phrases. The next part and I'm I'm switching it up a little and what I want to do now is I'm giving you the meaning of the idiom. I'm giving you this picture and then I want you to to think of that what what is the idiom that I'm talking about. So this idiom means to hinder someone's enjoyment. Basically you're you're upsetting someone's plans. You can look at the picture. I think that is a at least one of the words th this is a direct word that is in a part of the idiom and then hopefully you can kind of put it together from there. So you're hindering someone's enjoyment. In that case, uh yes, uh uh Lai Katrina, you are raining on their parade. So, this is a picture. I tried to find a picture of a parade. And if you could think, okay, there's a parade. What idiom uses the word parade that's associated with the weather? To rain on someone's parade. you're hindering their enjoyment and you there again I think we can all think of a situation in which you were having a good time but somebody else came along maybe they had a bad attitude or they they said something negative and it really just you know it rains on your parade. Uh and this is one that I think we can all relate to. They hinder your enjoyment. They rain on your parade.

this idiom right here to stop being careful and do something that is dangerous or uh that might result in failure. What are you doing in this case? So if you're doing something that might result in failure, the picture is a little more difficult. So, I was trying to find a picture of something that I'll go ahead and give you one of the words. Something that's really windy, a windy picture. So, this idiom has the word wind in it. You're you stop being careful. You're doing something that's dangerous. And in that case, you are doing what? This is another one that I would say maybe it's not as commonly used, but still one that you're going to come across from time to time because I think people, especially in places like the United States, we love using idioms. It wasn't until I started teaching English many, many years ago and we would talk about idioms that I actually realized how often I use idioms in just casual conversation. All right, now I see some great answers coming in. Perfect. Uh Ava Miranda um Julia to throw caution to the wind. You're you're basically it kind of means what it says. You should be cautious and you're taking caution. Hey, you know, I don't need to be cautious anymore. I'm going to throw caution to the wind in which case I'm going to stop being careful and do something that could result in maybe disaster or failure. Here, this was actually a video. I I I couldn't grab the video to show it, but this was from I don't know if it was a Reddit post or something. Sometimes you've just got to throw caution to the wind and go for it. It was a video of these uh this boat that's close to the land and you have these two cats and the one cat is, you know, thinking about it, thinking about it and then just jumps and is trying to get to the land and just say, "Look, I I'm going to throw caution to the wind.

I might not make it and end up in the water, but I'm going to do it anyway. And yes, the cat the cat did land in the water, but just ran up onto the shore. So, it was a it was a fun little video, but a good example of, you know, I'm I'm going to take a chance even though this is dangerous, and I'm going to throw caution to the wind. What do you think uh this idiom right here? So the meaning is this is an idiom that is said when one bad thing happens and then it's followed by other bad things and it just makes the situation worse. I'll go ahead and say this is it is an idiom but it's also an expression. And when I say it's really an expression a lot of times people use this it's a standalone statement and you're just commenting on this situation. If somebody talks about something bad that happened. Oh, I overslept this morning and I I was late for work and then when I got to work, I spilled some coffee on my clothes and I had to give a presentation later and I was scrambling around to and you just keep talking about one bad thing after the other and you're telling somebody this and they could say, "Okay, yeah, you know," and they're just going to use this expression. I will say point out one thing when you you you most of the time use it to talk about bad things that are going on. I still think it's okay. You could use it to talk about great things like you get really lucky as well, but most of the time people are using it when referring to bad things that make the situation worse. And all of you, I think you you know this, you've heard it before. When it rains it pours. So this is a way to comment on a the succession of bad things that really ruins someone's day and uh just uh just yeah just ruins things for it. So all all of these things they just end up raining on someone's parade. What do you think? Uh oh, one thing I wanted to point out with this idiom in the US when it rains it pours. And this is something that I actually was unaware of until I put this lesson together. In uh the UK, you may hear people say, I think you could still say when it rains, it pours, but people may say it never rains, but it pours. Has the same meaning. We're talking about thing bad things that just continuously happen and it just makes the situation worse. When it rains, it pours. What do you think about this next one?

We're talking about a quiet or peaceful period before a period during which there is great activity, argument, or difficulty. And you can kind of use the picture to think about what this what is this idiom. It looks looks very peaceful right now, but you can see that off in the distance, you see that lightning and those dark clouds and the weather is about to get much worse. So when commenting on this situation that you know something in the future is going to be difficult whether it's going to be an argument or a tough conversation that you need to have with someone and then you could refer to the period before as as what this is the and you could even use this when referring to the weather but also other situations as well. So, you're talking about the the the period before and you're saying, "Well, right now it is the what?"

Any guesses? What do you think? Uh, all right. Perfect. All right. Maybe there was a little delay. I see all these answers in there now. Great job. Um, Katarina, Lai, Monsoon, uh, Talal, the calm before the storm. and you're just referring to this period of kind of tranquility where it's it's there's not any like argument or activity or problems, but you know it's coming and you're commenting on that like I'm a little worried about you know what's getting ready to happen like right now is the calm before the storm and you know that it's going to get a lot more problematic. What do you think? This idiom is used to tell someone that you cannot accept an invitation now, but would like to do so at a later time. I could not really find a picture that accurately addresses this idiom that would actually give you a hint without making it too easy. But you're going to use this idiom and this is more of an American expression to tell someone you can't accept an invitation now, but hey, maybe we'll we'll do this later. And in that in that situation, you maybe you invite me to say to go get a cup of coffee. You say, "Well, I'm on my way to do something else, but maybe let's do it this weekend, so I'm gonna have to what?" So, excellent. Uh, well done. We're talking about the idiom to take a rain check. I feel like you guys you guys know your your idioms, your weather idioms. So, when you take a rain check, you're basically saying, "Okay, we're not going to do it now. Maybe we'll do it in the future to take a rain check." I will add one thing when it comes to this idiom. I feel like sometimes sometimes people will use this idiom even though they're kind of implying, okay, this is not something I want to do and I'm going to tell you that we're going to do it later, but we're not really going to do it later. We're going to I I want to take a rain check. So, if you ask me to do something, hey, let's go to dinner, but I'm like, I don't really want to go out and, you know, maybe I don't plan to do in the future, I might just use this. Uh, let's uh just let's take a rain check. All right, let let's take a rain check. The next Oh, the we're going to switch it up again. And I feel like maybe this will be a little easier. Uh, I'm giving you a picture. I just want you to tell me the idiom. Look at the picture. I blurred it out a little bit because I didn't want to make it too easy, but you can kind of see what's going on. And then what idiom are we talking about? This is one that is, I think, pretty common. So, it's one that you're you've heard before. At least I'm confident that you've probably heard it. You may even use it, especially well, I don't want to give it away because we've we've been in this situation. And you can see these three individuals here. They are hacking away at this uh this thing which is clearly, even though I've blurted out, it's clearly ice. And we're talking about breaking the ice. So, this is a pretty common idiom. As I just said, I think you've probably heard it before when you want, you know, you want to make people feel comfortable and more relaxed, especially when they don't know each other. This is something every time I I run a course and the we have our first class together and there's like four or five people and um I might use it as a noun and say we're going to do an icebreaker means the same thing.

I'm just changing the part of speech to a noun, an icebreaker. Or I could say, well, let's break the ice. Here are some questions that are, you know, this is just to break the ice and we're going to try to feel a little more relaxed and and comfortable with each other. Great idiom to know. This this is a joke that I heard a long time ago and it's it is a cheesy joke and I've I mentioned uh I think somewhat recently in another quiz about the something falls flat. You It's intended to be funny but it's not funny. Maybe this joke is going to fall flat. And then somebody would say, "Excuse me, do you know how much a polar bear weighs?" enough to break the ice.

So, of course, uh I I was I was looking around for different memes and this is one because I feel like it's a it's a joke that I heard a long time ago that I thought I would share it with you. Maybe it fell flat. I don't know. What do you think about this uh picture right here that I've blurred out? This is another idiom that I would say maybe is not as common as talking about breaking the ice or or doing an icebreaker, but one that I think is still if you're learning idioms and you study idioms, this is vocabulary that you're interested in, then I imagine you probably have come across this before and you've heard it before. So, you see this person, this woman who's wearing a green dress. She's on that I uh ladder. It's not I I know to to be on cloud nine. That is an idiom. That's not the one that I'm talking this one. Think more think more specifically exactly what's going on in this picture. I will go ahead and tell you all if you're unfamiliar with the idiom to be on cloud9. You're just really happy. If I got great news, I say, "Ra, right now I am just on cloud nine. All these great things are happening to me. When it rains, it pours and I'm on cloud nine. So, I said, think about more specifically exactly what's happening. And you can kind of see it in the picture that this person has literally her head in the clouds. And if you're commenting and talking about someone, this is an idiom that you would use to describe someone else. And if someone has their head in the clouds, you're basically saying that this person is not paying attention to what's going on. They are oblivious to the things that are happening around them and or also really implying that maybe they're being impractical or unrealistic. So if I'm talking about what my plan for this next year and or for the rest of this year and I say, "Well, I'm going to do this and I have all these plans and I'm going to do that." And you think like, wow, that is just not realistic. You could say Wes, you know, kind of has his head heads in head in the clouds. His head is in the clouds right now. And you're basically saying that uh I'm being unrealistic. Or in another situation, if I'm just oblivious and not paying attention to what's going on, you're like, what what is how do you you know, how are you unaware of these things that are happening? You really must have your head in the clouds. So again, another idiom. Uh hopefully if you've if you've heard it if you know it, let me know.

Hit that like 100 button, whatever. Uh tells me that you're you're aware of some of these idioms. And that that is also an important thing because you're learning them passively for the most part. You read about these idioms, you watch these lessons, talking about the meaning, looking at example sentence. The goal is to build your confidence over time so that you can actively use them. And I know that's something that some people that don't have as much confidence in doing that. They're worried that they're going to use it in the wrong way. And I and I understand why. And it's just about getting that exposure. What do you think? people are learning idioms, I don't know why. I feel like English idioms, this is often like one of the first ones that people end up learning at school or wherever. This is an idiom that I don't really personally use even though like I

This is uh what what do you think? So, I I I'll give you a moment to think about it. I think you can kind of tell where this person is. Now, we've already talked about breaking the ice or doing an icebreaker. So, it's it's a different idiom, but that that being said, it is another idiom that has the word ice. I'll go ahead and tell you that because I think you can kind of discern from the picture that this this person is standing on ice and what I guess I could say what what kind of ice. So, all right, perfect. The the idiom that I'm referring to is, you know, to be on thin ice. Now, there are several verbs you could use with this. You could tell someone like you're skating on thin ice or you're walking on thin ice. I personally think I feel like often you're just going to use it with the verb to be and tell someone like, "Okay, this is your location right now. You are on thin ice. Right now you're on thin ice." So, there are different verbs that you can use with it, which is why I just gave on thin ice because it really just refers to doing something that is dangerous or risky. And I would say often people may use this as a like a command or more so just like a statement telling someone that if they are doing something that you don't want them to do, like look, don't don't keep pushing me. you're on thin ice. You're on thin ice. So, you might use this as a warning to someone else, saying like, "Look, you're in a dangerous spot right now. Don't don't keep doing this." To go back to uh um talked about like marriage and that other idiom of weathering the storm because marriages go through times that are that are difficult or trouble.

But also, again, you you're married, there are times where you're going to disagree. And if I may be having an argument with my wife about something and we keep talking and maybe she might tell me, "Look, okay, look, don't let's not keep talking about it. You're you're saying things that's really bothering me. You're you're on thin ice." And it's like you're giving that warning to someone else. You're on thin ice.

Let's Okay, this is uh I thought I just thought this was funny. This little meme right here says the the thinner the ice is, the more tempting it is to check if it can hold you. And I feel like in even though you're going to use this like to be on thin ice, not literally talking about uh on thin ice, but in a dangerous position, I think people do have that temptation when somebody gives you that warning like, you know, don't you're on thin ice. Uh it's almost tempting to keep pushing to see at what at what point does the other person break and and in that case you fall through the ice and then you really maybe have problems with your uh spouse, with your boss. That's another time that you may hear somebody use this at work. Maybe you make several mistakes and your boss says, "Look, you you need to change things. You need to uh you know, do better. You're on thin ice right now.

What do you think about this one? I I feel like I probably should have blurted out a little more. You can kind of uh gauge what's going on in this picture. This is another idiom that I think you will likely hear, especially movies, TV shows. Depending on the situation, you could use it conversationally, but I feel like, and this is again just my opinion, one that you may come across more in TV shows. Uh, and then but in instead of actually actively using in conversation. So, what is happening in this picture right here? You can see this gentleman who is dressed in a peculiar way, holding a flashlight. Obviously, it looks like they're stealing somebody. This is this person is a thief. Yes. And what they have in the bag, you can see there's a word written, but it's maybe a little, you can kind of make it out, I guess, to steal someone's thunder. If you steal someone's thunder, you are doing what someone else is going to do before they do it. Especially if it's taking like success or praise away from someone. So, let me give you some examples of like the context. Let's say we work together. you're my colleague and I have an idea and I share my idea with you and basically during the meeting you you pretend like it's your idea and you say, "Oh my gosh, they you stole my thunder. You basically took credit for my idea." That would be more a situation that is, you know, it's going to bother someone if they steal your thunder. Something that's a little more, you know, innocuous that's really not going to hurt. Let's say that um I I we would use this in class. Uh if I'm asking questions as a student, I ask for people, oh, can you give me an example?

And they maybe give an example using the idiom or whatever vocabulary we may be talking about. And then the next person that I asked, I was like, okay, can you give me an example? If they were going to say the same thing, they oh well, I was going to say the same thing. You know, this person stole my thunder. and they did it before they were getting getting ready to do it and that's kind of harmless in that context. Another time when you may use this like taking attention away from someone. So think about a wedding. This is another example I give with this idiom. If um on the wedding day the bride is going to wear a white dress, other women should not wear a white dress. If somebody else were to show up wearing a white dress, you could say, "Oh, it's like, you know, she's trying to steal the bride's thunder and take attention or praise away from this person." So, there are different ways in which you can use this idiom. I I think again it's one that you're you're you will come across. Uh so, it's good for your comprehension. It is a little more specific. So, you may be in a situation in that in which you can use it and I think that's great.

uh and and other ones more descriptive commenting like raining cats and dogs or you know wanting to break the ice so all of these idioms are related to the weather in that there is a word either the word weather or something else related to the weather. Even though as we've gone through them and you understand the meaning, you you can see that they're used in different context. If you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, let me you can let me know by hitting that like button. I really appreciate uh you being here with me today learning these new idioms. I hope you just keep practicing, keep up the good work, and I will see you very soon for another lesson in the future.

Useful Winter Expressions to Build Your Vocabulary

today i want to teach you some common and useful winter expressions that's coming up [Music] hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english and this channel is all about just trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today i want to talk about winter because right now it's winter especially if you are in the northern hemisphere so i thought this would be a good time to teach you some different expressions that have words that are related to winter words like cold or ice or freeze and to help you better understand these expressions i'm going to throw in some video clips so that you can see how these phrases are used in context so let's just begin with our first expression which is to leave someone out in the cold and what this means if you if you leave someone out in the cold it means that you are excluding someone from a group or some activity and you're kind of ignoring this person and you are leaving them out in the cold for example maybe i want to participate in a game with a group of friends but the the game can only have so many people and they say sorry we we can't have any other players in the game and i could say well i can't believe you're just going to leave me out in the cold you're not going to let me participate in this activity be a part of the group to leave someone out in the cold sometimes you have to put yourself above the story well i don't want to leave you out in the cold oh you're not it's not like we're a team anyway i want a job for coach tyrell he's been with me for 10 years i won't leave him out in the cold the next expression is a cold streak and when you say that something is a cold streak or maybe you say that you are on a cold streak it refers to a time period when you're not having much success or you're not achieving your desired outcome it's like you're you keep losing again and again and again you could say well you're you're on a little bit of a cold streak often i think people may use this in the context of sports and they they keep playing they're participating in these matches but they they just happen to keep losing and they're on a cold streak or maybe people might use this uh when talking about dating that they're you're trying to find and meet a boyfriend or girlfriend and you keep asking people out on a date and the other person keeps saying no then maybe yeah you could say you're on a little bit of a cold streak keep in mind you could also say the opposite of this if you are having a lot of success and you're always winning then you are on a hot streak so you could be on a cold streak if you're not having success and a hot streak if you really are if you can't make a pay i'll find somebody who can coach you're trying to put a charge on my you're on a cold streak i'm trying to encourage you to catch fish stacy love me i'm not a cold streak but i'll pay her back let's go another round in cold blood all right yeah it sounds sounds a little scary it's not a good thing it means that something happens intentionally and without any feeling or emotion often i think people would use this with uh the statement and say that someone was killed in cold blood that they were killed by somebody that just had no feeling or emotion for what they did so this is an expression that i think you would hear if you're watching some tv show or movie that has a lot of crime or drama and they say that somebody was killed in cold blood or you could say somebody was murdered in cold blood that alexander cullen is guilty of murdering three people in cold blood i watched you open fire in a room full of unarmed starfleet officers you killed them in cold blood then we have to give someone the cold shoulder so this is a very common expression and it means that you are intentionally unfriendly to someone and in this case i say that it's common because i think you would probably use this or hear it being used if you're talking about people that know each other and perhaps people that maybe you you might think this person is your friend and you see this person out uh perhaps at a party and you you wave to them and they do not wave back and they're ignoring you and they seem like they're a little upset or angry and they don't talk to you you could say that that person is giving you the cold shoulder and even if you think about it like it's like you're you're giving somebody the shoulder like you're turning away from that person you don't want to talk to them and it is something that's uh it's unfriendly to give someone the cold shoulder you want to get lindsay back you got to give her the cold shoulder i don't know maybe we need to go out there and find out what we're meant to do his wife was giving him the cold shoulder out cold all right and i say it like that like out cold because it refers to somebody who is completely unconscious and if you're unconscious it just means you're not awake and i think that this is an expression that would be used maybe if you're you're talking about people fighting i think of boxing when people are boxing they're hitting each other and if somebody gets hit in the head really hard they may they may go unconscious and you could say they're out cold wow what happened you hit your head on the doorway coming in got knocked out cold [Music] can't tell it's knocked out cold then we have pour cold water on something or you could say to throw cold water on something and well think about it if you throw water on something usually you're trying to put it out you're trying to stop it and cold water cold it has a little bit of a negative connotation so if you are pouring cold water on something you are just being you're you're discouraging perhaps another person or you're just being negative about something let me give you an example maybe uh maybe you have a great idea and i start saying all of these negative things that this is not gonna work uh you shouldn't do this and i'm discouraging you then you could say that i'm pouring cold water on your idea or i'm throwing cold water on your idea but i would never do that to you i wouldn't lisa one of the hardest jobs i had is throwing cold water on young children's dream tip of the iceberg this is a great expression and to help you understand the meaning i just want you to picture an iceberg an iceberg will stick out of the water in the ocean but you only see a part of the iceberg underneath in the water there's a much bigger part of the iceberg that you don't see so when you refer to something as the tip of the iceberg you're saying that that you're only able to see a small part of something that's much bigger often i think it's used to talk about something that is a problem or just some bad situation and if you want to say that you only know about a little bit of it then you could say well this is just the tip of the iceberg that there is a lot more just underneath that we're not able to see right now it's just the tip of the iceberg i just got a little panicky change is not easy for me charlie really i hadn't noticed and i'm not just talking about the clothes the clothes are only the tip of the iceberg everything is gone mom and pop vanished so all my sneakers are gone i'm afraid so and that's just the tip of the iceberg then we have to break the ice and this is a very common expression because what it means is that when you have a group of people that do not know each other you want everyone to feel a little more relaxed and a little more comfortable and you might say let's break the ice let's do something so that we feel a little more relaxed talking to one another and we you can get to know somebody and you want to break the ice you could also use it as a noun if you're talking about some activity to help people feel a little more relaxed and you would call that an icebreaker anytime i start a new class i always like to begin with an icebreaker so that all of the students feel very comfortable and they're relaxed and it's just it's a good way to break the ice that's it don't be shy that may be a little joke to break the ice yes sir you said that's me leo gets whatever you need leo gets you get it i use that all the time to break the ice when i meet people you know it's good next is the expression to put a freeze on something and what this refers to is a policy that will temporarily stop something and i think you might often use this in the context of maybe business so a company may have a policy and they want to put a freeze on hiring they want to temporarily stop hiring new employees so they have this policy and they'll put a freeze on hiring no we're going to talk about this now or if you'd prefer i put a permanent freeze on the education budget then we have freeze up so this is a phrasal verb and what it means if someone freezes up it means that a person becomes very anxious and they're unable to move or speak and you could say that they just they just freeze up i think people will use this phrasal verb when they're talking about perhaps somebody's giving a presentation and they're in front of a group of people and maybe they forget what they're going to say and they just freeze up or perhaps in a play if somebody forgets their lines and they're in front of the audience and then they just freeze up so i think often people may use this when they're talking about being doing something in front of a larger group of people perhaps an audience and you suddenly become anxious and you forget what you're supposed to say you you can't move you just freeze up sometimes it does it happens to me when i'm creating these lessons and well perhaps i just forget what i'm supposed to talk about i forget where i'm at in the lesson and i just freeze up but i i never show you that then we have the expression which one am i on that flash on the roof nearly gave me a heart attack i stop i freeze up i can't i don't know what happened in there and i just froze up i locked up i'm sorry when hell freezes over so this is an expression that people would use just to say never that something is never going to happen because the idea is that well hell is just never going to freeze so if i'm talking about something like the world cup the world cup and i think that the u.s the u.s is going to win the world cup i'm very excited for it you don't believe me maybe you think i'm crazy it's never going to happen you could just say well when hell freezes over or another way you could use this is you could say that the u.s will win the world cup when hell freezes over so in that case you're saying the thing that's never going to happen and then you follow it with when hell freezes over the u.s will win when hell freezes over we made some adjustments look at page nine i don't understand are you selling me the dealership or not when hell freezes over and when will the church see any of this money when hell freezes over suckers then we have to freeze someone out and what this means is that you are excluding someone socially from perhaps a group or an activity and usually in an unfriendly way so in that case it's a little similar to be left out in the cold because again you're you're ignoring someone but the difference is to be left out in the cold it refers to you're not able to be part of the group if you're freezing someone out maybe you're a part of the group but nobody's talking to you they're not interacting with you socially so maybe i i go to a friend's party and everybody's mad at me and nobody's talking to me they're not being social with me i could say they're freezing me out or maybe at a company you could say the group froze out the new employees during the meeting that they weren't talking to them they weren't uh they weren't interacting with them socially to free someone out he didn't want to talk to us about being angry maybe we don't talk to him at all freeze him out that's right i guess we'll show him somebody help me out here chip hmm karen tito larry you can't freeze me out like this we're on a first name basis so now for a quick review in the future i have so many more english lessons for you this is just the tip of the iceberg and i know that before i told you that we use this mostly with a bad situation in this case it's a good thing there are many more great english lessons that that you haven't seen just yet this is just the tip of the iceberg and i know that well sometimes the channel it can hit a little bit of a cold streak maybe not as many people are watching the videos uh maybe not getting as many likes or or comments perhaps it's because i freeze up in the middle of the lesson even if that happens i promise i will not give up i will never give you the cold shoulder because you are an important part of the interactive english community and i'm just not going to leave you out in the cold so i i hope that you could easily understand what i was just saying because you just learned the meaning of all of these different winter expressions and if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button it'll really help me help me get back on a hot streak and i will see you in the next lesson so long

Useful Words & Synonyms on How to Say You're SAD

Do you ever feel sad, blue, dejected? But there's no need to feel sad today because you're about to learn some new words. If you feel like you're not making enough progress with your English, don't feel sad. Join our social media classes. You will learn so much. So this lesson is all about different ways to express your sadness. So instead of just saying "I'm sad," "I'm sad," "I'm sad," "I'm sad," each time, I thought it would be good to give you some vocabulary words. Some different ways to say you're sad. So let's get to the lesson. So the first one is to be blue or to feel blue. And this means that you're feeling sad, melancholy, a little bit depressed.

It's just not...you're not feeling well. You're feeling blue. A little sad. And I think we all feel blue from time to time. I like this one because it's connected to colors and I love colors. And it's very interesting that we can connect emotions to a color. So it's...I think it's a really common one, and it's a really, really good way to express you're sad without saying the word "sad." Okay, the next one is heartbroken. So when you're heartbroken you're extremely sad. Your heart is broken...imagine in a million pieces for something bad that happened. Or just something really, really sad that has happened to you.

Now we hear this a lot about romantic relationships, but it doesn't have to be about that at all. It can be about any relationship or any other events that have directly affected you. You're heartbroken. The next one is down. And this just means...when somebody's feeling down they can be a little bit... They can be unhappy or a little bit depressed. So again, this one...it does mean sad. It does mean unhappy. But I would say maybe not the same intensity as very depressed. You're just a little bit down.

The next word is bitter. And this one is a little bit more specific than the others. And the reason is because when somebody feels bitter, they're feeling anger. They're feeling resentment. They're feeling sadness. And it's usually the result of some kind of unjust treatment. Or treatment that they think was unfair or unjust. The next word is dejected. And this one is a little bit sadder. Because if somebody feels dejected, they feel depressed. They feel sad. But it's almost as if they feel hopeless. They're about to give up on whatever situation they were in. If they're dejected, they've kind of tried everything and they're just... That's kind of...they're about to give up.

Number six is gloomy. And this also has a little bit of a twist to it. So I hear this word a lot connected to a place or a mood. It has to do with kind of like dark mysterious places. If a place is gloomy, it's like a depressing but dark, scary place. But of course it can be a mood as well. So somebody can feel gloomy.

The next one is disheartened. And when somebody is disheartened that means that they lose confidence. They lose the determination, and they're just really feeling very sad. The next one is depressed. And when someone is depressed, it means that they're in a state of extreme unhappiness. And I'm talking extreme. So depressed is really, really a word that you shouldn't take lightly if you're trying to say you're sad. It means you're feeling extreme, extreme sadness.

The next word is miserable. And if somebody is miserable, it means that they are extremely unhappy or uncomfortable. So you can see it in both of those situations. Our last word is dark. And this means...if somebody's feeling dark, they are feeling unhappy. But it also has to do with maybe feeling some unpleasantness or being a little bit pessimistic. And it just really means that, you know, they're feeling very unhappy. And just a little bit unpleasant to be around. They are in a dark mood. Okay. So now I want you to practice the words you just learned. This is really, really great practice. And I really want to emphasize that it's very important that we use different words That we use synonyms to express our feelings.

So here's your practice. What I want you to do is complete the following sentence with one of the words you learned today. So I'll repeat that. Use one of those words in the sentence, and tell us what makes you feel that way. And it doesn't have to be true. You can just write it down just for the sake of practicing. I hope this lesson didn't make you feel sad. But instead happy to have learned some new words. So next time you feel a little blue, down, or disheartened by your English progress, don't despair. Just watch another video. You will feel better and learn at the same time, which in my book is a win-win.

So nothing to feel sad about here. If you found this lesson useful, please give it a thumbs up. Thanks for watching, and I'll see you next time. Bye.

LESSON 696 OF 749

Useful Words to Say Things Are Cheap and Expensive

- Today we're learning some very useful vocabulary, keep on watching to learn some different ways to say cheap and expensive. Now these two words, cheap and expensive, are among the most common adjectives out there. And I thought it would be time to teach you how to say them differently. We don't always want to say this is cheap, this was so cheap, this is so so cheap, (gibberish). Boring. And it's not just boring, sometimes it doesn't adequately describe something. So today I'm going to give you different words that kinda more accurately describes these two very important adjectives because we work with them all the time. So stick with me and learn some new great words.

So let's start with cheap, the first synonym, and this is a direct synonym, meaning you can use it interchangeably is inexpensive. So if something is inexpensive it means it's cheap, it just doesn't cost a great deal. - This one you can use for most things, so instead of saying cheap, just say inexpensive. Okay, now another direct synonym for cheap is I forgot the word. Another direct synonym for cheap is low-price. Again, this is interchangeably, so you can use cheap, you can use inexpensive or you can use low-priced.

The next synonym for cheap is affordable. Now, yes, of course this is a synonym, we can talk about something cheap being affordable, but I think I hear this a lot with big ticket items, so if something that is kind of usually expensive or usually is worth a lot of money. So talking about things like a car or a house or something that is usually very expensive. It doesn't cost too much, it's cheaper than we expected to be. Maybe we can say that it's affordable.

The next one is cost-effective. And this one is one of those synonyms that has a very specific meaning. So, not only is it cheap, but it produces some good effect without costing a lot of money. So, it's kinda like good for the price. Cost-effective. It does the job and it doesn't have to cost you a lot. Our next adjective is budget, and don't confuse this one with the noun budget, because they mean slightly different things. When used as an adjective just stands for inexpensive. You know it's just a synonym for cheap.

Our next synonym is reasonable, and this another one that is not quite a direct synonym for cheap. So if something is reasonable, it just kind of means that the price is not necessarily too cheap, but more like fair or moderate. Not too expensive. - It's not more or less, it's just fair. But of course you can use it as a synonym for cheap in the context that you're talking about fair prices.

The next word is steal, and for this one I don't the verb to steal, it's a noun. So when you refer to something as a steal, that's kinda how we use it. It just means that's so cheap, almost like you stole it. - It shouldn't be that cheap, it should be illegal that it's that cheap, but it is. So this one is probably one of my favorites, because if I find something that's a steal, I'm having a great day, don't have to pay a lot of money, so life is great.

Our next synonym is bargain, and this one just kind of means the same as steal, except steal is more informal. But really, they mean the same thing, it just mean something really really cheap. And usually bargain has the implication that whatever item you bought, you bought it on a sale for a price that's usually much lower than expected and maybe you just got a really good sale or deal. Okay, so now that you know some wonderful synonyms for cheap, how about we talk about expensive. I just realized these are not gonna be as fun as cheap, because nobody likes to talk about expensive things. So we are going to start with the most kinda direct synonym for expensive and this one is costly.

Now pay attention how you pronounce this word, because you do not hear the t, it's a very subtle, almost silent t. It just means costing a lot. If something's costly, costs a lot of money. So, it's expensive. It's costly. Our next synonym is overpriced, and this one has a slightly different meaning and it just kind a means if something is overpriced, it cost more than it should. Yes, it's expensive, but it shouldn't be this expensive. It just it's way too much, it's overpriced.

The next one is pricey, and this is kinda like costly, is kind of a direct synonym for expensive, and it just means costing a lot of money. It's expensive. The next one is valuable, and this one kinda has two meanings, one of them is, obviously the directly related to money. If something is valuable it means it's worth a lot of money. - But it can also mean that it has another kind of value as well. It doesn't necessarily have to be about money. So something valuable to you could be maybe something one of a kind. - I'll say this many times when we're talking about valuable, we are talking about, um, I hear to jewelry a lot.

So, you know, like her ring or earring or something would be valuable. Our next word is extravagant, and I would say that this one also has a slightly different meaning, usually when something is extravagant, it cost a little bit more than you can afford or more than you should pay for it. Extravagant, is kind of connected to like a life of luxury. So extravagant can also be more than something reasonable, it's just too much.

Our next word is lavish, and I put extravagant and lavish together because they are kind of related. So when we're talking about lavish is kinda still that idea of that life style. If it's something that is elaborate, that's expensive, that a lot of money was spent on it and maybe just something that it's a little bit abundant. Lavish, it's really kind of luxurious. So maybe you've notice that this words have kind of gone from just, you know, expensive to like, crazy expensive. Well, our next word is even crazier on the expensive scale. And it is exorbitant. Something is exorbitant it means that it is at an unreasonably high price, the price is so high that it just, no. Why would you pay so much for this?

It is exorbitant. So whenever you use this word you wouldn't just describe expensive, but you would describe something so expensive that it is almost insane. - Completely unreasonable, it doesn't make any sense, yet it cost this much. Exorbitant. And our next synonym is kind of an idiom. Well, it's not kind of, it's an idiom. Therefore it's a little bit less formal, and it is an arm and a leg. It means very expensive not as expensive as exorbitant, but it just means very very expensive. Okay, so now I want you to practice this words that we've just learn, so what I want you to do is in the comments, use one of the words we learned and tell us about something you think it's cheap or expensive.

Remember, the more you use the vocabulary the better it will stick in your mind, so you know if you want to tell us about ten things, twenty things, whatever, the better you'll remember them. I hope you enjoyed this lesson and learned some new vocabulary words, if you did, please give us some love, thumbs up, share, whatever you want to do. I also hope that your purchases in the future are not exorbitant or extravagant. But instead they are reasonable and affordable. Thanks for watching and I'll see you next time. Bye.

Useful World Cup Idioms for Your Vocabulary Goals

So since everyone is so excited for the World Cup, I thought this would be a good opportunity to talk to you about some popular soccer idioms and expressions. And yes, I said soccer because I'm an American. Even though the rest of the world pretty much says football. Not sure why we say soccer. Americans just do. But we do a lot of things that don't make much sense. Keep in mind that even though these Idioms are related to soccer and sports, they can be used in a variety of different situations and contexts. And I will show you that and give you some examples as we go through these expressions. The first expression I have for you is to keep one's eye on the ball.

So when you're playing soccer or just about any sport, you need to look at the ball. You need to know where it is, and you have to keep your eye on it. So this basically means that you really have to pay attention and stay focused to the activity that you're doing. This could be used not only in sports. You could use it in business as well. That you need to stay focused on what you're doing. Or even in school you need to pay attention. You need to keep your eye on the ball.

The next expression is a little similar, but it's still different. And that is to be on the ball. So if you say that you are on the ball, it just means that you are really alert, and you are aware of everything that's going on. That you're doing things right and you say "You know. Today, I'm really on the ball." I'm really sharp. I know what's happening. I'm focused. I'm on the ball. One of my favorite idioms is to get the ball rolling. And when we say this it means that we want to start something. So it means pretty much exactly what it says. So if we have a ball, and we want to start rolling it.

Then we get the ball rolling. We start moving along. Many times I would walk into a classroom, and we're getting ready to begin class and I'd say "All right, guys. Let's get the ball rolling." Let's begin. Now when people are playing soccer you have to kick the ball. There's a lot of kicking going on. And someone can say that they get a kick out of something. Which means that they really enjoy something. They really like it. I get a kick out of watching World Cup matches I get a kick out of riding a motorcycle. I hope that you guys get a kick out of watching our English lessons. And will hit that like button down below.

Another great expression is a game changer. So if something is a game changer, then that means that there was some new idea, something happened that really shifted the game in one way or another. So in sports, somebody maybe gets injured and that's a game changer. Or even in business. Maybe you have a new computer system that's going to help you and you say wow this is a game changer. There are many ways that we can use this expression. But if there's some new idea something, revolutionary that is going to change the way that we do things. It's a game changer. This next idiom is one that I think I also use a lot, and that is a game plan.

So if you have a game plan, it means that you have a strategy for doing something. That you have a plan of action that you are going to execute in order to succeed. You must have a game plan. So if you're playing soccer or any sports for that matter, you need to have a game plan. You have to have a strategy to win. And in business you need a game plan if you're going to do some negotiations. In school you need a game plan if you're working on some project. Even if you're organizing an event for a friend, you need a game plan. So in soccer there are referees out there on the field.

And they carry a whistle. And sometimes they might blow the whistle. And when you blow the whistle on someone it means that you are calling this person out for doing something wrong. Maybe something even illegal. And you're reporting it to the proper authorities. You can blow the whistle on another person. You could blow the whistle on a company, on an organization. If somebody's done something wrong, you can report it. You can let everyone know, and you are blowing the whistle on that person or company. We can also change this idiom around and make it a noun and say that someone is a whistleblower. And if someone's a whistleblower, then that person is the one who reported the wrongdoing that is happening.

They're a whistleblower. Blow the whistle on someone. Another great soccer expression, which is also it's relevant to any sports out there is to say we were robbed. And to be robbed means that something happened that was unjust that you don't think is fair. Maybe you just barely missed the goal, or maybe there was a penalty and you disagree with it. You'd say we were robbed. A very common expression is to take sides. So if you're thinking about soccer you have two different sides of the field.

One team is on one side the other team is on the other side. And you take sides. You are cheering for one team. So if you are taking sides it means that you are supporting one over the other.

And this is very common because it's used often when two people disagree about something. And another person is there, and they're trying to figure out, "Okay. Who do I agree with? Whose side am I taking?" Next is to be on a roll. And if a sports team is on a roll that just means that they have been very successful lately. They've been winning a lot. They have a streak of success. So you guys are learning these idioms and expressions and you're learning so much English I'd say "Yeah, you know you're on a roll keep it up. You're doing great. You guys rock." And anybody can be on a roll if they happen to have a lucky streak.

And you could say "Yeah, you know. Lately I've really been on a roll." Now that you know some of these popular soccer idioms and expressions I have a question for you. I'm going challenge you. This is interactive English, and we have an interactive question. So I want you to click on the correct answer. What is this expression right here mean? To score an own goal. I want you to click on the answer that you think is correct. If you don't know the answer then just say "I don't know," in the comments, and I will tell you the answer. I promise you. What does it mean? Click on the correct answer.

If you don't click on an answer the video is just going to end, and then I hope that you will LIKE this lesson, share it, and go on to watch other lessons.

Using Pictures to Improve Your English

Today, I want to talk to you about something that will make it easier for you to learn and improve your English skills. And that is... Before we begin today's lesson, I'd like to remind you to join our social media classes because it's another great way to practice your English skills. So a lot of you out there who are learning English are studying on your own. Maybe you don't have time or the resources to take classes. So you are trying to teach yourself. And self-study is a great way to try and learn the language. But there are certain things that you can do to improve your skills, so you become better at teaching yourself.

One thing that I think is so important for learning English or any other language for that matter is using pictures and images to learn the language and reinforce whatever it is that you're trying to learn. And this is especially important for self-study because there are so many images out there that will help you learn the language. So first why is it even important to use pictures or images when it comes to language learning? Well, we are all different and we have different learning styles. Some of us are kinesthetic learners, and we need to move around. Others are auditory learners, and we need to hear whatever it is that we're learning because that's going to help us.

Others, like me, are visual learners and it really helps to see pictures with color, and it has a stronger meaning. And it helps me, especially remember the material and really reinforces my understanding of whatever it is I'm learning because I'm actually able to see something to associate with that. And the significance of visual learning is evident all around us. This is especially true when it comes to early childhood education. You can just go into many elementary school classrooms around the world and you will probably see that they are full of pictures that are very colorful because this really grabs our attention. And not only that, it really provides a stronger connection with what we are learning, which in turn helps with our memory and our retention of the material.

So what I want to show you today is something that maybe you are already familiar with and hopefully you are already using it. But if not, I strongly suggest that you start using it. And it is a great online resource that is available to everyone. And that is... So Google images, what is it? Well, it's basically a search engine of pictures and images of anything that you want to know about. And it can be extremely useful for learning English, especially if you're studying on your own. So a lot of times students will ask me a question about vocabulary grammar, maybe pronunciation. And depending on the question, I might just go on Google images and find a picture and send that to them because that not only explains the material, but it gives them a visual reference.

So the most common way that people use Google images would be for vocabulary. They come across a word that they don't know and they want to have a picture to associate with that word. So for example, say that you are reading a story and you come across the word DRAWBRIDGE. And you know it's a bridge, but you're not really sure exactly what type of bridge it is, so you can just write DRAWBRIDGE into the Google image search engine and then...voila you have a bunch of pictures about what a drawbridge actually looks like. And now it's something that you can associate with what you already know. Because many of us have seen a drawbridge in our lives at one point or another.

And now we can associate that word to the image. Another example, maybe you don't know what a GROUNDHOG is so we can put that into Google images and then we see that...yes, okay. It is an animal. And maybe this is an animal that you never seen before so you really learn something entirely new. Or perhaps you have seen a groundhog before and you just didn't know that that's what it meant in English. That's going to help you remember it especially when you want to produce that word in speaking or writing. We can also use Google images to find out the difference between two words. So for example, a lot of people might confuse the words borrow and lend.

And on a side note, if you're looking for an explanation you can check out our video right up there. Or there. I don't know. It's somewhere up there. But we can use Google images to find out the difference. We can just type in "borrow versus lend." And then we're going to have a lot of pictures and images come up showing us the difference. And some of them even show us directly that yes...borrow means to take, lend means to give. And even if there's not necessarily a picture of the action, we can find the meaning and it shows us using a lot of different colors. And colors really help. And what I recommend is that you save these images, put them in a vocabulary folder, and then you can reference them in the future.

So maybe you also want to learn about the present perfect continuous. So now we can go over there and look at some of those pictures to give us an idea about how that verb tense is used. And maybe even understand the difference between the present perfect and the present perfect continuous. Finally, we can even use Google Images when it comes to pronunciation. So say that you want to learn and understand a little bit more about silent letters. So you can write silent letters into the search, and now we have a lot of different pictures showing us images of words with silent letters, and the silent letter is even highlighted. So we know that when we're saying this word we're not going to pronounce that sound because that letter is silent night: knight, knee, wrist.

These are all common words that have silent letters. And truthfully, these are just a few examples as to how you can use Google Images to improve your self-study. I would definitely recommend checking it out. If you have any question about the English language, just put it in the Google Images and see what comes up. It's going to help you learn and understand the material better. So what I'd like you to do now is in the comments below let us know what online resources you are using when it comes to learning English. And sharing this is going to help everyone because we'll be able to find and discover new resources that will help us learn English better.

Especially if we are using self-study. Thanks for joining us. I hope you enjoyed this learning tutorial about how to use Google Images, so go use it. We'll see you next time.

Using Subtitles to Enhance Your English Skills

all right hello hello people English learners students friends I hope you guys are having a wonderful day so in the chat again let us know where you're joining us and also maybe tell us I don't know tell us tell us what you did today tell us something that you did this morning or this afternoon and if you're watching this at a later time again write a comment tell us what you did today like reading your stuff and I promise I I will reply I will reply Marco what's up how are you doing good to have you here so like having conversations I like interacting with you guys so speaking of conversations and dialogue today I want to talk to you about something that as an English teacher it's very important to me and I think also for you guys learning English or any other language for that matter this is something that I think is very useful and helpful and that is this

we're going to talk about the benefits of using subtitles so I first want to start out by saying that this is something that again can it's not controversial but I think there are some linguists and teachers and people out there that have looked at this and they've said well you know subtitles if you can't learn a language using subtitles or it doesn't help and other people think it does so today I'm gonna give you I'm gonna give you my opinion my perspective and the one thing I will say is that I do agree with some of it and that I don't think you can just learn a language only with subtitles so for example I don't speak French and I don't think I could sit in front of a TV and watch movies and television with French subtitles and that I'm gonna learn the language that way but I do think that if you are a studying a language and you are getting classroom study and you are using a book and you are using other resources and practicing you are listening you're reading your writing and your speaking subtitles can really help complement complement what you are trying to learn and what you are doing and complement your overall language skills and truthfully I definitely don't think it hurts so it's not something that I think you have to do always but I think it is useful especially in the right context and that there is a lot of value that you can gain from using subtitles to watch TV movies or even English lessons on YouTube so Marco how I am doing extremely extremely well it's a nice weekend here it was rainy last weekend now it's a beautiful day outside and afterwards I think we're gonna go out for a walk so hello pearl from India excellent I hope you guys are having a great weekend today as I showed you I'm gonna talk about the benefits of using subtitles so to tell you a little story quick little story when I first learned that it's useful to use subtitles I was learning Spanish and I had been studying Spanish for quite a while I studied at a school in Spain I was doing self-study I was doing work in books and this was when I was on a trip from I was on a trip in Latin America I was actually in Paraguay of all places and during this whole time as I'm learning Spanish I'm listening to music I really love the music and my listening skills I'll be on they're pretty bad so I would I would listen to the music and I would enjoy it but often I didn't understand all of the words and that was okay because you're kind of listening to music and you're just enjoying the the rhythm the flow and the beats so it wasn't until this one trip when I was in Paraguay and I went out with a group of friends to a karaoke bar and you know I'm guessing most of us have been to do karaoke and you are singing the song but the words are up there it's like they have they have subtitles with the songs so you know you know the person singing knows what to sing so at this karaoke bar all of the music was mostly Spanish and it was music I was familiar with and when I'm sitting there looking at listening to people sing these songs and reading along with it I started to notice I was like oh okay that's what they're saying I began to understand actually the words that were in the song and it had a lot more meaning and I think that's when I first discovered that okay subtitles can be very useful on many different levels hello from Malaysia Thailand excellent have people from all over the place hope you guys are having a wonderful day I'm guessing it's pretty late at night there so thank you for joining us so first reason I want to show you the benefit of using subtitles is this a better understanding so my question for you is as follows do you prefer subtitles or do you prefer without subtitles when you're watching something in English alright do you prefer to use subtitles or do you prefer no subtitles let us know in the comments write it in the chat or if you're watching this later again please answer the question write it in the comment section we like to hear from all of you guys and interact with you so in the chat let us know do you prefer titles or without and again there's no right or wrong answer we're all different learners we prefer different learning styles and we prefer to work on different skills so I'm kind of curious how what you guys think of subtitles do you enjoy using them do you not enjoy using them do you use them sometimes so do you prefer subtitles or without write it in the chat let me know so there are very there are a lot of benefits I think to using subtitles and that first one is a better understanding because it complements our other language skills so it complements you know our reading skills definitely which I will get to in a moment it complements our listening skills it can compliment our grammar skills because we are able to see the syntax of a language and syntax is just the way that words are ordered in a sentence so there are many skills that it can complement if we are using subtitles it also allows because of this because we're getting this extra reading skill that were able to use it allows information to be processed more easily we're able to understand it a little better so again depending on your learning style depending on where you are at and your level of English if you are a high beginner or low intermediate or if you're an advanced learner it's going to depend on what you want to do and how much it can help you so so many I usually prefer subtle because I can easily understand exactly thank you for sharing with us it does make it easy to understand where you're at throughout this process that quote it's kind of an expression maybe a bit of a proverb that it says we must learn to walk before we can run that basically whenever you are learning something whether it's learning a language or you're learning how to play the piano you start at step one and you go through a process and maybe get to step 20 you don't just go from 1 to 20 there is an in-between period so when you are learning a language you're a beginner and then an intermediate and then advanced so personally I think subtitles can really help bridge a gap if you are a high beginner or low intermediate learner I think it can help immensely because it gives you the ability to watch things that maybe you normally would not be able to watch on your own just listening to and understand completely so it really helps at that level to be able to sit down and watch an entire movie or to watch a TV series and really understand what's happening and really stay with it so subtitles can really be useful in that way have some people kind of prefer subtitles especially when I watch movies because they talk very fast exactly oftentimes I'm going to get to that also as well about colloquial speech which is more informal the way people speak out on the streets or just casually with each other many times people tend to speak very fast so subtitles can be useful so a better understanding is what it can give many of us if we are learning the language again if you are just joining us say hello in the chat let us know where you're from what you're doing today and join our conversation about subtitles so the next reason why the next benefit of using subtitles as I said before is it improves our reading and literacy skills and I think it's very obvious why it would do that because you are reading you are reading and you're having to read at a quicker pace you're having to read at the pace that people are speaking so I think it really helps improve our reading skills and my question for you you can let us know in the chat is do you feel like you read enough personally I feel that reading is it's a little bit of a lost art nowadays I think people tend to spend less time reading and more time watching now that we have you know social media and all the internet and so many different options out there or I think an issue for me is that I'll still read I'll just read in smaller increments so

I'll find something online and I'll read it it's a short article and then that's it so I'm still reading but I'm reading less I feel like nowadays so how do you feel like you get to read enough and are you satisfied with the amount of reading that you do because when it comes to language learning I think reading is definitely undervalued as far as the benefit that we get from reading books reading articles reading stories I think it helps so much and the reason I think it really helps so much is because again you're more likely to remember the material that if you are just listening then chances are there's a good chance that you might forget the next day or a few days later if you're reading there's a better chance that you're going to remember and because of that it reinforces that knowledge that you're gaining by listening to somebody talk in a video and also watching them because again you're watching a movie or TV show or even on YouTube you are watching something and you can use the captions or the subtitles are said I read almost nothing all right so again a lot of us depends on you know our time our schedules maybe we don't get enough time to read as much as we like so again subtitles are a way that we can practice those reading skills and while we're doing other things while you are watching something so you get to do two birds in one stone which is an idiom that means you get to do two things and accomplish two things at the same time so the next benefit that I have for you is somebody you know you had mentioned earlier that people talk very fast because a lot of times they're using informal speech and that's why when you're using subtitles and you get to see the words that everybody is saying you get to learn new words and phrases because you are learning these colloquial expressions such as idioms such as phrasal verbs and not only learning them but learning when to use them so oftentimes you might hear somebody say a phrasal verb but it's that preposition at the end that if you don't hear that then it can completely change the meaning and if you're using subtitles you could see that oh okay they said put on which is very different than the meaning of put out or put up so it can really help you understand and learn these new words and phrases and get to see when to use them so my question oh I had my question for you guys that I want you to put in the chat and let us know can you tell us share with us what is a new word or phrase that you recently learned all right what's a new word or phrase that you recently learned share it with us because maybe somebody else does not know that word so share it with us in the chat or if you're watching this later write that word in the comment because again when you write this word that you that you recently learned you are reinforcing your ability to remember that word so please write it in the chat what is a new word or phrase that you have learned so again somebody pearl just shared it it does help me improve my reading speed pronunciation and increased vocabulary yes there are many benefits and especially I think the reading speed is a huge one the other thing that I wanted to tell you about with learning new words and phrases was the subject specific vocabulary so I have an example for you if you are watching a TV series that has to do with a hospital or doctors they're going to use a lot of medical vocabulary and if you're using subtitles a lot of this you know many of these words because it is very subject specific it is about medicine a lot of these words you may not have heard before so instead of just listening to the somebody say the word and maybe you're not under you're not sure how that word is spelled if you're using subtitles then you'll really get to see the word and then maybe you can look it up if you really want to know what it means and then there you go you've just learned a new word because they're really talking about subject specific vocabulary depending on maybe the TV show or the movie or the YouTube video that you might be watching hi from Turkey almost 6 p.m. yes it's getting late it is almost dinnertime so this is another example I used to show my students Grey's Anatomy so Grey's Anatomy is a TV series I don't think it's still running it's a bit older but it is about you know doctors in the hospital so they use a lot of that specific vocabulary yesterday I came across the word enigma excellent yes that is a good word stood me up that is a good phrasal verb idiom expression that you can use so if somebody stands somebody up that they basically they make plans and then they don't show up which is not good so again you can learn using subtitles you can learn the new words these new phrases and it really really really helps and again I'm not saying that you have to use subtitles all the time it's up to you this is your decision but I think it is good to mix it up and even if you do understand most of the stuff just you know throw the subtitles on practice those skills the reading the other the last thing that I wanted to show you is some of the other benefits of using subtitles and the question that I have for you this time is how often do you guys usually use subtitles how often do you use them do you never use them do you seldom use them do you sometimes use them or do you often use them or always tell us how often do you use subtitles and do you like using subtitles but there are other benefits and other reasons why we might use subtitles the first one I have up there is the accent maybe you are watching something and the accent is difficult to understand this has happened to me in watching some movies even in English I'll give you an example I was watching a long time ago there was a movie British film it's called Lock Stock and Two Smoking Barrels good movie by the way if you want to watch it but it is about it takes place in London and these guys in the movie they have this very very thick they have those thick cockney accent and especially at the beginning it was a little difficult to understand so I turned on the subtitles and I was watching it was a movie in English but I was watching it with subtitles because again it was helping me understand a little better what exactly was going on and what exactly was being said so if the accent if you're watching something and you're not familiar with the accent whether it's an American accent a British accent South African accent it does help to use subtitles that is a benefit sometimes if you are watching something and the video quality is not that good and you don't have the visual reference so that you understand what's happening it's good to use subtitles also maybe you might be watching something that the audio is not very good and that can help when you're using subtitles so that you don't miss what is being said pearl said almost every time watching The Big Bang Theory that is excellent that is a funny show it is a good show to watch and if you're using subtitles again you can make it easier to understand because even in that show it's a you know more of a casual it's a comedy show they're using specific vocabulary because it is about scientists so they're using some of those more technical terms probably vocabulary words that people don't use in everyday English Stella hi from Argentina hello how are you excellent thanks for joining us again these are some of the benefits that you get from using subtitles so again in the chat or the comments let us know how often you like using subtitles and why you think it is beneficial like hearing from you guys the last thing you might have noticed I don't know if you've seen our if our in our video lessons we always try to write in put English captions in there so that if you want to use subtitles when you watch our lessons they are available to you in English we don't do that with these live lessons mostly because they are very long they're 20 to 30 minutes and it would take hours and hours to put those in there YouTube does automated captions but with our regular lessons that come out on Tuesdays we put those English subtitles in there so my last request to you if you are interested in helping us out in any way shape or form again you can help tribute subtitles in your native language because this makes it more accessible to everyone now I know that you might be thinking like oh well if you're going to use subtitles you should use English and I think that is true I think it's more helpful to use English especially when you're watching an English instructional video however again remember the quote that I talked to you about at the beginning it says that said you know before we can run we have to learn how to walk so if you are at a beginner level or if you are at a higher beginner level and you want to watch some English instructional video they might be that person might be more comfortable using subtitles in their own native language again so they can understand everything and I completely understand that and it would help us if you are interested to contribute some subtitles in your native language I've put some instructions up there how to do it if you have a video of ours that you enjoyed you can go to the video and then down below the screen there's that little gear icon there's that little wheel you just click on that and you could select subtitles and it says add subtitles and CC and from there it will take you and you can put in the subtitles for us and contribute to our community our lessons which again will help others enjoy our videos and help us spread the word which is very important and we would truly appreciate it so again this was a little short lesson Oh from the Dominican Republic excellent awesome we got people from everywhere thanks for joining us again thanks for joining us we're kind of wrapping things up at this point sorry about that but we appreciate you guys tuning in if you have any other questions or comments please we're going to publish this video write them in the comment section we enjoy reading them we enjoy interacting and talking to you guys so write those in the comments and we will get back to you if you enjoyed our lessons please like and share and you can also check out our social media Facebook Twitter Instagram snapchat we are posting new stuff every day questions quizzing you giving you information to help you practice and improve your English skills so again thank you guys for watching thanks for joining us today we appreciate it we will be back next Saturday with another live lesson and we have another video coming out on Tuesday so any other comments let us know and we will get back to you but thank you for watching and joining us have a wonderful rest of your day alright thanks so much we'll see you next time

Using the Past Tense | Learn the Simple Past, Past Continuous, & Present Perfect

all right what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is the place you want to be because we are all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills and the way we're going to do that today we have a fun lesson for you because we're going to talk to you about three different verb tenses I'm going to talk to you about the simple past the past Progressive and the past perfect that's right I'm going to talk to you about all three of those verb tenses now I'm not going to go into a very deep dive into these verb tenses we have done some lessons like that in the past and I will link those up above in the cards and I highly encourage you to go check those out what I want to do today is this we're going to talk about the verb tenses how they're used when we use them

I also want to share with you some of the signal words that you will see when you see these words then you'll think okay this is the verb tense that I should use and after that we are going to practice I want you guys to practice your skills so I have some questions for you I will ask the questions and you guys need to choose the correct verb tense are you going to use the simple past the past the past continuous or the present perfect so we got a lot going on and I want you guys to be in I want you guys to interact with the lesson even if you're watching this later on use the comment section WR sentence and and actually make it more active learning that is what this is all about so I want to take a a quick moment and give some shoutouts here give some shoutouts to everybody who's here right now uh what's up Jean Maya uh I wna sorry if I miss some names or mispronounce names I apologize Ira hello Hugh how are you uh Risa suie uh Baka jafil gosia star night fancy Club avar marillo welcome long thank you guys so much for joining me today and you know let's let's just have some fun we're going to be talking about those verb tenses and a f and a question that you might ask because this is more of a grammar lesson is why should we learn these tenses all right very simple question simple answer all right why should we learn the different verb tenses because we want to know when things happen all right verbs are like that that's like the main part of the meal in a sentence it tells us so much information because it tells us when these things are happening is it happening in the future is it happening right now or is it happening in the past that's why it's so important to learn these different verb tenses understand how to use that so that that we just improve our overall fluency whenever you want to speak English or even if you're listening it's going to help your listening comprehension it helps all of the language skills so learning the verb tenses it's just so important all right so let's begin with the simple past okay so the these are sometimes when we whoops over here here we go when we use the simple past when something happened once at a specific time okay it's a finished action it happened once and then it's done so for example I read a book last night this is what happened I read a book it's finished and I use the simple past so I will put the question to you what did you do last night give me some sentences let me know in the chat or even in the comments what did you do last night give give me a sentence use the simple past easy enough we also use the simple past right here to talk about something happened again and again remember this is a finished action this is finished but it it was repeated it happened more than once and this is when you might find it being used with adverbs of frequencies always usually sometimes rarely never or in this example I said every Monday okay every Monday I went to soccer practice I don't do it anymore but before I went every

Monday all right it was a repeated action it happened again and again now next one is something that was true for a period of time so it it's again it's it's finished it's true for a period of time but not anymore so my example is we lived in the Bay Area for 3 years that's a picture of Yana and I in front of the Golden Gate Bridge it's a very very iconic spot in the Bay Area so we lived in the San Francisco Bay area for 3 years we were there for that period of time but we're not there anymore okay so so we lived there before so let's see some of the example sentences thank you guys for sharing um I went there yesterday sure you could say that I watched the the last episodes of my series great sentence I watch videos on YouTube excellent hope you watch some of our videos uh I slept last night of course great uh I sold my motorbike yesterday all right interesting wow um I watched Bohemia rap City movie oh thank you I haven't we haven't seen that we want to see it but those are some great great example sentences Sunrise says I made dinner Perfect all right this is what I want you guys to do I want you to keep practicing even if it's easy all right because so many times students are always I need to learn something new I need to learn something new and it's so easy to forget that we need to review these simple basic rules whether it's reviewing simple grammar or even vocabulary it's always good to view so let's look at some of the signal words I've already mentioned that when you see these adverbs of frequency again we use the simple past but don't think it's only for the simple past because you can use adverbs of frequency for any verb tense but sometimes if you're talking about if you know the situation is talking about the past and you're using that adverb of frequency you can use the the simple past like I always so for example I said we lived in the Bay Area Yan and I we lived in San Francisco we always went for a walk around our neighborhood that's true we usually ate uh breakfast at on the weekends at one of our favorite uh restaurants it's called Cafe Roma sometimes sometimes we went uh we sometimes we hiked around in the North Bay uh the Dipsy Trail if you ever go there and we never we never swam in the Pacific Ocean okay that's something we never did I just used the simple past for all of those adverbs of frequency to talk about our time in the Bay Area it's a finished action the next one uh definite points in time there are a lot of signal words for this I'm not I wasn't going to give you all of them but uh yesterday last week last month again we you you hear this used so often last year those signal words tell us okay we're talking about the past and those indefinite points in time if you've mentioned a long time ago a few months ago something happened it's a finished action you might use the simple past okay excellent so let's continue let's keep this train rolling along and talk about the past continuous so the past continuous and the the grammar you know that we use the helping verb to be and then the main verb Plus in okay we'll as we go through this I'll talk show you that so it's an action that happened around a specific time it might not be right at this time but it happened around this time so my question is like what were you doing last night okay what were you doing one thing to keep in mind here and this is where it becomes important for listening all right I already asked you in the last question I said what did you do what did you do last night and you would respond in the simple past this time I'm asking a question in the past continuous therefore when the questions in the past continuous most people will just have a tendency like I would just I I wouldn't even think about it I would automatically respond using the past continuous now I could use the past simple there's nothing wrong with that but it's just just something to keep in mind about listening the way when you're listening for the verb tense often times you automatically just answer with that verb tense so if I somebody says you know oh what were you doing last night I'd say you know yeah I I was reading a book I would answer the question using the past continuous because that's what the question was in so now again I'm going to put it to you guys what were you doing last night I want you to give me an answer using the past continuous preferably an answer that's different from the one before so just tell me you know what were you doing last night and again the thing that makes at the past continuous is that you are talking about an action that is a continuous action it doesn't just stop suddenly it's something that happens for you know some period of time maybe 5 minutes 20 minutes 3 hours it's a continuous action so we used it when talking about around a specific time we also use it to show something continued for a period of time she was dancing all night again we're using the helping verb to be in the past was the verb Dance plus ing she was dancing all night I was reading all night um they were watching TV all night there's many ways that we could use this and the last one that I wanted to highlight the past continuous with verb showing change or growth the city was changing rapidly so this really depends on the verb that you're using so those verbs that show change or growth would be like verbs like develop verbs like grow verbs like change all right when you see those verbs you might often see them in the past continuous all right let's let's check out some of uh your guys example sentences uh Dion I was doing something maybe all right sure yeah we were all doing something but that's still great example uh last night I was watching a movie uh until 4 a.m. Malika wow all right I guess hopefully uh I guess you enjoyed that movie uh I was watching your channel last night thank you long um I was studying perfect um let's see what else we have um w we are watching from guala my students ey please say hi hello Advanced English Academy what's up thank you guys for for joining us at this time perfect uh let's see I was uh I was at work all day so again using the past continuous I was working all day past continuous that ing uh what else we have I was studying English I was chatting with my friends um I was hanging around all right great Lew perfect perfect example so that is wonderful excellent so again keep keep writing those sentences it's always good to practice practice practice practice uh so let's check out some of the signal words now this is where it might get a little more complex or a little more difficult so the first one I want to talk to about are the subordinating conjunctions while and when the reason I chose these two is because we we're talking about a complex sentence all right that's one independent clause and then one

dinner okay you see that while in this case we're talking about two actions that are happening at the same time she was watching the baby while I cook dinner she was watching the baby that is the independent clause while I cook dinner that is the dependent clause and together they make that complex sentence now let me tell you like when when we use them so usually if we're using while and when and you're talking about two actions that that are happening at the same time often you would use the continuous tense with the action that's happening longer so for example she was watching the baby that is a long action for those of you who don't know we just had a baby girl she's now 5 weeks old that is a longer action because we are continuously watching the baby all right while I cook dinner that is a shorter action so I use the simple past now in this case you you could switch that around and nobody's going to correct you and say you know I was cooking dinner while she watched the baby that's perfectly fine because cook and watch those are continuous actions often times and maybe I should have given you this as an example when we use this when and while you're talking about one longer continuous action and then maybe some very very short action that happens once like for example a knock somebody knocked at the door she was or like I could say I was cooking dinner when someone knocked at the door in that case knocked is the simple past and it's just a very short action that's not going to be in the continuous tense so the subordinating conjunctions while or when in those complex sentences you often see the past continuous and the past simple used together okay the next one is time Expressions when telling a story I say time Expressions because again there's so many of those yesterday a few days ago last week uh a few months ago there there's many time expressions and when you're telling a story I think it's just natural that we often start with the past continuous because you're trying to capture the moment what was happening at that time several days ago I was visiting my friend and blah blah blah blah blah something happened all right uh yesterday I was watching TV when all right something happened so often when you go and you're telling a story you might hear people start with the past continuous and in those cases they will depending on the story you end up switching between the past continuous and the past simple and you may even throw the present perfect in there which is what we're going to talk about right now so let's look at the present perfect so again this is just very it's a very just quick overview of these verbs because then I want to practice so the present perfect something started in the past and continued to the present okay so it's talking about the past but something continued to the present in this case two words that are very important for and since when you use for you're talking about a period of time when you use since you're talking about a point in time for example I have played guitar for 10 years all right I started in the past and I've continued to the present for 10 years if I want to use since I'm using a point in time we've lived in Budapest since 2017 that is my point in time but since 2017 started in the past and it continues up until the present so again question to you guys I want you to tell me use give me a sentence in the present perfect tell me something that that you have done that you started in the past and continue to the present and I want you to use either for or since remember four is a period of time for 10 years four 10 weeks for one month and since with a point in time often a year or maybe even a month since March since 2018 okay give me a sentence what is something you start in the past and continue to the present um and the next one all right something happened once repeatedly at an unspecified time I did forget to mention because I didn't go too much I didn't go into the grammar structure but when we're talking about the present perfect we're using have as our helping verb and then the main verb is the past participle all right I have lived I have played that is the structure of the present perfect so something that happened once either once at an unspecified time or repeatedly at an unspecified time I could say I'm having a conversation with somebody and I say oh yeah I have lived in South Korea I've lived in South Korea it's true I have lived in South Korea do do you know when no there's no time I didn't put a Time on there or maybe I'm talking about like how are we going to get somewhere and somebody says oh you know we should take the bus I'm like ah we've taken the bus twice this week we have done this action repeatedly I didn't tell you when I just told you how many times we've taken the bus twice all right so let's see some of these example sentences all right um so I've lived in Indonesia since I was born excellent all right perfect Ira I have worked um for four years all right uh we've lived in Jakarta okay yeah you've worked for four years I have studied English since 2017 excellent marillo uh let's see I have played chess for ages good good perfect um so we say yes I have eaten lunch all right something that happened we don't know when in that case that's an unspecified time perfect so those are some great examples thank you guys thank you for sharing let's look at some signal words for the present perfect all right so if we're talking about adverbs of frequency always is

is one that uh we often use it with but especially those next two ever and never so ever in case you don't know what it means it means basically of all time you're talking about all time and you would say ever often you hear this as a question have you ever all right have you ever done something have you ever gone somewhere and then you're talking about have you ever in all of your time have you ever and then the other adverb of frequency you often use the present perfect with would be never because you're talking about something that you have never done

I have never taken drugs again question to you what is something that you have never done all right tell me something what what is something you have never done I have never and then use that past participle all right it's good to practice practice practice practice and then the next part is when you're talking about like from from past to present remember an action that started in the past continued to the present I've already mention this these two words for and since when you learn the present perfect this this is usually the first place you start you start with those two words for and since what have you done for a period of time or since a point in time I have studied English for two years a period of time I have studied English since 2017 a point in time all right so excellent let's see what you guys uh have got all right um Leta I have ever visited maybe I have you could say I have never visited Italy um have you ever been to bogot uh yes yes I have been to bogot I I was in bogot in 2008 all right I could say that so uh again ever is often used with that question all right have you ever um let's see I have never visited Italy uh excellent okay I've never visited Italy I have never been to New York great I suggest you go it's a great City cool place great state I have never eaten Sushi oh you're missing out uh definitely definitely try some we love eating sushi I have never traveled to Sweden we have never traveled to Sweden either all right but it is on our list all right I've never gone to the US OFA excellent great example um those are perfect all right again th those are common uses of the present perfect if somebody says have you ever or if you're saying something you know I have never done something all right I just want to let you guys know if you like what we do if you enjoy our lessons you can connect with us again check us out on patreon we have some cool rewards I'll leave a link in the description and it's just uh it's just another way to connect with us and be a part of our community plus I'll be your best friend all right so now that you know now that you know those verb tenses we did a quick review of the those verb tenses the past simple the past continuous and the present perfect let's practice all right what we're going to do is again I am going to give you guys a sentence I want you to I'm going to give you the verb all right tell me what are you going to use are you going to use the simple past are you going to use the past continuous or are you going to use the present perfect all right and just want to give a special shout out thank you very much marillo yes for the Super Chat we really really appreciate it thank you guys thank thank you so much marillo you rock all right you just made my day thank you thank you thank you all right so your first question are you guys ready I want you to write your answers in the chat don't be shy even if you don't know I encourage you to practice to try and give an answer and if you're wrong that's okay doesn't matter don't worry about making mistakes ready here we go all right I'm giving you this all right this is probably easy because I've been really I've been emphasizing this the last 10 minutes all right you ever wish all right upon a shooting star okay so what what do you think all right there there is a key in there that's really going to help you out and I I probably don't need to tell you but it's the punctuation okay so write it I I want you to write don't don't just write the tense try if you can't write it out what what would you say how would you use that verb tense if you can try to write the full sentence I know that's a little more challenging to type it because I don't give you much time all right so what do you think you ever wish okay upon a shooting star so again I told you the key is that punctuation that question so now you know it's a question and remember I told you ever all right ever we we often use that with questions with the present perfect I know some of you are saying present perfect yes that's great try to try to write it out so what would you guys say yes so many of you jelle Malika uh Assad uh Asma thank you thank you thank you you guys are right you guys rock that have you ever wished upon a star so again have you ever wished upon a star Remember Have is that helping verb that helping verb with the present perfect wished is our past participle have you ever wished upon a star next one are you guys ready next question is this right here um I M through the park when you m all right I M through the park when you m right I I'm you know I'm telling somebody this sentence what am I going to use all right there's there's two in here all right so they're both highlighted in blue what what are you going to use all right and try to again try to write these out don't just tell me the verb tense try to write them out I through the park when you m okay we we talked about this remember that key word that key word in there is when when is the keyword it is a complex sentence okay so what do you guys think all right yes booya you guys rocked it all right thank youis H Assad perfect uh starry night yes remember I told you that you're talking about a complex sentence with when one one part's going to be that longer action is going to be in the past even if you guys are watching this later again I encourage you make it and active exercise write your answer in the comments the comments think of it it's like a piece of paper that you're just able to write on all right excellent perfect uh all right Olivia Risa Sunrise all right so this is what I would say because we have some other other answers remember twice already it's a repeated action most commonly say oh we need to watch the movie again I've seen it twice already now if you use the past simple all right yeah I saw it twice already you you might grammatically you know it's it's it's fine but it's not as common again because you're talking about a repeated action and also already that is another key word I didn't really talk to you about that but already you use it often with the the present perfect you have done something already so we need to watch the new movie I've seen it twice already all right I'm not going to watch it again I've seen it twice already the next question question are you ready all right have you ever taken a road trip so again this is two people asking having a conversation and somebody says have you ever taken a road trip sure we M won last year the verb is take have you ever taken a road trip sure we won last year all right what what do you guys think how what how are you going what what verb tense are you going to use to correct to correctly complete that sentence all right kind of watching the chat and doing this at the same time can get a little confusing sometimes all right have you ever taken a road trip sure we M won last year the key word in there is last year which means yes you guys rocked it you're going to use the simple past that that makes the most sense we took one last year it is a finished action all right it didn't continue to the present so you're going to use the simple past have you ever taken a road trip sure we took one last year and this is where it can get challenging because in English you you're constantly changing verb tenses so the question was asked in the present perfect and you gave an answer in the in the simple past that is normal that is natural all right let's do another one this is kind of uh a question again the two people having a conversation there we go all right again there there's two parts to this how M your leg and then somebody would answer and say i m in Colorado so the first one I'm giving you the the subject and the verb because it's a question you break all right what how are you going to complete that question how M your leg and then somebody would give the answer oh i m in Colorado ski that is the verb that you're using for that one SK key what do you guys think all right again I think it's good to practice this question and answer question and answer because when you're having a conversation you're doing a lot of that you're asking a lot of questions and you're giving a lot of answers so what what do you think all right how M your leg i m in Colorado all right what do you think all right this is a little maybe a little more challenging I see some good answers all right remember all right so the first one something happened you see this leg it the leg is broken okay and you're asking okay it's a finished action so we're going to use the simple past all right but remember how did you break your leg because we're using we're going to use do in the as the auxiliary verb the helping verb for that question in the past how did you break your leg and the answer in the past continuous because it was it's a continuous action all right this is something that you were doing I was skiing in Colorado again then it becomes kind of like that storytelling how did you break your leg oh I was skiing in Colorado and then I I went off this jump and I landed bad and I ended up breaking my leg okay so again you you end up switching sometimes between that that past past per past continuous and the simple past but in this case as a conversation well how did you break your leg I was skiing in Colorado excellent excellent excellent so if you guys if you guys rock that lesson please let me know and hit that like button down below if you enjoyed that practice again also one thing I wanted to to show you guys is if you want to connect with us another thing you can do is check out uh subscribe to our newsletter we send out some cool cool cool stuff plus we let you know more about when these live lessons are going to happen There's the link right there I just threw it in the chat all right so thank you guys so much for being here with me today I hope you enjoyed this lesson I hope you learned something new about those different verb tenses we talked about the past simple the past continuous the present perfect all things that are happening in the past so please if you enjoyed it like and share the lesson hit us up in the comments because we just love hearing from you guys so again give some more shout outs to people who here thank you thank you thank you merillo again especially for the Super Chat we love it we appreciate it thank you uh Ellas ulissa ludvika Malika Olivia Rosalinda Nares uh suszie Ira Joyce Esther so many excellent so many wonderful people here wow big class today um loose bres jadil thank you thank you for joining us Saba star night Jr justella Risa I hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend keep practicing keep studying keep up the good work and I will see you next time

VERB TENSE QUIZ | Grammar Lesson for Intermediate to Advanced Learners

hey everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which if this is your first time here we are all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and the way that we are going to do that today is this is this is all about practice and I am going to give you a verb tense quiz that's right we are going to practice your knowledge of the different verb tenses now if you have not seen the lesson that we did before which was all about the twelve different verb tenses I suggest you check that out and I am going to throw a link to it right here in the chat so that last lesson about the twelve different verb tenses is what's leading us into this lesson right here in which we are going to practice our skills because practice makes practice makes perfect I almost screwed that up practice makes perfect the more you do something the better you will be so what I want you guys to do is I want you to participate in this lesson that is what interactive English is all about even if you are watching this later I want you to write your answer in the comments section use it like it's a piece of paper write your answers participate in the lesson and also just tell me hello say what's up tell me your name I just want to hear from you guys give you guys a quick little shout out hello hello lollie kelly maria lydia Baeza sahara olivia hello hello welcome thank you guys for joining me I will give more shoutouts as we go through the lesson and the quiz but let's just get into it so the first set of questions that I have for you it's gonna get it will get more difficult as we go along but the first part of it it is multiple choice so here is your first question okay and I've blanked out the part I want you to tell me which answer best completes the sentence a B or C or if you're very fast at typing just write the whole sentence because I think that that's really useful that will help you out so I hmm

English since 2005 alright and there yes there is me over there my goofy picture I just tried to find something a picture where I was looking ridiculous so I M English since 2005 what do you think which of those verb tenses will best complete the answer yes excellent Aditya sorry if I mispronounced names Angela Leonardo Jacqueline the answer is C I have been teaching English since 2005 this is an example of the present perfect progressive it's talking about an action that started in the past has continued to the present and will likely continue into the future because I will continue teaching English I have been teaching one of the key words that I wanted to point out in here is the word since when you see words like since and for that that can indicate the perfect tense so in this case we are going to use the present perfect progressive next one here we go from time to time we mmm for dinner okay from time to time we mmm for dinner what what do you think best completes that sentence I tried to find an image of this eating out wait we I was about to say the answer alright that's not the type of restaurant we typically go to but it was a fun image so I thought I would use it so again if you're just joining us I saw somebody come in it's okay Brenna if you're late no problem we are practicing your English skills this is a verb tense quiz all right what do you think which one completes the sentence yes new yen go Xie Carlo Syed excellent a eat out that is the correct answer from time to time we eat out for dinner we're talking about the present simple and the the hint that I tried to give you was that from time to time because from time to time that is an expression that means the same as sometimes sometimes from time to time they mean the same thing and that is that adverb of frequency will tell us the present simple it's something that's used to describe actions that are in the present and they are habitual they are factual so this is something that's that is habitual we do it from time to time all right are you ready for your next question which is this by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone mmm eating what do you guys think all right write your answer in the chat write your answer in the comments if you're watching this later I just want you to participate because that is the best way to improve your skills not just learning and listening but actually engaging with the lessons by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone mmm eating okay what what do you guys think all right what what do you what do you think Thank You Maria you're awesome - I think you're great as well so yes exactly as seeing some good answers yes lolly foo Leah sleepwalker Kate Wang Wang Tien Elena the answer is

C by the time I arrived at the restaurant everyone had already started eating so let's let's dissect this and talk about it in a little more detail this is an example of the past perfect one indicator is that already when you see already that also talks about more of the perfect tense so if this refers to two actions that are in the past one happened before the other so by the time I arrived at the restaurant all right this is my dependent clause this is my adverb clause and it is in the past the simple past arrived it's what happened before that everyone had already started eating I'm going to use the past perfect so before I arrived something else happened which is everyone had already started eating see is the correct answer great job you guys you guys are rocking this excellent that must mean maybe you guys also that lesson last week and you learned all of these verb tenses and you know them perfectly okay then next one I'm gonna I'm gonna try and go through this quickly too and just keep it moving right along I tried but the door just mmm open okay I tried but the door just mm open what what do you think which which verb best completes this sentence and again we're just starting out as we go through them they will get a bit more challenging a little more difficult as we continue going through these so let's see I tried but the door just mmm open all right think about if somebody is saying this to you all right the keyword in there are the key phrase I would say is I tried I tried I tried to do something but the door just mmm open all right the correct answer yes I'm gonna give it a couple shoutouts Mickey Elena Sarah who else has it [Music] perfect the correct answer is C I tried but the door just won't open it will not open I gave you an example like this last week which it is the future simple it describes actions that will happen in in the future but it expresses some it can express some sort of fact or certainty so in this case somebody that the key phrase is I tried somebody's trying to open the door but it's it's not opening and you're subscribing the situation of how this certainty what's it gonna be like in the future you know the door won't open the door just won't open I tried but the door just won't open so if this is some situation which you're in you're you're trying to do something but it's not going to happen you will use won't all right I tried to make a phone call but my phone it just it won't work all right so I tried but the door just won't open okay future simple ready next one okay lately mmm watching reruns of the office okay and this is uh this is a true story all right my wife and I you wanna and our little girl and me we we you know lately I don't want to say it I get close to actually telling you the answers lately mmm watching reruns of the office what do you think is the answer a B or C we've been we were we'd been which one do you think would be correct okay so alright lately hmm watching reruns of the office okay in this case the key word is lately that a verb is actually giving us some specific information it's telling us more information and yes we have some answers excellent Lally missus redundant who else ro Missa ticktick perfect Angela Omar the correct answer is a lately we've been watching reruns of The Office this is the present perfect progressive it's talking about with so we're doing it again because I've already asked you one with the present perfect progressive just kind of seeing you know trying to trick you throw you off a little bit it refers to actions that start in the past they continue to the present and and will likely continue into the future lately we've been watching reruns off the office we have been present perfect progressive okay

the next one by the time this lesson ends you hmm the like button okay what do you think by the time this lesson ends you mmm the like button I'm trying to include all of you in this example so what do you think is the correct answer all right a B or C we would you say you will have hit you will be hitting or you will hit by the time this lesson ends okay what do you think is the correct answer a B or C and some of these yeah some of these verb tenses can be a bit challenging all right so again if you're just joining us we are doing a verb tense quiz and I want you guys to participate I want you to write your answers in the chat and even later use that comment section practice your English skills so we have some good answers by the time this lesson ends all right the answer is yes excellent job Chris Stefano alash Olivia perfect Natalie by the time this lesson ends you will have hit the like button a that is the correct answer we are talking about the future perfect and again when you see that by the time remember we had it in a question just like two questions ago by the time it's often used with a perfect tense maybe it's the past perfect in this case it's the future perfect by the time this lesson ends all right we have our dependent clause using the present simple which means our independent clause we're going to talk about the future you will have hit the like button two actions in the future one happens before the other so the action in the future the lesson ends well what will happen before that in the future you will have hit the like button I hope that you have already hit it but if you if you have not hit it please go ahead and and hit that like button let me know if you enjoy these quiz lessons the more I see those likes that

I know okay I need to do more of these quiz lessons people enjoy them it's great practice okay so again this is a little more challenging when we're talking about the future perfect by the time this lesson ends you will have hit the like button excellent let's look at the next one okay back in 2010 I mmm live in and that's true story I I'm trying to think I want to talk about this without giving it away all right what do you think would you say a used to be used to or see have used to which one do you think is correct this one I tried to I tried to be a little cute with and tried to maybe trick you a little bit I think you guys will do fine on this one back in 2010 all right I'm giving you the year I mmm live in Namibia and I said that's true if you don't know where Namibia is it is in southern Africa it is just northwest of South Africa it is a beautiful country that is me with my grade 11 English class all right that is in 2010 so yes excellent great perfect thank you for your answers mercs on Quique Alba's Ricardo Luna M RN the answer is be used - all right back in 2010 I use to live in Namibia I could just use if I wanted to use live as my main verb I just say you know back in 2010 I lived in Namibia it is an action that is complete it is finished so you would say be used to it is the past simple an action in the past that is finished alright it is finished in the past the reason I say it could be a little tricky is because used to and used to that what it means is again the meaning of the verb is something that you did in the past but you no longer do so I was trying to be a little tricky but you guys caught onto that you knew that you knew that all too well excellent alright here we go let's continue when her parents knocked on the door you guys can hear him out trying to simulate that knocking when her parents knocked on the door she mmm for work okay what do you guys think alright when her parents knocked on the door she mm-hmm for work would it be a will have already left be had already left see has already left again using that already like trying to use I like trying to use words that I think are common with the certain tenses all right that's why I'm doing this all right excellent thank you for your answers yes rumah Lally pronoun sorry again if I mispronounce names who else we got it's going so fast the shadows thank you for your answers Chris yes the answer is B all right when her parents knocked on the door there's that knock she had already left for work it is an example of the past perfect all right and again I want to give you that meaning down there if you're trying to figure out well what exactly is the past perfect it's talking about two actions that are in the past and one happened before the other so again like one action when her parents knocked on the door again knocked is in the past what happened before that she had already left for work now sometimes there's confusion between well when do I use what's the difference between the simple past and the past perfect if I use this sentence in the simple past when her parents knocked on the door she left for work and I just say it in the simple past then that makes me think well that these two things happened around the same time but in this case you want to give that extra information using the past perfect saying well she's not at home all right before the parents knocked on the door she had already left so in this case you definitely want to use the past perfect all right ready when he got to work everyone mmm in the conference room when he got to work everyone in the conference room what do you think a will meet B had met C was meeting alright which of those tenses which of those verbs best complete it's this sentence and again I would always encourage you try to put it into context all right think about it as though we're having a conversation or you're having a conversation with somebody and you know I say hey you know when he got to work everyone hmm in the conference room what do you guys think which best completes this sentence write your answer in the chat or even in the comments later I just want to hear from you I want you to participate so that you can practice and improve your English skills all right so I have some good answers yes Sabri Syed hanifa the shadows mr. Awlaki Nicosia Nika the answer is C when he got to work all right got that is in the past simple all right when he got to work that's my dependent clause everyone was meeting in the conference room all right past progressive when it can refer to two things refers to a continuous action at a specific time if I'm asking about a specific time in the past or talking about actions that were happening when another event occurred so for example you know what an event occurred he got to work all right what action was happening it was a continuous action so when he got to work you know he arrived there was a continuous action everyone was meeting because the meeting started in the past it's continued to when he got there and it's probably gonna continue on so when he got to work everyone was meeting in the conference room and I'm sure that he probably felt a bit embarrassed because he was late to the meeting it's not good sometimes to be late for these important meetings so hope you guys everyone got that one past progressive or as I think I said past continuous past progressive they mean the same thing progressive continuous it's the same all right at this time next week mmm another live lesson all right again there's that serious picture of me at this time next week hmm another live lesson this is actually an example that I used in the previous lesson so again if you have not seen that lesson check it out it really go through all of the verb tenses and give you some specific examples okay at this time next week mmm another live lesson what do you think it is hey I'll be teaching B I'll have taught or C I'll have been teaching what do you guys think write your answer in the chat write your answer in the comments I'm seeing some lovely answers alright yes Chris the the rubix Santi Sophia yes sleepwalker the answer is a at this time next week I'll be teaching another live lesson so again think about this it's the future progressive we're talking about a continuous action that happens at a specific time or actions that that will be happening when another event occurs in this case we're talking about a specific time I'm giving you that time at this time next week all right same time same place what continuous action will be happening I will be teaching I'll be teaching notice the form when you're talking about the progressive tense you're using the verb to be the main verb and ing I'll be teaching but in this case since it's the future you need that we'll all right I will be teaching another live lesson true story all right and I hope you guys will join me for that lesson okay so what we're gonna do now is we're gonna switch it up and now I'm gonna make it a little more difficult because I am NOT going to give you this is not going to be multiple choice anymore I'm not going to give you a B and C what I want you to do is you will need to write the correct verb tense I will give you the verb that you need to use in some cases I will give you the subject as well all right so let's go ahead and look at the next one so [Music] what mmm right now now one thing I will say I just noticed this the verb that I want you to use is do the subject is you I forgot to put the subject so it should say in parentheses you do so I should say the subject and the verb you do I want you to write the question or or write what that verb tense should be what mmm right now you do that that is what you should be in parentheses okay excellent yes go Co D shi-wan perfect all right so the key word there is right now that's going to tell us that we would be asking this question in the continuous tense in the progressive tense the present progressive an action that's happening right now it's not yet complete if somebody were to say hey what are you doing right now what are you doing oftentimes I put right now so that you would know what kind of answer I wanted oftentimes somebody would just ask what are you doing hey what are you doing perhaps if they're on the phone they might say hey what are you doing right now and make it a little more precise but often if you're just having conversation they just say hey what are you doing what are you doing right now all right let's look at the next one in this case I gave you the subject I hmm took Guatemala all right and if you can't see the picture yes this is a picture of me from 2009 I believe it was ten years ago visiting Tikal in Guatemala which is these these ruins they're amazing it's a beautiful country shout-out to anybody in Guatemala right now who's watching who's watching this lesson all right hope you're having a wonderful weekend so I mmm to Guatemala okay how what do you think is the best way if somebody if you and I are having a conversation and I want to tell you this information what would I say I to Guatemala all right what what do you think okay I'm saying some some different answers in there but yes Lorenzo excellent one Lin O'Dare it's going so fast Aaron Wow I have been to Guatemala present perfect all right we're talking about in this case an action at the in the past at an unspecified time now you could say exactly some people said went and they use the simple past grammatically that is correct I could say yeah I went to Guatemala but the reason why I wanted the present perfect is because again we often use the past simple when you're giving a time let's say you know if I said 2009 I went to Guatemala in 2009

that is a completed action I'm giving you the time but in this case it's an unspecified time so I think commonly people would use the present perfect when they're talking about places they have traveled places they have been places they have visited notice I just used the present perfect when I said all of those have been have traveled have visited present perfect unspecified time I've been to Guatemala all right next one all right we're just going through these going through these um mmm learning English with us alright now I've taken out a bit more information I did give you the subjects in the verb you and joy what is the first part of that question what do you think hmm learning English with us I've given you the subject I've given you the verb hmm learning English with us what question am I asking you all right and there there is that's me and my beautiful wife you wanna and we are standing in front of the Golden Gate Bridge because we used to live in the San Francisco Bay Area if you guys haven't been all right there again using the present perfect if you haven't been you should go it's a beautiful beautiful city alright um let's see yes go see a fool eeeh perfect alright again some of you writing part of the question but not all of it [Music] Elijah yes do you enjoy ok do you enjoy learning with us alright do you enjoy learning English with us that is my question for you it is a question in the present simple describing action in the present habitual factual I'm just asking you like it'd be like a yes or no question do you enjoy learning English with us remember the main verb is enjoy you enjoy learning in this case is a gerund okay do you enjoy learning English with us and if you guys do I really hope that you enjoy learning English with us and if you guys do enjoy learning English with us and want to support what we do here at interactive English check out our patreon page you can join the patreon family there are some cool rewards check that out there's a link down below in the description but I'm gonna throw a link right here just for all of you if you would like to support interactive English and the things our lessons here we'd really appreciate it you can check that out if you don't that's okay alright we're always gonna be here for you we just want to help all of you guys practice and improve your English skills so here we go the next one this is another example from the previous lesson alright by 2067 we hmm

Lasha yes okay I see another one Daniel so four words all right we're talking about the future so we know that we're gonna need to put we'll all right by 2067 that's talking about a point in the future and we're referencing a continuous action perfect tense all right we'll have we'll have been and then it's a continuous action teaching will have been teaching on YouTube for 50 years this is an example of the future perfect progressive and like I said this is this is more advanced grammar because it's not in every conversation you're not going to views the future perfect progressive but in this case if you're talking about these actions two points in the future all right then this would be a time when you would use it by 2067 what's happening all right we will have been teaching for 50 years if we continue all right it's a continuous action that goes up until 2060 seven and maybe we will continue I hate to break it to you probably we won't be teaching by 2060 seven because that would mean that I am 40 I think I would be 88 years old oh goodness I certainly hope that I'm not still teaching on YouTube at 88 but who knows never know life is full of surprises let's look at it alright okay this actually no no I don't know why I'm laughing this is a very serious this is a very serious sentence all right this past month I mmm every other day and I plan to keep it up and you know I I tried I included a picture of myself in this you can see that picture down below I'm getting good results this past month I mmm every other day and I plan to keep it up okay that's that's part of the key and I plan to keep it up alright so think about it this is you think about you and I we're having a conversation and I'm just telling you hey this past month I mmm every other day and I plan to keep it up what do you think all right the verb is exercise the main verb is exercise all right I I haven't seen it yes all right Harry excellent great job what is she won all right room yes we're talking about something that started in the past all right I've continued up until the present and when I say I plan to keep it up I'm going to continue in the future I have been exercising every other day and I plan to keep it up to actions that again we're talking about actions that started in the past and they have continued to the present and as you can see again look I'm getting great results from this I was laughing it's such a bad Photoshop job but I just thought it was funny anyway all right let's look at the next one if you can't laugh at yourself who can you laugh at alright that's what I always say this is another question why hmm Mia heads up last night all right you this is what I want you to use you not give okay how are you going to complete that question using that's the subject you it's in the negative and the main verb is give me a heads up last night and this is an expression that I like to use you're talking about a heads up is just the that you're you're making something known you're telling someone about something like some some kind of information all right I I don't want to to say the answer so I will tell you all right so what would you say yes Eddie exactly your name perfect la1 perfect yes Lally why didn't you give me a heads up last night again last night it's gonna tell you it's the past we need to use the helping verb do it's just gonna be conjugated in the past why didn't you or you know why didn't you give me a heads up last night past simple it describes an action again in the past so something happened and well actually in this case something didn't happen and I wanted this person to give me a heads up to tell me some information so that I could be prepared they did not tell me so I said hey you know why didn't you give me a heads up why didn't you tell me that I had to do this extra work why didn't you give me a heads up I need to know all right so yes if we're talking about giving someone a heads up you were giving them some information to make them aware of something so for example I'd say you know I'm gonna I just want to give you guys a heads up that we will that here we go follow my verb we will be doing a live lesson next Saturday I just want to give you a heads up let you know about that I hope that makes sense all right next one the phone mmm somebody answer it what do you guys think all right what do you think the phone mmm somebody answer it what do you what do you guys think how would you complete this sentence think of it like your this situation is happening all right what would you tell somebody if if you were saying this sentence what would you say to them the phone hmm somebody answer it all right so yes um let me see it's going so quickly all right remember the phone is singular yes Ricardo Lorenzo Eddie Omar so if this is like this would be happening now because the the key is somebody answer it I'm telling somebody answer the phone so this is happening now in the present which means we're going to use that present progressive tense the phone is ringing all right remember the formula you're going to use when you're talking about things that are happening now all right we're going to use the verb to be plus the main verb with the ing is ringing the phone is ringing somebody answer it present progressive something that's happening now it's not complete so this is a common incident you might hear this if you're watching a movie or a TV show and this is happening and say hey somebody's phone is ringing answer it pick up the phone are you ready here we go this is I think this is a little more difficult people mmm in the chat when I began this lesson all right people mmm in the chat when I began this lesson the verb that I want you to use is talk all right people mmm in the chat when I started when I began this lesson now there are there are two different answers that you could give one of them is what there is one answer that I'm looking for all right there is one answer in specific that I'm looking for and I will tell you but there are two answers that you could give actually most of you are giving the second answer that I thought of that's that is very common but okay so you could say this all right well yeah no people I've made a mistake sorry yes mostly everyone got it right people were talking in the chat when I began this lesson all right people were talking again it's a continuous action in the chat when something happened all right so it's talking about the it says again refers to continuous actions at a specific time all right or when they were happening when another event occurred so in this case it's not I'm not giving you a specific time I'm more talking about that event that occurred okay I began the lesson that is the event well what action was happening at that time and continuous what continuous action well when the event occurred I began this lesson people were talking people were talking in the chat the verb to be again past progressive plus the main verb ing all right here we go when this quiz is over how many questions hmm correct all right this this is a question that I could ask you all right I'm giving you the seven you I'm giving you the tense to kind of you will get all right so you know that we're talking about the future at this point when this quiz is over how many questions mmm correct what do you think we're talking about remember think about it stuff when you're thinking about verbs verbs are so important because they they tell us the time they tell us when things happen is it happening in the past the present or the future and they we talked about those different aspects remember about something being the simple or the progressive or the perfect so this is a lot of information to go through and if you haven't seen it already check out the lesson from last week I think it will really help so when this quiz is over how many questions yes excellent you have many questions again I'm looking for specifics I haven't seen any people are close but I haven't seen a correct answer what's going on all right so think about it remember it's a question all right how many questions all right think about the construction when this quiz is over how many questions we need that that future tense will will you remember when we're talking about a question you're gonna you're gonna invert that subject how many questions will you have gotten or have got again the past participle of get can be got or gotten so how many questions will you have gotten correct all right that is the specific words that I want or you could say will you have got correct for me personally I always as the the past participle I always use gotten get got gotten I always use gotten so I'd say when this quiz is over how many questions will you have gotten correct so again the Future Perfect to actions in the future one happened before the other so when this quiz is over it's in the future all right you've already some things happen you've already gotten some questions correct we don't know how many which is why I'm asking you how many questions will you have gotten correct so remember that is the specific construction that you would need to use will you have gotten that was that was a little more difficult all right a little more challenging let's do another one we mmm to open the door for several minutes when she found her key all right think about the situation we mmm to open the door for several minutes when she found her key all right again this is this is more difficult this is a little more challenging how would you complete this sentence I think the other one was challenging because it was a question so this is just a statement all right we the verb is tri we mmm to open the door for several minutes for several minutes for is a key word there when she found her key all right so let's let's break this down found okay that when she found her key that is my dependent clause it's in the past so we know that we're talking about something in the past when I said for several minutes remember when I said if you see words like for and since that often tells you the perfect tense all right for several minutes found her key so in this case we'd say we had been trying to open the door for several minutes when she found her key past perfect progressive it is a continuous action because you're not just trying once what the door won't open let's stop you're continuously trying to open the door but it's in the past it's a continuous action it's for a duration of time had been trying all right we had been trying to open the door for several minutes when she found her keys suddenly she found her key and now we can open the door all right excellent so I hope that that I know that was a lot to cover I hope that you guys enjoyed this practice I hope that you got some some good use out of it thank you guys so much for watching thank you guys for joining us today if you enjoyed this quiz don't forget to hit that like button let me know so that I know that I should prepare more of these quiz lessons to help you guys practice and improve your skills because practice is such a big part of it here on YouTube you get a lot there are a lot of lessons out there including many of ours that are more for presentation lessons teaching you about where birds and grammar pronunciation but this

VERB TENSE QUIZ | Advanced Grammar Lesson

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is wes and this is interactive english and in case this is your first time here the channel it's just all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills such as with these interactive live lessons that i hope uh all of you are going to participate in today's lesson because i have a little bit of a quiz for you it's actually uh i guess you could say it's a grammar quiz because we're going to be talking about verb tenses and i have some sentences that i'm going to give you with some blank spaces and all i want you to do is fill in the correct verb tense so that is the way we're going to practice in today's lesson and i want you to write all of your answers in the chat participate in the lesson even if you're watching this later on next year it doesn't matter you can still participate use the comments section as like your piece of paper and write your answers in the comment section so today it is it is a verb tense quiz that's what we're going to be doing in today's lesson before we start i do want to give a couple of shout outs to everybody who's here with me live today hello uh lolly as always great to see you angela sleepwalker thanks for joining me um althea let's see anar going through names as i see them uh yashar peter rosalia as i go through i'm gonna ask you guys questions i'll give some more shout outs later on as you're giving the right answers as you if you give the right answers uh katrudas hello how are you welcome so let's just look at our very first question and again this is all about verb tenses i'm gonna give you a sentence with the blank i want you to write the correct verb tense i'm also go i'll tell you the verb as well and i'll give you a little bit of a hint so here's the first one it's going to get more difficult as we go along so here is our first sentence all right and i want you to complete that sentence and this maybe this is a little tricky so i've given you a hint that this is uh well there is a modal in this sentence all right there's a modal in this sentence and i want you to the main verb is no all right so how would you complete this sentence he ought um better what do you think all right what do you think write your answers in the chat uh hi oh silvio hello how are you marty good to see you guys um write your answers in the chat and then i'll tell you the correct answer so the reason i said it's a little not tricky i think you guys got this excellent uh jet should be here uh giorgio fulia pt nekla hello ariane uh asan excellent the answer is to no so i told you that it's a little tricky because you're not only writing the verb you need to put the preposition in there so ought is your modal verb many people really consider ought to as the modal and then when you have like a modal verb you're going to follow that with the base verb no so he ought to know better and in this case you're talking about something that somebody well the kind of a recommendation they should do this something that should happen and you could say like i think this is a common phrase if somebody makes a bad mistake or they make a bad decision and you say he ought to know better he ought to know better than that all right excellent uh you guys got that one perfect oh takayo hello how are you excellent glad to see you the next one right here um this is gonna be again maybe it's a little tricky we'll see i did say this is more advanced grammar so the plain your main verb is arrive at 8 pm your clue is scheduled time you might be thinking schedule time wait what does that have to do with anything i will explain when i give you the answer all right so how would you complete that sentence think about um somebody is saying that oh we gotta get to the airport the plane um at eight pm all right perfect wow you guys are rocking this uh saeed lolly excellent uh konisi uh peter ali brayan i thought this would be a little trickier maybe you guys you guys are just too smart so the reason i said i thought it would be tricky is because i thought many people might say will arrive which you could say but scheduled time it's more common that people are going to use the present simple even if you're talking about something in the future so if we have to go to the airport i would tell you like oh we we need to leave now we need to drive to the airport because the plane arrives at 8pm i'm talking about something in the future but i'm using the present tense because we're talking about something that is scheduled scheduled time you would do the same thing with um maybe a movie you would tell your friend they might say oh what time does the movie start the movie starts at nine o'clock i'm still talking about something in the future but because it's scheduled time most people are going to use the present simple if you say the movie will start that's perfectly fine but i think very common in this case people will use a present simple excellent you guys wow rock that one how about this one again [Music] your clue unspecified time all right the main verb is the verb to be so how would you complete this sentence i um to china twice and the hint that i'm giving you is just right there

i'm talking about schedu unspecified time i was about to say schedule time unspecified time you're going to use which verb tense all right write your answer in the chat like i said even if you're watching this later write to me in the comments i always love getting those uh i see these old videos and people are using that comment section and i think it's great so excellent uh perfect lolli giorgio some of these names i can't pronounce uh angela uh situnia ali yes amen so in this case unspecified time we're talking about the present perfect tense i have been to china twice you don't know when i'm talking about i didn't tell you the time so in that case it's it's common people are going to use the present perfect tense i have been to china twice if i told you the time if i said last year in that case people would then use the uh the past simple i went to china last year that that would be specified time and then you would use the the simple pass but in this case we're going to use the present uh present perfect excellent here we go and this is true actually uh this is a true sentence for me and my family i'd say last year last year at this time we um a trip to romania your clue is i'm talking about an action at a point in time so hopefully these clues that i'm giving you will help remind you of the verb tense that you should be using because when you're learning verb tenses this is what this is the way people would teach them this is how i would talk about them and i would tell people oh think about think about it's an action at a point in time you're going to use this verb tense last year at this time we um a trip to romania the main verb is plan all right so excellent this one okay so if we get a little more difficult i gotta give some shout outs konisi perfect saeed that's what i was looking for um i saw another answer close uh who is it uh gosh it's kind of moving for anna perfect uh yashar we're talking about the past continuous last year at this time we were planning a trip to romania so to plan that's the main verb i i said it's an action so if you think about an action it's like something that's happening at a point in time which means it's going to continue because we're talking about an action typically it's something that will continue along and in this case it's the past continuous at this time last year we were planning a trip to romania so again i could ask somebody like oh what did you do last year and then i'd say oh we went to romania or uh or if somebody's asking for that point in time remember think of the continuous tense you're talking about a point in time like the present present continuous i am teaching a live lesson right now it's what's happening at this point in time and you could do the same for the past at that point in time we were planning a trip to romania excellent well done i know it's a little more difficult let's look uh at the next one okay the main verb is get okay i um the door in this case i want you to think about the situation and you're saying this sentence like it's a quick and sudden decision so perhaps you're you're in your home and you hear this knock and somebody says i um the door and i want you to use the verb get we're talking about a quick and sudden decision excellent uh well done hi hello isabella excellent uh lolli konisi hello mohammed sayet darby uh gatruedes yes we're talking about the future tense something in the future but it's like really the immediate future and if you're talking about a sudden decision i'll get so you're going to use will with quick and sudden decisions something that would happen immediately and i think most of the time in conversation people are going to use the contracted form i will ow i'll get the door i'll answer it so that is i think overwhelmingly how people will use this you are not going to use going to all right you will use will i'll get the door quick sudden decision the next one right here so this i'm telling you there's an adverb clause in this sentence and the adverb clause is before my alarm went off the hint is really like think about that adverb clause and that's going to help you determine the the verb tense that main verb which is here so before my alarm went off i um a loud boom what would you say before my alarm went off i um allowed boom all right so ooh interesting you it depends on the context i think i think maybe you guys are trying to so the answer that i have for you just think about is just heard all right before my alarm went off i heard a loud boom in this case i know many of you put uh had heard remember you're going to use the past perfect when you're talking about two events two past events in this case you're saying before my alarm went off all right that that has not happened yet you're just talking about in general something that happened before this other thing that that had not happened before my alarm went off i heard a loud boom past simple the reason why i wanted you to focus on the adverb clause is because you have that past right there it'll help tell you that the main verb will also be a simple pass before my alarm went off i heard a loud boom uh let's look at i kind of give you a hint for uh one that's coming up anyway we will get there let's look at the next one the main verb is learn all right we're talking about a continuing action i um english for four years and i will continue to do so in the future okay so i think you understand the situation another key word there is for f-o-r the preposition not the number so i um english for four years and i will continue to do so in the future so in this case it's a continuing action what do you think what what verb tense would best complete that sentence and again i think excellent uh lolli fulia sleepwalker lucy uh yashir um manolin arturo takayo trying to give as many shout outs as i can katrudus darby angela um if you're just joining us we're doing a verb tense quiz i think you probably could tell just by the way that i'm i've been presenting this so in this case you you guys are right we're talking about the present perfect continuous i have been learning english for four years and i will continue to do so in the future let me tell you why it's the present perfect continuous so that first part um that first independent clause i've been learning english for four years something that started in the past it's continued to the present so that really tells you you're going to use the perfect tense but in this case it's better to use the present perfect continuous because the next part is saying that you will continue you will continue learning english in the future so that is one difference between the present perfect and present perfect continuous i think of an action that will continue in the future you're going to use the present perfect continuous i have been learning all right i hope that explanation makes it a little easier to understand let's look at your next question you guys rock that one right there so here's the the situation there's two sentences your key is that there's like just some evidence uh and i don't want to give out i don't want to give too much of it away so think of the situation there's only one minute left in the match our team um win so win is the verb that i want you to use how are you going to use that what verb tense in order to complete that sentence so that it really that the situation makes sense what do you guys think write your answer in the chat because this is a quiz i want you to write your answer in the chat i want you to participate that's what these lessons are all about so this is a distinction between uh again you're talking about the future there's two different ways you can use the future tense you could use will or be going to and i want to give some quick shout outs uh people got that correct uh yes uh diane diane sorry if i mispronounced names yes amen in this case remember how i told you before that sudden uh sudden quick actions like something that happens immediately you're going to use will uh i the the door somebody's knocking at the door i'll answer it i'll get it in this case you're going to use going to when there's evidence or even there's a sign that something will come in the future you're going to use going to there's only one minute left in the match our team is going to win this is great it's the same way that think about this if you eat something and you don't feel well maybe you have food poisoning you would tell somebody that's a sign that something is going to happen in the future that's like some evidence and you would tell somebody like oh i think i'm going to get sick oh i'm going i'm going to get sick so that's another example as to when you're going to use going to and not will so i was trying to kind of trick you guys with those because a lot of times when you're talking about the future especially like a planned event you can use either one you could use will or be going to but sometimes it's more appropriate to use one over the other such as this case right here when there's a sign or evidence that something is going to happen like oh there's dark clouds outside i think it's going to rain um that then you're going to use going to um yes mama said yes if you're sick i'm going to throw up i'm going to be sick exactly that's another example uh all right i started talking about that now everybody's uh commenting on it let's look at the

the next question or the next sentence that i have for you this is an example of the subjunctive technically the subjunctive mood so here's my sentence the doctor recommends that she um some sleep what are you going to how are you going to complete that sentence recommends is you're really that's your m that is the main verb the that she um some sleep that is a clause but a clause it still has a verb in it and i want you to tell me uh what you think how are you going to complete that sentence and maybe uh i think i've done lessons about this before so hopefully you've seen some of the lessons and it makes it much easier to understand yes uh georgia uh sleepwalker the pika takayo uh angela so this is the subjunctive subjunctive mood in this case you would say she get the doctor recommends that she

get some rest did i say sleep in that first no rest sorry maybe i misspoke when i was talking about it the doctor recommends that she get some rest now i will say that again i'm writing this down so in writing i think it's very common people use the subjunctive mood especially in the united states because i'm from the u.s that they would use this in the united states i've heard that in the uk some of you in the uk might know that maybe they will say gets now if we're talking about spoken english i think that people will say gets and this is sometimes when the way people speak does not always match the way somebody would write something that is grammatically accepted or correct spoken english can be a bit different but because we're writing this i really just wanted to point out that okay that this is an example of when you might use the subjunctive mood if you're talking about verbs like recommend or suggest or there there are a list of verbs and the reason for that let me try to explain this quickly is that remember if you're using a modal verb you're going to follow it with the base verb so something that she should do she should get some rest now you could say that there's a hidden modal verb that should we're hiding it and the reason we're hiding it is because the meaning of recommend the meaning of that verb is actually like it's telling you something you think this should happen i recommend that she should get some rest but we don't need to say should because of the verb recommend so you just say the doctor recommends that she get some rest the doctor recommends she gets some rest so that is the subjunctive mood um here's another one are you guys ready what do you think now many now i talked about this before previously a few minutes ago two past events all right and now i'm giving you two blanks so think about the situation by the time i um at the restaurant that is actually an adverb clause the main clause everyone um and i want you to use already order so how would you complete that sentence there's two different blanks in this one by the time i um at the restaurant everyone um and i'm talking about two events that are in the past so both of this has already uh happened and i'm kind of speaking as i speak i think i'm using the the verb tenses so the first part by the time i um at the restaurant that is my adverb clause and with the adverb clause you're going to use the simple past the next part it's appropriate especially because you see the word already that to tell you okay the perfect tense and because we're talking about the past then you would use the past perfect excellent great job uh alexander fulia lolly uh who else do we get sorry i know you guys are throwing these in there uh artura nyla perfect uh all right let me show you the answer yes by the time i arrived at the restaurant everyone had already eaten and again this this time i'm talking about two events that are in the past and those are the two events that are related to each other because everyone had already ordered that happened first and then later on you arrive at the restaurant and then now then later after that then that's where you are now so it's almost like you're talking about these two events that happened in the past by the time i arrived at the restaurant everyone had already eaten so i this is a good example as to when you would use the past perfect tense excellent so this was just a a quick little grammar quiz that i had for you guys today to help you practice uh verb tenses it wasn't a very long quiz there were just 10 questions but it's always good to get that practice and i think it really helps with your overall english fluency i i want to say again if you guys like what we do here at interactive english i saw some members and patrons uh with us gertrudis uh lolly silvio uh takayo uh the i will there are links down in the description if you'd like to join patreon youtube i have some different rewards for you if you want to check that out help support uh what what we do here at interactive english if you enjoyed this lesson please give it a like hit that like button it lets me know okay i should do more quiz lessons in the future this is just a great way for you guys to practice in real time and also for me to interact with all of you and kind of explain some of this different grammar which is what we talked about today some of these different verb tenses so i hope you enjoyed the lesson thank you guys so much for for joining me and we have one more question sorry i have no more questions at this point but in the future i will have more quiz lessons like this to help you practice your grammar help you practice vocabulary pronunciation i really enjoy doing these lessons and if you guys think they're useful let me know hit that like button thanks uh for being here good trudes lolly mzz anterior arturo great to see you uh ariane darby sleepwalker laura angela [Music] thank you excellent i get to practice my korean a little bit arturo silvio good to see you esther garish uh takayo yes thank you guys so much for joining me enjoy the rest of your weekend

VOCABULARY Q&A LESSON w/ INTERACTIVE ENGLISH

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive interactive English and in case this is your first time here on this channel our lessons it's all about trying to help you practice and improve your English skills vocabulary grammar pronunciation we try to do a little bit of everything and especially if this is your first time watching one of our lessons please write to me in the comments let me know your name tell me where you're from love hearing from new people so I just want to give a quick shout out to some of you who are joining me today in the chat lo dos DOS Caballero Aydin sleepwalker Angela GLaDOS Abdul Rahman Sajid Lali Felix go to turdus hello Manu Abdul thank you guys for joining me today I want to make this a vocabulary Q&A so if there are any words phrases idioms expressions that you would like me to talk about you can write that to me in the chat I'll get to as many as I can and I'll tell you what the meaning is and I'll try to give you some examples as to how a person might use that and as we go through the lesson I have a couple of things that I want to show you we have this page right here which is going to be a list of the vocabulary that we compiled from today's lesson once the lesson is over and it's posted I will put all of the words from today in the description down below so you can have it you can review it if you want to look at those words and see what they mean I'm also going to use today can 'bridge online dictionary which is right here this is one that I like to use and I would recommend you guys use Cambridge there are many different options when it comes to looking up words and phrases but I like this one because I think that when they tell you the meaning of the word they use simple words in order to explain it I think that's something that's challenging when you look up a word and they give you the meaning but then you find these other words that you don't know and you're like well this doesn't help me so I think Kenbridge does a nice job doing that so we may I may refer to this page just to show you and we'll look it up together and talk about it so let's go ahead and look at see what you guys have for me so again if you have any words or phrases or idioms just write them in the chat I'll try to get to as many as I can all right so a question from a tense yes this one I'm gonna try and put these also in the chat so you know as well get a grip alright to get a grip on something is it's an informal expression which means that you want to get hold of it I think I guess you could say it's an idiom that you want to get hold of something so that you can control it that's kind of what I would say but again like just to check on it to make sure to give you guys a clear definition and then I'll add it to the list we can go over here to cam bridge and then just type in and see what they say get a grip and like you could say you use it okay get a grip on yourself get a grip so you would say this if you're talking again in this context like you're talking to a person like get a grip on it get a grip of yourself and it again it's talking about trying to control something in this case controlling your emotions so you would tell somebody this if there is a situation a crisis and people are panicking and you don't want them to panic you could say get a grip on yourself alright stop panicking control your emotions get a grip on yourself so over here we'll go to the vocabulary page and I'll add it so again I will post this later so that you guys have it as well to make an effort to control your emotions your behavior again so that that you can kind of think clearly you want to get a grip on yourself or somebody might just say get a grip all right you need to get a grip you need to control your emotions excellent excellent that's a good one Lucia asks this one pillow talk all right I'm gonna throw that in there so if you are we're talking about pillow talk this is it kind of means what it says that if you if a man if a couple is in bed at night and they I think typically it might it might be after a romantic evening and afterwards they're having just a you know conversation just chatting and they're in bed they would refer to that as pillow talk simply because you're in bed you're laying you're lying on your pillow and you're just having conversation typically after a romantic moment or just after after sex and you call it that's pillow talk so let me add that one to our list right here that's it again it's a more it's I guess it's an idiom you could say conversation a couple will have in in bed at night and I'd say typically after like sex or a romantic evening and you could call that pillow talk all right so let's see that's a good good question good word good phrase let's see Abdul asked what does it mean if you say something is out of this world all right so out of this world is another idiom and I could say just to give you a hint I hope that you guys think that that these video lessons that we do each week are out of this world so if you describe something as being out of this world then you're just saying that it's really great and you would usually follow it after the verb to be and you'd say something is out of this world and in that case you mean that to say that something is really great I've added it to our I've added it to the vocabulary list that's what I was typing in just then out of this world something is really great that's another good idiom or expression let's see we have something ramen profitable if the question is like if you say something is profitable that is an adjective and you're basically saying is it are you able to make a profit doing some service or selling something is it profitable so this is more of a business term that you would use but again we can just to show you this kimbridge if you want to use it later on you could type in profitable and you can see yes making or likely to make a profit and if you don't know what it means to make a profit it means that you are making more money than it costs you so if I baked a cake and it cost me $10 and I sell it for $15 that is a $5 profit which means that that would be profitable so profitable profitable it's I'm just gonna throw down that's an adjective maybe I'll start putting the part of speech down there as well if you think it helps so it refers to something likely to make I'm gonna say make a profit just like Canberra just put down there so it is a good business term it's something you would hear probably if you're reading a newspaper or something about business and they're talking about whether or not something might be profitable um Rose Claire asked about Croc crack of crack of doom I think you may mean crack of dawn crack of dawn so that's the one I'll talk about if you say crack of dawn you know that dusk and dawn are two different time periods so dusk is at the end of the day when the Sun Goes Down dawn is just before Sun comes up so the crack of dawn basically means right at that time right at dawn so people would use it and away and say that like we woke up at the crack of dawn it's just an expression it's a way of saying that you you had to wake up very early you had to get up at the crack of dawn so instead of saying well we woke up really early you're basically just using that expression and saying well we hit we well we got up at the crack of dawn crack of dawn you usually say to refers to this exact period of time often used when mmm saying a person wakes up so I'm gonna add that in there because I think that's typically the context that you would either use this expression or you would hear somebody else use it when they're talking about they had to do something or wake up and it was at the crack of dawn it was really early in the morning right when it was dawn so there's another word ooh excellent it's this enthusiast I'm just sorry if I'm I know that you I'm getting a lot of these words I may not be able to get all of them censorship all right except you'd want to spell it with a C censorship so this is a another good one where you are limiting information and typically you don't want some information to become public you don't want people to know it could be an opinion it could be something that's fact and if you limit the availability that is a form of censorship but this is another great word that I think it would be best let's see what are our friends at Cambridge say we're talking about censorship and the way they do it the the active oh this is another thing about using some of these online dictionaries if you don't know one word typically they may use it in that in the meaning the act of censoring book or film so in that case then we just have to look up the verb to censor something and this is I'm just gonna read this a person whose job is to read books watch films in order to remove anything offensive from them so in that case you want to again I said to make information you don't want to make it known to everybody and that could be something that's the truth it could be something an opinion and because you think that this is harmful information you want to cancel it and you don't want people to learn about it this is a common topic I think when right now we're on YouTube and this is something that I think a lot of YouTube or youtubers might talk about that YouTube might engage in censorship which is the noun to censor is the verb and I'm just gonna add their meaning right here and maybe YouTube for example I think they have been doing this about the coronavirus that some people might say some stuff about the coronavirus that's not true it might be a conspiracy theory and they are censoring those videos they're taking them off of YouTube so that people aren't getting bad information but that would be an example of censorship let's see what else do we have I heard I think there was another question cabin fever that's another good one that I think is relevant especially right now I'm gonna write it right there so if somebody has you would say somebody has cabin fever a cabin is a small wooden home and I'll tell you kind of where it comes from a long time ago when most people lived in for example the countryside hundreds of years ago they would live in a small cabin now depending on where you lived if you lived in the mountains or you lived in a place where you experienced winter and it would get really cold well winter everybody would have to be inside the cabin you're not going to go out as in play you're not going to spend much time outside so you are stuck inside during the winter it's a small space and when they say fever you just you want to get out of there and you say you have cabin fever so it's not really a real fever like your your temperature is rising and your head is getting hot it's let's see what else do we have if you guys are just joining me today I'm just going through this is a vocabulary Q&A and I'm taking your questions if you have any or there are any words or phrases idioms expressions that you want to know write them in the chat and I will try to get to them we have another word somebody wrote I'll get to this Achilles heel I want to talk about that one that's good so I'm gonna write it here your Achilles heel it's referring well to it's a part of your body you know your heel is down by your foot your Achilles is kind of like the back part of your foot but we use it as an expression today and you refer to somebody it's your Achilles heel and basically it means that it's your weakness so again I'm gonna check and see what camber says yes a small problem or weakness and a person or system that can result in failure so I'll just copy that come over here to our vocabulary list I'm getting pretty good at going back and forth and hopefully it's looking a little smoother Achilles heel and then we'll paste it right here so if you're talking about somebody's weakness you could say that it is their Achilles heel for example a silly little I think of Superman if you are familiar with Superman the character you could say that Superman was he his weakness was kryptonite when he was around kryptonite he loses his strength and you could say that is his Achilles heel kryptonite is his Achilles heel it is his weakness MD Yunus says what does it mean wave all right so this word all right it's here again is a homonym it has so wave WAV II just means like this hello you wave at somebody or it could be talking about an ocean wave in this case waive the pronunciation is the same the spelling is different w AI ve and it's a verb to waive something it means that you are you if there is a requirement you are basically getting rid of it and you're saying okay you do not have to do this requirement and we are going to waive we're going to waive this so you could also use it as a noun and somebody could get a waiver which means that they don't have to fill a fulfill a certain requirement if they have a waiver so again let's go back over to can bridge to see what they say so to waive is yes to not demand something that you have a right to do or not cause a rule to be obeyed so again I said a requirement if there's a rule a requirement that needs to be followed you say you don't have to follow it you don't have to obey it and you can waive this requirement waive good word to waive and write this down as a verb and we'll post it here again the noun would be a waiver somebody would get a waiver which is typically permission then and it could be a piece of paper which is a waiver that would show somebody okay I don't have to obey this rule or I don't have to follow this requirement so to waive something abdul-rahman what does it mean mislead I'll write that down mislead again think of somebody to lead somebody is you are taking them in a certain direction to mislead somebody is to basically you're taking them in the wrong direction and often in this case you're talking about perhaps a conversation so you could say that you mislead somebody and they're following you and you go to the wrong place but often I think it'd be like if I'm giving you bad information you could say that I am misleading you I'm getting you to think something that's not true so I think it's often used in that context when you're talking about sharing information and I told you before that on YouTube there was a lot of bad information about the corona virus you could say that it was misleading information so that is when they decided to censor some of these videos and get rid of them to mislead so let's go over here and I'll add that to the list let's see I just looked it up on kimbridge to for good measure so to cause someone miss lead and verb to cause someone to believe something that is not true to mislead someone and again I think with social media nowadays when you have so much information that's easy that's easy to get on Twitter Facebook YouTube there is a lot of misleading information and people you can easily mislead people to believe stuff that's not true let's see we have wanted to say there's another ooh Abdul that's a good word lackadaisical so lackadaisical right here I'll throw this down here if you say it's an adjective and often I think it might be used with somebody's they're talking about their behavior their attitude that they have a lackadaisical attitude and if you describe somebody's attitude or the way they're behaving as lackadaisical it just means they don't care they're not showing much care in this thing and you could say that yes it is lackadaisical again let's go over here just to give you guys more examples I'd always encourage you to look these words up keep your own vocabulary list I think that's always a great way to build your vocabulary if you just have a list that you can go go to to review words and try to remember them showing little enthusiasm or effort so I'll add that one to the list lackadaisical it is an adjective showing little enthusiasm or effort to do something get as many words as we can excellent so I think I I think you could say a collocation would be like attitude a lackadaisical attitude we'll get to some of these others sorry lolly asked what does it mean go dutch so this is an expression you would say to to go dutch means that if you go out with somebody maybe it could be a date it could just be a dinner with a friend but if you go Dutch it means that each person is going to pay for themselves if you're doing like at a restaurant and you go Dutch you're gonna pay for your meal maybe you go to a movie and you say oh where it will go Dutch you're going to pay each person will pay for themselves so I think often you would use it in the context of perhaps dating and you want to ask somebody out and maybe this person's a little like wait I don't know if I want to I don't know if I'd want to call it a date you say oh don't worry we'll go dutch it will just go as friends we'll go dutch and each person will pay for themselves excellent that's a good phrase I'll add it to the list and again you'd say you'd use it like a verb to go Dutch wait what is it oh gosh mmm Dutch yes it's a proper noun I say refers to a situation in which each person will pay for themselves all right to go dutch excellent let's see we also have mmm there was another one up here that I wanted to ask somebody had asked about Steven Jackson asked about morbid that's a good word it's another I'll write it down so you could whoops sorry I misspelled it nah not more big sorry that's wrong more bid with a D there you go and it is an adjective it's used to describe maybe the way someone might be acting or some setting so again we can go back to cam bridge and if you say something is morbid it's like a little I think of like death and scary that it's okay there we go it says that something is someone is maybe interested in unpleasant subjects especially death so they talk about like a morbid fascination with death would be an example or maybe you're describing as a person as a little morbid and which you're then talking about there their character morbid good word so let's go over here to our vocabulary list and again I said this was an adjective and we'll throw down the meaning right there perfect excellent what else do we have so we said I like this one uh-uh this asked about a shameless plug so let me copy pasted so this is if you're talking about a plug which is a noun and could have different meanings you could talk about like to plug a drain which means you're sticking something in there to to keep the water from flowing or the thing that you would use is a plug now this is a different meaning for plug if

I am going to plug a movie I am going to basically kind of give a little bit of an advertisement a little bit of a promotion for this thing and you are going to give it a plug shameless in this situation would be like if I am plugging myself and I do I think everybody kind of does this and I could say like if I were to say oh why don't you guys you know hit that like button you know the interactive English it's the best channel for learning English or if I'm promoting something that I'm doing if it's a course or some kind of lesson I could say oh it's a shameless plug that I know that not that I shouldn't be doing it but it's kind of a way to refer to when people are giving some type of promotion when maybe they shouldn't and I think often times it's when people use it in the context when somebody is doing that for themselves and they're giving themselves a shameless plug and I will probably in the future because I'm going to come out I'm coming out with these courses it's in the works it will be out this year and I will be going I will be giving myself some shameless plugs so keep that in mind I just want to make sure let's go over here I'm just curious actually to see what can bridge has written down if they have this whole phrase a shameless plug now they don't have it because it's kind of I guess you could say it's it's more of an expression I don't think it is an idiom really so I'm gonna write it over here I'll just use my word so shameless plug again plug in this case is talking about a noun - mmm promote something that usually I'm gonna say this usually serves someone's own self-interest alright that you're trying to say something that would that's just gonna really help yourself and you could say that it is a shameless plug all right I'll do a couple of more Karen if you want to look on the list cabin-fever I've already I've talked about that one it's on our list and again I will post all of these words in the description down below this is a great one let's talk about elephant in the room somebody was asking about that so if some this is an idiom if you want to talk about the elephant in the room and it's used in that context when you're having a conversation or discussion with somebody else and there is a topic that you should talk about but you want you don't want to talk about it it's an uncomfortable topic that two people or a group of people may need to discuss so for example it would be used in a situation that if there is a group of people and there's a problem I have a problem with some other person and it's good to just talk about the problem so that we can get past it and somebody might say look we need let's talk about the elephant in the room let's talk about this uncomfortable situation so that we can make amends and we can get through it and forget about it so if somebody's referring to the elephant in the room it's talking about some uncomfortable topic that typically needs to be discussed and I think people would often use it just like that and kind of say let's talk about the elephant in the room or we need to talk about the elephant in the room so I'd say some uncomfortable topic that needs to be addressed or discussed and you'd say yes it's the elephant in the room all right so I think again I'm sorry if I could not get to all of your words I wanted to get through as many as I could I hope that it was easy to follow I hope these examples made sense and I will post these words down in the description if you want to review them and we'll do more lessons like this in the future where we can talk directly and I want to do different Q&A s that revolve around pronunciation vocabulary grammar so we're doing a little bit at this time I'm trying to make them a little more focused so thank you guys so much for joining me today here I'll give you an example of a shameless plug all right if you guys like what we do and just want to support our lessons you can check us out we have YouTube memberships patreon we offer some cool rewards it's another great way to connect with us links to those are down in the description there that is a perfect example of a shameless plug alright so thank you guys for joining me let's see Stephen Hadi Lally cuts back sleepwalker and isos Abdul Mohammed thank you guys Aidan I hope that you guys have a wonderful weekend stay healthy stay safe and I will see you next time so long

VOCABULARY TO HELP YOU UNDERSTAND THE PANDEMIC

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson thank you guys so much for joining me today I really appreciate it today I want to talk to you about well topic that everybody is aware of and that is the global pandemic because several of you have met well many of you had actually have asked me about talking about some vocabulary that is related to the Cova 19 virus or this pandemic because I know many of you are reading newspaper articles in English you might be listening to a news report in English and you are going to hear these vocabulary words over and over again so what I want to do is talk to you about I'm gonna do things a little differently today and you'll see what I'm talking about we're actually going to go through some different news articles and pick out some of the words and I'm gonna create a vocabulary list for all of us here and then at the end what I will do is I will take all of those words and I will put them into the description of this video so that you can have them you can copy them and paste them and put them in your own word document so first I first want to say I hope all of you out there are staying safe and staying healthy and give some quick shout outs to those of you who are with me today hello hottie honey ELISA sleepwalker Aaden great to see you Zanna Saeed welcome Kareem Mahmud Walter hello hello hello so again this is hopefully that this lesson will you'll you'll be able to learn a few new words so that the next time you're reading about information that's happening related to this virus related to the pandemic it's going to help you understand it a little bit easier and I also want to well I want to talk to you about something else that's a little personal that's closer to me and I will discuss that at the very end and come back to it but the way I'm going to do it differently is like I said I'm just going to share my screen and we're going to go through some articles and pick out some words and basically create our own vocabulary word list related to the pandemic so here is the first article that I have for you there I actually found a couple of articles that were specifically about words to help you understand this pandemic so we're gonna go through this and I'm gonna try and go through this quickly and pick some things out if you guys have some other questions I'll try to see if I can find it because right now I have I have a lot of different screens open so this was an article by time and I will also link all of these articles in the description below in case you want to go back and look at the article on your own so these are terms to help you understand the crisis as you can see down here it starts out talking about well what it what is a virus the corona virus I think that most of you guys are aware of what the virus is and then it's talking about the difference between an outbreak and epidemic and a pandemic so as you can see an outbreak is talking about a sudden rise in a disease so if an outbreak is a sudden rise in the disease an epidemic is when there are enough outbreaks that go beyond the initial spot so when it starts spreading to other areas it becomes an epidemic and then a pandemic is when that epidemic has become worldwide so outbreak epidemic and pandemic now what we'll do is we're gonna go over here to our vocabulary list and I'm just gonna write them down so we have an outbreak when there is a sudden a sudden start to disease and then the next word was epidemic because you might hear this word a lot it is when the outbreak spirit starts to spread beyond its origin origin is just like talking about where it begins and then we have a pandemic which I'm sure many of you have heard it's when the epidemic becomes world wide and the w-h-o declared this a pandemic last month in March and this is another word this is an acronym that you may hear quite often if you're reading an article or listening to a news report they will just say WH o which stands for the World Health Organization there we go so started this list right here of words and we can go back to our article right here and again if you see some other words then you know you could just like let me know and I'll try to find them again hello to others that are joining us uncle-ish sua Raj nice great to see you thank you for joining Michael Angelo hello so those are three words that I think are will very super important words that I think you should definitely know these are other words quarantine is another word that I think you will hear quite often and self quarantine so if we're talking about somebody who might quarantine themselves it is referring to a disease that's out there and you would say that this person needs to quarantine and what that means will go back over to our list it's a verb so I'm just going to write it to quarantine and it basically means to isolate a person so that disease is does not spread so again if somebody were to get COVID-19 and they have the disease they might say okay we need to quarantine this person we need to isolate this person and they would be alone so that this disease does not spread and you might also hear it used with self quarantine right here and self quarantine again is when you make the decision to do this on your own when you decide when I'm just going to write when a person decides to isolate themselves and it's basically if you know you're sick you say okay I'm going to go into self quarantine now quarantine I would say this is a word I'm just gonna add verb right there it's a word that's used when you're talking about a virus or an illness it's specifically used for that so if you're talking about like if you just want to be alone which many people feel that way but from time to time you would not use the word quarantine you would only use this really in the context of a disease or an illness and you might need to quarantine yourself or people might need to quarantine next let's see you hear about these words right quite often symptoms and it's talking about a sign or indication that someone has a disease so this is a noun and you'd say that well somebody has the symptoms of this disease which we'll talk about in another article symptomatic is just the part of speech is changing and we're using it as an adjective and you could say that someone is symptomatic now another common word that you might start hearing now-a-days is people that are asymptomatic and if somebody is asymptomatic it means that they are not showing signs of the disease and this is where I think this COVID-19 is very dangerous because even if somebody is asymptomatic it seems like they can still spread the disease even though that they are asymptomatic they're not showing signs they can still spread it and that's why I think this is spreading very quickly so you may hear this word a lot when you're talking about well when you're listening to a news broadcast and they might hear to refer to people as being asymptomatic that even though you may be asymptomatic you may need to quarantine and still isolate yourself so that the disease doesn't spread so let's go back over to again our vocabulary list we're just gonna have this as a running list down here so I'm gonna write down symptom and again some of these words you you may have heard about before and again it's just great to review it's always good to review the meaning of these words indication that a person has a disease I'm just gonna write this is the noun so let me correct some of this and again I told you guys that after the lesson I'm just gonna I'm just gonna copy and paste this in the description so that everybody has it symptomatic is the I can't spell and do all these things at the same time so symptomatic is just the adjective describes a person showing symptoms so it'll say and then asymptomatic again is another adjective so you'd say that someone is asymptomatic we use it frequently with the verb to be that they are not showing symptoms so they may still have the the disease but they're not showing symptoms you could say they are asymptomatic let's look at some of the next words relating spread this is another word that I did want to talk to you about because when you are talking about a virus you would use this verb and say that the virus is spreading that it is going to a larger area that it is getting passed from one person to another person that the virus is spreading I'll write that one down I want to go over here and talk about again I'm just gonna go through some of these terms the I will link these articles for you guys down below so spread I will remember to write oh so this is another article from USA Today it says what does Furlow mean can I leave home under shelter-in-place coronavirus terms explained so most I'm just gonna read through this and then we'll talk about a few words most people know by now what is what social distancing it most people know what social distancing is by now they've heard that that the corona virus outbreak has been declared a pandemic we remember we just talked about that a pandemic is when an epidemic becomes worldwide but what does it mean when you here in New York is the epicenter in the United States and what do healthcare Professionals say when they need ventilators or respirators or both so let's talk about some of these words so the first one it's talking about the epicenter and again I'm not I'm not a healthcare professional if you were to look at the word some people may use it a little differently but in general it's just talking about the very the center of an area and you'd say it is the epicenter or more informally somebody might say it's a hotspot and if you're ever if you ever want to know about some of these words source that I like to use is can bridge so you could even go to Cambridge dictionary over here type in epicenter and then if you move down sorry if you guys can't see this it's talking about right here okay is a place that shows the highest level is an epicenter so we can go back over to our vocabulary list and I'm gonna add these terms down there spread is the verb used to say the virus is passing from one person to the next we talked about epicenter and right now they're in each country in many different countries there may be an epicenter for that country and it is the Canberra JH meaning what was it I'm just gonna copy and paste it is well the highest place the higher the place that has the highest level sorry so the place that has the highest level so if you are following what's happening in the United States I'm just going to use that as an example because I'm from the United States you they would say that New York is the epicenter because that is that is the area in the country that has the highest level of this another word I'll just add it right here would be hot spot if people want to say that New York is the epicenter New York is the hot spot let's go back over to our list right up here so these articles they show some pictures shelter-in-place stay at home I think those words are fairly self-explanatory it's just talking about people that they need to stay at home and you could use this as an adjective it's used as a compound adjective right here because it's describing the order that the government is issuing an order saying what they want you to do and it is a stay at home order and you would hyphenate it see those hyphens stay at home order let's talk about this is another word that I wanted to ask you about art I tell you about contact tracing so many health professionals you may hear them talking about the virus and talk about the things that they need to do that people need to quarantine they need to do social distancing and stay away from each other and they need to do contact tracing as well and I'll read this it says contact tracing is done by closely monitoring and tracking with whom a person infected with the contagious virus has come in close contact and that is according to the World Health Organization or the w-h-o so let's add that to our list right down here and let's see can you guys see so contract no contact tracing identifying people have our let's I'm gonna write it like this contract a so I'm gonna try and just make it simple if a person has the virus it's identifying fine who they have come in contact with all right you're you're trying to find out who have these people come in contact with so that those people can quarantine and you can try to stop the spread let's go back over again let's see sure I said yes use me so sorry I'm again my spelling I'm just trying to write this quickly it's a little difficult there are so many windows open right now so I'm trying to switch back and forth so that it doesn't seem too confusing so right now if you're just joining us I just want to let you know we are talking about vocabulary that is related to this pandemic to the corona virus I'm creating a I'm going over several different articles creating a vocabulary list which I will put down in the description once the video is finished so here is another expression another term that you may hear which is flattening the curve so as people get infected I'm sure that you see these graphs that they show and the graphs may go up like this and what they're talking about is you want to flatten that curve so to flatten means that it's talking about the surface that's something there's no bumps that it's just flat so here is a visual picture of what this might look like so you they show this one curve I don't know if you can see my cursor and you want to take in it you want to take the curve and flatten it out and this is what they mean when the health professionals up there whether they are talking about countries like you the United States Italy and Spain where the the curve is going up at a very high rate and they say we need to flatten the curve we need to make sure that we need to make sure that people are quarantined they are social distancing so that the virus does not spread and there are fewer cases and they can flatten the curve that is a very common expression that you might hear so I'm gonna go back over to our vocabulary list and write that one down here flattening okay flattening the curve so it is mm well again I'd say it basically means what it sounds but when they're referring to the curve they're talking about the number of cases that a country has so I'd say flattening decreasing I'm gonna use this decreasing the number the amount of cases so that each day there are fewer and fewer so when there are fewer and fewer cases that curve is going to start to flatten and that's what they mean when they're talking about flattening the curve let's look at there's a couple more words from this article and then we're just gonna go through and read some others ventilator in a respirator so this is something that you are probably hearing a lot about different countries talking about hospitals saying that they need ventilators and a ventilator is a machine that's used to help someone breathe by getting oxygen into their lungs and removing carbon dioxide from the body so these those are ventilators those are the machines the larger machines that hospitals would have a respiratory it's a little different because these are masks or devices to keep potentially harmful substances out of inhaled air so a ventilator is more of the machine a respirator is going to be the mask and I will write these down in just a moment vaccine this is another word that you will hear quite often that people are going to talk about because the vaccines

I'll just read this what it says it prevents disease by stimulating your immune system to produce an appeal antibodies exactly like it would if you were exposed to the disease so this is something I'll give you an example we have a baby girl Amelia and over it she's now one in this last year she has been getting different vaccines to help protect her from other viruses so right leaves without pay they're different from being laid off because the intent is for the worker to return to a job after a period of time so if a if an employee is laid off it means like that it's similar to that they're fired that they are let go of their job and they are now unemployed to furlough means that they are temporarily leaving work but then later on in the future they will have the opportunity to come back to their job so I just said that Disneyworld there was a news article two days ago they plan to furlough many of their workers and in the future those workers will then be able to come back to work at those same jobs so it's just a slight difference let me write down some of these words furlough ventilator or respirator vaccine so we're gonna go over back to our vocabulary list and I wrote about vaccine I don't know about how to write it I forget a substance used to help the body fight off disease all right I'll check these before I post them down below but just as a quick writing it down so I don't forget so again you would get a vaccine to help you fight a disease to lay someone off is basically to fire or let this person go from their job and they are now unemployed this is different than we were talking about furlough is a temporary leave let me get this spelling out of the way temporary leave without pay so that's something to keep in mind if you are reading something about a company that is going to furlough the workers that these people are not going to get paid without pay but they will return to their job the future so either way again these are the they're very different terms neither one of them is good so this of course with all these businesses shutting down many people losing their jobs or if they are getting furloughed people are still not getting paid and that that is a that is a huge problem and then there was another word oh we were talking about the difference between ventilators and respirators so this is a machine used to help people breathe and respirator is more of a mask used to help clean the air so again keep keep an eye out for these words if you are listening D these are words that if you were to go read another article after this lesson you are definitely going to see some of these words especially if you're talking about hospitals and ventilators and respirators let's I want to keep going because I want to go through a few other articles and read through some of them and pick out some words so this is talking about again how to protect yourself I'm not a medical professional I think a lot of you a lot of us have read the same information similar but I want to go through this and see if help you maybe understand some of these words so it says the corona virus this is an article from about a month ago you can see it's from March 5th but it says the corona virus are what are the symptoms how it spreads and how to protect yourself we had already said that symptoms are indications that somebody has a disease spread this is the verb you're going to use when talking about it moving from one person to the next so I wanted to go down here I'm going to kind of skip through some of this and just talk about this right here so you can see in that video right here it says got Leah Vaughn corona virus spread we're just seeing the tip of the iceberg and again think about this is a month ago so they this is an expression when they say that we're just seeing the tip of the iceberg what this expression means is that you are only seeing just a small amount when there is so much more information or that we still need to learn and that we still need to understand so I wanted to teach you that expression and again think about it in this context this article was a month ago and they were saying we're just seeing the tip of the iceberg that we're going to learn more about it or the virus is going to spread a lot more which it has so that is a term again I'm going to add it to our vocabulary list if you want to use it it can be used in other context as well tip of the iceberg mmm let's see OOP that's an E that's why it's I'd say it's an idiom it means you only see a small amount when there is much more usually it's talking about information or something that's going on to understand and you could say that okay we right now this is just the tip of the iceberg and this is a again it's an idiom that you could use in a variety of context a variety of situations let's go back to the article about okay how you can protect yourself the w-h-o and the Center for Disease Control's often you if you're watching information about the United States you would hear the CDC it's another acronym have listed a number of actions people can take to help prevent the virus from spreading which is nearly identical to preventing other viruses like the flu so some of these things that they're suggesting and we'll talk about some of these words regularly and thoroughly clean your hands with alcohol-based rub and wash them with soap and water for at least 20 seconds especially after using the bathroom eating blowing your nose coughing or using if you use a hand sanitizer experts suggest using products that are made with at least 60% alcohol so that is one word I also I'm gonna add some of these words right here I'll read this one too when it comes to face masks the CDC does not suggest people wear them to prevent catching respiratory illnesses which includes Kovan 19 they actually just changed this recommendation yesterday and they're now at least in the United States they're recommending that everyone wear a mask in the article says however if you feel you are infected and pose a risk to others a face mask should you be used to prevent the viruses spread so I wanted to talk about this because this is a respiratory illness and when they're talking about respiratory it wrote it means breathing it's talking about the lungs and breathing because the covid 19 does affect it is a respiratory illness and the last one that I want to add the word okay I think that was all from this article so I wanted to add a couple of words to our list the acronym I'm gonna add it up here because we talked about WHO stands for World Health Organization Center for Disease Control and this is this is specific to the United States the CDC is the organization that would offer guidelines or try to tell people what to do and it's the Center for Disease Control but you would hear it shortened to just CDC and then we had what else oh I wanted to talk about hand sanitizer used to disinfect and clean hands but sanitizer is the word that you may use maybe you're not familiar with it to sanitize as a verb it just means to clean to clean something too to disinfect it you want to sanitize it so again you want to use hand sanitizer disinfect your your hands you may want to use their other sanitizers as well that you can clean other parts are other areas around your home or outside and the last one respiratory refers to breathing and the lungs so if you hear it used as a respiratory disease or a respiratory illness respiratory is talking about breathing it's talking about the lungs so let's move back I wanted to show you I hope that I hope this is helpful and that you guys are learning a few new words because again this is something that you I follow it in the news every day I think it's very important to understand what's happening how we can stay safe how we can protect ourselves so hopefully some of these words will help you especially if you are following news in English either reading or listening I want to show you another article again this one so this is actually talking about pictures of different places and now that so so much of it has been shows down we've already done some of these words but I want to say ok coronavirus quarantine and look at empty streets highways and bridges from Paris to Florida we've talked about the word quarantine quarantine is when people you are isolating yourself or a person who is infected so they don't spread it so right now much of the world is quarantine let's look I'm gonna read this for us so I said the world is a very different place right now amid the corona virus pandemic many countries around the world have restricted travel and implemented quarantine measures others have entered into complete lockdown restaurants bars and tourist attractions have closed their doors people are working from home instead of driving to the office as a result cities and usually cities that usually team with people have turned empty and quiet remember those early scenes for of deserted London and 28 days later things are eerily similar to that right now to give you a glimpse of what the world - what a world practicing social distancing looks like we've rounded up photos of streets highways bridges around the world sites that usually include bumper-to-bumper traffic and tourists crammed together like sardines sitting empty now I told you if you're reading an article there are many words we've talked about related to the pandemic specifically but you might find some other ones like in this one it says amid amid the corona virus pandemic and again if we wanted to go over here to camera JH you could put in a mid and it just means that okay it's in the middle of something happening it's a preposition in the middle of or surrounded by so amid the corona virus pandemic that we are all surrounded by this many countries have implemented quarantine measures or complete lockdown when you lock down is just referring to okay nobody can move everything's closed nobody should go anywhere so there is a difference between a quarantine or a stay at home order and this a complete lockdown and another phrase that you can hear or that you can see it's talking about traffic bumper-to-bumper traffic this is a phrase used when you talk about a car has a bumper and it's saying that there is HS heavy traffic jam and you could say bumper-to-bumper traffic and people are trimmed crammed like sardines those tiny little fish that are packed into those jars sardines so let's I went out before I'll show you some of the pictures that they showed in this article but I want to go back I'll write a couple of those words down so amid this was a preposition which means like surrounded by and we used it in the context of amid the endemic something has happened like we are surrounded by this and then that other expression these are just other words from the article bumper-to-bumper traffic is just talking about a heavy traffic jam is the only is the best way to put it so if they're not directly related to covid but again when you're reading an article there there are it's a good chance you're gonna come across other words that you might not know try to put those words into context to help you understand it get mostly what what the article is talking about so I'll just show you a couple pictures and then I want to talk to you guys about something else Oh Luke asked about teaming that's another good question so it says that it's talking about as a role cities that usually team with people so if you talk about an area teeming with something else it means that it's very active there are very many people there so you could describe that like oh the the shopping mall is teeming with customers that there are a lot of them and it's used as a verb and again if for if you want to see Cambridge's definition team as a verb to gosh I wish I can why can't I move my cursor over teaming team to rain heavily no wait it's teaming no I don't know why they don't have it in here teaming to rain heavily alright I'm just gonna write it down I'll add that to the vocabulary list because that is another good word so you would use it to team with and if you say that something is teaming with something else team with it is a lot of something or like the mall is teeming with people all right it's a way you could describe it there are many of this thing and again you would say teaming with so it's in the article it said that they these cities are usually teaming with people so I'll go back because just show you some of these again these cities during quarantine this is a picture of Paris France at the Montmartre neighborhood which is now empty here's a picture of one us at is in Argentina again I will link these articles down in the description if you would like to go back and read them and see and learn a little bit more about this situation this is a picture of Lombard Street in San Francisco if you've ever been there usually I could say that this street is teaming with cars and it's typically bumper-to-bumper because there are so many cars waiting to go down this street here's a picture of Madrid in Spain

Tokyo Japan so again that's just showing pictures of what this quarantine when everybody is quarantine and there is a stay at home order so again here's another picture of London the millenium bridge very famous very well-known and I hope that you guys have learned some new words I hope that you guys are trying to stay up to date and informed about what's happening and I hope that you can get some use out of these vocabulary words because the this is I think it is very this is a very important information to try and share with you I will put these vocabulary words down in the description in case you want to copy and paste them and create your own vocabulary list I will also link these articles the last thing that I want to talk about because it is important to me as an individual I don't know if you know this about me I used before in 2012-2013 I taught at an orphanage for one year in the Dominican Republic so I was at this orphanage I was teaching middle school and high school students I was teaching English and math and I got a message a while ago about maybe a few days ago one of the ways that the orphanage makes money is by having visitors come down and visit the orphanage they see what's going on and they make donations but because of what's going on with the virus that people are not able to travel the again they're there they're asking for donations asking for funding and I wanted again they say during a crisis sometimes that brings out the best in people so I hope that we this this video is monetized whatever money comes from the monetization of this video we're gonna donate to nuestros pequeño cerdo manos which is the organization I wanted to show it to you right here so they they they do a really great job this is an orphanage they run about they have about eight or nine orphanages all throughout Latin America so they have one in the Dominican Republic they have one in Honduras Guatemala Mexico which was where the first one was located they run orphanages and schools in Haiti they also run a hospital in Haiti for children which does amazing work so if anything if anything I suggest go check out the website learn a bit more about what they do I will leave a link in the description if you are interested in donating and helping support this cause but I told you it's it's personal to me because I worked for this organization for a year in 2012-2013 I went back to visit the following two years and to visit the kids because it's very meaningful obviously here's some to show you pictures there's me about seven years ago with one of the kids here's me when I worked at the orphanage just showing you guys a little pictures just me back in the the past here again I had no hair well I had a buzzed head back then shaved head and this is me just yeah working at the orphanage again I was there teaching teaching English teaching math it was it was an incredible experience so I will link that in the description as well if you would like to make a donation or even again just support some other cause there are so many causes out there that are in need that have been really affected by this virus and I hope again they say during a crisis brings out the best in people so I hope thank you guys for joining me today I hope that you learn some new words that if you are reading about articles about this pandemic listening to a news broadcast try to listen for some of them I hope it helps you understand this a little bit better and that you can follow along and please stay safe stay stay I wish all of the best for all of you guys your families take care of yourselves and we will be back next week for another live lesson so thank you so much sabah Martha Gaetano Saeed lolly Angela I apologize if I could not get to some individual questions nowadays are in this lesson specifically I will try to do a better job at but next time today was a little challenging switching back between these articles and the vocabulary list but thank you Amir dd8 in thank you guys so much for being here Carlos sorry xialu sleepwalker luca again sorry if i missed some names bj hope you guys have a nice weekend stay safe stay healthy

Valentine's Day | Discussion of Useful Words & Phrases

hello hello hello welcome to our beautiful lesson this the Saturday I hope everyone's doing well thank you for joining us and for another amazing incredible super interactive English lesson I hope everyone's doing well and if you are just joining I would like to welcome you and also ask you if you can share your name and your location because it's so much fun for us and for everyone to see who is joining us who's here who's watching so if you guys are watching let us know what's your name where you're from hello hello welcome Patricia welcome al-kamil welcome to Harry oh sorry if I mispronounced your names I apologize I am so glad to see you here I am doing wonderful thank you thank you for asking it ahead you're a great because we are talking about one of my favorite subjects today and I think we're going to have a super fun lesson so if you're just joining please write yes thank you from India from Bangladesh from Brazil Haiti friends what a wonderful group of people we have here Egypt so great it's so nice to see people from everywhere so I'm very very thankful for that today I am talking about one of my favorite things to talk about love and I wanted to ask you right now before before we start our lesson because it's it's a lesson about love vocabulary and Valentine's Day how do you feel about Valentine's Day okay so as you're joining if you could write your name and what you're writing from if you could tell us how do you feel do you like it I know over the years I've heard many people complain about how commercialized this holiday has become that people only use it to make money off of it so I know it had a lot of criticism but I will tell you my opinion about it later okay so let me know how do you feel about Valentine's Day right so it can be problematic because yes we can feel lonely so it definitely draws attention so yeah right right how you feel about it and if you are just joining and just kind of watching us just tell us what's your name and where you are from okay well thank you thank you so okay so yeah a lot of people a lot of people can feel down and it definitely can come as a side effect of Valentine's Day so tada do you guys like my roses I'm such a cliché but roses are my favorite flowers a cliché means it means something that that you're just something that is so typical they always say that girls always like roses but in my case it's true roses are my favorite flowers so I put some roses there for you um okay so I have two questions for you the first one I'll state it again how do you feel about Valentine's Day are you sad are you excited are you over it are you just like can we just act like it's another day and my second question is and this one I think is a nicer question how do you say I love you in your language okay so I'm kind of going to repeat this question throughout our lesson today because it's so important to say I love you my personal opinion I I love to hear it and to say okay so some people are over Valentine's Day thank you for sharing Vivian some people is just normal some people are excited thank you guys for for Oh Roenicke were engaged on Valentine's Day so definitely a memorable time I'm sure so thank you guys for sharing see there are some people who are feeling sad and I completely understand that makes sense for the longest time I've always been a person whether I was alone or I was with somebody in my life I have always loved Valentine's Day and the reason I've loved Valentine's Day was because I thought what a great holiday it's wonderful to be able to celebrate love whether you buy someone for something or you don't and whether it's a romantic love or love for your parents or your brother your sister your family I always start it's a wonderful thing to celebrate and I think we need to celebrate more love in this world so this is why I love it and I'm very curious how what you guys are what your guys's opinion are thank you for sharing we have so many beautiful declarations of love here oh well thank you for loving me I'm getting it from all languages you guys are amazing with your tam-tam oh this is beautiful thank you guys I'm just joking please keep writing how do you say I love you in your language and if I try to read it and I say it I mispronounce it please forgive me my husband he's here he is he's lurking he's in the chat room he's saying hello to people okay so thank you for sharing I understand some people might not love it but this is going to be a fun lesson even if you don't like Valentine's Day because we are learning some vocabulary and a little bit of a culture lesson about things connected to Valentine's Day and I think that's very valuable so if you guys are joining let us know where you're from like Valentina welcome Oh Evelyn Tina what an appropriate name for a lesson on Valentine's Day so let us know where you're writing from and how do you say I love you in your language so let me talk a little bit about st. Valentine because he is connected to this holiday well his history dates back all the way to the third century so he it's it's a really long history it's complicated a little bit we're now going to talk about all of it because it's so much to say but just a couple things he was a roman saint so he was from rome he was now commemorated on February 14th which is why we delivered our lesson now and why Valentine's Days on the 14th of February so this st. there are so many stories and legends about him this was a long time ago third century so obviously there will be a lot of things that people say what happened that may or may not be true I'm just going to share the ones that I like the most because I'm it's my choice okay so what I liked was that apparently he was a very good kind of person and He healed lots of people who had different diseases and he got he was a martyr which is a person who dies because of their faith and supposedly even when he was getting killed he the last thing he did was to heal the prisoners daughter so that was his last act of love so he was a very loving person very loving that's which is probably why he is declared a saint in some legends again his connection with love is that he secretly married couples so that their husbands wouldn't have to go to war so there's a lot of a lot of legends like I said which may or may not be true but they are this is how they are connected to valentine's day so thank you guys if you if you are just joining and you just started joining i would love to know how you say i love you in your language oh I see some wonderful writing for in Mandarin in Italian so nice oh I'm going to try to learn all of these we'll see how well I do okay so a st. Valentine he was I'll tell you in a second so um ah okay now I want to talk a little bit about Valentine's Day after talking about st. Valentine and I wanted to ask a quick question do people I know it's kind of a global holiday now but just curious do people celebrate Valentine's Day in your country do they celebrate it and if yes how what should are there any traditions do people do gifts they go out do they celebrate it and how so please write it down in the comments I'm so I'm so so curious okay and I will tell you a little bit about Valentine's Day as I know it and as I've seen some research so apparently the history of Valentine's Day is also all just like st. Valentine the romantic traditions associated with this holiday were apparently started by Chaucer around 14th century so before that the word no like romantic traditions and after that apparently it increasingly became increasingly became more romantic and now of course Valentine's Day is celebrated as a day for romance and devotion so it's all about love and romantic love so let me see what you guys are saying so yes if you guys are celebrating if you're just watching us I want to know the following do people celebrate Valentine's Day in your country so apparently yes in China hello and then yes in France so I'm just so curious yeah if you guys are selling valentine's day in your in your country and i wanted to say one thing so in most of the places in the world that celebrated on February 14th right now today which is coming up it's on Wednesday so that's that's what's happening and but I wanted to say one thing in the u.s. it's it's kind of a popular holiday in the sense that it's not just for couples it is a lot romantic love has a big it's a big deal but it's also for children so I would say that children also celebrate like they give gifts their parents their teachers they go to school with little Valentine cards small gifts so I know in some countries it's just mostly about romantic love but this is more just about love however romantic love I think is emphasized so it's it's it's more important but children also celebrate which I didn't know before I moved to the US I didn't expect it and then I saw it I was very pleasantly surprised to see it so that's my a little bit of information let's see so it's it's it's not a very expensive party so okay so some people celebrate and fill the Philippines doing giving flowers okay so doubt about Valentine's story I mean the story about Valentine's Day that I gave especially for st. Valentine its legends so they're not none of these are necessarily true legends I don't know if I've explained properly but legends are things that may or may not be true so this was such a long time ago third century that we don't know what actually is true so if you're wondering like what is this story about st. Valentine well it may not be true but this is what people say okay so if you guys are still writing yeah I would like to know about how are you celebrating Valentine stay in your country so a chance to give gifts among boyfriends and girlfriends thank you for sharing I think it's very very similar in the u.s. so now I want to talk a little bit about an English term that's part of our culture popular culture but the word Valentine is a noun in English so from a name from st.

Valentine it became a noun so a Valentine can be two things first it's a card or a letter usually Valentine's Day is it's especially for for kids but it's it kind of started with letters it's always been about letters or cards or love letters and that's a Valentine it's a card that you give to somebody who you love who you love and many times it's anonymous so maybe you don't have to say who it's coming from that's that's a Valentine so another thing had is a Valentine so of Valentine is the person that you are sending the car to so you can say for example for me this year wes is my Valentine next year probably not ways I'm joking I'm joking I don't know that was funny sorry guys um but a Valentine is a person hey you're here sending the car to sorry I'm still laughing in my head about this joke and or a card or a the next word I want to talk to you about actually before I do I want to welcome everyone who's just joining us and if you are I want to know two things one is how do you say I love you in your language and two is I want to know what do people celebrate Valentine's Day in your country and if you do if you if people do celebrate Valentine's Day in your country what did they do okay so please let me know in the in the comments okay the next word that's associated with this holiday is Cupid okay Cupid cupid in classic mythology is associated it's he's the god of desire and love and attraction and affection and he has a bow and arrow and apparently if you get hit by his arrow you fall in love with a specific person so two people who get hit by Cupid's arrows you know the day they fall in love with each other so that is Cupid and you will see him everywhere he is on Valentine's Day cards he is on letters he might be like in balloons or whatever he is everywhere on this holiday so I wanted to talk about him but also I wanted to share an English expression because today we're also talking about some vocabulary so the expression in English is to play cupid okay to play cupid and to play cupid means to try to bring two people together to set them up which is another English expression so when you think okay this person I think they would they would be perfect for my friend I'm going to try to bring them together we say that maybe you're trying you're playing cupid and I have an example here our friend at work was playing cupid which is a true story it's a true statement when Willis and I first met we had a friend and she was trying to play cupid so every time I was with her she what she thought Wes and I were with would get along really well and she told me you wanna what about Wes look at him isn't he great isn't he handsome and I was like yeah I guess he's okay yeah and then she can't she kept asking me and then I was like oh yeah you were right so it actually worked yeah her playing cupid was really was it was very successful so I wanted to ask you now because we are about to we are about to talk about gifts okay so I want to ask you what are typical Valentine Day gifts in your country so I know you guys were sharing some things that you're doing for Valentine's Day buying chocolates sharing them or sharing gifts with boyfriend/girlfriend I want to know what are some gifts that people typically sure and also if you are just joining please let us know where you're from what is your name and how do you say I love you in your language and even if I miss some of your comments I'm going to go back and read them all because I want to know how to say I love you in any language I can okay so please please let us know okay so what gifts what gifts do people usually give in the u.s. it's kind of there's some typical gifts that people give it's always first it's a card it's very important because of the tradition I think or a letter the second I think most important thing is chocolate or candy but chocolate I think is a huge thing flowers and red roses are very important not very important but very common I would sometimes jewelry like a necklace or something usually maybe with hearts or something on it or sometimes stuffed animals like a little teddy bear these are very common I would say probably the most common would be the first two so I would say if you guys can't guess yet my favorite is obviously and Wes are you paying attention it's uh obviously chocolate this is my favorite gift ever for birthdays Valentine's Day Christmas New Year name the holiday this that's my favorite gift always so aha champagne perfume okay so cards wine dinner red roses very good yeah exactly so there's so many very very similar I would say in the u.s. maybe oh no am I still alive I think yeah okay sorry I accidentally click throw something and I thought I went offline sorry I'm here with you guys okay sorry about that okay so these are the gifts that are typically given and to do now this is something that is again associated with Valentine's Day and these little candy hearts they're about maybe like this small sometimes you see them bigger but they're pretty small and they call they're called sweethearts in the US and there are these little sugar hearts they're made of sugar I think I don't I think they taste very good but people people give them not for the taste but for their message it's they're very cute and there are different colors and they have these these messages on them and they have messages that you can see here like a true love or first kiss or say yes be mine xoxo miss you and things like this so there just little messages that are given in these candy hearts for those of you who don't know xoxo means let's see do you guys know what does xoxo mean and if you don't know I will tell you in a second I'm just curious to see if you know I love candy huh uh-huh me too I'm a huge fan of candy uh-huh so again if you guys are just joining right down how do you say I love you in your language okay so white roses um why are most of the gifts for women III don't think they are I think many times people go out also and there's usually a gift exchange between a boyfriend and a girlfriend I think a lot of people receive candy whether they're a man or a woman or they'll do dinners together and that's sometimes a gift that is that's important so okay so somebody said kisses or XO so xoxo means I which ones which I think X is a kiss and O is a hug something about like I don't know but it means hugs and kisses that's what xoxo means yeah so that's what it is so they have these little cute messages and they show up around Valentine's Day and they are very very cute okay now I'm going to talk about walking going to the restaurant having a nice dinner so we can say that love is in the air so if you guys okay let's let me see what movies you guys are sharing all songs of NDK glass yes I agree I think they're very romantic and Titanic thank you for saying Titanic I am I also think it's a very romantic movie song by the scorpions Twilight sure yeah these are so many romantic movies so I want to hear what romantic songs or movies do you know in English let me think me if I can think of the most romantic movie I can think of from for me it's not a movie that I haven't seen this movie in like well since 2004 since its came out but it's the notebook I I don't even remember if I liked it too much but I just remember I thought wow this is a very romantic movie so the head is the movie I would share um so if you guys just keep writing and I'll keep checking what romantic songs or movies do you know in English okay the second expression that's super cute I think it's cute it's lovebirds okay so this one has a cute history I don't know I'm guessing it's connected but apparently during the Middle Ages it was believed that birds paired in mid-february which is kind of overlapping obviously with Valentine's Day so right now two people that are in love we call them lovebirds just clearly in love acting loving to each other you know kissing hugging holding hands things like that and my my sentence here is the two lovebirds got engaged last week so two people who are in love we can just call them lovebirds and if you are just joining please please please tell us two things one is how do you say I love you in your language and right now we are sharing romantic songs or movies that you know in English um I also love love birds yeah it's very nice so um the notebook is a good one yeah do you think I should rewatch it I I was planning I was actually thinking of rewatching the notebook because it's been so long and I don't remember much from it I just called to say I love you very good yeah so these are great thank you guys for sharing this is great now I have a playlist and a list of movies for Valentine's Day I think we all do so that's wonderful okay so the next one is to have a crush so I added that image there because animals are super cute so that's that's my reasoning okay so to have a crush on we usually say to have a crush on someone and it means to like them romantically and it means to when you have a crush on someone you like them oh you think they're so charming and wonderful and you're enchanted by them you're infatuated with them and sometimes it can be secret so you think that oh this person is so cool everything they say is so interesting while I really like them that's a crush okay so connected to this I wanted to ask you how old were you when you had your first crush do you remember if you remember I'm so curious to know I think if I remember I must have been around six or seven years old when I had a crush and it was not good because my sister had a crush on the same boy and he liked her and not me so that that's my story with my in my first crush so I was wondering if you um if you remember when was the first time how old were you when you had your first crush nine years old 2012 yeah so just very very curious and it it can be innocent okay it doesn't have to be too romantic it can be like like I said when a child like some like somebody else it's one of those words that doesn't have to be very very exceptional eyes okay now my example here is I had a crush on Wes when we first met and this is not something that I usually admit to him because he he is always joking with me about it but it's true when we first met I did have a crush on him so this is how we we say the the sentence structure it's you have a crush on someone so let's see what ages you guys are showing 10 years old 15 20 yeah so that we're all over the place I think we've all had crushes and sometimes they don't necessarily end well like mine didn't so it happens um okay so are you ready for the next one this one is also cute a secret admirer okay um I think this one is widely used in romantic comedies in all kinds of movies about love but a secret admirer is somebody who has feelings for another person but but the second person that's the admirer part the second the first part is that they say who they are they do not disclose their identity okay so there's secret um there's secret admirer okay so usually secret admirers will probably send a letter to let the person know or a little gift to their crush so something I didn't mention when you have a crush on somebody you have a the person you have a crush on is called a crush so a secret admirer will send a letter or a gift or two to the crush a secret admirer and my question to you guys is have you ever had a secret admirer okay I don't think I had I don't think I've ever had a secret admirer but if you had I am very curious to hear about it so if you're just joining we're doing a couple things please right how do you say I love you in your language and right now we are sharing if you've ever had a secret admirer okay and then this is while I talk to you about today probably the the favorite way to spend Valentine's Day for most couples this is a candlelit dinner and it's just a very very romantic dinner for two and sometimes we see it as a candlelight dinner so it can be both it means the same thing and my example here is the couple enjoyed a candlelit dinner together so it's just a very very romantic dinner for two people and it has candle lights and maybe music is playing in the background and it's just very very very romantic okay so this somebody did have somebody did have a secret admirer so there we go I'm sorry that they passed away but that's that's really cool okay so before I show you more or less in English I want to talk about quickly about the the things we've covered today and I want to thank you for sharing what how you're celebrating Valentine's Day if you're celebrating whether you like it whether you don't and just quickly kind of going that over the things that we talked about today we talked about st. Valentine we talked a little bit about Valentine's Day and the connection would st. Valentine and about how its celebrated in different countries we talked about what a Valentine is and it's a person that you give a Valentine to which is a card that you give to somebody that you like your Valentine Cupid is connected to this holiday and we can play cupid so when we're trying to bring two people together we say that we are playing cupid we talked about the gifts that were bringing for Valentine's Day that we gift for our loved ones and many times it's a card or chocolate flowers it doesn't usually get too expensive it depends on who you are I guess some people can but it's usually the two are the first two are the most common we talked about these sweet hearts or the candy hearts with messages of love in them and then we talked about some expressions like love is in the air and we hear this a lot around Valentine's Day we talked about lovebirds which is such a cute expression and there's just two people who love each other and it's obvious it's clearly it's clear to us that they're in love we talked about having a crush and and thank you guys for sharing for sharing how old you were when you had your first crushes I told you about my story about my sister who had the same crush um and I was I think 7 6 6 years old and then we talked about secret admirers and if you've ever had a secret admirer which is somebody who is likes you but they are not for some reason choosing not to share their identity so their secret it's a little bit mysterious a little bit romantic and we talked about probably the favorite way to celebrate Valentine's Day for most couples which is with a nice candlelit dinner and it looks it can look very very beautiful and romantic so I just wanted to let you guys know that we have besides this listen we also have another lesson on English idioms on English idiom so on love ATM so if you're interested please click on it the link is in our description so if you want to know more words or more love idioms please go ahead because I think it's very very useful because you will expand your vocabulary and who doesn't want to know more ways to talk about love in English right it's it's amazing so I wanted to thank you from interactive English for joining me today and was in the chat if you thought this lesson was useful if you enjoyed it if you liked it please like it please share it if you have any questions or comments or concerns or if you want to know more about love other expressions if you have any questions about Wes and I please write them in the comments and we will answer and also I'd like to invite you to join our social media classes because we constantly teach and ask questions and it's really really good practice because you get to answer in English and interact with our community of students so I would really like to thank you guys thank you so much for joining thank you for your questions thank you for your answers for sharing and I would like to say that which is very thankful and we love our community of students and this is why I love Valentine's Day because it's a reminder of love and we love you guys and it's just so wonderful of you to join us and thank you thank you thank you and have a wonderful Valentine's Day and if if you don't celebrate don't worry about it it's still good to learn about love so don't worry about Valentine's Day and didn't just learn about these love idioms and expressions thank you guys so much have a wonderful I think weekend and hi we'll see you next time

Vocabulary - however, nevertheless, nonetheless, in addition, moreover, furthermore

[Music] Hey everyone, my name is Wes from interactiveenglishvideos.com and today I have a vocabulary lesson for you, but it's also a lesson to help you improve your overall English fluency because I'm going to talk to you about these words right here. And they are very important transition words. They are all adverbs and we use them quite often because they make our speech and our writing much easier to understand. So let's well let's make it easier for you because right now I I want to put them in groups. So we have two groups and that first group however, nevertheless, and nonetheless those those adverbs are used to contrast two sentences and you're basically emphasizing how two statements are are different. The next set, which is in addition, moreover, and furthermore, are used to add information. You're adding information to something that was previously said. Now, often these words are interchangeable, but it's very important to know well how often we use these different words, where in the sentence you you can use them and if that changes the meaning at all, as well as any of the slight differences between these words, which there are some, and I will get into that a little bit later.

The one thing I hope that you notice, even though these words may be interchangeable, is that I continue to use different ones. And that's really important because when you are you're speaking and giving a presentation or or if you're writing an essay, it's likely that you will need to use transition words multiple times. And you don't want to just use the same word over and over again. then if you're giving a presentation or you're writing an essay. However, some are more formal than others, and that's what I want to talk to you about right now. So, let's begin with these words right here. However, nevertheless, and nonetheless. These words, these adverbs that we use to contrast two statements and say how things are are different.

So, let me give you an example. I could say, I love the spring season. However, I always get allergies. All right? So, I'm using however to contrast these two these two different ideas because I do I really I love springtime. I it's wonderful. It's great. However, I get allergies. It's something that I hate. I don't like just when I'm coughing and sneezing all the time. So, this is a very useful adverb that I can use to contrast these two statements. Now, I used however because this is this is definitely the most common adverb that you can use if you want to contrast. And because of that, it's probably not the strongest as well. So, in the case of we're talking about spring and allergies, it's more conversational English. Now, I I could use nevertheless. It it's interchangeable. I could say, I love the spring season.

Nevertheless, I I always get allergies. I Some people might think it could sound a little awkward. And the reason for that is because nevertheless, it's it's more formal. It's more formal than however, which means that it's not as common. You are not going to use or hear this word as often as you would hear or use the word however. Nevertheless also really emphasizes the difference. So it it provides a bit more emphasis than however. According to the Oxford English dictionary, strict grammarians insists that nevertheless should be used when referring to something that has occurred, is occurring, or might occur. Let me give you an example. There's a global pandemic. Nevertheless, some people refuse to wear a mask. So in this example, we are we're we're talking about something that is occurring right now. And I think it is definitely appropriate to use nevertheless because we're talking about something that is is a more formal. It's more important and you really want to emphasize that because yes, it's it's very important that we wear a mask.

The chosen one the boy may be. Nevertheless, brave danger I fear in his training. Now, nonetheless is the least common adverb among the group and its usage has really become a little more popular in the last hundred years. So, this word nonetheless, it's also more formal and you again you use it if you really want to emphasize the difference between two statements. But there is one slight difference. According to the Oxford English dictionary, strict grammarians insist that nonetheless should be used when referring to an amount or something that is measurable. So, I can give you an example sentence and say, "The business proposal seemed risky. Nonetheless, we made an investment of $1,000." So, we're talking about money and amount. And I use nonetheless. Now, this this is not an established rule.

Again, these words are interchangeable. The main thing that I want you to take away from all of this is that however is the most common transition word if you want to contrast two statements. And nevertheless and nonetheless, they are more formal and they are going to give a little bit more emphasis when you want to say that two statements are different. Another thing to keep in mind is that these words typically come at the beginning of a sentence, but they don't always have to. They can come in either the middle or the end of a sentence. Let's go back to some of those examples that I just talked about.

There's a global pandemic. Some people nevertheless refuse to wear a mask. So, in this case, you will need two commas around the adverb so that the punctuation is correct. But if you're wondering, well, what's the difference between using it at the beginning or in the middle? I would say that it's not as strong that I if you're putting the adverb at the beginning, you're giving that difference a little more strength. In this case, putting it in the middle, you're kind of saying it as a matter of fact. You're not really trying to highlight that there is such a huge difference. Or I could say, "The business proposal seemed risky. We made an investment of $1,000 nonetheless." All right. So here I put the adverb at the end of the sentence and again in this case I think it's not as strong and this would certainly be less common. The reason why I think people will do this especially in their writing is more for just sentence fluency because you want to structure your sentences in a variety of ways and you may not always want to put the adverb at the beginning. It's good to switch things up now and then. It makes reading more interesting. Now let's look at in addition, moreover, and furthermore. So these words are used when you want to add information. In addition is the most common one. And because it's the most common, I also think it's the least assertive of the three. So let me give you an example. I can say, well, I often try to teach you new vocabulary. In addition, I use short video clips to show you how the word is used in context. So, I'm adding information to what was already said. And in a way, I'm really complimenting the information that I already gave you. That failure clearly stands on its own. Thanks for pointing it out. In addition, your premise is flawed.

Now, moreover is well, it's more formal. It's less common. And it really it adds emphasis on top of what you already said. So in this case, I think it's great if you are trying to be persuasive and you want to build on top of something that you said previously. Let me give you an example. I could say that well he does not have the necessary skills or competency for the job. Moreover, he is untrustworthy and lacks common decency. So, in this case, I'm making a persuasive argument as to why, well, this person, it's not the right person for the job. They don't have the skills. And then I build on top of that and add that emphasis and say probably perhaps even more important that this person is untrustworthy. They lack common decency. So in that case, if you really want to be persuasive and you're making an argument and you want to build on top of it, moreover is a great transition word. The Klingons were too far distant to have been the attackers. Moreover, they also were apparently attracted by distress call. Now, furthermore was a little late to the party, just like nonetheless. It's had its popularity rise in the last hundred years, but it is less common than moreover and it is certainly less common than in addition. But just like moreover, it is more formal and it's going to add a bit more emphasis to the information that you're trying to add. So, let me give you another example. During a pandemic, it's important that we practice social distancing. Furthermore, we should try to wear a mask. All right? I'm really pushing these masks on everyone, but you understand what I'm talking about. I'm adding more information and I want to emphasize it a little more.

So, in that case, furthermore is entirely appropriate. Just like those words used to contrast, in addition, moreover, and furthermore typically come at the beginning of a sentence, but that's not always the case. You may find them in the middle of a sentence after the subject. So, for example, I could say, "Interactive English helps me improve my language skills. Watching these lessons, moreover, builds my confidence and increases my understanding of the English language. So, this is something that I hope that you would say, but really, it's just an example to show you that you can use these words in the middle of a sentence after the subject, but I'd say that it really just it's just not as strong as if you use it at the beginning. So, I hope you learned something new from this lesson. In addition, please remember that however is most commonly used when you want to contrast two different statements. And in addition is most commonly used when you want to add more information.

Nevertheless, do not underestimate these other words because if you want to be a bit more formal or you really want to emphasize that there's a difference or emphasize the additional information, that is when you should use these adverbs. Moreover, it's absolutely necessary that you continuously try to use different words if you are if you're doing things like giving a presentation or you're writing some important email or essay. So, I tried to give you a little bit of a quick review at the end, but I really hope that you paid attention as to how I was using these transition words throughout the lesson. If you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button. As always, thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next

Vocabulary About the Economy | Read and Put New Words In Context

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes and this is Interactive English in case this is your first time here the channel it's all about just helping you practice and improve your English and if this is your first time here please let me know write your name tell me where you're from write that in the comments because I'd love hearing from everybody especially new people to the channel so today's lesson it's about helping you build your vocabulary but also doing this while you're reading because I think reading is so important because you get to well you get to see the correct grammar being used and you also get to learn new words so I want we're gonna look at some different articles we're gonna pick out some words and create a vocabulary list so I don't know if some of you remember a while back I did a lesson about vocabulary related to the coronavirus many learners were asking me about that because it's such such an important thing that's happening all over the world there's a lot of news about it and people were asking about words that are related to this and they wanted to know what the meanings were so I'm going to do something a little similar today but in this lesson we're going to focus on the economy because because of the the coronavirus the economy has become a very a very important topic because a lot of countries have had to close down businesses shut down the economy basically and now we're having a conversation about well what do we do from what do we do from here how do we start this up again and there's a lot of news and information out there so I want to talk about words that are related to the economy so this is going to be a little more advanced these are more advanced words because I think this is a very specific topic but I think it's very useful it's very important especially now because like I said you're gonna be real read a lot of news articles about the you might be watching the news and you would hear these words so as we go through this I am going to do the same thing I have my my vocabulary document right here for the words that we find today and after the lesson I'm going to take these words and I will put them down below in the description of the lesson in case you want to review them or just listen for them as we're going through the lesson I'm also going to show you some of these on this website right here so let me kind of adjust this for her us and we're going to look at some different articles today that are related to the economy and basically sorry about that you can tell this is live we're gonna go through some of these articles pick out some words and we're gonna try to put them in context and see if you understand what they mean and that's how we're gonna create our vocabulary list so I do want to give a quick hello to some of you who are joining me today thank you guys so much great to see you Orlando Jarrah Helen Fatima Erica a-10 how are you dawn thank you guys for joining me if you do have some questions I'll try to answer those but questions about the economy I want to keep this lesson focused on the economy and some words that are related to that to help build to help build your vocabulary so if you have some questions I will try to get to those questions and check them periodically I have a lot of windows open right now as I'm switching back and forth between these so let's go ahead and start with an article all right so if I what I've done is I just did a search for the economy and then I went to the news and I've picked some words out that our pixel I picked out some articles that we can start out with and try to find some words that may be new for you that are important and relevant to everything that's happening right now so let's look at the first article that we have right here which is talking about Kovan 19 economics I'll read it is in case just so and then I'll go back through and we'll stop and look at some words so it says financial gurus bracing for a tsunami of bankruptcies in 2021 so this is an important word that you're gonna hear a lot of people would be talking about bankruptcies so bankruptcy is a noun you can also use it as a verb for example like to go bankrupt and let's look one thing I want to show you which I will reference also if you ever want to know the meaning of a word this is probably one of my go-to online dictionary to put the word in here I think can bridge gives the the meaning of words that are they're easy to understand and when they give you the meaning they don't use very difficult words so I think that happens quite often you look up the meaning of one word and you're reading the definition and then you find these other words that you don't know but can bridge is a little easier so for example if you want to do this and I always encourage students to start making their own vocabulary lists so that they can go back and review and and really build their vocabulary and start to put these words into their active memory so if we look up bankruptcy we can have it so it's a

and get the meaning there so again this is it's an adjective and it means that you are unable to pay what you owe and that you are having had control of your financial matters by court of law to a person who sells your property or death so what I'm going to do let's just go over to our vocabulary page right here and I'm going to add that word down there so if somebody says bankrupt alright it is an adjective and it means that you are unable to pay what you owe now in this context we're talking about bankruptcy which is the noun and you may hear it use with this verb to declare to declare bankruptcy some businesses right now if they are unable to pay what they owe they are declaring bankruptcy and this is basically more of a I'd say it's more of a position that they go through this legal process these companies so that they can restructure their company in order to try and survive and and pay off those debts so in some cases it's not always a bad thing and that instead of a company just saying look we're done they would try to declare bankruptcy in order to restructure the company so that hopefully in the future they can pay off those debts and then they can survive so I'm just gonna put two declare bankruptcy to say the company is unable to pay debts and must be restructured and I'm gonna add structured the word like a legal situation because you would declare bankruptcy so let's go back to our article right here where is it I told you got a lot of pages to open so they're talking about in this situation many of these companies they may experience bankruptcy because they've been closed for a long time and I'll just read I just want to go through a couple these so it says Australia could face a tsunami of bankruptcies when government support packages and existing capital run dry as a result of Kovan 19 a lead financial institutions a lead financial institution has Warren Malcolm Howell bankruptcy trustee and partner at insolvency firm Jurek Sutherland Sutherland forecast that the majority of these bankruptcies will come in 12 to 18 months time thanks to a delay in the economic impact of coronavirus the most at-risk says how our small business owners who have been forced to use personal finances to prop up their businesses during mandatory shutdowns let's go back through and I want to take a few more of these words from this so they're talking about capital and in this case you're talking about capital is referring to money that a company would use to run their business so if I go back over here we're gonna go back and forth capital so capital is just referring to mmm capital money or you could say resources because capital could be like land to used to run business now the other word that I wanted to look at it was in there was insolvency all right this this is the noun most of the time I think you would see this used as an adjective and you would say a business is insolvent or maybe they are solvent so if a company is insolvent it basically means well let's just one make sure that I give you the correct meaning of these words let's check out and see what can bridge has to say insolvent I was gonna say that it the company is unable to pay their obligations and what they owe so yes your it says a company not having enough money to pay debts or or buy goods and you'd say that the company is insolvent so we'll go back over to our vocabulary lists and not able to pay debts and you would say that the company is insolvent there are a couple of other words that I wanted to point out from this article one of them was this word right here when they talked about where is it there's a forecast I think many of you know them but this is a way in which you use words that you may know and you can use them in a variety of situations so when you think of forecasts you're talking about what will happen in the future I think often people will hear this word used when talking about the weather the weather forecast what will the weather like be in the future but you will also hear this when talking about the economy the economic forecast what will the economy look like in the future and then the next one is a phrasal verb that they use down here which is prop up and to prop something up like to prop up the business is just to support and in this case you're basically you're supporting the business but keeping it open keeping it alive and well they're trying to support the business they're trying to prop it up so let's go back over to our list right here and I'm going to add those words to this so we talked about prop up and I almost forgot the other word forecast actually so we're gonna add to forecast which is to kind of predict what will happen in the future and then prop up is just a phrasal verb I'll add that here so you know phrasal verb which is to support something alright to prop something up is to support it so I hope that again these words make sense I hope that it's it's easy to follow and understand as we go through this together I'm just checking that you guys have it yes Muhammad says forecasts for the weather exactly means to predict like Orlando and Saudi Saudis had just said sorry if i mispronounce name so let's go back over to the next article that I want to look at I'm just gonna go through because I want to show you several articles I just want to go through a few paragraphs from each article so this one right here is saying that coronavirus grim reality world economy to shrink by 3.2 percent new UN reports projects so if you don't know if something is grim it's an adjective it means that it's well it's it's negative it's kind of really talking about just something bad and it's an adjective that basically it means bad and you might use it like well a grim reality a bad or dark reality a grim situation a bad situation so we'll add that word in just a moment but I want to get through and look at some of this so this first paragraph I'll read it you can follow along in its world economic situation and prospect or in its world economic situation and prospect the WESP report update launched on Wednesday the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs a lot of different departments the de sa said that as of mid 2020s tick product GDP and developed countries will plunge to minus five percent while the output of developing countries will shrink by 0.3 percent I'm sorry I know that all of this news that we're talking about it's very negative it's not very cheerful of course but the reason why I am doing this is because I think it is very useful it's important and this is what many people are talking about nowadays so I want it I talked about grim the other word or that I think is important or it's actually several words is you might often hear this acronym used a lot and people are talking about GDP which you can see refers to gross domestic product and what that means is it's talking about the amount of goods served the total value of goods and services that a country produces and in a way people will use this to talk about maybe as a measure of how successful the economy is and how the country is growing and they talk about GDP so when you hear that acronym GDP it stands for gross domestic product the other verb that I wanted to look at which I think is useful which you can use in a different way is plunge so in this case if you're talking about think about a graph if you're giving a business presentation and you're showing this chart you're showing this graph and there was a huge drop you could then say there was a a plunge in prices or in this case a plunge in development so you're really referencing a number and you're talking about a huge drop would be a plunge to go down all right so let's add those words from this article to the vocabulary document right here so the first one that I mentioned was grim was is an adjective because they talked about a grim reality and I just say like bad or dark the next one was that acronym GDP which stands for a gross domestic domestic product and often I think instead of saying gross domestic product people are just going to say GDP you will hear it on if you're watching anything about the news about the economy or you see it in articles GDP gross domestic products is the total value of goods and services goods I'll say goods produced or services administered by country all right so that would be the meaning of GDP the total the good the amount of goods and service is the total value and people will use it to measure success all right let's look at I got another article that I want to show you are a couple more so as I said if you're just joining us we're working on putting words in context and trying to build vocabulary so the title of this article is this is about the United Kingdom the guardian view on the UK economy deep depression and a huge bill ahead this is a word that may get thrown around people talking about a depression or they may say at a minimum the economy is heading into a recession a recession is which growth is slowing and it's actually it's it's contracting all right it's going the other way a depression would be more of a time period where there is no growth a lot of people are losing their jobs and this is something that people are worried about if we are going into some sort of global depression so we'll come back I'll come back to this word I just want to have a look at this first paragraph right here let's see so I'll read the paragraph and we'll pick out a few words from this so it says to grasp how low are the expectations for the economy consider this on Wednesday it was announced that the UK's national output had just had its biggest drop since the great crash of 2008 the financial crisis and the immediate response of many analysts was surprised that it hadn't happened further and so the statistics make grim reading grim there's that word again bad over the first three months of this year GDP gross domestic product shrank two percent on on the previous quarter the economy was already slowing in February and then came the UK's first coronavirus deaths in March alone GDP plunged nearly

6 percent I didn't I didn't plan this they just happened to be using these words over and over which is good it's good review like I said these are common the greatest contraction since records began in 1997 amazingly most of the world most of that would have happened over just the last week or of the month the first full week of the government's lockdown the impact was drastic travel agent demand collapsed car plants shut and car plans shut and exports fell off a cliff the winners were few and far between the computer industry got a boost as those having to work from home brought laptops while the paper industry had an amazing few weeks all that hoarding of toilet toilet roll proved good for someone so this is talking about the situation I want to look at a few words so we talked about depression I'm going to add that word some of these words like I said we've already looked at so we talked about grim is an adjective which means bad that's on the list GDP gross domestic product again they're saying it shrank which is the past tense to shrink and we also have that word in there plunged I don't want to click on that it'll take me to another one now what do you think this word means they're talking about it plunge you're a contraction now this you may hear this being used when talking about English and because before I have done lessons on contractions and in English when you contract words like I will be comes out or we have we've you're taking two words and you're pushing them together and you have a shortened version so in this case you're talking about growth if something is contracting it's going back in it's getting smaller is a contraction so depression contraction these are other words that we can use which to talk about the economy or a situation if something collapses I think when you think of the the meaning of the word collapsed is something that just falls down like a building could collapse a bridge could collapse but in this case if they're talking about demand demand is what people want something demand people want it is collapsing so people just don't want anything anymore so these are words that you can use in a variety of situations to describe something like a building fell down it collapsed demand collapsed it fell down there's no demand or if I'm very tired I could say I went home I collapsed on my bed and I was so tired I just I fell down so those I'll add that other word and I want to use this expression right here if you say that something fell off a cliff so when you think about the economy I think often like you see there are so many numbers in there when they talk about 2% 6% and when you say that something fell off a cliff in this context you're really talking about the the numbers that we're moving along and then a doom it just dropped so instead of saying it dropped if you want to really this would be a more way of using a more colorful language to say that there was a huge drop you could say that it fell off a cliff so let's go to the vocabulary document and I'm gonna add those words collapsed fell off cliff let me see hopefully I can remember them so we talked about well before we do again to give you some more examples using kimbridge if we type in that first word a depression all right it does have different meanings which some of you may have heard it used in this other context like if somebody's unhappy and it's a state of unhappiness you are experiencing depression in this case if we go down here we're talking about the economy a period in which there is very little business activity and not many jobs it is a a depression so I'll take this very little business activity and we are going to add it to our vocabulary document down here let's see make sure you guys can see this alright so if we're talking about a depression I will just say period with little business activity and few jobs alright I said some of those other words when you're talking about describing the economy and you can use these words if you're giving a business presentation and you're using numbers and you say that something collapsed alright you're saying that it I'd say just fell down or fell apart alright and in this case they were talking about demand which let's add that word because that's another important word when you talk about the economy and people will talk about the demand for certain things at the end of that article they were they referenced toilet paper so when this all started there was a huge demand for toilet paper many people want something demand the I'd say mmm demand the people who want things alright and maybe it should be talking about people when people want things the other word that you would hear often as well with this I'm just gonna write supply is talking about the availability the availability of things and you may hear this used as a binomial pair and people might talk about supply and demand when discussing the economy they may say well what it we need to think about the supply and demand those two kind of go hand-in-hand because what you want if you're trying to make sure the economy is running efficiently and effectively if there is a demand you want the supply to meet the so that you have this balance between the two the supply and the demand we also said I gave that expression to to fall off a cliff is when you want to express if you're talking about numbers I'll just say to to fall sharply or I'll just add plunge and it's another way of saying that if you say that the demand plunged it fell sharply the demand fell off a cliff it fell sharply alright so let's see I'm trying to think of somebody else orlando is it a downturn so I don't I'm not sure what you're referencing in that one like a depression but that's another good word to write if you're talking about an economic downturn is I would say when the economy changes from positive positive starts a I'd say when the positive the economy starts to contract alright or a change mmm reduce or a reduction in growth because if an economy for example is growing at let's take five percent and then it changes and it starts growing only at three it's still growing in a positive way but you could still refer to that as an economic downturn you started contracting you started going the other way great word all right so that's another word Henry asked about fluctuate if you're talking about that that's a good word a verb to fluctuate is basically to go up and down so for example if you're talking about prices of something and you say the prices fluctuate the prices go up and then they go down up and down and they fluctuate so again these are all great words that you can use if you're describing talking again your your any type of presentation that you may be sorry if you can't see this right down there any type of presentation that you may be giving that you're using numbers and you're describing some graph talking about numbers these are very useful let's do one more article so if we go back over here or is it we talked about this one all right so this one says coronavirus Chancellor Rishi Sunak warns of significant recession so I said before depression is one word that you may hear I think that that is the extreme case that is the worst case at this point I think people are talking about that there is definitely going to be a recession so we are going to add this word to the list in just a moment but I want to look at the article and pick out a few more words right here so let's see if you guys can see all of this so I'll read that first part it says the Chancellor has said it is very likely the UK is in a significant recession as figures show the economy contracting at the fastest pace since the financial crisis remember contracting it's it's going it's decreasing the economy shrank by 2 percent in the first three months of 2020 as coronavirus forced the country into lockdown Rishi Sunak told the BBC that just a few days of impact from the virus in March pushed the economy into decline economists expect even bigger an even bigger slump in the current quarter Mr. Sunak said it is very likely that the UK economy will face a significant recession this year and we're already in the middle of that as we speak that first quarter drop was driven by a record fall in March output and comes after the economy stagnated in the first quarter of 2019 so let's look at some of these words we you've seen some of these in the other articles we've looked at shrank I haven't written that one but again you're talking about the verb to shrink it's it's getting smaller notice that there are many words in here that have the same meaning but when you're writing it's good to use different words I'm sure other teachers have told you that if you're writing an email if you're writing an essay if you're writing something for work you want to try to use different words instead of saying the same thing over and over again so one other word that I want to look at in here slump if you're talking about the economy again there's a bigger slump which is a kind of a rough period a difficult period is called a slump I often think you could also hear this word I think of sports too that if you have a team that starts losing several games in a row they might say you know we're in a slump we're in a bad period right now and you could call that a slump so any you could use this in a variety of situations any time where you're you're having maybe a bit of bad luck and just things aren't working out you could say you know I'm in a bit of a slump right now things are not good so that is one word I'll add and then the other one which again is this one they're talking about stagnating if something stagnates so let's go back over to our cambridge so you guys can again to reference this if we're talking about a recession and you can kind of get the idea how it's different than a depression a period when the economy of a country is not successful and conditions for businesses are bad so the it's it's just not successful business is bad and that's happening right now so you could say that right now we are in a bit of a global recession and if it keeps going if things get worse it could turn into a depression so this is probably where we're at right now not successful bad conditions I also use the word I wanted to look up stagnate just to see what they have so if something is stagnating again if you are describing some situation perhaps a graph and you're using numbers and you're pointing to this chart and you could say that you know growth stagnated that it's staying the same it's not growing it's not developing it's stagnating so let's go over to where is it our vocabulary list and we're gonna add those words to this document so instead I'll add recession right below depression recession period with bad with a business situation and poor well I'll just have that I forgot the exact meaning of they said but I can go back and check it out so we're talking about right now we are in a recession if things get worse it could turn into a depression I told you down here let's add this word oh sorry I added recession up there for us and down here I'm gonna add slump so slump again is an adjective and it means a period in which things I'd say are not going well alright so I told you that if there is an economic slump this period where things are not growing perhaps the economy is contracting or if you're talking about sports I gave analogy to that if a team is a period where they're just losing they lose one game they lose the next game you could call it a slump and then we said to stagnate is when there is no growth or development to stagnate all right so and I I again if you saw that I just show some articles at random I looked at some of these articles this morning and just kind of pick them out and thought that oh these these articles have some useful words in them so I will take these words from our vocabulary list I will put them down in the description but I hope as we went through those articles you notice that you saw the words again and again and again so I hope this helps if you are reading a news online article something to do with the economy and you might encounter these words and then you can try to put them in context in case you forgot what they mean or hopefully you as you start to see these words more and more you will just remember their meaning it is such a wonderful way reading is a great way to build your vocabulary especially with words that observin orlando booted a sleepwalker Angela Aden hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend stay safe stay healthy and I will see you next time so long

WAYS TO SAY "I'M SICK" | Learn these Super Useful Phrases

oh god i'm not really that sick that was just for effect obviously i feel well enough to to create this lesson right now but i i have been sick quite a bit this fall and winter it's that time of the year when i think a lot of people get sick and that's why i want to teach you some different ways that you can tell someone i'm sick in general i often like to tell people you know i'm feeling a little bit under the weather i'm feeling under the weather this is an idiom that i think is pretty common uh in just casual conversation and it means that you're like a little sick that it's nothing really serious but instead of saying that you're sick or a little sick you could just say yeah i'm feeling i'm feeling under the weather i am just feeling under the weather and i think that i will go home and rest and i really think this is a useful lesson because it's great to learn new ways to say things that are pretty pretty common in our daily lives like like being sick so if you like adding variety to your language skills please subscribe turn on notifications that way i can become your teacher my name is wes the channel is interactive english and that's what it's all about trying to help you improve and reach your fluency goals the next way that you can tell someone you're sick is just to say yeah i have a cold and a cold is a common infection it affects your nose your throat you may cough a lot and it's just a general statement to tell someone that you're sick you can even add bit of i have a bit of a cold if you want to tell them that it's mild it's not too serious you could say you have a bit of a cold now if you want to go to the other end and say that you were very sick you could tell someone oh i'm sick as a dog and this is an informal statement it's also a simile because you're you're comparing yourself to a dog it's actually been around for hundreds of years a long time ago dogs were seen as undesirable animals and there were quite a few statements that that talked about dogs negatively just like this one so when you say you're sick as a dog it means that you're really sick often i think there's vomiting involved and yeah it's not good to be sick as a dog no rations fresh water kowalski's sick as a dog enrico he's trying to eat him you could also say i don't feel so well it's a very common statement and i often i think people would use this one when they're they're starting to feel sick that it's just beginning and you can let someone know that this is what's happening like yeah i don't i just don't feel so well i don't know what it is but i don't feel well i know talking about being sick is a bit of a downer and i want to hit the pause button on that and talk to you about something that's going to be really exciting and make you feel good and i'm gonna just throw this off so i i seem a little healthier right now and i wanted to let you know that enrollment is now open if you'd like to join my speaking course this will be the first speak up course of 2022 so it's a great way to start the year on the right foot keep your english skills healthy and alive and the course is all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally and there is sick and the next uh well let me uh let me get the the blanket uh back on because it gives the right gives the right look for this lesson i have been feeling a little under the weather i'm feeling better now but the next one that i have is i might be coming down with something and you would tell somebody this if you're again if you're just starting to feel sick you're using that modal of possibility might and often it refers to a cold and it's just letting someone know that your immediate future does not look good and then we can change this sentence just a little and take that modal out of there and now we have i've come down with something so in this case you are telling someone that you are sick so you're using something because maybe you have not been to the doctor you don't know what it is probably you think it's a cold or you could use this because you just don't want to be very specific perhaps you're calling in sick to work and you don't want to tell them exactly what's going on you could just say yeah i've come down with something georgie you're coming with us yesterday lunch um actually i've come down with something it's like a little tickle oh could also tell someone i'm feeling a bit run down so to feel run down this is an idiom it means that you you feel tired and weak and once again this is one that you would use that if you're just starting to feel sick and i think that's because at the beginning people often feel tired and and weak and you could say yeah i feel a bit run down that's how i feel now but perhaps in the future it's going to turn into a cold or something else so far i've talked about general ways to say i'm sick but right now i want to teach you some ways to be more specific and describe the illness you may be experiencing so you could tell someone i have a splitting headache and i i like this one you can use splitting i don't i don't like having a splitting headache that's not good but i i like this informal phrase because you can say that you have a splitting headache to say that you have a very bad headache it could be caused by a cold or maybe stress i know when i've been sick sometimes i've had a splitting headache where's all this hesitation coming from i i'm sorry i just have a splitting headache let's stick with the head and you can tell someone i'm congested so congested just means abnormally full and you would say i'm congested mostly to talk about your nose but you could also refer to your head in general if everything it just feels full up here you could tell someone i'm congested right now i feel a little bit congested but it's all it's working its way out now if you want to be more specific really just talking about the nose then you could tell someone i'm stopped up and in that case it means that you might be having trouble i am a little congested in that case it means that you might be having a little trouble breathing you're constantly blowing your nose trying to get all that mucus out of there and yes you could tell someone yeah i'm stopped up now if you're coughing a lot then you could say i'm coughing up a storm so this is an informal phrase in the u.s and if you if you say something up a storm it refers to doing something with a lot of energy or strength or ability oh i'm just packing up a storm because she has been tweeting up a storm i wrote up a storm making book after book it can be used to refer to things that are both good and bad in this case it's not good to be coughing a lot if you tell someone yeah i'm just i've been coughing up a storm now i will say that i think you would more likely use this phrase to make an observation about someone else if if this other person is coughing a lot then you could say yes he or she is coughing up a storm you could also say i have a fever which is a little more specific or or say i'm running a temperature both of them mean the same thing you're just saying that your head is hot because your body temperature has risen which is a sign that something is wrong because there are many illnesses associated with a fever you could also tell someone i caught a bug so to say that you caught a cold is a common collocation those are words that are frequently used together but in this case we're we're just replacing cold with bug and if you caught a bug it refers to a virus or bacteria and you could say yeah i caught a bug now if you want to be a little more specific with this often somebody might say something like oh i caught a stomach bug and in that case you're referring to the stomach being affected which then means that you are probably getting sick and vomiting if you tell someone that that you caught a stomach bug and you could also use 24-hour bug that's another uh phrase that's pretty common and you're just telling someone that you're you're you're pretty sick for just this short period of time and then it goes away it's a 24-hour bug you need a prescription it's a 24-hour buckets just going around our family caught a 24-hour bug a few months ago and it sucked also when talking about stomach sickness you you could tell someone yeah i can't keep anything down so in this case you're you're talking about vomiting that you're unable to keep food in your stomach and this is what happens commonly when you catch a stomach bug you may also tell someone something is not sitting well or the food is not sitting well so in general if something does not sit well then that means that you don't like it so in this case you're referring to food and your stomach does not like it so you could say yeah it's just it's not sitting well maybe you have a stomach ache perhaps it could refer to a little bit of food poisoning that you feel it in your stomach and you hopefully can keep it down but you could just tell someone yeah just something's not sitting well except for that yokohama beef bowl i tried for lunch not sitting so well and then if you want to be very specific you could just tell someone i have the flu it's very common

WEIRD & STRANGE IDIOMS | Supercharge Your English Fluency

let's talk about some weird and strange idioms in english and an idiom is a fixed set of words that have a particular meaning that's very different than the meaning of the individual words so if i say something is a piece of cake many of you may be familiar with this idiom i'm not talking about food i'm just saying that something is easy and that is also it's a bit of a strange idiom as well but before i teach you these different idioms let me introduce myself in case this is your first time here my name is wes the channel is interactive english which is all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills so if that's what you want to do hit that subscribe button turn on notifications so that you will learn about future english lessons so really the purpose of this lesson is to help you build your vocabulary but also improve your english comprehension because these are idioms that you may hear in everyday conversation because they're a bit informal but you could also hear them in movies and tv shows so it's good to be aware of them so that you understand what people are talking about let's begin with our first idiom which is pardon my french so this is a phrase that is used to apologize for some offensive language if you say some a word that is bad you would then follow it with this idiom and you might say pardon my french if you were to say like this is [___] pardon my french it's almost like you're you're trying to say that the bad word is part of another language but this idiom is used in a really a specific context if you're talking to another person or perhaps a group of people and you kind of want to to show respect and you want to be polite but for some reason you really need to say this bad word that use this offensive language so you would follow it with pardon my french it's like you're trying to say that well hey this is not the way i normally speak i usually i do not use this language and you would say something that might be offensive and then follow it with pardon my french this is not to say i don't get a ration of [___] in every conversation pardon my french pardon my french today has been a gosh dang mother fudging sugar show the fact is the industry is all of us by the balls pardon my french your honor then we have to weasel out of something and i like this idiom because well i like idioms that have animals in them and to weasel out of something it means you're trying to avoid something by being dishonest and i think we could all relate to this idiom if you have some housework to do i know that i have housework that i have to do sometimes my wife might ask me to do something and i'm like well wait i got to go somewhere i'll be right back and yeah i try to weasel out of doing the housework i think again we can all relate to this one to weasel out of something hey stroker 10 bucks for the cake don't weasel out on me i'd be taking an even bigger risk i didn't hand this to you personally you're not going to weasel out of my deal again you can weasel me out of this physical i will blow your mind by doing something incredibly holy at some point amen hold your horses this is well i think this is actually probably one of the more common idioms and it just means that you're you're telling somebody to be patient to wait a moment calm down relax hold your horses and i it is a very strange idiom because i have no idea how hold your horses somehow became the patient but that's the way it is so this is good idiom if you want to use it and tell somebody hey just be patient just calm down wait a second hold your horses hold your horses i'm coming well apparently it is because you know this is taking forever it's forever hold your horses hold your horses down in front come on sweetie buddy the next strange idiom is pot calling the kettle black and this idiom is used to point out uh hypocrisy so if there's a situation and you're trying to point out this hypocrisy you would just say that that statement you'd say well that's that's the pot calling the kettle black so to to help give you a little more context and meaning say that you are trying to weasel out of something and i tell you like hey you should not avoid this you should do it you should not try to weasel out of it and then later on you you learn that i am also trying to maybe weasel out of the same thing or something else and then you would tell me you point out that hypocrisy and you would say well that's the pot calling the kettle black why don't you go put some clothes on well isn't that the pot calling the kettle black or uh african-american suddenly she's thinking of filing a restraining order well isn't that the pot calling the kettle black drinking while at school is just stupid and most importantly any of you guys drinking it all is illegal it's a fair amount of the pot calling the kettle black then we have kitten caboodle and this this weird idiom means well the whole group of something of people the the entire explaining that they're just joking that they're being sarcastic and you would say yeah it's just it's just a little tongue-in-cheek after he was threatened by a group that somewhat tongue-in-cheek called itself the game is straight as an oklahoma highway it seems like kind of an opportunity missed would have been funny well i i feel that they were just trying to be tongue-in-cheek ah a winky face i guess that could be helpful if i'm saying something tongue-in-cheek here is a very weird idiom and that is wet behind the ears and it has a pretty well straightforward meaning if you would describe somebody as wet behind the ears you're basically saying that they're inexperienced and i don't know well i don't know how this came about that went behind the ears became somebody who's inexperienced but it's it's good to know and i could say that yeah when i first started making these video lessons i was wet behind the ears i felt a little uncomfortable being in front of a camera the the quality of the videos were not that great and yeah it was because i was wet behind the ears graduated six years ago so you're 27-28 yeah oh you don't look at thank god my last assistant was only 23 and still went behind the ears in fact even you went somewhere behind the ears fbi agent decided to put some informant in my cartel next is gung ho and if you say that you are gung ho it means you're very excited and eager to do something i am always gung-ho to teach you guys new english lessons each week especially ones that help you build your vocabulary that is something that i am gung-ho about and i hope that you are gung-ho to hit that like button why don't you let your new assistant take all this down wow you're a gung-ho you're getting a new assistant we were all pretty happy when jeff came around he became really gung-ho about avid's documentary yes his arm is paralyzed yes his legs are paralyzed why is everyone so gung-ho to connect those two conditions then we have a very weird idiom which is mind your p's and q's and i i in my opinion i think this idiom is perhaps a bit older it's not one that i have heard in quite some time and what it means if somebody tells you to mind your p's and q's they're really telling you to mind your manners to be careful about the way that you behave and i i think people might use it more often if you're talking to somebody perhaps a child or somebody who's just really being very immature you could tell them to to mind their p's and q's that's right capital city and former member of the soviet union and we kindly request y'all mind your p's and q now i want everybody to mind the p's and q's that means no effin and jeffen the next idiom is a bull in a china shop and often you you would say that perhaps you're talking about a person and you would say that someone is like a bull in a china shop and what that means is that this person is not really careful in the way that they move around or even behave and the idiom if you think about it it makes sense because if you have a china shop china it's very uh very fragile very delicate a bull is not the animal that you would want to have in a china shop because everything's going to break so in a way it's almost like you're saying that somebody is just not delicate in a particular in handling a particular situation and you could say that that they were acting like a bull in a china shop it's like an elephant chinese change up go in the china shop anyhow hey i am curt get out now get out bull and china shop out of my house my temple this is where i come to find peace dog you're coming in here like an emotional bull in a china shop then we have this strange idiom to bite the dust and i really like this idiom because i am a fan of queen and they have a famous song called another one bites the dust and if you say that someone or something bites the dust it means well to die to come to an end or to fail so if you don't succeed at whatever you were attempting to do you could tell somebody yeah like i was trying to to jump over this on my bike and i just bit the dust i did not succeed i failed or if you want to talk about well something dying probably more common you would refer to maybe an insect as opposed to a person because you don't want to talk about people that way you don't want to act like a bull in a china shop you want to be a little more caring but if we're talking about like a mosquito and you kill a mosquito then yes that mosquito bit the dust it means his current relationship is about ready to bite the dust hard ass counselors bullies all by the dust but timmy's still standing i'm laughing because yeah this next idiom i think is very strange i have no idea where it came from but bob's your uncle and this idiom you may hear it in the u.s from time to time but i think it's more common in the uk and ireland and what it means is it's really just a way of saying well there it is it's done that's it and often i think people would use it after giving a set of instructions

you're telling somebody to do something and then once you're finished telling them what to do you could just end it with bob's your uncle sit down big smiles plant the bug underneath the table easy peasy japanese bob's your uncle that's sick so i i could give you guys some instructions and say you know first watch this entire lesson second hit that like button third write to me in the comments and bob's your uncle there you have it it's done it's over bob's your uncle and if you followed those instructions then i want you to write that to me in the comments and just say bob's your uncle and then i know that yes you did everything that i asked you to do i hope you enjoyed the lesson and learn some new strange and weird idioms and i will see you next time so long

WHERE TO PLACE ADVERBS? | ADVANCED ENGLISH GRAMMAR

today I have a very useful lesson for you it is a grammar lesson and it is all about adverbs what's up guys my name is Wes this is Interactive English which is the place that you want to be to practice and improve your English and today I have a grammar lesson for you it is about adverbs but specifically it is about adverb placement where where do we put these tricky little adverbs so this this is a very useful lesson because we use adverbs all the time and it's actually it's also a common question that we get from you guys about well if I'm gonna use an adverb where does it go because you sometimes see them at the beginning of the sentence you sometimes see them in the middle and you sometimes see them at the end of the sentence so I'm gonna talk to you about some different types of adverbs and where you would most commonly find them in the sentence now Before we jump into

if I want you to say hello say what's up in the chat I just want to hear from you guys tell me your name tell me where you're from because we just love hearing from you so hello Amano's so Maya unisom yet mooshka Nashawn a man well Pablo hello hello hello welcome thank you guys for joining me today for this super awesome lesson so let's just begin with something simple and easy and I just want to tell you quickly well what are adverbs so adverbs it's a word or phrase that modifies the meaning of an adjective a verb or other adverb expressing manner place time or degree that that in a nutshell is what an adverb is it is a part of speech now I mentioned already that you might find it in one of three positions and these are the three that I'm talk to you about today so you could find it in the initial position which when I say that I'm talking about the first word of the sentence you can find it in the middle position which I would say the middle is anywhere between the first word and the last word it gets a little it can get a little confusing what where the middle is but in general anywhere between the first word and the last word and then you could also have it in the final position which is at the very end of a sentence or you could even say the end of your main clause so the the goal behind this lesson is not to think like well I'm gonna memorize this and then it's it's just gonna be done I'm going to know this information because when you talk about advertisements it can be confusing it can be tricky and it's more something that you just need to practice and become familiar with and then you'll just naturally start using it correctly in your writing or when you're having a conversation so it's not about trying to learn necessarily the rules because like

I said the you know you can have adverbs in more than one place it's more so becoming comfortable with the type of adverb it is and then where you might find that in the sentence so as we go through this as we talk about these adverbs and where they are placed I'm gonna give you some general rules of thumb so the first one the first rule of thumb that I have for you is to stress the adverb to give it a little more emphasis you place it before the subject in the initial position so in that case it would be the first word of the sentence and it depends not only again on the type of adverb but also what you're trying to do what you want to emphasize so for example check out that sentence down below repeatedly I called you but you didn't answer so when I say it like that I have a little bit more of an emphasis on repeatedly that that is important information because I could use that adverb in the middle position I could say I called you repeatedly but you didn't answer and in that case you understand it but that that's not the part of the information that I wants to be highlighted so if we put it at the beginning you're kind of giving that adverb a little bit more stress repeatedly I called you but you didn't answer so that that is useful information that's something to keep in mind is you know when you see it at the beginning of a sentence it's going to give a little bit more emphasis to that adverb and because it's a little bit more important it's something you want to emphasize so keep that in mind and with that let's talk about some of the adverbs that you will find in the initial position and if you're just joining us today we're talking about adverb placement and where they go which part of the sentence so in the initial position I first want to talk about conjunctive adverbs now what a conjunctive adverb is it joins a statement to the preceding clause or sentence so if you want to know what that means it's basically it's a word that that's connecting information from the sentence before an example like these words right here they're also referred to as signpost you may have already seen it we did a lesson on signpost and listening for these words because they help guide us through the presentation or help guide us through a conversation and it's important to be able to listen to these words so all of these words right here would be conjunctive adverbs however moreover also next finally therefore and the they would come at the very first part of the sentence and it's connecting information with the sentence before now you may not be able to see it but I want to give you a little bit information up there you might notice that asterisk and what that says it it may also be used in the middle position so again just because you see however or moreover most of the time you will find it at the beginning of the sentence in that initial position however it may also be in the middle position it's not as common but grammatically you could use it there so let's look at an example right down here first and first we learn the meaning of these adverbs next we learn where they go so we learn the meaning and next we learn where they go the first and next again those are conjunctive adverbs they are time order words because it's telling us the sequence of things and this is this is a little more basic I think most of you are familiar with that when you're talking about when you're telling a story first next then after that those are conjunctive adverbs and they often come at the very beginning of a sentence so let's look at another type of adverb and where they go so you can also have evaluative or or viewpoint adverbs and these are adverbs that show you your attitude your opinion or your point of view about something some information again right here you might notice they may also be used in the middle position but but most of the time when you're having a conversation or if you're reading a book and you see these adverbs they will they will often come in the initial position actually obviously apparently personally fortunately and interestingly let's let's let's practice this right now I want you to use the adverb interestingly and tell me something tell me your opinion interestingly bla bla bla bla what happens what is something that is interesting or that happened that was interesting interestingly something happens so practice using that write us write a sentence in the chat give us an example because it's always good to keep practicing what we've learned and I gave you an example right there personally you're kind of giving your opinion about something personally I think you should hit that like button and down below right I'm kind of trying to look at it right now that would be my personal opinion about what what's going on I think you guys should hit that like button so again if you can see right right right an example sentence I'm waiting to see if anybody can give us that that isn't interestingly oh you could say again at the at the beginning interestingly you know that that was interestingly that was a great question interestingly I have time to watch your lesson perfect interestingly I was about to watch a movie exactly you're giving us some of that information so these are evaluative viewpoint adverbs you often find them in that initial position let's look at our next rule of thumb so if we're talking about the adverb having little to no emphasis if there's little to no emphasis on the adverb place it after the subject and before the verb in the middle position again the middle position it's that is not always the specific position for that the middle position can kind of be arranged but often you would find the adverb between this between the subject in the verb it's considered the middle position and when it's there it's just not emphasized like I said if it's in the initial position it gives it a little bit of emphasis so my example sentence is Wes sometimes eats an entire milk a bar before going to bed sadly enough yes this is true this is one of my guilty pleasures and if you don't know what a guilty pleasure is it is something that you do that feels good which is the pleasure part but you know that you shouldn't be doing it and you feel guilty about it because before I go to bed I know I shouldn't eat a chocolate bar but I want to it tastes good I do it and then afterwards I feel a little guilty for doing it and actually that that's why that I do eat right there that that's my latest guilty pleasure right there is that Milka Oreo bar so again we use that that sometimes it's not emphasized it gives us some information because it's telling us how often something happens but but it's not something that that's emphasized in the sentence so with that because it's telling us how often something happens the first one that I want to talk to you about our frequency adverbs and when you're learning adverbs these are like some of the first adverbs that we would learn frequency adverbs of frequency because they tell us how often something happens but again even though we find them in the middle position most of the time right here they may also be used in the initial position or the final position these adverbs are pretty flexible as to where they go in the sentence and again it's not so much trying to learn well this is where I'm always going to use it it's a matter of just practicing getting exposed through reading and listening and doing lessons like this so that you just start to internalize the information and just start using it correctly on your own so again you should proud you are probably familiar with those adverbs of frequency always usually often sometimes rarely never and as an example this is true we always ask you to write to us in the comments and I just noticed right there I made a mistake you can see it it should say right to us in the comments not right to use in the comments so again you guys can it's something we always ask we always ask you to write to us in the comments we also always ask you guys to hit that like button right there we always appreciate it right now for example I'm so tired after working all day so again you would find these degree adverbs in mostly in the middle position one thing I want to say is that the degree adverbs when you say a lot or a bit those often go in the final position I know I talk about things and use a lot quite regularly something happens a lot and when you're using that it's often going to go at the final position and not the middle position but many of these other degree adverbs you will find in the middle position also this is just a sample these are not all of the adverbs of degree I just picked some that I thought are more common and and that you use more regularly so let's look at another rule of thumb alright and this is kind of taking us to the the final position and it just says most adverbs are at the final position of the main clause or even the sentence especially if you're talking about just a simple sentence that has a subject and a verb such as the one I gave you that example the children run quickly so most adverbs that we use you're gonna find them in that final position after the verb and it's an adverb that is modifying the verb and telling us more about that action the children run quickly of course that that is my main Clause that is a complete thought of course you can you can often add two sentences in which case it's still gonna be at the end of the main clause but you can add on top of that and you could say the children run quickly when the school bell rings and you can add a dependent clause on there so make it a complex sentence but it really depends on the sentence type but especially when you're talking about a simple sentence the main Clause you have a subject a verb often adverbs might will be found in that final position so let's talk about some types of adverbs that are found in the final position first we have manner adverbs and this such as that example sentence it tells us how something is happening it modifies that verb they're often found in the final position but they may be used in the middle position as well I will I will tell show you that in just a moment so you have these manner adverbs like something happens carefully it happens slowly it happens quickly easily badly loudly sadly and my example sentence they talked about their feelings openly we can use that at the end of that at that sentence and it's saying how they talked they talked about their feelings openly now again you can use you can take that manner adverb and I think it's I think it's just as common that you might hear someone say they they talked openly about their feelings you can also put it between the subject and the verb and say they openly talked about their feelings and I think this is where people can get a little confused where you have this one word that can go here and here and here and I know as a language learner people want to know like just just tell me one place to put it and that's where I'm gonna put it and again don't worry so much about thinking well this is what it has to be like it's all about getting exposure with reading and listening and like I said lessons like this so so that you learn a little bit more and and get that exposure so the next time you're having that conversation or you're writing that email or whatever you're doing you'll just start using them correctly because it's gonna be like oh okay I know I can use it here I know I can use it here so let's look at some more time adverbs this is these are other words that I'm pretty sure you're probably familiar with because they tell us when something happens and often you find them in that final position today tomorrow yesterday a while ago at night now but again they may be used in the initial position as well if we want to emphasize it because a very common sentence we might say is we breakfast in the morning you're saying when this happens we breakfast in the morning now if I want to put that in the initial position I can and I would say in the morning we breakfast and by putting it in the initial position again just recognize that it does add a little more emphasis to to that adverb by saying well this this is important in the morning is important so most of the time you're going to find it at the final position at the end but it can be used in the beginning of the sentence especially if you want to add a little bit of emphasis to to what you're trying to say so now you're familiar a little bit more with the different positions where you might find these adverbs in the initial position the middle position or the final position so I do want to practice using some of these and do that but first I just want to have a little fun you can have a little fun with adverbs as well and here to do these two questions does wess work hard does wess hardly work so this is one I always would go into a classroom and joke with students and say are you working hard or are you hardly working and sometimes students would think about that hmm working hard because they are actually two different adverbs two different meanings that the adverb hard you're you're doing something with a lot of effort and energy or hardly which is almost a little bit of the opposite means you know very very little so you can work hard or you can hardly work they're opposites but it's a little fun with with word play you can ask ask somebody that are you are you working hard or are you hardly working so it's fun I just wanted to share that with you guys I also wanted to share that we are on patreon now so you can check us out there we have some very cool rewards and I will leave a link in the description so let's look at let's let's practice using some of these adverbs so I'm gonna give you a sentence and I kind of want you to think well what notice where the adverb is and then what type of adverb do you think it is and and kind of what word would you use to fill in the blank and of course there's more than one word that you could use so let's practice using these adverbs so the first one is right here okay it is at the beginning of the sentence way over there I have those different types of adverbs that we talked about in this lesson conjunctive adverbs a value to viewpoint frequency degree manner time which type of adverb do you think this is right it is in the chat and also fill in that blank what word would you use to go in that blank mmm the earth is round and not flat so what what type of adverb do you guys think we should put in there let me know in the chat so it's at the beginning of the sentence and I told you when it's at the beginning that that's gonna help us give a little more emphasis to it so we talked about two adverbs at the beginning conjunctive adverbs and evaluative viewpoint so this is obviously expressing a viewpoint you guys should have said viewpoint and the word that I would have put in there is obviously obviously the earth is round and not flat it is an evaluative viewpoint adverb what about so remember again the the important thing one important thing that I wanted you to take away from this lesson if that adverb is in the initial position there is a little more emphasis that that that information is important all right let's look at the next one I saw that image and I was like okay I'm just gonna try to find a way to incorporate that in one of the lessons so I hmm pick my nose what kind of adverb do you think that is again it's coming between the the subject and the verb so what kind of what kind of adverb do you think that is and then what would you guys put in there if you're gonna fill out you're gonna share share with us and and put that put an adverb in there which adverb would you use so we're talking about it goes between the subject and the verb it's it is a frequency adverb yes Amazo you put frequency in there that is perfect and getting some interesting answers some people usually always hardly occasionally I got one excellent rarely usually what I just put in there you know I sometimes pick my nose it's an adverb of frequency and again you know this is something I think it's just natural I think we owe everybody does it whether they would admit it or not it's no big deal so let's look at the next one the next one he spoke hmm during his testimony now this one it's not not tricky I think but what do you guys think that is what type of adverb and then what word could go in there if you're thinking about that situation you're in a courtroom and somebody is speaking it is talking about how they speak now I would say that I've added some information that during his testimony you could just take that out and say he spoke hmm and that is your main clause that is your sentence you're talking about how someone spoke so what type I think some of you said yes we're talking about how somebody spoke it is an adverb of it is a manner adverb and I would say he spoke honestly during his testimony he spoke honestly so this is this is again this is great information you guys are here you're practicing this is the best way to learn instead of thinking about it like oh I have to learn a rule don't think about it like that just just practice these adverbs and understand that they don't always have to go in just one position in a sentence they are a little flexible and you can use them in different ways and the more you practice the more you listen the more you read then then the better you are going to become and it's really going to help you improve your fluency skills and on a side note if you really want to improve your fluency skills check out our secret lesson I've linked it down below so check out our secret lesson which is going to help you it is ten ways to help you master English fluency you can click on the link and truly become a part of the interactive English community and we will email you that lesson link is in the description so check that out thank you guys so much for watching as always please like and share this lesson if you have questions write to us in the comments because we just love hearing from you guys this is such an amazing community and we're so happy to have you guys with us and join us for these lessons we really appreciate it so thank you thank you thank you Thank You Fabio jr. Molly Giselle mr. Sam thank you guys so much sorry if I've missed some names evidence other days Sandra I I didn't um Thun Thun Wafi everything you want excellent hey km Ravi Dejan thank you guys for being here and checking out this lesson keep practicing keep watching it's really that's really what's gonna help you improve your English the most thank you guys for being here and I will see you next time

WILL vs GOING TO | Learn to correctly talk about the future

what will you do what are you gonna do are these questions the same or are they different let's find out hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel is all about trying to help you improve your english fluency and today i want to talk to you about the differences between will and going to we use willing going to to talk about the future this is very common we use them in everyday conversation and the first thing that i want to tell you about will and going to is that you cannot always use them interchangeably you cannot always use either one when talking about things in the future it really depends on what you're talking about and the situation but if you do use the wrong one i think people will still understand what you're saying it just may sound a little awkward so i want to start out with how will and going to are similar and how you may use them interchangeably and the first way that you can do this is when you're talking about no prior plan let's say that you ask me about my plan tomorrow i could say i'll probably stay home tomorrow notice two things first i contract will and say i'll probably stay home tomorrow this is very common in spoken english and the next thing is that i'm using probably just to show you that that there is no prior plan and i could also use going to and say the same thing and i'd say well i'm probably gonna stay home tomorrow and in this case i want you to notice that i'm reducing going to and saying gonna which is also very common in spoken english and i'm gonna use that a lot throughout this lesson i just said it again right there so so just listen for that you can also use will or going to when making predictions let's say you're talking about the weather and you ask what's the weather going to be like tomorrow and i say well i think it'll rain again i'm contracting will it'll rain and i'm using i think just to show you that yes this is a prediction and i could also use going to shores i think it's going rain later it's gonna rain that's great the videos did the work for me here are the two sentences and in both of those videos they also reduced going to with gonna so when you're making predictions you can use either will or going to and and i will come back to this a little bit later on when talking about the differences and go into a little more detail but before i teach you the differences between will and going to i want to tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson which is lingoda and as i talk to you about this i'm going to use will and going to a lot so just listen for it so lingoda is getting ready to start another language sprint which is great news for all of you who would truly like to improve your english and right now i want to talk to you about how signing up for the language sprint will help you achieve your fluency goals so the very first thing i want to tell you about the language sprint and this is a great motivator is that if you attend all of your classes you can get up to 100 cash back and there are really several reasons why i think that studying with lingoda is going to help you and the first one is that well these are small group classes which means you will have plenty of opportunities to speak second classes are available 24 7 which makes learning very convenient and third these classes are very affordable as low as 10 euro per group class i have even studied with lingoda that's me right there taking some classes in spanish and i can tell you it was a great experience i was able to gain more speaking confidence build my vocabulary as well as improve my pronunciation which is something that i really needed so let me give you some more information about the language sprint because there are two different options you can take the super sprint in which you will take 30 classes a month for three months and if you attend all those classes you can get 100 cash back or you can take the sprint in which you will take 15 classes a month for three months and if you attend all those classes you can get 50 cashback the sprint will begin on april 28th and you can sign up until april 16th but keep in mind spaces are limited and when you sign up you will pay a 49 euro deposit and then pay for the classes in three monthly installments and because joining the language sprint is going to change the way that you learn english you can use the voucher code change 51 to get a 10 euro discount off your deposit just click on the link in the description to learn more about the language sprint don't forget to use that voucher code change 51 and sign up for some online classes so that you can reach your fluency goals now let's talk about some of the differences between will and going to and i want to teach you how they're commonly used so we use will when we're talking about a quick and immediate decision and we use going to when talking about a decision that has already been made like a prior plan let's compare these two we're out of cinnamon toast crunch and this is true we are out of these cinny minis i'll go get some i just made that quick decision right now when you said we were out okay yeah but that's great are you gonna stay here are you actually going to go get something i'm going oh so we're we're talking about a future action in which it was a sudden decision there was no plan to do this so we use will let's look at the same situation and we're going to use going to and it's a prior plan we're out of cinnamon toast crunch don't worry i'm going to go get some after you finish this video okay that's great well i i still need about five minutes all right okay all right thanks so we're talking about a future action uh that was really planned there was no sudden decision this was already decided it was a prior plan so we use going to of course there are many situations that fall into one of these categories like there's a knock at the door oh i'll get it right it's a sudden decision because well i did not know there would be a knock at the door or if we're talking about a prior plan this weekend we're gonna go to the park the decision has already been made it's planned in this case it's a little awkward if you use the wrong one so if there's a knock at the door i'm going to get it it just sounds a little strange or if i were to talk about my prior plans and say this weekend we will go to the park it sounds really formal so people will still understand what you're trying to say if you use the wrong one this is really just helpful to improve your fluency so that you are using the appropriate one use will for quick and immediate decisions and use going to for prior plans immediate actions and prior plans that that's a good comparison between when to use will and when to use going to but right now let's just talk about when it's more appropriate to use will so you will use will when talking about making a promise i could ask you a question do you promise that you will hit the like button all right i i hope that you will do this

let me know in the comments if you did and i promise that i will respond to you and and show you some love and i really do i many of you may have noticed that i try to respond to as many comments as i possibly can you should also use will when making an offer i'll help you with that i'll give you whatever you need i i really want to help you improve your english so i'll continue making these video lessons that that is my offer to you for both promises and offers it's definitely more common to use will but that may not always be the case and yes it can be a little bit confusing because you may hear things like this i'm gonna make him an offer he can refuse this is a famous line from the movie the godfather i'm going to make him an offer he can't refuse and he uses going to when referring to the offer this is actually a prior plan i'm going to make him an offer it's not the actual offer because when you actually make the offer that's when you use will you should also use will when you're making a threat and and i really hope this is not something that that you will have to do but if you're making a threat use will and a very i think popular phrase which i think you would often hear in cartoons somebody's very upset and they say you'll pay for this ornery fur baron rebel you'll pay for this you're one of king martin's guards huh you'll pay for this see let's get out of here [Music] you'll pay for this in my opinion this is really more of a general rule of thumb because you may hear people use going to when making a threat you've had this pair of extra gloves

this whole time yeah we're in the rockies i'm going to kill you what i'm gonna kill you most of the time when making a threat people will use will and i i think it makes sense because if you're upset and and you threaten somebody typically it is a sudden and quick decision and that's why yes use will if you're making a threat if you refuse to do something you should use will and it's often contracted with not you will not do something you won't do something in the future i won't do it he won't leave they won't help us it's very common in spoken english to use that contraction won't i want to he won't tell us they won't fight for you i won't help you and we're done you should use will when talking about facts tomorrow the sun will rise i will wake up and clap my hands and say today is going to be a beautiful day actually that first part that is the fact the next part is more fantasy about me waking up and clapping my hands i am not a morning person and now let's talk about when you should use going to you should use going to when there are signs or evidence that something will likely happen especially in the near future so let's say that you eat some food that just is really bad you might say oh i'm going to be sick or perhaps you are watching a sports competition and your team it's very close to the end and your team is winning you might say oh my team is going to win you're talking about things that are likely going to happen in the near future now these are also predictions as well i told you that i was going to come back to this a little bit later on remember at the beginning i i said when you make predictions you can use either will or going to we can put a finer point on that if there are signs or evidence that something is likely going to happen if you have some evidence that that this is going to happen perhaps you see the weather forecast then you should use going to i think it's going to rain tomorrow if you have no idea it's your opinion you're just making a guess then you could use will i think it'll rain tomorrow in my opinion when talking about the weather i think most people are going to use going to because typically they might have some type of evidence that is going to tell them what the weather will be like in the future so that's a little more detailed information for you when talking about predictions if there are signs and evidence that something is likely going to happen you are going to if it's just your opinion and you are unsure if something will likely happen use will now let's go back to the original questions what will you do versus what are you gonna do and really either could be correct it really just depends on the context i think overwhelmingly people are going to ask this question referring to a prior plan they believe that the other person has a prior plan so they say what are you going to do and typically they will add some time to that what are you going to do tomorrow what are you going to do later and somebody would answer with their prior plan i'm going to work all day or i'm going to visit an old friend if someone were to ask what will you do it's really a question in which there's no prior plan or at least the person asking it may believe that there's no prior plan what will you do i suppose i'll have to kill the mountain myself that make for a great song i hope to hear them singing one day i just wanted to give you that example one of my favorite scenes from game of thrones so remember at the beginning i told you when there's no prior plan will and going to may be used interchangeably so if somebody were to ask that question what will you do you could also say what are you going to do they mean the same thing you could use them interchangeably if we're referring to no prior plan so i just gave you a lot of information about will and going to and i hope it helps because i think many learners feel that that talking about the future is easy and they may not be aware of some of these small subtle differences but now you know and that's just going to help you improve your overall english fluency if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thanks so much for watching and i'll see you next time

WORD OF THE YEAR (2010 - Present) | Advanced Vocabulary

hello and welcome to today's lesson it's been a little while since i've done a live lesson so i'm really excited about this and this is well it's a vocabulary lesson but i think it's also a bit of a cultural lesson as well so i'd say some cultural vocabulary because what we're going to talk about is well i have a list of words for you and that list is going to be talking about the word of the year so from 2010 to the present 2021 uh we're going to talk about the word of the year for each of those years and that's why i said it could also be a little bit of a cultural lesson in which case i'm talking about uh american culture but i do want to say a quick hello to those who have joined us hello gustav good to see you uh thank you for the hug i appreciate it awesome uh lolly to kyle great to have you with me today angela deepa um as we go through this i'll i'll give i'll give a few more shout outs at because i i want you guys to again this is interactive english i want you to participate in the lesson and try to guess the word for each year and of course i'll give you a little hint to help you out so let's uh let me first let you know like well where this is coming from because um not you're not always going to have the same information this word list i'm taking from the american dialect society and like i said there are different lists i think um uh online dictionaries have their own word of the year oxford does macmillan has a word of the year and maybe in the future i'll talk about some of those because they are different words this is from the american dialect society and because of that i told you that these words are a bit more related to the united states so it's things that were going on in the u.s at that time things that were popular and that's why these words were chosen which is also why i said it's a little bit of a cultural lesson because we're talking about vocabulary that uh is relevant uh in the us at that time so here are the criteria as far as you know them deciding which word to choose so i know this is small so i'll just let you know it says um demonstrably talking about words that are demonstrably new or newly popular in the year in question widely or prominently used in the year in question indicative or reflective of the popular discourse discourse is just referring to like the conversation that people are having in their everyday lives and not a peeve or a complaint about overuse or misuse i don't know if i agree with that last one i think when there are words that become popular i think there are definitely people out there that complain that it's being overused or they get tired of hearing it so i i don't know this is their criteria though so let's begin with 2010 okay i want i want you to think all the way back to 2010 um i was uh in my early 30s at that point but what do you think was the word of the year in 2010 or what may have been and i just mentioned that this is from you know talking about the u.s but this word i think is relevant all across the world um i think at this time it was a word that it was becoming you know more and more popular and i think nowadays we use this word quite often in everyday conversation or we're talking about it it's part of our lives now i think for the vast majority of people and i'll give you a hint think technology okay so that's your hint technology phone okay the and think can you think of any word related to that technology phone i know once i tell you the word you you're familiar with it you know it we use it a lot today um okay no not not not wax i don't i told you this is going to be a little challenging maybe so the word that i'm talking about is app so in 2010 that that was the word of the year in 2010 of course you know that apps um that's short for application program for a computer or phone operating system i think now most the time when people think of apps you think of apps on your phone very common if you're using a smartphone i'm sure you have apps on there somebody just pointed out like what's app yeah so it's it is kind of interesting to to put this in perspective and think about well this word nowadays which i think is pretty common back then in 2010 it was relatively new uh that this was all just coming out and it was becoming more and more popular so again a lot has changed over the years one thing i will say again people think like hey i want to use an app in order to learn and improve my english i think you can do that but just to give a quick little plug if you really want to improve your english skills especially improve your speaking skills i did want you guys to let you know that enrollment for my speaking course is now open you can use right there that code speak20 to get 20 off the cost the course is it's about helping you speak confidently clearly naturally there is a link down in the description that'll take you to this course page you can learn a lot more information um about the course what's included in it uh as well as down here the the class times that are available so please check that out if you are interested in practicing and improving your speaking skills and yeah you get to speak with me directly with me so check that link out down below in the description and i'll also um i'll also include the link here in the chat uh in case uh you're interested so let's go ahead and look at the next one okay so we're talking about 2011.

again i know that it's difficult to think of well um you know what what was going on back then there's that link i just put in the chat in case you're you're interested so 2011 i'll give you a hint of what was going on a few years before you had that the housing collapse and there was a some of the big banks they went under they failed and by the time 2011 rolled around a lot of people were angry um about how that situation was handled and a lot of the you know some of the banks and other big businesses getting taxpayer money so there was a lot of anger in the united states at this time and there was a movement and that movement was called mmm wall street so getting you to try to think a little bit about you know 10 years ago what was happening the the history and that was that's your hint that movement was called um wall street in 2011. do you have any guesses i think when i show you the word you guys are i think many of you are going to be familiar with the word with the meaning so the word for 2011 um is occupy so to occupy something i think you know what it means is like you are taking over this area you are your presence is there um in this case it was really referring to that occupy protest movement and the name of the movement was occupy wall street and again people were very upset with wall street because these businesses had gotten a lot of money and yeah they were people were very uh unhappy about that so that's what was going on there in 2011.

so let's move in to 2012. all right and i'll give you again i'll give you a hint because i know this can be challenging so in 2012 one year um after a lot of that occupy uh wall street was going on let me see because i want to make sure giving you guys the hint okay so this is another word that well think about twitter that's my hint for you twitter what word became popular because of twitter and it's a word that you see well okay it's a symbol now i'm going to try to make it a lot easier for you a symbol again so this is related to technology twitter i think starting out becoming more and more popular and people just started using this word a lot more it was coming up even in conversations and i know that some people did not like uh hearing this word in conversation so not social media again twitter is a a form of social media but this word became popular because of twitter and it's also again part of social media in general yes vivienne carol caroline um for learn close not a gif uh harry the the correct answer is like i said is a hashtag um it's like i'll just read it it's a word or phrase preceded by the symbol that's the symbol is a hashtag used on twitter to mark a topic or make a commentary so it really using that hashtag would basically really earmark it as part of a topic in general and you refer to it as hashtag something so this is what uh became very popular or what is labeled as the word of the year in 2012 was the the hashtag so let's move on what do you think 2013. so in i don't think you guys um i don't i don't know if you guys you're not you're not gonna guess this i don't it's not even a way that i use this word so i'm just gonna go ahead and tell you what it is but the word of 2013 um and maybe it's again capturing more a little bit of pop culture is the word because but not using it as giving like um in the normal sense it's using it introducing like a noun or adjective and i think a lot of people would end up using it in in spoken english and you'd say they give you some examples down there like for example like well because reasons all right saying like oh you have reasons for something or because awesome so you're saying like because something is awesome because awesome and again i think this was more spoken english the way that people are using it perhaps younger generations i never really used uh the word because like this but this is what they had down um for 2013. i know some people put in a selfie that's a good guess i actually think that would have been a better choice a selfie for that one um 2014 let's keep moving so in 2014 this like i told you a lot of this is related to what was going on in the united states this was another movement that was taking place in the united states in 2014 it gained a lot of popularity um it became a lot of you know part of a conv larger conversation it's still been going on over the years and even um in the last couple of years it's still uh you know being talked about coming up from time to time but this was the the word of an well a phrase talking about another movement that started in the united states around this time 2014. any guesses i thought maybe talking about that uh case pride that's a good guess i think pride has been uh you know around and more popular for a lot longer um think about uh well i said it's been around recently and that was with the george uh george floyd so the the movement that i'm referring to is black lives matter so in 2014 this is when it came out when some uh you know black people were killed at the hands of police in particular talking about michael brown in ferguson missouri and eric garner and staten island there were others as well but this is when that movement uh black lives matter became a lot more well-known and like i said there have been other instances over the years in which this has become um more of a topic of conversation most recently was with the death of george floyd and again this was like front and center part of the conversation so in 2014 this is it but a lot of you guys had uh um you know some good guesses and talking about like pride me too uh me too another i forget what year i think that was actually after 2014 i think um but yeah i like good job uh gustav you got it ariane um sarah so yeah it seems like uh again it's something that comes up uh in conversation 2015. um so your hint for 2015. again this is uh i don't know how they chose this but this was a word um actually i'll tell you what it is you tell me what the word is it is a gender it is a singular gender neutral pronoun it's a word that i've used just in casual conversation for a long time i don't know why it has kind of been rejected by a lot of um i think dictionaries english technically doesn't have a singular gender-neutral pronoun except for this word and in 2015 it was labeled the word of the year most of you think about it as more of a as a plural pronoun yes uh who is it i see one uh bong bong excellent yes i'm talking about the word they so this was the word of the year in 2015 they talking about not a plural pronoun and referring to they as a group of people but as a gender-neutral singular pronoun for a known person so let me give you an example of that so what i mean and i said i've i've you know so many people use this in spoken english if you were to tell me like hey my friend is getting ready to take a vacation and you say my friend is taking a vacation well i don't know if your friend is a man or a woman but if i'm asking a question i would say oh where are they going and i'm using they in that context as a gender neutral singular pronoun if you say my friend you're talking about one person you know my friend's taking a vacation oh where are they going and in asking that question i'm using they as a gender-neutral singular pronoun and it's very common um but yes so they in that context can be singular as well and again i don't know why there's been some pushback of like no no we need to come up with a new word and some people have tried to come up with new words like thine or thon and it's it just hasn't worked out um so let's move to 2016.

and i will go ahead and tell you as we get into the next few i will say the american dialect society i feel like they're probably a bit more progressive because they're talking about their choices and you know trump was a very talked about person in 2016 and beyond so a lot of the some of the words and phrases are related to politics this one in 2016 i'm not so sure i'm just assuming that it is i've often heard people talk about it in the context of politics and what's going on in society in general i'll go ahead and tell you i don't know if anybody is going to just guess this um they chose to dumpster fire this 2016 word of the year i mean obviously it's a phrase but if you in case you didn't know this you can use dumpster fire to refer to like it says a disastrous or chaotic situation so instead of saying well this is chaotic you could say well it's a dumpster fire and in this case you're using it as a noun so chaotic would be an adjective but if you say something is a dump i'm dumpster fire you're using it as a noun but it's referring to a situation that's just terrible so that's what i mean i think maybe they're referring to politics in a way that in 2016 the political situation in the u.s it was a dumpster fire i'm not sure exactly what else was going on that they may be referring to but like i said the reason why i think pop it's relating to politics is because i think people will talk about politics and use this word and be like well the mess the situation with the government it's an absolute dumpster fire um so hopefully maybe this phrase is new for some of you and it's more common in spoken english to say something is a dumpster fire um i want i don't want to give away a hint uh but 2017 okay um this is definitely related to politics definitely related to donald trump um what do you think was the word of the year in 2017 somebody actually gave it to us already somebody was uh they they they got a little the little head one year ahead um but we the word uh or the phrase is actually in there so the in 2017 it was a phrase um definitely related to uh politics definitely related to trump i told you somebody had already uh had thought about it they thought it was 2016 just one year off um but yes excellent so uh gustav you got the you got the the right answer it was in 2017 though um sarah vivian eddie lolly perfect so the the phrase that i'm talking about is fake news um and it's one that has i think it's i mean it's stuck around over the years you still hear people talking about it and using it so it's referring to

it's trying to what uh this is what i would say i'll give you my opinion about it um people would say fake news talking about disinformation or um bad news or bad information often i think that people use it in the context when they don't like the news that they hear even if it's true or real they try to discredit it the same way trump would do and say oh it's fake news i don't like what i'm hearing i don't like what you're saying i'm just gonna call it fake news and i actually think that's how people more commonly use it is or is used to try to discredit real news um by just saying it's fake but this is something that you would hear uh trump use all the time uh talking about fake news so it it makes sense why this was chosen as the word of the year in 2017.

call them they tried to word it like oh it's a tender age shelter or a tender age camp trying to give it a nice name um even though it did not look good at all um so that was a good guess i think some people mentioned wall that was a that's a good guess as far as conversation things that were happening at that time but this is what they chose as the well again phrase of the year 2018.

let's look at 2019 um 2019 is less about trump and politics but more just about society and again this is what trying to be uh i think the the ads the american dialect society trying to be a little more progressive and the choices that they're making with these words or phrases this would have to do more with i i think the the topic of uh trans and how people identify uh which gender they identify with so i know some people putting in covid you guys a little not 2019 getting a little head getting a little head in 2019 i told you it was more i think related to to trans and the the gender that people would identify with so what i was what i'm referring to what they chose are the my pronouns and when they say my pronouns they're talking about the pronouns that somebody would request that others refer to them as and sometimes i i didn't really notice this as much but i know in certain social media profiles people would put something and then they'd put their pronouns they'd put like um

she her and basically what's that what's that that's saying is that they would like people to address them with those pronouns she or her or again he or him and those are the pronouns that people are asking people uh to identify them as so this was uh 2019 2020 some of you um had already put it in there i think in 2020 it was not that long ago um i think everybody knows the horrible uh situation in 2020 that uh basically consumed the entire planet uh people had already put it in there i said like yeah you're getting a little ahead of yourselves um but yes uh so before uh who else had it uh sleepwalker uh bong talked about yes sleepwalker case angela eva uh we're talking about covet short for covid19 given to the disease caused by the infection from the novel coronavirus so that i i guess you could say in uh it i'm trying to think when it first came out uh in 2019 i believe in china is when people were starting to kind of start talking about it but i feel like internationally it wasn't until really early 2020 that it it ended up consuming the media consuming our lives and then i think it was around in march of 2020 those lockdowns uh started um in countries were locking down so that was the word of the year in 2020 which makes sense based on their criteria words that are popular that are used a lot and then 2021.

let's go back to politics okay in the united states we're going back to politics think about politically in the united states what big event happened uh in 2021 um it happened at the very beginning of 2021 and it's left a really big scar on american politics so this is again this is a word related to that that was that's your hint um it's related to politics obviously related to trump happened at the very beginning of 2021 and it was a very sad day um so i think probably you might be thinking you might know the situation maybe you're trying to think of a word related to that situation but the word which again if you didn't know it this could be a new word for some of you many of you the word is insurrection so it's referring to on january 6 the attack the attack on the capitol building when they had that stop the steal protest and then they went um they marched right down to the capitol clashed with the the capitol police broke inside uh and it was uh it was a it was a dumpster fire to bring that word back up it was absolutely a dumpster fire so again 2021 related to politics related to trump uh insurrection and again this is um if this is a word you didn't know then that's what it means an insurrection is a violent attempt to take control of the government uh and you'd say it is an insurrection so i'm kind of curious in the in the chat or even in the comments uh if you're watching this later my question would be what do you think what do you think is going to be the word of 2022 uh what do you guys think let me know let me know in the chat or let me know in the comments i know we're only we're only we're not even halfway through the year but if there's a word right now that you might think is like popular now in 2022 people are using it a lot it's relevant to what's going on in the world uh what do you think what do you think would be a good word for 2022 i told you i'd review a little bit so here um in case you joined us a little late these are the words of the year here's 2010 um to 2015 app which part of technology very common word today occupy i mentioned was part of the occupy wall street movement hashtag also related to tech twitter specifically because uh was just the usage in spoken english like oh because great because awesome uh black lives matter another movement that was that came out of 2000 um 2014 they a gender-neutral singular pronoun they was actually chosen as the word of the decade because they do a word of the decade as well um and that was chosen here the other one's 2016 dumpster fire uh it's a good one you could you guys can go out and use that phrase if something is chaotic just say wow this is just a dumpster fire uh 2017

fake news which i'm sure many of you have heard 2018 tender age shelter referred to those shelters along the border when people were coming into the u.s and they were basically taking the children 2019 the my pronouns the pronouns that people would want others to address them by 2020 covet and 2021 insurrection and getting some again thinking about the word of the year for 2022 it's interesting so yeah um people talking about war ukraine um world cup i guess world cup is coming at the end of this year uh monkey pox russian invasion all right stagflation putin um seems like that's a polarize okay uh elon musk buys 20 for selfish reasons okay yeah he is he's definitely another person that's being talked about quite a bit lately elon musk uh esther invasion all right so that's interesting uh to see again where where we're at um again this is it's not just a vocabulary lesson i said it's a little bit of a cultural lesson because this is these are words that are related to things that were happening in the united states maybe in the future i'll do one um from either macmillan or oxford i told you they also do like a word of the list i think theirs are more representative to the world in general so maybe that's something we'll we'll look at a little bit later on but anyway all of these words i think are useful good to know words that may come up in uh conversation so i hope you guys if you learn some new words again please uh let me know hit that like button and also just one more quick little shout out if you guys want to know again if you want to practice and improve your speaking skills please check out that link down in the description if you want to join my speaking course and you can use that code up here right there speak 20 to get 20 off the price and if you have questions i think it's down at the bottom of the page you can where is it email me at info interactiveenglishvideos.com if you have questions or if you'd like to take the course privately with me um that's also an option so thank you guys again for joining me thank you uh lolly to kyo always great to see you gustav thanks for being here um abigail ava vivian mohammed angela just trying to give some quick little shout outs ariane linda um i hope all of you james let me just keep going i hope all of you enjoy the rest of the weekend and

Walk the Path to Achieving English Fluency

so i want to talk to you about your english learning journey from the very beginning when you first learn how to say things like hello all the way up to the point where you well maybe you feel like you've achieved english fluency that's coming up hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel that it's all about just helping you practice and improve your english skills and in today's lesson i really want to focus on a specific topic and that is learning english is about the journey and not so much about the destination that's what i want to focus on in today's lesson is talking about that journey instead of just solely focusing on the destination because when people begin learning english or any other language for that matter they people tend to think about okay where do i want to end up what is the destination and for many people i think when it comes to learning a language that is fluency people want to be fluent in a language or at least they they want to achieve an advanced level and that goes for just about anything if you're learning how to play an instrument or you want to learn how to play a sport i think people tend to think of that destination first and that that becomes a goal and it's like okay this this is the point that i want to get to this is what i want to achieve and and that's not a bad thing i think it's always good to think about well what is your long-term goal where would you like to end up but that should not be your primary focus especially at the beginning because if you are just focused on that outcome of becoming fluent it could it could be a little daunting it could be a little overwhelming because then you start thinking about all the things that you need to do that you need to put a lot of time and energy into this you need to maybe take some classes uh you're going to need to read a lot of books watch a lot of videos and when you start thinking about that somebody could think to themselves well this is just going to be way too challenging it's going to be way too difficult they may want to give up or they may just stop all together and and that's not what i want learners to do but when you look at it another way and think about the journey that you're going to go on in order to reach your fluency goals or whatever destination you may have if you can appreciate the journey then that's going to make it so much easier for you it's also going to be a lot more rewarding think about people the people that you're going to meet you're going to make new friends you might uh have work colleagues that you work with these people and you're able to speak the language so there are so many different connections that you're going to make along the way no no matter how much time you spend learning the language could be months it could be years i think you're also going to learn a lot about just the world in general because the people that you meet the experiences that you have it's going to teach you a lot about culture and other countries and communities so when you learn a language you're going to learn a lot more than just the language it's really going to give you a different perspective on life and the only thing i can do is relate this back to my own experience when i decided that i wanted to learn spanish so i want to tell you a little bit about my language journey learning spanish and i'm going to tell you in spanish so i will put some english subtitles up there so everyone can follow along and i'm sure that if you if you speak spanish you may see some differences between what i'm saying and the subtitles because yeah i make mistakes i make mistakes all the time but but that's okay so let me take a moment and share my journey with all of you okay bueno [Music] [Music] [Music] [Music] [Music] [Music] [Music] [Music] and and that's really what i wanted to to stress that you are just happy with where you're at because if that destination changes after you meet different people or have different experiences that's perfectly normal but in the end if you are happy with where you're at then to me that means that you really have appreciated the journey that you've taken and you really value those friendships and you value those experiences i also think that if you are able to appreciate the journey then you may not mind certain delays because i think for most of us that's bound to happen where we feel like we have a delay in our learning and that we're not making as much progress as we'd like to and i can sympathize with all of you out there who may feel that way right now because when it comes to learning a language i'm a i'm a slow learner i'm not somebody who picks up a language quickly and can just achieve all of their goals immediately it takes me a long time and even if you're moving slowly as long as you continue you will get to your destination so what i'd like you to do right now if you feel like sharing is well tell me about your journey learning english tell me about some of the people that you've met the experiences that you've had and and why you think it is rewarding and i would Want to Sound Fluent? Advanced Words Native Speakers Actually Use!

Let's learn some impressive vocabulary that I think you should know. Now, these are more advanced nouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs, but I think they are useful. They're going to allow you to be a little more descriptive and precise when you're having a conversation. And if you would like to get these lesson notes right here next to me, check out the link down below in the description. Join my community. If you're already a part of it, then I have sent them to you already. So, uh, check out that link down below. So, let's let's begin with some verbs. I want to go ahead and jump into it. As many of you know, this is a quiz lesson. I want you to participate. Write your answers in the comments in the chat. And again, we're talking about verbs right now. The manager that mistakes were made during the project. I'm giving you the meaning of the verb down below. To admit or agree that something is true after first denying or resisting it. Now, to make it a little easier, I'm giving you a hint. I'm giving you the first letter of the verb. I don't know if you can see it. It's a little maybe hard to distinguish, but the first letter is C. The manager starts with the letter C that mistakes were made during the project. So we are admitting or agreeing which again confess I think that would work. But the next part of that is what what really would determine this word. You deny it at first. You resist it. You deny it at first and then you admit it. So confess would work but when you confess something it doesn't necessarily mean that you've denied it. And that is the key part. That is the key when it comes to this word. this verb. So again, that's why I mean this is a little bit more precise when you want to talk and I think we can all relate to this. Somebody denied it. No, no, this is not the case. And then like okay, yes, yes, this is this is what happened. There mistakes were made during the project.

So the verb that I'm talking about, and I do think that once you see it, you'll be oh yeah, yeah, I'm familiar with it. We're talking about to concede something. the manager conceded that mistakes were made during the project. So when you concede something, you're admitting that something is true, but it really says that at first you you didn't want to admit it. You tried to deny it or you were resisting and okay, I I concede that mistakes were made during the project. And this is a great example of the passive voice when you don't want to say, well, who made the mistakes? what was the problem that you use the passive mistakes were made. This is something that you will hear politicians use all the time because they don't want to say that they made the mistake. They'll use the passive voice and just say look mistakes were made. Uh so to concede just keep that in mind. You're you're admitting it's true but at first you resist it. Now I will I'm not actually uh denying it at first but if I wanted to use it like saying I will concede. I don't know if you can tell from my voice I am a little under the weather. So, I apologize if I start coughing here and there or uh have to blow my nose, but I'm going to power through power through this lesson. [gasps] So, the next one, taking breaks throughout the day can help m stress starts with the letter M. And the meaning of this verb is to make something make well something bad less severe, serious or painful. [sighs] This is a collocation when talking about like stress. You're trying to m stress begins with the letter M and you're just making it less severe, less serious or less painful.

And excellent. Well played, Tayo Manuel Julia. We're talking about the verb mitigate. To mitigate something, you're making something that is bad. It's not good, but you're making it less severe. And this is something that I think you you want to do if you are enduring something that is painful and you know it's not going to go away, but you want to mitigate the pain or in this case mitigate the stress. So I mentioned that this is a collocation when when talking about stress to mitigate stress. Let's go ahead and look at some other collocations with this verb. And this is another this is an excellent way to build your vocabulary and really develop a more natural way of speaking and communicating because this is what uh you know people like natives often use when they speak English. You mitigate stress or people might try to mitigate damage, mitigate a threat, mitigate the impact, mitigate the consequences or mitigate a loss. Now there are there are other collocations that you could use with this verb. when talking about the verb to mitigate to mitigate something. All right, good good verb to know. What do you think? The evidence was so strong that it m the jury to reach a quick verdict. The verb begins with the letter C as you can as you can see. And the meaning of this verb is to force or strongly persuade someone to do something. And in in this case, I think it's more strongly persuading the jury to reach a quick verdict. So there's some evidence and it was so strong that it m the jury to reach a quick verdict. So of course see words like con convinced um convince and persuade.

Those are kind of synonyms. This is not the word that's not the verb that I'm looking for. Even though you could you could use convince in this context. It convinced the jury to reach uh a quick verdict. If I want to add emphasis to that. So instead of saying I was convinced to do something, I was what? What's going to add more emphasis to the verb convince? Now convince is a great verb. I love the verb convince. I use it all the time. It's a common verb. This one is a little more advanced. And again, it just lets you add emphasis. And in that way, when you're able to do that, you're going to get your point across in a clearer way. Well done, uh, Lai. I figured if I I rambled enough, somebody would get it. Great job, Lai.

To compel someone. So, it really has a similar meaning to convince. We're just adding emphasis that you're just strongly persuading someone to do something. In this case, the jury, the evidence was so strong, it compelled the jury to reach a quick verdict. And they were compelled to do something. I just like saying that word. Compel. All right. I hope that you feel compelled to hit the like button and subscribe. [clears throat] Turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. I didn't even introduce myself. I'm sorry. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And when we do lessons like this, it's all about helping you build your vocabulary so that you have a better, you know, comprehension, listening, reading, but also, you know, better you can communicate a little more effectively when speaking or writing using verbs like compel. What do you think about this next one? Another another impressive verb. Please m from using your phone during the presentation. This just means to stop oneself from doing something. Begins with the letter R. I think that many of you are probably familiar with this verb because often you're going to follow it with from you will from doing something. So th think about uh put yourself in this situation and it's like somebody is making this announcement right here and somebody says look everybody please from using your cell phone during the presentation. So the the verb that we're talking about is the verb to refrain. Please refrain from using your cell phone during the presentation. you're stopping oneself from doing something. You're going to hear people use this verb when the making some announcements and they tell everybody, "Please refrain from taking pictures during the show. Please refrain from using your cell phone uh during the presentation. Please refrain from doing whatever it is." And they want people to stop themselves from doing it and they will refrain from doing something. I thought, okay, this is it's maybe a little maybe a little distasteful joke. I thought it was funny, but again, using refrain, this was a sign at the bowling alley, I guess, a long time ago. I don't know. I'm assuming it's a fake sign. They're just trying to be funny. Says, "Due to the Corona virus, please refrain from touching other people's balls. Please remember to wash your hands after touching your own balls." Thank you. And I imagine at a bowling alley, this is a play on words. It's a joke, but I wanted to share it with you because it's using our verb to refrain. Please refrain from touching other people's bowling balls and wash and wash your hands after touching your own bowling balls. All right, very important uh during the during the COVID period. So, let's now switch gears. We just talked about some impressive verbs. Let's look at some impressive nouns that at least I think they're impressive. During the meeting, she had an M about how to solve the company's communication problem. So, this is a noun. It's a long meaning down here. A moment when you suddenly feel that you understand or suddenly become conscious of something that is very important to you. Um, it should say to you not doing something. That's a little typo. I think I forgot to delete uh delete part of this. So it should just say something that is important to you and for forget about the rest. Um so you would often use this with the verb have and you are going to have an it begins with the letter e and this is a word that I maybe you don't use it all the time. I imagine that if you watch a lot of movies, TV shows, you listen to podcasts, this is a word that you have heard and somebody has this brilliant idea all of a sudden and they say, "Oh, I had an M." Not Eureka.

Eureka is more talking about like a sudden discovery. And really, you would use Eureka as a standalone statement and say, "Wow, Eureka." And in this case, we're talking about a specific noun. And I told you that you're often going to use it with have to have. And what I'll be honest, I'm a little I'm a little surprised. Nobody's uh nobody's gotten it just yet because I do think once I show you this is probably a word maybe like, "Oh yes, oh yes, I've heard of this uh word." We're talking about an epiphany. So if you have an epiphany, that is a common collocation. It refers to this moment when you have this sudden idea and it's like, "Wow, okay, this is what I'm going to do. This is a great idea. I just had an epiphany." And keep that in mind.

You're often going to use it with the verb have to have an epiphany. And I I don't know, you can let me know in the comments, in the chats if this is a new word. That's great. But I do think it is one that you may you may come across uh you know from time to time. You're listening to the news or podcast TV show and somebody has an epiphany. This is a word that I use quite often. If you watch these lessons, there's a m between being confident and being arrogant that many people overlook. Based on the sentence, I don't know if I'm giving you much help in trying to determine what this noun is, but the meaning is a subtle difference in or shade of meaning, expression, or sound. So, we're talking about some subtle difference when it comes to meaning, expression, or sound.

Excuse me. The begins with the letter N. And as many of you are pointing out, yes, uh, Hadrio Teo, great job. We're talking about a nuance and I I said I use it quite often in these videos because there there when talking about language there there's certainly nuances between different words. So in this case we're talking about the nuance between being confident and arrogant because they do have a similar meaning but confident has a positive connotation. It's a good thing if you are confident in your abilities. If you're arrogant, you're you're basically confident in a way that annoys other people and it really bothers them because you think you're superior in a way. And that is when you would describe someone as arrogant. So that is a nuance between the two. And if you want to meet in the middle between confident and arrogant, I would like to use the word cocky and say it's a more informal adjective in saying somebody is cocky. It is more confident in a kind of arrogant way, but you could use it more playfully. You could use it more negative. Say, "Somebody's being cocky." Or you could use it more like friendly like, "Oh, I'm going to win. I'm the best." Don't be so cocky. All right? Don't don't don't be cocky. So that that I think is a good in between when talking about confident and arrogant. I wanted to throw that other word at you, but nuance is a great word to know. Here are some common collocations. And if talking about a slight nuance, I think when I use this word, this is the collocation that I tend to use and saying, look, there's a, you know, slight subtle difference. There's a slight nuance or a subtle nuance. You could say something is full of nuance or maybe it lacks nuance. Uh, any of those are collocations that you may hear with the noun nuance. The company's decision to cut cost had serious for its employees. Now there are I would say there are two words that I feel you know would fit this sentence. Both of them have a very similar meaning at least in my opinion. There there is apparently there is a there is a slight nuance between the two words that I'm thinking of and I will tell you both of them but it refers to an unintended consequence of an event or action especially an unwelcome one. So in this case company decides to cut cost you have to do it and it happens but it may have some serious for the employees. You know maybe it's going to lower employee morale. people are going to have to, you know, be let go. They're going to cut back on benefits. Who knows? And all of these things is going to have a what I see. Actually, I see both words. All right, great job. So, the word that I I'm highlighting right now or that I want to talk about is the word a repercussion. So, a repercussion is an unintended consequence of an event or action, especially an unwelcome one. And that I think is the key thing. When you're definitely referring to something that is not good, then yes, it is a repercussion. The company's decision to cut costs had serious repercussions for its employees. Now, ramification is a word that has a similar meaning. And I would say, you know, in my opinion, I probably would use them interchangeably. I think if you said ramification, that would also fit. The company's decision to cut costs had serious ramifications for its employees, but to have a little fun. You know, I like to make sure I'm I'm staying in the game up to date with new technology. And I'll I'll use uh AI whenever I can.

And uh you know, I wanted to highlight if I just put it in there what it says as far as the subtle nuance between ramification and repercussion. Now, I think again, I feel like they're really interchangeable. overview that a ramification is is complex. It is also an unintended uh consequence and it's saying it can be positive or negative. In my view, I think even when people use the word ramification, probably they're referring to something that's negative whereas repercuss repercussion is, you know, always uh a negative one. So again, I really think that these two words are interchangeable, which is why I said either one would work in this case, but uh I wanted to point out that slight nuance according to this AI overview.

But take everything. Look, when it comes to all of this, take everything with a grain of salt. What do you think? The crisis served as a m for innovation in the industry. So the noun begins with the letter C refers to a it could be a person or thing that precipitates an event. So in this case we're talking about a thing which is the crisis but it served as a for innovation in the industry. I think this one's a little more challenging, not only because of the example sentence, but because the the definition uh may not give it away as uh clearly as some of the others. So, I'll give you a little bit little bit of a hint. begins with the letter C. But this is a word that you generally may use or come across if we're talking about science and a science experiment is taking place and you need to I don't want to give it away, but you could also use this word in other contexts such as this one right here. And you're referring to it really kind of getting things started. It's getting the ball rolling. So the crisis occurred but then on the other side that is what created that is what started this innovation in the industry. So in that case we could say that it served as a catalyst. And if you're referring to a catalyst then you're talking about something that is it says it precipitates an event. It just it comes before it and it really gets it going. So, I told you catalyst is more of a word in science that you're going something that's going to start some type of reaction, maybe a chemical reaction. And to highlight that, this is a little bit of a joke, a play on words.

It said, "I tried to make a chemistry joke, but I got no reaction. Maybe I needed a catalyst." So, it's supposed to be funny, I think, on two different ends. A chemistry joke. There was no reaction. You know, a reaction in chemistry. And then of course they needed a catalyst, something to really get the the people laughing. It's a bad joke. I'm sorry, but it's another example of how catalyst is used in both ways as a term for science, but also in this case just talking about trying to get something going and something being a catalyst.

Let's move on to some impressive adjectives. And these these are these are words are impressive, at least in my book. [gasps] So this time I'm making it a little more challenging. I'm not giving you the the first letter of the word. So you kind of just try to put it into context, look at the meaning, see see what you can come up with. We set a m date for the meeting, but it may change depending on everyone's schedule. So this is a word that I think is a common one and I think you know it. It means not fully worked out or developed. And in that case, if something is not fully worked out, it's not developed, you could say it is what?

And we're talking about a m date. This is a collocation. And as soon as I say collocation, words that are frequently used together, you know that I'm going to share with you some other collocations. At least I think I I am as part of this. Uh yes, I do have them on there. So, we're talking about well done the word tentative. Tentatives. If something is tentative, it's not fully worked out. And typically, this is going to be used as an attributive adjective before a noun. Now, you could say, well, look, it's tentative and just leave it at that. But I think most of the time you're going to talk about what the what is the thing that's not fully worked out. So in this case, there was a tentative date that was established, but it may change some other collocations.

And really, you're you're often going to use this word when talking about some, you know, arranging some type of plan or a schedule. So a tentative schedule or a tentative plan, a tentative date, a tentative agreement or make tentative arrangements. So these are some common phrases that you would use with this adjective. Good one to know, especially because we talk about our plans all the time, things we're going to do or things we would like to do, but maybe it's not fully worked out. And in that case, we might make a tentative plan. All right, how about this one? Climbing the mountain was a m challenge, even for experienced hikers. This word may be a little more difficult to guess. At least I think it might be. But the meaning is inspiring fear or respect through being impressively large, powerful, intense, or capable.

And all of that can get wrapped into one. And you could use this impressive adjective and say that something or someone is what. And to go ahead and let you know, yeah, that is uh another collocation I think with challenge and saying something that is really difficult, you could say it is a m challenge. So if we're talking about a word that mixes fear and respect, it's impressive because well, who knows? Maybe it's large or powerful or intense. In that case, we could say that something or even someone, you could use this word to describe a person as well. Formidable. Formidable. Climbing the mountain was a formidable challenge even for experienced hikers. I will say that you you see words like fear and respect, like opposites. Fear, you think of maybe something being a little more negative.

Respect, of course, is positive. I do think this word is a bit more neutral that it's not necessarily mean that you are positive or negative about on this thing. You're just trying to refer to the difficulty in saying something is a formidable challenge to give you some more collocations, but I want to do this through the use of some news headlines. Argentina coach Morocco is a formidable opponent. talking about the the football team uh Morocco formidable opponent is another collocation with this adjective. Now um the opposite of that you could say strategy consultant I don't know Jericho Lugo says AI is your most formidable ally as a new consultant. You could use it that way as well. I think more commonly you're going to hear people talk about a formidable opponent. The next one, new medieval books, the formidable women who shaped medieval Europe. I told you this is a word that you could use to describe a person, saying that he or she is formidable. And then finally, comeback kid inside Shawn Menddees's formidable return. All right, those are some different uses. Hopefully, it gives you a better idea as to how this word is used in context.

How about this one? filling out all the paperwork was a m process. There are probably other words that you could use, other adjectives that you could use to complete this sentence, but there's one specific one that I want to highlight which refers to something that is too long, slow, or dull. It is just tiresome. It is monotonous. And it is what? What? What? Those are really synonyms. tiresome, monotonous, and you could use it to describe well in this case paperwork. Nobody likes doing paperwork. And or I think just work in general, some some work you could say this work is very what when you want to say it's just it's boring, it's not exciting, it takes a long time to do, and you're just doing the same thing again and again and again. And you could describe it as being what? What do you think?

So monotonous, I told you, is a synonym, but in this case, well done. I don't know whether the chat wasn't uh catching up, but uh good. Excellent. I see some correct answers. Tedious is the word that we're looking for. If you want to describe something, some work that you have to do is tedious has it has a negative connotation. You're basically saying it's tiresome, it's monotonous, takes too long to do, and it is just really tedious. This is a great association, filling out paperwork. If you have to fill out paperwork, you go into the doctor's office and they say, "Hey, fill this out." You're like, "Oh gosh, okay, let me go through and name, address, allergies, what have you." it it can seem a bit tedious. All right, that's a good example, a good association with this adjective.

Smartphones have become in modern society. This is a word that I've I I know I've talked about previously, can't remember. Maybe I've talked about it already in a couple of different lessons when discussing advanced adjectives, but it means present, appearing, or found everywhere. And the key word is everywhere. Something is present everywhere. You could say it is what. And I think this is true when it comes to smartphones. I was on the tram this morning and just looking around. Everybody was on their smartphone except for me because I was just looking around. So if you want to talk about something that is everywhere, uh the word again there. Yeah. Common of course. Uh but the word I told you it's a little more of an advanced word is ubiquitous. If something is ubiquitous, it's just you you find it everywhere. So I give you another example besides smartphone. McDonald's. McDonald's is everywhere. Oh, yeah. McDonald's is ubiquitous. So a word that maybe you're not just going to actively use every day in conversation, but you may hear it listening to a news report or a podcast. So again, this is going to help with your listening comprehension because you may come across it from time you're reading a news article from the New York Times. Yes, they will use an adjective like ubiquitous. They like to use big words, I feel like in the the New York Times. So this is a just another little bit of a joke. Notice how you hear the word ubiquitous. It's being used everywhere. All right. So yes, of course, I don't know if that's true, but it's a good little play on words as far as the meaning and its usage uh being used everywhere. Now, let's switch gears.

Let's move to some adverbs. Everybody loves a good adverb. At least I do. So, the CEO stated that the company would not cut any jobs this year. So, in a way that leaves no doubt. Of course, I could have made it. These are I'll go ahead and tell you. All of these I don't think it's going to be much of a hint, but all of these adverbs are ly adverbs. I was thinking about putting that at the end, but it's like, well, what's the point? Just go ahead and tell you. They're all they're all going to end in ly. So, if you're stating something in a way that leaves no doubt, these, I think, are going to be a little trickier.

You could say that you are stating something or you're saying something or you're commenting on it and what what adverb any guesses as to what it means in a way that leaves no doubt? And I I think a lot of the time a lot of times you may hear people use it before the verb and but also afterwards like you said something no doubt. Once again I feel like this is an adverb that you've heard before. You may even use it when you're talking if you want to say that leaves no doubt and you say something unequivocally unequivocally the CEO stated unequivocally that the company would not cut any jobs this year. So in this case you're saying that look there no doubt I just want to emphasize the fact like what I'm saying. So whenever you really want to add that emphasis so that basically it's a good word to say tell use when you're like okay you get you need to trust me all right this is what's going to happen I'm telling you the truth there is no doubt and you state something unequivocally so you're saying it very clear nobody has doubt so you might um give some in directions and say the directions for the assignment unequivocally uh so there are many things but a lot of times It's something you say or state or uh d some type of direction that you may give to someone else. This is excuse [clears throat] me. This is one that I I I also think you might know. And maybe this is a little easier. She talked about her new project barely taking a breath. So think about that last part. Somebody's barely taking a breath and they're just going on and on and on and on without interruption constantly. And you could say this person talked what this is a common collocation when talk using it with communication.

Somebody's communicating in some way and there there's no interruption. It's constantly. And somebody is doing something, talking, speaking, complaining, and they're doing it. How? How? Any any guesses? Feel like once again, maybe the Yeah, some Sorry, the chats then it's not updating for some reason, but it's okay. Uh, you could say I I mean I I understand somebody saying repeatedly that okay that kind of works, but I wouldn't say repeatedly. That does mean like that without interruption. I do think this is a stronger adverb when you want to say that it's it's way too much. But repeatedly, I think would work in this context. That would work. But that's not the that's not the adverb I'm talking about. Continuously is another one that would also work. I think those words are a little more commonly used. I want to give you again something a little more advanced. And yes, excellent. I see a couple good answers. We're we're talking about the word incessantly. Incessantly, we're adding a little more emphasis to repeatedly, continuously. If you say somebody is talking incessantly about her new project, barely taking a breath. So I said you might use this word incessantly when talking about the way somebody might communicate. So you may say somebody is talking incessantly about something or complaining incessantly. So in a way that really I I also I feel like this also tells me that maybe it bothers the person or it bothers you if you say somebody is complaining incessantly or worrying incessantly. That's another common collocation. dogs bark, but of course that's the way that's the way they communicate. And you might say, "Look, this dog was barking incessantly. It just didn't stop." Or to chatter incessantly. So all of those verbs are different verbs when talking about communication. But you could use it with the adverb incessantly when you want to say there's just no break and it's just on and on and on and somebody is talking incessantly. He arrived m late to the meeting drawing everyone's attention. So the meaning of this adverb is in a clearly visible way. So it's like this person arrived. Of course everybody noticed maybe they stopped what they're doing and it was very obvious that this person entered the meeting late and we could say that he arrived. How how is he arriving? Which means in a clear and visible way. This is one that I do think maybe a little more challenging at least probably to come up with based on the example that I'm giving you. Uh but it is another one that I think probably you've heard and maybe you even use. Uh abruptly, invisibly. Those aren't the word. That's not the word that I'm looking for. Love those hearts. Thank you very much, whoever's sending those out. Uh, he arrived what? And it again is just obvious, clearly visible. So, in this case, I'm talking about conspicuously. He arrived conspicuously late to the meeting, drawing everyone's attention. So, if something is done conspicuously, it just means in a clearly visible way. Now, I think a good synonym for conspicuously is noticeably. I think that that that's a good synonym for this. So, some other collocations, some other phrases, if we're talking about this adverb, you might say, like in our example, uh, somebody was conspicuously late or conspicuously absent or say something is conspicuously lacking something. You might say something is conspicuously high or low. Maybe a place is conspicuously clean. And then you might say someone is conspicuously good or bad at doing something. All right? And you're you're just trying to emphasize because I really think whenever you're using an adverb, you're you're really just trying to add emphasis, give a little more information, which is really what they do. So conspicuously, good one to know. All right. Hope if it's new, let me know. you can hit that like button. That tells me that you're learning new words, building your vocabulary. And remember, it's a marathon. It's not a sprint. We just do this slowly over time. Some of these words I feel like I I've talked about before, and it's always good to get a little review. The speaker explain the challenges facing the education system in a way that gives a strong clear message. Once again, I think this is a word, you know, and maybe the meaning doesn't completely give it away, but it really does have a positive connotation. You're talking about somebody who is speaking in a very effective way, persuasive way.

You're basically giving someone a compliment if you say that they spoke about this thing. So, we're not talking about uh No, not explicitly or loudly. What do you think? Any other guesses? Explicitly. Again, it does mean very precise and like this is what happened. And that's that's why I said maybe it's not going to completely give it away. I wanted to add that in there as far as like giving someone like you really enjoyed listening to this person that you they the words that they used the delivery their tone everything about the way they spoke was what and hopefully that maybe makes it uh a little easier to follow. So we're talking about if some again it does this is the dictionary definition giving a strong clear message but in this case the word that uh the adverb that I was trying to to point at is eloquently. So somebody speaks eloquently or they and a lot of times I think this also is another adverb that you would use when talking about communication. The speaker eloquently explain the challenges facing the education system. But I would also add if you're going to use eloquently, it does also imply uh that you just really enjoyed the way this person was communicating. And it could be because of the words they used, the delivery, and all of that. You could say again using it as an adjective and say somebody is an eloquent speaker. So it really does have a positive connotation. These are all of the words that we looked at. There were 12 in total. Some some verbs and uh nouns, adjectives, and adverbs. And I know that I, you know, incessantly I talk incessantly about building your vocabulary. I think it is true. It's really good to learn some of the slight nuances between some of these words because a lot of them I I think as you I saw like some other words could complete the sentence perfectly fine and it's always good to understand well you know is there a difference between this word is it going to add a little emphasis and I think those nuances are great and I hope that this serves as a catalyst to Anyway, thanks a lot. I will see you soon.

LESSON 716 OF 749

Weird, Strange, and Fascinating Expressions | English Tautologies

what is up everyone I hope you're having a great day my name is Wes and this is interactive English which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills and I realized just now looking at myself in the camera I think I need to get a haircut but that has nothing to do with today's lesson I actually have a very cool and exciting lesson for you which is all about English tautology we're going to be talking about English tautologies what they are what they mean and you know whether you can identify them in everyday conversation and how often you hear them so first and foremost let's begin now you may ask yourself what the heck are tautologies and why should I care those are two very very good questions so a tautology is an expr question that says the same thing twice but in a different way so you're basically being redundant you're saying the same things twice now you might be wondering well why would anybody say the same thing twice so let's first talk about well when you may hear topologies when are times that you may hear topologies being used and the first one would just be everyday conversation there are several different Expressions that I think are common in English that are actually tautologies you're saying the same thing and you're saying it twice and they're just Expressions to say some kind of sentiment to say how you feel and I am going to show you those in just a moment and as we go through these I do have some questions for you guys that are in the chat so you can answer and interact with us and even if you're watching this later I want you to write your answers in the comments and interact with us more so you will hear toies in everyday conversation if if you're watching a TV show or movie or just listening to English on the street

you may also hear them in poetry because when you're using poetry the there are different you know people are talking about rhyming and the it's a way to give an image inside in paint a picture in your head and you're using toies and saying the same thing twice and this is going to make sense once I start showing you some examples you're also going to hear them in songs because Again songs SS and poetry are very similar and people will repeat themselves over and over and over in literature in books they use this as a literary device and acronyms as well there are some common acronyms that are actually tautologies and you may not be aware of this and the last one well advertising again repetition they use it in advertising because they want to repeat and repeat and repeat so that you remember whatever product uh they're selling or whatever service it is and the last time the last one thing you might hear it is just a speaking mistake sometimes we misspeak and it ends up being a tech tautology and it could be it could sound a little confusing and again I'll give you guys some examples so I don't know if you noticed it I actually said a toy just a moment ago I said first and foremost let's begin now this well it's over here this is not something that that's common this is not a common expression I just wanted to give you an example first and foremost let's begin you're you're saying the same thing twice all right you don't need to say that it it really doesn't make much sense so this is a little awkward but there is a common one that a common expression that people use all the time it's also a tautology you're saying the same thing twice but in different ways and I want you to complete the expression okay M what it is so I've already told you what a toy is you're saying the same thing you're you're just kind of saying it in a different way so this is a very popular expression in English I want you to try and complete this expression what goes at the beginning of that statement what it is this is something that I actually say quite often and I I think this is actually an expression that you will hear in everyday conversation that you're going to hear if you're watching a TV show or movie but I understand that this may be a little difficult um because again these are just Expressions that you you might hear from time to time but it's good to be able to identify them so any guesses all right what it is what goes before that comma all right if you guys are a little unsure like I said th this may be a little more challenging yes uh gelle Fabio yes uh so what would go the expression would be it is what it is and people say this all the time to say you know you know that's just the way the situation is you can't change it all right there's nothing I can do about it for example maybe your boss tells you you have to work on Saturday and you're just like your friend says hey you know why do you have to work on Saturday and you're like it is what it is you know there's nothing I can do that's the situation that's life it is what it is and again it's a tautology because you you're saying the exact same thing it is what it is it is what it is it is an perfect example of an English tautology one that is actually common an expression that you will hear in conversation and now you can go out and use it if you're practicing your English or if you're having a conversation with somebody and they're saying well why do you have to do this this why is it that way you can just say you know it is what it is and that is a great example of a tautology another one all right right here if somebody were to say something like this is a short summary of blah blah blah okay a short summary this would be an an example of a tautology because a summary is just a a short uh a short uh synopsis of the main idea all right a short explanation of the main talking points so a summary the meaning of a summary is something that's short so you don't need to say it's short it becomes redundant but again you might hear this when they're talking about giving a presentation and they'll say you know I'm just going to give you a short summary of the material this one right here if somebody were to say I get up at 6: a.m. in the morning why is that a tautology what are the things that I'm saying twice well 6: a.m.

you know that that's the morning I don't need to say in the morning you could just say I get up at 6:00 in the morning or I get up at 6:00 a.m. again this is redundant but people will say this these are expressions that people actually say in everyday conversation the reason that I put these in quotes is again to let you so you know that we're talking about speaking often you're going to hear toies more in spoken English and they're more accepted in spoken English because when they're written down if somebody were to write you know using a topology like this for example they might look at it and try to correct it and say look you don't need to say the same thing twice it's redundant so again I put all these in quotes so that you know it's more spoken English that people will use use this and the bottom one down there this is a necessary requirement well if something is a requirement then you know it's necessary there's no point to there's no reason to say it's necessary but often times if somebody's talking about requirements they they would use this really to emphasize it and really say okay it's a necessary requirement you have to do it all right exactly are you ready for the next one this one's going to be a little easier this is another tautology it's a common expression how would you complete that statement I'll tell you there's just one word there's just one word that goes there write your answers I want to hear from you again even if you're watching this later I want you to interact okay write your answers in the comments and or just say hello we want to hear from you so what would you say enough is M all right what what do you think all right enough is M let me know what you guys think you guys are given some great answers um Redberry Cherry can we give a Super Chat sure that would be great we love getting super chats so this one again it's a little easier yes Al Ivan Vishnu uh Sava mly jelle want to give you guys some shout outs Carlos Abu Su Olivia enough is enough this is a a common phrase when you are you know upset you want somebody to stop and you say look enough is enough this is going to end enough is enough and it's a tautology because once again you're saying the same thing twice enough is enough now now these two this top one and this third one right here I put down as examples because these are things that I might say in the classroom and you would hear tautologies in the classroom or teachers would say them because you're constantly repeating the information I once heard a great expression it said a great teacher never says things once you're always saying things two times three times four times because you want students to remember the information you also want them you want them to understand your instructions so for example I might say okay you need to take turns one after the other it means the same thing but it would be this would be something I would say so that you the instructions are very clear take turns one after the other um the other one we talked about enough is enough and then this last one i' would say don't forget to do the homework and write three paragraphs the three paragraphs that is the homework but again I would say it I I would repeat myself because you want students to remember so I think it's quite common for teachers to use topologies and constantly repeat the information and say things twice do the homework and then say what the homework is so that the students remember or hopefully remember this last one down here this would be an example of I think an awkward statement if somebody were to say this in conversation you might uh you might think it's a little weird in my opinion I think that that that just sounds a little strange the only time that this would be acceptable would be if there's a long pause and somebody's actually trying to think about what they want to say to express themselves so for example you could say you know in my opinion you know I well I think that and if you have that pause then it makes sense because you're trying to think of an explanation but if you just say this sentence right one after the other I think in my opinion I think that or in my opinion I believe in my opinion I feel then it would sound a little awkward so again be careful of some of these tautologies because some of them are common Expressions it is what it is enough is enough and other times they might it could sound a little awkward in everyday conversation all right so let's keep keep going and I want to mention you guys somebody had just brought up the super chats we of course love that and again if you want to connect with us a great way to do that you can check us out on patreon it is we have some cool rewards it's another great way to connect with us and we'll leave a link in the description if you guys are interested in becoming patrons the next question that I have for you is music so again I said that you might find topologies in songs you're saying the same thing twice so again I want you to fill in the blank what do you guys think and this is this is it's a little more challenging all all right this is uh from a song I Just Want to Live While I'm now even if you don't know the song that's okay you probably haven't heard of it it's a song it's by Bon Jovi all right and this was actually I think it was a common it was a popular song several years ago but even if you have not heard the song think about what word would go there that would kind of be saying the same thing I just want to live while I'm and I was I was thinking about singing it just just for a moment but I I yeah you you don't want to hear me sing it besides many of you have rocked this yes all right um I just want to LLY great H Camila Abu uh Ira fabiio lanja Alise yes I just just want to Live While I'm Alive I know it sounds it's very bad sorry about that um I just want to Live While I'm Alive this was a song by Bon Jovi it's a tautology it means the same thing however in the song you know his meaning is you know I I just want to Live While I'm Alive you know while you're alive you want to take advantage of of Every Breath You want to do amazing things you really want to live your life to the fullest so the meaning of it makes sense the message makes sense but again if if you were writing a paper and you were writing an essay and somebody wrote like I just want to Live While I'm Alive I would look at this and be like what what are you talking about but again I if you're having a conversation and you're expressing you know I just I just want to live while I'm I'm still alive then the meaning makes sense you want to take advantage Carpe DM sees the day another uh popular song uh this is from it appeared in a famous Alfred Hitchcock movie I believe in the 1950s k whatever will be will be uh it was sung by Doris Day but she did not she did not come up with the song I really don't know who did but again this is an old song very very famous k s what whatever will be will be it is a topology you're saying the same thing whatever will be it will be of course and this last one shout it shout it Shout It Out Loud by a kiss again again if you are shouting something then of course it's out loud you don't need to say that but in this case again when we're talking about music shout it shout it shout it out loud it makes sense to to use a tautology so let's let's move forward let's go to some acronyms all right what what is this all right first this is a little easier I want you to fill in that blank what kind of acronym would you use all right remember an acronym is just a a shortened form of the of a of a phrase you're taking the first letters of the words and you're squeezing it together to into an acronym what kind of machine is that that is a m machine I think this uh this probably a little bit easier write your answers in the chat write them in the comments what what is This Acronym right here all right and then I will explain why it is a tautology and there are a few more topologies when we're talking about uh acronyms yes uh Brian Vishnu uh yes I guess you could say it is a bank machine that's true but what is the acronym all right you could say yes it is a teller machine the acronym would be an ATM all right ATM machine it stands for automated teller machine but if somebody's having a conversation they say Hey you know I need to go to the ATM machine that is something that people might say and it's almost like you're saying automated teller machine machine so again this would be an example of a topology in this case it's very common that people might just say ATM which you know I need to go to the ATM where's the ATM let me hit up an ATM the next one this one is very common to hear it VIN number if you're talking about a VIN number um for example your vehicle identification number all in the us um I imagine in other countries you have a license plate and the license will have or your vehicle is going to have a VIN number your vehicle will have a VIN number so it can be identified your vehicle identification number but it's like saying your vehicle identification number number your VIN number in this case again you will hear those word This Acronym used with number VIN number all right the next one uh another example please RSVP RS VP stands for and my I I apologize for my French pronunciation resp and in when you when you translate that respond play just means please respond so again if you ask somebody which is very common please RSVP it's almost like you're saying please please respond again this is an example of a toogy with an acronym um yes uh LLY gave a great another great example your PIN number number your personal identification number number PIN number so you find toies quite often with uh acronyms it's it's not uncommon that you see this repetition and again it just it just becomes natural like I said when you're talking about Vin you're almost always going to say VIN number when you're talking about rsbp it's very common for people to say please RSVP my next question we're going to move on to literature and this is a very very famous statement all right by a very famous writer uh from the UK okay or not to be that is the question okay what what what goes in that blank what would you guys say all right M or not to be that is the question this is a very famous English tautology in literature that you see this repetition m or not to be that is the question all right uh let's see what do we got here write your answers in the chat or write your answers in the comments again it's it's like the comment section it's like a piece of paper all right you guys can just write on it it's great to practice yes all right um wait wait oh to to bed all right bed or not to oh to be there it is yes um excellent uh Brian Ivan Fabio Molly vlock uh jelle Andre Alis Vishnu I think yes most people have heard this uh expression this phrase even if they have not read Shakespeare before to be or not to be that is the question it's a very famous phrase um if you're talking about English literature to be or not to be that is a toogy you're saying the same thing it's basically like sometimes when I would ask students about the meaning of a word and I would say well what is a tautology and if a student was kind of being a smartass they would tell me a tautology is a tautology and' be like well yes you are correct and you answered my question by giving me a toy a toy is a tautology what does the what what does this mean and you just say it's the same thing all right again to be or not to be you're repeating yourself the next time let's look at some toies when it comes to advertising again I told you that we use tautologies one reason we use them is to repeat and I said that teachers will use them in the classroom I'll use them because you're constantly repeating stuff whether you're telling students instructions or whether you're just teaching them information you say things again and again and again they do we do this a lot in advertising as well because you want to repeat the information you want to make the person who's listen listening to your ad

you want to make it very clear what it is that's happening all right so these are just some phrases that you might hear somebody's talking and they say oh this is a new innovation all right well an innovation is something that's basically new you don't really need to say it's new but it sounds much better if somebody says well this is a new innovation and you're basically using that adjective to describe an innovation which is already in the meaning the next one please prepay in Advance well to prepay means to pay in advance so you really don't need to say that but again next time you're listening to a commercial or if you're reading something that that is an advertisement and they want you to buy it see if you could May notice that please prepay in advance that's something you may come across this is a very common one they say oh here's an added bonus well a bonus is something that is extra it's something that you get in addition so you really don't need to say an added bonus but that is basically it's it's a collocation those two words are frequently used together something is an added bonus or they might say you know we're giving away free tickets all right to give away means that you are means that it's free you don't have to pay for it so you could just say we're giving away tickets but again often times people would say we're giving away free tickets all right just for that emphasis is just for that Clarity so you might often hear toies when we're talking about advertising so again this is a common this is a great example of when you would hear tautologies all right that repetition again and again and again so as your added bonus here is another question all right this is a this is a challenging one all right I personally made this bowl for you with my own what do you think you could use use to complete that sentence it's a little more difficult but but what word or maybe you could put more than one words um what what could you say to complete this sentence to make it a tautology I personally made this bowl for you with my own M all right the key word in there would be personally all right the key word would be personally and yes exactly uh Vishnu Fabio Abu yes I personally made this bowl for you with my own hands or somebody might say uh I personally made this bowl for you with my own two hands all right because if you personally do something you are already making it you don't need to tell them that you made it with your own two hands but again this is something that that people might say keep that in mind that you would often hear toies in spoken English it's not as common that you would see it in writing the only time that you might see it in writing would be I I would say sometimes in literature um again for as a literary device like Shakespeare you want to emphasize something or uh I I think in advertising when it's a written advertisement they might talk about something being an added bonus okay so I hope that makes sense like I said again this is just a fun little lesson to talk about tautologies how they're used when they're used and that next time you can try to identify them and if you can think of any more examples please write those in the comments give some more examples of a tautology so that people that are reading this that they can continue to learn and and and get see more examples of toies that would be perfect so again if you guys enjoyed this lesson please like and share we love hearing from you guys in the comments and you can join our social media classes up there so I want to give a shout out thank you guys for joining me today thank you Loi Ira Andre Olivia um Rosa CLA step Malala Von Vishnu jelle thank you guys so much for being here really appreciate it I hope you enjoyed uh this lesson on toies L vck all right Su thank you thank you thank you I'm sorry if I I mispronounced some of of your names or if I wasn't able to say your name I I'm always trying to to get as many shout outs as I can sa am uh thank you thank you guys for being here Rocky hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you next time so long

LESSON 717 OF 749

What's going on with US protests, Black Lives Matter, & George Floyd | Reading + Vocabulary

hey everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English and if this is your first time here on the channel this we're all about just helping you practice and improve your English skills and again please if this is your first time write your name tell me where you're from write that in the chat or even if you're watching this later write that in the comments I love hearing from everyone well especially new people so what what we're gonna do today is we're gonna talk about some some current events and I think it's a very serious topic it's a very important topic and I just want to start out by saying that we're gonna be talking about what's going on in the United States with the the protests and black lives matter and George George Floyd and I just want to start out by saying that obviously I don't I don't consider myself as a person that can speak intelligibly on this issue I am from the United States but I say that I cannot speak intelligibly on this issue because I don't have the same experience so I don't have the experience of what it's like to be somebody who is black in the United States I don't have the experience of what it is like to be a minority in the United States so the only thing that I feel like I can do is try to try to listen try to understand try to read more about what's happening and what's going on and then just try to reflect about my I mean my own experience and Who I am in order for well in order for me to try and become a better person so I'm not this is not about this is not my expertise so it's this lesson is not about me giving you my opinion about everything I am an English teacher so this is an English lesson and what we're going to do is instead of me just talking about my pinions or thoughts we're going to look at a few different news articles and we're gonna read the articles which I hope will help you maybe give a little bit of a better understanding about the situation and and learn more about what's happening why it's happening and then again just try and hopefully when you leave think about okay well where do we go from here well what might be the direction that we need to go in after this so as we go through these articles because like I said it's an English lesson we're gonna I'm going to pick out some vocabulary words and I'm going to create a vocabulary list and I will put those words in the description after the lesson is over so in case you want to look at the words in review but I'm going I'm trying to choose words that I think are relevant that are important these are vocabulary words so that if you want to continue reading about these events that are happening or maybe you're watching the news or you're listening to something that if you understand these words it's going to help you better comprehend the information and and understand what's going on so again it's more about reading and building your vocabulary as well as learning about this situation because some of you have asked me about what's happening what's going on why it's happening so just keep that in mind we're gonna be looking at vocabulary words and at the same time I hope that these articles will will help put the situation in into context so that you understand and get a better idea as to what's happening so right here we have our vocabulary list which I will be bouncing back and forth between I apologize if I have so many windows open right now so I'm gonna try and do this hopefully it's it's a little seamless but let's go ahead and begin and we're gonna start with this site right here and what this is it's talking about well the title is what is black lives matter to help you understand well what this is because this is something that you probably have been hearing more about if you've been paying attention to the protests if you've been reading about it you may be wondering well what exactly is black lives matter and this article tells you what it is and kind of how how it began so let's go ahead and read this together and then I'll go back and pick out a few vocabulary words so it says attention has been called to the black lives matter movement by black out Tuesday in which the music and other industries in the United States this week protested the death of George Floyd and other African Americans by shutting down for 8 minutes and 46 seconds the length of time Floyd was held to the ground with the policeman's knee on his neck this statement against racial injustice has largely been associated with the black lives matter movement which began in July 2013 when George Zimmerman was acquitted of fatally shooting Trayvon Martin a 17 year old unarmed black teenager Martin has Martin was killed by Zimmerman as he was walking from a convenience store to his father's home in Sanford Florida where he was visiting Zimmerman a self-proclaimed neighborhood watchman called the local police department mentioned there had been burger burglaries in the neighborhood and said he observed a real suspicious guy who was up to no good the police dispatcher told Zimmerman his security services were not needed but Zimmerman still left his vehicle leading to a violent confrontation between himself and Martin Zimmerman fatally shot Martin at close range and later claimed to the two police Martin assaulted him and he shot Martin in self-defense the basis of his acquittal so this is the situation which happened back in 2013 that started this movement called black lives matter so I'm gonna go back and we're gonna pick out some vocabulary and we're gonna talk about this a little more so if you're sitting there again if you're wondering thinking about specifically well what is black lives matter what it really is is it's it's more of I think from my understanding more of a movement than just a singular organization because I think there are many people involved in it so this is the meaning this is the definition that it came from Wikipedia but I think it also was on their website as well so I'm gonna post it in here right here so black lives matter is an international human rights organization moment originating in the African American community that campaigns against violence and systemic racism towards black people so what's happening now obviously the situation with George Florida involved the police black lives matter it's it's not really it's not just about the police and the black law in the black community it's it's much broader because as you just read this situation in which this man Zimmerman shot this other young man Trayvon Martin it was not related to the police in that matter but it came it did come out of the justice system which we're gonna get to some of those words right now so some other words that I want to highlight in this article are as follows let me go back to the article so you know what black lives matter means this this man George Zimmerman right here was talking about he was acquitted a fatally shooting Trayvon Martin a 17 year old unarmed black teenager if somebody is acquitted that is more talking about the law and legal terms so acquitted acquitted and fatally are the next two words that I want to put up there on a vocabulary list so if somebody is acquitted it means that it was decided in a law of court that someone is not guilty of a crime and he was acquitted of fatally shooting Trayvon Martin so if we're talking about something fatally as an adverb it means in a way that causes death so often you might hear it as an adjective and you say something is fatal and it means that something somebody died because of this thing so think about that situation because it is it's crazy that here was a man that confronted this other you know 17-year old boy 17-year old teenager and he wasn't committing a crime he was being basically accused by this other guy the confrontation started he shot him and killed him and he said it was self-defense and he said well I was just defending myself when they brought it to the through the justice system and the jury had to decide whether he was innocent or guilty they came back and they said he was not guilty he was acquitted of basically killing this this teenager and that caused and rightfully so a lot of outrage and a lot of anger and that's how the movement got started so let's go back to the the website there's a few other words that I wanted to highlight so it said again the situation Martin was walking he was killed when walking from a convenience store to his father's home and Zimmerman was a self-proclaimed neighborhood watchman so if you're unsure about what some of this means in the United States and I don't know how it works in some other countries some neighborhoods some areas they they may have something called a neighborhood watch and all that means is that if there let me go back to the vocabulary list right here if there is a neighborhood watch you may see some signs up about it it's supposedly when your neighborhood the people that are your neighbors are going to watch the other homes or the neighborhood if something bad or wrong is happening as a way of reducing crime and it's organizing people to watch each other's property and sometimes you might see a sign up I don't know if you see them anymore when I was a child it might say sometime like a sign that says neighborhood watch and it kind of is just like a warning to people like okay be careful like we're watching where we're trying to help each other and watch it so it said he was a self-proclaimed neighborhood watch and what that means if somebody is self-proclaimed it means that you say something about yourself that this was not his official job this was not something that he was I don't believe he was paid to do that this was his job that somebody hired him to do this thing that he did it himself and he said he would say this about himself he was a self-proclaimed neighborhood watch person so it's used as an adjective to say that somebody is a self-proclaimed teacher maybe that's not their job but they say that about themselves or they are a self-proclaimed you could choose anything really and really it's not an official title it's just something you say about yourself if you say that something is self proclaimed so in this situation Zimmerman was a self-proclaimed watchman and he described he called the police and described this person as a real suspicious guy who was up to no good if you don't know what that phrase means that somebody is up to no good I'll add that one back to the vocabulary list right now so if you say somebody is up to no good it's kind of just a phrase and expression that means somebody is doing something illegal or just some bad activity and you'd say that this person is up to no good and then the last word that I wanted to talk about was at the very end of the article right here so it said that Martin Zimmerman fatally shot Martin a close-range and later claimed to the police that Martin assaulted him he said that this this teenager this

Trayvon Martin assaulted and came after him and he shot him in self defense which means that he was saying self-defense he is trying to defend himself and that was the basis of his acquittal and if you say that something is the basis of something else you know that acquittal means that you were found not guilty and if that self-defense was the basis of his acquittal what that means is let me add it it means that that was the most that that was the reason for this thing that that was the most important fact or reason for doing something so self you could say that self-defense was the basis of his acquittal and as I said like hopefully this article will give you some context of okay well what is black lives matter it is a movement where did it begin it started with this with this instance in which case again when he was acquitted everyone was outraged and rightfully so because it's basic like like he's Zimmerman this guy started this fight and then he when the fight escalated because again if you start a fight with somebody somebody may fight back and he shot him and then basically the the judge the criminal the criminal justice system acquitted him and said oh no no you're not guilty of killing this person which was ridiculous so hopefully this will give you a little historical context of what's going on so again I just want to say like I'm not really going to spend much time reading the the comments as we go through this I you're just joining us we're talking about the u.s. protest the black lives matter movement and trying to give you a little historical context explain the situation and provide you with some vocabulary to help you understand it better if you continue reading about it or listening to it but I will say hopefully I haven't been reading the chat but I hope everybody all I'd ask is just be respectful be kind you know this is not a place to try and in antagonize others or other people so I hope that people are just being respectful in the comments so this is another article that I wanted to show you that I think will also help things put them into context a little more so the title of this article is called which death do they choose many black men fear wearing a mask more than the coronavirus and I think this shows you a little bit of everything about what's going on right now with the virus and what's happening with the black lives matter and in this sit in this well let's just read the article so it's saying what do they choose wear the mask or or the corona virus so again I'll read it and then we'll pick out a few words and go through it to help you build your vocabulary a little bit so says when the CDC issued guidelines in early March asking people to wear masks to prevent the spread of corona virus the question for many black men was not where to get a mask or which kind it was how do I cover my face and not get shot as the recent killing of George Floyd made achingly clear the widespread fear of violent death at the hands of law enforcement is not unfounded being killed by police is one of the leading causes of death for young black men a study last year found one in a thousand black men in America could expect to be killed by police despite their fears of infection and the statistics and statistics showing black communities are among the hardest hit many black men feel wearing a mask is a bigger threat than the corona virus just as they are more likely to than white people to be stopped and frisked to be pulled over for traffic violations and to be charged with drug crimes black individuals also appear more likely to be targeted by police for simply wearing masks in a heartbreaking calculus many are choosing not to wear them at all so again the the title of the article kinds of sums it up that the that black men have a dilemma about do I wear a mask and risk being targeted by the police or do I not wear a mask and get the coronavirus so let's look at a few of the vocabulary words that I wanted to talk about in this article so the first one is it said again the the death the killing of George Floyd made it a kingly clear it made it a kingly clear the widespread fear a violent death at the hand of law enforcement is not unfounded so let's look at a couple words I want to look at achingly and unfounded so if you say that something is achingly clear then you're talking about it's an adverb and you're describing this situation let me go back over to our vocabulary list achingly means similar to extremely but it means extremely in a bad way because if you have an ache which is a noun it's something like a pain that hurts so achingly as an adverb it means it's achingly clear it means it's extremely clear in a bad way another adverb that you could use that has a similar meaning would be painfully if you say painfully or achingly they have similar meanings now if you say that something is unfounded all right it means that it is not based on facts so let's go back to the article because this was important the way that it was worded if something let me go down so you see this so achingly extremely bad and like painfully unfounded that something is not based on facts but if you go back to the article whoops and read how it's used it says that the fear of violent death at the hand of law enforcement is not unfounded so the it's it's used in a way saying that this is based on facts that there is a fear of of maybe having resulting in death that hands of law enforcement that is based on facts and the killing of George Floyd by a police officer was just another example of that so again if the in this say they're saying it's not unfounded which is which is a way of saying it is based on facts and if you say that somebody is frisked it means that you are the police is stopping you and then what they're doing is they are searching your body they are searching your body to see if you have anything that is illegal or some weapons maybe drugs so if the police see somebody and they think oh this person they're suspicious they're up to no good they can just stop that person and say okay turn around I'm gonna I'm gonna check your I'm gonna see if you have anything illegal on you maybe you're not doing anything wrong and again this was something stop and frisk that black people are more likely to be stopped and frisked than white people even though in the United States the the population is very different there are many more white people than there are black so the next word that I had was talking about I want to talk targeted because it said that if somebody is targeted it means that they are paying direct attention to a particular group so let's go back and show you how it was used in the article it said that it's talking about the likelihood and they also black people also appear to more likely to be targeted by police for simply wearing masks that the police would see somebody the a black person wearing a mask they're more likely to be targeted that the police are paying more attention to this person and then the last word that I want to talk to you was therefore because of that they said they make a heartbreaking calculus many are choosing not to wear masks at all they think that the mask put them more at risk so if you're saying that somebody is making a calculus it's similar to somebody like making a calculation and they're trying to make a decision so we can go back to the vocabulary list and add this word where is it right here sorry let me move this down so a calculus is again I took all these definitions from Cambridge online dictionary it's one that I prefer to use it's a method of reasoning to make a decision so in this case the even though everybody is encouraged to wear a mask these people they feel these young black men feel that they are in more danger if they wear the mask than if they don't so again that hopefully that gives you a little sense of the the fear that people have that they're living with in their daily lives especially at a time like now during this pandemic when everybody is saying like yes you should wear a mask and one of the examples they gave in the article I'm gonna also link all of these articles down below if you want to go back and read the full article I've only I'm only taking the very beginning of these articles and talking a little bit about it but this one right here if you were to go to where was it there was a link in here I don't know if it's this one right here but there was a link to one of these that showed an instance of the situation was two young black men walked into a Walmart they were gonna buy a few things and they said the security guard there started following them as they were walking in to this Walmart and as they go inside the guard tells them that they have to leave and I think the reason he told them is that they look suspicious because they were wearing masks and the mass that they were wearing were you can see a video because these videotaping and showing it it's just the one that you would get from your doctor that you would buy at a convenience store all of the one many of the ones that you would see in the hospital so it wasn't any kind of strange mask there's a pandemic going on but again it's just another example of the type of discrimination that goes on the the next site that I want to look at is this one right here which is more specific about the death of George Floyd which recently happened and the protests that have since followed so let's go over here it says I'm just gonna read the beginning part says tens of thousands of people have demonstrated mainly peacefully across the United States for an eighth night following the death of African American George florid in police custody one of the biggest protests joined by Floyd's relatives took place in his hometown of Houston Texas many defied curfews in several cities imposed after violence and looting in some districts on Monday night the Pope has issued a call for racism not to be ignored we cannot tolerate or turn a blind eye to racism he said but he also condemned the violence nothing is gained by violence and so much is lost so let's talk about some of the the words that you see in this part right here so I want to highlight a few of them for you and let me why hold on one second I apologize okay so let's go over here to the vocabulary our vocabulary document right here I'm going to move this out and some of the words that I want to highlight from this argue the first meant to would be curfew and looting and I'm gonna go ahead and put both of them right down here so if you're talking about a curfew this is something that because of some of the the riots that have transpired especially it tends to happen later at night at nighttime the city may impose a curfew and what that means is that as a rule that everyone must stay at home between particular times so they may say there is a 8 p.m. curfew and at that time everybody must be in their home now it's used in this context you could also use this word in other context as well for example when I was younger and I was a teenager and I tell my parents like oh I wanna I'm gonna go out it's Friday night and they may say ok your curfew is 11:00 o'clock that at this time I had to be home it was a curfew it talked about looting in the article and I'll go back and highlight some of these and that is just an activity of stealing from shops during some event or protest and people start looting they break into shops and they may go inside and steal stuff and that's what the that is called is looting so if we go back to the article and see how they use those words in context it's talked about that during these protests many defied the curfews that they did not follow the rules they did not go home and they they the reason they put these curfews in is that they were imposed which means they were started after violence in looting in some of the areas so the next phrase that I want to talk to you is the the Pope issued a call for racism not to be ignored he said we cannot tolerate or turn a blind eye to racism so that this is the phrase that I wanted to talk to you about was to turn a blind eye to something so if you say that somebody turns a blind eye to something what that means is that somebody is ignoring or they're just they pretend not to notice something so this is a phrase that you may hear I don't say it's quite common but you could hear it in a variety of context if somebody is ignoring something or they're not paying attention especially to something that's wrong that they should pay attention to you could say that that somebody is turning a blind eye to this thing the next phrase that I wanted to talk to you about okay let's just go back to the article quickly and I'll show you a few more words that I wanted to go so actually I wanted to read the next part too because I did have some words that I wanted to show you in that so the Pope made those comments about we cannot turn a blind eye and write down here it says the so okay so if you say that something reignites it means that it started again so as I mentioned and I showed you in that first article about how black lives matters how the black lives matter movement began and there have been other instances and problems that have followed and then when this happened the death of George flooded it reignited all of this again it started again it really did anger and if something is deep-seated it means that you feel you feel really strongly about something or you really truly believe something so in this case they are talking about strong anger deep-seated anger the next couple of words that I want to talk to you about was the end there to help you understand this part right here where it's talking about a proposal which is like a suggestion from a u.s. lawmaker they want to end the qualified immunity of police which prevents civil legal action against them so I want to talk to you about they want to end the qualified immunity is a word that I want to talk about they want to stop the immunity of police which would prevent this civil action one other word that I want to talk to you about was this this part right here sorry I missed a word that demonstrators have taken to the streets not only to express their outrage at the treatment of mr. Floyd but to condemn police brutality against black Africans black Americans more widely so they're talking about condemning police brutality and the next part the suggestion was to end immunity for the police so if we go back to our vocabulary list if we're talking about [Music] condemning something to condemn me to criticize someone or something because they've done something morally wrong so a lot of people are condemning these actions that hey this is wrong it's morally wrong to condemn immunity has a couple of different meanings which you may have heard for because of the pandemic as well immunity means that you are protected against disease or legal action so if you have immunity in talking about the the disease the virus kovat then it means that you're protected against the disease if you have immunity in the legal sense it means that you are protected and you do not have to worry about somebody suing you and in this case qualified immunity for police officers when they're talking about civil lawsuits and what a civil lawsuit mean it means that one person can sue another person for doing something wrong and in this case if police have immunity it would mean that the family member cannot sue that police officer for doing for for killing this person the only way that the police officer could would get in trouble then would be if it is the government the the state government local government or even federal government decided to take action and say this is wrong we are going to punish you in some way but right now there is a qualified immunity from civil lawsuits that just means individual people are not able to sue at the moment so again I hope that these articles can put some things in context as to how this started what's happening why it's happening and then the big question is like where do we go from here and I one thing I want to say that again this is more just my opinion talking about this is that I know right now a lot of the discussion is focusing on the black community and the police but I still think black lives matter is a much broader topic broader discussion it's not just about the the police it's about

it's part of it about the police about the criminal justice system it's about access to education and having more education equality it's about having safer neighborhoods it's about having better health care it's about having equal opportunity if you want to do something like take out a loan from a bank there are so many different forms of discrimination that exists in the United States and to be quite honest I think it exists all over the world I think if all of you were to reflect right now about your country and what's going on there and think about what kind of discrimination exist in your country whether it is against somebody of a different race a different religion a different gender I imagine that everybody can kind of think about something that goes on so again I I don't the the big question is people think okay what's the next step and obviously I don't have the answers to that again I think it's always good to just try to listen to understand and then I think reflecting is also important which is what I said that I tried to do is when this comes up to think about my own experiences and what I've seen happened the types of discrimination why this was happening and hopefully if I'm able to reflect on it and understand I hopefully that can that will make me a better person and one thing I thing I wanted to say is one thing we want to do with some of these lessons which we've decided to do from now on out I don't know if you saw the lesson before when I talked about The Cove in nineteen and some of the vocabulary from the virus and then at the end I made a donation we may a donation and highlighted a charity and organization that was important to me because I worked with this orphanage so one thing we want to do and not we're not gonna do it all the time maybe once a month we'll see is that when we talk about some of these issues whether it's talking about racism whether it's oh I'm up perfect protecting the environment it could be talking about inequality it could be a variety of things one thing we would like to do is try to use this channel this platform for a little bit more of a positive change and I want to highlight an organization that we think is doing good work and my wife and I we have decided to make a donation to this charity and kinda and highlight it so the one that we decided this time it's called black girls code and I will put a link in the description right down below you can check it out I will throw a link in the description right now if I can and what we've done is we made a donation and what this what this organization does is it works in trying to train and educate young black girls and teaching them how to code how to write code and preparing them for the the digital world because everything is digital nowadays so this it is closely connected with education it started in the San Francisco Bay Area and we used to live there I had heard about this organization before but we wanted to highlight it we made a donation I suggest you check it out if you want to make a donation that's fantastic if not I would still that's per that's okay I'd still encourage you to go check it out read about it you're reading in English it's a good way to practice your language skills and just I think reading about any type of organization that does some good in the world I think that also helps us become better people in general so check that out link is in the description I threw it in the chat I hope you guys enjoyed this little discussion I hope you learn new words and phrases and again I hope it helps if you decide that you want to read a little bit more about what's going on or if you watch TV or listen to something maybe you hear these words being talked about and you'll be able to understand it a little easier so thank you guys so much for joining me today I hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you next time so long

What's the most difficult language skill to learn? | Natural Conversation + Vocabulary

If you'd like to improve your listening skills, then today's lesson will help because we're going to have you listen to a natural English conversation. So, some of you have asked us that to practice your listening skills, you would like to hear a natural conversation or just hear us speaking about a topic in general. So, that's what we've done today. We've chosen a topic and you guys are just going to listen to us talking about it. And you're not only going to listen to the conversation, but you're also going to see if you can try to identify some vocabulary words that I'm going to go over with you right now. These are just random words that I've taken from the conversation and I'm going to tell you the meaning. you're listening to the conversation, we're going to show you where they're at so that you can get a feel for how these words are used in context. So, the first word that I want to talk to you about is a verb and that is to defer. And usually you would use it that you defer to someone else, to defer to someone.

the future. To defer to someone. The next word and it's it's one that I use from time to time and it's more slang is just crap. If you say, you know, something, oh, that that's crap. When you say that, you mean that that's just it's ridiculous, it's absurd, it's an exaggeration, it's a falsehood, it's nonsense, it's crap. Then we have the phrasal verb tune out. So, you can you can tune out something or you could even tune someone out. And when you when you tune out, you basically you stop listening and you stop paying attention to what's going on and you're just off in your own mind and you just tune out. Another great word is eavesdrop. It's a verb, so you'd say to eavesdrop. And it's often followed by the preposition on, to eavesdrop on someone. And it means to listen secretly to a private conversation or to listen secretly to a conversation that you just you shouldn't be listening to. You have no business listening to this conversation. You are eavesdropping. Next is an expression rub it in. And you could you could rub it in or just say, you know, rub something in. And when you rub it in, you are drawing somebody's attention to an embarrassing fact or mistake. And you're you're basically highlighting this embarrassing moment when somebody doesn't want to hear it, they don't want to listen to it and they might say, you know, don't don't rub it in or, you know, do you have to rub it in? Stop rubbing it in. Then we have reserved. And this is an adjective which means that if somebody is reserved, it means they're slow to reveal their emotions or opinions. They're basic it's basically saying that somebody is shy.

So, as you're listening to our conversation and listening to us talk about this topic, keep an eye out for these words and again we'll highlight them for you so that you can see how they're used in context. Let's begin. All right, so Hi. what we want to talk about right now, what what we think is the most difficult skill when it comes to learning a language. So, I will defer to you first. And what do you think when you're learning another language, um, any language, what's what's the most challenging thing for you when it comes to learning another language? Uh, you know, I think it depends on the language, which is weird, because for me it does. Like I Why don't you talk cuz I don't have an answer right now. Have to think about it. Okay. All right. Um It's okay. I would say for me the most difficult language skill is, well, I think by far is listening. Which I think is surprising because I think for many people out there, well, exactly. I think for many people like, oh, that's the easiest. But for some reason my my listening's crap.

I feel like when I was learning Spanish or even when I was learning Korean it's so easy for me to tune out. And actually like when I'm in a conversation or with a group of people are talking and I'm focusing like, okay, yes, I know I know what's going on. I'm listening to the conversation and then all of a sudden I I I lose focus and and then I try to jump back into the conversation and start listening again, but by by that point I've I've kind of I'm lost. I've kind of forgotten about where we are at in the conversation and what people are talking about. Maybe I need to try and focus a little more on on what's happening in the conversation, but it's always been a challenge for me. I think it is better than some of my other language skills, but at the same time I feel like listen my listening should be better than than what it is if I'm whether I'm learning Spanish or Korean or right now trying to learn Romanian, listening is always a challenge. Mhm. What about you? Well, now that I think about it, it's speaking, of course. I don't find listening difficult. In fact, and I think the reason I don't is because I really like listening. I like and this is just just my personality in any language, I think. I like listening to people's stories. I like listening to to eavesdrop, you know, like if there's like a random conversation. about speaking. Why is the speaking difficult? So, I know we're talking about speaking, but I'm trying to explain like why listening isn't hard for me because I I just I just I just I just I just No. Well, I have a hard time with speaking, so I don't think I think it's worse. Um Plus, I think I'm a little bit more reserved as a person, so I'm not very um like outgoing or anything, so I don't I'm not very confident, so I think that's a big part of it. That's a huge part of speaking. When you speak, you have to be confident in what you say.

And even though I know what I'm going to say, somehow if I speak with somebody who's a native speaker, like all of these doubts come in my head and I'm like, I'm just going to shut up. I think if somebody's, yeah, a bit more a bit more reserved, it becomes an additional challenge to try and speak another language and and go ahead and start talking without worrying about whether you're saying things correctly or not. Right. So, that's why I think speaking is harder for me. Reading, I think, is usually like it's not as it's a little bit difficult. going to go through all the language skills right now? Yeah, I thought we were ranking them. No, I'm just kidding. Yeah, so speaking is hard. So, now we want to hear from you guys and in the comments let us know what language skill do you think is the most difficult, not just with English, but really when you're learning any other language, reading, writing, speaking, listening, grammar. Yeah, what let us know what you think is the most difficult. If you enjoyed our conversation, hit that like button and as always thanks for watching and we'll see you next time. Whatever it was what I was going to say. Um You're talking about listening. Listening is difficult for you. I've already lost focus.

What We Do NOT Miss About America | Interactive English Cultural Lesson

You probably already know that we are from the United States, but right now we don't live there. And today, we want to talk to you about some of the things that we don't miss about living in the United States. That's coming up. Welcome to today's lesson which is a little bit of a... well it's a cultural lesson, I guess. Because we're going to tell you some of the things that we don't miss about living in the United States. And yeah, we're not really trying to hate on the U. S. at all. When anybody's traveling or living abroad, there are things people miss there's things people don't miss. So we want to tell you some of the things that we don't miss.

Well it's just our experience with... Our opinions. One thing that I don't miss which has been a lot in the news recently. I think in the U. S., it's pretty much always in the news. ... is I do not miss guns. I don't want to get into the whole whether you know you should have a gun or you shouldn't have a gun. It's really... Gosh it's become, I think, embedded in American culture at this point. Say hello to my little friend. Go ahead. Make my day. I think one of the issues is, for me, what I don't like is there's just way too many guns. And they're pretty much too easy to get.

And one thing that I wanted to share is that I'll go see my my family that lives in the state of Florida, and maybe I'll be in the grocery store and there's about 50 people in there. And Florida has a gun law where you can get a permit to carry a gun and put it in your your pocket, your bag, or whatever. And sometimes I'll just look around and see all these people and think you know, there's probably about 20 guns in this building right now. It just it makes me feel uneasy. It doesn't make me feel safer at all. And that's one thing that I don't miss is just like out in public looking around and thinking like, gosh, you know, I wonder how many guns are around here right now.

Yeah, it's terrifying. Yeah. I don't miss the guns. Okay, the second thing we don't miss, and this is really true for me, I don't miss like the...people sometimes get carried away I think in the US with work, work, work, work. Make money, money, money. And it's kind of that cycle of like people who are overworked and people who are just really just all... It's like they work...they live to work. They don't work to live. That's a good way of putting it. Yeah. Yeah, so it's just a little much sometimes and people... because you know you're looking at your neighbors and they have a new car, and they have a new phone, and they have like a new huge TV and that becomes a little bit of an obsession for some people.

The expression in English is the rat race. Everybody gets caught up in the rat race. And you need to work, work, work. Go, go, go. Money, money, money. It can get too much. It's... For me it's not where the focus should be in life. Yeah. And I don't miss that. We're English teachers. We're definitely not in it for the money. Obviously. This is a good one. This is something I definitely don't miss. I think most Americans probably would agree with me once they leave the U. S. or get outside is tipping. Because that is another thing. America is a tipping culture. Where you tip...restaurants, bars, hairstylists, taxis. Everything. I just a $20 tip on a ten dollar check.

You're supposed to leave a tip. I live on tips. Make sure you tip the nice lady. A lot of people work in the service industry. I did as well when I was in the U. S. I always tried to tip well because after working in the industry you want to help support those people. Well we tip in the U. S. because people only make like one or two dollars per hour. Yeah, they don't make the same amount of money. They don't make as good of a wage. If they didn't get tips... So if you're not from the U. S. and you do travel there, you should tip. Keep that in mind. I just...I don't want to be a jerk.

I think it's true. So there's a stereotype about Americans when they travel abroad that you can recognize them really easily because they're really loud and obnoxious. That can be true. I tend to think... I don't miss that. I think when you put people from any country in a group together, people are loud and obnoxious. Americans are very extroverted and social I think. And I think that sometimes comes out and it's a little much for someone like me. People that are obnoxious you tend to...they tend to let you know. Kind of cocky and like show-off. I remember after living...after living abroad I went back and I was visiting my parents. I was going out for...I'd go out for a run every day.

Living abroad, we've been in Europe for a while now and like wine is so...wine is so cheap. It's just an added expense in the U. S. that you just got to prepare that you're going to spend a little more money for a beer, wine, a cocktail. Yeah. Well, you know, it's $9 beer night. Yeah, it's tough traveling back there and going out to get a drink and it's like "Oh my gosh." This is how much that we're spending. So another thing I don't miss about the U. S. we don't miss, I think in general, is the healthcare system. For a few different reasons even though they have like really good, great technology and everything.

It's really hard if you don't spend a lot of money to get good healthcare. It's not accessible to everyone. No it's not. And it's very frustrating I think for most people. It's basically...it's a for-profit industry. We worked with a lot of international students, and students coming to the US they had to...one of the requirements for was that they had to have health insurance. And trying to explain the system to people that are not from the United States is really... You know...they look at you just like "What is going on here? It cost this much?" It's like...no, no insurance will pay for it. It's okay. But check that it's covered by your healthcare provider.

Yeah, we had students who thought like they're part of a scam. They're like "Are you sure how much I need to pay? Why am I giving all this money?" We had a student that got into a motorcycle accident. He was okay but had to spend...was in the hospital for two days. Broke their arm. It was it was like $87,000. And this went on for...I don't know how many times I was on the phone with Blue Cross Blue Shield. But it went on for months, and months, and months. And finally, the insurance company negotiated and the cost was down. You know, he didn't have to pay for it but it was just...such a pain in the ass.

Another thing which we don't miss, and I think most Americans would agree with this as well, is public transportation. Because most...even big cities, very few big cities have good public transportation. And it sucks because it's so hard to get around. And because of that you have to have a car. New York City is one of the few places that has good public transportation and metro system. What is it? I just come off as such a hater. It's American deserts. So... So it's not that big, but I just come off as a hater. So first of all, I think American desserts are horrible. That's what I don't miss. Tell us...how do you really feel?

But the sweets in general, I'm not a huge fan of the desserts. They're too sweet. I think maybe Americans have like... ..too much of a sweet tooth. We like a lot of sugar. Tell me if this needs more sugar. The birthday cakes and cupcakes and all of that. I'm not a huge fan. Too much sugar. I'm not a big dessert person, so it doesn't really bother me. I don't like it. I don't think the U. S. is known for...as a dessert country or a dessert place. I guess, yeah. Besides cheesecake. I love cheesecake. Cheesecake is the best and... I guess pies are good too. Key lime pie. Key lime pie is good.

Oh, so you do like the desserts? Like two. Two desserts that I like. I think a lot of people in the United States feel the same way as we do right now and we don't miss being a part of that. It's more something that's going on now, and that's the political climate and the politics in the United States. And it's really, really divided. And brings out the worst, I think, in people right now. And there are I think...there there are legitimate reasons for that. Just the the divisiveness and the... The way...you can't really have conversations anymore about it. So it's definitely something we don't miss. So okay. This is my perspective and it might be different than somebody who's born and raised in the U. S.

But since I wasn't, I can talk about it. What? Nationalism. Greatest country in the world. No, so that's... Number one. I have a problem with nationalism. I think it's too much. I'm going to start that chant... U - S - A. No. U - S - A. Meaning that I think a lot of people are obsessed with the U. S. They think it's the best country. They think it's the greatest and they think other people in the world... That's what they tell us. Okay. It was on a cereal box. In fairness to America right now, I feel like the whole... There is more, I think definitely more nationalism right now, which ties into the whole political stuff.

But I think that's also happening... ..around the world in different places to some extent. I don't think it's necessarily a good thing. But I think everybody's... Many countries are going through this whole pro-our country and against everybody else. And obviously since we are living in another country we don't tend to be in favor of nationalism. We want...we want people to be more inclusive. Yeah. We are the world. We are the world. We are the children. We are the children. And more welcoming because we're not in the U. S. right now and we don't want people to yell stuff at us as we're out running. We believe in you America. You can do better.

U - S - A. Okay, that's... U - S - A. Okay, so now we want to hear from you guys. So please in the comments. It's time to dish. And tell us what are some things you don't like about your country. Come on. We know there's something. Yeah, you don't miss, maybe you don't like, or love. About your country. It's okay. This is a safe space. Yeah. Please keep in mind that we didn't want to offend anyone. Just our thoughts and opinions. Yeah, it's just our experience. We hope you can appreciate us sharing with you guys about our, you know, the American culture and our thoughts and opinions about the United States.

LESSON 720 OF 749

What We Miss About America | Interactive English Cultural Lesson

Today we want to talk to you guys about things we miss about the US. Easy. I like how you're... So in today's lesson we're going to tell you some of the things that we miss about living in the United States. So we are from the United States, but right now we don't live there. So it's a little bit of a cultural lesson for you guys. And we just want to share that with you, so... More of us story sharing time. Story sharing time. Do you want to...you share first. Ladies first. Okay, so the first thing I personally miss about the US, probably the thing... Not that I miss the most, but just that comes to mind first is the food.

Food! Food. Oh, I missed you so much. And what I mean about the food, I don't mean like American burgers. Really, that's what you miss? No, I miss ethnic food, and the availability of having all of this ethnic food everywhere like from Indian to Burmese to... Mexican food. Mexican, which is really good in California where we were. And just all kinds of different ethnic food. Oh my god. Sushi. Yeah, there's so much and I miss it so, so much. Yeah definitely in bigger cities there's a lot of food varieties around there which is nice. And it's authentic because you have people from different countries who lived there and who started these restaurants.

So for the most part, I think it's authentic and delicious. The one thing that I miss and maybe some of you would think its controversial. I don't know. But I really miss the beer. And I don't think...generally I don't think the US is known for its beer. Most people don't think about "Oh, the US. Great beer." But they should because there's a lot of different micro brews there and... But you mean craft beer, right? Craft beer, yeah. Of course. Yeah. Not the beer that they export to other countries generally. But there's a lot of micro breweries and craft beer in the US that's really become popular over the last 10 even 20 years, so...

You guys they have chocolate beer. It's like coco beer. It's incredible. There's a lot of good beer. Yeah. Really good beer. But craft beer. It has to be craft. Not Budweiser and all of that crap. Go for the beer stay for the food. So the next thing I miss that comes to mind is very important. To you. To me now. Well yes. Because first of all I missed the convenience of shopping. Online shopping. The one-stop shop kind of thing. I used to be huge into buying of Amazon Prime. Which if you guys don't know you get same-day shipping. So you can buy something in the morning and get it to your house.

It was annoying. Like I thought it was annoying because she'd get something every day. And then half of the stuff she'd return and be like "Yeah, I don't like this" or "It doesn't fit." But it's free returns. So it's kind of incredible because you have this huge availability and you can sit there with your coffee and order things It's so much better than shopping, honestly in person. But...so I miss that. You're making it seem like the lazy American. Like don't want to leave the house. It's convenient. And like all those big stores that you have a lot to choose from, a lot of options. Yeah, there's a lot of those like Costco's, Walmart's.

Where if you need something you just go there and they have everything. And I know they have Costco in a lot of places all over the world. But there...I think there's a lot of those places in the US. Yeah, but I mostly miss Amazon Prime. I miss it so much. Speaking of shopping. Another thing that I miss and I guess you do too would be the cheap products. So there's a lot of things that I think are much cheaper in the US especially like electronics and clothes, jeans. And, it's nice not having to pay a lot for some of this stuff. Yeah, a lot of sales that they have. But you have stuff that's usually very expensive that can be on sale for like 70-80% off.

And it's a really, really good sale. So I'm...yeah, I miss that. That's a good one. Okay, so the next thing we miss is...I miss a lot - like every day - is this store. This grocery store called Trader Joe's. And we are dedicating a whole category to it because it's so good. So it's a cheap store for food that has a lot of organic ingredients. And everything they do... This video is not sponsored by Trader Joe's. No. But we just like it. We love it. It's such a good story that we miss and everything... It's important. It's a private grocery store, so you're only going to find it in in the US.

Yeah, sadly. So it just has everything good, high quality, cheap. And they change their stuff a lot, so you always get good food. It's kind of along the healthier line as well. More health food, I think. I miss it. Yeah. Another thing that I miss, and this is pretty much just me, I think, is sports. I really miss sports. And obviously you can see sports while you're outside of the country, but I miss talking about it, too. I really enjoyed talking about sports with friends and family and... Everybody loves sports. You know I love sports. You got to love sports. Oh man, I love sports. Yeah, it can be a cultural thing. Why are you laughing?

I'm laughing because I so don't miss that. I'm so happy that's over. Because I'd walk into a room and everyone's like "Did you see what Belichick did?" or whatever. It's like a different language. Great conversation starter. Okay, so I don't know why we left this like... What? It's like number 7 on our list. Well, this is not in order. It's not in order. Of course not. But we miss family and friends. Yeah. Obviously. Definitely not an order of priority. No obviously this... Family and friends...well, after sports. I don't know. I guess. First family and friends, and then everything... Well food though. That's a... Okay, anyway. So we obviously really, really miss our family. Both of our families are in the U. S.

It'd be nice to be closer Yeah, and our friends and everyone. We have a kind of a nice group of friends that are back there. In the Bay Area, so shout out to all of you guys. Even though you're probably not watching this. I think another thing that we miss, which again is not something that I think is a huge deal is of course the language. Just being able to easily speak to people. Be able to understand. That's one thing, sometimes, we miss the language. You can eavesdrop, which is nice sometimes. Yeah, you can eavesdrop. Yeah, you're somewhere and then you hear all these kind of conversations. You're so nosey. It's fun. It's like a little drama sometimes.

And to read the labels. Oh, yeah, yeah. It takes me sometimes a really long time. Like if I'm trying to buy something in the grocery store. To translate everything. The ingredients. She spends a lot of time and energy translating the the food labels. Didn't have that problem at Trader Joe's, did we? No. So one of the...I don't really eat fast food too much I'll put that as a disclaimer. But one fast food that I miss and I really loved being...spending 15 years in California was In-N-Out. So if you guys know, In-N-Out is a...if you've heard of it is like a burger and fry chain. And they have really... It has a bit of a cult following.

In-N-Out. And everybody is, you know fanatic. Like it's the best fast food out there, which I disagree with. Because being from the Southeast, better than In-N-Out is Chick-Fill-A. No. So if you're ever traveling, especially on the east coast of the United States, you see a Chick-Fill-A stop by grab some chicken. You won't regret it. It's okay. It's amazing. I am part of the Chick-Fill-A cult. It's great. What do you mean? You said you loved it. No I said I liked it. You said, "Oh, this is amazing." I said it was good. For fast food it's incredible I said it was good. I kind of miss, I don't know if you miss it as well, is just how casual things tend to be.

Whether it's work or just out in society or whatever. It's increasingly more Informal, which I think is a good thing because I like to be casual and you... Whether it's the way people look or whether it's the way people talk. Not that I tend to be formal when I leave the US. But I just miss...you see other people they're really dressed up and really formal and it makes me feel like... Don't do nothing stupid. Just dress casual. I enjoy casual. I want casual. And how about casual Friday again. Huh re-instituting casual Friday. No, I like it too. But not just because of that it just kind of blurs the lines between like classes and...

In the U. S. it's a little bit or more casual. Well it's harder to tell, I think. Yeah. Because people like to be casual. Yeah, I miss that too. Not to the point where people end up wearing pajamas at the grocery store. It's like too much. It's taking it to... So here are the things that we miss about the U. S. And we want to know from you. If you've traveled abroad or lived abroad what were the things from your country that you missed? Yeah, let us know in the comments. What do you miss about your country when you're away? We hope you enjoyed this lesson. If you did, please give it a thumbs up.

Sharing some of these cultural experiences and thoughts with you guys, so... Thank you guys so much for watching and we'll see you next time. Bye. Bye.

LESSON 721 OF 749

What it's like to live outside the US | Natural Conversation + Vocabulary

[Music] everyone this is interactive English which are channel it's all about helping you practice and improve your English skills my name is Wes and I'm Jana and we are we are the creators behind interactive English and today we have it's more of a listening lesson for you because we're just going to have a natural conversation a discussion about a topic that one of our members one of our patrons has asked us to discuss and as we go through this we will we'll try to identify some words and phrases that maybe you it might be useful to help you just build your vocabulary and that might make it a little easier to understand and follow the discussion as well so the the question that somebody asked us is what's it like to are why did you choose to live outside of the United States so we're from the United States but we do not live there we live in Europe and I think they were just want to know why why we made that decision and I think what would it's like to live outside of the country so do you want to talk about why why we made that decision away from where I was born for many many years now so it's kind of I when you move first it becomes much easier to move again because I looked I was 15 [Music] it's a good phrase though second home because a lot of people talk about that especially I think when they're traveling or living in other places they talk about like a second home like another place that they're comfortable with yeah or you could say a home away from home is another way yeah yeah that feels like home but yeah I think in the same way that I've lived teach it well teaching English has brought me to several different countries so I've lived outside of the United States for some time but I think it's uh I don't know I always think it's good to get outside of your comfort zone to get a new experience to learn another culture learn another language I know that I've heard back from many of you that some of you want to go live in places like the u.s. in order to improve your English to study that work there are many different reasons for that and I was in encourage people to to travel and go abroad and live in other places well that's what I was gonna say if you learned so much about the world about people about who you are even discovering yourself when you trap not just when you travel because when you travel you're going to a very different place I live in a certain place but when you live somewhere just always handle things being just even little things if I remember I've had a friend who was upset that in Europe in some place you don't have like shower curtains it's just like oh I knew that was important to have a shirt but you get used to it and you find out which things are important and which things that you could do away with yeah Emmy has joined us she is the is the third teacher on our channel interactive English you may have seen her in some other videos we've done some collaborations but I would say like especially living abroad I think there are many advantages but there's also I think quite a few hurdles the people have to jump over and if you hurdle would be just talking about an obstacle something that may be challenging so for example like when we got here just trying to learn the the healthcare system things like that can be a little challenging when we had her because she was born she was not born in the United States she was born right here in Budapest Hungary so there's bureaucracy issues there healthcare people work and the language is a big one of course officially have to go to a doctor and you have to edge the medical terminology or everything could be different prescriptions you know even lab results like things like that that people don't think about sometimes obviously they're not going to be in English yeah so you have to figure that I remember we had an important test when I was pregnant and they told me it was all normal but I wanted to know the numbers and everything and it was all in Hungarian and I was like oh gosh supposed to do with it wasn't just on yeah but it was like Hungarian medical language was like oh yeah yeah I think a lot of people asked us to like what we're gonna do in the future and we say there's a lot to take into consideration which is a phrase that means just there's a lot to think about especially because of this little one school and trying to figure out the education system so yeah we'll see we'll see what happens in other countries going to be much easier than with a family or like if you have health issues like that might be harder because that's when it becomes the important you have to know your doctor your provider your everything and that can take a while anywhere I think another challenge that we've had like we've always want to we want to get more plugged in to the system kind of or even just to the society and when I say like we want to get plugged in it means I think we just want to be more a part of it socially as well and kind of making more making more friends having a wider social network because we work at home it does also it makes it a little more difficult to

to get out and have many social interactions as you can see right now we're sitting in a park all by ourselves friends come with us to be honest I think most people who consider moving to other countries they're not gonna work at home so I think whenever that's true you're gonna be out there like some kind of connection some kind of networking opportunity so I think that helps ya to have a group to have an organization something you connected to in the place that you're going not really because any honestly no matter how great the country is no matter how much you love it even if you when you visited it like you loved it so much there's they're going to be you're going to miss it because it's just not your home you're going to miss things about your home and that's that's normal and that's okay I think it took us a while even though we've loved it it's like the honeymoon period and then it's such a good phrase talking about like the the honeymoon period is starting about when you first do something there's a lot of excitement a lot of energy everything's new and then once the way it wears off is like oh you're like way there's something so no and then after that you kind of start getting used to things in you okay well yeah you got to learn the ins and outs of the different cities different places transportation systems and if you're talking about like the the ins and outs then you're really just saying you need to you use it with the verb learn you want to learn the ins and outs of something kind of really know it very well and know it in detail or you could say know something inside and out it's a similar expression but I think over time you end up doing that you end up learning a lot of these things because right now I think we feel very comfortable in because we haven't we don't have any plans to go in here anywhere else right now but I think in the long run I don't think we will end up staying here yeah the camera just shut off inexplicably why you have something to add but yeah we at one thing that's challenging we've we don't know we've talked about moving to other places in Europe or possibly the u.s. because we do miss family yeah that's one of the I think difficult things about traveling or living overseas I know some of you have experienced that as well and I'm sure you go through the same thing because people you know they tend to get homesick which is an adjective that just simply means you miss home yeah so it's hard to say at this point what the future holds but of course we will let you know if you if you keep following our videos and our channel so I hope that you enjoyed our discussion maybe learned a few more vocabulary words again this is just good for your listening comprehension to see if you can follow along and understand so we we are going to go play around in the park right now and let her go run around so thank you guys so much for watching and we will see you next time

What to Say & What NOT to Say When a Woman is Pregnant

hello and welcome this is Wes anyone pro interactive English hi so it's both of us today special lesson today super specialist and I think a fun culture lesson because as you might know if you if you don't now you'll find out that we are expecting our first baby so and now I'm about six months pregnant uh-huh so it's getting closer it's going fast yeah it's going fast so today we are going to talk about something that has come up in the six months so far something we're experiencing but also well your Experian not me yeah and it is how to talk to pregnant women and the reason we chose this is because when you're pregnant people are going to say things to you like they are it's just normal it's just some such a big change in somebody's life and somebody's going to say something and you should know the right things to say mm-hmm yeah so when she came up with this idea for this topic and I thought it was I thought it was a great idea because part of it's like even talking about me because I feel like even you know it doesn't matter even as a native English speaker there are certain events or certain things that happen in people's lives and I even have a difficult time finding the right words to use like what's appropriate what's not appropriate and sometimes I just keep my mouth shut we actually we also did a video about expressing sympathy which is kind of the same way that helps you you know kind of navigate what should you say to someone that's what this is all about so there definitely are some appropriate things but before we start I want to say hi yeah let's say what's up oh wow so let's let's say hi to whoever's here I want to say how Crysta Gisele Gmail Jamari Emilio lolly lolly hello hello welcome mr. Mohammed illusory Benny Benny Jacqueline yes sir Fabricio sorry sorry if we missed some names you say what's up to you guys and as we go through this it's gonna be a little conversational like write us in the comments if you have questions or thoughts like right so just to mention so today we are talking about how to talk to pregnant women so if you have any questions about that we'll take those questions we'll try to answer them as much as we can it's kind of a conversational thing what I was going to say like why are we doing this I so if when somebody's pregnant if you weren't sure you know as women we go through a lot of stuff in our bodies things change things hurt there's a lot of I think insecurities for some of us like they're you know your body's changing so there's a lot of things that maybe you're not so you don't feel as good and this is a special time when you shouldn't say something that doesn't make somebody feel good but also because of that right now so so that's why I also like because there are some things that you really shouldn't say yeah like my general like I said this is a good lesson for me because I'm not sometimes comfortable about knowing like Oh what should I say I don't say so my general rule of thumb is that if I'm not sure whether or not it's something I should or should not say I keep my mouth shut I just don't I just don't say yeah yeah because then you eliminate the possibility that you're you're gonna say something wrong but the truth is also that a lot of us don't know what to say in these occasions so I think I think this is a good it's it's something good for people to to know so let's let's begin start out with what you should say so here are some things that I we think are harmless that I we've heard that other people have said that I think if you say these you're you're safe basically that nothing nothing bad is going to happen if you see these things yeah so this is stuff again this lesson I think we've told a lot of you guys that we're having a child everybody has been so supportive and they've said such wonderful things and the one thing that is so universal and some of you have been saying it in the comments now is congratulations education so this one I think is just so safe I mean and just way to celebrate and tell somebody you know that's that's good news congratulations good to hear right so legitimately if you don't know what to say go with congratulation or congrats for the shorter if you're friends with somebody it's it's definitely not a problem if you say that it should be fine yes Mari thank you Klose excellent yeah thank you guys Thursday the congrats me and if you guys have questions about pregnancy or what to talk to pregnant people about women right and down in the comments yeah if you're if you're wondering about whether or not it's it's a good question I saw somebody I mean he mentioned a question do you like to skateboard I don't know if it's related to this lesson but yeah that's not something maybe I tried yeah don't ask I mean I guess you could congratulations I don't think it's offensive off-topic okay yeah so congratulations always appropriate good one yes next one you look amazing okay great you look wonderful any of those things okay the reason I'm saying this is nice is because like I said when somebody's pregnant you can get two camps of people some people might be feeling great others might be feeling kinda you know when I when I got pregnant for the first almost five months I was sick really really sick so I wasn't feeling amazing I wasn't feeling beautiful I wasn't feeling great and when somebody tells you that it's like oh thank you it's kind of helps your day a little bit because you might not be feeling like that so it is super appropriate to tell somebody they look amazing or great mmhmm yeah it's always always good always safe stick with the compliments I think so the next one I think again is a harmless question again you can ask you know when when is the baby due if somebody you meet somebody and you know they're pregnant then or they tell you like hey we're expecting you say congratulations I think it's fine to ask when the baby is due right and if you don't know what do is it means like when are you going to have your baby that's that's what it means when is the baby due in case you you didn't know that's harmless people pretty much know from the beginning when the baby's due yeah and I think most people again this is I mean we're looking at this through an American cultural perspective so again we don't know in you know other cultures if this is universal but at the same time make I think I think it's an American culture it's perfectly fine right I'm gonna offend somebody right if if you're asking when the baby is due did we tell you guys when the baby is due I'm not sure dude maybe we didn't do you guys know sure our baby's due in January at the end of January the end of January is our due date we become parents okay the next one do you uh say it yep it's you're going to be a great parent and that's that's what we want to hear yeah worried the reason I put it on there is because I've heard somebody told me this it just made me so happy you know like you hear so much advice from people that you know unwanted advice sometimes they told you who told you that that I'm going to be a great parent family friends are like in the community here I think in the I think but also like like family in front it's just so it's just really yes they do they say we're going to be alright yeah but it's so nice like you know again like I said there's so many unknowns especially if you're a first-time parent that it's like oh people have faith in you that you're you're going to be a good parent it's nice it's a nice thing I think yeah so just looking at some questions real quickly somebody was asking graduations thank you for that did you have any nausea in the morning like me oh yeah lolly wolly I had nausea in the morning in the afternoon in the evening anytime of the day it was pretty bad yeah all day long they shouldn't call it morning sickness to be honest is it a baby girl or baby boy that's something I think we've also mentioned we didn't mention it today but it is a baby girl yeah another question what is the meaning of conceived when your lady and so when do you want to explain that no you can what you conceive is the act of like when when people have sex and the woman becomes pregnant that's the conception so to conceive would be like when you know you would have the child yeah the act of having the child to conceive but yeah that would also not be that would be something a little more like you wouldn't ask somebody like when did you conceive yeah so yeah so let's talk about that's a good segue into what you shouldn't say and I wanted to say something the reason why we had so few things that you should say and you'll see we have a lot more why you shouldn't say is because you really it's hard because people have different relationships with people so yeah if it's family I think you can say a lot more maybe yeah but also like stick to if somebody asks you then you can say things but try not to offer a lot of advice try not to offer things if somebody doesn't ask you so it's it's one of those things where it's safer to say as little as possible yeah so we're trying to give you just the basics of you're safe with whether it's a colleague or a family member yeah Julie yeah exactly the baby do oh you guys are gonna be great parents right very good good stuff good stuff to use yeah so what you shouldn't say do you want to talk about that I'll start yeah I'll do the first one okay so was it planned is is our first question and okay this is when it can it can vary if it's somebody that you're very close with like a very close friend and they ask nobody's asked us this either but we write know that yeah but if if so a lot of these by the way it's not just things that have been asked of me but I I'm also part of like a mom group on Facebook and I've seen and a lot of people have been on the receiving end of this so I think we should talk about it because I haven't received all of these but some other people have yeah and this one again it's when you talk about planning a baby it's very very very very personal like you're talking about like oh were you having sex it's a little bit weird to ask that of people unless you're very close friends and and other people know like you're I think it would be something that you would wait for if it's your friend or even a family member you would wait for them to tell you whether it was actually planned or it wasn't planned but I feel like most people probably wouldn't even ask that but it's just something to keep in mind like yeah yep try not to them it's the next one is do you want to read this one too how much weight have you gained I'm laughing because here's what my experience has been I think when when somebody becomes pregnant people forget that you're dealing with a woman and they focus on the baby so they have all these technical questions like how much does the baby weigh like how much do you weigh but people do the math but we're still human women and I don't think you ever go to a woman and ask her like hey in the last five months six months how much weight have you gained it's not appropriate please don't have general rule of thumb especially in American culture avoid talking about weight don't altogether don't just it's you're not putting yourself in a good position just also a fourth thought she might be feeling sensitive about it remember when were pregnant we don't have much control about what is happening what's growing what's changing and it's like well I you know like it's not something that I'm proud of but it's this much or or it's not so just please don't ask that ever unless you are her doctor in which case he's I don't think that yeah yeah in that case like they measure you anyways yeah don't ask that please please please I'm just looking a couple other comments Congrats Thank You Robson hi hoon thank you guys for the congratulations yeah okay ask me when I say my wife has morning sickness bye meaning she is pregnant if somebody oh no it's it's a different thing morning sickness yeah so well from my understanding they're asking if if saying if somebody has morning sickness is the same as saying they're pregnant I I thought it kind of implies if you said that your wife has morning sickness than it would imply that she's pregnant right but there are two different things if somebody is pregnant they're pregnant but they might not be sick yeah if somebody has morning sickness right it's because they're pregnant mm-hmm exactly yeah so again it depends what information you've already told people I guess yeah I think yeah generally you would tell them that you're pregnant before talking about morning sickness [Music] so from Indonesia in Egypt for would prefer boys to girls no no we either baby is a blessing anything is yeah yeah well yeah they calculated at birth at when you go to the doctor the weight of course but it's not something you share with like friends or family it's just not something that you you really just like you should talk about unless yeah yeah I I don't I can't think of a time when it's appropriate to talk about it so the next one is really funny one are you sure there aren't two in there and I don't know people like again if people say it as a joke trying to be funny or something nobody said it no and not to us but I it has been my said to people even in a pop culture like on TV or something you might hear that like please it's not funny if somebody okay first of all if somebody's pregnant and they've been to the doctor and they've done ultrasounds and things they know how many are in there so they're pretty sure if but the implication is if you have two babies obviously if we have twins yeah you're much bigger again I think nothing referring to size maybe just avoid it all to you that's when you use your inner voice yeah another one oh speaking of that one this is another one you look like you're about to pop this is one that we actually heard it was a while back with a friend of ours we were out and at a restaurant yeah somebody said this to her and we were all like we were just stunned like why like you are talking about why would you say that so it was kind of yeah this was yeah it was we were really surprised but yeah we actually heard somebody say this well if you guys don't know to pop the reference from to pop is like a key pop a balloon yeah because it's so when a balloon is very inflated like it's going to pop this person was making a comment that yeah she looked like she was really ready about birth which was a very very stupid thing to say and I was gonna say one thing like women is you know we're all different shapes and sizes and like it we have no control over how big our belly gets so if it's really big and we're still early like if somebody hears that they're going to feel bad especially if they're they still have like two three months right and somebody says you look like you're about to pop it's they're not gonna feel good I just had a baby girl that was last month Oh awesome congratulations Junior is it okay say how are you feeling to a pregnant woman I yeah if you can ask how you're feeling make sure she's pregnant though yeah so something I didn't we didn't put on here was also be careful yeah don't ask people go ahead and say congratulations if you are not 100% sure make it wait for them do you know you they were to tell you that you're pregnant and then you can ask oh how are you feeling that's another cliché that people would maybe yeah don't congratulations and then they say I'm not pregnant and that is really not a problem yeah but I say how are you feeling again I think so some of this really again depends on even your relationship I think with these other people whether it's a family member or a close friend or again if it's an acquaintance then maybe you know that's when you don't say no don't say and just and just be quiet somebody said chubby lady please don't ever say that to me lady yeah that's offensive that's it's very offensive please don't say that the senate when are you gonna have your baby shower I don't I don't know that I don't know they maybe that's okay to ask her maybe asking us we can answer both we can ask you but we're not gonna have a baby shower um because we're right now we're not planning we're gonna be traveling next month so and then we get back we have to move and there's there's a lot going on right now so we don't know well Never Say Never you don't know we don't know there's not one being planned ya know and also yeah I wouldn't ask that because some people might not have a baby shower or they might not like them or they might there are actually a lot of cultural things that I found out that I didn't know I think it's okay to ask like are you going to have a baby shower you can ask you can ask we don't assume that these are things that I don't know so I don't know either as long as you're not I think as long as you're not touching something about size or if something very personal we're good so what's the baby girl name we still don't have well we're a firm name just yet we have we have some choices yeah I have some no we're trying to choose we're still trying to choose so we'll see so the next one that's inappropriate yeah I keep laughing if somebody might tell you that looks like a big baby and I'm laughing because again has it has to do with size where I think people incorrectly assume that if you have a big belly you're going to have a big baby which is absolutely not the case some women can have a tiny belly and have a big baby someone and women can have a big belly and have a tiny baby because it's not just the baby in there there's like other stuff like em Neotech fluid blood flow there's a lot of other stuff in our bellies so don't say that it makes somebody feel like oh like why is anything sighs really to stay away from stay away so yesterday asked are you couple or married we are married we got married last March well I I did want to dress that a little bit you can also say a married couple so a couple doesn't mean not married just in case you were wondering so yeah yeah yeah well could mean married yeah so a couple just means to me maybe are you dating yeah you can either say dating would be more like then you're not married yeah so we come back to some of these so let's look at the next one [Music] who's the father who's that father or worse do you know who the father is so I think that one I don't think we milk men to really explain why that might be offensive okay well yeah I mean obviously it's too personal it's - yeah it's too personal but I think yeah I think it implies a lot of a lot of things that you know are just very negative and you wouldn't want to it's what some people might be pregnant and not necessarily being a relationship and in that I think a lot more in those cases it's not very appropriate because they might make the decision to have that pregnancy alone so I don't think that it's a good thing to ask yeah I think that is that's a yes you could always wait for the other person to share that personal information who's the father what's his name what's happening here another one okay this one you're so small you barely look pregnant okay so now you might think what like if it's not a good thing to talk about somebody being big why can't I tell them they're small and it's stay away from anything sighs nothing sided also because somebody might be feeling bad like if they have already fears about how small they are made they're scared like maybe they're feeling like oh maybe I'm so small like is my baby developing properly and people are like you don't even look pregnant yeah why are you pretending to be pretty it's and I think one thing to know like I said we're trying to give you best practices yeah like these are the best things to stay perfectly safe because some I don't I can't speak of some people might not get offended at all yeah some of these things but just to stay perfectly safe yeah some but some women might be happy to hear that yeah yeah possibly but I think in best practices stay away from me my golden rule is stick with congratulations let's look at the next one we have yeah you look so tired you look sick you look miserable yeah this is in general you shouldn't tell this to anyone yeah because because it's just nobody wants to hear that like I feel like whether you're pregnant or not yeah like you look tired or you look sick or you look miserable and also if they're feeling tired sick or miserable like the last thing they want to hear is how tired sick and miserable they look yeah right and again like this is I think that's another thing that's purely I mean it's a very American perspective it's as far as applying it to everyone because I'm not really sure in other cultures I think question if it's normal to you know be able to tell somebody like oh you look sick like and that is kind of like showing that they care we don't know Western in general I think America and I can like you have this over optimism and over so I think of any people avoid stuff like that so what else what else we have sleep now because you'll never sleep again this is the noise this is this is it this one's annoying to me oh okay like this may be one of the least ones but I again I don't know because people like yeah it's annoying because people act like they know like oh like we know that you're never gonna leave you mean like people that don't have kids saying this either people don't have kids or people who have kids and they tell you this like you don't know maybe you'll have a very nice quiet baby and that will sleep and maybe you will sleep I have friends who were told this advice and there but maybe you want so I just don't just just don't say something like that we have I just look at some of these I always thought a big belly means a big baby no it really doesn't it really really doesn't um so you can have a pretty big baby in a tiny tiny belly mm-hmm this conversation that you're talking about today is very important thanks you you're welcome that's why like I said I think this is a contentious topic and there are certain things that's it's difficult to find the right words and know what you should say and what you shouldn't say where is it we're not replying to my greeting sir ma'am hello how are you doing mom 3 how are you excellent thank you for asking I love your channel thank you good advice do I thank you [Music] okay yeah somebody was asking if it's safe to try to travel while pregnant yes it is obviously we're weird I mean we have our doctor's approval to travel so no we're not in the u.s. we're live in Europe currently if you're wondering what our situation is going to visit family in the u.s. yeah so but that being said isn't I think are there general guidelines for like again if you are there are if you're the third trimester do they say you shouldn't travel by generally they say don't travel by airplane but it's always up to your doctor I'm I'm I'll still be in the second trimester so but that's also not something that is appropriate to ask well I'm just I mean it's fine we can answer but I'm just saying don't ask someone else well yeah it's obviously yeah you guys can ask us anything that's we told you yeah yeah we told you guys to ask us anything um because that's what we want you guys to do so you know yeah but that kind of falls in line with this next one oh yeah are you sure it's okay to eat that or are you sure it's okay to drink that yeah this goes into like giving I think too much advice or people trying to put there well I was just gonna say you know somebody's pregnant they they've been to the doctor they have already so many guidelines of the things you're allowed to eat the things you're allowed to drink because if in case you didn't know there's so many things you're not allowed to eat or drink because of different safety issues so we're generally very aware and I think if somebody asked that it's just I don't know it's it can many times I believe it comes from a place of concern like somebody's worried but it's also just a little bit intrusive yeah and it's a I think that's a good question because there's a lot of times where you know I think as a guy like I might want to ask information just out of curiosity to know and trying to find a way to ask it to learn something instead of it maybe coming off as being offensive or do you know what I mean yeah yeah you want to say English Oh like I didn't realize like is it okay to what does what does your doctor tell you like just trying to learn information so it's kind of again it's hard to figure out for questions like for example coffee a lot of people think oh like you shouldn't have caffeine well the doctors always tell you that you can have up to 200 milligrams of caffeine per day so then you can ask like oh I've heard that coffee is not okay during pregnancy is that true and blah blah blah and then if you approach something your mom not like this is yeah ask a question yeah to have a meaningful conversation yeah yeah exactly yeah the only time I'd say that it might be acceptable is if is if you would say it to anybody universally universally well-liked if somebody's going down and they start like you know we're walking along the river and they're like oh I'm just gonna drink the river water and it's like wait a second are you sure you should drink that so whether somebody's pregnant or not like saying it if somebody's just don't think you should say anything all right next one okay touching the belly this is nothing that you would say it's just something you do just going walking up to somebody and touching their belly especially without ass now again this is very American and I think in other cultures it's perfectly appropriate to go and touch the belly and this is also limited to acquaintances because I think if you're friends or close friends or family with somebody something I would never even try think about doing no I wouldn't either buddies depending just what I mean like as an American like I feel like well if my sister comes and touches my belly like I'm not going she doesn't need my permission it's okay yeah so if it's family like it's it's it's definitely fine yeah but but please if it's an acquaintance just try not to do it so just some questions just random questions make on how long have you been together much love for you thank you thank you we've been together like five years been married almost two years so where are you from we're from the US but right now we live in Europe where is it so thanks Jamie a great conversation thank you excellent well I'm glad you guys I'm glad that you guys are finding again this information useful I think because we're experiencing well you're experiencing this now that we thought it's a good idea to again be able to share this useful information about ways that you can talk about this appropriately yeah and things to avoid yeah and we haven't included everything in this lesson yeah I think there's a lot of what not to say basically the more personal it is you it's a rule of thumb the more personal your question is you probably shouldn't ask yeah remember general with um if you're unsure if you should say it or not just don't say it just say congratulations you look great so just heads up you guys can also check us out on patreon we are now there we have some cool rewards if you want to learn more English and get to know us a little bit better link is in the description also we are going to link to the secret fluency lesson if you guys want to improve your fluency ten ways to improve your fluency we will also put that in the description you guys can check that out I didn't know if we would fit in this frame perfect excellent thank you guys so much for joining us today please if you like this conversation and you learn something new hit that like button as always you know please share this with anybody you know who's trying to learn English and helping us expand the community and as always write us questions in the comments because we just love hearing from you guys so thank you thank you Giselle jacqueline Lewis I may owe Batman Robby mr. mr. Gorman lali lali

Mohan I'm just reading down Mohamed Shubin yes sir yeah thank you thank you guys we enjoyed being here with you and we will be back for another lesson next time enjoy the rest of the weekend and we will see you guys later

Who Are You? | Fun Q&A with Interactive English

What are you planning to do in the next five years Why don't you record more vlog videos? How old are both of you? Did you have any certificates after graduation? What do you think about your job? In your opinion, who is the best teacher on YouTube? What languages do you speak? When will you visit Indonesia? Why did you decide to do this? So you guys asked us some questions, and now we're going to give you those answers. That's coming up. So we thought it would be fun to do a video about us. And we always get questions, so we figured we'd answer them together here on our couch. We wanted to hear some questions from you. Whether they're from...

Whether they're about learning English or about us. And I think a lot of people had a lot of questions about who we are, why are we both teaching English as a couple. Why are we? Some of these questions overlap, so if we don't get to all of them some of them were very similar. But we'll try to answer as many as we can. Pick some and then we'll go through it. Okay. I'll pick with the most common one which seems to be the the best place to start which is "How did you meet?" Right. Like how did we meet. How do we know each other? We were both in California at the time and and the school in Berkeley.

We were both teaching because imagine... We first met she observed my class, and I think as soon as she saw the instruction, she was just like "Oh my gosh. Game over." So first of all we were both English teachers. He was already working of this school, and then I came in. I had just finished my masters, and... She observed my class. Again with a class. I think I was teaching the the present continuous that day. His was the first class I observed, and I remember thinking this guy is so tall. Like who's this tall? Why why is he so tall? It had nothing to do with the present continuous. No. It was just like why is this... And he had visited many countries.

Whose this tall goofy guy? So that was...that's how we met. How long was it before you're like "I like this guy." 10 minutes? 20 minutes? Well, it's not... A half hour? I'll say this. We started dating about two months after we met each other. Okay. So two questions are connected. What did you major in college and do you have any certificates after graduation? I'm going to try and do it in a minute. Can you time me? Timer for one minute. So I'm going to try and give you my answer in less than a minute because it's... I'm going to give you a very quick and long answer. So this will be good for listening because I'm going to speak fast. Are you ready?

Yeah, yeah. Oh, it's staring. Okay. So I majored in business management, and after I finished university I decided I didn't want to do business management. So I wanted to travel and do some volunteer work, so I moved to Costa Rica. And I ended up working with Habitat for Humanity. I was a volunteer coordinator for Habitat. Great organization. You should check it out. They help people with affordable housing. While I was in Costa Rica - pura vida - to anybody out there from Costa Rica. I met many people who were English teachers. One couple was from teaching in South Korea. They talked about how they loved it, how wonderful it was so I ended up in South Korea.

I started working at an academy for one year, and then I moved to a university for two more years. It was a great experience. I love Korea. I miss it. I want to go back someday. After three years in Korea, I wanted to have another teaching experience. Go somewhere else so I went to Namibia Ended up working with another organization called WorldTeach.

Another great organization by the way. And I was teaching at a high school in rural Namibia. I was teaching English and math to grades 9 through 11. It was another awesome experience, and I met a lot of really great learners. Still keep in touch with them today. Hello out there if anybody's watching this from Namibia. Afterwards, I went to the Dominican Republic to teach at a Catholic orphanage. Spent a year there. I was teaching at a middle school. That was a challenging experience actually. I decided that I wanted to go back and get my masters so I moved to California which is where we met. Am I over a minute? So yeah, give us your history.

I think somebody asked our ages at some point too, so I'm just going to say like obviously... I'm 24. Wes has more experience because he's older. So he's eight years older than I am so... So how old does that make me? You're 39 and I'm 31. I just turned 31. I moved to the United States to California when I was fifteen years old from Romania. So I've done three years of high school and my years in university. I've done them all in the United States. I did my university education at UCLA So if anyone is... Go Bruins! Yeah, go Bruins. I got my degree...my university degree in history, and a year after that I started getting into teaching English and tutoring.

I was tutoring languages before that. I started tutoring a lot of ESL speakers in the Southern California area. A lot of kids and then adults also. And then I moved to Northern California where we were teaching adults, and I fell in love with it. It was amazing. At some point during that time I got my certificate. TESOL certificate, which Wes also has from UC Berkeley. And...yeah, then we moved here. How is your love story? How is your love story and bla bla bla bla? Excellent. So our love story...I thought it would be cuter if you talked about it. So after she observed my class... We got married last year in March. We got married in New York City.

And it was a very small wedding. It was very intimate. It was really just the two of us. Wait, that's your talk about our love story. We had a lot of connections through... This is terrible. I'm just going to say it. What makes history magical - let's just start with that. Okay. That's a good word...magical. I like it. Alright. You're doing better. Go. What makes our story magical is that...none of us were really supposed to be in this place, so we were there by chance. So I was going to visit my sister. I was just going there on a visit for a couple weeks. But I don't know why I decided maybe I should look for a job here.

Wes, as far as I know, and I think this is true that you also weren't sure if you're going to stay in California. You had come to the US to get your MA. So we met at this tiny, tiny school in Berkeley, and it wasn't really a plan for either of us. We didn't have plans to stay there. And we both wanted to leave. And this was really nice because we could leave together after we were done. That's our love story. And it's been happily ever after. You have such joy and happiness. You have to realize that we're like with each other all the time. That's one of the challenging things. I think... What do you mean? I like a ray of sunshine in your life.

Working together... We're always together. We work out of the home, so... Sometimes it's like. When did you get this idea to launch interactive English? Kind of like, how long have you been working on this? So, the idea came after I finished my MA at USF. And I think I was just at home watching some YouTube videos. And a lot of it...again it was just real it was passive learning. People were just giving presentations, and here's the information. This is what he does when he's home alone. He watches YouTube looking for English teaching. What we had been working on at our school before was about just really creating an interactive environment.

An interactive classroom. Getting the students engaged with what's going on. And I thought that we could kind of apply that same element to YouTube. And trying to make the lessons a bit more interactive by asking people to point, to click, to repeat after you. In the comments below, write a sentence about this picture. I'm going to give you an adjective and I want you to click on the meaning. Say it with me...answer. See, easy you just don't see the W. And I think it's a little bit of a weird concept because people are you're watching a video. And you don't really know whether the other person is actually participating. So this is something that we've always cared about and then... We're just trying to apply it to video, which... Yeah. Which can be challenging but also fun.

You guys can let us know if it's working. If you guys are actually interacting with these videos. Let us know in the comments. What's your favorite book? What's your favorite book? The Little Prince. The Little Prince. That's a good one. That's another...it's a good one to read too. I'd say...gosh, I can't really think of it. I've been reading a lot of the Magic Treehouse lately for work. This is for some of our other classes, so I've been reading a lot about Jack & Annie and the Magic Treehouse. The ninja one wasn't that bad, I guess. Night of the Ninjas. But I would say if you're looking for an easy, easy read. They're just kids books.

You don't have to keep running to a dictionary. It's just, yeah. It's just good quick easy read. Here's a good one. Why don't you record more vlog videos? It helps to practice. Wes loves this question. Honestly, I really like the vlogs because it's fun to share our experiences with you guys. And we are on our way to... Hello and welcome to beautiful Dubrovnik. They haven't been...they haven't been as popular on our channel. Why don't you guys watch them? We love them. Because yeah, they're more meaningful to us obviously. We love our vlogs. We do hope to do more vlogs, especially like traveling. Or even places maybe around the city. We did one going to IKEA and those are a lot of fun.

And they're...you know we can make vocabulary lessons out of them. So we will do more vlogs. Which one's your favorite vlog? The favorite vlog. I like the one we did Dubrovnik. Dubrovnik. Watch it. If you haven't seen it, we're going to link it above so you can check that one out. Here's another question. Here's a good question. What what is your favorite country? What's your favorite country? Do you have one? No, I don't. I don't have a favorite country. I think it really depends on well...I guess the things you did and who you met. Like for me...like for food, Italy. And wine. I had a great time in South Africa. I really like South Africa.

Yeah, and South...and Argentina. Please tell me your country of origin. So in case some of you don't know because people have asked on our videos. They're like "Is this American or British pronunciation?" Everything we do we would be the American accent. I'm from the United States. I grew up all up and down the East Coast. Lived in about eight different states. Which one of those states was your favorite? Which state to live in? Was my favorite? Growing up. I'd say well...I really like Colorado. Yeah, so I'm originally from Romania. I've talked about this in a previous video. But I was born and raised there until I was fifteen years old and then I moved to California.

It's where our love story begins. Yeah, but that's really where I've spent all of my time in the US. I mean, I haven't really...I've visited other states, but I haven't lived in any other state other than California. This question is about us, but this is one that we get all the time. People just asking about improving their fluency and we've made some video lessons about this.

First, try to study a little bit each day instead of overwhelming yourself. If you could take like five minutes, ten minutes a day to learn a new word, or to read a book, or to listen to music. And that's the next part would just be the the exposure that you're getting. And trying to find different resources. No, I just wanted to say that when it comes to language I don't know if you know this expression. The expression goes if you don't use it you lose it. I would say like in any kind of shape or form that you can practice English, do it. Do something like if you can't read today, if something's too difficult, you know listen to a song or watch a YouTube video.

Just do something instead of...something is better than nothing. Oh, here's a good one. What languages do you speak? Oh, good question. Oh me! Yeah. Okay, English. Really? Yeah, it's great. English. Romanian. Spanish. I understand Italian. I understand a little bit of Portuguese. You have really good comprehension of romance languages. Romanian, if you guys don't know, Romanian is closely related to Latin, so because of it, it's really helpful. So I also speak English too. That's awesome. I'm fairly proficient in Spanish, spent several years in different Spanish-speaking countries. My Korean it...it used to be conversational. Now, it's a little more basic. Even though we did go to a restaurant recently and I got to...

They understood you and everything. Well, yeah. I was there for three years. I'm learning Romanian right now. It's also I'd say basic, a little conversational. Say something. I was about to say something in Korean. It's getting all mixed up in my mind right now. But yeah, I just need to keep practicing. And again, just trying to do those same tips that we give you guys. They said, "Who's your teacher on YouTube you hope to work with him or her? Or in your opinion, the best English teacher or coach on YouTube? There are a lot of good English instructors on YouTube. For collaborate...we've only done one collaboration so far with Ali from Papa Teach Me.

Hi Ali. If you're watching. I don't know if you're watching. That was a lot of fun. We do...we hope to go travel to the UK later this year, so hopefully we can reach out to some of the UK English teachers and do some collaborations with some of them. That would be awesome. My favorites. I feel like...I feel like probably people might think the same about us. In terms of...there's a lot of great people, but then there are some just really great lessons that I might see. And we watch it and think "Oh, that was a great idea," or like how they did that and implemented that. For example, I like the...that guy from Eat, Sleep, Dream English does these songs.

And would actually like go through the song and then pick out words or phrases and explain them. I thought that was really cool. Ali from Papa teach me. I think he has some really... It's funny. Really great stuff. Uses some animation which is very cool. Best one of all is Interactive English. Sure, yeah. So the nearest future plans. Oh, yeah, yeah. We kind of talked about what we want to do with the channel as we keep growing it. We would like to do more collaborations as we just mentioned. We want to come out with a website, have some e-courses available for you guys, some ebooks. Maybe start some classes later on. So a lot of a lot of stuff planned for the future.

We would like to stay on the pace and keep doing two lessons each week. Like one regular lesson and then one live lesson. It's a fast pace. So hopefully we can keep up and keep doing two lessons a week. Have you ever been to Myanmar? No. No, we haven't. But we would like to go. I'm not coughing because of Myanmar. I drank some water and it went down the wrong way. When will you visit Indonesia? Alright, I like how they went straight into... I know it's a good question. We haven't been. Do you want to come? When will you come? Yes, we'd love to come. Yeah, there's just so many places that we still need to see and visit.

And we do read what you're write. I hope you enjoyed our little Q&A session here on our couch. Thank you so much for watching. Thanks for listening to us. Thank you for following us. And we'll see you next time.

Why English is SO hard to learn? | + Lesson Notes

Hello and welcome to today's lesson. Today [sighs] we're going to talk about why English is so hard to learn. Now, I know what some of you may be thinking. Well, English, I think it's pretty easy to learn or it's a lot easier than other languages. And that may be true. I know it depends on each person. However, today I want to focus on something that actually does make English a bit challenging and I think some of the words that we're going to have a look at will be new and and I think that's great. I always want you to learn something new. So, the way that I want to start out and present this is with uh different sentences and I want you to participate. I want you to practice saying the sentences out loud like this first one. I'll give you a moment. Say it out loud and then you can hear me say it.

So, I hope that you said the bandage was wound around his wound. The bandage was wound around his wound. And the confusing words in this sentence would be wound and wound. So wound, this is well the past simple or the past participle of the verb to wind. Wound. And wound, this is a noun. This is just referring to well, if you get hurt or injured and you have a wound. So wound and wound. I want to start out by saying that the sentences that we're going to have a look at in this lesson, they are all from well, this lady right here, Marlene Davis. So, she was uh an English instructor. She was a newspaper columnist and she came up with these 20 sentences that we're going to look at today entitled the article why English is so hard to learn which is the title also of this lesson and really what it focuses on. Oh yeah, I want to make this announcement too. If you would like to get this sent get these sentences and download the lesson notes, you can join our email community. There's a link down in the description. I also pinned a link here in the chat. If you are already a part of our community, I'll go ahead and email them to you so you can look out for that. So, the reason why these sentences are a little challenging is because they all have heteron. This is when you have one or well, one of two or more words that have the same spelling but a different meaning and pronunciation. And that's why they can be a little confusing. Like these words down here, wind like the wind is blowing or wind like you're winding a clock.

This is an example of a heteron. So once again, I want you to practice, you know, practice your speaking skills. Say these sentences out loud and then you can listen to the way I say it and then again practice once more. So how would you say this sentence right here? Okay, I'll say the farm was cultivated to produce produce. The farm was cultivated to produce produce. So to produce, this is a verb. You're making something. You're bringing it into existence. Two syllables. The stress is on that second syllable. To produce something. produce. This is food that's grown. Vegetables would be an example of produce. The stress is on the first syllable. And this is loosely a syllable stress rule. When you have a word that has two syllables, generally speaking, the verb is going to be stressed on the second syllable to produce and the noun is going to be stressed on the first syllable produce.

Okay? So again, think about the the syllable stress. And this is when people may make a slight speaking mistake and they end up stressing the wrong syllable and it can cause some confusion at times. Here's the next one. Again, I want you to say it out loud first. All right. So, I hope you said the dump was so full that the workers had to refuse more refu. So, refuse to refuse. Once again, you see that two-syllable verb, the stress is on the second syllable. You refuse something. I don't want it. We got to say no. Refuse is just another word that you could use to talk about uh garbage, trash, unwanted waste material. refuse.

The stress is on that first syllable. So, like I said, some of these words, I think, are not as commonly used. You're not often going to hear the word refuse. People would just say trash or garbage. But again, hopefully that some of these words are new uh for you as we go through them. Here's the next sentence. I want you to say it out loud. All right. We must polish the Polish furniture shown at the store. We must polish the Polish furniture shown at the store. Polish. Polish. So polish, you're talking about rubbing something. All right. Stress is on the first syllable. And again, this is a verb, which is why I said generally speaking, verbs have that stress on the second syllable. Polish is talking about things related to the country, Poland, the people, the language. In this case, we're using it as an adjective talking about the furniture, the Polish furniture. But once again, the stress is on that first syllable. Polish. Polish.

Then here's another one. Again, I want you to keep speaking. How would you say this one? He could lead if he could get the lead out. He could lead if he could get the lead out. Lead led. So lead. I think people hear words like leader. Somebody is going to lead. you're going to control uh some situation, a group of people. And lead is referring to the the element, this very heavy, it's gray le. And this is again where where spelling and pronunciation, it can get a little confusing. Lead le. I've also tried to underline an idiom, get the lead out. If you haven't heard of this idiom, if somebody tells you to get the let out, it means that you need to move or work quickly. So perhaps you're working on a team, you're behind schedule, and you say, "All right, everyone, we really need to get the let out and we need to work quickly. We need to move quickly.

We need to get the let out." All right. If you are participating in these lessons, let me know. Write the word speaking so I know that you're practicing. You're saying these sentences out loud, which is what this is all about. Just getting getting a little speaking practice. I'm I'm I'm really I'm listening. All right. So, here's the next one. Again, I want you to say it out loud. All right. So, I would say the soldier decided to dessert his tasty dessert in the desert. The soldier decided to dessert his tasty No, the the soldier decided to dessert his tasty dessert in the desert. Okay, so this is there are a few things. you have the the heteron desert, in which case you're you're leaving someone or something.

You're deserting. And the one at the bottom, the noun, the desert. Okay, the noun stress is on the first syllable. It's an area covered with rocks, sand, and you can see in that picture, that is a picture of the desert. Once again, these heteron follow that stress rule. The verb, the stress is on the second syllable. dessert uh and to desert and the noun stresses on the first syllable, desert. Now, I I highlighted that other word as well because that would just be an example of a homonym. These are words that have the same sound when talking about your tasty dessert, cake, cookies, um you know, a lot of chocolate. You could have that for dessert. And then once again, the stress is on that second syllable. All right. Excellent. Um, all right people speaking. Love it. Vida, Vicky, Gustav, um, Zenat. Perfect. Again, this is all about getting just a little bit of speaking practice when it comes to well, words that can be challenging to pronounce. So, here's the next one. It's also going to follow that syllable stress rule. How would you say this? You see one word in there quite a few [laughter] times. Three times. Oh. Oh, I would say, well, since there's no time like the present, he thought it was a He thought it was time to present the present to his girlfriend. I'll say it one more time. Since there is no time like the present, he thought it was time to present the present to his girlfriend. So present, the noun has multiple meanings. Again, stress is on that first syllable. The present up here talking about well, right now, it's a moment in time. It also means down here like a gift that somebody may well give to you. You they give you a birthday present. That's different than the verb to present, in which case you hear that stress on the second syllable. You're presenting something. You're providing information. And I think all three of these words are are commonly used.

Here's the next one. This one may be a little confusing, but I want you to say it out loud. I hope that you said a bass was painted on the head of the bass drum. Let's say it together again. A bass was painted on the head of the bass drum. Bass is referring to the fish that you would find in a river, a bass, which is different than referring to the the instrument or well, even playing, singing, that low range of musical notes, bass. So, in this case, we're using it as an adjective, talking about the bass drum. But you could say somebody plays bass in the band. But again, just don't confuse those two uh pronunciations. Bass base. Here we go.

All right. I want you to say this one out loud. I hope you said when shot at, the dove dove into the bushes. When shot at, the dove dove into the bushes. So we have one right after the other. Dove dove. So dove with that schwa sound, that uh sound. Dove. It It's referring to the bird. You can see the bird over there in the corner. That is a dove. The white bird. Dove is referring to the past simple of the verb dive. Dove. Dove. like you dove into the swimming pool. Then we have another one. Think about that syllable stress. Say it out loud. All right. Now, I want you to say it with me. I did not object to the object which he showed me. One more time. I did I did not object to the object which he showed me. This is good speaking practice working on that syllable stressed. So, I did not object. We're talking about the verb. You see the stress on that second syllable. You're expressing opposition. All right. I did not object to the object. The object, the stress is on that first syllable now that it's a noun. It's just anything that you can touch or see. An object to object to the object which he showed me. Once again, good practice. Say these sentences out loud. Work on that that syllable stress.

This is all about fine-tuning your pronunciation. And remember, if you want to get a copy of these lesson notes, check out the link down in the description or the pinned uh uh comment that's in the chat. Try this one. I would I would say the insurance was invalid for the invalid in his hospital bed. Let's say it one more time. This maybe one of these may be a new word for you. The invalid. The insurance was invalid for the invalid in his hospital bed. Invalid is I think it's a more common word. If something is invalid, it's referring to a document or something that's just not legally acceptable. Like you present a document, they say, "Well, no, this this is invalid." All right, we can't accept this. It's invalid.

Let's try this one. Say this one out loud first and then I'll say it. This one may be challenging. I would say there was a row among the oarsmen about who would row. Say it one more time with me. There was a row among the oarsmen about who would row. Row. Row. So, if you're talking about up top there, a row, it's uh a noun. It just refers to a noisy argument or fight and say somebody had a row. It's a word that you may not hear that often, but it may come up from time to time. A row. And I think probably when you see this word, the pronunciation that many people think about would be row, the activity.

You're rowing a boat. You're using the oars to row row row. So, row row. Keep that one in mind. Here's another one. I want you to again say this one out loud. This these are very common words. They were too close to the door to close it. Let's say it together. They were too close to the door to close it. And I think this sentence maybe you didn't have as much trouble with because uh these words are very common. You're close to something or someone. You're not far. You're talking about the position either physically or in time. Close. It's getting close to uh my birthday or something which is not true.

My birthday is in November. It's far out. Uh, but to close something, the verb, you're talking about opening and then shutting it. You're closing the door. Close. Close. Great words to know because they are commonly used. Close. Close. Here's another one. All right. This one again maybe a little tricky, but I want you to say it out loud. All right. The buck does many things when the doe's, the females are present. There's that word present again. The Let's say it again together. The buck does many things when the doe's are present. So, the buck does, we're talking about the verb to do, but this is the singular um third person like the buck does performing an action. Very common verb.

Now, the other doze is just referring to a female deer. Doze. You hear that long o sound? Doze. So if somebody you're out hiking and somebody says, "Oh, there's a dough." They're talking about there's a female deer. In this situation, many times instead of specifying whether it's male or female, a lot of people of course would just talk about a deer, they see a deer. But once again, I told you I think some of these words are new and it can also be a good way to build your vocabulary a little bit. Another one. I want you to say it out loud

now. Let's say it together. A seamstress and a A seamstress and a sewer fell down into a sewer line. A seamstress and a sewer fell down into a sewer line. Sewer. Sewer. Sewer is a well a person who sews. We're talking about that activity. You sew something like clothes. Uh you can see that picture in the background a little bit. It's a sewing machine. Stress is on that first syllable with the long O. That's different than that short vowel sound. Sue. Sewer. Sewer is referring to the underground pipes network that would carry away waste. The sewer. Sewer. Sewer. Give this one a try. Say this one out loud [clears throat] then with me. Say it with me. To help with planting, the farmer taught his SA to sew.

To help with planting, the farmer taught his SA to sew. So, the first one, SA, is talking about an adult female pig. [cough] Sorry about [clears throat] that. Again, not a word that you're going to end up using in just everyday English. If you want to talk about an animal, people are mostly just going to talk about um uh a pig and not really refer to whether it's male or female. But to sew, in this case, to sew again with that long o sound, we're talking about putting seeds in the ground so that plants will grow. Again, let me know, write speaking in the chat if you guys if you're participating and actually saying these sentences out loud. That's what it's all about. It's good just to voice these words and practice saying them. That's what that's what's really, I think, going to help you internalize this information. Um, oh, true. Vicki's birthday Saturday.

Wow, that is close. Happy birthday, Vicki on Saturday. Upcoming. Nice. [sighs] Here uh is the next sentence again. Say it out loud. And then say it with me. The wind was too strong to wind the sail around the mast. One more time. The wind was too strong to wind the sail around the mast. These were the first two examples that I gave you. Wind as a heteron. The wind, we're talking about the air was too strong to wind. Again, that verb, you're turning something to wind the sail around the mast. I've also, again, I'm giving you the the phonetic spelling as well as the IPA so you can see the pronunciation and hopefully get a better understanding as to how these words are pronounced.

Here's another. I'll let you go first. And then I would say, upon seeing the tear in her painting, she shed a tear. Let's say it together. Upon seeing the tear in her painting, she said it she shed a tear. Tear. Tear. And these are words that uh you may come across and that you may use to tear something you have. They're talking about a hole that will generally or ripping uh a piece of paper or cloth. Something has a tear in it. And then tear it would be, you know, referring to crying. the the liquid that would come out of your eyes to shed a tear or you have tears in your eyes and you use that long e sound tear. [sighs] All right, let's do another.

Think about that syllable stress when it comes to verbs and nouns. How would you say it? I would say I had to subject the subject to a series of tests. All right, let's say it together. I had to subject the subject to a series of test. To subject is the verb. The stress is on that second syllable. Subject. And again, you're kind of controlling somebody uh against their will to subject someone to something. In this case, that someone is the subject. The stress is on the first syllable and we're referring to the thing being discussed. But in this case, the the thing would be like your the subject would be like the person. I had to subject the subject to a series of tests. This is when that syllable stress becomes important. Excellent. Uh practicing. Yes. Nice. Gustav JJ Bella.

Well done. Here's another. I'll let you say it first and then say it with me. Or how can I intimate this to my most intimate friend? together. How can I intimate this to my most intimate friend? This is this can be a little more confusing because both words have three syllables and the stress is on that first syllable. The difference is that third that final syllable. So to uh how can I intimate something? How can you make something clear without saying it directly? Again, it's not the most commonly used verb intimate. And intimate is an adjective. It's referring to like a close friendship that you have with another person. This is a word that you may come across from time to time. You hear it with certain uh in certain collocations like an intimate relationship was is a common collocation. So, intimate, intimate.

These are all different hon. That's the goal is always learning something new and getting that practice. I hope that you were speaking. If you were speaking in today's lessons, write to me in the comments. Let me know. Just write the word speaking so I know that you are participating and actually practicing your skills. And just as one last reminder again, if you would like to get the lesson notes and join our community, check out the link down in the description or I pinned it in the chat here. And if you're already a part of the community, check your inbox cuz I've already sent them to you. So again, I think for the most part, English as well as other languages, they there are certain things that may make the language a little trickier, a little confusing. And I think heteron is something that definitely can be a little more confusing for people learning the language because you have these words, the same spelling, but different meaning and different pronunciation. So, if you enjoyed this lesson, if you practice and you learn something new, please hit that like button. I always appreciate it. If uh you you also want to write to me in the comments, of course, I love hearing from you. And thank you guys for joining me today and participating in this lesson. And I hope that you got a little bit of speaking practice. So I Lapka, nice. Uh Lai, good to see you. Teao, glad you learned something new. Give some quick shout outs uh to people. DJ Flexible, nice. I hope that you enjoy the rest of your day and I will see you all next time. So long.

Why It's Difficult to Understand Movies, TV, or Music | Improve Your Listening

Today I'm going to tell you why it's so difficult to listen to and understand TV, movies or music. That's coming up. Something that we often hear is that I understand every single word you say, but when I'm listening to a TV show or watching a movie or or listening to music, I have a lot of difficulty understanding like what's being said and and trying to follow along with the conversation. It's so much more challenging. I don't understand anything you just said. I don't understand anything you're talking about. I am just saying that I don't think that you understand what I am saying. Today I'm going to tell you why that is, but also I want to talk to you about why it's still important that you keep doing this to practice your listening skills. I want to start out telling you just a quick story. The first language that I learned was Spanish. And and listening, to be completely honest, I is one of the more difficult language skills for me. But something I really enjoyed doing was listening to to Spanish music. I would even try to to sing along with the songs and and pick out the words for those parts of the song that I wasn't too sure of. You know, you just mumble your way through it. But in general, I I thought that I understood a great deal of of these songs. That all changed one time. I went with a friend to a karaoke bar. And as you know, at a karaoke bar, you can see the words to the song and people were getting up there and they were singing these popular songs that I I was very familiar with. What I realized as they were singing the song and I could actually see the words, oh, that's what they're saying. And to be quite honest, it kind of made me feel a little bad. It made me feel like, oh wow, my listening actually sucks. We'll have to do something about that.

I completely understand how you might feel if you are watching a TV show or movie or or listening to music in English and you you're you're not able to understand everything that's being said and it might get you down a little bit. You might think, gosh, my my listening's not as good as I thought it was. So, I understand where you're coming from. So let's talk about why this is and answer that question. Why is it so hard to understand movies, TV and music? First, I think it is very important to understand and realize that you are listening to colloquial speech. It is very informal language. And because of that, you're listening to slang, idioms, and expressions that that you might not be very familiar with because you didn't learn this in the classroom or you didn't learn this in the grammar book that you're using. All it takes is for us to hear one expression that we're not familiar with.

And and that can throw off our entire understanding of the conversation or whatever it is that we're listening to. Another reason why it might be very difficult when listening to TV, movies, or music is that people are constantly connecting their speech and they're linking their words together, which makes it so much more challenging to identify individual words. And the reason that that we do this in English or any language for that matter is just efficiency. We are able to say the most words in the least amount of time. And it also has a more more natural sounding flow to it as well. For example, instead of saying going to, you would hear going to or have to, you might hear have to.

Did he? People might say did he. And for this reason, when these words get linked together, this is when language sometimes sounds like one long word. Especially when you first start learning a language, you're not able to identify the individual words and and everything's just clumped together and and it makes it harder for us to listen and understand what's being said. A third reason is that really it depending on the video and the situation, people may speak faster than they normally do in real life. I think this is especially true with music because with music, it it's all about producing that nice sound. It's not necessarily about trying to speak clearly and articulate each and every word. And this can also be true for video as well.

Naturally, people end up speaking a little quicker if they might feel nervous or or a little anxious. And that tends to happen when you're in front of a video camera. So, if you're just randomly watching people on YouTube and trying to follow along with their vlog or or a story that they're trying to tell, they may end up speaking a little faster than they normally do if if they're just speaking with a friend in real life. And I I think that's something that people tend to forget about because when you talk about practicing your listening skills, people practice listening to to TV, movies, or music all the time. And therefore, I think it's important to understand, well, okay, this is a very advanced form of listening.

It's too advanced. I don't need to be doing that right now. I want to take a moment tell you why you should still do it. No matter what level you're at, you should still continue watching TV shows and and watching movies and listening to music. Even if you can't listen to and understand everything that's happening, it is still very useful. And I want to talk to you about some of the benefits that you will get out of this. The first benefit is that you don't have to think of this is study. You you're not doing it because you feel like you have to do it. You're doing it because you want to do it. And that's the key right there that this is something that that you want to do. And because of that, it it changes the dynamic of learning a little bit. You're you're not putting as much pressure on yourself and and you can kind of let your guard down and just enjoy it and relax and and it does really help the learning process. Let me give you an example. Many times students have asked um you know what TV show should I watch if I want to learn English or or what are some movies that I should watch?

And that tells me that you may be looking at this the wrong way because I always tell learners the same thing. You should watch something and and listen to something that interests you. then then listen to sports. If you like cooking then then watch something that's related to cooking. Choose something that that you are interested in because that's what you're going to get the most value out of. You are doing it because you want to do it, not because I told you to. And and that kind of ties in with the second benefit, which is any exposure is good exposure. We always tell learners try to surround yourself with the language. And with technology nowadays, I I think it's absolutely possible. You don't have to travel to a a native English-speaking country in order to learn the language. There are different ways that you can surround yourself with English and TV, movies, and music. Th those are three ways right there that are great. I've often heard stories from people saying, "Well, I watch the TV show Friends, and that's how I learned English." That that that's possible for some people. It might not be possible for everyone, but again, that is a great way to to do something that you want to do to learn without putting pressure on yourself or or stressing yourself out about trying to learn the language. Another benefit is that this is completely learnerdirected. You get to choose how you are learning English. You get to choose the the TV show you're watching or the movie you're going to watch or the music that you're going to listen to. This goes back to what I just told you about find something that you are interested in. It's learner directed so it's all in your hands. You get to decide what's best for your learning and what you're most engaged in. Because I could tell you to watch some movie that you think is absolutely boring and you fall asleep. That's not going to help you.

You need to find what what you are interested in and use that to your advantage. It's in your hands. And the final benefit is just access. When when talking about TV, movies, or music, there there is so much of it out there in English. If you are living in another country, chances are that you could turn on the TV and maybe find a channel that that's in English. And if you have a streaming service like like Netflix or Hulu then the opportunities are are just endless. Even now if if you are watching this video then you are using the internet. There is just so much that is accessible and I really encourage you to take advantage of that. So now I would really love to hear from all of you guys and have you guys share what you are doing to practice your listening skills.

So, in the comments, let me know what what TV show you like to watch or or maybe a movie that you thought was great or or even the music that you listen to in order to practice your English listening skills. I hope you enjoyed this lesson and if you did, please hit that like button.

Why You Should Learn Other Languages | Natural Conversation + Vocabulary

in today's lesson we're gonna help you practice your listening skills as well as teach you some new words [Music] when you're looking to practice your listening skills it's always great to listen to a natural conversation or just somebody speaking about a topic and expressing their ideas their thoughts and their opinions and that's what we're gonna do today we have a discussion that we're going to have you listen to but not only that we want you to pay close attention for certain words we've taken some words from this discussion and I'm gonna tell you the meaning of these words and as you listen to the discussion we will highlight them for you so you can see how they're used in context so let's have a look at the words the first word is passionate it's an adjective and it means that you are expressing or showing strong emotion or feeling and not only did I want to talk about this word passionate but also the preposition that follows we say that you are passionate about something or somebody might just be talking and they say you know teaching English that that's what we're passionate about so when you're using this adjective it's often followed by the preposition about passionate about the next word or words is this aha moment and this is an expression so the word when we say aha it's an interjection and it's like you're saying that oh you've you've discovered something but when we say that something is an aha moment what we're talking about is a moment or point in time when somebody suddenly realizes something and they suddenly discover something and you say ah you know that that was an aha moment I I suddenly realized something and it's brought on by an event or an experience that that this person has an aha moment then we have melodious this is an adjective and if something is melodious it's talking about a sweet sound or a musical sound just something that that has a nice melody you could say oh it's it's melodious next is osmosis now first and foremost this is a chemistry term but that's not what we're talking about in this discussion when we're using it you you can say that you learn something through osmosis they're saying that they gradually absorb information and they're they're getting the information slowly and naturally and they're absorbing it and yeah they learn it through osmosis next is steroids and this word is a noun and it means a chemical substance that helps us improve our strength and ability a lot of times you might hear athletes taking steroids to enhance their performance and and generally it's illegal they should be doing that it's also used as an expression to to compare something and say it's like it was on steroids and when you say something's on steroids you're basically saying that that that something was was very strong very powerful and you know it's like it's on steroids so as you're listening to us discuss the topic keep an eye out for those words so you can see how they're used in context and that's a really great way to learn new words because it just reinforces your overall understanding of the meaning so let's begin going to talk about why we started learning different languages what's your motivation for learning another language and we'll talk about what was ours when we started yeah yeah yeah yeah so ask you I guess first what why I started well I when I was in high school I took German because we had to choose a language but at that point I think in my life I wasn't interested in learning another language unfortunately so I didn't take it seriously and it wasn't until I was in university that I decided I wanted to learn another language and it was like a bit of an aha moment for me realizing the you know you learn another language that really opens things up not just as far as travel is concerned but work opportunities you have the ability to go to another country and work there and and live there so it just really made me realize how important it is and since Spanish is a very important language in the United States then that's what I started with and I started learning Spanish what about you so to be fair I've always been interested in languages like even when I I mean I if you guys don't know I was born in Romania but I think actually the language I wasn't interested in was English I thought it was it sounded ugly now it's kind of funny to think about those times but I mean I've heard some Mohican your pardon or something how do other learners say that like they think English it's not a beautiful language not as pretty as other languages as other Romance languages so I've always been interested in languages and even as a kid I'd watch cartoons in different languages what got me for example I will tell you about my experience with Spanish what got me into Spanish is when we were kids we used to watch these telenovela as they called them they're their soap operas and I like the Argentinian was it just like a lot of dramatic TV shows or like everyone's cheating on each other and everything's crazy and like it's just they provided you with the right motivation to learn Spanish I kind of learned it through osmosis like I feel like there was just so much going on and I was a kid yeah yeah and I just it was so fun and like we keep watching again I was like a teenage girl that was just a lot of fun and I I think it sounded pretty I love the sound of Spanish especially I think the ones I liked with the Argentinian one so like I really like the I got a feel for the Argentinian and so that's how that's how I started learning Spanish so I keep learning languages because they sound pretty I think that's my motivation we know they're saying like the songs are nice and and I think they sound good yeah I like poetry so I can read that too so for me it's all personal obviously yeah it can be a lot of different things travel personal enrichment like I think a lot of many many of you out there probably learning

English for for work or language if you want to study abroad yeah that was like good food okay so that's that's kind of what we wanted to talk about today I hope you enjoyed their little conversation about why we started learning different languages we'd like to know why you try why are you learning is it for traveling is it for just because it's a world language and at this point I think it's very important oh why why are you trying to learn and let us know in the comments we love hearing from you guys and if you enjoyed our conversation hit that like button down below thanks for watching and we'll see you next time

Why learn another language? | Natural Conversation + Vocabulary

today we are going to put your listening skills to the test as well as teach you some new vocabulary [Music] what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is where you want to be to practice and improve your English skills in today's lesson we have a natural conversation for you we're gonna talk about what languages we would like to learn you're not only going to listen to the conversation but I'm going to teach you a few different vocabulary words and then highlight them in the conversation so that you can see how they're used in context because that is one of the best ways to build your vocabulary and expand your vocabulary see how the words are used in different contexts so let's begin the first word I have for you is an adjective ambitious and ambitious means that you are eager to achieve success so a person could be ambitious they want success it also means that you're eager to achieve a goal and it's used in a context that that's saying something such as a goal could be ambitious everyday ambitious move is a gamble it's very difficult it could be a little too extreme and you might then refer to it and say that this is ambitious or maybe a little too ambitious the next word well it's actually a phrase and it is an idiom under one's belt under my belt under your belt under his belt under her belt and what it means is to achieve a goal or experience to someone's satisfaction to your satisfaction that that you get it under your belt you have done this thing you have learned it you have experienced it and you could say yes I now have that under my belt hard to believe I only got a semester of junior college under my belt so you could say that you have something under your belt but more often we use it with the verb get to to get something under your belt or my belt you want to get something under your belt just get something under one's belt that's the idiom the next word is an adjective proficient and it just means that you are skilled or capable of doing something you were proficient at doing this thing or you are proficient in this task for example many of you would like to be proficient in English and I want you to be proficient in English I hope that it's not too ambitious you really want to to get these words under your belt so that you can go use them and you just know all of these words and I'm just trying to use them as much as I can so that you remember them the next word is another adjective intriguing and if something is intriguing it means it's arousing your curiosity or your interest you really you want to know more about this thing you're very curious because it is intriguing next is an expression on and off so we talked about doing something on and off and what it means is that you're saying that you do something from time to time that you start something and then stop and then start again and then stop and then start again and then stop I see your boyfriend I think in all of our lives we all do things on and off especially if we're trying to learn something on our own and we don't have time many of you might be learning English on and off you do it when you can but it's not constant it's just on and off the next word is cliché this is a noun and what it means is that it's talking about an opinion a phrase or even an expression that is overused and it's overused to the point that it's just lacks originality it's not original anymore because you always hear it expressions are a perfect example of things that might be cliché I really just want them to be happy and I know that sounds cliché and I know saying it sounds cliché sounds cliché maybe I'm being cliché I don't care because I am what I am so you may often hear people start a sentence as cliché as it sounds and then they say something cliché they say an expression and then kind of explain why they're saying it to make their point so you kind of let people know that you are going to say something that is cliché as cliché as it sounds bla bla bla bla bla bla something is shei and that is not English now that you know these words let's listen to the conversation and again we'll highlight where they are so that you can see how they're used in context so right now we're gonna have a short little discussion talking about languages that we would like to learn and yeah this is just our opinions and do you want to go first do you want to talk about one language this one yeah well right now and then I get to go we'll take turns okay oh right now oh gosh so a while back I think I had an ambitious idea of I wanted to get older Romance languages under my belt before I how many are there five okay seven many so like I think I should really cuz I know a little bit of everything but I probably should actually like actually speak them um so I think the next one on my list even though I used to be very good at it it is Italian but I kind of like my dream language that I would like to learn I don't know what's another one that you want to learn boy I just said them all like in the wrong so just the romance no no no I'd like to learn Arabic maybe beautiful again I'm it's all about the sound to me I it's just very like I think it sounds very poetic and I I heard some songs and I think they're so so beautiful so I think Arabic is really beautiful language plus it has all of these intriguing sounds like why can't do it but it sounded really cool the students are trying to tell me to make the huh sound and they're like yeah sure you have to it's a second year we've had quite a few students from the Middle East that we work with before yeah they would always get a kick out of us and trying to to pronounce words or phrases in Arabic another one that I will I'd say instead of learning another one I would like to just be and I think many people feel this way just become more proficient in the languages that we already know a little bit about or started learning so for example I lived in Korea for three years and learning Korean and it was a bit of a rollercoaster ride a lot of ups and downs and I think before tackling a whole new language it'd be worthwhile to go back and really try to become a little more proficient in Korean I think that would be useful for me yeah I feel like that about French it's one of those languages that I've studied on and off for years and years and years and then I still don't really speak it and and I think because you kind of drop it and then take it up in there yeah and I think that's normal I think we we start learning a language and then we stop for a while and then we pick it up later on and I think many of you out there probably might be doing the same thing with English right now that you've already studied it before and now you're trying to continue to improve your skills the unfortunate language is if you don't if you don't speak it you don't use it you lose it yeah yeah as cliché as it sounds but yeah it's true yeah any other languages you want to learn it I'd like to learn yes Russian okay all right and that's that's the one because of usefulness because if you learn Russian and I think you can easily understand all these other Slavic languages like you know like like Serbian or Croatian or Slovak maybe like Bulgarian Polish there's a lot of roots check yeah so I think I think that's a language I would learn just for how useful there would be but I heard it's really difficult and I have no idea I you know I go by feeling I don't think it's I think it's a pretty language but I just I've never like been into it as much as the other ones Oh another language that I would like to learn which I think would be very cool I'd like to learn sign language I think that would be very cool I don't know I really don't know how many varieties of sign language we don't know or how different they would be I thought it was pretty you know standardized to some extent no I think it would be cool to learn some sign language sign with babies did you did you guys know that that like babies understand sign language before they understand yeah they can't talk mm-hmm so that's I think that's pretty really really cool awesome so now we want to hear from you guys so in the comments let us know what languages you would like to learn besides English obviously what languages would you like to learn let us know in the comments we love hearing from you guys and if you enjoyed listening to our discussion about languages hit that like button down below and as always thanks for watching we'll see you next time thank you same challenge child shows really can like in the office and it's like ciao

Why we created a Interactive English | Natural Conversation + Vocabulary

[Music] everyone my name is Wes and you wanna and we are the creators of interactive English and you can find us at interactive English videos calm as well as follow us on social media so this channel it's all about just helping you practice and improve your English and today what we want to do is just have a natural conversation a discussion and as we do this just help you learn a few new vocabulary words because we'll put those down there and hopefully that will help you more easily understand and follow the conversation so we got some questions from our patrons our members and one of them was asking us about how we came up with interactive English and why we started this YouTube channel and it's been about how long a little four years yeah it's been a while so do you remember the first time that you were talking about it I approached you with this idea yes I remember it was on it where where were we we're in a Bart I believe we're going to the bar to San Francisco where we yeah we have we have different memories I thought we were at Cafe Roma I said hey I got this idea I want to do a YouTube channel I mean I just talk a lot of nonsense quite quite often so maybe we were no I thought we were at Cafe Roma and I had been thinking because I had just finished my got a master's in Teasle and we were getting ready to leave the country we were moving from the u.s. to Europe and I thought that's when I told you about the idea and was like hey should I do this is it a good idea because part of the reason like the one way we try to make this channel a little bit difference because I really try to focus more on active language learning exactly to really try to get you guys a little more involved so we have some videos that are just passive learning where you're just listening and trying to understand what we're saying maybe learn some new words and then other lessons that are more active where we do activities in which we want all of you to participate and do things and you're like I wish there was a way or a channel or something that is like allows people to get engaged with what they're seeing because because we see this I mean because we would do that in the classroom exactly and we it was all about trying to instead of just standing up in front of the class talking about grammar or whatever trying to get the students more involved yeah so like you have to be and this aside aside a side note yes I know that you have to be engaged as a learner in order to be able to actually learn yeah so I thought of we thought about how we would create these videos and that is also one reason why we do a lot of those live streams is because we can interact directly with all of you and we do a lesson and ask questions and try to get you guys to participate and answer those questions and in that way that is a great example of active learning where you are having to respond to something that that we're teaching so you have to think in English you have to write in English you have to sometimes speaking English whereas get to speak in some video so just like the other thing is I've always been I guess I've always been a little interested in becoming an entrepreneur and I've always thought about well yeah I did I did my undergrad in business management and I always thought it'd be cool to start a business and I just was never really sure on the direction and I started teaching and I really loved teaching and then this was kind of a good way to combine both of those and really start our own thing and trying and even now we're in the process of trying to turn this into a business how did you feel can I ask you no questions no now that you've done it for so long is this how you pictured it that it would be that you've imagined kind of going and is this you're still following like how you started out I feel like live this has been I feel like this has been a success in that we started out really didn't have any huge expectations but we kind of had an idea all along that we wanted to build a bit of a school around the channel which again we're still in the process is doing and creating courses but yeah I think it's gone very well I feel like we've we've moved slower than would be my preference but that's the way that's normal I think anytime you a lot of times people want to do something they have this plan for whether it's a business or a project and yeah you're not you're not able to go as fast as you would like so yeah that was kind of how at least that's how I imagined that it started like we were talking about it that day and we were getting ready to start this how do we film these lessons and if you do if you watch some of our earlier lessons I think they're very different than today's lessons I think when we began I was I was really anxious and a bit nervous those first few times trying to stand in front of the camera record a lesson we used to we used to write these scripts like we were in a play and just kind of try to read them line for line and it just it just made the process very slow and I don't think it looked very authentic either that it looked like we were just bad actors listen to these words that have the but I think that was part of just shows that everyone comes with a camera because my next question to you was gonna be like do we have anything to say to somebody who wants to start a channel or I've always we've had some people ask us about whether or not they should do it anytime anybody asked me about Oh should I start a YouTube channel I would say yes not necessarily going like doing it because like oh you're gonna make a lot of money because that's I that's not really the case and I think even for us like we do want to make this more of a standalone business and we're having to try and develop things around it but trying to live just off your YouTube channel I think is extremely different you really need to have a very popular channel to be able to do that so I always tell people time it takes a really long time yeah but if you're passionate about some topic and you really want to tell other people about it share your thoughts and ideas I tell it yes go ahead start a YouTube channel why not I mean for us like education has always been something that's very important I think we're both very interested in education and especially making it more accessible worldwide which I think is another great thing about YouTube because people have access to the Internet and you could learn so many different things I don't know how many times when I want to figure out how to do something you just do a search I do a search and then I'll typically I go to videos too I don't know why because I'm a visual learner I like to watch video and I would do a search for information and then go to the videos and then see what people are teaching so I don't know I don't know if that's how you guys any of you have found our channel if you were interested to learn more about English and discovered interactive English but what do you think has been the most challenging thing about I know what I'd say for me or for both of us just I don't know just the experience in general well there are a few things the first time so we've always worked together just like first since I've known him we've worked together we met at work so that was I think starting something together where there's no define anything seeing them all the time when you're young relative I don't like saying much I'm just saying 24/7 I understand I get sick of myself that's been hard living like small quarters but to prove how compatible we are I was going to say the same thing that that was the biggest challenge is trying to relationship and working together working at home and we have to agree but I think like you're right where we where we want to end up the destination we could agree on that but then how we got there like yeah not sure what kind of analogy I could give you it's like I want to take a plane and you want to wants to ride a horse now just want to go fast get there like boom let's get it sire patience see and I'm like yeah yeah things that can be very anal when it comes to efficiency and I I do realize I don't think I'm a very easy person to work with depending on I get distracted very easily like right now we've got to stretch she constructed like ten minutes ago when we were talking about actual work in the school and some courses and stuff and I thought she was listening and they was like oh wait there's a sign back there I want to take a picture so I think these are minor things that we go through as a team so yeah that's what I would say - what do you think is your the biggest before we start all of this working we were in the crimes we were running a school together after teaching at the same school but not going to the office being able to live kind of anywhere having that flexibility working at home has some pros and cons good things and bad things but you don't have much of a social outlet which is not which is tough I think I put in a solid work day but I go to bed very late and I tend to get up I don't get up early in the morning and I would like to and I think I should but it's hard to change that routine because in a way you are your own boss which is I think one of the one of the things that people love about being and I think that's something people don't realize cuz they watch YouTube videos having fun yeah it is can be very deceptive but I think it is I think that's true like you hear expressions like YouTube burnout and people that camera comes on and everybody's all smiley and then it goes off and they maybe they're just having a really really bad day nobody knows that oh god I remember the early filming days and I just have like I'm a very anxious person so I just have like anxiety attacks over like the camera in my face and it's yeah tough if you're not very but I was a very calming influence I'm sure so I would say when we hear from all of you guys like down in the comments like oh this is very useful it's really helped I feel like I'm improving like that that really yeah it really means that's why we do this which goes back to making when we talked about education becoming more accessible being able to to teach English to everybody and we have like kind of a global classroom which is wonderful and it's such a I think maybe sometimes people trivialize like language learning and it's but it's so important especially if they're in a different country for right now it's such a world language that it's it's so important to be able to speak it you can get ahead in your job you can get ahead in your school you can get ahead there's so many different ways if you speak English and especially if you're really good at speaking I think it does I think it opens up a lot of doors work and neither travel I think when people travel to other countries typically the common language is English I think we're really happy that we did this and we started this channel and we hope that you guys find these lessons useful and even lessons like this which is just a it's a conversation to help you practice your listening skills and follow along because another thing I always talk about besides producing the language is getting getting exposure different exposure whether it's listening and reading so for for example like in this video getting that listening exposure hopefully you learn are you heard a few new words or expressions and now you know what they mean and the more you practice the more you're going to improve it's all valuable I just wanted to say like everything even if you're just listening yes what we want you to produce it but even if you're just listening and keep listening like that's going to help you so we hope you guys enjoyed listening to our conversation and listening to our story about why and how we started our interactive English YouTube channel so you have any questions yeah write to us in the comments love hearing from you thank you guys so much for watching and we'll see you next time

Winter Words, Idioms, and Expressions to Help Your Fluency

Winter is coming. Actually that's a lie. It's already here. And... Nice and cold outside. So today, I figured it'd be a good time to talk about some cold words and winter expressions. Cold words. What do you mean? What are cold words? What are cold words? Words that have to do with the cold? I think we should go out there. So we decided to do this lesson today because it's cold outside. And...well, it's a good time to talk about the cold. Ioana really likes the cold, but... I like snow. I'm not a huge fan. Where did you go? I'm here. There was so much more this morning. The first word is bundle up.

Which is this what I'm doing right now. Bundle up means to take all the clothes that you have in the closet and put them on. Just kidding, but it means to just really, really, really put on some warm clothes. Because it's cold. So you have to bundle up. Put on a hat, a scarf, gloves, jacket, boots. I don't know. Just bundle up. Put on...put on some warm clothes because it's cold outside. You feel cold? No. It's not that cold. Because you're all bundled up. I'm bundled up so I'm not that cold. Wait. Don't tell them that it's not that cold. It's supposed to be really cold outside. Yeah. It's freezing.

Did you just throw a snowball at me? Often in winter, when it's snowing, people will build... ..a snowman. Gummy nose. Another common winter word, especially when there's snow outside is slush. And slush is just when the snow starts to melt. And it's kind of...yeah, makes this weird sound. And we have slush. In the slush. Are you having fun? Wait. Are you going to be? What are you doing? Where are you going? I was just hiding. So when we're talking about the weather, and it's cold outside, there are varying degrees that we can use depending on how cold it is. So the first one, if it's not really that cold outside, somebody might say that it's chilly.

Or you could say that it's also nippy. Nippy outside. Do you ever say it's nippy outside? Nippy. Nippy. And actually I don't think that one's as common. Just so you know in case you might hear it. So chilly and nippy are kind of like it's just a little cold out. And of course, probably the most common thing to say is just...it's cold. Like today. It's cold outside. You can see the snow. But if you want to say it's really cold and emphasize just how cold it is. You could say, it's freezing outside. Like wow. It is really, really cold. It's freezing. We could also use a simile to talk about how cold it is.

And that's when we just compare two things that are not alike. So you could say that it is as cold as something. And frequently people might say it's as cold as ice. Because ice... Ice is really cold. You could also say, maybe it's as cold as... What would you think? It's as cold as... Canada. The North Pole. I don't know. And depending on how informal you want to be you could also throw some profanity at the end there. And just say, it's cold as f#@%.

Now this one, everyone uses. It's true. Cold AF. You could also say that. You want to get out there? Yeah. Let's go! Go! Go! Get out there. Well, I don't have skates. A common word that comes up all the time when we're talking about winter is ice. So I have an expression for you that has to do with ice. It is on thin ice. So when somebody is on thin ice, we say that they're in the kind of a dangerous situation. For example, when Wes keeps saying stupid things many times I'll say to him, "Wes you're on thin ice." Which means if you say something stupid one more time, I'm going to get really, really mad at you.

But I never fall through the ice and that's very important. So that's a great use of you're on thin ice. If he says one more stupid thing, he'll end up sleeping on the couch. That's not true. Yes, it is. That's not true. You're on thin ice. You're on thin ice. Another expression that has to do with the cold is to give someone the cold shoulder. And this just means to ignore someone or not pay attention to them. You would give them the cold shoulder. And, sometimes when Ioana is on thin ice, I will give her the cold shoulder. That's not how that works. I just don't pay attention to her. Not true. I give her the cold shoulder. True story. Nope. True story. You can't just say it's a true story. It doesn't make it true.

It does make it true. It does make it true. Alright. Put my hat on. It's cold. You can just say AF. You don't have to... Cold AF. Yeah, you don't have to say... I'm not that cool to say cold AF. I don't think. No, you're not. That's true. You're not cool. You're cold. Get it. I'm like full of puns today. Full of funs? PUNS! Word play. I thought you said funs. PUNS! What, it's a word in the English language. I said you're not cool. You're cold. Get it. He doesn't get it. Look! Oh, gosh. Oh no. She's so slow. She's so slow. I can run with the camera, and she still won't catch me.

So many times it means that you are... How do I put this. So we say that you get cold feet before like a major event? You get nervous. You have a lot of anxiety about this event. And many times, especially now, people refer to getting cold feet before they get married. So, it's very common. Everyone's always asking, "Did you get cold feet before you married Wes?" And I answer, "Yes, of course. I was terrified." He's so scary. Look at him. I had cold feet. Did you? Well, my feet...well, literally my feet were literally cold. It was a very cold day in New York. It was a very cold day when we got married.

But you can also get cold feet before like a... Really big presentation, or like a speech. But just about always it's used to talk about marriage. Yeah now, mostly marriage. Cute. Also, if you guys are wondering what's this gorgeous background behind us. We are in Budapest. It's a beautiful city and we love it. And that's all I wanted to say. If you're wondering where we are and it's so cute and pretty. The last cold expression that I have for you is a very, very common one. And that is just to catch a cold. So cold is a word that has multiple meanings. It could be talking about the weather, but it could also mean when you are sick.

And you say that you have a cold, or you can get a cold, or even catch a cold. This is an expression that we often use. Getting a cold. I just wanted to say that from the outside it looks like there's a crazy man just kind of giving a lecture to a phone. It's pretty funny. Where? Oh. You're talking about me. Yes, I was talking about you. So we hope you enjoyed this lesson about winter and the cold, and the words and expressions. So in the comments, we want you to write what is your opinion about the cold. Do you love it like me? Or indifferent to it like Wes? Or do you hate it?

Okay. So let us know. Write it in the comments. Love hearing from you guys. And as always, please like and share this video. And...that's all I got. We'll see you next time. Stay warm. Stay warm. And bundle up.

LESSON 730 OF 749

Write Smarter, Not Harder | 7 Tips to Instantly Improve Your Academic Writing

if you spend time writing in english or you would like your writing to be a bit more professional i want to talk to you about some very useful tips that's going to help you immensely improve your writing really it's going to help you greatly improve your academic writing and develop those skills and i know that when i say academic writing you you may think of university which is where a lot of academic writing is done but this is also very important in a more professional setting a business setting so these tips will help my name is wes the channel is interactive english it's all about trying to help you improve your skills so that you can reach your fluency goals if that's what you would like to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that you will learn about future lessons so let's begin with the first tip that i have for you and i think this one is is very important which is why i've put it at the very beginning and that is to be concise and what it means to be concise is that you are stating the information clearly and you are using as few words as possible so really you just avoid wasting words and i think this applies to so many different things so let me give you an example uh with these video lessons before a long time ago when i first started doing these lessons i thought that well the longer i could make them then that would just make it better and more people would be watching them but what i realized after once i started doing this is that i shouldn't be trying to make the lessons longer i should try to give you the information i should try to teach you the lesson and then whenever it's finished then well that's how long the lesson is and that's the same with your writing you should be concise state the information and try to use as few words as possible because why say something in ten words when you could say it in five and one way that you can do that that's going to help you be concise is to use action verbs so let me give you some sentences so that you know what i mean a simple way that you can avoid using too many words is to stay away from the tion words and i'm not saying that you should never use these but really just keep this in mind because it will help you cut down on unnecessary words so if i were to say the report provided an explanation for these unusual results you see that tion word explanation well i can just make that an action verb and say the report explained these unusual results i've said the same thing it's more concise i've used fewer words and and you're still saying the information clearly another reason why it's very important to be concise is because it's going to help whoever it is that's reading your writing it's going to help them more easily understand what you're trying to say the final thing that i'll say about this is that you should try to use the vocabulary that you already know i think quite often people will try to look up words that are more difficult that sound more academic intelligent and and they put that into their paper even if it's a word that maybe you don't even know try to avoid doing that use the vocabulary that you already know it's going to help you say things clearly and be concise the next tip that i have for you is to organize your paper this is going to help you carefully structure your writing and all you need to do is create an outline it's as simple as that and i cannot emphasize this enough because often i think many people will just skip this part of the writing process i used to teach ielts and ielts is a proficiency exam and part of the exam you have to write and it is timed and i would work with students to help them try to achieve a high mark and what i would always tell them is that at the very beginning just take five minutes organize your paper and write down create a quick little outline about what you want to say before you start writing and so so often they would tell me well i just don't have time there's no time for this i just need to start writing and when i would read their writing i could see the lack of organization some of the ideas would overlap and and some points were not even connected to their main thesis so i think without organizing your paper and saying okay this is what i'm going to talk about first second and third it's very easy to lose track of where you want to go and when you start to lose focus of your main idea you you kind of go off track and you start writing about things that may not even be relevant so please take a little bit of time create an outline organize your paper and think about how your writing should be structured my next tip is that you should avoid contractions idioms and other colloquial expressions simply because they're very informal and writing in general writing is more formal and academic writing is definitely more formal so let's have a look at some informal language like contractions instead of writing it's right it is instead of writing could of write could have or instead of writing theirs right there has i'll also include phrasal verbs in this because they can also be a bit informal and in that case instead of if you were to say like put up with use a more specific verb like endure or tolerate instead of saying check out you could use a verb like view or consult so not only are you using more formal language but you're also being more concise you're using fewer words and as far as idioms go just please avoid them look at these two sentences right here collecting data was easy and efficient or collecting data was a piece of cake it just reading it is a bit awkward and the same goes for colloquial expressions if you if i were to write something like the scientist had trouble finishing the experiment but no biggie if they didn't finish they could just go back to the drawing board and i the colloquial expressions like saying something is well no biggie it's no big deal or i use that idiom go back to the drawing board not only does this informal language sound unprofessional but it's probably going to seem strange to the person who's reading it so please avoid contractions idioms and these other colloquial phrases the next tip is that you should vary your sentence structures and this is going to help you avoid choppiness and if you're unsure what that means i'm going to tell you a little story and i think it will make more sense but let's get into some more details about sentence structure so there are four basic sentence structures you have simple sentences this is one independent clause so if i'm going to tell you a story about my day i could say i woke up late this morning it's a simple sentence we also have compound sentences which is when you have two or more independent clauses so continuing the story i could say i immediately went to the kitchen and i made myself a cup of coffee a complex sentence is when you have one independent clause plus one or more dependent clauses after i finish my coffee i got ready for work then we have compound complex sentences which is when you have two or more independent clauses plus one or more dependent clauses and let's continue when i looked at my watch i realized i was running late so i ran out the door and jumped in my car so let's review our story using all of those different sentence structures i woke up late this morning i immediately went to the kitchen and i made myself a cup of coffee after i finished my coffee i got ready for work when i looked at my watch i realized i was running late so i ran out the door and jumped in my car if we were to change this and just use simple sentences the story is going to sound well it's going to sound very choppy if i say i woke up late this morning i immediately went to the kitchen i made myself a cup of coffee i finished my coffee i got ready for work i looked at my watch i realized i was running late i ran out the door i jumped in my car all right it's it sounds more like a children's book and it's definitely not academic writing so when you vary your sentence structure it's going to help your writing have a nice rhythm and flow and to be perfectly honest when you're writing you may not analyze each sentence and really look at the sentence structure this is more likely something that you will notice and you'll be able to get a feel for it as you re-read your writing so when you re-read you'll be able to get a better sense if there is some choppiness and you need to adjust some of your sentence structures my next tip is to use the active voice and that is because the active voice it just gives more clarity now i'm not saying that you should never use the passive voice it really depends on what you're writing if you're writing some scientific paper then yes it's likely you may have some passive sentences but in general overall most of your sentences should be active so let's compare the active and passive if i were to say archaeologists conducted a study of the newly unearthed artifacts this is an active sentence it has nine words and if we compare it to the passive a study was conducted of the newly unearthed artifacts you see that the issue is that well in the passive we don't know who conducted the study now we could add that to the end of the sentence and i could say by archaeologist but now i have 11 words why say something in 11 words when i could say it in nine so again it's about being more concise so just keep in mind that most of your sentences are going to be in the active voice the next tip is to avoid repetition try to use a variety of words because it's going to make your writing more captivating use precise language if possible and try to avoid words like very because words like that are often overused now in writing one one way to avoid repetition is when it comes to transition words these transition words are when you can will add information perhaps you're moving from one idea to the next but when you're writing transition words it's easy to repeat them let's take the word also this is a word that's commonly used to add more information but you do not always need to use this word because there are other words that have the same meaning so instead of saying the crisis caused severe economic damage companies were forced to downsize and many people lost their job also banks were forced to tighten lending practices which meant small businesses had a difficult time accessing money also the local government proved ineffective in offering relief we can just remove also to replace with some other words like in addition and furthermore and it's going to sound much better so we have also in addition furthermore moreover besides there are a variety of words that you can use when you're talking about these transition words the good news is is that well repetition is pretty easy to spot when you reread your writing you should be able to identify if you continuously use the same word again and again and again and really unless you're writing a poem there is no good reason to continuously repeat words over and over just remember this famous saying when you avoid repetition your writing won't suck actually it's not a famous saying i just made it up right now but the message the lesson is still relevant avoid repetition the next tip and i really want to emphasize this is proofread and the reason why i say i want to emphasize this is because it's another step in the writing process that some people tend to skip and the reason why it's so important to proofread is because you're able to do some of the things that i've already talked about you're able to get a feel for the sentence structure that you use you're able to spot some of the words that you may have repeated most of you are probably proofreading because you want to correct mistakes so in that case i have a bonus tip for you and that is read backwards go to the very last sentence read that one try to look for mistakes go to the next to the last sentence read that one look for mistakes and just continue reading backwards until you get to the beginning and the reason for that is because you're really isolating the sentence and you're able to look for spelling mistakes grammar mistakes punctuation and in short when you read backwards you're focusing more on the text and not the ideas so proofread forward from beginning to end if you want to get a feel for the rhythm and flow of your writing make sure that your ideas are logically ordered as well as check for repetition proof read backward if you want to really focus on the text and check for grammatical errors and most importantly just make sure that you proofread and do not skip this step so i hope that you found these tips and suggestions useful because i definitely think this will help you immensely improve your academic writing please i would love it if you would practice your writing right now and write to me in the comments i always love hearing from you thank you guys so much for watching and i will see you next time

You're definitely fluent if you can change these. | Advanced (C1 + C2) Grammar

you are fluent if you can change these and if fluency is something that you would like to achieve please subscribe to the channel that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English which is all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and I've been saying the word fluency a lot and this it's really subjective because I've met people before that say you know I'm not that fluent in English and then I hear them speak and I say well you sound pretty fluent to me and this is why other exams like I tofl they end up using words like proficiency instead and keeping that in mind proficiency we're going to do some sentence Transformations today and all of them are at a c1c2 level and this is cambridge's highest those are the two highest levels of proficiency which based on the European framework show that somebody has mastered the language they have a high level of speaking competency and are able to express a variety of thoughts ideas and opinions so if this is something you've never done before let me explain it so you know what I want you to do we're going to do a transformation exercise and as you can see right down here what does this mean it's an exercise where Learners are given one sentence and need to complete a second sentence so that it has the same meaning and I think these are activities that you will find on proficiency exams like the iots or TOEFL or toic and I think the reason for that is because you end up well practicing a lot of different parts of the language so it's not only using your knowledge of grammar and structure but vocabul ulary as well so we're going to do some keyword sentence Transformations I am going to give you one sentence as well as a word that I want you to use when you're writing the next sentence there may be again there may be more than one way to do this for some of these we'll we'll see what you come up with but in general you may need to type quickly as we go through this uh I've us if if you're just joining us um and you're new here please please write your name in the chat in the comments I love hearing from you and I also want to mention that if you are interested in downloading these lesson notes that you see right here next to me there is a link down in the description that you can access them when you join our community I'll also throw it right there in the chat if that's what you'd like to do if you're already a valued member of the interactive English Community go ahead and check your inbox I have already sent them to you so that you have them from here and into eternity so let's start with this first one and we're we're going to begin with sentences that are well these are transformations at a C1 level and they'll get a little more challenging as we go through this so the first one I'm giving you the sentence up top I regret not hitting the like button okay you can you can see where we're going with this one I want you to write another sentence using the word had the word right here in the middle and you're going to start out the sentence I wish and the sentences are going to have the same meaning that's what these sentence Transformations are all about so you're going to write another sentence using the word had it's going to have the same meaning as this sentence right here I regret not hitting the like button so this this lesson does have a bit more typing in in it instead of just writing a word you're going to have to write several words or even better just write the entire sentence and I'm going to go through and maybe give some shoutouts as we go through this uh excellent um nice Julia Ava great job so let me show you the first one the answer sometimes there may just be one thing missing I wish I had Hit the Light button so we're talking about a wish a desire I wish I had hit the like button so you see where we're going with this again I'm kind of fishing for those likes if you haven't done so already yeah I'd really appreciate it if you hit the like button that way at the end of the lesson you won't be feeling like this you won't be thinking ah I regret not hitting the like button or I wish I had hit the like button excellent great job I love seeing all these sentences when people are participating and even if you're watching this later write the answers in the chat this is interactive English it's all about act having you actively participate in the lesson but well done nice uh Loi um takayo nice good to see you Rafaela Loi great to see so many members familiar faces love it here's the next one I almost always go out on Saturday night this is an example it's absolutely not true as far as like my life is concerned um but I want you to rewrite the sentence using the word ever right down there and I've given you most of it I at home on Saturday night so again you're these are key word Transformations I want you to use this hardly ever stay home and you're thinking about expressing that that opposite those different adverbs between always and hardly ever almost always and hardly ever well done well done the next one again we're going to stick with C1 for right now and then I'm going to make it a little more difficult and challenging because I know that you love a challenge so the sentence I asked her if she needed more information I think this one's a bit more tricky uh so I want you to use the word else and complete the sentence so that it has the same meaning I asked her if M she needed to know I think maybe this one could be more at a C2 level so the sentence I asked her if she needed more information it means the same as saying I asked her if M she needed to know and hopefully as I'm saying it like that it can kind of you know jog your memory of like okay I think I know what would go in that um that that blank using the word else that is the key word right there that I want you to use um very close uh Vivi very close rafhaela very close and again one thing um so some of just a slight thing the the answer I asked her if there was anything else she needed to know so I know a lot of you some of you I saw putting there is I asked her if there is anything else in this context we're talking about again it's in the past so there was I asked her if there was anything else she needed to know but I think everybody was kind of on the right track with this one which again I think is impressive because I thought this one um was going to be a little more challenging and difficult but great job well done okay another

C1 sentence transformation it's easy for my colleague to speak in public it's easy for my colleague to speak in public let's change this sentence using the word difficulty and filling in the the sentence down below my colleague speaking in public my colleague speaking in public so you can see some the the grammar changing as we go through this for example you have to speak in the first sentence and then you have the the jiren down below speaking in public so what sentence could you write so that it has the same meaning as it's easy for my colleague to speak in public great job I think many of you uh definitely on track with this one Ava uh L um I think uh who ala I'm trying to give some different shoutouts you guys keep participating I love it I love it when it the it just keeps flying by so the answer my colleague has no difficulty speaking in public so that was the those were the three words that you needed to fill in there has no difficulty somebody has no difficulty doing something and you'll follow that with the jiren my colleague has no difficulty speaking in public how about this one give this give this a try and if you can't see that of course I'm going to read it losing weight will take longer than you think losing weight will take longer than you think I want you to use the word lose and when you're writing a sentence that has the same meaning you won't be able to M and then ending with you think you won't be able to M you think think about again other Expressions that people would use in this situation has the same meaning as losing weight will take longer than you think I feel like in some of these when if there was a slight or small mistake once I end up showing you the answer then it I think for many of you it makes perfect sense and you might be thinking oh I I should have gotten that I I think I should know that so losing weight will take longer than you think I want you to use the word lose when completing the next sentence uh that was good Daniela that was really good there's you could use that I think I I could say you're right but I think the the probably a more commonly used phrase Stellar well done is as fast as you won't be able to lose weight as fast as you think uh I saw like one in there like as quickly as you think and you like I said there with some of these there may be more than one response I do think it's more common for someone to use as fast as you think when talking about their someone's ability to do something you can't you won't you're not going to be able to do this as as fast as you think but again as quickly as that also works the next one we need to run or the bus will leave before we get there I don't know why I'm reading this so slowly we need to run or the bus will leave before we get there all right that's better I want you to use the word time when putting together another sentence that has the same meaning unless M we get there so of course in as we've gone through this you're having to write a few more words in that blank spot again I told you as we as we progress I'm going to try to make these more difficult and we're getting we're about ready to head into the C2 sentence Transformations so we need to run or the bus will leave before we get there I want you to start out using that Clause unless and then completing the sentence we get there I feel like if you're you're able to put together that first Clause with unless then the rest of it should just follow we need to run or the bus will leave before we get there so unless we do what and then kind of put it together well done nice cun unless we run starting that we have that that dependent clause right there then you could start putting together the rest with that independent clause unless we run what's going to happen the bus will have left by the time we get there unless we run the bus will have left by the time we get there so by the time is a it's it's a challenging phrase when when you're using by the time when you hear that you should automatically start thinking okay perfect tense that you're going to use that in this case we're talking about the future perfect the bus will have left by the time we get there because again we're talking about the future in here we need to run or the bus will leave before we get there unless we run the bus will have left by the time we get there this one is a little more I think this one's definitely uh a bit more challenging so I that last one maybe also could have been at the C2 level I don't want to say that these are exact as far as the level but all of them are at that advanced level of proficiency C1 C2 but let's let's talk about some some C2

Transformations right now and you like showing the picture of the the Transformers anyway so the first one that I have for you you rarely get less than 80% on these quiz lessons for many of you who have been following me over the years you know that I like to do these live lessons these quizzes have you participate and just practice your skills whether it's vocabulary grammar and I I enjoy this lesson in particular because you're you're able to practice both so you rarely get less than 80% on these quiz lessons I like to think that because I know you guys work hard play hard and you rock these quizzes but I want you to use the word rare I appreciate all those hearts and complete the sentence down here so that it has the same meaning it less than 80% on these quiz lessons so how would you complete the sentence so they have the same meaning it M less than 80% on these quiz lessons using the the word rare well done David tree nice um Co so yeah again like we could make it a little more concise um nice Emma uh larine so the answer it is rare for you to get less than 80% on these quiz lessons and I will ask you at the end and you can tell me what you know what range do you think you were in as far as today's quiz lesson goes with the sentence Transformations so it is rare for you to get less than 80% on these quiz lessons

I believe this one probably is a little more difficult because there are just some slight mistakes that someone could make whether it has to do with the verb tense or the phrasing but here's the next one thanks to my colleague we won the competition thanks to my colleague we won the competition I want you to use that keyw for and complete the sentence down here so that it has the same meaning had lost the competition so you'll notice that change as far as the the Opposites thanks to my colleague we won the competition and then in the second sentence now I'm using lost the competition had lost the competition what do you think and this one you really that it's you know a bit more you know grammar is involved with the construction because we're talking about something that is you know know hypothetical it didn't happen in the case of the second sentence down here nice uh close Sarah close getting there yeah Viv so the answer had it not been for my colleague and that is a phrase that I want you to had it not been for my colleague is it's a phrase that you would use to present like these contrasting ideas had it not been for my colleague well what would have happened this is hypothetical well we would have lost the competition and I said there's a little more grammar involved in this one because you see that that Clause that independent clause at the second part of the sent we would have lost the competition it's it's similar to that third conditional you have would Plus have plus the past participle we would have lost the competition so the first part of that sentence had it not been for my colleague would be similar if you were going to use an if statement and say if it had not been for my colleague we would have lost the competition so those phrases are interchangeable had it not been for someone or something versus if it had not been for someone or something those are interchangeable phrases something to to keep in mind when thinking about that that third conditional so let's look at the next one as always hopefully you just you learn something new with all of these lessons that's always my goal whether I'm teaching a concept that's a little easier or more difficult that that you just learn something new and if you have learned something new again hit the like button it just lets me know I should do more of these lessons so what do you think about this um I yeah I included this one on purpose he looks a lot like my teacher Wes talking about myself and you can yeah you can let me know what you think but I want you to use the word resemblance when rewriting the sentence here he my teacher Wes now this one has is a little more vocabulary related and I'll I'll tell you why once I give you uh give you the answer he my teacher Wes so you could say LLY yes that works but there's one I would say there's an adjective missing and I see another one yeah and this is where I feel like you you could use more than one because I want you to think which adjective I'll go ahead and give you a hint is going to go with resemblance and I think it's a it's a common collocation so actually you guys are giving great answers and I think some of these sentences are right I haven't seen the one that I'm about to show you but like I said you could use different adjectives in order to complete this sentence so I think I see a lot of him like he Bears a resemblance to my teacher Wes sure I I feel like this is what I had said okay he has an uncanny resemblance to my teacher Wes and I was using an uncanny resemblance which is a common cocation so you could say someone Bears uh a resemblance to someone the only thing is I feel like in in saying like somebody looks a lot like someone else this is that's a little stronger than like oh yeah you know he Bears a resemblance uh it's like oh you kind of look like this person but thinking about those adjectives that you could use with resemblance and I used uncanny resemblance that works it's like oh strange and mysterious it's a common collocation you could say I see in the CH a strong resemblance that would also work somebody else mentioned a striking resemblance that's another great cocation a remarkable resemblance you could even use like a strange resemblance there are a lot of different adjectives that you could use with that but I think in this situation I I think it's fitting to use an adjective with resemblance when rewriting the sentence so once again I think for this one there are several ways that you could do this but the real question that I have for you and you can just give me a yes or no in the chat in the comments what do you think so often I get comments on just random videos of people telling me that I look a lot like Mr Beast who is a a very very famous YouTuber or that I have an uncanny resemblance to Mr Beast what do you all think I personally take take this as a compliment because he's much younger than I am so I appreciate it when people telling me I end up looking like Mr Beast but you can uh let me know in the comments in the chat if you agree that I have an uncanny resemblance to Mr pie is he like no oh thank you loli I really appreciate it so let's uh let's let's look at the next one I thought that was a fun one it's always good to get your feedback because yeah I end up getting these comments about ah maybe once or twice a uh once every month or two that I look like Mr Beast so that child is twice as tall as she was two years ago that child was that child is twice as tall as she was two years ago I want you to use the word doubled and rewrite the sentence so that it has the same meaning that child's m in the last two years I feel like there's uh some disagreement some people yes you do look like Mr Beast other people know uh thank you Rafaela I really appreciate it some people um so what what do you think the the the one thing I want you to keep in mind of course you can see that child's were were using that possessive adjective in this case so what are we going to follow it with and if you you know the word that you're going to follow that with then I think the rest of the sentence will kind of do it that child's m in the last two years excellent I'm seeing a lot of great answers I think you guys rock this one that child's height has doubled in the last two years perfect and in this case again you're talking about the child's height well done okay he he promised never to lie again I want you to use the word truth rewrite the sentence he swore now on I think this one again some of the the like this a couple of those C1 ones that we we've already done I think we're about challenging I think you guys will can get this one as well and I enjoyed that picture of the pinky swear again pinky swear that promise that you you're never going to You'll Never Lie this is something I always do with my my little girl too when she's like I promise okay pinky swear all right pinky swear very very official those pinky swears so he promised never to lie again I want you to use the word truth he swore now on it's a simple sentence great job um David VI uh it's kind of moving fast great Eva try to give some shout outs he swore to tell the truth from now on both of these sentences they have the same meaning you could use either one what do you think about this one and I I think this has it's a little more vocabulary related I don't think I made a good impression on my on my new boss today so if somebody's sitting there telling you look I don't think I made a good impression on my new boss today it's not good news I want you to use the word foot when rewriting the next sentence with the same meaning I think my boss and I might today and it's important that you you again I guess identify this idiom I'll go ahead and tell you it's an idiom I said it's more vocabulary related and that is really going to help you complete the sentence and I I think this is a good idiom to know it is a C2 idiom which is why put this uh sentence transformation at this level I think my boss and I might today what would you say uh come you close close I still haven't seen it a lot of you running it you could you again letting use start you could use uh that verb I think there's a better verb to use in this case um I think in this situation people are going to use it with the verb get and say I think my boss and I might have gotten off on the wrong foot today so to get off on the wrong foot it basically has this meaning that you start something in a way that's you know not good in a way that you don't want to and you say look I think you hear this a lot somebody says yeah look I think we've gotten off on the wrong foot and you kind of want to start over in this case I think my boss and I might have gotten off on the wrong foot so like I said you could say like so start uh We've started off on the wrong foot I think it's more common in this context to use the verb get but we're using that past participle gotten off on the wrong foot but you may also use like might have got off on the wrong foot because got gotten both of those are accepted as far as the the past participle of the verb get I think my boss and I might have gotten off on the wrong foot so now is the moment of truth I want you to to let me know how did you do on the quiz let me know in the comments and for those of you are here hold on hold on

don't go anywhere just yet I'm going to put uh I'm going to put a little quiz in the the the chat right here so that you can just go ahead and tell me um how you think you you you did how do you wait what happened to uh I'm going to put a poll in here and you can tell me I'll write it how did you do on today's quiz I I told you before I said less than let's let's do it percentages um 80 to uh 100% let's do it uh 60 to 80% because I had that one option um let's say 40 to 60% and of course you could just guess and I'll just write the last one oh boy like maybe you needed a little more work so what what do you think you can share your results right there how did you do on the quiz today if you're watching this later let me know in the chat I always love hearing from you guys and if you did learn something new I'd appreciate it of course if you hit that like button it just tells me that look I should do more of these lessons I think these are really great activities this uh I've already mentioned it before because not only are you having to really kind of think outside the box as to okay how are you going to structure this other sentence so that it has the same meaning you're really thinking about grammar structure verb tenses but also using vocabulary as well just mentioned with some of those last ones like that to you'd really need to know or have heard of that idiom to get off on the wrong foot in order to complete that sentence I think it's highly it's highly useful and again if you want to get these lesson notes join our email Community there's a link down in the description and I just can't help but uh checking out the results all right so this is this is a little more balanced I think everybody was kind of in that 40 to 80% range which tells me that yeah that you probably learn something new and yeah keep practicing these this is a great little I I said that you're definitely fluent if you can change these because again this is an activity you will certainly find on many of these proficiency exams doing sentence Transformations Isles TOEFL toic because you end up using a lot of those different things that I just mentioned so I really appreciate you guys joining me today I always um love it when you participate in these lessons and I'm sure I will be back very soon for another lesson to help you test your skills when it comes to vocabulary grammar pronunciation speaking a little bit of everything so thank you very much it was great seeing you let me show L rafela great to see some members in here too good to see you uh I'll be talking to some of you soon as the next speak up course is getting ready to start Manuel Daniela um tal Joseph thank you guys for joining me have a wonderful rest of the day and I will see

YouTube Vocabulary that You Need to Know

if you enjoy watching youtube just like i do then these are some words that you need to know [Music] hey everyone my name is wes from interactiveenglishvideos.com and the channel it's all about helping you practice and improve your english skills and today i want to help you build your vocabulary because i think many of us we like to watch youtube so i want to teach you some very common and useful words that are related to youtube and that if you watch youtube quite often you are probably going to hear many of these words so let's start with something very very simple very easy so when you are on youtube of course you see many different images and pictures that represent the video those are called thumbnails this is a word that you've probably heard before if you spend a lot of time on youtube that you see those small images they're just called thumbnails and people try to design and create these amazing thumbnails in order to capture people's attention and that really brings me to my next word which is click bait so this is a word that really it was not around before we started using the internet and this word comes from well the words click plus bait so to click on something just means that that you are pressing on some image or link because you want to see or find out some more information about it now bait is well it makes me think of fishing that you use bait in order to catch a fish and in this case click bait you are you are using something enticing some a title or even a thumbnail in order to get somebody to click on this you're trying to lure people in even though it may not be an accurate representation of what the video is about so let me give you some examples because even yeah even interactive english i have been i'm guilty of a little bit uh i'd say mild click bait so look at this image right here this is a thumbnail from a video that uh i did a while back 10 adjectives to help you sound smarter so you could say that this is uh you know this is a little bit of mild click bait now i could say 10 advanced adjectives that would probably that's exactly what it's about but to say to help you sound smarter it just maybe captures your attention a bit more now some people may not be happy with this because they think that i'm implying that if you don't learn these adjectives and if you don't use them then you're just not going to sound smart and of course that is absolutely not true so this i would kind of i would classify as like mild click bait to give you an example of what i would consider extreme click bait would be what if i create a thumbnail like this and the title of my video is learn english with me i'll give you my phone number and you see that thumbnail and think oh okay that's great i want to practice my english i'm going to click on this and watch the video and then the video appears and you suddenly you see me and you think wait a second this is not what i wanted this is not what i expected and and that would be an example of something that is really true and genuine clickbait when you are using the title and the thumbnail in a way that's that is a bit misleading it's something that's outrageous really just to get people's attention and make them click on the link and watch the video then we have the phrase to go viral and this refers to a video that becomes very popular and spreads quickly now often you may hear it used in the present perfect and if somebody's talking about a video that has gone viral it's spreading quickly it's becoming very popular this is very different than thinking about another virus that your computer could get if your computer gets a virus that's a bad thing but if you're talking about a video that has gone viral then well that is a great thing because that way you are reaching more people and that is another reason why some people try to use click bait in their titles and and their thumbnails because perhaps they're hoping that the video it's going to help it go viral next we have the word troll and this is a great word i like it even though it's not a good thing because a troll is a person who likes to start arguments in the comments so down below um most videos practically all of them there is a comment section where you can respond to what you just saw and you can write messages to well just give your thoughts and opinions about the video or you can say something directly to the creator and a troll would just be somebody who says things that are kind of a bit controversial because they're trying to start an argument mostly with the other people who are watching the video and i think the other thing about a troll is often this person may not even believe the thing that they're saying they're really just trying to upset other people make them angry and and just start an argument and usually they because of that they're not saying anything very constructive they're maybe making personal attacks and you could say that this person is a troll it happens on interactive english from time to time we get comments from from people who i would consider trolls their opinion typically a hater is not going to attack someone personally they're just going to say oh i just don't like this video i think it was terrible so for example if somebody was a hater on our channel maybe they say that they that the explanations that i'm giving are not very good or they say the words that i've that i choose to teach you are just terrible choices and they they just have a negative opinion about the video it's happen again we we deal with haters as well on our channel and i think you can find them on any youtube channel but let me give you an example of a hater is this a dumb joke who wouldn't know these words i would expect a child of eight to know these this is somebody who just i think just has a negative attitude because they watch the video but i don't know if they really understood that the video is for english learners and the video was about uh very common academic words and because these are common academic words they are words that are well known they're they're not words that are going to be extremely difficult so i understand the reason why they would say oh i think these words are not very advanced they're not very difficult well that's because they're very common but i don't i i really don't think an eight-year-old would know some of those words but again this is the this is this person's opinion i really do think that they believe that those words were way too easy and you could just say they were just they were just hating on that video one thing about youtube i would say is that as uh a creator somebody who has been on youtube for a little over three years now you really just have to ignore haters and trolls and not pay attention to them because those those those are not the people that i want to reach i want to reach all of you who truly are here because you want to improve your english and i appreciate that and i always love hearing from you guys down in the comments then we have the word streaming which is well it could be used as a verb for example i could say that i will stream another lesson on saturday or i could use it as a noun and talk about a live stream either way the meaning is is the same because you're talking about watching a video directly from the internet and you are watching it as it's happening i do it here on this channel pretty much every saturday and i will stream a lesson and it allows me to interact directly with you guys and you can watch the lesson right as it's happening speaking of streaming the next word is chat and this is really just talking about having a discussion and sending messages on youtube so you could use it as a verb to chat or as a noun and talk about uh the chat so for example when i do my live streams there is this this discussion part which is the chat and i would tell people to write to me in the chat or ask questions in the chat even we would practice we we do different practice lessons and i tell people to write their answers in the chat so there is a difference between the comments section and the chat because when you're talking about the chat it's it's happening at that moment and you are communicating directly with other people another word that you may hear on youtube is the word vlogger and this comes from the word blog which in that case a blog is talking about a site that is updated and it's typically run by a person or a small group and they're they're talking about some topic or sharing their opinions and in this case because youtube is video a vlogger is talking about somebody who basically videotapes their their lives i think most vloggers will videotape uh their lives they put it on the internet they just show the things that they do during the day and sometimes they'll share their opinions about different topics and you could say that somebody is vlogging you can use it uh as a verb to vlog or as the person it is a the person's a vlogger then we have the word trending which refers to something that is very popular and it is widely discussed online and often i think you would use this word in the continuous tense and you would talk about some video that is trending or people might ask what's trending and i don't think we've ever really had any of our videos really start trending and go viral we've had some some popular lessons but nothing that has really just just taken off but if something is really really becomes popular and becomes popular quickly you could say that that video is probably trending then we have the word influencer which refers to just a person that has a lot of influence over their audience often it's used in the context of marketing because a lot of times people will ask influencers to promote a product or service i don't really consider myself uh an influencer i guess maybe a little bit um i it's a little strange because i know that's a word that's directly related to youtube and social media i just think of myself as a teacher another word that you may hear people talk about is algorithm and specifically they would talk about the youtube algorithm and in that case they they're referring to whatever mathematical calculation that youtube does to determine which videos they should show to people to decide what videos are going to appear on your home screen what videos they're going to suggest to you all of that is determined by the youtube algorithm and you could even then talk about people who might try to to cheat the algorithm a little bit and they use these baity titles and thumbnails hoping that it's go hoping that the algorithm will notice it and that that video will go viral all right and this is a good way to review some of the words we've already talked about then we have the word copyright when when i started using youtube this is something that i i really was trying to pay attention to so what what copyright refers to it is the vocabulary word being used in context and mostly those videos are only about like two to four seconds so you may be wondering wait a second how is it that that i can use these videos but maybe other people can't so there is another word which is called fair use and what fair use means is it is the the ability for creators to use very very short excerpts or pieces of other people's material if it is for the purpose of criticism or reporting the news or even education education falls under fair use and because this channel it's an educational channel i'm teaching english i teach a vocabulary word and then i might show some videos of people using that word in context now fair use is a gray area which is another good phrase because a gray area is talking about where it's not very clear what is right and what is wrong there are no clear set of instructions it's hard to tell if something is fair use or if it infringes on someone's copyright so i would say that those short clips those very short excerpts that i'm using it's fair use it's for educational purposes here is an example of fair use now to give you an example that might not be fair use would be if i said today we're going to learn english and i am going to have you watch an episode of friends which is a popular tv show and the video starts and i say okay let's just watch friends and i show you a 20 minute episode and don't really do anything in that case that would not qualify as fair use because i am using the entirety of that content i didn't really create anything of my own that does not qualify as fair use that is a copyright infringement and that video would likely get a copyright strike and possibly be taken down next is the word notification we'll we'll end it on a little bit of an easier note because well this is a noun many of you may be familiar with the meaning of this word because you know the verb to notify and to notify someone is just basically to to tell someone about something and that that is kind of what a notification is except it's a noun and that is when you receive a message telling you about something if you want to receive notifications so that you get a message that there is a new video lesson from interactive english you can hit the bell and that will turn on notifications so i hope that you've learned some new words and as you're watching youtube you may hear maybe some influencers or some vloggers talk about these words and they talk about the youtube algorithm and i'm trying i'm just trying to think of of some of the words that we use just to give you a quick little review so please please hit that like button because in that case i hope it will make the video go viral and just try not to be a troll don't be a troll don't be a hater show some love not just here but to anybody else on youtube because i think a lot of people work hard to to make content whether it's educational or entertaining and it's just good to just good to be positive i hope you have a wonderful day thanks so much for watching and i will see you next time

You are DEFINITELY FLUENT if you can change these.

If you can change these, then you're fluent. Now, of course, fluency means a lot of different things to different people. It's rather subjective. But what I will say is that if you can participate and you do well in today's lesson, this activity, then I think you are highly proficient when it comes to English because I am going to test your skills with both grammar and vocabulary. And the way that we're going to do this is with some sentence transformations. And basically, this is an exercise in which I am going to give you a sentence and then I'm going to give you a word, a key word, and I want you to use that word to make a new sentence that has the same meaning. So, you really got to think about both the grammar that you're using as well as the vocabulary. And I'm going to highlight certain words and phrases as we go through the lesson because those are the ones that I think are useful and they are more advanced idioms, phrases, words, and we'll have a look at them in just a moment. But if you'd like to access these lesson notes, you can click on the link down below in the description, join my email community. If you're already a part of it, I have sent them to you. But let me go ahead and introduce myself in case this is your first time here. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And this is a quiz lesson. So, I want you to participate. Write your answers in the chat in the comments. And let's begin with this one right here. Your brother must try to accept that he'll never be an author.

I want you to use the word terms to create this new sentence that has the same meaning as your brother must try to accept that he'll never be an author. Your brother must m the fact that he'll never be an author. So I'm giving you part of the sentence but I want you to use that word to finish the sentence so that it has the same meaning. And I see a lot of uh great answers. The the answer is to come must come to terms with your brother must come to terms with the fact that he'll never be an author. And this is a great phrase and that is the one that I want to highlight to come to terms with something. It just means that you need to accept something. And typically you're having to accept something that is difficult or painful or unpleasant and it's almost like you just have to face it. Yes, this is true and I have to come to terms with this reality that I that I would not like to accept. So, this is the sentence. Your brother must come to terms with the fact that he'll never be an author. The next one, what do you think? Again, I want you to write your answers in the chat in the comments. So the first sentence, I felt so relaxed at her apartment because her friends greeted me so warmly. I want you to use the word ease to complete the next sentence. Her friends m with the warmth of their greeting. How can we complete that sentence so that it has the same meaning as the first? I felt so relaxed at her apartment because her friends greeted me so warmly. [snorts] One thing I will say because I I want you to let me know how you did at the end of the lesson. When it comes to these, really try to think about the grammar. Think about the verb tense that you're using. Is it the past?

Is it the present? And also think about those small things like prepositions. Make sure you're using the right one because if there is a small mistake technically it would be it would be viewed as incorrect. So in this case uh we're talking about using the word ease and the answer her friends made me feel at ease with the warmth of their greeting. And again, you'd want to use the entirety of that phrase. Made me feel at ease. We're talking about something at the at in the past. So, this is the the phrase that I want to highlight. If you make someone feel at ease, you're just they're just they have no worries. There's no awkwardness.

You're able to to feel make someone feel relaxed. her friends made me feel at ease with the warmth of their greeting. Now, I I will say because I've seen it in the chat there, there may be more than one way to answer these because you can make someone feel at ease or you could put someone at ease. I see some of those responses. If you were to say, "Her friends put me at ease with the warmth of their greeting." I think that's okay. That would work as well because when it comes to English, there are sometimes a variety of answers. There are there's more than one verb that you could use. In this case, this both of them are collocations. To make someone feel at ease or to put someone at ease. I think either one works.

[snorts] How about this one? What do you think? My friend plays golf better than I do. I want you to use the word nearly. I am not m as my friend and create a sentence so that it has the same meaning as the the first one. So again, if you're just you're just joining we're we're doing some sentence transformations. I want you to use well I'm testing both your vocabulary and grammar skills in order to do this activity correctly. So, I want you to use the word nearly and create a sentence. My that means the same as my friend plays golf better than I do. The answer hopefully what you're thinking because I know these are a little longer. You got to type a little faster. I am not nearly as good at golf as my friend. You're not nearly as good as someone in this case. Excellent. I think a lot of you uh did pretty well with that one. So, I want you to think about that phrase. You're not nearly as good at something as someone. And you could use this to express this idea when you're stating that one is not as good as the other when you want to compare the two. And I think this is often done when talking about people and their ability to do something. You're like, "Wow, I'm I'm not nearly as good as my colleague at presenting or I'm not nearly as good as my brother at surfing." And you're not nearly as good at something as someone. It's a great expression to know. The next one, let's keep it rolling. I had no problems at all during my trip to Italy. I want you to use the word plan and complete the next sentence so that it has the same meaning.

Everything m during my trip to Italy. Again, sometimes there there may be another word or two you could tweak and it's also correct. I I will of course I'm giving you my answers as to how I would finish these sentences. Uh, I had no problems at all during my trip to Italy. The other thing that I feel like is a little more challenging for you guys right now is that I'm, you know, I'm giving you a little bit of time, but not too much. Some of these can really be a bit tricky and often it may take people, even native speakers, it may take them some time to figure it out. It is a little bit of a puzzle, which is one reason I really like these exercises. So, if we want to use the word plan and make it give it the same meaning as the first sentence, I could say, "Everything went according to plan during my trip to Italy." went according to plan. Excellent. I think people did uh pretty well with that one. So, the phrase that we're talking about to go according to plan in this case, this is finished. So, we're going to use it in the past. It went according to plan. Keep that in mind. Again, these are some of the small nuances. But if you say that something goes according to plan, it just means it happens in the way that that you intended. And you might say, "Oh, yeah. Everything went uh according to plan." Or, "I hope everything goes according to plan." So, this is a great phrase to learn to go according to plan.

How about this next one right here? The heavy downpour brought their picnic to an abrupt end. I want you to use the word cut. They had to m because of the heavy downpour. A lot of times I feel like you can you see that word, that keyword, and you know the phrase that needs to go in there and then it's just a matter of filling it in correctly. Like I said, using the correct grammar and it may be something as subtle as the verb tense. Instead of being in the present, it should be in the past. So these are things to keep in mind when you want to make sure that the meaning is exactly the same. So, we're going to use the word cut and create a new sentence that means the same thing as the heavy downpour brought their picnic to an abrupt end. What you could say is they had to cut their picnic short because of the heavy downpour. They had to cut their picnic short because of the heavy downpour. So again, though I you should include all of those words to cut something short. In this case, we're cutting their picnic short because of the heavy downpour. So if you are cutting something short or you need to cut short something, typically I feel like you're going to put that in between cut and short. to cut something short. It means you just have to you have to stop doing it before it's finished. Maybe you don't have time. You run out of time. In this case, something the heavy downpour caused them to cut their picnic short. They had to cut their picnic short because of the heavy downpour. Excellent.

What do you think? Do you think she was offended by what I said? I want you to use the word exception to come up with another question that really means pretty much the same thing. Do you think m remarks? Do you think m remarks? This one I I do believe is a little trickier because you need to come up with the phrase that I'm looking for with the word exception and then I'll give you a little bit of a hint. Keep in mind the preposition that you're going to follow it with. Do you think m remarks? We're going to use the word exception to come up with another question that means the same as do you think she was offended by what I said.

So the phrase I'll go ahead and and tell you the the answer and again if you if you got it right you can let me know by by hitting that like button. But this one is definitely a little trickier to to take exception. Once again we're talking about something in the past. Do you think she took exception to my remarks? Because this is the person who was speaking to take exception to something. So you're going to follow this with to take exception to something. In this case, do you think she took exception to my remarks? Because again, I was the one saying these things. So to when you take exception to something, this is a more advanced phrase. It means you are offended or something made you angry and you could uh take exception to something. Do you think she took exception to my remarks?

If you got that one, that that's that's impressive. Good job. Especially in the the limited amount of time that I'm giving you. The next one, there has been a sharp increase in the price of oil. I want you to use the word up the price of oil last month.

What do you think? What could you use? So, there has been a sharp increase in the price of oil. I want you to use up use a specific phrase so that it has the same meaning. This one uh there is I would say in order to make it more accurate, there is a specific verb that I would use. And I know that uh one verb that everybody's thinking of right now is not the one that I'm thinking of. You could use it, but remember we're talking about a sharp increase. So, in order to make it a little more accurate, what verb could we use? Now, you could say something goes up, in which case it increases, but there's another verb that you could use to really represent a sharp increase. And that's why I keep saying that it'll make it a little more accurate. So the price of oil in last month we could use the word up and complete this sentence. It has the same meaning as there has been a sharp increase in the price of oil or the price of oil has shot up in the last month. Of course I saw a lot of people put uh went up again using uh like the price of oil. In this case I would say you'd want to stick with the present perfect. So, I'd say it has gone up in the last month, it started in the past and it's continued to the present. But to be a little more accurate, because if you say something has gone up in the last month, that just tells me it it has increased. I don't really know by how much. But in the first sentence, because it's a sharp increase, that's why I would say that shot up is a bit more accurate. Then you know that it is a sharp increase. the price of oil has shot up in the last month. And and hopefully as I've, you know, going through and explaining this, it makes sense the difference between saying something has gone up versus something has shot up. So if using shot up is just going to uh allow you to be a little more specific in this um context. So if you say that something shoots up, there are multiple meanings for this. I'm sure you could probably think of some other meanings, but the one in our example, the meaning is to increase very quickly in size or amount. The price of oil has shot up in the last month. A lot of times you're going to hear this phrase when people are talking about prices like wow prices have really shot up over the the last year. The these prices keep you know they just you know shooting up. So again shoot up has multiple meanings but in this case we're talking about increasing quickly and really like almost like all of a sudden maybe you weren't expecting it. How about uh this sentence? The company takes complaints seriously. I'm not giving you a lot. I want you to use the word saying to complete this sentence. It by the company it by the company. So there are a lot of there are quite a few missing words in here. there's an expression that I want to highlight or a phrase that and then and then you could complete the rest of the sentence. So, one thing to give you a little bit of a hint, the company takes complaints seriously.

This sentence is uh the active this is the active voice. The next sentence, well, now I'm [laughter] now I am giving you more of a hint. You see that by the company that is a bit of an indicator that you're going to write a sentence in the passive. Now, so you got to think of the expression and then finish writing the sentence in the passive. And I see that uh people are kind of getting get you got the expression, you got the phrase that especially the one that I want to highlight. But then how would you complete the rest of the sentence? It goes without saying. That is the phrase that uh we're talking about using this word. And if we want to complete the rest of the sentence using the passive, I would say it goes without saying that complaints are taken seriously by the company. This is a sentence in the passive and the opposite would be the active. the company takes complaints seriously or it goes without saying that complaints are taken seriously by the company. So if you want to say or use the phrase it goes without saying that is the one that I want to highlight. Now what I will say also is again this is a transformation exercise. Uh it's used a lot on proficiency exams. Most of the time you're going to use the active as you can see that it's a lot more concise. it's a little easier to just follow understand yeah the company takes complaints seriously but you may use the passive in certain instances um uh for example like you want to highlight the um actor in this case. So it goes without saying that complaints are taken seriously by the company, not the actor, but uh in this case complaints. You may you may use the passive, but there it is a lot more it's a lot wordier. So I don't think it is as often used. But a great phrase whenever you want to say that something is obvious, you could say it goes without saying. A lot of times I think people may use this phrase when they want to share their opinion about something and you want to say that well your thought or your opinion you think it's obvious. Well, it goes without saying that we should do this or it goes without saying that this is probably going to happen. So in this case we're talking about it goes without saying that complaints are taken seriously by the company. He became famous but it cost him his privacy. What do you think? His rise of his privacy. I want you to use the word expense.

I think now that you see the keyword, you could probably think about the phrase that would go in there. And then it's just a matter you you know the vocabulary. Then it's just a matter of figuring out the grammar that would go uh with it. So what do you think? His rise of his privacy. We're using the word expense. So our first original sentence, he became famous, but it cost him his privacy. His rise of his privacy. So I think you know expense like at the expense we're often going to follow that with of at the expense of something. One other word that you would need to change in there in order to make it the same famous.

We're going to change that word and instead we're going to use his rise to fame. His rise to fame came at the expense of his privacy. his rise to fame came at the expense of his privacy. And if you say that well to something, you know, comes at the expense of something else, this is a uh a way that well, you know, it embarrasses or harms someone or something that you're you're basically losing something. And that's what makes it a little harmful or sometimes embarrassing. something comes at the expense of something else. Like in our example, his rise to fame came at the expense of his privacy. What do you think? I think for the you guys are you guys are are doing pretty good. I think especially identifying the vocabulary, these uh different phrases that I want to highlight and then the other tricky part is using the grammar so that the sentence has the same meaning. Jennifer has had a cold since Thanksgiving. Jennifer's had a cold since Thanksgiving. This This is also a little trickier. Jennifer M at Thanksgiving. I want you to use the word over and come up with another sentence that has the same meaning as Jennifer has had a cold since Thanksgiving. That's probably the more common sentence you would use in this situation. And yeah, it's a little more concise. Yeah, Jennifer's had a cold since Thanksgiving. But of course, there are other ways that you can say it, such as the one that I'm about to share with you. So, I feel like again, you're you probably could identify the phrase that I want to teach you. We're talking about over to get over something. But we're not going we're gonna you got to use the grammar because you can see has had we're talking about the present perfect started in the past. It's continued to

now. And I would say Jennifer has not or hasn't gotten over the cold she caught at Thanksgiving. Now you could say gotten or got. Either one works. Both are used as the past participle. So I could say Jennifer hasn't got over the cold she caught at Thanksgiving. That works as well, but typically but we are going to use that u the present perfect. And in this case, we're using the negative. She has not gotten over the cold she caught at Thanksgiving. [snorts] All right. So to get over something, I feel like this is a phrase you probably know. I think it's pretty common. You are, you know, you're talking about getting better after an illness or you're feeling better after something that has made you unhappy. A lot of times it's used in the context of being sick, like in this example, Jennifer hasn't gotten over the cold she caught at Thanksgiving. Other times that you may use this phrasal verb is when talking about relationships. There's somebody goes through a breakup and say, "Oh, yeah. I haven't gotten over my ex."

And that is another common time when you may come across or people could use this phrasal verb, but the meaning is the same. You're trying to get better after an illness or just something that has made you unhappy. So, this is a review of the different phrases that I wanted to highlight. As we went through this, I told you we were testing both vocabulary and grammar. And if you want to get these lesson notes, check out that link down below in the description. I think these are not just useful phrases. I think they're fairly common and they are more a little more advanced, but they're a great way to be a little more precise, to be more descriptive, and also just develop that natural way of speaking or writing. Now, for the moment of truth, I'm just I'm always curious. All right. Th this is not uh this is not a real standard by any means, but I I just want to to know what what do you think? I'd love to get your feedback. How did you do on the quiz?

LESSON 734 OF 749

You are FLUENT in Thanksgiving if you can answer these

You are fluent in Thanksgiving if you can answer these questions. So, I have a vocabulary quiz for you. And if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary, then I would ask that you please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And I look, let me address the first question or first thing that you may be thinking, which is, Wes, I don't celebrate Thanksgiving. And you know, if that's the case, that's perfectly okay. This is a popular family holiday in the United States, which is where I am from. And I you can think of this as a little bit of a cultural lesson as well. Even though some of the vocabulary that I'm going to present and go over it can be used in a variety of other context and situations as well. And I promise I do I say this every lesson, but I promise that you will learn something new. And if this is your first time here, let me know. Write to me in the chat, in the comments. Tell me where you're from. I just love hearing from you guys. The other thing I want to mention is that if you would like a copy of the lesson notes that you see right here, check out the link down in the description. You can join our email community. And if you are already a part of the email community, check your inbox because I have sent them to you or at least they're on the way. I'll go ahead and throw that link in the chat as well. So, let's just go ahead and get started with some collocations and idioms. If you're unfamiliar, collocations are words that are frequently used together. So, the first question that I have for you, and I want you all to participate because this is interactive English after all. It's all about you guys participating in these lessons. I want you to fill in the blank.

Uh, who would like to m the turkey? Write your answer in the comments in the chat. I already see a lot of familiar names in the chat. Great to see everyone. I'll try to give some shout outs as I go through this. Uh, good to see some members. Oh, Lai, uh, Takaya or Melinda. Excellent. Rafella. Perfect. So, what do you think? Who would like to the turkey? I I'll go ahead and tell you that the answer is not cut because some of you might be thinking, "Oh, okay. Cut the turkey." Which again, I don't want to say that's incorrect. But I'm looking for a different verb. I'm looking for a more precise verb that's often used when talking about turkey because you're going to I don't want to say the verb, but you're going to create like these slices. So, this is a verb that you would use in this context when talking about turkey because yeah, everybody Thanksgiving, this is like the one thing that everybody thinks about. It's turkey, turkey, turkey. Great job. Uh, nice, Julia. The answer is carve. Who would like to carve the turkey? Now, of course, there are other verbs that you could fill in that would actually they would fit if I saw some answers like who would like to, you know, eat the turkey, cut the turkey, uh, cook the turkey, stuff the turkey. There there are, of course, many different verbs that you could put in there. In this case, I I was looking for carve, and I mentioned before that, you know, not don't think about cut. In this case, we're going to use carve. Who would like to carve the turkey? But I like everybody's energy and enthusiasm and going through and answering these questions. it's a little more difficult.

Uh but let me I'll read this to you. Thanksgiving is a family holiday and some people may homage to their ancestors and those who came before them. Now, of course, not some families do this. And the key word in there is homage. I will tell you the meaning of that after. And this is a collocation. If you're talking about homage, which verb are you going to use? You're going to m homage to their ancestors and those who came before them. I'll go ahead and this is not the most common phrase in the world. It is something that again you may come across it during certain events or holidays. In this case, we're talking about Thanksgiving.

And wow, you guys uh you're spot on with this one. To pay homage. Well done. Uh Chestnut, Tom, Raphaela, Jerry, uh or Melinda. Nice. Excellent. W I thought I thought this one would be a little more uh challenging. So I I gave you the meaning down here to pay homage is you're showing deep respect often praise that you would show to a a person or God and you pay homage. So it does apply to this situation if you're paying homage to your ancestors. You say what you're thankful for, you're grateful for at least at Thanksgiving and you're yeah you're paying homage to those who came before you. Well done. Well done everyone. Bonus points for you.

At Thanksgiving, we should count our This is another It's a phrase. I I'll go ahead and say, you know, it's like a it's a collocation. I don't think it's an idiom necessarily because I think the meaning is kind of like what it says. So, in this case, it's a common phrase. This is one that you you again, you don't have to just use it at Thanksgiving. I think it fits in with this holiday and what people tend to do around Thanksgiving and it's kind of embodies that Thanksgiving spirit. And I think this is a phrase that many of you have heard of before. You may hear it when watching movies or TV shows. We should count our And once again, I see you guys are on top of this. The answer is blessings. To count our blessings or count one's blessings. Just make sure you are going to use that possessive adjective. Count my blessings. Count your blessings. Well done, Lai Angela. Uh, nice. So again, I

I gave you I went ahead and gave you the meaning. But if you you say, look, you know, we should count our blessings. We should be grateful for the things that we have, which again is part of Thanksgiving. This is what some families will do and they, you know, they they say thanks for the things that they have been blessed with. Here is another phrase that is relevant to Thanksgiving because it is a food holiday. We're we're going to talk about food in just a moment. But again, you could use this phrase when I I think it would really come up anytime there is a gathering, a larger number of people who are going to get together and they're going to eat together, whether breakfast, lunch, or dinner. You may ask this question, who is going to m the table? You see the picture of the silverware, that knife and fork. That is a little bit of a hint. So in this case, I'm basically asking you which verb is going to complete this question to m the table. Wow, you guys. Uh this is good. This is good. You guys you guys are definitely advanced. The qu the answer which many of you knew is set the table. Well done, Whitney. Uh, Ratman, Takayo, Tom, Muhammad, uh, Sai, nice, good to see you. Good. Excellent. Just trying to give some shout outs as we go through this. So, when you set the table, somebody would go around and they put down like the napkin, the fork, the spoon, the knife, and again, it's a ph it's a phrase that you would typically use if you're talking about a group of people. It could just be four or more, but in this case, somebody is going to set the table and everybody will eat together. Definitely something you would hear at Thanksgiving. Now, this I'm going to I'm trying to make it a little more difficult. And I will go ahead and say that this is an idiom and it's not directly linked to Thanksgiving. There is a word in this idiom that is definitely connected with Thanksgiving. That's as much of a hint as I'm going to give you. The key word in here would be quit. I'm going to quit. I tried to show there are two blanks there. So, this is a phrase. I've gone ahead and said it's an idiom. A key word is quit. And I would say that with this idiom that is a collocation to quit. And again, I think when once I show you the answer, if if you weren't sure, I I know you can see some of the answers in the chat. I think, okay, yeah, I think I've heard this before. Somebody's pushing something away. They're trying to quit and they're going to quit cold turkey. Nice. Excellent. Uh Manuel, Angela, excellent snowflakes. So, if you say that you're going to quit cold turkey or that somebody quits something cold turkey, they stop suddenly and completely. And often you end up using this idiom when referring to like a drug, whether it's alcohol or cigarettes. I feel like those are the two most common things that people would talk about trying to quit and quit cold turkey suddenly and completely. All right, this is another one that Okay, let's let's just read it. Moving across the country allowed me to meet my future wife. It turned out to be a

Now, I just gave one line there. It is more than one word. This is a phrase. It's also a phrase or it's an idiom that you could use apart from Thanksgiving. any situation that would fit this description. So, think about what's going on. You, this person moved across the country. Perhaps they didn't want to. They were a little nervous. It wasn't They were unsure about moving across the country, but they met their future wife. If we're looking at this picture, they they had a family and they're very happy. So, it turned out to be a what? So, I haven't seen the answer yet. So, I'll give you a little more time. I I see some people are like blessing.

Keep going. I told you this is a phrase, not just one one word. Blessing. And then what are you going to follow that with? And excellent, Ava or Melinda. A blessing in disguise. So, of course, if you said something turned out to be a blessing, that that works. that that fits this context, this situation. But if we're talking about a blessing in disguise, this is an idiom. I gave you the meaning down there. It's a misfortune that eventually has good results. And that's why I tried to set this up that well maybe this person didn't want to move across the country, but then this good thing happened and there were good results. The future wife had a family. It was a blessing in disguise. And once again, you could use this to describe a variety of situations in which some unfortunate situation eventually has good results, a blessing in disguise. So, let's in case you're hungry, let's get to the the next part and talk about food. Because, of course, Thanksgiving is a food. It's a family holiday, but I'd say it's also a food holiday. This is something else that people think about when they hear uh Thanksgiving. So, what I want to do now, and I want to test your food knowledge, so it it's still vocabulary, but it's uh also well, you you'll see. I'm going to show you a picture of some food, and I just want you to tell me what it is. And again, I want you to be precise. So, here is your first one. This is something that you'll you would see on the table uh at many Thanksgiving gatherings. And I I imagine you know the the the food, but what is the name specifically of this? Okay. So, what what do you think? It's first time that I'm live.

All right, Daniela, welcome. Awesome. First time live. Perfect. So, I know that you I'm going to go ahead and tell you like you need to give me more than just corn. So, what else would you follow it? This is corn m the so kind of it's it's four words and one thing keep in mind that preposition. So, it's not corn in but corn on. Corn on what? Corn on the cob. Corn on the cob. So again, this is I was looking for the that full phrase, corn on the cob. And yeah, this is something that I think many people eat at Thanksgiving. So here is the next one. And again, I think most families would eat this at Thanksgiving.

Of course, you could eat this in, you know, other times of the year, but I just don't think it's as often. I I don't think it's as often prepared. So, basically, just I I can go ahead and try to describe this to you. It's like you have um bread mixed in with some vegetables, mostly I think like celery and onions and this bread crust, and it's baked together. It's still it's soft. It's delicious. And this well done, Lai uh Ratman fatty acid. I love the name stuffing. So Thanksgiving, you're going to eat corn on the cob. You're going to have some stuffing. And of course, you're going to have some of this as well. I think this one I I think some of these food items you're familiar with, maybe you forgot the name, but definitely if you're talking if you know somebody from the US and you're having a conversation about Thanksgiving, food is something that you would you may definitely talk about. So, it's good to know some of these words and phrases and you could ask somebody, hey, you know, do you guys prepare a lot of corn on the cob? Are you going to have who's going to make the stuffing?

you you you end up using a lot of what what is this? This is something that I've noticed because I've somebody who's, you know, lived outside of the US, I feel like it's not as common in many other places that I've lived. Unfortunately, I'd really love this. And excellent. Well done. Uh Lai Raphaella gravy. We're talking about gravy. I think in uh the US gravy something that uh Americans love. And you put gravy on the turkey. You put gravy on the stuffing. You can put graving on not on the corn on the cob generally. No. I maybe somebody does, but gravy is something. Yeah. You're going to use it. This would be I guess your your dessert.

So, of course, you can look at this picture and you see that, okay, this is a piece of pie. And of course, I want you to tell me what kind of pie is this right here. Think about Thanksgiving, the fall season. Don't I don't want to give it away too much, but what what would you think about in the fall? We just had Halloween and at least in the US they did and I think many other countries are starting to participate in Halloween. But of course at Halloween a big thing are those pumpkins and at Thanksgiving you are going to have some pumpkin pie. All right, pumpkin pie. Well done. All right, everybody uh did really well on that one. Excellent.

Okay, here is this is actually one of this is something I look forward to at Thanksgiving. I really enjoy this food right here. And what what is it? And this again, every everybody's different. I feel like growing up, this is something that really at least I would only have around Thanksgiving. It's not something that I would end up eating throughout the year. So, what do you think? Looking at the picture, you can probably tell that this is some type of bread. And I'll go ahead and give you that. What kind of bread? And you see that that slice of butter on top there. And you're not going to put butter on top like it's a little hat. It's just kind of showing you yes, there is butter that you would use when preparing this bread.

Excellent. Lye Gloria cornbread. Cornbread is also very popular at Thanksgiving. Kind of tried to run through the most important things apart from turkey which I think you know which we we were looking at a turkey at the very beginning. All right, this this last one is more challenging and I just wanted to throw this one in there because maybe this is a new word. It's not a word that you're going to go out and use that you're probably going to come across that much, but again, I wanted to to try to throw something new each and every lesson. So, let me explain the looking at this picture. What would you call like this whole thing? This mixture uh you you see this there there's food the you know the vegetables in there. What would you call that?

All right. And okay perfect. So I think you many of you heard of the uh Whitney Angela Lai nice a cornicopia a cornicopia it refers to that really like I said this picture that symbol it's like a symbol of nourishment and you have that hornshaped container that is overflowing with maybe produce flowers nuts and it's a cornucopia. So, like I said, this is not a word that you're just going to go out and end up using in everyday conversation. So, let's let me make it a little more challenging. I told you this is a it's a vocabulary lesson, but it's also a cultural lesson. So, let's kind of move in to the cultural aspect of this and talk a little bit about the history and some of the traditions at Thanksgiving.

So the first thing we'll see what how much you know about this American holiday. And I know some of you again people who follow me watch this channel actually live in the US or they're celebrating Thanksgiving or maybe some of you have celebrated Thanksgiving with someone before. What do you think? English settlers who traveled to America and established a colony in Plymouth Ma Massachusetts were called the what kind of leading into the first Thanksgiving and thinking about well the people that were a part of that. So when you think of Thanksgiving, especially the history, this is a word that would come up. And this these are the people that they may refer to, these English settlers. They traveled across uh to America to the new world. They established a colony at Plymouth, Massachusetts, and they were called, well done, Helina Lairenina, the pilgrims. So th this would be these uh settlers the name of this group who established this colony. Excellent. Rafella um Angela. So we we have the pilgrims Melinda Suma. Nice. I'm just going to keep throwing some shout outs in there and let's let's fast forward.

They arrive in the new world and the event referred to as the first Thanksgiving. I'm putting it in quotes because it's not formally established like which was actually the first one. This is considered to be the first Thanksgiving was celebrated by the pilgrims and the Wampanoag people. The Wampanoag was the um Native American tribe that was in the area and it was celebrated by the pilgrims and the Wampanoag people in November of what year? So, I've given you four options down there. 1521, 1621, 1721, or 1821. I think just thinking about the history and I think you could probably kind of put this together which year I'm talking about. So, the answer, all right, you guys, excellent is November of 1621. This is when the pilgrims and the Wampanoag came together and they celebrated the first Thanksgiving in November. All right.

Then let's continue. And this actually I think this one's a little more challenging. Not necessarily. I it's it's part of Thanksgiving again the history because we're talking about the pilgrims and the Wampanoag and people are like well how did they you know did people really get along back then? Well, this is somebody who is in the middle of that as to whether or not they got along, who was kind of the bridge between the colonist and um the some of the Native American tribes. So, this person acted as an interpreter and guide to the pilgrim settlers at Plymouth during their first winter in the new world. I've given you four choices. Pocahontas, Geronimo, Saka Jawia, and Squanto.

Again, I feel like maybe you could process of elimination because I'm sure maybe you've heard of some of these before. So, let me let me just kind of run through this. So, Geronimo was an Apache warrior much later on. All right, that's I think like the 1800s something. Saka Jawia was an interpreter, but Saka Jawia was an interpreter for Lois and Clark that expedition um which also came after Pocahontas is maybe you've seen the the Disney movie. Pocahontas, this would actually be like kind of I don't want to say the closest, but let me explain. So, Pocahontas was a uh I I guess you would say like a tribal princess of sorts. She married a a colonist actually at one point traveled to Europe and in Europe she crossed paths with Squanto. Squanto was somebody who was enslaved taken to Europe. I think they crossed paths with Pocahontas. So these two actually lived around the same time and Squanto then returned to the new world as an interpreter guide was kind of the person bridging part of that relationship between the pilgrims and the Wampanoag. And so the answer is that's a very long explanation for Squanto being the answer to this question. So this is the the person who played a role in bridging that relationship. Here's another one that I think is pretty challenging. Which president made Thanksgiving Day a holiday? And I'm showing you this picture of Mount Rushmore because it's one of these. It's one of these guys right here. That's the answer. So, basically, it's another multiplechoice question. One of these presidents made Thanksgiving Day a holiday. We have George Washington. I'll just go in order. George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Theodore Roosevelt, or Abraham Lincoln. Which which one of those? So, I'll give you another hint.

This is somebody who served as president at a time when it was really important to try and bring the country together. And they made Thanksgiving Day a holiday. Before that, there were different like Thanksgiving Day proclamations as far as making a proclamation about this day. But this president wanted to bring the country together or needed to and they made Thanksgiving Day a holiday. Not that this was the thing that actually brought the country together, but during this during this time there was a lot of division. And me just saying that I imagine uh you know that the answer, yes, excellent, is Lincoln. Good job, Rafella Lai. Uh, Suma, Angela, Manuel.

Nice. So, Abraham Lincoln is the first president that actually made Thanksgiving Day a holiday. And I believe that when Abraham Lincoln did this, he had originally, I think, said it's going to be um the last Thursday in November. And then over time, it's it's kind of changed. Now Thanksgiving is of course celebrated on the fourth Thursday in November. That is when everybody recognizes and has this holiday. Okay, the last one. This is more recent.

Let's we started uh you know definitely from the very beginning and now coming up to today a couple of traditions. This is again partly my opinion, but they're on Thanksgiving Day. Now, there are two things that people may watch on TV on Thanksgiving Day, and those two things are the what and what. Now, that doesn't mean many people don't even turn on the TV uh Thanksgiving Day, but if somebody is going to turn on the TV, probably they may watch one of these things or maybe they end up watching both of them. What do you think? So, they're two different things. I want to see if anybody can kind of think, Vivian, you're on the right track.

You're you're definitely on the right track. So, the two things that are odd, Fatty, I said again, you're kind of on the right track. So, the the Super Bowl is not until uh later. The Super Bowl is going to be uh next year. So, right now, we're I think about like at this time like week 11, week 12 in the football season. So, you you're on the right track because it's not the Super Bowl because that's the final game of the season. But in general, I would say football. Love the videos of Wes. Yes, that would be that would be awesome, too. Uh, love that answer. Lilly football in general because the season is still going on, but it's the fourth again the fourth Thursday of November.

There are professional football games on Thursday and they have two different games. It's kind of a I guess you could say it's maybe become a tradition, a sport tradition in the United States. So people are either they may watch football or in the morning they may watch the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. So yes, parade is a correct answer. If you want to be specific, the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. And the reason I'm listing that is because I feel like Macy's has been I think sponsoring this parade for a long time, ever since I was a kid. And it's basically that that is the parade. So you're right if you said, you know, football parade, that's perfect. But those are two things that people may watch um on Thanksgiving Day. Either one or both or perhaps just nothing. So again, I hopefully you learned one or two new things about this holiday. Here is a list of uh just a little bit of review. I I feel like the collocations and idioms part of this may be a little more relevant because these are things that you may actually use in conversation if you're talking about setting the table or we should count our blessings or something as a blessing in disguise. Of course, what I'd like to do before you before you head out, I'd like to see how well you did on this quiz.

So again, I'm going to put in a poll. quiz? All right, let's uh Oh, whoops. Not a Q&A. That's not the one that I want to do. I want to do a quiz. Okay, so I I'm trying to think of some creative things to say. Um I Okay, I I'm just say I did great. Um not bad. And let's see. Uh the last one, I'm such a turkey. Like if you call yourself turkey, okay, that's not good. And that would tell me that okay, maybe you need to study a little more about Thanksgiving. Not that it's necessary because like I said, this is a a popular American holiday. So once again, I know many of you, you don't celebrate Thanksgiving, which is fine. It's more of a cultural lesson, especially vocabulary that you may come across if you're you're listening to somebody talk about Thanksgiving or you're in a conversation and people are celebrating Thanksgiving or maybe you just happen to be traveling to the US in November and it's going to be Thanksgiving and yeah, you could maybe use or come across some of these words. So, it seems like a little bit of a mix as far as how well everybody did it on the the quiz, but I think most people seem to be in that not bad camp. But I always, as always, I really thank you for participating in these lessons. That is what it's all about. That's the most important thing. And again, if you want to get a copy of these notes, check out that link down below in the description. Join our email community. And from time to time, I will send you some of these useful resources whenever I do these live lessons.

Uh, well, thank you so much. Uh, I want to just give some more shout outs. Safella, good to see you. Uh, Taya, good to see you, too. I'll see you soon. Uh, Manuel, Julia, Ava, Lai, uh, Angela, thanks for being here. Fatty acid. Um, trying to think. Okay. I I I guess I probably should should wrap things up. So, oh, I can use some of these, too. Like, oh, all right. I can put up some hearts and smiley faces and All right. I just learned that now. Perfect. Okay. Maybe I'll start taking advantage of that. Anyway, that's neither here nor there. Hope you have a wonderful Thanksgiving if you happen to be celebrating this holiday. If not, I just hope you have a wonderful uh Thursday.

Enjoy the upcoming weekend and I will see you soon, very soon in the future for another lesson. So long. See you then.

LESSON 735 OF 749

You are obviously fluent in English if you can understand these

I imagine that you want to achieve some level of English fluency and I have one question for you are you working hard or hardly working [Music] I thought it was funny it's just a joke and that's what I want to talk to you about in today's lesson and if you enjoy jokes and laughing while learning English please subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English which is all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and right now I want to test you to see how far you've come along when it comes to English fluency as you probably know jokes are brief stories observations or thoughts that have a setup followed by a punch line that creates laughter and this is an important phrase when talking about jokes and I have quite a bit of vocabulary in this lesson but a punch line is the last part of a joke or story that explains what previously happened or explains what makes it funny so what does this have to do with English fluency well when you understand jokes in another language which it really shows that you have a deep understanding not only of vocabulary grammar or pronunciation but other cultural aspects as well let's begin with wordplay and there are many types of jokes that use wordplay puns one-liners double entendres we'll talk about all of them that question that I asked you at the very beginning uses wordplay are you working hard or hardly working and even though the phrase is working hard and hardly working they sound similar they're really opposites and the key words are those adverbs hard and hardly because hard is an adverb that means you put a lot of effort into something you work hard you play hard while hardly this adverb of degree means barely so this is a question that I would sometimes jokingly ask students sometimes they would get it sometimes they wouldn't but it's a fun question to play around with let's look at some more examples and we'll begin with puns and this is an amusing use of a word or phrase that has more than one meaning or just sounds like another word or phrase are you ready here we go what did the duck say when the waiter gave him the check put it on my bill okay so in this case we're talking about a duck bill versus Bill meaning check and that joke may seem a little cheesy which is an adjective that you could use to describe a joke that's low quality but I I have more the next one I used to hate facial hair but then it grew on me that may also be a little cheesy facial hair can grow on you but if something grows on you you can use that to say that you get use to it let's let's now listen to some and this well first one's from Doc talk and I will put links to these sources Down Below in the description all right let's let's listen to this I got fired from the bank today a woman asked me to check her balance so I pushed her okay so we're talking about the word balance if you're checking a balance at the bank then you just want to know how much money is in the account but balance could also refer to your ability to stand vertically and yes he pushed her all right here's another one my dog accidentally ate a whole bag of Scrabble tiles so I took him to the vet no word yet actually I like this joke if you are not familiar with the game Scrabble then it may not make much sense because when you play Scrabble you use letters to try to form words so he takes the dog to the vet and when he says no word yet it kind of makes you think like the vet is trying to play the game and create a word but no word yet could also be used to say that you just haven't been given any updates or you haven't heard any information the next type of joke that I'm going to tell you and it uses wordplay one-liners these are well jokes funny remarks or answers that are really just one sentence not always but often and the first one-liner is I haven't slept for 10 days because that would be way too long so in this case if somebody says they haven't slept for a period of time that means well they have not been sleeping it's not a good thing but you could also interpret this sentence as meaning somebody's not going to do this in the future because yeah sleeping for 10 days that's just a crazy idea and I know I'm explaining these even though you probably get it but I'm not going to explain this next one are you ready I Don't Like Cocaine I just like the way it smells if you're familiar with cocaine I'm sure you get the joke I want to listen to some more one-liners and this is from we got the chocolates again links down in the description here we go did you hear that the Dalai Lama has been arrested for gambling apparently he likes Tibet this one's a little cheesy the Dalai Lama gambling and the the word play is the word Tibet because it sounds like the phrase to bet to bet money to gamble as opposed to the place to bet uh here here's another one my mate went for a colonoscopy last week caveman one-liner hi there I'm fully erect I actually think this both meanings are pretty obvious the one you're kind of standing erect and the other one I'm not gonna talk about the next two I think are especially funny because these are actual news headlines like this one A-Rod goes deep Wang hurts so this is referring to baseball but again it has well uh another interpretation that is sexual and pretty ridiculous but not as ridiculous as this news headline which is uh this this is pretty bad Julia Roberts finds life and her holes get better with age so this headline has a typo instead of the word holes they meant to say roles in talking about her roles in movies but they didn't say roles and because of that it's rude inappropriate sexual all of the above now we can't talk about jokes without talking about satire which is the humorous use of irony or sarcasm to ridicule people ideas institutions as well as social structures and I think one of the best sources for satire is an American newspaper called the onion and I love the onion and I'm from the United States and many of the articles are related to the US so some of these jokes may be a bit more difficult to understand because apart from vocabulary it also involves current events and culture so let's look at some news headlines new Community Health program teaches low-income Americans to ignore symptoms so I think this is uh in two parts taking a shot at the American Health Care system which is a bit of a mess as well as commenting on how lower income people are just not treated well here's the next one nerd who spent the summer getting into shape quickly discovers bully worked out twice as hard all right so this is these stories are not true they're they're made up but it's it's pretty funny here's a political one Trump turns self into Atlanta strip club and I think this is a current event but I think it's funny because I could actually see Trump heading over to a strip club in Atlanta but the paper makes fun of all politicians new poll finds most Americans see Biden as too old to effectively lead Congo line so taking a shot at Biden's age but also if you're unfamiliar with a Congo Line This is a dance that I think is associated with older people they form that line and the person in front is the leader but yeah Biden he's a bit old Elon Musk sues Mark Zuckerberg for being better at profiting off someone else's idea okay maybe that's true and no way to prevent this says only nation where this regularly happens commenting on the gun violence in the U. S and people constantly oh there was no way to prevent this really so these are great examples of satire You Gotta Love The Onion again link down in the description and if you understood most or all of these jokes well then I would say that you are pretty fluent in English and if you did understand most are all of them let me know down in the comments you can even tell me which one you thought was the funniest I hope you found this lesson useful and humorous if you did please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

You have certainly achieved fluency if you can change these. | Advanced Grammar (B2 - C2)

You are fluent if you can change these. And I want to just let you know that if you are someone who enjoys developing your overall English fluency, please hit that like button, subscribe. That way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. So in this lesson, I want to test your English fluency. Now the first thing that I want to say is that fluency is very subjective. I have met many learners over the years that I think they have achieved fluency but maybe they don't feel that way. So just keep that in mind because often when you talk about things like uh the IELTS or TOEFL instead of fluency they use words like proficiency as far as your ability. So keep that in mind that fluency is subjective. But yes, I think that if you can change all of these sentences and transform them, then yeah, you've certainly achieved fluency. So this is what we're going to do. We're going to take sentence one and we're going to change it into sentence number two. Like changing from a caterpillar into a butterfly. So this is an exercise that is called uh keyword transformation. So basically we I'm giving you one sentence and you need to change it so that it has the same meaning. You want to change it to another sentence that has the same meaning as the first one. And as we go through this I am going to start with some sentences that are more at the B2 level. This is a a level of upper intermediate proficiency and then we'll move to a C2 level C1 level and then onto a C2 level. Some of them may be a little easier than others, but in general, I think they they fall within these categories. Let's start with the first one. Some B2 sentence transformations, and you have a better idea as I show you this. So, you have this first sentence up here. This train should have arrived five minutes ago. I want you to use this word. This is the key word supposed.

And I want you to put it in this sentence right here and complete it. So what I would say is that you can write your answer in the comments, write your answer in the chat. This is interactive English. I want you to participate in the lesson and yeah, let me know as I as I go through this. I will try to uh you know give some shoutouts here and there. So this train is late. It m five minutes ago. Okay, I want you to change it. So the first sentence, this train should have arrived five minutes ago. This is like our caterpillar. Let's change it into the butterfly down here. This train is late. It m five minutes ago. There are there are different ways to do this.

So I'm going to give you one response. There may be other ways that are also correct. So, I don't want you to think that there is only one answer for all of these. It really depends on the sentence. Um, excellent, uh, Angela, uh, Rose. So, the answer I'll go ahead and show you because I have quite a few of these that I want to get through. This train is late. It was supposed to arrive five minutes ago. Supposed to do something. It was supposed to arrive five minutes ago. So both of these sentences have a similar meaning. Let's go ahead and look at the next one. So our first sentence, I regret not studying more for the exam. I want you to use the word only and include it in this other sentence. If m for the exam.

So, generally when I give you these blanks, there's probably anywhere from three to five or six words that are missing. And I really like these exercises because I I say fluency because it's really testing both your grammar and your vocabulary. And I think this is important, your grammar and vocabulary. I see people putting in uh um some different answers for the last one. Excellent. Good to see you. Loi, Vicky, Gustav, welcome. Love seeing members uh join these live streams. So, what do you think? I regret not studying more for the exam. I want you to use the word only if more for the exam. All right. Nice. Li um tal missing one word in there. Only remember you got to include only. Nice, Julia.

So, the answer, if only I had studied more for the exam. All right, so you regret something. You could express that like, oh, if only I had done this thing. That is another way of expressing regret. If only I had studied more for the exam. Excellent. Okay, the next one. Our spending will have to be reduced next year. I want you to take this again same meaning and put it in the next sentence. We will have m are spending next year. What do you think? So I actually think the again the meaning is the same but I think this is probably more commonly used if you want to express this thought or idea. At least that's the the way that I would say it uh in this case. So you got to uh you know we got to reduce our spending next year. How are we going to say the

a lot of times people would talk about this with like eating something and you want to cut back on your sugar intake or something like that. I think cut back works, but uh I think cut back on would probably be better in this context. Again, I like to I find uh some things that I would like to change as I go through these lessons.

The next one, I went for a walk. All right, he said. So, I put those quotation marks in there to show that this is direct speech. Somebody is actually saying this uh statement. I went for a walk. Okay. He said, I want you to change this and use the word said to complete this other sentence, which I'll go ahead and tell you uh is is indirect. So, we're changing something from direct speech to indirect speech. And I want you to think about how you would do this. And of course, you're going to use um the word said. This is a little more grammar because you need to think about the verb that is being used in direct speech and then how you are going to use that when you change it to a sentence that is indirect speech. I went for a walk. He said would be like changing this to the following. All right. See some good answers in there. He said he had gone for a walk. So in general if you say something in the present then then when you move that to indirect speech it will change to the past. In this case the sentence using the past I went for a walk. We're then going to use the past perfect. He said he had gone for a walk. And that is a sentence in indirect speech. Great job. I see some uh good answers. All right. We're going to we're going to start to make this a little more difficult. So now I have some more, but I would say this is more at the C1 level. So this is an advanced level of proficiency.

And let's uh let's look at the first one. The company has a good reputation in the community. All right. The company has a good reputation in the community. You can read that sentence. I think you understand it. I want you to use the word highly and complete this sentence down here so that it has the same meaning changing a caterpillar into a butterfly. So the company m of in the community I think a word that would give you a hint would be that word of. So you can try to use that to think of other phrases that you could use with highly to express the same thing. The company has a good reputation in the community.

The company of in the community. This one I would say is also again part vocabulary thinking of what phrase would you use so that it has the same meaning. So if we want to use the word highly so that it has the same meaning, you could say that the company is highly thought of in the community. If you think highly of someone or something, it would be like saying, well, yes, this person or this company has a good reputation. People think highly of this person or in this case the company to think highly of someone. Excellent. Nice. Um tal pela. Perfect. Uh good. Let's keep going. And the next C1 sentence transformation is right here. Yesterday, I informed my boss in writing that I would be leaving the company. I want you to use the word notice when completing the next sentence so that it has the same meaning. And I think maybe this one is a little easier.

It depends on again, you know, what you end up studying when it comes to English because I think this is definitely more like business English. You would hear this. You're going to I don't want to give it away. I m to my boss yesterday. Somebody's leaving the company. What phrase are you going to use? And I you there again there are different ways. Um I see some again you handed in your notice that would work. I wouldn't say you really sent in your notice. You could hand it in. Or again, if I want to think of a collocation that you could also use with the word notice, you could give someone your resignation notice. I gave my my resignation notice to my boss yesterday. So, with this one, again, I think there are different ways you could complete this using the word notice. I did want to point out that that is a common collocation talking about your resignation notice. you're quitting, you're leaving the company, and you give your resignation notice.

All right. Excellent. Um, yeah. And again, like I said, there are different ways. See something like your twoe notice. That's very common, especially, I think, in the US. Um, perfect. So, here's another one. And I want you to change this first sentence. I' I'm really giving you two sentences. some information about this person. If I said she is a full-time student and she is a a waitress. Okay, I'm giving you two sentences telling you about this person and I want you to use the word addition to complete the following in. She is also a a waitress. I feel like probably you're going to know how you're going to start this because it's a common phrase in but then you got to think about well how are you going to complete the rest of it so that it has the same meaning what are you going to follow um if you say well if I go ahead and tell you like in addition okay so in addition how are we going to uh what are we going to do um with that uh great job I See some excellent answers. Nice. Uh Angela English thought. Um Miranda. So when we start out with in addition. All right. In addition to what we're going to follow that with a jarn. In addition to maybe doing something. In this case, we're talking about the verb to be. She is a full-time student. So the gerand being in addition to being a full-time student, she is also a waitress. In addition to being a full-time student, she is also a waitress. So I think you can get that in addition to the the trickier part would be like, okay, what are we following that with the jiren? In addition to being uh something. All right, let's look at another one right here. I think learning to use a typewriter is a waste of time. Somebody may say this. Yeah, I think using the typewring to use the typewriter is a waste of time. I want you to express that same idea using point. I don't how to use a typewriter. Again, this is really getting the vocabulary juices flowing. you have this idea and you want to think, okay, what word or phrase do I need to use that means the same thing, but then you got to add the grammar on top of that to make sure that you're using the right grammar. Perhaps if it's an infinitive or a garand, uh, like we just talked about. So, I think learning to use a typewriter is a waste of time. Somebody could also say, I don't how to use a typewriter.

In this case, I think uh we're talking about point. So, uh I see some some uh I I feel like again you could say like you don't uh get the point of doing something, but I think more commonly you could say I don't see the point. Um I don't see the point. What? I don't see the point of learning how to use a typewriter. So again, like you may hear people use it with get. I don't get the point of learning to use. In that case, if you're saying I don't get the point, it's almost like you don't understand. In this in this sense, it's like, well, you do understand what's going on. You just you just don't think it's important. You think it's a waste of time. So in that case, I think it's more appropriate to use a verb like see. I don't see the point. Um, like why are we doing this? The one thing that I want to point out with this is that we're following I don't see the point of doing something. But you may also follow it with in. You don't see the point in doing something. And this is when English can uh, you know become a little tricky. But let me show you. We can check out engram viewer. This is a way of us. Engram viewer takes like written English and then shows you how frequently certain phrases are used. And this is a perfect example that you can see both of these are correct. You don't see the point of doing something or you don't see the point in doing something. But as you can see, more commonly people are going to follow this with of. I don't see the point of doing this thing. But in is not that is not incorrect. And I know this is when English can be a little tricky and confusing, especially when it comes to these prepositions and people just want to follow a rule like wait is it of or is it in? And uh it can be a little frustrating if I sit here and tell you well you know both are okay. So let's look at some more difficult ones. These are C2 transformations. So again, this is the in Cambridge's highest level of proficiency and I have some sentences for you at this level. And again, it depends on the circumstance. Some of those other ones maybe seemed a little harder than these. It really just depends. It's difficult to know what my reaction would have been in that situation. I want you to use the word how and complete the sentence. I'm not in that situation. So, we're still ending the sentence within that situation. It's difficult to know what my reaction would have been in that situation. I'm not I almost said the word because I and then it would have started to give away the sentence. I'm not m in that situation.

So, what else could you say that would have the same meaning? Again, write your answer in the comments. If you're watching this later, you can write your answer in the chat right now. I love it when people are participating in the lesson. So, in this case, think about I'm not. You know, thinking about that idea, I think you can put together the next word. I'm not sure. I'm not sure how. And then you could start piecing more of it together. Um, nice. I like some of these responses. So, here is the way you could complete the sentence. I'm not sure how I would have reacted in that situation. Would have plus the past participle, which in this case reacted. I'm not sure how I would have reacted in that situation.

Here is the next one. Um, great job. Again, there many people. Uh, Vicki Gustav, nice. Uh, Julia, just give some more shout outs. We can drive, but I would prefer taking the train. Okay, so this is the first idea, and I want you to use the word averse and complete this sentence. Although m I would prefer taking the train. What do you think? Although m I would prefer taking the train. I think in this case I I would say you really need to know the meaning of our key word right here averse. And it is a more advanced a C2 word. And I think there are other again I don't want to give it away. Um if we use it as a noun again thinking of other words in the word family. Um so if you know the meaning of the word a verse you can start to piece it together. So that's why I said this is really vocabulary and grammar which is why I love these exercises. You're testing two things uh at once. You get the best of both worlds. We can drive, but I prefer taking the train. We could start out the sentence. Although, all right, we're talking about averse.

Averse means like um you know, you don't really want to do something. But in this case, you're saying, well, we can drive. So, in that case, you would want to say, I am not averse to driving. You are not averse to doing something. It means like, well, you will do it. you are willing to do this thing. Like in that first sentence, we can drive. So although I'm not averse to driving, I'm not completely against it. I would prefer taking the train. So that's why I said you kind of need to know the word averse.

You're not averse to doing something. And I mentioned another word in the word family like an aversion. If you say you have an aversion to something, you have a dislike to doing this. So if I said, "Oh, I have an aversion to um raw eggs." All right?

Then I just don't like it. So in this case, you don't want to say that like, "Oh, although I'm not averse to doing this thing that you're okay with it. It's fine." So that one's a little little trickier. You really need to know again the meaning of averse and then understand that you need to put it in the negative. You're not averse to doing something. you're willing to do it. All right. Here is the next sentence, which is true. Okay. Next Wednesday is my seventh wedding anniversary. I want you to use the word will. Put it in this sentence right here. Next Wednesday. M years. Again, I I I have to I want to keep like kind of keep the conversation going. I just don't want to sit here in silence. Obviously, you guys can kind of think it through. But as I talk, I end up, you know, giving hints and I don't want to do that just yet. So, I want you to use will. All right. Well, thank you for the congratulations. I appreciate it. Next Wednesday years.

So one thing we're saying like my seventh wedding anniversary you can see that the word seventh that is a ordinal number. Okay first second third fourth fifth. Down here we're talking about years and with years you're not going to use ordinal numbers. You're going to use cardinal numbers. 1 2 3 4 5 6 7. Okay? So you know that the sentence is going to end seven years and then how can you kind of piece it together uh from there? Nice. Uh tal. Um good job. So we're talking about next Wednesday. All right. What is the the subject of the sentence? It is me. I All right. And then what what verb tense are are we going to use?

All right. In this case, we're talking about the future perfect next Wednesday because that is in the future. I will have been married for 7 years. It started in the past and has continued not to the present but to a future moment which is next Wednesday. So, that's where you really got to think uh about the grammar. So, excellent. Nice. Um, uh, as far as getting that grammar, Vicky Gustaf, uh, Talal, um, Ava, well done. Um, so in thinking about these, I see some sentences that again are very close but maybe missing one word, like perhaps you were missing that uh, helping verb have. So in that case, again, I will have been married for seven years. Here's the next one. Once this contract is signed, the agreement is binding.

Once this contract is signed, the agreement is binding. I want you to use the word by to complete the sentence. As soon as you m and then the agreement there again with notice as these get uh more difficult, there are more words missing uh in these sentences. So you need to think of you know several words that you're going to use to complete the sentence and using by and one of the key words in there which I think again you can change it around one of the key words in this first sentence is binding. All right. You say something is binding that um it is formal. You cannot get out of it. That typically in the eyes of the law. But in thinking about binding, you can use that or part of that word with by.

So what are we talking about doing? We're talking about, you know, once the contract is signed. So in this case, as soon as you do what? As soon as you sign the contract. All right. What happens? Okay. So it's really a it's a complex sentence in two parts. Uh I see close uh Tatiana as far as think about that subject. Um because we're talking about you. If I if I really want to be nitpicky with some of the grammar, as soon as you do something, which is sign the contract, then you are bound by the agreement. So, saying something is binding. Another way of phrasing this is saying that you are bound by something.

We're using that past participle um and then by this thing. You are bound by the agreement. So again, these can can be a bit tricky, but hopefully as uh you know, we've gone through them, you have again thinking about the vocabulary, the grammar, it really helps you put a lot of this together. So of course, now um that that we've gone through this and I said, you know, if you can change these, you've achieved fluency. I want to net know how you uh have done on the quiz. So I am going to put uh let's do a little poll and I'll ask this question. You can uh let me know how did you do on the quiz and I'll give you a few different answers. Um I am fluent. Um, and I'll say that is 100%.

Or I am almost fluent. Or I'll just add one. I need to study a little more. Okay, I'll put that poll in there. Of course, I'm always curious as to how you feel like you did on this quiz right here. And I feel like probably for many of you there may have just been like one small mistake here here and there that perhaps you got the idea and you knew it but as far as like putting the grammar and using the correct grammar maybe there was a slight mistake. But these are difficult. These are definitely um these are challenging exercises which is why I think they are often used not just in English classrooms but on those proficiency exams because you're able to test both grammar and uh vocabulary. So you need to study a little more. Hey, that's okay. I'm glad that you're here studying uh with me and and practicing week in and week out. that that's the best way to uh improve your skills. So, it seems like wow, typically when I've done these quizzes, I I feel like especially when it's just vocabulary or something like that, most people are like, "Oh, yeah, I rock that quiz." Seems like this one uh everybody's saying they need to do a little uh they need to study a little more. But there is a um seems like wow about a little over 10% of you um have achieved fluency and I am proud of you. Um and I hope that you continue to practice and improve your skills. Watch these lessons, participate in these lessons because like I said, this is interactive English. If you enjoyed the lesson, please hit that like button. It lets me know that I should do more of these. always write to me in the comments because I love hearing from you and I try to write back to you as much as I can. And of course, I will be back in the near future with another lesson.

Just want to say some goodbyes to Lai, Julia, Angela, Vicki, Gustaf, uh, Talal, um, Alina, Rose, Tatiana. I'm just trying to go through think about see names that are participating. Galdi, uh, Pelagoya. Perfect. Um, Lena, thank you guys for being here. Hope you have a wonderful day and I will see you soon. So long.

You know YOU'RE FLUENT when ... | English Fluency Test

how fluent are you in english let's find out in today's lesson i want to talk to you about 17 different signs that will help you decide and determine whether or not you have achieved a level of english fluency and the the very first thing that i want you to know and this is very important is that only you can decide whether or not you feel as though well you have reached a level of fluency because there is no official test that you can take and you get the results back and it says congratulations you are now fluent that does not exist so only you are the one who's going to be able to make that decision but the things that i'm going to talk to you about today can really help you kind of figure out where you're at in your journey in your goal of achieving english fluency let me quickly introduce myself my name is wes the channel is interactive english which is all about trying to help you achieve your fluency goals so if that's what you want to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that you will learn about future lessons let's go ahead and begin with number one which is well you feel comfortable being surrounded by english it can get pretty intense if your life is consumed by another language so if you are always reading in english and listening to english as well as speaking english i think that can be challenging for many people especially over a longer period of time but when when people reach fluency i think there's just a natural comfort that someone has being surrounded by another language so if you feel comfortable and you don't get burnt out which means you just get exhausted by constantly being surrounded by english or any other language well then that's a good sign the next sign is that you start dreaming in english and really in my opinion this would tell me that you're getting a lot of exposure to the language a lot of exposure reading listening just practicing every day and i i realize that dreaming it's different for everyone some people may dream a lot and other people they may not dream at all but in general i think this is a positive sign that you're getting a lot of exposure that can lead you to english fluency or maybe even tell you that you're already there number three you are capable of surviving in english and let me explain what i mean by this it means that you're able to communicate your basic needs if you go to the bank or the post office or even go see the doctor and i'm not just talking about speaking i'm also talking about writing because you may need to send emails to people and really i think this is a step that everyone has to take because if you're not fluent it may be a bit more challenging even though it's not going to be impossible it could be a little more difficult to completely survive in english i want to take a quick moment and tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson which is lingoda and this is definitely relevant to this lesson because learning with lingoda will help you reach your fluency goals and lingoda is getting ready to start another language sprint which is an excellent opportunity to get a lot more exposure and a lot more practice and if you sign up right now and attend all your classes you can get up to 100 cashback i can tell you firsthand lingoda is a great school for learning a language i have even studied with lingoda i have taken some lessons in spanish there i am right there and i really enjoyed the classes and i found them helpful because lingoda has experienced teachers there's an interactive curriculum these are small group classes and classes are available 24 7 so there's really flexible learning hours let me give you a little bit more information about the language sprint this is an intensive language course in which you will take classes for three straight months and you have two choices you can take the super sprint in which you will take 30 classes a month for three months and if you attend all your classes you can get 100 cash back but this is an early bird offer you need to sign up by june 24th if you sign up after that and attend all your classes you will get 50 cashback or your second choice is to take the sprint in which you will take 15 classes a month for three months and if you complete all those classes then you can get 50 cashback you must sign up by july 16th because the sprint is going to begin on august 2nd and when you sign up you'll pay a 49 euro deposit and then pay for the sprint in three monthly installments but for all of you here at interactive english you can get 20 euro off your deposit when you use the voucher code fast nine so click on the link down below in the description to sign up or learn more about the language sprint don't forget to use the voucher code fast nine to get your 20 euro discount and then take some online classes with lingoda so that you can achieve your fluency goals let's continue with our lesson on the different signs that can help you tell whether or not you are fluent and number four is that you have stopped translating from your language to english because if you're always translating from your language to english it's probably going to slow down a conversation if you're talking to someone and it may even slow down your writing as well and i think one sure sign of fluency is that you've stopped translating from your language to english because your thoughts have started to originate in english and having your thoughts originate in english really just leads me into number five which is that you start thinking in english because well just like dreaming when you get a lot of exposure this is something that i believe just happens on its own and you're really just thinking about random things maybe you're thinking about what you need to do or or what you think about something and it's almost like you've just gone ahead without even trying and activated the english part of your brain the next few signs that i have for you are all related to speaking and number six is that you are confident in your ability to talk about a variety of topics and i'm not talking about topics like uh tell me about your family or describe your hometown i'm thinking about things in which you could have a more profound discussion talking about maybe climate change or globalization or civil unrest or social issues like equality i'm sure that you have opinions about all of these things it doesn't mean that you have to be an expert but you need to feel confident in your ability to express those opinions and and overall i think it really just demonstrates that you are confident in your own speaking fluency number seven you speak without frequent pauses and i i think it's normal and natural for for you to use fillers everyone uses them fillers like um or hmm and i you just don't want to overuse them because often i think it means that that you're searching for the right word or phrase or sentence and well in my view fluency means that you're able to speak as the thoughts come into your mind because again the thoughts would be originating in english next you are able to tell a captivating story and captivating you're really able to get everyone's attention and this is really like when you would be letting your emotions speak perhaps you're very passionate about the story you're telling and you we would know this because you're naturally using intonation and emphasis to make the story sound more interesting now i want to talk to you about a few different signs related to listening and number nine is that you're able to watch a tv show or movie and understand about 85 and i'm just choosing 85 you could say 80 or 90 the main point that i'm trying to make is that you're able to listen to this tv show or movie and follow along and understand what's happening from beginning to end and you're able to do this without using subtitles because well to me that really shows that you have a more advanced level of listening number 10 you're able to hear a new word or phrase and and understand the meaning based on what you're listening to so it's like if you're you're listening to somebody talk and you hear this new word or phrase you're quickly able to interpret the meaning because you understand everything else that you have been listening to and i know this can be very difficult you may not always be able to do this but if you are able to do this and kind of put different words in context well then i definitely think that shows a level of fluency then we have well well this one's kind of simple and straightforward but when you hear a joke you're able to understand why it's funny and this really it could mean that you you have a deeper understanding of words because well perhaps it's funny because a word has a multiple meaning or maybe you're just able to make inferences and think about well what's somebody suggesting what's going to happen next there's many different reasons why a joke might be funny but if you understand it that that's a good sign and i don't mean you don't you don't have to understand every single joke you hear many times there are jokes that go over my head and that's an expression that means that well you just don't understand something but in general understanding jokes it's a quick test but a good one number 12 you can eavesdrop in english and to eavesdrop means that you're able to listen to someone secretly let me explain what i mean if i when i lived in korea and i went to a korean restaurant everybody was speaking korean but if somebody was speaking english it was very easy for me to pick up on that and i could listen to their conversation even if i wasn't trying to it really just stood out in my mind conversely when i was learning spanish and i felt like my spanish was improving and i thought well am i fluent am i not fluent if i went into a restaurant and and everybody's speaking english i might hear somebody speak spanish and i could identify that but it was very difficult for me to listen to the conversation because i wasn't a part of it i was not involved in that discussion and well it made me feel like okay i really need to step up my game but i knew that listening was a little challenging for me it was a difficult language skill and i think if you're able to eavesdrop in english if you can do that well that's a good sign i'm not saying that you should eavesdrop on others because it could be inappropriate but as far as trying to decide well how what what about your listening fluency

if you can eavesdrop that's that's a good sign now let's talk about a few signs related to reading number 13 is that you're able to read an article from a newspaper without constantly having to look up words in a dictionary and the reason why i said well like a newspaper or an online article is because you're more likely to encounter advanced vocabulary and i think that if you are able to read an article and you understand most of the words or even the words that you don't understand you're able to put them in context that's awesome number 14 your reading speed is 200 to 300 words per minute i imagine many of you probably don't know your reading speed and this information may vary uh i chose this because the average adult has a reading speed of two to three hundred words per minute and again this is something that will vary person to person i am actually a pretty slow reader but if you want to know you can just go online do a google search for reading speed test there are probably quite a few sites in which you will read an article and then they may ask you some questions and it's testing your reading speed along with your comprehension in general this is a good way to test your reading fluency it's also a sign if you're able to re-read and correct your own writing because if you're well a beginner or intermediate learner and you write something probably if you re-read it you're not going to be able to find many mistakes but as you become a more advanced learner as you get closer to fluency you should be able to reread something that you have written maybe an email and try to find some mistakes because i think well everybody makes mistakes and you may be able to find a mistake that well you use the wrong preposition or maybe you need to to use an article or perhaps it's a punctuation mistake i think that self-correction is an excellent sign of fluency then let's talk about a couple of signs related to writing number 16 is that you are able to write according to your audience so what i mean by this is that uh not all writing is going to be the same you're you're going to write differently if you are writing an email to a friend or perhaps you're writing some type of business proposal so this is a good sign that you're able to understand the subtle differences between formal and informal language which is more evident in writing number 17 you can write poetry because well many poems rhyme and it can be challenging to to find different rhyming words poems also use very descriptive words to help people put a picture in their mind and this could show that you have a rather large vocabulary and i think poems also people will compare things using similes and metaphors which shows that you can be creative with the language and i think language creativity is a sure sign of fluency and speaking of writing i would love it if you would write to me in the comments let me know if you have passed any part of this fluency test and of course you do not need to check all of these off in order to consider yourself fluent again you are the only one who's going to be able to make that decision these are just some suggestions some things to keep in mind so you can tell where you're at on your journey to english fluency if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i'll see you next time

LESSON 738 OF 749

Your English grammar is EXCELLENT if you can answer these

If you can correctly answer these grammar questions, then well, your grammar skills are excellent. So, I have a quiz for you and I want to test your knowledge of English grammar. And I do think this is a little more challenging mostly for intermediate to advanced learners. So, let's go ahead and jump into it with our first question, which is right here. She speaks English as though she m a native. Now, I love it when you participate in these lessons. So, I would encourage you to write your answers in the chat, in the comments. I love hearing from you and it's a great way to actually get involved and actively practice the language. She speaks English as though she m a native.

So I will give you the answer along with a brief little explanation as to why it is the correct answer. So what do you think in this case? The missing word she speaks English as though she m a native. We're really talking about the subjunctive in this case. So she speaks English as though she were a native. Clauses that start with as if and as though describe unreal or improbable situations if they are followed by an unreal tense. In this case, the past subjunctive or the the past perfect subjunctive. Now, if you said she is, again, this is one of those things when people will say that in spoken English and people may not use the subjunctive like if I were you versus if I was you.

Grammatically speaking, in this case, I think the subject the subjunctive is recommended. It's preferred. But if you said she is, I'm not gonna hold that against you. So, one thing I wanted to let you know as we continue, if you would like to access these lesson notes, you can click on the link down below in the description, join my email community, and that way uh I can you can learn more. And if you're already a part of it, uh, check your inbox because I have sent them to you. And also, I should go ahead and introduce myself. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. So, let's continue with uh our grammar quiz. And the next question that I have for you is right here. This we're starting out with these uh just fill in the blank. by this time next year they m in their new home. Think about the context and I I'd say apart from that think about the time as well by this time next year they m in their new home. So for some of these there may be more than than one answer. Um, I I feel like with this one, not not so much. But I will talk about that as we go through the lesson. And that's part of what makes English, I think, really tricky, really challenging is that you have, you know, things are acceptable versus unacceptable. And if they're acceptable, then there may be more than than one way to answer it. So by this time next year, I said, think about the time. We're talking about a point in the future. This time, one year in the future. So, because of that, I want you to think about the continuous tense. And in that case, you would say they will be living in their new home by this time next year. They will be living in their new home. I don't know if the in this context if you could use another verb apart from living, but I think this is the one that you want to use. So, the future continuous is used to indicate an ongoing action in the future. They were living in the home, they're living in it at this time next year, and then they will continue living in it in the future. Uh, excellent. Great answers, Lai Fabio. Uh, well done. Nice. I'll try to give some shout outs from time to time as we we do this. Little they know what was about to happen. Which word are you going to put in there that will accurately complete this sentence? Little they know what was about to happen. Now, this is a an expression that I'm confident that you have heard before, especially if you're somebody who watches movies, TV shows. I I think you've come across this phrasing and you've heard it, but it is one that I I don't know if you would end up using it that often in just casual conversation, but it's great to know, especially for your listening comprehension. So, I see a lot of uh great answers, which makes me think yes, you you are familiar with this phrasing. Little did they know what was about to happen. All right. Well done. Um John, Anesco, uh Joanie, uh Kevin, perfect. Uh so, the reason why I said maybe you don't use this as often because we're talking about inversion and it's not just you. I I feel like I don't invert that many of my sentences. So, basically, we use inversion after negative adverbials. And when I mention inversion, we're basically switching the subject and the verb. So, basically, you

I would just say I've never seen such a beautiful sunset. But if you want to add that emphasis and use that effect, you could use inversion. or in this case, rarely will you hear such beautiful music or under no circumstances should you hit the like button. Okay, I I don't mean that. Of course, I would love it if you go ahead and hit the like button. This is just an example, okay? And I could say, uh, never have I created such a terrible example encouraging you not to hit the like button. But anyway, just wanted to give you some other examples using inversion. I had to share this with you.

I found this meme and I thought it it was funny. Just the again, arson is not funny, but you see this house burning and that child just the look on on her face. Little do they know it makes you wonder, okay, what what happened? What was going on? So, just to just to have a little fun. And it's always good to laugh when trying to learn another language, improve your skills. What do you think? I prefer tea. M coffee. This is there. There's Well, I don't want to give it away, but I feel like you probably know this one. You've heard this structure before. And again, I I think it's useful. It's common. So, I told you this is more intermediate to advanced as far as uh the the type of questions. I prefer tea coffee. So, I see a couple of of different answers in there. I think one of them in this context is definitely better to use. Now, you could use over. I'm not going to say that's incorrect. But if I want to compare the frequency of the phrases, like what what is somebody going to say in this case? Two. I prefer tea to coffee. I prefer this to that. I prefer X to Y. And as far as an explanation, I thought it just helps I can uh talk about what uh this is from Cambridge when talking about prefer. And if you can't see it, I'll go ahead and reading read it to you. Expressing preference. We use prefer to say that you like one activity over the other. And we can use a prepositional phrase with to when we compare two things or actions. They I use their example sentence. I prefer tea to coffee or we prefer going by ferry to flying. So you prefer one thing to the other. Now like

I said, you could say I prefer this over that. That is also something you will hear especially in conversation. And that's why I said there are maybe multiple answers that are acceptable, but in this case, I definitely want to make you aware of what I think is more commonly used. And in this case, I think you would use to more often. I prefer tea to coffee. Had I known I what? There are several missing words. It differently. had I known I m it differently which well I've already told you there are a few missing words so which words are you going to use to complete this sentence now I I there's something that I want to I will tell you something about this sentence which just looking at the sentence I think that you are aware of so had I known own I differently.

So, we're talking about the the third conditional, a third conditional. You probably notice, wait a second, this is not an if statement. Generally speaking, third conditional sentences, you're going to use an if statement. But we're not here because it is inverted. But it's still the third conditional. So I would say had I known and you're using uh you know the past perfect I would have plus the past participle I would have done it differently. So this is an inverted statement using the third conditional. So there is no if. We just talked about inversion and you're going to use the third conditional to talk about the past describing a situation that didn't happen. It's imaginary. And this is the form that you would use generally if plus the past perfect plus would have and then the past participle. Again, I think more commonly like I would probably just say in casual casual conversation, oh, if I had known, I would have done it differently and I'm using that if statement. But I tried to I wanted to trick you a little bit with that inverted sentence right there. Had I known, I would have done it differently. Let's move into some uh multiple choice questions. And I do think I this I could have probably made this a little more difficult. I think you this is going to make it a little easier, but that's okay. The idea is just to practice your grammar skills, reinforce some of the rules and nuances that you already know and you may be familiar with. So, which is grammatically correct? I've talked about this before if you've watched my videos, especially my grammar videos. So I I uh I I hope that you can you can get this one. He suggested me to go or he suggested that I go or he suggested me going. Which sentence is grammatically correct? The key word in here is suggest.

So that is that verb is really the focus in this case. We're talking about the verb suggest. You are going to well the answer is be. He suggested that I go. So the verb suggest we're going to follow that with a that clause. And and again, you that could be omitted, but we're going to use that plus the subject plus the base verb. He suggested that I do this or somebody else suggested that I do that. To help reinforce this, I believe I've even shown this before in a previous video talking about suggest. This is taken directly from Cambridge uh the online dictionary and it's talking about suggest plus a that clause. When we suggest an action to someone, we can use a that clause and in informal situations is what it's saying that is often left out. So the example sentence, I suggest that you leave here around 4:00. uh or her doctor suggested that

So I see all those wonderful B answers which is correct. I look forward to meeting you and we're going to follow it with the gerant. Now I could you could look at this and probably guess like what is the mistake that people often make? You have look forward to and then sometimes I feel like our brains are trained to think of the infinitive and people will say to plus the base verb. But in this case the phrase in its entirety is look forward to and then we follow it with the gerant because to is a preposition. So we'll follow it with a gerant. Now, to have a little fun, to give you a little more context because I told you whether it's this phrase or another one, the I I do hear these mistakes all the time. And uh I thought I would ask chat GPT again. I don't know if you can see it, so I'll just read it for you. My question to chat GPT was, give me a list of 10 uh the 10 most common phrases when you have the word to followed by a gerant. So they again I'd take it with a grain of salt as to whether these are the most common ones but still I think they are pretty common and uh again this is when small mistakes are made like that first one look forward to plus gerant but you would also say you are committed to doing something you are used to doing something maybe you're devoted to doing something other um words they use you're addicted to maybe playing video games or you're open to learning more about some topic. Or you can confess to doing something, object to doing something, you're opposed to doing something, or admit to doing something. So, I thought I'd have a little fun there in in using chat GPT to give you more phrases that you have to followed by the gerant. So, just keep that in mind. All right. Um, here is the next one. And awesome, Deli Williams. Great. Great. Thanks for thanks for joining, becoming a member. Saw some uh other members in here, Kevin, Loi, uh and a couple others that even just joined at the beginning. I really appreciate it. Helps helps make keep all this going. So, which is correct? And I don't want to give it I'm not going to give it away. Not yet. Neither of the options are good or B. Neither of the options is good. Which sentence is correct? And for this one, honestly, I imagine there there may be a mix of responses. I like that. I like the the thinking emoji like maybe uh not sure. Neither of the options are good.

Neither of the options is good. Which sentence is correct? So, grammatically speaking, there is a an answer that is, I'd say, more acceptable in this context. So, the key word in there is neither. If we're talking about neither, it is singular. So, in this case, neither of the options is good. The pronoun neither is singular and requires the use of a singular verb form. Let's look down there. However, and there is a another however. A plural verb form is common in informal writing and speech when a prepositional phrase comes between the word and the verb. So in this case we do we we have that prepositional phrase neither of the options. Options this is a plural noun which again our brain is then trained to think okay options are.

So in spoken English, I think this this is the the whole idea that I really want you to be aware of. You will hear people use neither of something or something else. Neither of the options are good. That is something you may hear grammatically speaking. Again, I I people would say yes, neither is a sing is the pronoun is singular. So basically, you don't have to take it from me. You can take it from the Britannica dictionary. It's basically saying the same thing that you have the rule grammar rules the pronoun neither is singular and again however when it's followed by in this case they said when neither is followed by of something uh neither of the answers is correct or neither of the answers are correct. Keep this in mind. Again, I I would always encourage people don't think of everything in English as either right or wrong or correct or incorrect.

Think about it more as acceptable or unacceptable. And there may it's a sliding scale and in this case I think neither is more acceptable but in in some instances neither are works as well when you have that prepositional phrase in between. So, that is a little bit of a trick question. This one, this is not a trick question right here. Uh, even though maybe it looks like one. Which is correct? The the fewer people there are, the better or the less people there are, the better? Which sentence are you going to use? If you were talking to someone and you're going to use one of these sentences and just looking at it, you can see the difference between the two.

The only two words that are different, we're talking about the words fewer or less. The fewer people there are, the better, or the less people there are, the better. So, we're talking about people. people. It is a count noun. We can count the number of people. 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10. It is an irregular count noun. So, when we're talking about count nouns, grammatically speaking, we're going to use fewer. The fewer people there are, the better. So, I I explained that right down there. We use fewer with countable nouns. People is an irregular plural noun. So I will say once again this is another instance when people make you know slight speaking mistakes but they make it enough to where you know maybe it's considered acceptable because often times with certain count nouns especially if we're talking about irregular plural nouns you do hear people use less in spoken English. So again if you said less I I wouldn't worry about it too much. It's not like the worst mistake in the world. It's not going to if somebody were to hear this, they're not going to really pay attention and be like, "Oh, wow. That was a grammar mistake." Native speakers actually miss make these mistakes quite often. And to reinforce that fact, I have this funny comic here, which is something again I believe I've shared this before when talking about the difference between fewer and less. If you go to grocery stores in the US, you'll see these signs that are grammatically incorrect. 10 like this this cashier lane. Uh this line is for 10 items or less. So in this comic they crossed it out and said fewer. And down below the guy says, "What can I say? I was an English major." So it's like he had to make that grammatical correction on the sign 10 items or fewer instead of 10 items or less. So those are words that are commonly confused, fewer and less. Here is another difficult question. And I I'm kind of curious. What do you think in the following sentence? Who has the telescope? The man saw the woman with the telescope. Who Who has the telescope? Is it is the man the person who has the telescope or is it the woman who has the telescope? The man saw the woman with the telescope. What do you think? So, this is another sentence that it's a little tricky because when you're kind of breaking this down and you see that prepositional phrase, okay, wait a second. With the telescope. All right. And there are two people in the sentence. This man, this woman, but you're trying to think who has it. The who the man saw the woman with the telescope. To be perfectly honest, you don't know at this point because I'm not giving you enough context. But this is a fairly well-known sentence in linguistics when we're talking about English because it is an example of an ambiguous sentence. So, if you said A or B, either one is correct. Depending on the context, I could say the man saw the woman with the telescope. And that may make you think, okay, the man is looking through the telescope and is looking at this woman, which which is perfectly correct. It's grammatically correct, but it's also ambiguous because I could say the man saw the woman with the telescope and the woman is the person holding the telescope. Like I see some woman walking on the street holding a telescope. And we could say the man saw the woman with the telescope. It is also grammatically correct. And that's when it says that's down below. It says um the these ambiguous sentences are only understandable in context. like you need extra information to know who actually has possession of the telescope. There are other sentences like this, but this is one that in linguistics, it's pretty well known as an example of an ambiguous sentence. The man saw the woman with the telescope. Who says that we can't have a little fun while we do this? Let's uh let let's make you think a little more. Instead of giving you a multiple choice, let's actually have you write out some sentences. So, I want you to change this sentence to reported speech. Right now, it is direct speech.

I am tired. She said this is another like a you're taking a grammar quiz. This is an activity that they may have you do. You have this direct sentence and they say, "Okay, change this to reported speech." How are you going to rewrite this sentence so that it has the same meaning? And we're going to use reported speech instead of direct speech. Well done. Um, Venady Lai keyword. So, uh, JD, she said that she was tired or she said she was tired. You could use that or you could omit it. Either one works, but we're going to use she said she was tired because normally the tense in reported speech is one tense back in time from the time from the tense in direct speech. So in direct speech it was in the the present. I am tired. So we're going to go one back which means we're going to use the past. She said she was tired or she said that she was tired. Excellent. You guys rocked that one. Maybe maybe this one's a little trickier. We'll see. We'll find out. I want you to make this sentence passive. They are repairing the car. How can we change this sentence so that it well it has the same meaning, but we're just going to write it in the passive voice. So, in the active, they are repairing the car. In the passive, what are you going to say? So with the passive, we're again I don't want to go ahead and tell you the form. I'll tell you in just a moment when I give you the explanation, but uh how would you rewrite that sentence in the passive? The correct answer. All right. Well, good job. All right. Uh, we got some great responses. Uh, Joanie, Frank, uh, Joanna, Alicia, the car is being repaired. Now, in this case, you could follow it with by someone, but because we're saying they and we're talking about people repairing a car, this is uh we could probably omit the actor. You could say the car is being repaired by them. But often if you're saying the car is being repaired, most people most of the time it's implied that they took it to a mechanic.

They took it to a shop and there are mechanics repairing the car. So the passive voice is used to show interest in the person or object that experiences the action. So in this case, the car is experiencing the action. We want to highlight and emphasize that. and as opposed to uh the person or object performing the action. So in the active voice, the focus is kind of like they they are repairing the car. These are the people that are doing it. But if we don't really want to highlight that, then we could use the passive. And in this case, we're talking about the passive present continuous. The car is being repaired to I thought this was funny. again. I found uh this passive voice joke, believe it or not. And the joke says, "Why was the road crossed by the chicken?" We're just changing the question from why did the chicken cross the road to the passive? And the chicken's response right there is I thought this was supposed to be about me. Like the joke is supposed to focus on me. So if you change it to the passive, then the focus is really going to be on the road that is crossed. So talking about something in the past that we cannot change. And we're going to express this. This is an unreal situation. All right? We cannot change the past. So therefore, we're talking about the third conditional. You've heard me mention the third conditional already. And I talked about the form that you would use. So if I want to change this using the third conditional, if he had studied, and we're using that past perfect had studied. If he had studied, he would uh he would not have failed the exam or he wouldn't have failed the exam. If you wanted to to change this around uh and change the verb fail to pass, you could say he would have passed the exam. That would also work if you wanted to use the opposite of fail. or if we're going to just stick with the words that were used in the original sentences, if he had studied, he would not have failed the exam. Once again, we're using that past perfect in our if statement and then in the result would have plus the past participle. Again, I think this is uh something that I think many of you used. Uh, perfect. And I saw a lot of great answers. Well done. How about changing this sentence right here so that you are using a gerund? Rewrite the following sentence with a gerund. Again, write your answers in the chat in the comments. I love it. I love seeing so many people participate in these lessons. Uh if you made a mistake and you didn't get one, that is perfectly okay. Hopefully you understood the explanation and understand what the mistake was and why it was made and how to correct it. It's all about improving your grammar skills. So the sentence we have here, I hate when people interrupt me. And yeah, I think all of us hate that. So I hate when people interrupt me and I want you to change this so that you're using a gerund. And this is also tied back into something else we were talking about just a moment ago. I want you to use a gerund, which is that it's like that that verb form with the ing except it's not technically a verb even though it looks like one. So I hate when people interrupt me. If you want to change this so that you're using a gerund, we're actually going to change this to the passive. I hate being interrupted. So you could say, I hate being interrupted by someone, but it's unnecessary. We're just talking about people in general. So this is an example of the passive gerund form which again is as a gerund which is a verb with ing ending in the passive voice. So it just to give you an example it may appear in one of two forms like in the present like being shown um uh or in the past having been shown. So I hate when people interrupt me. We can change that using a gerund. I hate being interrupted. If you said sometimes you could say getting like you could get interrupted. I hate getting interrupted. That would also work as well. This one I think is a little more challenging. Even still, it's getting a little more difficult as we go through this. I want you to transform this sentence using the keyword so that it has the same meaning. And I've done these exercises with you before doing these keyword transformations. So the sentence that I want you to change is right here. We had no idea that he was planning to resign. I want you to rewrite this sentence using the word intention. And this can definitely be a little tricky. I think once I show you the answer and you're able to read it using the word intention, you'll probably think to yourself, "Yes, okay, I've had I've heard that form before.

I've heard people use sentences like that like this." But sometimes it can be really difficult to think about that change, think about that transformation in the moment, which is what I want you to do right now. This is definitely an exercise that I I would say is more advanced. We had no idea that he was planning to resign. And I want you to change that using the word intention. So I see we had um okay, I see some answers kind of close in this case. a phrase that is commonly used and I said probably when when I show you um you could say wait well let me show you the answer and then we'll talk about it we had no idea he had any intention of resigning so the phrase that I'm talking about is any intention of doing something and in that case do you have any intention of writing to me in the comments do you have any intention of hitting the like button or do you have any intention of um I don't know I can't even think of another sentence but any intention of that is the phrase that I was talking about before when I said I think when I tell you you're going to recognize okay yes I've heard those words together somebody talking about any intention of doing something so in this case we can use that phrase, we had no idea he had any intention of resigning. And it works well. It allows us to transform this sentence so that both of them have the same meaning. So, I hope that you will learn something new. And if you didn't get all of these correct, that's perfectly fine. Some of them were a little tricky. And some of them I told you that uh you uh that both of the answers were correct like the ambiguous sentence or neither of the options is or are. And you have these small nuances which can really make

English a frustrating language to learn, but it's good to know. And once again, just as a reminder, if you would like to get these lesson notes, join the community. Click on the link down below in the description. If you're already a part of the community, I have sent them to you. So hopefully if if you did answer all of these correct, then yes, your grammar is excellent. I would even say if you got most of them correct or many of them correct, your grammar in my view is still excellent. So let me know how you did uh in the comments. Uh like I was saying, do you have any intention of writing to me in the comments? I hope that you do and let me know how you did. I always love hearing from you. If you enjoyed this lesson, you can also let me know by hitting that like button. I always appreciate it. And I will see you soon for another lesson. whether it's vocabulary, grammar, pronunciation. I like to mix it up from time to time.

LESSON 739 OF 749

Your Path to Speaking Confidently, Clearly, & Effectively

today i want to tell you about how you can speak confidently speak clearly and speak effectively that's coming up [Music] hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel that is just all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and if that is what you would like to do please subscribe so that you will be notified of future english lessons and in this lesson i want to talk to you about uh speaking and really trying to achieve speaking fluency or achieve your speaking goals by really focusing on how you can speak confidently speak clearly and speak effectively so let's begin with just speaking confidently because i think this is something that can be challenged for many learners that you you want to speak you want to have a conversation but maybe you just you just don't have confidence in your abilities and what i think you need to do the most important thing that you can do is just get more practice you need to continuously practice speaking practice having different conversations because the more you do that the more confidence you are going to have in your own abilities think about uh giving a presentation when you give a presentation you have to get up there in front of a group of people and and you have to talk about something you have to speak and if you don't have confidence in yourself in your abilities then you might think that giving a presentation is just an impossible task that it's just too difficult and this is this is something that can be very challenging whenever i would have to give a presentation i would practice probably about 10 to 15 times and the more i practiced and i was thinking about well what am i going to say how am i going to say it the more confidence i had in my abilities to give a good presentation and the same goes for having a conversation the more you practice uh having a conversation and speaking and you're you're having a variety of discussions then you're just going to have more confidence in your abilities to talk about a lot of different things and before you know it if you can do that you will be speaking confidently it's also important that you speak clearly now when i say speak clearly i'm not talking about accent what i'm referring to is mutual intelligibility and what that means is that people of different english varieties can understand and communicate with each other because there is mutual intelligibility for example the united states english in the united states that's one variety english in the united kingdom that is another variety of english but people can understand each other because there's mutual intelligibility the same goes for english learners if there is an english learner from france and they're learning english as a second language and there's an english learner from mexico who is also learning english as a second language they can communicate and understand one another when there is mutual intelligibility you understand pronunciation and and you're also aware that the pronunciation of some words may be a little different among different english varieties you also understand intonation and you know if somebody's making a statement or if they're asking a question you understand tone and you can kind of tell if somebody is speaking in a way that they are happy or sad or perhaps even a little upset when you learn those things it's going to help you speak clearly achieve mutual intelligibility so that you can speak english with people from all over the world and as you are practicing and building your speaking confidence and speaking clearly and communicating with others you also want to make sure that you are able to speak effectively as well and when it comes to speaking effectively i think of this it's not always about what you say but how you say it how you say it means that you are practicing when to emphasize certain words or or when to pause that can be very effective and it's also related to speaking clearly how you say it refers to sharing your thoughts and opinions and and getting your point across so people easily understand what you're saying how you say it means that you are using precise language so people know exactly what you're talking about how you say it is related to telling a great story and you're able to grab people's attention this is what effective speaking is all about and i really hope that i have grabbed your attention because i want to talk to you about how you can achieve all three of these things speaking confidently speaking clearly and speaking effectively and the way that you can do that is by enrolling in the interactive english speaking course called speak up this is a 10-week course in which you will take a 50-minute lesson once a week with me and we are going to talk about a variety of different topics have a lot of discussion in small groups which will give you more opportunities to speak and there's also going to be a lot of different speaking activities as well in addition there will be weekly pronunciation video lessons that will help you speak clearly because you're going to learn about pronouncing difficult sounds in english you'll learn about connected speech minimal pairs and more so the goal of this course is to help you do the three things that we just talked about get a lot of speaking practice so that you can build your confidence learn more about pronunciation so that you can speak clearly and also learn how to say things so that you are speaking effectively and because i truly appreciate that you are learning english with me here at interactive english you can use the voucher code speak up 10 to get a 10 discount off the course click on the link in the description if you would like to learn more about class times how much the course cost as well as more information about the course in general click on that link in the description and i just hope to speak to you real soon thanks so much for watching and i'll see you next time

Your listening skills are EXCELLENT if you understand AMERICAN FAST SPEECH

let's listen to American fast speech so this is all about trying to help you improve your listening comprehension and just really get a better understanding of why people speak the way they do and if you would like to improve your listening skills Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so I have several different clips from movies and TV shows that we're going to listen to and then we're just really going to break it down and talk about what's going on so let's begin and listen to our first clip so you are going to hear uh him say a couple of different questions and to begin with I just want you to listen to it uh a couple of times what did you do how did you how did you get this what did you do how did you how did you get this so let's talk about what's going on we have these questions what did you do how did you how did you get this but that's not really what you hear the first thing I want to say is that assimilation is going to occur when we have that phrase did you basically this is when two sounds they blend together to create a new sound so that final D and did in the beginning Y and U when they blend together you really get this J sound so it's going to sound like did you what did you do how did you how did you get this the other thing I'd like to point out is that there are some overlapping sounds basically your tongue is going to be in the same position in your mouth and you're going to stop with one sound and then release into the next one so the final T and what we're going to stop that flow of air and then release the air into the D sound in did and when that happens you're not really going to hear that T it's going to sound like what did you what did you do and even at the end there get this we're going to stop the air with that final T and get and then release it into that voice t H and this get this so in general it's going to sound like this I've tried to give you the phonetic spelling to make it a little easier to see what's going on what did you do how did you how did you get this what did you do how did you how did you get this now that you know what's going on let's listen to it one more time what did you do how did you how did you get this hopefully you can really hear the blending of those two sounds and you hear that J sound what did you do how did you how did you get this before we continue I'd like to make a very quick announcement because if you would like to practice and improve your speaking skills you can check out my speaking course there is a link Down Below in the description the course is for intermediate to Advanced speakers and it's all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally and and this these are some of the things we work on when it comes to pronunciation connected speech and trying to understand why people sound the way they do so check out that link Down Below in the description if you would like to improve your speaking fluency let's continue with our next clip right here so again we'll listen to it a couple times and then we'll talk about what's going on okay listen I'm going to have to call you back it's it's it's very fast okay listen I'm going to have to call you back all right I want you to listen to it again see if you can pick out what he's saying okay this is I'm going to have to call you back the reason why I chose this is because I I want to talk about reductions this is when we are removing or changing sounds and there are some very common reductions that are often used in just casual conversation so for example going to we can reduce that to GNA and have to we can reduce that to have to I'm going to have to it's a little more challenging when you have one reduction following right after the other I'm going to have to the other thing I want to point out is when you have I'm going to you could say I'm going to but we could reduce this even further and it may sound like I'm am I'm going to have to call you back okay can you hear that that reduction I'm going to have to call you back so either one is okay personally I think it's probably a little more common for somebody to say I'm going on to instead of I'ma but definitely this is something you will hear if in just casual everyday English I end up using it quite often I'm going to go to the park I'm going to go to the mall I'm going to get something to eat I'm going to I'm I'm in this case I'm going to have to call you back so let's listen to it again and really I do think it's more of an I'm GNA but it clip he says I was up all night thinking about it but again he's not really going to say it like that because there are well quite a few things that I want to discuss the first thing is linking this is when we link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word so we have the phrase was up all we can link those words together and it's almost like we're moving that consonant sound over and it's going to sound like was up all was up all and then we also have overlapping sounds when we end with that dark L and all and then move right in to the n Sound in night all night all night I was up all night I was up all night one thing I want to point out is that sometimes with continuous tense verbs the G gets dropped this is known as gropping I think it's probably more common in places like the US which is where I'm from so once we drop that g we can then link that n Sound with the beginning vowel sound in about thinking about and the final T in about I told you I'm from the US so I am going to pronounce it as a flap T it's going to sound more like a soft D this often occurs when the t comes between two vowel sounds and then I can link that flat t with the beginning vowel sound in it thinking about it thinking about it I was up all night thinking about it you can look at everything that's going on there we have linking overlapping sounds dropping word linking and that flap T I was up all night thinking about it so it's pretty simple sentence but a lot going on when it comes to Connected speech I was up all night thinking about it now that you know what's happening let's let's listen to it again and see if you can hear that linking but also that flap t at the end I was up all night thinking about it okay you can hear that linking as well as that flat t in about I was up all night thinking about it the next clip that I have for you is well this is a little challenging because she's speaking really fast see if you can think about the exact words that she's saying I promise to go to the movies with him next Saturday I'll I'll play it again I promise to go to the movies with him next Saturday this is very fast one more time I promise to go to the movies with him next Saturday so the sentence that she's saying is right here I promise to go to the movies with him next Saturday what's happening to begin with there are germinates this is when we have double consonant sounds the final Ed and promised all right ends with that t sound which is the same as the consonant sound in two promise to promise to go to the I want to think about that phrase go to the but I'm going to pronounce that t as a flap T again it's very common with the American accent go to the and I I want you to think about that whole phrase because it's common go to the movie go to the cinema go to the park go to the mall this is a phrase that ends up getting used quite often and you're going to hear that flap T then we have Aion this is when sounds or syllables get removed and this may occur with the H in words like he him her or his and it's almost like we're just muting that H sound and if we turn the volume down then linking may occur we're going to link that voiceless th in with with that vowel sound with them with them and even that last phrase at the end next you don't hear that t once again allision occurs that t comes between two consonants and we're just not going to hear it next you can hear that it ends with that s sound which is the same consonant sound in Saturday another germinate this just it just allows us to easily transition from one word to the next next Saturday so this is what it sounds like I promise to go to the movies with them next Saturday one more thing that I'd like to point out is the unstress 2 and when this word is unstressed it's almost like that vowel sound's going to get reduced and it may sound a little more like the schah sound that unstressed uh so instead of two it may sound a little more like T and I I tried to show you here that it's not like you're only going to hear one or the other it may be a spectrum and it could come anywhere between so in the end I think it's going to sound a little more like this I promise to go to the I promise to go to the movies with them next Saturday and then if you want to speed it up I promise to go to the movies with them next Saturday so now that you know what's happening let's listen to it again and see if you can identify pick out some of those things we were just talking about I promise to go to the movies with him next Saturday play it one more time I promise to go to the movies with him next Saturday so I really hope that some of this makes a bit more sense when thinking about why people sound the way they do and if you don't feel comfortable trying to make this a part of your speaking fluency that's perfectly okay but understanding connected speech and some of the different things we talked about it's really going to help you improve your overall listening comprehension so if you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

ONLINE ENGLISH LESSON | Q&A with Interactive English

what's up everyone I hope you're having a wonderful day my name is Wes this is interactive English in case this is your first time here our lessons are all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and what I want to do today because we like doing these live sessions these live classes which are a bit longer is we're gonna do a little bit of an English Q&A all right so I'm gonna take your questions all right I want to answer your questions whether you have things that you want to know about grammar pronunciation vocabulary even if it's just like personal stuff if you have a question for me personally I am happy to answer it and talk to you guys about that so I just want to give a quick shout out to some of those are here because I love giving these shout outs and if you don't know what a shout-out is it's just like in acknowledging it is it's an acknowledgement of somebody to give them recognition for doing something and I want to give you a shout out for being here so we have hi Mary

Gayle Sherman your tech friend Joe Toth malbert hello hello seriously lolly what's up good to see you again Manu Phillips how are you Nour I'm just just saying hello so Maddie how are you English is fun excellent say huh pee-yew Marcos how are you guys so please say hello tell me tell me you're tell me where you're from I love seeing where everybody is from and like I said I I just kind of want to go ahead and jump into the question so all I would ask is that if you have a question try to make it as specific as possible if you have something about okay how do you pronounce this word or a specific grammar question or something specific about vocabulary I will try to answer the best that I can but even though I am an English teacher that still doesn't mean I'm learning new things about the language every day the English language is constantly evolving it's constantly changing and that's a great thing about working as a language instructor is that you're constantly learning new things so again try and keep it specific because some people might be like well tell me about all of the verb tenses and that is that's a little bit too much so again even if you're watching this later this is a great way to practice your listening skills to kind of just hang out and and see what questions are asked and also I would write write us questions in the comments even later write to us in the comments if you have a question about pronunciation and grammar or vocabulary it's amazing how many lessons we've created because of those questions that somebody will ask us question and then a month or two later we do a lesson just about that because we get a lot of great ideas from all of you so hello hi Sarah from Egypt excellent Ahmed Palestine perfect Shang bond says hello can you give me your whatsapp number unfortunately I cannot because I am may be ashamed I'm not on whatsapp I know so many people have asked us about hey like give us your whatsapp number let us know if things change and I get a whatsapp number I will be sure to let everyone in our community know about it so that we can you know you could start using it we can start communicating it's just been one of those things we're on YouTube Twitter Facebook Instagram it kind of is overwhelming to a point where it you know there's there's just not time to try and think about using something else but if that changes I will be sure to let you know and just to throw a quick little plug for ourselves and again is I come across these things a plug is just like a bit of an advertisement your own shoutout so if you guys want to join our community please subscribe to our email list I just threw a link in there we send out lesson updates we will give you access to the secret fluency lesson which is very cool and we'll also send you some other free resources from time to time so if you haven't joined please sign up and join that's another great way to connect with us Alton Rodriguez asked why why are some people it's easy to understand the English and you are one of them so this is a question that I think a lot of people we hear a lot that people will say I'm listening to your lesson I understand everything that you're saying but then I turn on a movie or a TV show and I'm like what the heck what are they talking about and there's two reasons I think first is I've been teaching English for over 15 years and I think especially when you start working with learners who are absolute beginners you have to speak slower so after so long after a long time of teaching English my speech has naturally slowed down and I've even had friends when I go back home and visit friends and family in the United States sometimes they would ask me they're like why are you talking so slow and it's like well this is the way that I talk now so the speed of my speech is going to just be it's going to be much slower than the speed of somebody else you might hear on YouTube or somebody that if you're watching a TV show or a movie so that's one reason why another reason is I also think just in my trying to be careful about what I say because when you're watching a TV show or movie you have the people use a lot of connected speech they use a lot of idioms expressions and slang and when they use all of that and they're talking really fast it just becomes an additional challenge to try and comprehend everything that you're saying but if you want to improve your comprehension just get more exposure build your vocabulary and get more language exposure so that you can identify these words or phrases whenever you hear them but again I think a lot of movies as even YouTube they allow you to slow down the the speed of videos I've had some people tell me like oh you're speaking too fast and I would tell them hey just go to the settings you can slow down the speed or you can speed it up if somebody thinks wow Wes you're speaking way too slow you can go and speed that up and and it will sound maybe find your speed okay that's that's all I that's all I would say all right let's see the seriously what's the friends I'm trying to find stuff as they come in uh I'm not so thank you for talking slowly hey no problem alright again this is just the way that I speak marbly from West Palm Beach Florida all right excellent what's up Florida I hear it's very hot now in Florida my parents are from there so I am very familiar with that they live around Tampa Bay um let's see what do we had what's Brian is what's the difference between if I had known and if I knew so again when you're thinking about conditionals the if I had again because you're talking about the condition using that past perfect it's the third conditional if I had known that the class you know that if I had known that I had class I would have done my homework if I knew I would say in casual just everyday speech I I think that people use them interchangeably I feel like grammatically correct that third conditional would have the past perfect but if I knew I had class I would have done the homework people could use that as a mix conditional and it would have the same meaning so I think that they they could be used interchangeably in many different situations especially in colloquial speech and this is the big difference I think what people say and what you write when you're writing things down you should follow the grammar a bit more because it can just look awkward in your writing but when people are speaking they tend to break rules all the time I think we mentioned this last time when talking about conditionals the subjunctive if I were but some people will say just in conversation if I was and if it happens enough sometimes it just becomes it just becomes accepted um your soul hello how are you good how are you hum D help me how do you need help let me know this is on credit from Haiti how are you let's see try to such an app to communicate with others it's a meal so one app I'd say again it really just depends some apps you have to pay for and you can communicate for example I think cambly you would pay and you can connect instantly with native English speaker and they just you pay per minute I think there's another app out there that I've been I've done kind of like a video interview with these guys from Hollow H h-e-l-l-o all right it's an app that you can connect with other people who want to practice so I actually want to speak English but I don't know if you'd be able to connect with other native English speakers I'm not sure where they're at in this process but let me I'll go ahead and throw that in down there too if you guys let me throw that in there for you in the chat so this is another one if you just want to maybe connect with somebody who also wants to practice their speaking skills you can sign up let check it out I haven't signed up I haven't signed up I haven't used it yet to be honest with you I've just done these kind of interviews with these guys so if you give it a try let me know what you think I'd be curious to let you know so let me see all right what do we have here somebody had asked what's the difference let's see someone asks what's the difference between someone where was it like no difference between anyone anybody and somebody so in this case you're talking about these indefinite pronouns so let me think I'd say when you're talking about someone all right so someone again these are indefinite pronouns we don't know specifically who they're talking to they're often used in the subject position of the sentence so I'd say that for example where is it trying to also give you guys make sure I give you the the correct information the perfect information so let's see where is it oh I think it froze for a second okay no it's back alright so for example I'd say that you know someone and somebody they may be able you may be able to use them interchangeably for example like someone someone copied my homework or if you're a student alright you could also say somebody copied my homework it's an indefinite pronoun you don't know who that person is talking about now if you're talking about anyone or anybody all right they're used so gosh where is it anybody and any same is it like for anyone in anybody they're used with questions all right does anyone does anyone study English does anybody study English ok so those can also be used interchangeably it is an indefinite pronoun is it ok so I would also say that anyone and anybody it's also used in the negative that's the other important so for example if you're talking about maybe you can't hear or you like I can't hear anyone we would use it in the negative tense all right that's also something to keep in mind so let's look at somebody said your tech friend you look like Tom Cruise all right I will I will take that as a compliment thank you your tech friend if I look like Tom Cruise aren't you a fan of the supernatural series by chance my wife you wanna she loves supernatural she's very happy about that what does that mean out of in this phrase straight out of so if somebody says out of out of that would be the informal spelling oh you TTA it's more out of it basically means where you come so if I say like oh this is I'm coming at you straight out of Budapest this is coming from this place so they say like straight out of Compton like you had just mentioned would be like they come from this place are there differences between British idiomatic expressions and American malbert ass yes there are um we did a quiz before with Ali from Papa teach me talking about some American idioms versus British idioms so for example I think an American idiom would be take a raincheck where is if you say I want to take a raincheck it means that you promise to do something later let's take a raincheck let's have dinner tonight nah I'll take a raincheck I think some of these idioms are common that people might understand them it crossed all English varieties in British English as well they asked us one about what's a chinwag and this is an idiom expression of British idiom that I had never heard of so I didn't know but a chinwag is kind of just to have like a chat a talk an informal discussion with someone so again these idioms can they they can be very different so is just something to keep in mind but again the more exposure that you get the easier it is to learn so if you're somebody who wants to learn more British idioms then listen to watch some British TV shows if you want to learn more American idioms then then watch those shows because again TV shows they use them informally all the time so let's see have you ever been to LA or New York City yes most of I have my wife's family they live in Los Angeles and New York City we've just visited we've been there visiting before that's actually where we got married two years ago in New York City but if you visit the u.s. those are some those are some good places to visit let's see and crush can you give some examples semi ask and give some examples of attracted and crush in a sentence so I would say that you are you are attracted to someone and it's used in that sense so like I am attracted to another person you could say well I am attracted to butterflies alright you are drawn to these things a crush is used as a noun and we often use it with the verb have you have a crush you have a crush on someone so we follow it with that preposition so you could say like oh I am really attracted to my neighbour to say that with using crush I have a crush on my neighbour the same meaning just using different words let's see I'll to have you better been to Brazil no we have not been to Brazil but we really really want to go so shivani ass analysis analysis verse analyses so again this is a that's a good one so analysis would be the singular analyses would be the plural but I want to say I think often you people often talk about just analysis the the one example I give you that with like would be with like data or data or data you they say either one in the US the plural form of it is datum but nobody not many people really use it that way they use data as the singular as well as the plural and I think I'd have to double-check analysis might be the same way probably not as extensive you probably hear like oh they've given us the analyses of which is like would be different forms of analysis and this is what it told us but if you're talking about like the the data and data that is one case where I think data has kind of become the the word for both the singular and plural form can we use but and however interchangeably the short answer yes the to give you a little bit of a longer answer I would say however it's more common especially if you're talking about your academic writing or if your talking about speaking in a presentation it's more common as a transition word at the beginning of a sentence so if you're gonna try and contrast something and you're you want to use the word at the very beginning of the sentence I'd say go with however use but is more of a coordinating conjunction to combine two sentences to combine two independent clauses so that is just a quick rule of thumb you don't always have to do that but that is I think that's just a good rule of thumb to follow you know use however at the beginning of the sentence use but to combine sentences and if you don't know what a rule of thumb is that's another expression it's just talking about a general rule to follow not specific alright pop says oh sorry I have you ever been to Egypt no that's another place we would like to go we would love to go visit Cairo see the pyramids we've heard it's amazing there's too many places we want to travel our look we have a little baby right now she's five months old they she was going to do the lesson with us my wife you wanna and our little girl Amelia we're going to do the lesson but the little one she's not in a very good mood right now so we figured it was best not to put her make her sit in front of the camera so we'll try that another time whatsit and very cold versus freezing what's the difference there is none I would say I always like words like freezing if you can take out these adverbs like very which is just kind of an adverb of degree it's it's common in just everyday English I use very all the time it's just you know it feels natural but I think when you're speaking or especially when you're writing it's better to use more precise language and instead of saying very cold yes a freezing that's a very just one word it's it's very specific and I I just think it's better overall it's just something I would recommend but if you're just having a conversation you know whether you want to say gosh it's freezing outside or it's very cold outside the meaning is the same Preedy hi hi how are you hi Sumner nice to meet you and although nice to meet you from Brazil thank you ludovic which countries in Eastern Europe would you like to explore a lot of questions about me today which is cool so we've been my wife is Romanian American so obviously we've been to Romania we've looked like to go to like I'd love to go to like Poland we have a friend a good friend there I would even love to go to Moldova even further out east on the other side of Romania we'd love to visit Ukraine as well just all these places there there's so many different places to go not enough time Sebastian hi from Brazil excellent Lucia have you been to Italy yes we have my wife really wants to go back to Italy I think we want to explore northern Italy we haven't explored northern Italy as much but we've been to you know Rome I've been to Chengdu tada very beautiful beautiful country binge-watching alright somebody are you asking about binge-watching or just say that you are binge-watching if you guys are out there wondering well what does it mean to binge-watch it means to watch a lot and watch it consecutively so for example if you guys want to binge watch our lessons it means that you start now you watch one lesson and then you continue and continue and continue until hours have gone by and you could say wow I've been binge-watching your your lessons nowadays with Netflix I think many people like like to binge watch alright so let's see what else do we have here alright Scott I don't know who Scott Adam says goals are for losers what do you think Jonas okay uh I'm not sure who I guess I don't know who Scott Adams is I don't know if I should know who Scott had him is I'm not sure why he would think goals are for losers it's it's subjective I guess anybody can think that I personally don't agree with that I think it's good to have goals to try and like think of things that you want to accomplish I often tell people when it comes to language learning try to make short term goals don't just say a goal like oh I want to become fluent set goals kind of talking about well how you're going to reach fluency like oh okay you know I want to read ten minutes a day and you find a new Zartan article online you read a book and you read for ten minutes a day and then you could say well I've accomplished that goal or I didn't and you know that's up to you I I think for me I think goals are a great way of organizing your like kind of making a plan in organizing what you need to do and think of okay I need to get from point A to point B and thinking about your goals and how you're going to reach that it's just a good way of organizing it some everybody's different some people might not like organizing things and that that's up to them should I watch a movie with or without subtitles I honestly I think it's up to you but I I think it's good to do both from time to time I think it's always good when you're using subtitles you're also getting you're practicing your reading skills you're hearing the correct pronunciation and you're seeing the words so you're able to match that up especially if you're watching a TV show or movie and they're using a lot of idioms or they're connecting their speech so I think in that way it can become helpful and you could think oh okay I I know what that they're saying now and then you could go out and practice that I don't think you always have to use it but I think it's good to switch it up from time to time and use subtitles um let's see hello hello how'd I do Princess Mira hello how are you um let's see what else Ardi I feel like I killed two birds with one stone by watching your video excellent great use of the head expression kill two birds with one stone it's not a very ideal day it's not a very nice expression because you don't want to think about killing birds but if you guys don't know what that expression means to kill two birds with one stone it means to accomplish two things at the same time so for example maybe with this discussion we're talking about learning English and maybe you want to practice your listening skills so you are practicing your listening skills you are learning other things about the English language you're learning about me and you could say yeah I'm killing two birds with one stone so let's see my speaking style is awesome thank you I really appreciate that thank you so let's see you again throw out some more questions if you have questions for me questions about English pronunciation vocabulary let me know if there's a word that you would like to know how to pronounce this word just just hit me up I want to go back and kind of talk about somebody I think I didn't like my example when I talked about somebody someone anybody anyone but just to clarify against somebody and someone you're gonna use those in positive sentences anybody anybody and anyone use those with questions and negative sentence they're all indefinite pronouns a great way to again what I like to do and I tell you guys this sometimes is that if you have questions about you know vocabulary or even grammar put it into Google and then click on images because if you put it into Google and do a search it'll bring up a bunch of different sites and some sites maybe you're gonna find useful other sites not maybe not so much if you click on images it's a very fast way of finding what you need and getting a quick example so you could put that into Google click on images and I think it's a really great way to also get a visual of what it is that you're trying to understand especially if you're talking about like a verb tense then you could put that in to present past perfect into Google click on images you'll get some examples and you'll also get kind of a like a bit of a map to show you to help you better comprehend what it means to use that that grammar tense so let's see let's see sorry they're looking awesome thank you all right I'm uh do you know anything about a Mideast no I'm not sure is that a program I say vaguely familiar is that a program that places English teachers in different countries in the Middle East maybe I've heard of it but maybe I'm thinking of something else I might be conflating that with another program and to conflate means to think of two things as the same thing when they're actually different alright so there's another one do you know energy no Bob the Canadian no I don't I know who he is I know that he is another English instructor on YouTube it's kind of a it's a little bit of a small community that even though there are many different English instructors on YouTube I think many of us are aware of a lot of the other instructors sometime from time to time I will go look at other people's lessons to see how they're teaching I think it's like you're able to observe a class in that regard to see what their style is like to see what they're talking about to see how they're presenting the information I think it's really great for me to see how did you decide to lead the YouTube channel like did you mean like like when did we decide to start one when we decided to start one after I finished my my MA and Teasle teaching English to speakers of other languages we were getting ready to move from California and I just thought it sounded like a great way to try and the goal was kind of like what we're doing right now to create a bit of a global classroom to be able to teach so many people at the same time and and again like provide it for for free basically to do that on on YouTube it's a free platform you don't even need to sign up for it anybody can go on there you can learn English you can learn with somebody we think it's great obviously I think we do we'd make some from ad revenue if you have ads on and we do as we've gotten bigger we have been doing some more sponsored videos with companies that we've tried that we think offer a good service for language learners you guys have probably seen some of those lessons before where I give a quick shout out - mmm a service for for learning English that we think people might be interested in so do you also have a job yes we I do have a job so this is this is a job for us so we do we are trying to make this as a full-time job would be great in the future we plan to offer some online courses and kind of do a mix between some video lessons that are already recorded as well as doing some of these live lessons to make it more interactive so we're gonna offer those later hopefully later in the year and that is something that will you know you don't have to buy it but if students want to buy that they can but I also do teach I teach for another company that teaches kids in China so somebody else Abdul Aziz what do you advise to learn accent American or British honestly that that's up to you it depends I guess mm-hmm

where you live where you're from if one accent is easier for you then maybe try and go with that one perhaps you might think that another the accent will provide you with some kind of advantage in the future maybe with your work in that case then then try to learn that one but I think both of them its comprehensible wherever you're traveling in the world where if you have the British accent or the American accent I think it's your personal preference let's see I'm trying to look through some of these older ones made from verbs are you talking about like again brightly you've said would you explain ing adjectives made from verbs I don't know if you have an example I think a lot of words have they have different forms so for example I think you could say the verb like to excite it could be would be the verb form you also have an ING adjective exciting you also have a needy adjective excited excited so the there are so many words that can take on different forms whether it's a noun whether it's a verb whether it's an adjective I think that's a great way to expand and build your vocabulary if because you already know the meaning of some of these words so I think it's a good jumping point to learn those different ones let's see who else we have how can we improve our reading skills honestly the best way is I think just to keep reading keep reading but most importantly read at your level I think this is something that a lot of many learners don't do especially if they're at the beginning level and they're an adult they want to read something that you know I think it's great tool eat read what you're interested in but if you're trying to find if you're a beginner learner or even intermediate and you find an online article that might be above your level and you don't know so many you don't have the you don't have the reading vocabulary to comprehend it it could make you feel a bit frustrated it could make you feel you know like you don't want to continue doing this so I think it's very important to read at your level or even below your level when I was learning Spanish I would read these books for teenagers like this these kids books they were like maybe like a hundred were a hundred pages they weren't very long some of them even had pictures it was a little bit like a Harry Potter fantasy type thing but it was at my level and I could read through the story I did not - I didn't understand every single word but I didn't always have to look it up in the dictionary and I could put the words into into context and that was very important how can I move from intermediate to advanced that's a great question mama would I'd say that it's very important to continue getting different exposure to the language exposure listening exposure reading exposure speaking practice your writing skills and as you continue doing that I think it's you know the way I look at it is somebody's curve is like when they start out you're just gonna be skyrocketing and the more you get intermediate and kind of go into advance it's gonna level off more and it's gonna level off to the point where you feel like oh I'm not making any progress it becomes harder to notice your progress as well but if you keep practicing and you're practicing maybe not every day but every other day or a few times a week you if as long as it's continuous you will keep improving even if you don't notice it let's see yo bro hello Wes teacher hello how are you santosh how to better writing an essay I think again it just becomes one of those things two things I'd say make sure you learn the different parts of an essay when you're talking you could learn the different types of an essay learn the different parts about an intro the body the conclusion and once you're kind of you know okay what the essay consists of read essays because the more you read them the more you're going to understand about that form about okay each paragraph should start with a topic sentence that's what the paragraph is about then you're going to have your support and it's going to support the topic sentence that is the main idea and then you're going to have a conclusion sentence so the more that you read essays too I think that you're going to internalize that information and it will improve your writing as well reading and writing I think they go hand in hand let's see

let's see IRA hi how are you like it you guys kind of having a conversation I do want verses I want what's the difference I think I do want it would it sounds a little awkward but I think it's colloquial like kind of an added emphasis I think mostly in most cases you just want to say I want you don't need to use the helping verb do in that case unless you're talking about the negative I don't want something but I'd say like if I wanted to add emphasis and somebody says hey do you want some chocolate cake and I'd be like oh I do want some chocolate cake then again it's mostly in just informal speech that people might say it just just as an emphasis it's not touch the thesis is the last or last second sir so again there is a difference I've noticed when you're talking about writing between or which country you're talking about because the way that if you're talking about writing an essay for an American audience then yes there is a certain form that you should use if it's from another country that forum may be different so for example you're talking about a thesis the first part of the essay is going to be the introduction generally the thesis is going to go like the last sentence of the introduction that is your thesis that is when you're basically stating what you're what what your stance is what your opinion is what what the essay is about and then you go into the body as far as when you're writing in in the United States that's the form that they would teach you for an essay so it's really important that you also keep your audience in mind because it could be very different depending on the country you're writing for pauldron is your accent from North

England or the Midwest I don't that I really don't know I have a I'd say a standard American accent I grew up in the southeast part of the United States I spent a lot of my childhood living in New England in the Northeast I did my University out in the Colorado in the Midwest and the last place I lived in the United States was in California all the way out on the west coast I took one of those I think one of those like BuzzFeed things about find out where your accent is from and they asked you about all these questions about oh what do you call this what word do you use do you say soda or pop and with the fauna results it gave me it said I was like from Oklahoma I've never lived in Oklahoma it's kind of the middle of the US which made me think okay maybe my accent is just kind of all over and they just gave me the middle let's see sometimes lose words Thanks helpful it'll back what are the best ways to improve your vocabulary and fast that's a good question I think to improve your vocabulary to continue building your vocabulary I'd say a few things that might be a little different the first thing I would say you know you want to build vocabulary think about the words that are specific to you as an individual okay what kind of vocabulary do want to learn because you know if you are a student then and you're studying a specific topic then you might want to learn vocabulary related to that topic or your job you might want to learn the vocabulary related to that job so I'd say I think it's good to start with vocabulary that's more meaningful to you and that's why I said like well what it what is it that you do think about that because those words are more meaningful that those are words are you're more likely to probably use those words when you're speaking when you're writing you might even be more likely to hear those words because that is the environment in which you're in and and that means you're more likely to remember it so I'd say start with that as far as identifying the type of vocabulary you want to learn and then you could use different techniques for example spaced repetition where you learn a vocabulary word you study it again a few days wait later then you wait a little longer maybe a week study that word again then by using those spaced intervals you're more likely to remember and recall the information so again I also say don't overdo it with vocabulary because I think it's good too if you want to learn like 1 2 3 4 words a day that might be I think reasonable some students I know they would they would get a big vocabulary list of about 20 words in one day and I I think maybe some people are able to do that I think the average language learner is not able to remember all of those words and I think if you overwhelm yourself with too much then you forget most of it and it doesn't help you alright so good be active on Instagram sis Mira yes we do want to be more active on Instagram like I said I think at the beginning it's difficult because we're doing all these things Instagram YouTube Twitter Facebook and we try to stay as active as possible Instagram is something I think we've neglected a little more and we should be more active so yes we will try to do just that

let's see all this view is so what's the difference between who in whom denilson so who would be you're talking about an unknown some an unknown person in the subject position like I'd say whom you know I'm trying to think who are you for example we we don't know whom is used in the object position so think about it if a question I'd say like Oh whom do you like and it's used whom in that case because think about the object I like this person this unknown person it's in the object position so then you would use whom I think in in writing it's more common to continue using whom I think I often and spoke in English people overwhelming just use who and they'd say who do you like I said I said that in a video while back and I think I got a lot of blowback a lot of native speakers like oh I still use whom in my opinion I think when you're talking about spoken English people overwhelmingly use who but in writing it's still grammatically correct appropriate to use whom somebody I've been using Anki for space Anke for space repetition I've heard of Enki I haven't tried it but thank you for sharing with us Jonas excellent let's see let's see all right trying to just go through so many of these alright guys well I just say the time it's getting late we do need to go out I need to get outside today so I am gonna end it right there I thank you guys so much for being here I'm sorry if I didn't get to your questions today if I didn't get to it I apologize please write them in the comments and I will try to to answer the question or at least give you a reference and send you somewhere so you can learn a little bit more about it but I really thank you guys for being with me today for for checking out the these live lessons and you know for being a part of our community it really does mean a lot to us we're very fortunate to have this this classroom and again I think you guys make it so special and I really appreciate that so thank you guys hmm farhat fancy marbella paul dragon i vanish I see that please answer my question I didn't see the question I hope try to write it in the comments Avenue show tried to to get that to get to that once it's posted marry Santosh princess Meera thank you guys serious I really thank you guys for being with me today again trying to give as many shout outs as I can Priya Carla thank you neckla Phyllis Maria the Inga Jonas Aurora big shout out to all of you guys interactive English keep an eye out because we will be back for more lessons we do lessons every Tuesday and Saturday it is it can be grueling at times to keep up with that pace but so far we've managed to do Tuesdays and Saturdays that those are the days all right so hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend even if you're watching this later write to us in the comments write us a question or just tell us you know tell us your name tell us where you're from we just want to hear from you guys so have a wonderful day I will see you guys later so long

LIVE ENGLISH LESSON Q&A with Interactive English

everyone welcome to today's live lesson so this is a lesson that we do pretty much once a month where I want to interact with all of you I want to take your questions and you can ask me anything when it comes to learning English you can ask me about vocabulary pronunciation grammar you can even ask some personal questions if you have questions that you want to know more about me and in case you don't know about me my name is Wes and this is Interactive English and our channel is all about trying to help learners practice and improve their English skills and we make interactive lessons so that it's not just passive learning that you're just watching a video we try to make it more active learning and get you engaged and have you answer questions have you write comments and and this is another way for us to do that to have these live lessons and be able to talk with all of you directly so just want to give some quick shout outs to everybody here some people hello Sayid Gibson Angela dual um un from Vietnam excellent Karishma dwith Thune sorry if i mispronounce names - I apologize Goethe dis tryin Hong hello Yasser how are you where am i so i am in budapest hungary in case you don't know so this is going to be a live Q&A and there you can see a picture of my family and that is in budapest that is the parliament building which is right behind us it is a gorgeous building and budapest is a lovely city which i suggest you that you visit if you ever have want to go take a vacation it's a good spot to be and yes I'm not not this video is not sponsored by the city of Budapest but that is where we are at so what I want to do again is take your questions and the only thing that I would ask you is if you're asking questions to try and and make them pretty specific if it's a specific Cabul airy word if it's a specific word and say how do you pronounce this word or if it's a specific grammar concept just try to make them specific sometimes I'll get questions like oh can you go over all 12 verb tenses no we've done that in another lesson but it you know I just want to be able to go through as many questions as I can and I'm gonna go ahead and say if I don't get to your question then I apologize first and foremost but write it in the write it in the comments later on once the lesson gets posted write to me in the comments because I we we really try to answer as many questions as we can and respond to everybody in the comments because that that's just what we want to do to build and grow this community because we're very happy about it so the first question some of you may be wondering is well this was going to be a live lesson with the whole family with my wife you wanna who has been on videos in the past you've probably seen some of her lessons as well if you are familiar with the channel and our little baby girl I mean which I'll just show you again she's right here okay so there's our little bear outfit but before the lesson was beginning she was starting to nod off Emme so we put her to sleep and that is a good query so nod off and and what it means is to start to go to sleep so if somebody is nodding off it means they're like they're almost falling asleep so she was nodding off or like okay we'll put her we'll put her in bed she can sleep and then you guys you're just stuck with me alright so again try to ask some questions I'll answer as many as I can and we'll just go through them so she hun says hello how are you I am fantastic thank you thank you I appreciate it but yeah we're doing well the the fall season I love fall I love the change of the colors and just falling of the leaves and it just it makes me feel like just something new something new is starting Katy from Germany hello how are you uh let's see what are good games I could do with my secondary students ah good question so there are so many great games I think for learning English because actually a lot of you out there I know I hear we hear from people and say oh I am an English teacher and again we love hearing from English teachers as well one game that I would love to do just off the top of my head which is which is an idiom and if you don't know what that means if something is off the top of your head it just means you suddenly think of it that you're not going to do any research you suddenly think about it this is more of an introduction game but it can use it you can use it to have students practice or certain grammar concepts so something that I would do as an introduction is depending on how big the class is you put everybody in a chair everybody's sitting in a chair and the room is pretty open and they're you I wouldn't put it in a circle but you would tell students one student has to be standing and I would play the game as well so basically it start out with I'm the first person standing at everybody's sitting and you have to say something true about yourself and if it's also true for another person then they have to find another seat so for example I'd be standing in front of the class and I would say well I have one brother and if somebody else has a brother then they must find another seat now as people are moving around I'm gonna try and sit down which means another person is left standing and then they have to say something about themselves so you can use it to practice different grammar concepts if you're using the present simple or maybe even present perfect and you'd have to somebody would have to consistently use the present perfect and then say well I have been to China and then people have been to China they would switch seats or I have seen some movie and then people that have seen it they switch seats so that is a good that is a fun game that you can use in a variety of ways to practice grammar vocabulary as well as a good introduction game so that is one that I would recommend let's see what else do we have how do you pronounce months all right so again this word when you're talking about the months of the year I'm emphasizing it a little there if I'm speaking quickly I'd say you know how many months are in the year it's almost like that that o is more of a schwa sound that ma ma months months when I say it I think that you might not even hear the th sound it's just so quick it almost sounds like an M unts months so again this is one thing I think when you're like speaking quickly and people will say you know oh there's 12 months out of the year so that is something I would say naturally um you know I was born in the month of November so I don't know if again it's up to you if you can hear that th or not it's very slight but that is what I would say about that what does every other day mean fabiola excellent so if you're talking about every other day basically it's talking about just every two days so for example every day would be Monday Tuesday Wednesday Thursday Friday for example every other day would be Monday Wednesday friday-sunday Tuesday Thursday and you're doing it basically every two days another way they look at it is that if I'm teaching a number of classes all right say that I teach ten classes so there's basically lesson one to ten and I say you're going to get homework every other class which would then mean if I give homework in the first class then then the next time they'll get homework is on the third class and then the fifth class and then the seventh and it's every other so you can use that in a variety of ways every other day every other month every other you know every other lesson and again it just means you're kind of alternating but basically by twos all right so let's see what else do we have is as a con how to improve the your writing skills honestly I'll give a quick answer to this and this is something that I truly promote and recommend is just to read the best way I think to improve your your writing is just to read because when you're writing it's all about you know your thinking about what's the correct vocabulary uses what is the correct syntax the structure of the sentences that I'm going to use when you're reading you're able to see that you're able to see the correct form and I think that translates back into your writing when you then need to produce the language and try to write and think about okay which word should I use to express this thought this feeling this idea so reading I think is just such a great way to improve all of your language skills because it really helps build vocabulary it helps you see the correct grammar structure and then when you need to produce the language which is when you write and when you speak that you are more likely to be able to do that correctly so that is what I'd say that's my big hint to that so Briona house what does douche bag mean well that is just an insult so if you say that to somebody then you are insulting that person so there's not like again it does have another literal meaning which I'm not gonna explain but you can google that if you want to but it's something that you might hear other people say too about another person and it's a derogatory term so let's see hello from Bangladesh hi so again if you guys are just joining us I'm just taking your questions you can ask me about vocabulary grammar pronunciation and I just want to spend a little time with you guys and kind of go over that and just be able to connect with you so that is what we're doing and this is good also just for your listening for your listening comprehension to not just learn maybe about some more vocabulary and grammar but just to see if you can follow along because I think my speech is a little slower but I also articulate and enunciate my my speech which is probably why it may be easier to understand what I'm saying so again this is great if you guys can understand me then that's perfect I love hearing that because that means I am at your level let's see Juicin hi from Haiti hello let's see Ducati cuts he says hi one question please what is more used in spoken English also as well as or two it really depends on on what your what part so for example 2 is an adverb of degree and that's often gonna be used to modify an adjective and say it's too hot too cold I I'm just I was too tired to do something so I think it is it's a very common word but it's used differently than those other ones I think also are as well for example also is just more of a transition word when you're trying to add additional information like Oh yesterday I went to the supermarket also I went rollerskating I don't know I'm just giving more information and in that case I do think it's a very common transition word one that I like to use that's a little more academic if you're giving a presentation or you're writing something formal would be in addition in addition means the same is also but I think also is more common especially in spoken English but if you want to be a little more professional in a professional setting I like in addition in additions good let's see when I'm trying I said when I am trying to speak fast I make more mistakes um which I can avoid in writing what's your advice thanks in advance um what I would say is that again just just to keep doing it don't don't focus on the mistakes I think the idea as long as you keep getting exposure with reading and writing especially if you're more of an advanced level you are going to be able to just eliminate those mistakes over time without even realizing it like if you make a mistake with I don't know a preposition that follows an adjective people will still understand but if you're if I were to hear that I know okay that was a small mistake as long as you're reading long as you're writing and just keep practicing and listening and getting more exposure you will then eliminate those mistakes I I would not encourage you to try and again I would just say try to speak naturally don't worry about trying to speak too fast but don't worry about like oh I should slow down and then try to think about what I'm going to say the reason why writing people might make less grammar mistakes in their writing is because it is more of a reflective practice that you're writing it down and then you're actually able to see it and change it if you realize something is wrong and everybody does this I do this all the time if I'm writing something and I go back and look at it and say yeah I want to use this word instead or maybe I see a typo and like oh I didn't I made this mistake right here but as far as speaking definitely I would always encourage you just speak speak it your speed speak at a speed that feels comfortable and and just do it without worrying about if you said something wrong or if you made a grammar mistake just keep moving forward all right that's what I would say for when it comes to speaking so they asked where is it I guess it means what does I it says what does grim mean so if you describe something like a situation as grim it basically means that the outlook is not positive that the outlook is something probably what will happen is not going to be a good thing all right so if I say oh you know we are in a grim situation then that means that you're in a situation that's not good it's not positive it's a difficult situation so often I also think of maybe a doctor if you're if somebody is sick and they go to the hospital and they asked like well how is the patient doing how are they doing and the doctor says you know it's grim that would mean that well the it's it's not a good thing it's not positive in the future there could be some problems so right now the if it's grim it's just an it's not a good situation so that is what I would say Daniel asked what does bamboozle mean all right so to bamboozle usually you would bamboozle another person so to bamboozle somebody would just mean to trick them and often I think to trick them in a way in which you are kind of stealing something from them you are taking something from them so it's not like you would play a practical joke on somebody a trick and say oh I bamboozled you know you would be bamboozling somebody if you are tricking them out of money or something or you're tricking them and you're they let you borrow their car and you're like oh I tricked them I bamboozled them I was able to get something so that is what bamboozle would mean to trick something in order to have something and actually obtain something George R George well Jorge Lopez I could say English name like kind of George hello how can I improve my intonation I've talked about this in some other lessons before the concept of shadowing and shadowing is when you listen to you know it could be something from a movie it could be something from one of our lessons and you listen to it and then you try to say it the exact same way and you try to say it right after they do so that it almost sounds like you're saying it at the same time think about singing a song when you hear music but many people if you're in the car you like to sing along with the song this is shadowing you are basically trying to sing the song in the same way you're trying to use the same emphasis the same intonation and you can use that not just with songs but anything you hear so if it's a phrase from a movie and somebody says it in a really unique way you can try to do that and say it in the exact same way recently we just had a lesson come out I talked about some famous movie quotes and in that lesson I discussed using those movie quotes to practice your shadowing if you have not seen the lesson I will throw a link in there right now so you can check that out and again movies it's a good way to practice shadowing you hear something and you try to say it in the exact same way in that case I think it's best to take like kind of like shorter lips it's not like you're going to hear a one-hour presentation and then repeat everything that the person is saying so I think if you have like for example if it's a speech maybe you have the transcript in front of you and you can read and follow along and you can try to say it the same way that's another good way to practice but the shadowing is a good way to practice your pronunciation your intonation and your emphasis okay so check out that that lesson how to take notes fast or dictate coding how to take notes fast or dictate while listening this is again I think more like a study habit skill about taking notes quickly when when you're thinking about your listening comprehension and I think that's going to be different for each individual what I would tell students when they're taking notes especially if you're doing it in a foreign language when I when the place that I worked in at the school in California the school was preparing students for University so most of the students that came to our school whatever country they were from most of the students were anywhere from they were from 18 to you know 26 years old and the idea is that they were learning English they were going to take the IELTS or the TOEFL and then attend University and that's one of the things we would practice was note-taking because when you're in university you're going to be sitting in a class the professor's going to be up there giving a lecture and they're gonna take notes and if you if English is not your first language I don't know again culturally how people in different countries would take notes but I would just often tell them that when you're listening you want to focus on those content words those are the nouns the adjectives the adverbs that first off they help put a picture in your mind but if you're listening to those content words then those are the most important things and try to write those down so we would practice this and I would read them some kind of excerpt or I would give a presentation about a topic and we would practice taking notes and the students would listen for those content words write down as much as they can as they could and then afterwards I would give them a little quiz so this something that you could practice on your own if you find some a website to help you practice your listening skills and they say listen to this and then answer the question well while you're listening try to take notes try to write down those content words that important information the names the dates the places and then see if you can answer the question so that is what I would recommend for taking some of those notes let's look at hmm so sad you said what is the difference between half two and must please give some examples both of them have to and must our modal's of obligations something you have to do it's it's an obligation you're required to do that something you must do it's also an obligation and and it's something that you you another way put it you have to do I would say that I think have to is probably a little more casual you will hear it more in colloquial speech people you know in the in just their everyday conversation I think they'll talk about things they have to do Oh like today you know well I have to go to work at this time and then afterwards I have to go to my friend house because I'm gonna help them with something and you talk about things you have to do must I think is a little more formal it's probably something you would see it a little more in writing a little more professional when you're you're talking about things that one must do or so if you're reading something you might come across that but both of them have the same meaning it is a modal of obligation hi hello from Siberia excellent awesome let's see what else do we have I like how some of you guys are chatting with each other and ancing answering questions and please help each other out I would always encourage you sometimes it's moving quickly and I miss some questions but if you see somebody ask a question and you know the answer help them out answer the question share your knowledge of the English language I would definitely encourage you to do that that is also another good way to practice your skills because I would do that with students all the time as well I would have something like well the student is actually going to teach the class and they would have to study some either some topic or maybe even some grammar concept and then they would come to the front and give a presentation and actually try to teach the grammar and in try and in teaching the grammar that means they have to learn and understand it so again it's a great way to practice your skills David says hello how can i improve my listening again I think it's just to keep getting exposure to the language you know I could tell you know listen to TV shows movies listen to music but the other thing I would say is because when people are listening like most of you are listening to me right now it is passive listening which means that you're just listening to me talk you're listening to me give information but you don't have to do anything if you don't want to I would say if you want to improve your skills it's good to get some passive listening whether you're watching a TV show or movie or listening to music but also try to do some active listening as well and actually try to have something you have to do afterwards so for example I gave you I just talked about listening to some presentation and then answering questions and you could take notes if you want to but if you have to answer questions if you have to do some action then that means that it's an active listening exercise so I would say don't just listen passively try to listen actively as well and we've done some of those lessons before on our channel where we try to do make it an active listening exercise where you will listen to me say something and then you actually have to try and answer the question you write something in the comments you actually have to do something recently I did a lesson about trying to listen for vocabulary and then put it into context and I took some of these words that were they were a bit obscure and if you don't know what obscure means obscure means that it's that it's not common and it's rather unknown now the idea was that I don't want you to say oh you have to know these I was trying to find words that many people have not heard of and what I wanted to do the listening practice was to listen to it and then try to put the word into in context and say oh I understand the word because I listened to the sentence and I understand everything else so if you haven't seen that lesson right there I'm gonna write it and I'll just put it in quotes listening listening practice but that is a good way to get some active listening practice all right is to do some of those sites those exercises let's see what else do we got I want to know the meaning on chinga I want to know the meaning of blaze of glory so I I'm guessing you may be asking me that because of the famous song by Bon Jovi blaze of glory so I'm just gonna use that as an example but it is another expression in English if somebody says you know I'm gonna go down in a blaze of glory so if they're there talking about a blaze of glory it kind of means like one final fight that you're gonna give it your all and kind of it's it's going to be glorious alright and it's often used that phrase to go down in a blaze of glory it basically means that you're going to lose you're not going to succeed you're gonna do it anyway you're gonna fight and you know if something happens if it goes wrong then it goes wrong so in that case when they say you know somebody goes down in a blaze of glory it could be a fight in which they say I'm gonna die and I'm gonna go out until the end I'm gonna go out fighting or it could be something where maybe somebody has to give a presentation and they they're not ready for it they're not prepared they don't know what they're going to say and instead of running away they might say you know I'm just gonna do it anyway and I'm gonna if I go down in a blaze of glory so what I don't care I'm gonna go down in a blaze of glory I'm just gonna say it and people are going to boo me they're gonna get upset but you do it anyway alright so that is the way I would define a blaze of glory right let's see some people excellent I love how it seems like you encourage people help each other with some answers excellent see people helping each other out so uh let's see where's your kid at the moment before I told you guys remember I said at the very beginning cuz we were gonna have this be like a family Q&A and I said right before we started Emmy was starting to nod off and do you guys remember from the people that were there at the beginning what does it mean to nod off if somebody is nodding off it means that they're kind of like they're starting to fall asleep so she was starting to fall asleep so we said okay we don't want to wake her up and and put her in front of the camera so she is sleeping right now that is where she is let's see I'm going to be an English teacher but I still can't speak fluently which makes me sad most of the time is Alana I'd say again keep just keep practicing keep getting exposure to the language I think that's awesome that that you're gonna be an English teacher and and again I think the more exposure you get the more comfortable you get the the better you know the better your skills will be but also as a teacher I think as well I think it all goes it goes hand in hand because I think that when I first started teaching even though I was a native speaker and it's like wow I know English I was I think I was a pretty terrible teacher at the beginning I'll go ahead and say that there was a lot that I had to learn and I did over the past 15 years I think I've improved I've gotten better I understand teaching and methodology a lot more and it's just it's all part of the the process all right so Luna assume the explain the possessive cause I'm not really sure what you mean I guess by possessive cause I don't know if you mean possessive Clause I don't know if you could give an example or if it's something again if I can't answer your question or I don't know if I don't understand one resource that I always say is just try to google it just throw it into Google usually you have sites that always come up with explanations and examples it is such a useful resource to use is just to to Google it so I'm not really sure exactly what it is and I know that probably one thing that's frustrating in English is that there are different words to identify different things for example you could talk about the present continuous verb tense well some people call it the present progressive it's the same thing but they use different names to identify that verb tense and I think that can be confirmed confusing for learners and it can be frustrating for teachers as well because I've had that some mix-up before when you're trying to talk about something and I'm saying the present present progressive and somebody else like wait I the present continuous why are you saying something different let's see do you have some rules the schwa can you says so if you guys don't know what the schwa sound is it is just an unstressed sound in English and it's it's an unstressed syllable and it most of the time sometimes it has no sound at all it's omitted but oftentimes it has like an uh sound just that uh and I think a great example would be the word banana all right but Nana so it's three syllables banana and that last one that nough because the it's ba na it's only the vowel the letter A but that last one has that schwa sound it's unstressed banana and it has that sound so we actually did a lesson before if you guys want to look at it on the schwa sound but again this is where I think you can study words that specifically have the schwa the schwa to be able to identify lessons please show us some love you can check out our patreon page we have some cool rewards it's just it's another great way to connect with us to interact with us and it really does it helped it goes a long way in helping us continue to do this and put out all of these free lessons on YouTube for anybody who wants to see them and we try to do two lessons a week we have we do one recorded lesson which we post and then these live lessons as well so you can check out our patreon page if you want to show us some love and be a patron if not that's okay no problem don't worry don't worry about it so thank you guys so much for being here with me again if I didn't get to your question write to me in the comments once the the lesson gets posted please hit that like button if you enjoy these Q&A sessions if you find them useful if they are helpful then let me know that's the way that you can tell me is by hitting that like button so I think okay this is something I need to continue doing because learners find value in actually being being able to ask me questions directly and have me answer them write to me in the comments check out our social media which is it's up here yes we're active on Facebook Twitter Instagram and YouTube and yeah just thank you guys so much for being here give some more shout outs to ish thank you so Chi Daniel miss reluctant Syed Angela hope you guys have a wonderful rest of your day and I will see you next time so long

35 Creative Ways to Write SAID | Make Your Writing POP

let's talk about some creative ways that you can say the word said so why is this important well first it allows you to be more descriptive it's also going to keep the reader's attention because these words are just more engaging they're more captivating and you will avoid redundancies because you don't want to keep saying he said she said we said they said you need to mix it up so let's begin and say that you would like to persuade someone to do something or think something here are some verbs to help make your writing more descriptive you could use pleaded and this is when you're making an urgent or emotional request uh like don't leave he pleaded this is very similar to the next one which is begged except I I feel like begged is probably a little stronger than pleaded but once again this is a strong way to make an urgent request I want a balloon the child begged so in this case it's just more descriptive I'm capturing that feeling I want to balloon the child bag this is something that uh well yeah my child told me last week you can also use entreated which means to try hard to persuade someone to do something now this verb it's probably not as common as these others however it's still very useful because it's specific and if I want to capture a direct quote I could say if you help me with the presentation then I'll work your weekend shift for you he entreated and then we have the verb implored this means to ask someone to do something or not to do something in a very sincere and emotional way think about this situation say that a woman gets pulled over by the police for Speed and she's getting ready to get a ticket so she says please don't give me a speeding ticket she implored so she's imploring the police officer not to give her a ticket and doing this in a sincere way and of course I had to include the picture of that dog because I think this is a good association with these verbs because dogs May plead for things or beg for things or implore their owners to do something and to continue using these verbs like that last one I implore you to subscribe to the channel turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and in this case I really want to help you build your vocabulary not only to help your speaking fluency if you're telling a story but really help you improve your writing because if you're writing a story you're probably going to use many different reporting verbs you will use the verb said but you can also use a lot of these other verbs to be more descriptive and if you would like a copy of the lesson notes check out the link down in the description so let's continue with some more verbs if you like to persuade someone you could use besieged which means to ask for something in a way that that shows you need it very much I need this raise he besieged his boss now this is not the most common verb in the world but once again it helps you get that variety same with the next verb cajoled this means to persuade someone to do something that they might not want to do and you're you're persuading them by just talking pleasantly and nicely like please pretty please say yes she could hold so this is a good reporting verb that I could use if I want to capture my little girl's direct speech if she wants something and I maybe I don't want to give it to her she might cajole me into giving it to her please pretty please the next two verbs I think are definitely more common insisted this means to say something firmly especially when others either disagree or just oppose what you're saying I want to see my client the lawyer insisted so in this context I it makes me think of a situation in which somebody is asking more than once and then they start insisting the next verb I think is a similar but it's a bit stronger demanded this means to ask for something forcefully and really in a way that you don't expect to be refused I want another candy the child demanded so again I'm yeah it's just I can't help but give many examples with children I have little girls so again these are these are things that I hear and this helps capture the mood and switch things up a little bit so you can avoid those redundancies so if you are wanting to express happiness or excitement there are some great verbs that you can use such as gushed this means to express a positive feeling especially praise but doing so in a way that it may not seem sincere perhaps they're doing it a little too much so if I'm writing a story and my character is just praising someone over and over and and he says you look amazing he gushed all right that that tells the reader that perhaps they're they're going a bit overboard it's a little too much and maybe the other person does not find it all that sincere then we have cheered which is to give a loud shout of approval or encouragement we won she cheered all right really expressing that happiness and I think this verb is calm commonly used it in the context of maybe a competition and you're really trying to encourage others then we have the verb touted it means to advertise talk about or praise something repeatedly and you're really you're doing this because you want the other person to accept what you're saying or maybe even buy something you won't find another car like this the salesman touted so in this case it's like well the salesman's really proud of the car they're really happy about it and they're kind of advertising it they're praising it yeah you won't find another car like this so this is a good verb for that context then we have these three verbs which are somewhat similar but also Express happiness and in all of the examples they really provide that extra bit of information to show you that well that something is funny like laughed it means that you are smiling and making sounds you believe that this is a funny situation I knew it was you she laughed we also have the verb chortled which is not as commonly used it means to laugh and really just showing some satisfaction did you hear the news she chortled giving that extra information that this news is funny it's satisfying and then there's the verb giggled this means to laugh repeatedly in in kind of an uncontrolled way I think it's perhaps not as strong as saying laugh but again this is something we all do giggle we all giggle from time to time where did you get that hat he giggled I'm telling you that this hat maybe it looks a little funny which is why he giggled here are some more verbs proclaimed this means to announce something officially especially something that is positive this is the start of a new beginning he proclaimed another verb announced which means to make something known or to tell people something officially we got engaged she announced all right really happy news there's also the verb declared and this means to announce something clearly firmly officially publicly uh I could say we made it to the finals the coach declared so with each of these verbs they may be used interchangeably depending on the context but it's still good to get that variety let's move from happiness to sadness if you want to show that you are upset about something there are many different verbs that you could use like pouted this is when you want to show that you are annoyed and you're pushing your lips together and really pushing out your lower lip like and you're just unhappy about something I want some ice cream the child pouted you can also use the verb complained which is very common it just means that that you're saying that something is wrong or or just not satisfactory we don't want to work over the weekend the employees complained all right it's not a good situation I would complain about it as well if you want to emphasize that sadness you could use a verb like sobbed it means to cry noisily and you're really taking these deep breaths so think about this situation if someone says I work so hard on this project and now it has been destroyed in a matter of seconds she sobbed you could also use cried which means you are well producing tears and expressing that strong emotion she told me it was over he cried and really conveying that sadness let's keep it going with some more sad verbs keep building your writing vocabulary with verbs like lamented and this means that you are expressing sadness and really just feeling sorry about something and I think that's a key part of it just feeling sorry maybe a little bit of regret I should never have accepted the offer he lamented you could also use the verb sneered when talking about someone or something in an unkind way that shows no respect is that the best you can do she sneered so it's not a good thing to sneer at someone but it does it really captures that emotion wind is making that long high sad sound I'm sure you can think of someone from your life who has whined before my ice cream melted the boy wide you're really sad and upset about this and then there's the verb bemoaned this means to complain or Express sadness about something great verb to use from time to time our department has to lay some people off the manager bemoaned all right the manager is not happy about this situation bemoaning this situation now let's raise the noise level and talk about well if somebody's being loud you could use verbs such as shouted this means to speak in a loud voice especially when you're in a situation that well it's very noisy around you and you want others to hear so you have to shout we won they shouted so in this context I I feel like the atmosphere is very noisy and he's very excited and just shouting this we won we also have the verb exclaimed which means to shout something suddenly because of surprise fear or pleasure that's not fair she exclaimed in this situation makes me think well perhaps she's a little surprised that's not fair and then there's bellowed which is to shout in a loud voice who's there he bellowed tells the reader that wow this this is a very loud voice when someone Bellows let's move on with some more loud verbs like yelled this means to shout and make a loud noise because you're angry you're in pain maybe you're excited get out she yelled in this case uh makes me think she's not happy and I should probably get out then there's the verb screamed which is similar to yelled you may use these verbs interchangeably but let me give you a different context if uh people say help us they screamed and in this situation they are screaming for help and then there's the verb hollared this means to shout loudly pass me the ball he hollared and you really want to get someone else's attention when you're hollering at them pass me the ball let's a student lazy and the student's a little upset you're the lazy one the student muttered and they say it in that low voice because they don't necessarily want the teacher to hear and that's why you would mutter something and this verb is also used in the phrase to mutter something under someone's breath which has the same meaning you're speaking softly it's not easy to hear because you don't really want the other person to hear and you mutter something under your breath then there's mumbled which means to speak quietly and in a way that's not easy to understand so to give you an example of someone mumbling uh I could say I can't believe he mumbled and you're like wait wait what was that last part I can't believe they remembered he mumbled so when I'm mumbling it's kind of like you're just been trailing up in the and you you just don't understand what someone's saying because it's like they're trailing off it becomes quieter and they may be mixing some sounds together and you're like wait what was that can can you say that again and then there's whispered okay if somebody's really trying to be quiet it means that you were speaking quietly really so only the person next to you or close to you can hear what you're saying and you would whisper something she whispered so this is a very common and a great verb to use if you really want to show that somebody's trying to be quiet so I just gave you many different verbs that you can use instead of saying the verb said these are very useful reporting verbs that'll really help you improve your writing they're more descriptive they're more precise and it's just going to make your writing that much more captivating and remember if you'd like to get a copy of the lesson notes check out the link Down Below in the description and I will send them to you if you are already a part of our email Community then check your email I have already sent them to you if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

FLUENCY TEST | What is your level of English?

Do you want to know your English level? Let's find out because I want to test your fluency. And the way that we're going to do this is with some just keyword sentence transformations. And this is a great exercise in which I want you to use both your grammar skills as well as your knowledge of vocabulary and thinking about different words and phrases because basically I am going to give you a sentence and I want you to change it and create a second sentence that has the same meaning. And of course this is interactive English. I want you to participate. Write your answers in the comments in the chat. I just love hearing from you. And of course, if you would like to get and access these lesson notes, click on the link in the description. You can join our email community. If you are already a part of the community, check your inbox. I will send them to you. So, let's start. Let's just get the ball rolling and begin with this first one. So, I I am uh you know, going to be this. You know, this is an informal test. I'll say that. All right. This is not like some official test, but I'm giving you a range of questions that are probably from a variety of levels. Some are going to be much easier than others. So, we'll start off maybe a little slower and then it's going to get increasingly more difficult. So, the school is behind the office buildings. I want you to change the sentence. Use the word of. And I'm giving you the start of the sentence now. the office buildings, what would you say? Now, when it comes to these sentence transformations, try to be as exact as you can. So, really think about the grammar. Think about the verb tense that you're using.

Also, we're going to get into some of the vocabulary a little bit later. The school is behind the office buildings. The office buildings. M. What do you think? So, see, all right, some excellent answers. Perfect. So, I I've basically just switched it around. The school is behind the office buildings. So, I could say the office buildings. Think about the subject verb agreement. You need that verb in there. The school is the office buildings are in front of the school. The office buildings are in front of the school. So, I think for the most part, you know, these uh directions behind, in front of, but I tried to get a little tricky with that subjectverb agreement. The school is singular.

Office buildings is plural. The school is, the office buildings are. Thank you guys. Excellent. Going to give some shout outs as I go through this. Uh Lai Tako, good to see you. Zuma, perfect. So, the next one, we're just going to move right through these because I have quite a few. My grandfather built the house. I want you to create another sentence. Use the word by and the the beginning of the sentence is going to be the house. My grandfather built the house. Another way of saying this so that it has the exact same meaning would be changing it to what type of uh lesson what type of sentence not what type of lesson what type of sentence what do you think I'll give you a moment because of course in this case I'm asking you to write something takes a little longer but if you're watching this later participate write it in the comments love hearing from you Guys, I love how Julia said, "Easy peasy lemon squeezy." My little girl says that all the time. I love it. So, we're talking about changing a sentence from active to passive. You see that keyword by? That is a hint. So, we're making it passive. In which case, we're going to use the verb to be followed by the past participle by the actor. The house was built by my grandfather. All right. The house was built by my grandfather. Great job. Uh Raphaela, perfect. Vanera, you guys are are rocking this. So, I told you we're starting a little easier and then it'll get a little more challenging, but just because I like to add a few things, add some information in there. When to use the passive? This is a question that I often get because I think changing from active to passive, most people can think about the grammar structure and understand it. But there are specific times when you would want to use the passive. Overwhelmingly, you're going to use the active voice. But if you want to emphasize the action over the actor, like our example sentence, that would be a time when you'd use the passive. The house was built by my grandfather. We're emphasizing the action. if you want to avoid identifying the actor like mistakes were made. So maybe the the grandfather my grandfather built the house he made some mistakes but he doesn't want to admit he's just you know mistakes were made and you want to avoid identifying the actor. You describe a situation in which the actor is unknown. You don't know who it is. My wallet was stolen. So I'm not going to say my wallet was stolen by someone. I don't know who it is. I would just drop it and say my wallet is stolen. Or if you want to have a firm tone like this example, you travel somewhere and they say photos are not allowed. These are just some quick examples as to when you would use

It's a little more formal. It's a great way to disagree. Maybe you don't know the person and you don't want to be too aggressive. I disagree. So, in this case, I'm giving you differ, but you really need to think about the verb that you're going to use, which is beg. I beg to differ. Great job. Uh, Talal, Angela. Excellent, Raphaela. Knew you would get that. I beg to differ. So, instead of saying I disagree, and again, we're in a meeting. I want to be a little more polite. I'm going to say, look, you know, I beg to differ. I have a different opinion. I beg to differ. Then we have this question right here. I can't wait to go on vacation. It's not really a question.

Again, we're just changing these sentences and really testing both your grammar and vocabulary. I can't wait to go on vacation. I want you to use the word forward. That is our key word. and you're going to start out the sentence, I'm I'm really m on vacation. This, I believe, is another phrase that I think most of you are probably familiar with. You've heard of it, and I think it's a very common phrase. But just keep in mind the grammar when you're constructing this. I can't wait to go on vacation. I'm really what? because there is a common mistake that I hear or I see when it comes to this phrase.

Once again, I know you you're writing it right fast. I I would say try to be as specific as possible in order you want to with these keyword transformations. You got to get all of the words or try to get all of them. I can't wait to go on vacation. So, the phrase that I was talking about is to look forward to something. And if we want to put that into the sentence, I'm really looking forward to going on vacation. Looking forward to going on vacation. So, let's see. I have some uh good answers. There's one thing again I see this is when people make small mistakes where they you look forward to something and people that you have that to and they think infinitive. So instead of look forward to go keep in mind you look forward to doing something you're going to follow it with the gerand that ing. I look forward to going on vacation. I look forward to having a picnic in the park. I look forward to meeting your parents or something like that. I don't these are just examples but you can hear that uh or you can hear that ing going meeting playing. So keep that in mind. You look forward to doing something. If you enjoy these lessons, again, I would I'd ask you please subscribe, turn on those notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. I didn't introduce myself at the beginning, so I will right now. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And the way that I want to do that right now is with this fluency test. Here is the next transformation.

My colleague sometimes gets on my nerves. I'll go ahead and tell you. I think you know, but if someone gets on your nerves, it's just somebody who annoys you, bothers you, I want you to change that and use the word neck, my colleague, m on my nerves. So this is when vocabulary really comes into play because there is a specific phrase that you would need to be familiar with so that you can complete this sentence. My colleague m on my nerves as we go through this. Try to if you can keep track as to how many you got correct, how many were incorrect. There is a total of 14 that we're going to look at.

So my colleague [Music] on my nerves. I see a good answer. All right. One uh close and with these prepositions. So my colleague when we're talking about neck, we're going to use the verb have. You have a knack. colleague is singular. My colleague has so instead shrinking them up not have a knack. My colleague has a knack for something. Has a knack for following it with the jiren. Has a knack for getting on my nerves. My colleague has a knack for getting on my nerves. So this is when it really becomes uh I think a bit a lot trickier knowing the phrase that you a knack for something the ability we're going to use that with have and then follow it with for plus the jarn.

You have a knack for something. Then we have what do you think about this one? Oh, just to just to give you a quick comment because I I know uh I saw in there like a knack of. I I it is it is okay. Generally, you're going to follow this with the preposition for. I think that is more common. You may hear people talk about a knack of. So, if you said a knack of, I think that's my colleague has a knack of getting on my nerves. That works. That's perfect. I saw that. I think uh uh Taya, excellent. Um, some people had put on that would not work. You would say a knack for doing something or a knack of doing something. To give you a little more context, uh, you can see these news headlines right here. And and all of them use for English instructor who stumbled on her knack for translation or Alexander Calder, the artist with a hidden knack for design. And then finally, making meth, how New Zealand's knack for pee turned into a homebaked disaster. And I think in this context down there, P is another informal name for meth. All right, this is I I'd look this up. Not that I really know this by any any means. Um, so to give you a little more context with knack, but it's a a nice phrase. You have a knack for something. A a you are skilled at doing this thing. How about this one? Would you like to watch Netflix? A very simple basic question. I want you to come up with another question using the word feel. And I've I've given you part of it already. Do you m Netflix?

Do you feel like watching? Excellent. Stanley, Alicia, uh, Takaya, Rafella, Lai, Angela, Talal, uh, do you feel like watching Netflix? Perfect. Think you guys rock that one. Now, it's going to be a little more difficult. So, she rarely gets less than 70% on her English exam. I'm giving you the word rare. That is our key word and the sentence it that's our blank. There are several words missing. Get less than 70% on her English exam. What would you fill in there? What are the missing words using the word rare that has the same meaning as the original sentence? She rarely gets less than 70% on her English exam. Write your answers in the chat in the comments. I want you to participate. Or if you're writing it down on a separate piece of paper, that is okay as well. But that is what these lessons are all about to kind of engage with the lesson. This is active learning, not passive learning.

So if we want to use rare, I would start out the sentence, it is rare, saying something. It is rare. And then you could talk about a lot of different things. It is rare. We're going to follow that with the preposition for and then her. But keep in mind, we need that infinitive. It is rare for her to get less than 70% on her English exam. All right. It is rare for her to get less than 70% on her English exam. Well done. Uh Raphaela Lai Suma. Nice. Just trying to throw some shout outs whenever I can. One thing I want to keep in mind, I I didn't uh I I used on her English exam.

This is when English can get a little tricky with some of these prepositions because sometimes there's more than one. We talked about a knack for something, a knack of. And if I said in her English exam, that would be okay. Probably I would use on. I think in the United States, which is where I'm from, that would be more commonly used. I'm not sure if it would be more British English, but just to give you a quick resource if you're ever wondering. Okay, you have these two phrases. You think, well, which one's more appropriate? Which is more commonly used? You can use engram viewer. Just type in engram viewer in a search. And this will show you the frequency of different words and phrases. So, I just put in on her exam, in her exam, and you can see that the usage is pretty similar. And basically engram viewer is taking a collection of written English whether it's academic or an informal blog and just puts it on that chart so that you can get an idea as to which one is more commonly used. So I wanted to point that out especially with these prepositions because it's not always well this is right this is wrong. Sometimes it is the case, but it can also be that there is more than one that you can use, but one may be more commonly used. Okay, sorry for that. That was a little detour that we took wanting you to show you that resource.

The next one, he thought that the music was too loud. And then I want you to create another sentence using far as the music was too loud. This is kind of true in my case. I think late at night out in the courtyard across the building there's always like a some music playing or people outside talking. It's kind of a dormitory and it can be loud. They have play music and this like that's what this is what I would say. You know, I thought that the music was too loud. But the next part, the one of the key words is as because we're kind of bringing up like you the next part of the sentence, the music was too loud. So, you know that that first part is really introducing your opinion. And what phrase could you use to introduce your opinion as? And then we're going to use far. As far what think again like I think some of you are very close. We're not going to use thought in this case. We're going to use concerned as far as I'm concerned is a phrase if I were introducing my opinion. But in this case we're talking about he. So the subject is he as far as he was concerned. We're going to use it in the past as well. And these are like the small things. This is why I said it's really testing your grammar with these transformations because I feel like people know like oh as far as I'm concerned but then you got to keep in mind well what is the subject? Is this are we talking about the past or the present? As far as he was concerned, the music was too loud because in our first sentence, he thought the music was too loud. This has happened in the past. So, as far as he was concerned, the music was too loud.

All right. Excellent. Um, good job. Again, I see like some of those uh slight mistakes either people didn't use the word concerned. You got to keep that in mind because this is kind of a fixed phrase. But then others with that verb tense instead of is was. How about this one? Once this contract is signed, the this agreement or once this contract is signed, this agreement is binding. Hopefully, as I talk about how specific I want you to be with your grammar, keep that in mind as we go through these other ones. Once this contract is signed, the agreement is binding. As soon as you And then the we end the sentence with agreement, but I want you to use the word by.

As soon as you What? As soon as you do what? I don't want to give too much of it away, but we're going to end the sentence with the word agreement. I think uh one thing you're going to have to change in here grammatically is that you have that the agreement is binding. We're not going to use that. We're going to change it to a well, it's going to be the past participle or in this case like uh participle adjective. Once I'll just say it again. I know people are probably like writing or thinking about it. How can I use by? Um as soon as this contract is signed, this agreement is binding. As soon as you sign this contract, you are what?

You are bound by the agreement. So this would be a way to express that. So instead of saying it's binding, you are bound by something. We're using the passive again. As soon as this as soon as you sign the contract, you are bound by the agreement. Here we go. Let's keep let's keep moving on. I want to do some more. This one I think is a little easier, but also it can really be tricky because with some of these that I think are easier, people may make like very small mistakes, whether it's the wrong preposition or the wrong verb tense. I am tired. She said, I want you to use the word said and complete that sentence. She m tired because you you see these quotes right here. You know that we're talking about changing something from direct speech to indirect speech or direct speech to reported speech.

Now you know that's the case and I feel like you can change this sentence but keep in mind like those small little details. I am tired. She said she said that. All right. Nice. Excellent. Uh Taya Julia uh Alicia Suma. All right. Give some shout outs real quick. Okay. Tanisha. Perfect. Raphaela Li. Okay you guys right. She said that she was tired. I am tired. She said she said that she was tired. This is a quick little graph uh that if you're wondering about, you know, trying to be grammatically correct, you're changing from direct speech, the actual words a person says, which is why you see those quotation marks, to indirect speech, which is a description of what someone else said, the verb tense is going to change. So the the question or the statement with direct speech was the present simple. I am tired. When we change that to indirect speech, we're then going to use the past simple. She said that she was tired. The present continuous, we change to the past continuous. Past simple, past perfect, present perfect, past perfect will would change to would and can. something to keep in mind if you are changing from direct speech to indirect speech or reported speech. But I think you guys, for the most part, you guys nailed that. You rocked it. How about this one? And once again, vocabulary I think plays a larger role in getting this one correct. The police released the suspect because of new evidence. I want you to use the word light. The police released the suspect.

New evidence. What phrase are we going to use so that the sentences have the same meaning? I told you this is more vocabulary related because you would really have to be able to come up with this specific phrase and pretty much know what it means. I imagine you probably have heard of it if you watch a lot of TV in English, movies, or read um the newspapers uh or the news a lot in English because you you would come across this I feel like especially in this context of like crime. All right, you guys again, Rocka Pelagoya, sorry I mispronounced names. Um Angela Tayo, Shirley. So, the phrase that we're looking for, and again, make sure that you're using the right preposition, in light. In light of new evidence. So, the phrase that I'm talking about is in light of something.

The police released the suspect in light of new evidence. That this new evidence came about, so the person was released in light of new evidence. One thing I'll point out with this one is that I got this this is from uh Cambridge in in the light of something. It's it's an idiom. It means the same thing. So if you've said in the light of new evidence that that's perfectly fine. I just want to highlight that it's a little more British English. I don't know if you can see it down there. It does say idiom. It says US in light of something. That is what I would say because I'm from the US. in light of new evidence. But in the UK, they may add that definite article in there in the light of something.

Again, just good to know you. Either one is correct. They're both correct. How about this one? I have waited for an hour and he still hasn't come. I have waited for an hour and he still hasn't come. I want you to use the word sign and complete the sentence after an hour. Hm. There are quite a few missing words uh in this. And then we're going to end it with him. I'm going we're going to use a phrase that I think you in this case probably have heard of. You've come across it. You may even use it. And I think once I show you the answer, then you'd probably oh yes, I I know this. Or I think you'll probably just know because that keyword is I think a pretty big hint. Sign. I have waited for an hour and he still hasn't come after an hour. What?

And we're going to end it with him. So there there are quite a few words again and I would say try to see if you can get a after an hour of doing what? So I've given you part of it. After an hour of doing something, we're going to follow it with the gerand. In this case, we're talking about waiting. After an hour of waiting, what happens? Now, you can use that phrase sign. So, I have waited for an hour and he still hasn't come. It means the same thing. After waiting for an hour, there is still no sign of him. All right? He's still not here right now uh in the present. After waiting for an hour, there is still no sign of him.

But again, I think you probably have heard that that phrase, that construction, no sign of someone. There's no sign of someone. Here's another one which I think is both well grammar and vocabulary but you really have to be aware of a certain phrase. And now again this is getting a little more difficult. This is more challenging, of course, but some of these phrases I think are are useful if you're able to build your vocabulary. If you hadn't heard of, well, in light of something, like because of or there's no sign of someone that they're not around, or in this case, my friend told me nothing about the surprise party. I want you to use the word dark. There is a specific phrase in this context, my friend. M surprise party.

So I think you've probably again familiar, you've heard the expression before using dark, but then you got to fill in the pieces around it. Think about the verb. Is it the present tense? Is it the past tense? I I I will say I think um uh in the dark. All right, we're talking about in the dark, but what verb are you going to use with that? you would m someone in the dark. A a collocation would be to keep someone in the dark.

Now, this is in the past tense, so we're also going to use the other one in the past tense. My friend kept who kept me in the dark about the surprise party. You would keep someone in the dark about something. So hopefully as I even before I show you the sentence, as I kind of talk through it, talk about the phrase, what verb is often used, it starts to make a bit more sense to keep someone in the dark about the surprise party. Well done, um Allan, uh K TV. Excellent. All right, you guys, I think pretty much did pretty pretty well on that one. How about this one? I apologize because I totally forgot about the meeting.

I want you to use the word confess and complete the sentence. I must and then end it with mind. End it with mind. This is another one where there's uh another phrase which would be part of building your vocabulary that is necessary. So I want you to use the word confess. But the another key word in this would be that final word mind. So you probably notice as we do some of these others that are more difficult really you need to know some of the vocabulary like if you're in the dark you don't know about something you you know in light of because of and then as you build your vocabulary I think and start to use these or recognize them you'll see some of those words that go with them. For example, I mentioned you would keep someone in the dark is a common collocation with that uh phrase. So, I apologize because I totally forgot about the meeting. So, we're talking about forgetting something. I must what? We're using confess. So, basically that that is going to be our main verb. I must confess what what about the meeting? You want to say that you forgot it. And in that case, you could say that it what? So, I see Samantha. Nice. Uh, Lai, you got the phrase Ava Julia. So, we're talking about the phrase something slips your mind. If it slips your mind, then you forgot it. And if we want to complete this sentence grammatically, I must confess the meeting slipped my mind because it we're talking about uh uh it already happened. You forgot about the meeting. I must confess the meeting just slipped my mind. There are other phrases that you could use. You could use it with adverbs saying something just it completely slipped my mind or it totally slipped my mind. Or if somebody's asking you about something and you forgot, you could say, well, it must have slipped my mind. Well, I just didn't think about it. It must have slipped my mind. Those are some common phrases that you'll use with that um that expression to slip one's mind. All right, this is just a little funny, entertaining uh thing. Also kind of good way to test your fluency as well with these jokes. This is a sign from uh I guess out in Austin, Texas somewhere. I would tell you my best ice pun, but it slipped my mind. Do you find this funny? But a pun is just a play on words. You're having fun with words, and they're supposed to be funny. So, we're talking about an ice pun.

And they would say it, but it slipped my mind. It's funny because you would slip on ice. It's very slippery. But in this case, we're saying like, well, I forgot. I would tell you. I would tell it to you, but I forgot. My best ice pun. It slipped my mind. Haha. I just I didn't honestly I didn't find it to be that funny, but I thought it was relevant and including this as another point of reference when it comes to using this phrase, but also just, you know, testing to see if you you got it as well. Here's the moment of truth. I I this is again, this is an informal test. This is just how I would kind of break it down. You can let me know uh how you did in the comments. If you just got, you know, one correct or none of them probably maybe A1, you're more of a beginner. Uh two to four correct, I would say maybe at an A2 level. This is again the like the European framework A1, A2, B1, B2, C1,

C2. Intermediate would be B1, B2, 5 to 7, maybe around the B, B1 level, eight or nine. Correct. B2 if you had 10 or 12 correct then I'd say you're about C1 very highly uh you're proficient and then 13 or all of them correct because there were 14 questions then yes you are C2 you are highly proficient. So let me based on this scale which is very informal mind you what what what level are you how did how did you guys do you can just kind of you can let me know the level in the chat and that way it I know kind of how many you got correct but there were 14 of them if this were uh an exam and I were grading it. You would really want to be specific with these and uh you know make sure that you're using the correct verb tense, those prepositions are correct, the infinitive, the gerund, you're using the expression in the right order um and think about this. If you do take an exam like the IELTS, I believe that this may be on of it. This may be a part of it doing some of these sentence transformations. But uh I do want to thank all of you for joining me today. It's great to see you Lai as always. Thanks for coming, participating in the lesson. Raphaela, great to see you. Uh we'll see you soon. Taio, thanks for joining me. A lot of All right. A lot of uh uh people are part of the speaking course. I love seeing that. A lot of members. Um great to have you, Suma, Angela. Um just trying to give some more shoutouts. Anna Takata, I wanted to to give you a shout out as well. another member.

Uh, Atsuka, I I'm going to have to wrap this up, of course. Uh, Julia, I hope that you found the lesson useful. I hope that you learn something new. That is always my goal with these lessons, that something is new, and you can continue to improve, continue to build your vocabulary. Write to me in the comments if you have any thoughts, any questions. I love hearing from you. I hope that you have a wonderful day. LESSON 745 OF 749

CRIME VOCABULARY | Words & phrases you need to know

hello and welcome to today's lesson thank you guys so much for joining me i have i think this i think it's a very useful lesson because i think this is something that when it comes to entertainment people might hear a lot of these words so in general what we're talking about today is like will crime and punishment vocabulary so i've kind of separated this lesson into three different parts kind of the the first part at the beginning would be more related to like when when maybe a crime happens and then i have some vocabulary related more to law enforcement and then finally like once you get into the courtroom so like i said if you are somebody who likes watching tv shows that have like crime or mystery these are actually words that i think you will hear quite often so this is very useful useful vocabulary that i think it's it's good to know so the way i'm going to present this is like a little bit like a quiz because i want you to participate and see if you can write your answers in the chat even if you're watching this later i would like you to write your answers in the comments i i just want to hear from you and what i'm going to do um i'll probably end up going through this a bit quickly so here's the first one that i have for you and this is just asking like well what are the three basic classifications of criminal offenses and i know this can be a little bit challenging but i think when i show you the answer hopefully that you are familiar with some of these words now the other thing i will say is that this lesson because i'm from the united states some of the information that i'm giving you is going to be specific to the united states again these are things that you might hear in a movie or tv show so any any guesses about the three basic classifications of a criminal offense what do you think now i'll go ahead and show you the answer and then we're going to kind of get into it because i think when you see these words hopefully you recognize some of them so in general we're talking about like it goes from like number one which is the least severe to number three which is the most severe so the first one would be like um an infraction if there is an infraction it's kind of just like a minor offense so an infraction might just be something like um maybe jaywalking or you get a speeding ticket something like that that would be an infraction a misdemeanor would be something a little more serious perhaps a misdemeanor could be like you you steal clothes from a store and then a felony that is going to be the most severe type of criminal offense which would include things like murder so these in general are the three basic classifications but also these are good words to know let's move in to the next part which is these are all types of crimes so what i'm doing right here is i'm describing the crime to you and i want you to tell me the word what is the word that is this type of crime so the first one is the crime of intentionally starting a fire in order to damage or destroy something what do we call that crime so i have several of these for you where i'm talking about types of crimes again this is vocabulary that you may come across especially in in tv shows or movies all right what do you think write your answers in the chat even if you're watching this later write your answers uh write your answers in the comments i just love hearing from you and especially if this is your first time here please let me know tell me your name tell me where you're from so if we're talking about i think one of the the key words in this one is fire all right you see you hear that word fire and if you're talking about a crime you may be talking about arson all right arson is the crime of of starting a fire you're trying to damage some property destroy something and you might commit arson all right the next one um all right mom got it excellent the next one is giving money or granting favors to influence another person's decisions or their behavior so what what would you call that okay this again is a crime but this is also something that you i mean you could use in other contexts as well you could do this with your your friends or your family members you're trying to again you're you you may be doing giving favors in order to influence their their decision or their behavior it is called excellent um vishwa sleepwalker adele bribery we're talking about bribery again this this is uh this is a crime yes uh the next one excellent you guys got that one this um is talking is just killing a killing another person on purpose the act of murder there is one word it kind of it it means this and this definitely is a word that i think you will hear in movies and tv shows the people that are trying to solve these murders they may work in this department and maybe this department has the name yes salim you got it so once i get the answer i'm just going to give it to you all uh takayo perfect homicide so you like i said in a movie or tv show you might hear somebody say like oh i work in homicide and that means they work in this department where they're trying to perhaps solve murders and find out what happened so if you say there there was a homicide they're talking about there was a murder the next one is just simply stealing something from a store okay so if this is if this is what you do whether you're stealing like clothes or electronics you're taking it from a store then you are doing this

what is it that you are doing what is the word and again this is a crime this is probably more of a misdemeanor um kind of a middle crime theft yes uh but the word the actual crime excellent we're talking about shoplifting all right stealing something from a store is going for shoplifting then we have stealing large amounts of money that you are often responsible for and typically people would do this like over a period of time um okay so this is probably a crime that might happen more in the context of like a company a business and somebody is responsible for a large amount of money and if they're stealing it typically over a longer period of time what is that call you it is a noun i think often times people will use this word as a verb you'll you'll you'll likely hear it as a verb most of the time i think all right excellent good job uh yashar adele victor um we're talking about embezzlement so embezzlement is the noun this is a crime i said often you might hear it as a verb like to embezzle like somebody was embezzling money then we have moving right along okay this is a good one lying in court while under oath all right what what crime is that and this yeah if you are in court and you are called upon to give testimony and talk about something you before you before you start talking you have to you have to take an oath that you're going to tell the truth and if it comes back that you were lying well then you could well you could be in trouble because that is a crime and that crime has a specific name what is it called if you're lying in court while under oath anybody know it's a felony oh muffin got it victor yes sleepwalker perjury all right and i think people might hear you might use this with the verb to commit somebody committed perjury all right and basically they were in that case they were caught lying when you commit perjury so perjury is the crime very good you guys rock that one the next one uh okay so those were all types of crimes now i want to get into other vocabulary and the way i've done this is like with person a person b uh oh wait a second oh no i gave you guys the answer i skipped ahead all right so maybe if you saw that still bear with me and we'll talk our way through this so this is the situation person a saw someone rob a store and describe the thief to the police the police then picked up person b so what might you call these people all right person a would be what and person

b would be what what would you call these people again this is vocabulary related to crime but these are these are all people that you would uh that you would be describing so we're not talking about types of crimes we're talking about people okay so i showed you guys the answer the key word when you think of person a would be saw okay so you're talking about somebody seeing something which means they would be exactly sleepwalker a witness and then the police picked up person b so when i say pick up this is a phrasal verb that means well they they maybe they arrested this person they want to ask them questions and they arrested this person because they would think that person b is the suspect okay so person a is a witness they saw the crime person b is the suspect it's the person that they believe committed the crime all right now i have a couple more for you i'm not going to give you the the answers uh to begin with this one so now i've i've kind of continued the situation a witness saw someone rob a store and described the thief to the police the police then picked up a suspect all right the police believe the suspect may have received help from person c however the suspect tells the police he cannot be the thief because he was with person d at that time all right what might you call person c and person d okay what do you guys think uh again so we talked about a witness a suspect and these other two names again these are the names of um well this is vocabulary that would talk about people and these people have a specific meaning that goes with it i said a witness is a person who sees the crime suspect is the person you think maybe committed the crime person c if somebody receives help from somebody else exactly person c is an accomplice and the suspect says well no no it couldn't be with me it couldn't be me i was with person d person d would be their alibi so again these are other words to describe people an accomplice is somebody who may help you commit a crime and an alibi would be the person would be like well i didn't do it you can talk to this person i was with them this other person is your alibi it's the person who can say yes the this per they could not commit the crime because they were with me they would be the alibi all right so now let's uh let's get back into the that was all talking about like the cro types of crimes and um some of those uh other people now let's talk about a little bit more with law enforcement all right so here uh just just some general questions all right police will try to arrest the criminals all right now thinking about vocabulary thinking about synonyms that you may hear in this context talking about um crime and stuff like that what's another word for arrest all right what do you think what's another word for arrest so we could take this word and put it in for a rest and it has the the same meaning police will try to arrest the criminals all right um see some words like uh capture bust take into custody sure the word that i was looking for um is apprehend to apprehend is to kind of to to well it is to to capture somebody and typically like we'll bring them in for for questioning so to arrest to apprehend i think again apprehend is another common verb that you will hear in this context talking about that um let's uh look at the next one police need to obtain a in order to enter and search a premises what is it that police would need to get again these are this is a i'll actually give you a hint this is a phrase all right so it's two words so this phrase again is very common um i think the this is something you will hear all the time you're watching a movie or tv show i really hope that none of you have to actually deal with this vocabulary in real life i hope that you don't have to uh have trouble with the police or law enforcement uh so yes exactly yashar and tien victor we're talking about a warrant specifically i think you could say a search warrant was was i mentioned it's a phrase um so police need to obtain a search warrant in order to enter and search a premises a premises is just talking about some area maybe a building and you need a warrant but specifically like a search warrant so that you can enter and look around uh the next one this is where i said i think it this is more specific to the united states so after placing a suspect under arrest the officer the police officer will say you you have the right to remain silent anything you say can and will be used against you in a court of law you have the right to an attorney if you cannot afford an attorney one will be appointed for you okay so when the officer is saying that they're basically telling the person what what is that called that that whole phrase when people say that um it's again i'm sure just hearing me reading this you me it may sound familiar if you've listened to it already in a tv show or movie um all right so you don't have says rights but what what specific rights are we talking about so they are they are a person's rights but this phrase in particular has a specific name to it um so rights would be kind of vague but what specifically are these rights all right uh the answer and if you don't know this this is uh this is good your miranda rights so typically this would be called a miranda warning the police are giving a miranda warning and they're telling this to the suspect but the the suspect has these rights that they can they can stay silent and they have the right to an attorney that is their rights and that is their miranda rights it's called miranda because this was an old case i think a long time ago that went to court and i don't think the police were doing this at that time and ever since then police will always use this and they'll say this phrase and therefore it's called somebody's miranda rights then we have this one this is just a random word um i think miranda was the name of a person too like i said this was a case that i believe went to the supreme court and they rule down that yes police have to tell suspects this information this is their miranda rights the someone who takes the law into their own hands is referred to as a what all right what would you call that person who they're maybe they don't call the police they are going to try to solve the problem they're going to take the law into their own hands not something that i would recommend but you might refer to this person as a and to give you one further hint to think of like a word that might be associated with uh someone else think of batman i think batman has been used to people would describe batman as a what they take the law into their own hands uh nilla fur excellent that was good um marius we're talking about a vigilante so a vigilante is somebody who well yeah they don't call the police they try to take the um the law into their own hands you also may hear it used with the word justice and when somebody does that they might say oh well that's vigilante justice that saying that it's not right that people should not be doing this then we have this one this is an acronym okay a dui is a common misdemeanor in the united states what does dui stand for so as i mentioned this is a pretty common it's a it's a common misdemeanor so it's a common acronym that people will use if they've been in this situation maybe um you know somebody has gotten one before and you get a dui what does what does this stand for it's what does this acronym stand for so i don't want to give you too many hints with this one because i feel like uh i feel like it'll make it too easy uh pablo you nailed it perfect we're talking about a dui stands for driving under the influence driving under the influence and in general when you say influence you'd be talking about some kind of substance so it could be drugs or alcohol most of the time it's alcohol related and you get a dui and that's basically it's used in conversation most people are not going to say driving i i i got a ticket driving under the influence most people would say i got a dui they would just say i got a dui so let's now talk about some let's so we started out with talking about some crimes and then law enforcement now let's move into the courtroom all right so we're kind of following that process so here's more vocabulary that would be related to the courtroom this is i tried to make it a little easier i'm giving you um multiple choice now a um is in order for someone to appear in court what is it a a plea b a subpoena or c a warrant which one of those is an order that would compel a person to appear in court and they would get a what what would you call it all right so you guys i think most of you i think most of you are probably familiar with this again it's a very common word it's a subpoena the answer is b excellent i think a lot of you got that one a subpoena is in order for someone to appear in court so then we have okay this one hopefully hopefully is not too difficult because there's only two choices the lawyer against the accused is called the what so basically if you're talking about a courtroom you have well two sides all right and you have a judge a course who is going to possibly make a decision and you have two sides which means you have two lawyers one is a prosecutor and one is the defense all right so we're talking about the lawyer against the accused is called the excellent uh all right perfect uh muhammad pablo kareem angela yashar dave i just trying to throw out some names good job vionette jane uh angela bakir mohammed jim we we're talking about the prosecutor the answer is a the lawyer against the accused is the prosecutor so i think a lot of these tv shows and movies they happen they take place in the courtroom and again this is a word that you're going to hear very often you're talking about a specific lawyer the prosecutor this one is more again specific to the united states in court if someone refuses to answer questions because the answers might be harmful to them or might show that they have committed a crime then they are pleading the what all right is the answer a fourth b fifth or c sixth okay what do you think all right what are you going to plead and this is i've given you the situation um i've given you the situation what are they going to plead the fourth the fifth or the sixth i noticed that some of you had already uh mentioned this in one of the previous questions excellent the answer is b yes you are going to plead the fifth and again i so told you that this is more specific to the united states to plead the fifth which is your right not to incriminate yourself then we have okay a lawyer might say that unsubstantiated information or rumor is what okay we're running through these what do you think unsubstantiated information or rumor is that circumstantial is it extenuating is it hearsay or is it proof what do you guys think you guys are i don't know maybe it's uh much easier to be doing the multiple choice uh so we'll see hopefully this one's a little more challenging what do you think a b c or d so maybe this one could be a little more challenging but if you're talking about unsubstantiated information which basically means that you you cannot verify if this information is true which essentially means it's kind of a rumor or you could say in the court of law you would maybe the lawyer would say this is hearsay so hearsay is just referring to unsubstantiated information or rumor hearsay good word to know uh all right so i wanted to review we went through 20 of them um these are the the words that we talked about we talked started with those classifications talked about those people and then those types of crimes if you are a member or patron i will put um i'm gonna put these uh these notes up on there for you guys so here we talked about law enforcement and then the courtroom again this is great vocabulary to know especially if you like you end up watching movies or tv shows in which a crime is committed i think there are many shows out there that are crime related and these are words that you're going to hear quite often because they involve the police they involve criminals and they involve the courtroom as well so as i mentioned if you guys like what we do want to show us some love you can sponsor or support us with a youtube membership or join patreon there are links down below in the description and i just want to thank you guys for joining me i like with all of these lessons my the ultimate goal is i hope that you learned something new if you did learn something new please hit that like button let me know um it tells me that uh maybe i should do some more lessons like this in the future so if you learn some new words and phrases please hit that like button write to me in the comments i love hearing from you and i just hope that uh you guys join uh enjoy the rest of your weekend so thank you guys um muffin sleepwalker uh muhammad i'm sorry you showed up late it's gonna get posted you'll be able to watch take the whole quiz and learn all these words uh angela yashar luca uh alex rod good to see you uh manmon alex uh oh it's a little hard okay that's good i then a lot of these hopefully these words and phrases were new because like i said this is pretty common stuff if you're watching those shows and movies i i wasn't just pulling like random words that you'll never hear um thank you rod i appreciate that congrats on the 400 thousand yes that's a that was a good milestone for the channel uh takayo good to see you glad you enjoyed the lesson necklace uh teacher nay jane abdul rasheed hustina demos ariane sorry if i mispronounced names nilafar bakir mohammed angela thank you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will see you next

LIVE ENGLISH LESSON | Q&A with Interactive English

what's up everyone wow this is starting is this starting or no it's the heartache I don't know yes alright I've been live now just staring at the camera what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English and welcome to today's interactive English lesson which is going to be a Q&A that I want to take questions from all of you and see if I can help you out and answer those questions that are related to learning English whether you have questions about pronunciation vocabulary grammar I will try to answer them the best that I can or if you even have questions about me or my wife our little girl our family I will be more than happy to try and answer some of those questions for you so again today it's all about just a nice little Q&A English lesson with interactive English and that is a recent picture of us from two days ago when we visited lake bled slovenia it was beautiful it was a short little road trip and we we had a great time so today is all about just again creating that that interaction I want to to help you guys out and even still if you're watching this later this is a great opportunity to practice your listening skills because it's always good not only to improve your other English skills but again constantly get that exposure to listening to the language that is such a useful tool for improving your skills so even all of you that are here with me right now you are actually you are improving your English skills right now just by listening to this Q&A so I just want to give some quick shout outs to people hello lollie anatolia sleepwalker hi Mark Andy cephalo Angela Musa hello hello hello Arina judy lily i will try and get some shout outs as we go through this but what what i want to say is that as we go through this and i want to take some of your questions try to make the questions as specific as you can for example if there is a word that you want to hear like how I say it because I am from the United States so I have that American accent so if you're wondering well how do you say this word how would it sound if somebody from the US says this you can ask me the pronunciation of a word or if you have a grammar question that's very specific ask that I will try to answer it same with vocabulary try not to keep it too vague when you sit when I say vague I'm talking about something that is very broad in scope so if you're like hey I need to learn all 12 verb tenses well that's something that I'm not just going to be able to run through quickly but it's always good to think about what you guys want to learn in the future that I can take some of those questions and I may make a lesson about that in the future we've done that several times before all right so let me jump into it I'm just going to scroll through somebody to talk about answer some questions somebody asked Alex I need someone to practice my English alright that is a great question so let's just start with that even though I don't know if you're asking me or if you're just talking to people in the chat I think it's always great to find other speaking partners this is a way to do it we noticed that people have made comments on our channel about hey I need a speaking partner would anybody like to practice their speaking skills and we can connect that might be a way to do it I think it's kind of sometimes difficult to try and connect with people and find the time to do it I always think a better way is to try and put yourself in a position to be able to speak English but not focus on the language for example find something that you're interested in maybe if you if you live in a big city or a big town a book club and in that case when when if you don't know what a book club is or if you never been to a book club like each week you would read a book and then a group of people come together and they talk about that book you could if there are enough people that you think live in your town that want to improve their skills think about starting a book club and try to get maybe five or six people around and you're to read a book in English and then get back together after one week or two weeks or even a month and you're going to talk about that story in English and that way you are practicing your language skills but it's focused on something else in this case the topic would be the book but you can use that with any of your interest if you're interested in cars if you're interested in fashion and try to use that to find somebody to communicate with to speak with it's a great way to find a speaking partner and practice your skills um mu gamma mu gamma o Moses hello its first time you attend an online class with you excellent we love hearing from new people all the time welcome I hope you find our lessons useful so somebody says let's see Angela says how do you pronounce luxurious luxurious so for me it almost sounds like that G that X when I say it quickly luxurious luxurious you don't really hear that xx sound as you would when it's in the final part of a word like when it's in that final sound like acts or relaxed this like luxurious alright so it kind of just sounds like when I say it that it almost sounds more like a G sound luxurious luxurious you do hear that X a little bit luxurious how to pronounce again these are good either or neither all right so there's two different ways either or neither or you might hear some people say either or neither and I think this just depends on you know where people grew up because in the United States you may hear people say either one of those I just said either in that case personally I catch myself saying both of them from time to time in certain situations when I'm just having a conversation like I just said right then either but I might say either to you we can do we can either do this or that so I think again either neither either neither you might hear somebody say all of them that is a great question as a not thank you very much uh let's see how can I work on my listening skills Dan yeah in regards to past tense endings in edy to me they always sound the same I think in this we have a lesson that we did on edy endings I am gonna track that down for you and I will put it in the chat but I think that if you're specifically wanting to focus on that I think you can find resources online such as our video lesson where we talk about the different rules for edie endings and say the words and you can listen for that so this is another example where I think in exposure is so important that the more exposure that you get to the language the more likely you are to be able to not only identify those word endings but distinguish between the two of them and that they are not always going to sound the same like you just said so again I think it's important to practice that and if you guys want to practice how to pronounce IDI word endings correctly I'm gonna throw this link in there right now so please go check out this lesson right here boom alright I just threw it in the chat wait a second I thought I put it in there no okay there it goes so this is a lesson that we did on IDI endings if you're looking to practice that and improve your skills please check that lesson out so let's see mad for English sir what's the difference between I am walking along the road and walking on the road which is correct and why both of them are correct so I'm just gonna tell you how I would interpret this if if somebody were telling me hey you know if I call somebody and they answer their phone I'm like hey where are you and they say well you know I'm just walking along the road if somebody's walking along the road it makes me think that they're walking next to the road perhaps there's a sidewalk and they're walking on that sidewalk they're walking along the road next to it but parallel if they're walking on the road then they're actually then it makes me think they're actually standing on the road and if there are cars coming down the road then they're probably going to have to get out of the way and move off of the road so along the road I think they're more next to it on the road they're actually standing on the road excellent good question prepositions are so confusing and I know that these tiny little function words you know the their their getting the way but again like like I said at the beginning of this lesson that you get more listening practice the more exposure you get that is what's so important with those prepositions when you constantly hear them when you read them every day it's just going to improve your skills i fynd would you respond on instagram yes we we are making an effort to get better and better at not only posting on Instagram but trying to respond on Instagram as well and if you guys haven't already followed us boom it's in the chat I'm just gonna make that sound anytime that I post a link in there check us out on Instagram this is more something we use to share more of our personal lives and we put a lot of pictures up there about things that we're doing around where we live or like where we traveled I showed you that picture that we just traveled to Lake Bled in Sylvania I'll neva show you again that is a picture of from Lake Bled in Slovenia and this is stuff that we post on our Instagram if you're talking about Facebook and Twitter also follow us on there but that is also we'll post some pictures but we actually tried to help help you practice more of your English skills we will post quiz we will post pictures but also include some questions for you as well that are related to vocabulary grammar a wide variety of things so just you know I'm gonna throw those in the chat as well just so I can make that sound effect boom there's Facebook and Twitter in case some of you are on Twitter follow us on social media here is a link to our Twitter account boom there's Twitter alright so let me get back let me get back to a few more questions so let's see uh who's saying yes you were speaking very fast uh this is something I noticed from time to time when I'm filming a lesson like I'm teaching or going through these lessons and actually have it up there I have the information on the screen I tend to speak a bit slower and people notice that and they say hey I have no trouble understanding you but when I listen to a TV show or movie it becomes very difficult and I think that's the reason why is that after so many years of teaching I've naturally slowed down the speed of my speech so that I think it becomes a little easier to listen to me and identify the words and phrases and understand what I'm saying and again that if you understand what I'm saying that's great I think you should always listen at your level if you're listening to something and you don't understand then that just means it's a little above your level it's perhaps a little too fast in this case I've been speaking quickly now because I think these live these Q&A s it's a little more informal it's just the like me just here chatting with you guys trying to answer your questions so I think in that sense I just end up speaking a bit faster like I just would if I'm talking to a friend or a family member Muhammad asks how can I pronounce the word pious alright Pio us pious that is a good word good word to know let's see how can I practice laelia sorry if i mispronounce names how can i practice myself can you give me some steps practice it depends on what you want to practice but I always think it's great to get as much exposure as you can and try to practice all of the language skills okay so what I mean is like when I think of the four primary language skills I think of reading writing listening and speaking try to make sure that you're you're able to try and practice all of those language seals to get a well-rounded approach to the language take a little bit of time each day each week try to read a little bit in English either online or perhaps you're reading a book make sure you're listening to English as well whether you're listening to somebody like me from the United States or you're listening to somebody from the UK or Canada or Australia it doesn't matter as long as you're getting that listening exposure again you're improving your skills you're trying to identify the words that you hear writing I always encourage you guys even after this right now you're writing to me in the chat write to me in the comments that's a good way to practice your writing and speaking is where it gets a little trickier because I know some people live in places where they're like ah I can't find a speaking partner

I already gave that suggestion about try to find ways to speak that are not directly related to learning English whether you talk about forming a book club or you form some other kind of Club or meet up and you're gonna discuss cars or fashion or anything if it is just you I I think it's good talk to yourself in the mirror like I think of it like when when students would do test prep they're speaking questions are sometimes very specific like people would say hey you know tell me about your family what do you do for a living tell me about your job these are actually questions that you can practice answering on your own you can practice in front of the mirror you can record yourself giving these answers and even if you're saying it out loud that is useful don't worry about making mistakes the goal is that you're you're thinking about the words that you need to say in order to to talk about your job to talk about your vacation to talk about anything and then in the future when somebody were to ask you okay what do you do for a living tell me about your job you've already practiced this you've already done this on your own and then you're more likely to just come out and try and say it naturally and easily instead of thinking about oh what what what word is this what what word do I need to look up or say and then you start to stall and it doesn't sound as natural so again practice practice practice some more Imran says okay I'm guessing that's a pretend pronunciation word prestigious all right prestigious that that I and the middle has that long e sound prestigious I'm guessing that was asking about pronunciation so what else uh Chi arrow infer mundo could you help me you're trying to talk about thinking in English is another exercise that like you can do just like speaking but if you're afraid to actually come out and you know you're a little shy or embarrassed to talk in front of a camera or record yourself practice thinking in English the same way I would do this all the time when when I was learning Spanish or after I lived in a spanish-speaking country I lived in the Dominican Republic and I moved to California and I was not able to practice Spanish regularly with with people that I knew so what I would do is on my way home from work I had about a 10-minute walk in order to get to the bus but during that walk I would tell myself okay for the next five minutes I'm just gonna think in English instead of walking along and thinking about what I see and what I feel in English I'm gonna do the same thing in Spanish and that's what I would do I would just walk along the street whatever I was looking at I was thinking about it in Spanish whatever I was thinking about on my own maybe I was thinking about what am I going to eat tonight what am I going to do later what things do

I need to accomplish for the next day I was thinking about it in Spanish over time after like five six minutes sometimes it does become a little more difficult to remind yourself because it easy it's easy to switch back to your native language and then you have think oh wait wait this is a this is an exercise that I'm practicing but you can make this thinking in English you can make it an active exercise on your own that when you have some time to yourself whether you're riding to work or whether you're taking a shower or whether you're cooking a meal and think okay for the next few minutes I am just going to think in English whatever it is that you want to think about just just try and say it in English so let's look what else do we got so how can I say I mean how can I say I love you well I guess you know you could be direct and just tell somebody that you love them or if you're talking about you want to imply that without directly saying it just pay that person a bunch of compliments and and talk to them and say hey you know I like your outfit or you a very nice smile or again just get to know them talk about their interest what are the things they are interested in so that you can start that conversation and then maybe tell somebody that you love them I don't know so what hello please talk about the past forms of can all right well can I so if you're talking about can as the ability like I can ride a bike if you're talking about something like the past ability then you would just say could all right for example I say oh all right when I when I was younger I could touch my toes it's true if I try it right now I'm not very flexible I can't touch my toes in the present I can't do it but in the past I could I could touch my toes when I was more flexible and more and better in shape that's something that I could do so past of can when talking about the ability is could somebody else had asked about transitive verbs this was a while back I forgot the name Wendy like what are transitive verbs that they forgot so remember you have two types you have either transitive verbs or intransitive verbs the transitive verbs are the verbs that will that can take on a direct object all right so if you're talking about verbs that can take on a direct object like play I play soccer in this case what do you play soccer is the direct object so play is a transitive verb I play soccer I play tennis if you want to say intransitive verbs are verbs that cannot have a that cannot take on a direct object so I'm trying to think of another just intransitive verb off the top of my head an example so for example an intransitive verb that cannot take on a direct object would be like the verb I'm drawing a blank alright um I I jump all right some kind of you know action when it's often followed by a preposition I jump on I jumped on the bus alright on we're following it with that preposition it's a prepositional phrase so you cannot follow it with a direct object so there's a bunch of them if you want to know again transitive intransitive and see a list of verbs use google images it is a great way just type in a Google search transitive verb go to images and you're gonna find a picture with a list of verbs that you can use let's see sorry I'm kind of skipping through some of this I'm trying to get to different people so tale teller says yes pronunciation plough alright PL ough to plough usually you're talking about like plowing a field to plow let's see what else what else do we got here got some great questions or no wait wait plow hold on I'm thinking no yeah alright what else do we have it's moving so fast all right Lally says can you explain catch-22 situations so this is a verb somebody else asked me this from one of our other lessons we did a advanced vocabulary lesson and I talked about the phrase catch-22 and this is a word that's become a part of the English language but it's actually the title of a book and over time the word has just been used in English to describe a certain situation so for example what it the way it's defined is it's a problem that cannot be solved because the solution to the problem is inherent in the problem itself so I think in the the lesson that I gave I gave an example many of you maybe you can relate to this or I think we've all been it when I've lived abroad you need to get a work visa alright so for example say that you want to go to another country and you want to work there and they say ok in order to get the visa you need to have a job you need to say Oh company is gonna be like ok I will give you a job and then you can say ok this is where I'm going to work and then they'll give you the visa now in order to get the visa you have to have a job now when you go to look for a job the company is gonna say well I'm not going to give you a job until you have the visa so you're probably thinking we'll wait how am I going to get a visa

if if I need the visa I need a job in order to get the visa but I also need the visa in order to get a job so it's if it's kind of like this circular problem that just keeps spinning around and around and around and you're not able to solve it because I would say again the problem itself or the solution is inherent in the problem itself so that would be an example of a catch-22 I hope that makes sense so again I I can try and think of some other examples as well let's see do - let's see please we need more videos about contractions yes well we've done a lot of contraction lessons already we will continue making those in the future that they're very useful because the we people use them a lot in speaking because a contraction you're just taking two words and you're shortening them together the reason we do it is to speak quicker and more efficiently so again it's something that I think is more common in spoken language the use of contractions how should we pronounce reductions of shouldn't should it have shouldn't have and couldn't have wouldn't have so say that's a good question in this case I think if I want to say a sentence like you shouldn't have done that I would say just naturally I'd say uh you shouldn't have done that so have almost gets it almost sounds like of in that case shouldn't of alright you're not really you should not shouldn't shouldn't have shouldn't of so if I say oh you shouldn't have done that even though it sounds like uh I'm really saying you should not have done that they were if I say like I wouldn't have if I want to give a conditional sentence oh if I wouldn't have gone if you if you had told me not to I don't know I'd say again and that situation if I were to say it quickly and naturally like oh I wouldn't have gone if if you had told me not to I wouldn't have gone if you had told me not to I wouldn't have it almost sounds like winter I wouldn't have gone if you hadn't told me to so again that's something to keep in mind and this is where I think listening can become a challenge because you see wouldn't have and like okay I know these words I understand them but then if you're listening to a conversation or you're listening to a movie or something and you hear wind of and you're thinking like wait a second what words are they saying so again that is a great example of you know these reductions that they're not going to be sounded out in their entirety ESMA says can you explain a gerund alright so a gerund is actually a noun it is an ing noun that it looks like a verb so it's taking like the verb form adding an ING but it's technically the part of speech is a noun so for example if I say smoking is bad in that case smoking it's a noun but it's also a gerund smoking is bad often times you would talk about prepositions that are are verbs or adjectives that are followed by gerunds so for example some of them can be followed by both a gerund and infinitive like I like to watch movies that's the infinitive form I like to watch movies you could use it with a gerund too and say I like watching movies watching would be the gerund or other verbs you only have to choose one like enjoy enjoy is followed by the gerund I enjoy dancing in that case dancing is a gerund it is an ing noun what is as such uh Deepa alright I think I don't maybe I would need a context to use it in as such so for example this is a good good way so I'm just gonna read you a sentence so if you're talking about like if you have a word or a phrase and I tell students this all the time and you're like okay I always say use it in context try to understand how it's used in context a great way to do that is to look up a word use the internet and find some example sentences so I looked up as such just to find out what example sentence that they gave you and it says it is possible to stay overnight here although there is no guest house as such in this case as such it means that well in that case that there there there is no house available so it's talking about such as talking about an earlier like noun phrase alright so where is it let me see if I can find some more examples to give you as such this is something I'll be honest I don't know if it's more common in British English it's not something this is not a phrase that I find myself using at all so you would use the information I'm finding us as such with negative to indicate that a word or expression is not very accurate description of an actual situation so you're using it with a negative you're saying that it's not a accurate description so an example another example I am NOT a learner as such I used to ride a bike years ago so it's that in that situation you're not learning to ride a bike you already knew it years ago so you're not a learner again it's it's not something that I've really used often another sentence mark joined mark joined as an office boy with no qualifications as such so he joined but it's not an accurate description that that if we doesn't have qualifications that's I don't know that's a little weird maybe somebody if you guys are in the chat and you know more about you've learned more British English let me know if that's a common phrase that you hear or use in British English as such so I'm hearing monatti says pronunciation rendezvous rendezvous r en de z vo u.s. rendezvous so this is a French word you're not gonna hear that Z sound at all rendez-vous so again that vo us root vous rendez vous we're going to rendezvous around 2:00 p.m. outside that's where we're going to get together to rendezvous [Music] which form I mean which form can be replaced by manage to I'm not sure what you mean by which form like you managed to you managed to do something we can use a lot of different prepositions with manage your managed by someone but I think again you managed to do something this case like you're it's it's followed by the infinitive I'm not sure if you have an example that you could throw in there that would make that a little more specific let's see what else do we have whoa alright how to pronounce fortnight so fortnight again is a it's a word it's not a very common word but a fortnight is just talking about a duration of time and it's a period of two weeks and I think it's more common in British English but it almost sounds like you're pronouncing those two words fortnight fortnight can you tell me when we add ing Edie at the end of an adjective yes all right that's another one I'm gonna do you one better because II D ing adjectives are ones that are commonly confused again and these are very important that you you know how to use these Edie and ing adjectives because it's very different if you say I am bored versus I am boring so we did another lesson fairly recently about Edie and ing adjectives and I am just going to throw it in there throw it in the chat so you can go over check that lesson out I explain a lot about it I give you some useful examples and again you get that exposure it's just gonna start sinking in oh it was actually a lesson that we did fairly recently when I talked about three common grammar mistakes that advanced learners often make so if you guys haven't already checked out this lesson about common grammar mistakes boom it's right there alright I wanted to give you a quick little thing if you guys again if if you guys like what we do please check us out if you want to show some love to us and help support our channel and help it grow check us out on patreon it's a way again another way to connect with us another way to get involved in our community show us some love where we're trying to continue growing the channel we have a lot of plans for the future and and this is just something that becomes very useful boom there's patreon link alright if you guys want to check that out let's see we talked about sorry I know that I'm missing questions right here but and I apologize that is why we do these monthly Q&A is I'm trying to make it a monthly thing where I can connect with you guys and actually answer your questions directly all right Harold Martel says please pronunciation of B and V so this is a good practice like with minimal pairs when you have like ban van so ban remember to look you can see my lips it's always great to look at some of these lists ban ban the B sound buh buh buh buh so we're talking about voice or voiceless but so it is a voice sound ban-ban there's gonna be a puff of air to that you should be able to feel it so just say again I'm saying the words van and van those are the words that I'm saying and you should feel that air if you say them ban ban ban that puff van van the the teeth are gonna touch the bottom lip and you're just gonna have it vibrate a little Van Van Van I'm trying to think of other BV minimal pairs let's see you have ban van bass vase alright that's another good minimal pair bass vase and those are other pronunciation lessons that you know we'll keep practicing I like working with minimal pairs it's very useful alright so what I want to do all right this again this is just a good way for us to connect with you guys to take some of your questions these Q&A sessions I think they're you know they're very useful we enjoy doing them we're going to keep doing them monthly at this point I'm gonna have to call it short thank you guys so much for for joining me I appreciate you being here I appreciate all your questions if you have other questions please leave them down in the comments once the video gets posted because this helps us decide what lessons we need to do in the future I know there were some other people that were asking about pronunciation they were asking about vocabulary write them in the comments because if it requires a more detailed response like I said that is a great lesson to do in the future whether it's a video lesson or it's a specific live lesson where we can talk about that information so please write to us in the comments let us know thank you guys for being here thanking you thank you for being a part woops wait a second for being a part of the community what happened here all right there I am all right put myself down there in the corner thank you guys so much if you like enjoy our lessons hit that like button we really appreciate it that lets us know that we're doing something right and we will continue to try and can help you guys practice and improve your English skills check out our social media I shared those links before all that boom boom boom and and that is another great way to connect with us and practice your skills hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend thank you menotti lolly Lila ESMA gallano Angela Matt for English thank you guys so much hope you have a wonderful day and I will see you next time so long

LIVE ENGLISH Q&A LESSON | Interactive English

hey everyone welcome to a Q&A lesson that I have for you so my name is Wes this is interactive English and today I want to take some of your questions and just interact with all of you guys that's what this is all about and again even if you don't have any questions that's okay it's always good to practice your listening comprehension and just get more and more exposure to the language that is very important so I just want to say a quick hello to everybody who's here hello Faisal Mohammad Vicki Gustav Sophia sleepwalker Estella mean Rosalinda red green how are you Jamil so I I will try and get some more shout outs in there a little later on so again I want to take some of your questions today if you have questions related to vocabulary grammar pronunciation even personal questions everything it's it's fair game okay and him that's a good expression if you say that something is fair game it just means that it's okay that you can do this thing it's acceptable all right so write your questions in the chat and I'll just try to go get to as many as I can the only thing I would say is try to keep them a little more specific because if it's too broad it becomes more difficult to answer so when I say specific if it's like well how do you pronounce this word or what does this word mean or something specific related to grammar that's the only thing that that I'd say all right so the first thing I want to do is apologize also because I there have been some technical difficulties and I know that you guys have been bearing with me through all of this and I appreciate it and still working on getting through that and again that's another good phrase to bear with someone it means that you are being patient and you are enduring this problem this hardship so I can say yes you are bearing with me through these internet problems so the first question Sophia just asks a simple one or hit an easy one how are you and your family doing we are doing really well our little girl Emilia turned one she turned one a couple of days ago so we had a nice little celebration I've been trying to take a little break these last few days to spend have a little more family time we went to the zoo it's a great ship trip but now I'm kind of starting again to really focus and hone in on interactive English and the things we want to do this year and accomplish like video courses and some other little surprises okay so let's see hello guys alright okay so Ladon asked again talking about uses of far for example he was saying far and so far and as far as so it's the same word you're using far but they take on different meanings so for example the first one I think often you say that that something is far it's an adjective it's talking about a distance alright so something is located far the distance between here and there you could say well it's far today we have to run far actually I'd say it's an adverb because you're talking about the distance that you are moving you're going so that is far alone if somebody's saying so far usually they would say this casually and speak in when they're speaking and all it means so far is the same meaning as like up until now alright so up and now something has been happening and that's what you would use like oh so far I could say so far the lesson I think it's kind of working I noticed that it's still freezing so I could say well so far it's okay but I still think some internet problems exist at this moment that's why you hear mic maybe another expression people might say so far so good up until now everything it's going okay it's going well so far so good so that is a good expression to know excellent great question sophia asks how to use the word OTT this is a modal and it's it's kind of instead of like saying you have to you should so you ought to so for example it's gosh I would say that in I can only speak I think in American English it's not as common most people would tell somebody like you should do this like giving using that modal of advice or you you have to do this but it's the same as saying you ought to do this I think in that case it's closely related to should you're giving somebody advice telling them something that you think they should do you ought to do this you ought to do this thing so I could say you know

oh you you ought to study English a little bit each and every day I'm telling you the thing that you should do I can't really speak for for British English and and how common it is but when you're learning those modal's I think it's common you would learn you know you should you ought to you have to they fall in in that family Shimada asked what is the meaning as of now so if somebody says the expression again as of now it's also again similar to so far or up until now as of now up until this point you know something has happened so basically you're wanting to highlight some information and really say like okay at this moment you know something hasn't changed as of now I'm still having problems with my internet connection as of now so you can think of it that way um Heather asked do you pronounce I say Chicago so I I think it more that CH would have an SH sound Chicago that's how I would pronounce it I don't I can't really think of any accents or people place it because

America is pretty it's a big country people pronounce words differently but I think Chicago is universally with that SH sound Chicago nobody's really pronouncing it with that ch let's see Mohammed says sir do you believe to be specific reading novels is the best way for rapid progression what I think I would take away novels and just say reading I think reading is incredibly useful for improving your English skills because when you're reading you are practicing your grammar your practicing vocabulary it's something that you can do at your speed because when you're having a conversation or you're you're listening to me right now some people might think well this is too fast others might say well you speak it's too slow I get that a lot I've been teaching English for a long time and I think in general I've just slowed down my speech so reading you can do it at your speed you can stop and look up information you can go back and try to understand what was going on so it's really great for improving your overall comprehension and because of that it's going to complement the other skills it's going to compliment your listening skills and improve your comprehension it's going to compliment your speaking skills because the next time you want to use a word or a phrase or use the grammar correctly you have already seen it or you've already understood how it's used correctly from the book so I wouldn't say just a novel I think that is up to you whether you enjoy reading newspapers or novels or short stories or poems I would just encourage all of you to read as much as you can let's see and again sorry if I miss questions I'm just gonna go through some that I spot could Alexander says could you have a class about vocabulary for call centers please interesting all right I'll keep that in mind I'm always on the lookout for new vocabulary lessons and the way that I'm doing this the way that I've been doing it lately is trying to present vocabulary based on a topic and try to walk through it so for example all right spoiler alert this Tuesday is it's a vocabulary lesson it's all about airport and flying vocabulary but the way I'm going to try and present it is though that we are taking a flight we're starting at the beginning of the trip and we're gonna go over some vocabulary and then once we get on the plane and do some vocabulary and then once we land and do that vocabulary so that you can try to identify with what's happening and think about your own experience when you're flying and really connect those words to it I think that helps a lot so let me think about the call center and you know how that might be possible that's interesting mom who says you've been super helpful thank you I'm glad that these lessons are useful I and and again this with with this live stream I want to keep doing it I'm very frustrated that I've been having these problems lately and and I noticed it's still it's still freezing I don't know why I got a new computer but I don't think that's it because we had unless we had lessons earlier this month that were perfectly okay and I'm not really sure what the issue is all right so let's see lolli yes please tell the image plane achieve and accomplish honestly I feel like achieve and accomplish they I think they're very similar in their meaning talking about being able to succeed at something so you've got you often hear those words used when talking about goals and you want to achieve your goals or accomplish your goals in that sense they can be used interchangeably and you're talking about just wanting success so I think it's just a matter of when you might use those and I'm trying to think of some better examples as to how they may not be interchangeable I think in many instances you could use either or and this is when it goes back to reading because I think as the more exposure you get to the language you'll start to see which words are used in which situations and with other words and phrases and it just starts to sink in so you can achieve your goals you can accomplish your goals I I want to one thing I would say I feel like if you're talking about a project I feel like then like maybe accomplished or if you're talking about something in the past that you did I feel like that might be you more often used in the past if you're talking about something that was accomplished in the past but again that's just my personal opinion otherwise I'd say they're very similar and you could almost think of them as synonyms let's see what else we have I'm trying to think Michele Leonardo what does I helped myself mean is an American idiom so if somebody says like I I helped myself you usually help yourself to something and I would often say that it's used when talking about food so if somebody says well I help myself it just means I did it myself so this could be saying yes as an idiom that you did something yourself when I say that it's often used when talking about food somebody maybe there's food out on the table and you could say well I helped myself to some cake I didn't wait for somebody to get the cake for me I just went and got it and you'd say I helped myself so I think when you you might often hear it used just for your comprehension if you if somebody invites you somewhere and there's food out there's drinks somebody might say to you they say help yourself which means that hey you can go get it nobody's gonna bring it to you you help yourself but if you're saying I helped myself then you're just telling somebody that you did it on your own alright good question that's a good one let's see Angela asked like does hold it mean wait yes but I feel like hold it is often used more kind of like as a command like telling so wait wait hold it like stop what you're doing in that case so it wouldn't say like for example not all of these phrases are interchangeable and I think this is where vocabulary becomes challenging because I could say hold it means like weight in the sense of like you know wait stop what you're doing don't don't do anything else hold it or they might say hold up but you would not substitute this for any meaning of weight like I'd say uh I'm waiting for my friend you would not use hold it in that sense so when I think of hold it it's more like you know okay stop what you're doing wait don't do anything else just just hold it but I almost said I think maybe hold up maybe something maybe I might use a little bit more but it just means stop what you're doing let's see what else do we have when we use it is and is it again this would be an example it is would be a simple declarative sentence you're making a statement I could say that you know maybe I'm talking about my phone I'd say well it is an iPhone when you're asking a question that interrogative that's when you might switch around in verse the subject and the verb and I'd ask a question I say is it an iPhone so as a question that if you're saying is would come first is it an iPhone and then I say yes it is an iPhone it's an older iPhone an iPhone 6 I decided to upgrade my computer before upgrading the phone what else do we have let's see Esther asked what is the meaning of to go above and beyond this is an expression that means you do more than what is expected of you and often I think it's used in the context of work or maybe school when especially work and you'd say well this employee they did more than they then they really had to do this employee went above and beyond they did more than they had to do so I think it's often you're going to use it or you will hear it being used in a work environment when you're talking about somebody who did more than what was expected to go above and beyond um let's see from Gustav what's the meaning of shilly-shally honestly I'm not I'm not really sure of this expression uh shilly-shally I'm not sure I'm not sure which part because I know you're in the u.s. if that is a regional expression but I'm a little unfamiliar with it but because I have the internet right here I just looked it up I'm gonna learn something new it means to AH okay to fail to act decisively that you I guess maybe to hesitate shilly-shally it's a verb to shilly-shally I'd say uh I think it's more it's more of an informal expression I don't know if it would be used in an academic sense when now I know what I I'm thinking of I think of the word maybe it's similar to dilly-dally that you could also say to dither to dilly-dally is an expression it's also very informal maybe it could be considered slang is kind of like - basically you're you're doing nothing you haven't made a decision you don't know what you're gonna do you're you're just gonna you know people would say stop dilly-dallying stop doing nothing but shilly-shally yeah it's saying to fail to act interesting um I'm gonna have to look and see how it see if I can find other context being used let's see I mean asked how to speak usually I mean how to say that word that adverb usually that adverb of frequency which means like 75% of the time let's see trying to think I'm sorry it's like flipping through these question about the passive Farhat is a question about the passive voice is there a passive form for the present continuous can you convert this sentence to passive I've been waiting for you since this morning I've been waiting for you you have been waiting for I have been waiting for you you have been waiting for me I have been waiting you have been waiting I guess it and now I don't know that's no I don't I don't but most of the time I'd say when you're talking about passive and active voice one thing you should realize is that most times when you are writing something or when you're speaking you're going to use the active voice because it's straightforward it's more direct there are only certain instances when you would want to use the passive voice I know that when you take English classes and teachers like me will get up there and they say let's change sentences to the passive and it's more so practicing to see if you understand it you know bear in mind that you you do use the passive voice for certain situations like when the person doing the action or the subject may not be known or maybe when they don't want to say the the sentence for example I always think of like I say we made mistakes all right we made mistakes many people don't want to confess and say that oh you know we made mistakes so they would make it passive and they want to take that we out there and they would just say mistakes were made we don't know who they're not gonna save mistakes were made by us they just take that part out and they'd say mistakes were made so off the top of my head I can't think about changing that one I've been waiting for you since this morning I think if you wanted to actually say that and use that in a conversation or you're writing it stick with the active that's much better so that that's again keep that in mind you know you're gonna use active most of the time there's just certain situations mom said do or go boxing I'd say you you wouldn't do boxing there are certain sports that you're just going to say like I I like boxing like something to say like I like this activity I like ping-pong I like swimming all right you're not going to use do with those you could say go if you're talking about that you are actually going to do this in in the future and you say you know oh we're you know I'm going to go boxing in that case you wouldn't say like I'm going boxing no no no I just say I will go boxing or I'm going to go boxing which is a little different because if somebody says swimming many people would say yeah you know I'm going swimming this is what I'm going to do so again I wouldn't I would think of boxing forget about do and go and just think of it on its own let's see complex gerron's please that's something that's a little bigger topic maybe this again getting good ideas for possible live lessons later I know often I like to do grammar with some of these live streams and the reason for that is because you can do a deeper dive you can do a lot of practice and examples so it's always good if you have other questions once the video gets posted write to me in the comments because I love getting suggestions from all of you it really tells me what you're interested in and you know good good lessons that I could try to put together and answer some of these questions let's see shrewd all right a Tim is asking shrewd there's just one shrewd shrewd it's just yes it's one syllable shrewd shrewd yeah that's a difficult one so just talking about the pronunciation of shrewd and if somebody is shrewd in case you don't know that is an adjective and it means that they are I'd say almost like somebody is cunning and even like a little deceptive and they're just like it they're they're really looking out for themselves like somebody is shrewd makes me think of somebody who might be in a competition with somebody else and usually when people are competing against each other they they may be a bit shrewd that they're thinking about just winning and that causes them to be a little shrewd let's see mmm hi ginger Kamal what does it mean don't be saying especially be in the sentence um Stefano says what does it mean don't be saying honestly I don't know I feel like I'm and somebody if you're saying that for somebody not to say something I think it'd be more common that somebody say you should not say you shouldn't say don't be saying I don't think to me that sounds a little awkward but somebody may use it in order to kind of like maybe stand out and try to put emphasis on something but it's to me it just sounds awkward I'd say like you shouldn't say this you shouldn't say or just say like don't say I think this is where sometimes like the people will insert the verb to be in some cases when it's not needed also when I think it's kind of just like breaking rules especially when it comes to stative verbs and people will talk about like I am liking or I am loving grammatically that's not what you should be doing but people will tend to break those rules let's see let's see is asked about somebody whose asset hitherto let's see Fatimah asked so hitherto again I feel like this is something that it's a word you're going to encounter more in reading I don't think it's some a word that's often used in just casual conversation maybe if you're giving a presentation and it's a little more formal but it's an adverb and it just means that like until now all right until now this has happened so we've been talking a lot about those phrases like hitherto so far but again it's a word that you're going to find more in writing if it's something maybe you're reading a book but it's not something you might use this is in spoken English let's see can the phrasal verb to pile on be used in a figurative way to pile on so yeah well I mean to pile on means when I think of that phrasal verb being used that people are kind of picking on somebody one person is picking on another and then everybody else starts doing it and people start piling on it's almost like in the literal way people are piling on they're jumping on top of this person but I'd say in the figurative way its meaning is that like that that you're not literally jumping on this person but you're piling on whether you are teasing them you are saying something you know bad about them or maybe you're just reminding them of something bad like there's all this maybe bad things going on and then you tell somebody else like hey oh you forgot about this bad thing you're like ah don't there's no need to pile on so let's see for us what is difference between usage of do two and because of do two and because of I think though I mean you can use those interchangeably when you're talking about those phrases I think that I would say that both of them are common in spoken English I think in writing do two is a little more formal to me so if you're talking about academic writing I think it's a little more formal a little more appropriate to say due to that something is it's caused by this other thing if I'm just speaking to you and spoke in English it's a you know because of the rain we we couldn't go outside today but if I could say due to as well means the same thing but to me it just sounds a little more formal like Oh due to the rain we couldn't go outside today so I think in that context I think because of might be used a little more informally in just casual spoke in English alright so I I want to let you guys know again if you want to continue connecting with us you can join our community right here and connect with us via email if you haven't already I just put a post in the link right there you can join our email list because again it's a good way to connect with us you can access the secret fluency lesson and we will send you some updates about things that are happening and things that are changing and again if you're just looking to practice your English it's a great way to practice your reading because we'll send you emails from time to time and you can read through them they're not very long and we don't send I try not to overdo it I'm not gonna I don't send messages every single day but maybe once every I don't know one or two weeks and it's still something we're trying to kind of figure out and again you can always connect with us on patreon there is a link in the description if you want to check that out so I hope that you guys enjoyed this little Q&A I want to continue doing it each month it's a great way to connect with you to learn about some of your needs the things that you guys want to learn as well as the the questions that you have and it's just a nice way to connect i apologize for some of the internet issues I'm gonna keep working at this and see what what we can figure out so that we can continue doing this because I want this to be flawless all right I wanted to go very smoothly so I hope you guys have a wonderful weekend if there are other questions that I didn't get to answer the video will get posted pretty please write to me in the comments I will try to answer them or I will keep that in mind for a future lesson because always on the lookout for four things - - for new lessons to create so thank you for joining me lolly Shawn Ladon Aiden good to see you Marius sorry I didn't answer your question write it and write it in the comments and I'll have a look at that Michelle thank you guys for joining me today Steph Kofu Leah let's see Farhat Esther [Music] Richard Jamila Lucca hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you next time so long

LIVE English Lesson | Q&A Session

what's up everyone welcome my name is Wes and this is interactive English and if this is your first time here I want you to know that interactive English we are all about helping you practice and improve your English skills we're coming out with new lessons each week and we try to make them a little more interactive we want you guys to participate in these lessons whether it be asking us questions or writing your answers down in the comments that's what it's all about trying to practice and improve your skills what we're going to do today is we're doing a live Q&A so I am going to take some of your questions and and I will try to answer them but before we begin and you asked the questions if you're joining us in the chat today I will try to answer as many questions as possible even if you're watching this later I would suggest you know write your questions in the comments because it helps us come up with new ideas about well what is it that everybody in our community needs to learn what is it that people are interested in learning so please write to us in the comments we just want to hear from all of you write your name tell me where you're from I just want to give some shout outs to some people who are here with me today hello Carlo Ahmad I'm John Lally Bryan long welcome Maria thanks for joining me ludovic I will try to again give as many shout outs as I can as possible so again what we're going to do is I'm gonna try and take some of your questions I would suggest you can ask me about pronunciation you can ask me about grammar vocabulary you can ask some personal questions even if you want try to make the question specific because if they're too broad it becomes too difficult to answer but again that's okay ask whatever you want because again maybe if I'm not able to answer your question now that still gives us ideas for the future other lessons that we need to create that's all about helping you guys improve and practice your English skills so another great way to connect with us if you want to please you can connect with us and via email and join join the interactive English team you can access the secret fluency lesson and we just send you guys some really cool stuff from time to time I just threw it in there in the chat if you haven't joined already so let's before we begin all right I do these Q&A s and what I tried to do is I try to start with questions from our patreon community if you are unfamiliar with patreon it is basically it's a way to support our lessons and support what we do here it's just a monthly contribution if you're interested in joining patreon we have some cool rewards there is a link in the description and I will throw that link in the chat as well but what I've done is I've taken some questions from our patreon community and I've kind of turned them into a mini lesson so that's what we're going to do first and then I will take questions from all of you here so the first question that somebody had Danny had it was all about it was about collocation and they were talking about collocation z' with with ride if you need to get a ride somewhere or you need to travel or go somewhere what are the different ways in which you could ask somebody and what are the verbs that you use with rides so let's take a look at that first collocation z' with rides so this is very useful information because if you need to go somewhere well these are the questions that you will ask and there is a difference in meaning so for example let's look at this first part up here can you give me a ride all right Ken so the other person the other person gives a ride if I'm just talking about me I would say that second question can I get a ride so the difference between give a ride and get a ride so you give a ride I get a ride and that's the same with have alright I have a ride Ken I have a ride so be careful when you're talking don't confuse give and get if you want to ask somebody directly and I'd say talking to you I'd say hey can you give me a ride alright I could also say can I get a ride the meaning is the same but it's just a difference between using the verb give and get so you give a ride I get a ride I guess you could also say if you're just talking to a bunch of people and you're yelling out hey can I get a ride you could be talking to a number of different people and asking that and I think you could also say kit you can also say can I have a ride I don't think it's as common I think most of the time you know you would talk about giving a ride or getting a ride all right Andre awesome thank you for the super chat we love it we love it thanks so much we really appreciate it the next part is instead of ride you could say lift alright and it's the same can you give me a lift you would give a lift or I would get a left can I get a lift or can I have a lift so again be careful of those verbs so you can say ride lifts is the same it's the same thing you could ask for a lift can you give me a lift can I get a lift now there are other ways that we can say it as well if you want to be more specific okay so if you want to be more specific and ask somebody like can you take me to you're not going in that direction you're not heading in that direction and you have to go way over here to get there and say hey it's out of my way so somebody might tell you that be careful and informal questions you could say you know tell somebody hey can i bum a ride the same way we can use bum to talk about getting something for free like people might be like oh can i bum a smoke or you could say can I catch a ride or can I hitch a ride those are more informal they are also they're not as commonly used if you want to stick with what most people say and they're talking about ride can you give me a ride or can I get a ride those are the most common collocations the verbs that you would use with this noun verb noun collocations excellent question another question dealt with causative verbs and this is something I just discovered like

I said I love getting questions from you guys because it helps us think of new lessons that we still need to create because when you're talking about English there is just so much to talk about and we haven't done a lesson on causative verbs and I think we will in the future but if you don't know what a causative verb is it's a verb used to indicate that a person or a thing makes something happen and the reason why this might confuse some people is because of the form so this is kind of the form that it follows you have the causative verb you have the person or thing which would which would be the object and then it's followed by the base verb now it's not always followed by the base verb but I will give you an example these down here those are the most common positive verbs make let have get help all right so those are some causative verbs and let me show you some examples and maybe if you guys can just just write some examples in the chat using causative verbs because it's always great to practice your skills so again he made us do push-ups I've highlighted that form for you where you have the causative verb made followed by the object followed by the the base verb so when you're using make you follow the base verb made us do push-ups same with let they let me watch the movie okay you're not using the infinitive form there is no - they let me watch the movie also here again this is where it gets a little different I'll have her call you again we're talking about have have we use the base verb now if we're talking if it's a person alright we're talking about person I'll have her call you if we're talking about a thing for example we're having the house painted in this case if it's followed by a thing alright something like the house we're going to use the past participle of the verb alright you have something done so you're going to use the past participle in that case now if we're talking about the verb yet I got him to help me now this is where I said it's a little different because in this case you get someone to do something you're going to use the infinitive with get or again if I say if we're talking about something or a thing she's getting it done we follow it with the past participle and these are just grammar rules that you can study you can practice and again this is just going to help you improve your fluency it's also going to help you understand if you're having a conversation or reading a story it helps your comprehension now the bottom one you can use either she helped me wash the dishes follow it with the base verb or she helped me to wash the dishes you can use the infinitive the meaning is the same okay now the specific question that was asked was talking about this somebody if they say you know I have my students do the homework you're using have and or I have got my students to do the homework so again the main verb is different when we're talking about have you have someone do something you use the the base verb I have my students do homework if you're talking about have in this case we're using the past participle or the present perfect have got but the main verb is still yet so I have got my students to do homework in that case since the main verb is get you get someone to do something so the meaning is also the different because if you say I have my students do homework then that just means that the students are doing the homework if you say I have got my students to do the homework if you get someone to do something the meaning is slightly different because it means that you are encouraging them to do something or you're even convincing them to do it so it's like the students were convinced to do the homework and maybe you trick them in some way you're like yeah I've got my students to do the homework they weren't gonna do it but I've got them too so keep that in mind it's just a difference between the main verb have and the get all right you have someone do something or you get someone to do something all right now I want to open it up to all of you so again this is something that I want to do Q&A is each month for for our patrons you can ask questions and I'll go through and do like a little mini lesson before taking some comments from you I see some great sentences yes Olivia I have my house repaired good use of the causative verb I'll have my haircut yeah you're going to get your haircut you're going to get it done excellent love it thank you

Oh Milan awesome thank you so much for the super chat alright and I will take your question yes I want to ask you about eight so eight is a contraction all right and basically what I would say I think this is I don't think it's used regularly in British English I think this is more American English specifically English from the South and that's where I grew up I grew up in the southeast so I'm very familiar with eight and it would be like somebody would use it to say I am NOT now generally if it what I would encourage you to do if you're going to use a contraction just say I'm not I'm not going to I'm not going to do the homework for example all right but in the South some people might use ain't and they contract am not and they contract those together and they say you know I ain't I ain't gonna do the homework all right you ain't going to do something you and it basically is contracting the verb to be with not again I think this is something very specific to the southern part of the United States but maybe the the question if you're asking because of a TV show or a movie and you hear somebody speaking and they use this ain't like I ain't gonna do this that's crazy I ain't gonna do that so again if you're talking about ain't it's just that contraction with B and not all right so hopefully hopefully that helped and I'm just curious I guess where that question came from if you've heard it somewhere or if you were reading a book and they used ain't because yeah I think it's very specific to American English some people wrote I'll have dinner tonight excellent am NOT yes I am NOT ain't perfect where am i from somebody asks oh I am from the United States I grew up around Atlanta Georgia but I've lived in about give you my bio really quickly I lived in about eight different states across the United States I went to undergrad and Colorado beautiful state I did my masters out in California which is where I met my beautiful wife but now we don't live in the u.s. we live in Hungary we live in Europe right now so we kind of were kind of all over the place let's see somebody else how do you pronounce Herrera Herrera Herrera I'm not sure what that if it's Victor it's about a product but yeah I just say Herrera Herrera is that no Victor Jara there's your name yes okay there you go now you can correct my pronunciation is that how you say your name Victor Herrera let's see what else do we got is this sentence correct I suggest that you be more careful yeah you could say that I think again it sounds a little verbose and when I say something is verbose it means you know it's a little wordy there's a lot of words in there in that case again because you're talking about a suggestion a recommendation that would be the subjunctive all right I suggest that you be more careful you would use that subjunctive so we're using be you be more careful I think a lot of people again commonly would say to me I'd say you know I think you should be more careful would be just something that naturally would come to me and that that again that reminds me that again that's just a difference in transformation the meaning is the same I suggest that you'd be more careful or I'd say like I said for me I just say yeah I think you should be more careful and again I think that is one of those cases where that can be omitted you don't have to have that in that sentence you don't have to have that in that sentence Olivia's do you like traveling yes we love traveling but now we have we have a little baby four month old we haven't been traveling as much but we hope to do more traveling in the future there are so many places that we want to visit we love hearing from you guys because all of these places that you guys are from like Constance I'm from Brazil we want to go to Brazil that's on our list we want to go to India that's on our list Russia there are just so many you know there's too many places to go in too little time so it says sir I want you to do some podcast that is something that we have thought about doing it's just a matter of finding time at this point between teaching and putting together these lessons videos editing live lessons we're putting together an online course as well so there's a lot going on but yes we we hope to we hope to maybe branch out and explore with some different avenues and do some podcasts sir please pronounce subtle all right subtle so again this is one of those words subtle where B is a silent it's a silent letter subtle subtle and again the way I say it with the Marriott it's that flat T sound so that T almost sounds like a D when I say a very light D sound subtle this will be a little different in British English but American English they use that flap T when the tea is in that middle position for example water so you can hear that D sound if I say hey I'm going to drink some water let's see what else do we have Oh somebody asked a great question Muhammad s is being in your late 40s a hurdle towards fluency honestly I you know in my just opinion I would say no I I hope that right now I've studied I my first language that I tried to learn that I learned was Spanish my second language I then learned Korean when I was living in Korea and now I'm learning Romanian so this is the the third language I'm trying to learn I have not achieved fluency and in like Korean or Romanian but to muhammad's point I think it's something that I hope to keep doing through for the rest of my life the only difference I'd say in fluency would be if you're talking about like an adult and a child I think when children learn a language there it's a different style of learning and be partly in part because of that the children tend to have a much better pronunciation they sound if you learn a language at a very very young age you're just going to sound more like a native speaker because you're not gonna have that accent as for adults I think whether you are 20 30 or 40 I think some of those challenges are still the same that people think more tend to think more about rules and they focus a lot on grammar and they want to things are more rule-based so it's again it's a different style of learning but no I think I think you guys should always keep practicing and I think it goes back to just the simple things how much time can you allocate to learning the language how much time can you dedicate to practicing your skills so it really is up to you you didn't iron your shirt I can help you can you okay all right I will send you I will now send you my laundry thank you thank you for thank you for taking care of that for me yes I didn't have time thanks Wes yeah again I'm you know I one thing I love about this this community I think everybody is so amazing so wonderful and and very positive to about learning and appreciative we are so happy to be able to work with you guys and and to have these lessons after thinking thinking of you listen I'm not really sure about that question what could he Oh what could he have been thinking of why oh okay why of after thinking uh ooh that's a good question prepositions that is something okay that's that's a good one that's maybe a deep dive for later in in getting into that grammar alright because again you when you're talking about that you're thinking of something all right so when you're talking about ending us a question in a preposition grammatically speaking all right you know that people might say okay you shouldn't end a sentence in a preposition so for example who do you want to speak to all right - is that preposition it's a question we end it with that it's very common in spoken English but they would say oh no you shouldn't end it so if somebody says what are you thinking of again that what is that something you you you know you would end it with that that preposition of because we use that when you're talking about thinking of something all right the same with about you can use the preposition about has the same meaning what are you thinking about I'm thinking about something so those are it's more of I'd say again going back to collocation z' learning which words are used together so you could think of something you could think about something those prepositions are used with that verb yes mean how his little Emmy Emmy is doing wonderful thank you for asking she is just such a positive joy in our life she is always so smiley in the morning and it's such a great way to start out the day so let's see how do you pronounce bed bad so Andre you're talking about that short e sound and that short a so BAE yeah again I'd say the mouth is a little uh is a little more close when you're at you're gonna have the mouth will be wider so as far as positioning goes that short a bed bad alright that ah your mouth is going to widen out I think we did have a lesson on minimal pairs we do that from time to time that that is a good one the short a short a I'm gonna mark that down for a future lesson because we like doing those pronunciation practice lessons in talking about those minimal pairs because like right and light the RL consonant but I know that people have trouble with those the vowel sounds in English they they can be very confusing bed bad bed bad alright um let's see what else that's another one Rosalinda I think of saving for the future alright with reported speech there's a lot to cover with that so that is on our list I have a list of lessons that I'm going through one at a time and checking them off but yes reported speech is one of them have you ever been to China before yes I traveled to China about ten years ago I visited where Shanghai I had a friend there I was in Beijing Xian quailing Hong Kong and then back to Shanghai so it was a nice it was a long it was a long trip don't drink again don't drink what my water I need to drink water I need it to stay alive so you were coming on YouTube so a long time this is this has been we've been on YouTube now for a little over two years alright so this is it's a it's it's pretty amazing how much this has grown and we just there's so much more that we want to keep doing hi from Brazil oh hi well I tend what's up nice to have you here and again even if you guys are watching this later write some questions to us in the chat tell us what you want to learn because we do read through all those comments those of you who've watched a lot of our lessons you know I try and go and respond to every single one of those comments as much as possible dan are you teaching American English yes I think the channel the focus is not just like well just American English because a lot of concepts are broader for example grammar is a bit more Universal vocabulary we try to cover I think our channel I think we end up covering a bit more vocabulary than than anything else and talking about phrases expressions idioms advanced vocabulary academic vocabulary so a lot of that I think is applicable across all English varieties whether you're talking about American English British English Canadian English Australian English South African English a lot of that vocabulary is is applicable what does it mean in cahoots that's a good one so if you are in cahoots with somebody it basically means that you were working with this person you are working together to do something and I think it's something mischievous alright something that's not good so for example you're planning to do something bad and you're like oh you're in cahoots with this person or maybe you're keeping a secret from somebody you're in cahoots so it doesn't have to be something that's very bad but if you're in cahoots with somebody it means that you are working together with with somebody else or with these people to accomplish some goal all right de Lyonne how was your Spanish yo creo que habla mas o menos pero la la problema a problema el problema que hace mucho tiempo sin habla espanol entonces si muchas cosas que male-male Alvarado e por ESO necesito practical practical practical una cosa que tengo que espero and as the momento como como usted es que quieran aprender inglis okay i KN control tiempo para hacerlo e derek r el tiempo para ser lo tambien okay so just talking a little bit in Spanish all you have Spanish speakers out there now you can go through and correct my grammar or my pronunciation so again it's it's something that I'm constantly working on I think I've been spot studying Spanish and I've lived in three different spanish-speaking countries I've lived in Costa Rica I lived in the Dominican Republic and I lived it no no no just to - alright I'm getting ahead of myself but each time again you you I feel like when I'm there I'm practicing every day I'm more dedicated I'm speaking with people because when I was there I was there for work I think my Spanish improved greatly and over the last few years I just haven't practiced as much and I'm practicing on my own the same things that I tell you guys because I don't have anybody to speak to but I'll do some things where I'll speak to myself in front of the mirror a little bit at night when I'm brushing my teeth my teeth when I'm walking throughout the day I'll have a conversation with myself in Spanish and I love doing that because then I realize like I'll get to a point where it's like oh I know this word I forgot the word and then I go home I look it up and and again that's a great way to refresh your vocabulary skills so there are ways to practice if you've started learning a language and and now that you feel like okay you don't you're not taking classes or you don't have a speaking partner or you're not living in a certain area or traveling there are ways to practice on your own and and I always encourage you guys to do that let's see I said what is it oh let's see oh yes where'd you get this word Oh some I was asking about the word dude okay yeah dude is slang uh it's more slang in American English I don't know again I can't really speak if somebody's getting angry about that I don't know why I think some people might take things personally or I don't know I really I don't know that because I feel like I've worked I've lived in different countries and have met a lot of people who are English learners you know if people use British English and maybe they called me a a chap or bloke

I'm not gonna get offended by that but again it depends on who you're talking to they might be like oh you know don't don't call me this even though it's not an offensive term alright to say somebody dude it's just very informal now it depends on who you're talking to if you're talking to maybe you know your professor or something like that you might want to be a little more formal and not call somebody to dude but again it really depends on the context there you go this is my first day join live program thank you alright welcome all of you who are new here again we're happy to have you this is this is great I want you guys to ask questions and again I hope that this is good practice for you guys especially like listening practice a lot of people tell me like oh I can easily understand you and part of that is because I've been teaching English for about almost 15 years now my speech has naturally slowed down and plus I put in a little more effort to try and speak clearly even now in my everyday life that's just part of my speech now so the way I'm talking to you now when I talk to my wife you wanna I don't I kind of speak in the same way but yeah some people are like when I go see some friends back home sometimes they may comment be like dude you're they say dude alright you're speaking so slow why are you talking so slow let's see where is it thank you cool Spanish thank you all right Oh Gibson thank you you speak great Spanish oh hey don't I don't have an English accent all right I I thank you I thank you for the compliment but there is a lot all right there is a lot of that I need to work on in my Spanish because it has it's been it's been a long time since I've just practiced regularly most of the time it's with myself it's been a long time too since I've been practicing it like trying to learn the grammar reading and doing all those things because right now I'm focusing more on Romanian that's kind of you know trying to build my skills in that language so let's see lucious you deserve more subscribers thank you all right we're we're growing slow and steady slow and steady that's another we've come out with these lessons on binomials that's another binomial pair slow and steady all right just take it slow and steady and you will get to where you need to go and what we're trying to do is just keep building keep working with you guys and and kind of eventually build like an online schools let's see let's see what's he looking at other questions how do you pronounce the word though all right th Oh ugh though all right I just say though so it almost sounds like that GH has that W sound though what the meaning of fella isn't it slang yes that is another I think slang term it's very informal somebody calls you fella and again this is another term that I don't think it's always meant to be mean but that could also somebody might be offended and be like yeah don't call me that even though it's not like you're saying something bad but it's not very common I tell you that like if you're wanting to travel somewhere and you start calling everybody fella it's it's it could sound a little awkward because it's not a common way to refer to somebody in person somebody's and what does it means so we you do something in person that means that you are there so for example maybe you have a meeting and they say you know oh can I can I call and listen to the meeting and they say no no no you need to come you need to join the meeting in person you need to come here in person which means that you actually need to do that often you might use it in that like a business sense when for example maybe you're you're looking for a job and they're hiring and they say we're only doing in-person interviews we're not going to do interviews over on skype and on the computer you have to actually come here and do an in-person interview you need to be here in person what Noir why are you learning Romanian so you wanna my wife who's been kind of taken a little bit of a break from interactive English but it's helping a lot behind the scenes is she is American Romanian so she has family in Romania which is very close to hungry so we go visit them from time to time so that's something that we you know I want to learn and be more part of that part of her life but also we want our daughter to grow up speaking English and Romanian and then as she gets older to start introducing other languages as well such as Spanish and many more so let's see Unreal past okay my question I don't understand the Unreal past I feel like you're talking about the the third conditional so if we're talking about the third conditional of conditional statements if I had for example we were just talking about interviews all right if I had gone to the interview I would have gotten the job I'm not gonna go over the grammar with you but you're saying you know okay real quickly if I had gone to the interview you're using the past perfect alright in you're using the past perfect with your if statement and then in the the result I would have gotten alright you're using would plus half plus the past participle I would have gotten now in that context if I just say that sentence alright if I had if I had gone if I had gone on the interview I would have gotten the job okay it's unreal they often refer to the third conditional is unreal because did I go to the interview no this is something that's already happened it's in the past I cannot change this okay so sometimes in the third conditional they would say it's an unreal situation no no

I actually know now I'm thinking uh maybe I'm conflating these two conflating means mixing things up alright third conditional would be impossible it's impossible because I can't go back and change time unreal maybe it's like a second conditional hypothetical situation I often use a second conditional and say it's a hypothetical situation because it's it's not possible you'd say it's unreal alright if I had wings I would fly I think that's even from a song - I don't have wings it's not possible it's hypothetical and it's an unreal situation so excuse me unreal second conditional third conditional think of impossible because you can't change the past all right sorry about that so what's the meaning of when you say past participle because then we're talking about grammar so for example the you'd have the present perfect tense all right I have done my work all right the main verb the the present perfect the helping verb have all right plus the main verb which is do but we're using the past participle fro so for example do in the present tense did in the past tense done is the past participle form of the verb so when you're learning verb tenses oftentimes people will go through especially with irregular verbs and they will just go through and they will try to memorize the the present tense simple past past participle and then just go through those go went gone gone is the past participle what does what does carry out meaning so again if you're talking about carry out I think as something is for carry out like you're doing it for take away maybe you're going to a restaurant and you're getting some food and say yeah I want it for carryout alright you are leaving with the food you could say I want it for carryout I want it for takeaway I want it for take-out there are many different expressions phrases that you can use to say you want to take the the food away it could also be used like you are going to actually carry something out of something all right so like for example somebody maybe got injured all right and a player on the soccer field all right and they had to carry him maybe you have to go out of the stadium you carry somebody off of the field but maybe they carried him out of the building they had to carry him out in that case so let's see all right thank you guys seems like we have a lot of new people here I love hearing that can you pronounce the as an old one came out so word though all right again you're not gonna hear at th e that's the word they were asking about again if you want to say it completely I think you might hear it from time to time like that especially with emphasis and it depends that also may be a little different for British English I can't speak completely about that the only one thing I would say about the word though is that it's often used that uh its schwa so that often becomes an unstressed syllable and that's what we call the schwa sound that sound the alright I'm going to the park I'm going to the library I'm going to the school all right so thank you guys so much for joining me today I appreciate it I'm gonna head out if you guys have other questions please leave those in the comments please also before you go hit that like button alright let us know that you enjoy these Q&A s the more people that hit the like button the more that I know okay I need to do more of these I need to directly take some of your questions so if you enjoyed this please hit that like button and write to us on the in the comments because we love hearing from you you can also find us up here on these different social media sites share the lesson to help others to help us spread the word and help others practice and improve their English skills again that's basically that that's all I got for you so I'll end it with some shout outs Thank You Diego Rosalinda prions you're not Olivia Sabine it's chika just off thank you again I think it was ARS and Andre for those super chats we really appreciate it goes a long way lolly thank you ona sim Karolina thank you thank you thank you hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend or if you're watching this summer there time later hope you're having hope you hope you have a great day alright I will see you guys next time so long

DON'T MAKE THESE GRAMMAR MISTAKES THAT EVEN NATIVE SPEAKERS MAKE

mistakes. It's something as a an English learner, it may be on your mind. And today I want to talk to you about some grammar mistakes that even native speakers make. Now, the first thing I want you to be aware of is that it is perfectly okay to make mistakes. It's normal. It's natural. The reason why I'm doing this is just to really show you that it happens all the time. I make mistakes when I'm speaking English or writing English and you you just try to learn from them. Sometimes I think when you're learning a second language, we tend to focus too much on our mistakes and that really impedes our progress when it comes to especially when it comes to speaking. So I want to talk to you about some mistakes that I think are are common and native speakers may even make some of these mistakes from time to time. And if you are someone who loves learning more about grammar, building your vocabulary, please subscribe to the channel, turn on notifications, that way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English.

It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. And if you would like to get a copy of these notes that you see right next to me here, check out the link down below in the description. I'll go ahead and throw a link right there in the chat. join our email community and you will have access to these notes. If you are already a part of our community, I've sent them to you. So, check your inbox. So, let's look at the first mistake. And the way that I want to do this is I I'm going to give you an example and I want you to see I want to see if you can tell me what the mistake is and write it in the chat, write it in the comments. I want you to participate in the lesson and then I'll talk a little bit about well why some people tend to make this mistake. All right, the first one right here. I didn't do nothing. This is a grammar mistake. And again, let me know what you think. Can you identify the mistake? What is the problem with this sentence? And I I'm sorry. I really enjoyed uh seeing this picture of the dog. I I feel like it really captures this sentiment. I didn't do nothing. So, this sentence right here has uh well, there there's a problem.

And the problem is did not and nothing. We're talking about a double negative. Excellent. I can't get past anything past you guys. Perfect. So, I did not do nothing. This is an example of a double negative. In this case, if you're talking about using the negative did not, you would want to use anything. We use anything with negative statements. And if you want to use nothing, you're going to use it with an affirmative statement. I did nothing. But sometimes again just in conversation you may hear this especially uh if you're watching a TV show movie the they try to capture the essence of a character and they may even intentionally put a double negative in there. But if you're unfamiliar with the meaning of a double negative, this is a statement that contains two negative words.

And I thought this was a great little comic right here to follow up on that sentence. I didn't do nothing. And if this were a jury of English majors, they say, "Ooh, a confession." So basically, because we have that double negative, it's almost like you are then saying the affirmative. I didn't do nothing might imply that well, you did something in that case, which is why they're saying, "Ooh, a confession. the and the reason for this why this may come out from time to time if you're a native speaker or even an English learner is that we are exposed to double negatives and you may not even think about it or realize it to give you an example of double negatives that you may have heard or come across you you just you don't have to look any further than music. So, there are so many songs out there that would use double negatives even in the song title. So, I'm just going to talk about some of these. That first one, You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet by Bachman Turner Overdrive. I really like this song. It's a great song, You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet. And even this phrase is it's often it's basically an expression that you could use this if maybe you do something you perform well in some on some task or in some activity and somebody's giving you praise and you're like well look I can do much better. Wait until the next time. I could tell that person look you ain't seen nothing yet. Just wait until next time. I'm going to even exceed your expectations. And you could use this phrase to uh to say that. But again, it's a double negative. You ain't seen nothing yet. That song by the Rolling Stones, I can't get no satisfaction.

Double negative. This song uh right down here by Pink. Actually, I haven't heard this song, but never going to not dance again. It's a It's an interesting sentence statement. Never going to not dance again. Double negative. And then Marvin Gay, ain't no mountain high enough. This is part of the language. People use this casually, informally. It is something that you may come across. But, uh, ultimately, people internalize that information and then they're having a conversation and it just may come out and somebody may use a double negative or you hear them use a double negative. Again, all of these mistakes, it's something that I'm also guilty of as well. And if you are somebody who makes mistakes, hit that like button. Let me know. Let me know. See how many likes there are, how honest people are when it comes to making mistakes.

[snorts] So, the next grammar mistake that uh I want to share with you is right here. Here's the sentence. I want you to look at this sentence and tell me what you think the problem is. This line is for people with 10 items or less. What is the issue with this sentence? And I I think because I'm telling you, these are grammar mistakes. I think maybe they'll be a little easier to identify. And that's great. I want you to be able to see the sentence and try to identify the issue or the problem. But once again, this is a grammar mistake that I hear quite often among English learners as well as native speakers. And I make this mistake all the time. I often catch myself after I make the mistake and be like, "Okay, yeah, I used the wrong word." So, the key word in here is less. This line is for people with 10 items or less. We're talking about items. That is a count noun. And when we use count nouns, we're going to use fewer. Excellent. I see everybody. I think you guys you guys got that one. Uh, and Yeah, this is something that's very common. What happens is and I would say again uh you you just want to be conscious uh of what's going on here. So just to clarify, fewer is used with countdowns. There are fewer boys than girls in the class. Fewer people live in the city than before. We can create more energy with fewer resources. Less is used with non-count nouns. My colleague was less critical than my boss. It rains less and less each year. She seems less interested than before.

What I think happens is overwhelmingly when I hear this mistake being made and when I make the mistake, people use less when they should use fewer. It's not really the other way around. And that people end up using fewer when they should use less. This is what tends to happen. Instead of using fewer, people end up saying less. And what I want to show you with these images right here, you can see this is in places. This is in the United States right here. All of these checkout lines. Uh like this one. Express 10 items or less. Express checkout 10 items or less. Cash only please right here. 10 items or less. Express lane 10 items or less. you if if you are in the United States or you travel there and you go to the grocery store, I want you to look for this and see if you find one of these signs and they're using the correct grammar. But this is something that you will find quite quite often in stores around the US. The next mistake that I want to talk to you about is this one right here. Let me see if you can identify and tell me what the problem is. [sighs and gasps] I thought this was appropriate because in the US it is an election year and that's where uh this sentence irregardless of what the polls say we're going to win bigly. What do you think is the problem with this sentence and to give you a little bit of a hint there may be more than one problem. Irregardless of what the polls say we're going to win bigly.

Once again, this is a mistake that's quite common. I I I'm guilty of this as well. And I feel like everybody can kind of relate to this mistake. And I see some people are saying, "Yes, okay. Regardless, bigly." There's one other issue with this sentence right here. And well, it's it's gonna as well. So these are I said they're not real words kind of and let me try to put a finer point on that when I say kind of because it's one of those things in English there there's not much of a standard. the language is constantly evolving and there we're adding new words each and every day and then as those words become used more often they tend to become accepted among different English varieties and at that point you you kind of have to ask yourself well if so many people are making this mistake is it really a mistake should this become uh an accepted part of either spoken or written English and this is kind of a debate that's constantly going on. So the three words in there irregardless, gonna and bigly are the ones that I wanted to talk to you about. So let's start with uh irregardless. It means the same thing as regardless. The the meaning of this word despite not being affected by something. Ireardless, regardless, they mean the same thing. Now technically speaking, we just talked about double negatives. You see when when when saying irregardless it has that prefix and suffix. The prefix that I also can mean like a negative irregular. And when we add less it means without uh tasteless. So the word in and of itself is a little bit of a double negative but it means the same thing as regardless. And here are just some examples, some headlines talking about this debate between irregardless and regardless. So regardless of what you think, irregardless is a word. Marian Webster just recognized irregardless as a real word. Is irregardless a real word? We asked our journalist as battle rages on.

I will confess and I don't know where it it came from. I end up using irregardless from time to time. I'll be talking with my wife and I'll say, "Well, irregardless." And then make my statement. And she always corrects me. She's like, "Why are you saying irregardless? Just say regardless." So once again, just want to point out it's perfectly fine to make mistakes. I make them quite often. I think when it comes to teaching a foreign language, it's really a humbling experience because you start to recognize just how often you might make mistakes, but you're I'm constantly learning new things. Gonna, it's the reduction of going to. It's used often in spoken English. I use it all the time. I've done several lessons talking about using gonna. I think it's natural. It's normal. The issue that uh I would point out and the reason I highlighted it is because even though we use it in spoken English, I would recommend I would avoid it when writing. But this is something that I think people, especially learners, you end up seeing because when writing text messages, you may see somebody write gun na or song lyrics and they use gonna. And then the next thing you know, I'm giving a class to I'm giving an exam to my 11th grade students and I see Gunonna in an essay and I'm like, "Oh, no. That that's just not right." So even in this just to give you an example this is from Cambridge uh going to spelled the way it's often spoken going to what are you going to do about it? So even though you're I would definitely encourage you to use this when you're speaking. It's natural. It's normal.

Just be careful when you're writing. It's I would say at this point it's not accepted. All right. So, the last one, bigly. [laughter] I told you it's an election year. We're going to win bigly. So, this word is and there are many words like this that are kind of just made up and then people start using it and it's like, well, it's a question of, well, should should this be a word now? So, bigly is something that I think was popularized by Trump back in 2016. He throws out these weird words all the time. And what I really like about this is that people will use bigly just to be funny or sarcastic.

And even when I look this up, I found this entry saying bigly. It is um it's very informal. And even the dictionary listed as being humorous, using it as that adverb like to a great extent. And the example sentence they gave, we are going to reduce taxes bigly. So, you could use this or you may hear somebody use this if they're trying to be funny. As somebody who's learning the language, again, I would recommend that you avoid words like this because if you're talking to someone, they may think that you're just making a mistake. So, it really depends on the context. If you're if you know the other person, they they they can tell you're trying to make a joke and then you could talk about something being bigly. But there are, like I said, there are many words out there that are kind of on the fence as to like, well, is this accepted? Is it not accepted? Uh, but something to keep in mind and even listen for. I told you it's an election year. See if you you hear bigly being thrown out from time to time. Mistake number four. All right, let's see if you can identify what's wrong with this. Simple, straightforward. I ate more. What is the problem with this sentence? And I'll add to this and give a little more context. But probably looking at this, you are thinking like, look, this sentence is a little strange. It's a little awkward. And that is because it's really kind of incomplete. And what I would say is that you need to add I ate more than and make it a comparison, a comparative sentence. So for example, I ate more than my cousin. I ate more than I did yesterday. And what really I'm talking about are these incomplete comparisons. And people are using these comparative adjectives without following it with than as well as something to compare it to. Now, the reason why I think you may hear statements like this and I would say, well, it's not necessarily incorrect like the one right here. Our washing machine is better, faster, and more reliable. So, there is no then. This is not a comparative sentence. It's an incomplete comparative. But when in in this context of advertising or marketing, it's basically implied that the listener knows what it is that we're comparing. So if I'm saying this like I'm advertising our washing machine is better, faster, and more reliable, you probably know that I'm comparing this to other washing machines out there. So the incomplete comparisons is something that you will come across in advertising and marketing because it's it's kind of implied. But again, people make mistakes. I do this where I kind of start talking and I don't finish my thought or I don't really provide a full context and people are like, "Wait a second. What what are you talking about? What's what's going on?" So something something to keep in mind.

The next mistake that I want to uh go over with you, [sighs] I want to go over with you is right here. Me and my neighbor had a property dispute several years ago. What is the problem with this sentence? Me and my neighbor had a property dispute several years ago. Again, the fact that you can see it, I think it probably makes it a little easier to identify, you know, that there's a mistake with this sentence. And I do hear this mistake in English learners, native speakers from from time to time will also make this mistake. And the issue is yes, with that subject pronoun or the lack of a correct subject pronoun. So instead of me and my neighbor, my neighbor and I, I think you guys rock that, identified it. So we're talking about subject and object pronouns. And really the mistake that I think people end up making is when they're talking like in the first person and there they should they use me instead of using I because we often may be talking about ourselves. So use I when the pronoun is the subject. My girlfriend and I are getting married. last in the list. I want to give you my personal opinion here as well. I think when we're talking about the subject, I I definitely think it's preferred to put I at the end. If you do not do that, it's not incorrect. Grammatically speaking, you could put I at the beginning of the list, but once again, I would say it's preferred. In this case, it's more common. That is what people do most of the time. So again, that's what I would say to you that it may sound a little awkward if you don't. So yeah, just keep that in mind. Put I at the end when making a list. Me is the same way, but I think you're I think you can get away with it. I think it's more common that people might put me at the beginning of a list when it's the object as opposed to I. And I I do this as well, but just food for thought, it's preferred to put I and me last in the list. To give you some examples of mistakes, I I pulled up Twitter. Again, Twitter is not the best place to probably learn grammar or I should say X. It is X now. And these are different mistakes that you could easily find. I just put in um me and you come up uh as the subject and you come up with all these examples. Me and my friend are going to go out and play pool. So excited. Me and my wife trying to decide what we should do for dinner. Me and my friend are excited to watch the majors tonight. So in in each of these sentences, it should be I and we should use that subject pronoun. But like I said, this that is a mistake that I hear learners often make and even native speakers from time to time. me and something and they should be using the subject pronoun I. Mistake number six is right here. This curry is more spicy than before. What is the problem with this sentence right here? What do you think? Let me know in the chat, in the comments. I want you to participate in the lesson. This curry is more spicy than before. So, we talked about incomplete comparatives and just looking at this, you probably can see that, oh, this is a comparative sentence. But there is a problem with that comparative. This curry is not more spicy. It should be spicier. So that is the spicy spicier is the correct comparative. This curry is spicier than before. However, I think it's a common mistake. People would say more spicy instead of using the correct comparative spicier. So again, I'm going to go through this quickly. There's a lot that we could talk about when it comes to comparatives, but we usually add eer to shorter words, one or two syllables, and add eer to words that end in y. Spicy.

It ends in y. It's a two-ellable word. Spicier, loud, louder. We use more with longer words. I know that's vague, but really uh words with two or more syllables, but more specifically probably three or more. more beautiful, more crowded. Of course, there are exceptions when it comes to comparatives. I put a couple down there. Fun, you would use more. More fun, likely, more likely. And then there are also irregular comparatives. There there's a lot that we could talk about, but let's let's focus on that spicy and more. And why why do people, including myself, why do we make this mistake? So it it really has to do with more. Now think about the this word more as a a a determiner. It means a greater or additional amount or degree of. And the example sentence up there, she she poured herself more coffee. All right, that is how we use more. Also used as a determiner. These are some other headlines. You should eat more spicy food. More loud booms may be heard across San Diego. So in these examples right here, we're using more followed by that noun, more spicy, but more means a greater or additional amount. More loud booms. Again, it means a greater or additional amount. And I think this this is just my theory of what's going on. Our brains, whether we're talking about math or language, our brains are trained to recognize patterns. So, in this case, you you read things, your your brain picks up on these patterns, you see sentences like this. Oh, you should eat more spicy food. More loud booms can be maybe heard across uh San Diego. And you're using more as a determiner. And then it kind of just it it ends up moving into those comparative sentences and somebody may make the speak uh the mistake when speaking and say more spicy because if we add to this let me get rid of those um article headlines more as an adverb again we're talking about it says if you can see it I know it's small forming the comparative of adjectives and adverbs especially those of more than one syllable. And the example sentence for them, enthusiasm is more important than talent. Um, so once again, I think that you end up coming across more being used with these words. Your brain picks up on those patterns and then you say a comparative sentence like this one right here and it just comes out. This curry is more spicy than before. Now, it's one of those mistakes that I don't think is, especially in spoken English, that somebody's going to be like, "Oh, wow. That was uh that was really bad." It is something that happens. I hear native speakers make this mistake uh from time to time. And again, just to just to let you know, I am not perfect. I make this mistake. And it's same same with less and fewer. It's one of those mistakes that after I say it, a lot of times I catch it and think to myself, okay, I just, yeah, I made a mistake and I use the wrong comparative, but just something to keep in mind. So, the next mistake, mistake number seven, this is more for writing. And here is the sentence that I want you to to look at. There are a lot of fun things you can do at the park, i.e. ride bikes, have a picnic, and climb trees. What is the problem with this sentence? And I really like again, this sentence is written. The issue is that this is a a writing mistake. This is not really a part of spoken English or it's not like a a mistake that ends up being made in spoken English. Maybe this is too much of a hint that I'm giving you as far as like what what you should focus on and why this is a problem. So I say that uh this is not a mistake that ends up being made in spoken English and it's more written English because we're we're talking about that abbreviation the IE. And when you're speaking you wouldn't you wouldn't say like i.e. e uh when when you're having a conversation conversation and the the mistake is that it's the wrong one. In this example, I should be using the abbreviation eg. And even in spoken English, I'm not going to say eg. Instead, I would just say for example, so eg versus iie. These are Latin abbreviations. Eg is used when you want to list examples and be more specific. It really means the same thing as for example. And if I'm having a conversation, that is the phrase that I would say. I would say, for example, ride bikes, have a picnic, climb trees.

So, the sentence really should be like, there are a lot of fun things you can do at the park. Eg., for example, ride bikes, have a picnic, and climb trees. One thing about using eg, you're going to use this when making a list, but it's really going to come at the end of a sentence, and that is when you're going to list things out. I.e., on the other hand is used to clarify a statement and if you want to think about the meaning it really means the same as like in other words. So here is an example with iie. There are a lot of fun things you can do at the park i.e. have a picnic to have a relaxing time. So basically in other there are a lot of fun things in other words have a picnic to have a relaxing time. It's like I can just replace those two. I'm not making a list and I'm going to use this more. It's going to come in the middle of a sentence. So once again, this is more about writing than anything else. It's not something you're you're not going to have a conversation and say eg or i.e. this is more about writing. So that is th those are the seven mistakes that I wanted to go over with you. And again, just point out that it's common to make mistakes. You should not get hung up on your mistakes. I make mistakes all the time. And I thought it would be maybe helpful to talk about some of the mistakes that I make as well as some other native speakers uh as well. And again, just just keep that in mind. And maybe if you um feel like you're making these same mistakes, it's always good to learn that and then try to avoid them in the future. But in general, there's nothing wrong with making mistakes. If you enjoyed this lesson and you learned something new, hopefully some of this grammar was new.

I feel like some of it's a little more uh advanced. Please let me know. hit that like button. Uh you can also let write to me in the comments. I always love hearing from you guys and I I try to get back to uh you as often as I can and and answer your your comments. So, thank you for being with me today. I hope you learned something new and of course I will be back very soon in the future for another amazing lesson. Thank you. Just give some quick shoutouts. Thanks for being here, Lai Teao, Angela, uh, Patricia, Cinderella, uh, Marie. Excellent. Thank you guys for being here. Hope you have a wonderful
