hello and welcome to today's lesson i think this is going to be a very fun lesson and i also think it should be insightful if you are a beginner learner intermediate advanced my my always my goal at the end is that you learn something new so i think this lesson really applies to all levels because we're going to be talking about prepositions specifically we're going to be talking about prepositions of place and really only focusing on in on and at so that's why i said i think this is relevant no matter what level you are uh where you're at because we we learn prepositions typically early on and talk about places and where things are at and but sometimes they can still be confusing i think this is often where many people no matter what level make just small small mistakes so the way that i want to do this of course i want to to test your knowledge uh toward the end i just want to talk about how we use each preposition and then i have some questions for you so first um i do want to say hello welcome uh good to see you lali takayau um muffin yashar anisa thank you guys for joining me today i will try to get some more shout outs in as we go through this because like i said i do have uh i have quite a few questions for you let me get myself in the frame here all right so let's start with in and remember we're only focusing on prepositions of place we're specifically just looking at place so the first one um i'll go through these uh quickly rather quickly it's used to talk about like locations within a larger area like in the example sentence i talk about tenants people who live in the building that is the larger area or if i say that something is in this room all right it's uh it's like it's enclosed all right within this larger area we're going to use in if we're talking about um a car a van or a taxi all right you're also going to use in okay car van or taxi and we also would use it with workplaces okay so i gave you that example sentence she works in human resources all right so i know that that is is also i'd say again you could it is a place all right where somebody um is located as far as their work is concerned like he works in marketing she works in human resources we're going to use in all right we're also going to use in if we're talking about well water all right then i gave that example this is another phrase that people may talk and use in english if they're referring to dating and um you know whether man or woman doesn't matter if you say like well i you know i'm having trouble meeting someone you could say well there are plenty of fish in the sea all right there's many people available to date out there so you would say in the sea or in the river in the ocean we would use in with water when talking about class all right he has trouble paying attention in class i hope you guys have no trouble paying attention and following along these lessons when you are in this class right now and then finally printed materials and the way this is changing a little bit so let me explain i say printed materials like um books you see something in a book or in a newspaper or in a magazine or in an article in the example i said you're looking up words in the dictionary the thing is i i even though i say printed materials a lot of things have moved online nowadays and even if you're talking about something online it's not printed you're still going to use in if you read something in an article online so just keep that in mind even if it's an online dictionary you're still going to use in even though a lot of this has become now digital all right so i know that can be a little confusing let's now all right let's move on to uh to on okay so um again focusing on prepositions of place and then i'm gonna quiz you so we use on if we're talking about the the position on any surface like um this water bottle it's on my hand right now all right it's on like that would be the surface to talk about the floor and a building like you live on the the second floor the third floor the fourth floor and it's also used to describe um a position along a road or a river or by the sea or lake um so in the example i said like i grew up on the east coast all right that that is um where where i grew up or if you say something is um on the river or like we have um we have a little home on the lake all right it's not talking about really like on the surface of the lake but just along along the lake okay and we are also going to use on and i think many of you are um familiar with this next one talking about public transit like um you're you're on the train you're on the bus you're on the plane you'll use on with left or right um you know where is it located it's on the right my office is on the right or something is on the left and then with media and this is where in and on can be a little tricky so i told you that in you would use with like printed materials but things that could also move online like um diction online dictionary or and on you could read a book online but if you're talking about media like the news um you saw something on the news or uh the example like you live at at 44 main street all right we also use at when we're referring to like shops or public places um and again this is where i think you could also like i said when i talked about at the gym you could think of that as like again another public place but um you know at the store at the mall and then you would use it to refer to group activities how many people were at your party all right party involves a group of people or maybe you um something happened at the meeting all right a meeting would also involve a group of people and we use it at with school or university so remember in was with class in class but if you're talking about school you'd say something happened at school or i studied at a top-notch university top-notch is a phrase that just means excellent quality and this is actually not true okay that is just an example i didn't study i don't i wouldn't say it was a top-notch university uh university of colorado i think um they were uh they were a top-notch party school i would say probably um and then we have at with home or work so you're talking about like today at work something happened i gave an important presentation or something happened at home okay so i know that i've kind of went through those um i tried to go through them quickly because i want to get to the the meat of the lesson which are those questions that i have for you so i'm going to give you a question and i want you just to fill it in with in on or at all i'll give you a moment to think about it and then i'll tell you the answer and the other thing that i would say with these prepositions is this is um i know it's hard to learn all of those rules that i just said or trying to memorize them i don't think that that's necessarily the best way to to learn and think about okay which one do i need to use i think it's good to know the rules and kind of see some examples with them but i just think the more you read the more you practice you're just going to internalize it with these prepositions so that when you're writing or when you're speaking you'll be able to use the correct preposition okay so let's look at our first question and then i'll try to i'll look at some of the answers and try to give you guys um some some shout outs as we go through this um we stopped our car the traffic light now as we go through this it is i think it'll start it's going to be a little easier and then it'll get a little more challenging um as we go through so what do you guys think um we stopped our car um the traffic light i'll give you like five more seconds five well five four three two one and i'm counting quickly so yes you guys i think you rocked it the correct answer is at we stopped our car at the traffic light excellent lolly uh brayan adriana yashar takaya perfect okay so you guys i you guys got that one i think fairly easily perfect we'll see if i can i'll i'll try to to trip you up a little bit um so the next one if somebody were saying this okay think about that situation somebody's talking to you and they're saying this i couldn't hear you i was um the shower and like i mentioned like you know don't don't worry about like rules just think about you know what what even feels naturally which one do you think best completes this uh this sentence all right i couldn't hear you i was um the shower and then i'll try to tie it back to the rule that we just talked about okay excellent the correct answer i didn't do the countdown that time i apologize in um well done anisa vishwas pulkit um sanjeev krishna perfect i couldn't hear you i was in the shower so remember what i talked about in um well you could think of it one of two ways like you when i said it we use in with water um like you're in the ocean in this case the shower it is water but you could also think of it like you are kind of surrounded by this thing you are enclosed all right you're in the shower uh the next one okay and this one i will try to explain it uh a little bit for those of you maybe if you're unfamiliar with um a bumper sticker so somebody like again somebody might be pointing this out look at the funny bumper sticker um that van okay look at the funny bumper sticker um that van so bumper sticker i this is something that you would see more probably in the u.s all right i'm gonna show you a picture on the the next page um what it is it's not something i've seen that much of in other countries but people will have these bumper stickers and i almost gave the answer when i just was about to say what it is okay so the answer the correct answer is on all right excellent uh lolly esther um mohawk wendy angela great job okay so i look at that funny bumper sticker on the van all right so i told you like in you would use it with um like a car or a taxi or a van but that would refer to like you are inside um you know somebody would tell you to um get in the car or something happened when i was in the car like you're inside the vehicle in this case the bumper sticker is like a sticker you would put on the outside of your car typically it would go on the bumper of the car and again this is not something that um you would i don't know you might see it more in the u.s those of you who are in the u.s you may see this driving along the road people are making statements it could be political it could be about the environment or like this one i thought this was funny sometimes at like um like a high school if a student gets really they get good grades they become an honor student they would give the family like a bumper sticker and then maybe the mother or father would put it on their car and say like my son or daughter was an honor student and this one's kind of just joking around um like i was an honor student i don't know what happened like their life did not turn out the way they thought it would be even though they were an honor student um it's a fun one uh funny one the next question okay let's look all right what do you guys think um there are no firearms allowed um university property okay would it what would you which preposition should go there there are no firearms um no there are no firearms allowed um university property okay so let's uh oh wow okay i think i got you guys all right so the the correct answer again many of you said at okay so think of it this way in this case university is an adjective all right we're not using it as a noun like i mentioned in the example sentence uh somebody goes um they studied at a great university you study at university you study at school in this case we're talking about property so if you're talking about like something uh like a person would be on the property and if the person is carrying something then you would say yes there are no firearms allowed on university property so i would say talking about property like the like the land it would you would be on it if you were to talk about like a building in that case you would use in like you would say there are no firearms allowed in the building but if we're talking about property again you're like that would be the surface that you are on there are no fire alarms allowed on university property okay all right so hopefully again i told you i want i want everybody to just learn something new hopefully this one um that you it makes sense now okay remember university in this case is the adjective it is university property um okay some people are like sad or crying it's okay all right um we can keep going it makes like i said it i actually like it when there are a few mistakes because then you know we can explain something we can talk about it which i i hope then is you learn something new um so this one i think you guys um i think you guys can get this this is a pretty i think common just discussion so in any way you look so young um this picture all right you look so young this picture are we going to use in on or at okay so i told you i think you guys um would get this excellent just to show out some hottie uh lucy leah bob um [Music] are wait sue mart uh esther then the the correct answer is n um i forgot to mention that if you i mentioned like printed material and you think of like a book is something that's printed also pictures especially a long time ago that you people would print out the pictures so in that case you could you could relate it to that and think of in so there's you see something in the picture but nowadays people are using their phone it's digital you would still use in so that same um kind of rule applies uh whether it's like in a book or in a in a picture so yes you look so young in this picture okay so here's the next question we're gonna going through these trying to go through get through as many as i can so this now there's two um right now i'm m the mall you can find me the food court right now whoops let me get back in the frame i'm um the mall you can find me um the food court now i will say that for this one um there there are different answers that you you could give i'm gonna give you my opinion as to what i think the most common response would be think of it if somebody were to ask you where are you they there you talk to somebody on the phone they say hey hey where are you and you say right now i'm in the mall you can find me mmm the food court all right let's talking uh this uh i see natalie all right that was the answer i have uh hottie yes myrna um that is what i have so the the reason why i said that this this could be tricky for either one of those you could put in um in or at in or at could be used in either one of those blanks but what i would say is that if we're talking about the mall okay you're identifying that that place most commonly when somebody says where are you all right you're you're giving them that position that point um is the way i would think of it now that point doesn't have to be really small it could be a bigger place um so i would use at right now i'm at the mall and then if you want to be more specific you can find me in the food court because now we're talking about you're surrounded by this larger thing so this is good too like i said if somebody were to ask you just in general where are you most people whether you're talking about the movies the mall the gym most people are going to respond with at and the reason why when when people use at i think it's just assumed that the person is inside so when you're talking about at you're referring to that general location that that point okay hey i'm at the mall um so i think most often people will use at when somebody's just like hey where are you and then i followed it up to somebody trying to be more specific like yes you can find me in the food court but again in at you could use them with either one of those um blanks uh but again i just wanted to share my opinion as to what i think is probably more commonly used as to what what somebody would say if they're like hey where are you um sorry for that longer explanation um here's the next one okay every weekend i go swimming mmm the beach i really enjoy lying out the sand okay every weekend i go swimming the beach i really enjoy lying out um the sand what do you think which ones um what are we gonna put in those those blank spaces uh again if you guys got it wrong don't the ones before don't worry about it um i i like i said hopefully that my explanation makes sense as to how i came to the answer and maybe learn something new so in on or at what are we going to put um excellent uh

let's see who do we have right uh angela lolly hottie um okay all right so we're talking about every weekend i go swimming all right um the beach the

don't let swimming confuse you okay you're talking about the beach just like the mall you're talking more like a general place a general location you could think of it as more a point even though it would be like a larger point um you could also think of it somebody could think of it in regards to like maybe a group activity um a public space all right like the mall or the beach so you go swimming at the beach and you enjoy lying out on the sand so in this case the sand is the surface and you are on it you are on the sand um you wouldn't be in the sand you could be buried in the sand but if you're talking about lying out you have your um your your big uh towel that you're gonna lie out on and you're lying out on the sand and you do this at the beach

all right so again i told you i mentioned before if somebody were to ask somebody oh where are you overwhelmingly people are going to use at i'm at the beach i'm at the movie i'm at the mall i'm at the gym and then that next one is a little more specific let's follow up on this all right so every weekend i go swimming at the beach i really enjoy lying out on the sand the next one is kind of connected to the same um to this these two sentences my friend has a boat and sometimes we'll take it out um the water but mostly but i i love swimming the ocean okay so again think about the the context i don't think that the the meaning of these sentences are too difficult to understand i know the prepositions can be tricky but once again think about um which which ones would you use in on or at to fill in those two blanks i told you this is a continuation of the last question we're still talking about this person is at the beach um [Music] okay so what do you what do you guys think i'll give you five more seconds five four three two one all right so the correct answer [Music] um on and in i saw a couple different on and ins to cayo mary salvade um adriana [Music] um sorry i miss a few more uh brian all right my friend has a boat and sometimes we take it out on the water again picture the boat in your mind all right um it's like the water then is the surface the boat is going to be on it all right you're out on the water but mostly i love swimming in the ocean i mentioned that you use in when talking about just water we had that question before about being in the shower or you could say that you're swimming in the pool in this case you're in the ocean and you're actually in the water swimming okay so on and in the next one um [Music] here we go and bonus points if you can tell me what the this these two sentences reference all right i'm referencing something um a movie okay what movie is it referencing

i work um 1988 nakatomi plaza my office is um the 30th floor what are you going to use in on at and bonus points i told you what what movie what movie am uh am i referencing with this uh with this question so i'll give you five seconds five four three two one okay so you'd say i work at oh i don't wanna i'm giving you the answer at 1988 nakatomi plaza my office is on the 30th floor i think some of you um probably remember those two rules i said like uh an address a specific address you're going to use at all right 1988 nakatomi plaza would be the address if we're talking about floors in a building on the first floor on the second floor on the third floor all right this is not really the the movie that i was referencing was the movie die hard it's the nakatomi plaza is the famous building that is not the address the movie came out in 1988 and part of the movie does take place the christmas party is up on the 30th floor um so [Music] yes that i'm kind of dating myself uh with that old old movie reference from 1988 great movie though uh by the way i was 10 and i'll let you guys do the math i was 10 when this movie came out all right um yeah that that's a good point uh gustav talking about difference in a floor on a floor british american uh english yes this is definitely i'm from the united states for any of you who may not be familiar uh with this channel in case you're new yes i am from the us u.s you would say that on when talking about those floors on the 30th floor um

the next one okay so again i have two blanks for you i first heard about this story um the radio and then i read about it um the newspaper in on at we're talking about prepositions of place okay so which prepositions would you use to complete uh these two sentences i first heard about it i first heard about this story um the radio and then i read about it um the newspaper five seconds five more seconds five four three two one okay all right uh excellent so the correct answer yes is going to be on and then in um natalie lolly yashar um let's see who else had on in marsha i'm trying to get as many shout outs as i can okay so i heard about the story on the radio um remember i said you'll use on when talking about like the media in general you see something on tv you're watching uh these videos on youtube you hear something on the radio and then you read about it in like um in the newspaper we talked about those printed materials in the newspaper um in the magazine in the book all right so again on and then in little girls uh getting a little upset uh maybe you can hear her in the background i'm gonna have to go see see what's going on so i hope again that that you guys learn something new um from this this preposition quiz i did want to mention give myself a little shout out if you enjoy the lessons if you like what we do um uh if you want to sponsor support the channel uh you can check out youtube membership patrons become a patron there are links in the description i have some uh members and patrons with me in this lesson like uh gustav and vicky and lolly and takayo um always appreciate having uh always love having the the members and uh uh sponsors uh up up here with me during these lessons and i will um i will put the notes um from this lesson up uh for for you members and patrons um in just a little bit probably did i lose you guys okay so i don't know i think it kind of disconnected and reconnected um i was just saying in case uh you guys didn't get that but yeah just practicing reading these sentences you see how they use that's the best thing that i think you can do for for your own learning so that the next time you are writing or you're having a conversation you will be able to use the correct preposition so thank you guys again for joining me today give a few more shout outs uh thank you to kyle lolly eloisa um willian i like the like that little emoji right there uh yashar lucy bob adriana joel ingrid um trying to throw in so many more so hottie all right um sumat hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend um vicky gustav mary realess this is the time when i can throw in as many uh as possible at the very end of the lesson hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will see you in the near future for another another interesting inspiring and educational

PREPOSITIONS QUIZ | Advanced English Grammar

what's up everyone my name is wes this is interactive english and if this is your first time here we are all about just helping you practice and improve your english skills and the way we are going to practice your english skills today is by learning some prepositions i am going to give you a preposition quiz to help you practice your skills and and this is very important because i think learners often make mistakes with prepositions even though you know most of these words those tiny little function words and they they usually become before they usually come before a noun but not always but i think the reason why people make mistakes is because we we often use prepositions well we use them to show the relationship between words mostly the relationship between a noun or pronoun with the other words in a sentence and just to show you how important they are of all of the of the top 25 most commonly used words in english nine of them are prepositions so these are words that that you really need to know and today i'm going to quiz you on some some common prepositions like prepositions of time and place which i think might be a little bit easier but i'm also going to quiz you on prepositions that commonly follow certain adjectives and certain verbs and i think those are the more challenging ones because when people make those mistakes i i understand what the person wants to say but i i would catch on and notice okay they use the incorrect preposition so that is that is why it's important to practice these and i think a great way to do that is just to read the more you read the more you see how these prepositions are being used with certain words and then practicing like we're doing today and what i would say is before before we take uh the quiz if you don't know the answer and this is one of the only times that i would tell learners this is i just do what feels right and again it's not scientific but if you're not sure of which preposition to use i would encourage you to do what feels right and the reason i would tell you this is because you have probably seen this before maybe you're worried about the a preposition that follows an adjective you may have read that before but you don't remember it right off like from memory but your brain still has that stored so that's why i said maybe try and just do what feels right and answer as many of these questions as you can so i want to give a quick shout out to everybody who's with me today hello and welcome uh jatoth kalai ma malak ahmed ira daughter and son how are you guys uh great to have you here sarah assam rob ayesha welcome i will try and give more shout outs as you go through and as you answer these questions all right and even even if you're watching this later i want you to answer the questions in the comments use it like it's a piece of paper because that's what this lesson is all about is to make it more interactive all right so are you guys ready are you ready to take the quiz let's take the quiz now here is your first question all right it's just a gap fill i've given you some some choices here but i would tell you and this is what i would actually tell you guys i really want you to concentrate um these prepositions all right i want you to concentrate um these prepositions in this case we're talking about a preposition that's followed by uh the the verb to concentrate to concentrate um all right which one would you use a b c or d what do you guys think all right already getting some great answers yes uh perfect uh lolly henry lynn um asgar i think you noticed go see a perfect thank you guys for answering you would see concentrate on something so again here i'll give you an example so if you concentrate on something i really want you to concentrate on these prepositions your talk is you're talking about focusing on something this is where you're paying attention this is another example sentence where we're using it she concentrated really hard on the lecture so that she could prepare for the exam in this case we're still using the same preposition but we can put we can put an adverb in there we can put an adjecti we can put an adverb and an adjective between the verb and the preposition so it's something to keep in mind you can concentrate really hard on something all right excellent perfect uh all right that one all right you guys did really well on that one so let's just go to the next one so my next question is this or again just fill it in i'm giving you some answers as we go through these i'm not going to give you the choices and and you're just gonna have to think of the preposition on your own but he's so um of his roommate what do you think what is the correct preposition a about b of c on d over which which preposition best completes that sentence all right he's so jealous um his roommate what do you what do you guys think abc or d and i don't know why he's jealous of the fact that his roommate got an interview and he didn't so that might be a reason why he is jealous of his roommate okay so keep that in mind jealous of someone if you guys are just joining us we are doing a preposition quiz and i want you guys to answer these questions write your answers in the chat or in the comments if you're writing this later are you ready for the next question all right here we go this one i'm not giving you any choices i'm not giving you any choices i think you guys should be able to try and piece this together we need to wake up early um the morning um 5 am sunday which prepositions would best complete that sentence right there what do you what do you guys think all right uh i'm so jealous of your english skill was thank you henry i appreciate that all right what do you guys think which three prepositions would best complete that sentence right there all right um i'm looking for three three different prepositions all right so all right excellent um getting some good answers yes uh we have yes gabby gabrielle uh henry pratham i'm looking for three three different prepositions all right irene excellent we need to wake up early in the morning at 5 00 a.m on sunday so those are the three different prepositions we're looking for right here i wrote the sentence we need to wake up early in the morning at 5 00 a.m on sunday we're talking about prepositions of time and those are the most those are the most common prepositions of time right there in on and out now there's many different um different parts of the time that we use them with but i'm just boiling it down to those three for this specific example so we use in with with parts of the day in the morning in the afternoon in the evening we use at when we're talking about a specific time like at 5 a.m at noon at midnight and on of course we're going to use on with the days of the week on sunday on friday okay so that is a good little review of prepositions of time maybe i'll have another one for you so if you guys if you guys enjoy all right this quiz if you guys enjoy what we do here and you kind of and you want to support what we do then i would ask you again check out our patreon page it's another great way to connect with us i'll put a link right here if you haven't checked it out already we have some cool little rewards and again it's just another way to support what we do here at interactive english so we can keep bringing you guys the these free english lessons that you can participate in to practice and improve your skills check that out all right are you ready for your next question which is this right here i've given you some some more options for this one all right over the summer we have become accustomed um the hot weather all right so right now it's the summer and it's not the start of the summer it's kind of maybe the middle of the summer you could say over the summer you know we have become accustomed um the hot weather which preposition is going to follow that which accustomed um all right is it a b in c by or d with all right and the this these are examples again where where learners might make a just a small mistake all right because they maybe they haven't read it enough they haven't heard it enough but what we're talking about yes all right perfect uh i would give some shout outs too yes fernando isatau um brihanian uh lynn and tara uh excellent maggie paul dragon um perfect you become accustomed to something the answer is a accustomed to so when you are accustomed to something what it means is that you are used to something that you have experienced something or you have endured something in this case you have endured the hot weather that it becomes normal and you could say oh i am accustomed to the hot weather over the summer we have become accustomed to the hot weather accustomed to something and another example sentence which i i think is also relevant um many of you may have this experience and you could say well you know it may be challenging to get accustomed to living in another country all right so keep that in mind we can also follow it with the gerund all right you're accustomed to doing something you become accustomed to it uh i hope many of you guys are accustomed to watching our video lessons it's normal you guys do it all the time at least that's what i hope all right the next question that i have for you all right uh so far so not all of them correct excellent great job uh is this one and i'm sorry i just i i have to toot my own horn and that's actually uh to to someone's own horn that's uh that's an old-fashioned expression i don't know why i just use it but it basically means to kind of brag about something to promote yourself to toot your own horn and i could say i'm addicted um interactive english i didn't give you any uh prepositions there i want you to think um which preposition would follow that which preposition would follow that adjective addicted um something what do you think all right so i could say yes i think wow uh the the responses are going so fast manolo lali um hong tran yes uh suhana uh rohan you are addicted to something you could say i'm addicted to interactive english if you guys like watching our videos our lessons and you find them very useful you could say oh i'm addicted to interactive english you are addicted to something or uh like another example sentence many you know a lot of kids out there nowadays you could say ah they're addicted to playing video games you are addicted again this is another instance where i think it would be followed by the gerund all right you are addicted to doing something i'm addicted to playing video games i'm addicted to watching tv i'm addicted to creating new lessons for you guys something we always do every week all right we are addicted to this uh so again that was two in a row two questions in a row where two was the answer two is a very very common preposition all right your next question are you ready so if you're just joining us again just jump in there start answering these questions

uh and in practicing your english skills sometimes we don't agree um anything what do you think and i thought that was good picture to represent it two people they're not looking at each other they they just don't agree um anything which preposition would best complete that sentence with near at on what do you guys think let me know write your answer in the chat write your answer in the comments okay sometimes we don't agree um anything now this one i think uh could be a little more confusing a little trickier because one thing i i want to say is that sometimes with some of these adjectives and some of these verbs you can use more than one preposition but that does not always mean that it is correct in that instance so this one i think is true i'm going to give some shout outs to yes uh veronica perfect isatau nisha um reena the correct answer is d on to agree on something i saw that many of you put with when you're talking about with and using it that with that preposition mostly it would be then you're talking about a person to agree with someone all right now you can use with in in some instances when talking about something to agree with something um maybe like to agree with a decision but oftentimes when you're using with you're talking about a person like i don't agree with you i don't agree with them all right but in this context all right you're saying like we don't agree on anything we don't agree on something so sometimes we don't agree on anything or in this example i could say it took quite a while for us to agree on the terms of the new contract to agree on all right excellent that one was a little trickier all right good good i i i like it when again not that they're not too easy that everybody is just getting the answer um so that's always good for me for me to see let's look at the next one and maybe i think i could have given you this one and just taken out the prepositions many restaurants prohibit people um smoking in restaurants i almost just told you the preposition right there uh because i i i want to make sure i'm i'm blanking them out all right many restaurants prohibit people um smoking in restaurants which preposition follows that verb to prohibit all right would we use with b along c two or d from all right if you don't know it's okay just again take a guess it doesn't matter if you get it wrong that that's not important uh it's okay to make mistakes we encourage that i just want you guys to participate so yes i think most of you uh you've got this one um ativistic perfect uh i'm trying to give some serious curious soul yes try to just give some say some names that i haven't i'm gonna try and save as many names as i can delight queen uh perfect uh so you're talking about the answer is d from to prohibit from and usually in this case when we're talking about this you would prohibit someone from doing something in this case again that's something i would add doing something because it's followed by that gerund prohibit someone from smoking prohibit someone from entering prohibit someone from violating the law all right so you're going to follow it with that gerund that ing so you prohibit someone from doing something uh i gave you another example the the lack of research prohibits us from determining the cause of the disease that is another uh way that this uh verb and preposition could be used to prohibit someone from doing something excellent all right here we go are you ready the next question that i have for you is this he's standing um the window wondering where she is um okay this one uh i i didn't give you any choices there there might be more than one way to answer this question but what i would tell you is i want you to try and answer it with just one preposition one preposition that you could put in both of those blank spaces all right what one preposition could we use to complete this sentence all right he's standing in the window wondering where she is um what do you think so that that's uh you know that that's the hint that i would give you is try to use a preposition try to use one um preposition that i think would complete that would fill that context all right i see so many of you already giving me kind of two prepositions um some of them again i i think you can but giving using this context i would say yes um excellent um who else do we have esther delight quina maggie isatau [Music] yes or no no actually wait that meant to say something else because the correct answer is at all right if we're going to just use one preposition i'd say at it's talking about being at a particular point a preposition a place again we use those common ones in on at for prepositions of time as well as prepositions of place and when we're talking about at we're talking about a particular point so i say he's standing at the window wondering where she is at all right where's she at at school at home at work at the door at the top at the bottom it is talking about a particular place all right um so again like just to show you that the context you know where is he he's at the window again you could say he's near the window he's by the window those also would fit that's um those are also prepositions you could use but if we're trying to find just one preposition she's standing at the window wondering where she's at and that now that i think about it the picture looks a little creepy um about this just this guy standing at that window wondering oh where is she at the reason i use this picture is because it was very easy for me it had a dark image so i could really write the question and it stands out but now that i think about it that picture looks a little creepy uh that he's standing at the one window wondering where she's at okay all right let's just go on to the the next uh the next question all right it's a little bit of home all right because uh we we used to live in the bay area and we would look at the golden gate bridge all the time and just as a sentence in case you're having trouble seeing it um because i tried to find the right font colors to use we had to drive um the bridge to get um the city in this case there are two blanks and i want you to you can use different prepositions you're not just going to use one preposition to complete this sentence we had to drive um the bridge uh to get the city what preposition would we use all right in this context to complete this sentence you're gonna use two all right we had to drive um the bridge to get um the city what do you guys think all right um i i haven't seen the answer yet which is why i haven't said anything some of you guys writing one kind of um close uh callipica all right i'd say [Music] layla all right um the one what what i was looking for right here again you can drive on a bridge i think when you're talking about crossing a bridge you'd say we need to drive over the bridge to get into the city or you could say in the city but i think in this context into for a more broader area would be more relevant so i'd say right down here we had to drive over the bridge to get into the city and when you're talking about over in this case you're talking about movement across a surface over the road over the bridge i think often we use it when you're talking about bridges if you're giving somebody directions you would say hey you got to go over the bridge you got to drive over the bridge you could say on because we could use that preposition for movement as well but i think when specifically you're talking about bridges and crossing bridges you would tell someone to go over the bridge and into again you're talking about movement of something you could so somebody walked into the room somebody dove into the pool they drop they had to get into the city all right so we had to drive over the bridge to get into the city maybe that one was a little more challenging but again this is the best way to practice and learn them so now that you know talking about bridges you're going to say oh you guys you need to go over the bridge cross if you want to cross the bridge you got to go over the bridge and then you'll get to your destination let's look at uh again so you could say yes you have to drive across the bridge that's also fine um in that context has the same meaning i would say um we had to drive across the bridge to get into the city that's perfectly fine as well so like i said some of the times you can use more than one preposition and it has the same meaning which is another reason why you know they can be a bit confusing sometimes all right the next one the grand canyon is renowned it's natural beauty again we have this adjective renowned um if you know maybe you know what it means maybe you don't know what it means but there is a preposition that often follows this adjective all right the the grand canyon is renowned um it's natural beauty which preposition do you think best completes that sentence and and this is a more difficult because i i've taken away some of their your options all right right as i say it's more difficult all of you just you give me the correct answer so maybe it's maybe it is not that much more difficult uh yes the correct answer is for all right so if something is renowned it means that is famous it is popular and it would be renowned for something so the grand canyon is renowned for its natural beauty or maybe a person like in this other sentence could be renowned for an achievement the professor is renowned for his work in linguistics all right you are renowned for something let's keep going the next one all right everyone comes together um thanksgiving which is um the fourth thursday november now this is a a bit of a cultural statement because there are different countries that celebrate thanksgiving for example um canada canada celebrates thanksgiving but they don't celebrate it at the same time as the at the same time as the united states so this sentence is for the united states because i am from the u.s so this sentence applies to the united states and there are three prepositions i want you to write in there everyone comes together um thanksgiving which is um the fourth thursday mmm november all right which prepositions are you going to use to best complete that that sentence what do you guys think all right write write your answers in the chat write your answers in the comments i want you guys to practice practice practice practice that is what this is all about all right so [Music] again there could be more than one answer um you could come together for thanksgiving yes that is true uh so and tada i will accept that answer um let's see what else do we have uh four okay yeah many of you put four wow uh for thanksgiving you can come together for a holiday uh paul dragon that's the answer yes i was looking for um what what i was looking for was this and again there are other ways to say it just talking about those prepositions of time in on at everyone comes together at thanksgiving which is on the fourth thursday in november but again many of you put four for some holiday that is also correct as well you could say everybody comes together for thanksgiving which is on the fourth thursday in november so if you had four in the chat or write it in the comments if you're watching it later and to be suggestive yes if you guys like learning about these prepositions and practicing your skills please yes hit that like button hit it right now all right hit that like button if you enjoy learning prepositions and you find value in these lessons these practice lessons so excellent um yes rohan jaima uh ira english vibes um excellent wongtron irene let's give some more shout outs fairy xd um gabby perfect so you i hope you won't object to hitting the like button so if you object to something it means you don't want to do it all right that you're saying uh i object to this thing all right you're not going to do it and i said i hope you won't object to doing it so which means i hope you will hit that like button so again i hope you won't object to hitting that like button you object to something another example sentence right here her parents objected to her new boyfriend i don't know why i just that's just an emoji that i found it looks like a perfectly nice guy to me i don't know why her parents would object to her new boyfriend but i said yes we used it in the past as well her parents objected to her new boyfriend so when we're using that verb that the verb to object you object to something okay so keep that in mind and again if you enjoy learning these prepositions if you find them useful i hope that you guys go ahead and hit that like button also if you guys want to connect with us more um you can subscribe to our email list i'll throw a link right up there we'll send you some lesson updates we send you some useful resources free resources as well um and just more information about us and it's just another way to connect so thank you guys for for joining me today if you enjoyed the lesson like even better than that share the lesson with your friends your family members anybody that you know who's trying to improve their english skills share the lesson we really appreciate it helps us spread the word and just build our classroom uh you as always you can write to us in the comments we love hearing from you and join our social media classes we're also active on facebook instagram and twitter so thank you guys uh so much for being here um kayling uh algeria rosalinda hello um gaucia sanas krista asgar lali um syed i can't uh rohit yes fred i tried to get as many names as possible today uh i i i tried to get as many as i can if i didn't say your name i'm sorry i will try and get it next time um because that that's what this is all about thank you guys so much for watching and i will see you later so long

PREPOSITIONS THAT FOLLOW VERBS | Advanced Grammar

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson which is all about prepositions I have well it's an interactive quiz lesson for you about prepositions and I'm calling it the preposition challenge so what I want to do is I want to practice using prepositions today because those those are those tiny little function words that may follow adjectives or nouns or adverbs and and even verbs and that's what I want to talk to you about today specifically we are going to focus on the following we're going to focus on verbs and the prepositions that often follow verbs and I think that this is is great practice this is a great way to practice and understand okay which prepositions often follow which verbs I always say that one of the best ways to learn prepositions is is to read is to read as well as practice which is what we're going to do today so thank you guys so much for joining me today Michele a ten just one minute Andre Lally I'll Elizabeth Angela welcome thank you I will try and get some more shout outs as as we continue going through the lesson because like I said this is an interactive lesson I'm gonna give you a bunch of questions I want you to write your answers in the chat or if you're watching this later in the comments I want you to interact with this lesson that's what it's all about and for some of you this may be a little bit of review which it's always good it's always great to review so let's look at what I mean a little some examples about verbs and the prepositions that follow so let's let's look at these three right here the verb is highlighted in blue and the preposition is highlighted in red so you have to wait for to recover from and to grow up these are all verbs and the prepositions that follow now the one thing I want to point out is that the verb grow up that is a phrasal verb I think when many learners think of verbs and prepositions they think of phrasal verbs because that is a verb and a preposition now one thing that I want to point out is the difference between wait for and grow up because to wait for that is not a preposition now the difference between wait for and the prep is and the phrasal verb grow up is that when we're talking about a phrasal verb the meaning is different from that of the meaning of the verb let me explain so to wait for do to wait is just like you are you're spending time you are you are anticipating that something will happen wait for it has the same meaning it's just the preposition that often follows that verb to grow I think of like plants or trees or flowers or people they grow they get bigger they become taller if you're talking about the phrasal verb grow up the meaning changes because to grow up means typically you're talking about where somebody lived when they were a child and where they lived and you would ask like oh where did you grow up where did you spend your childhood I say well for example I grew up well I grew up in Atlanta Georgia that is where I spent most of my childhood so that is the difference between a phrasal verb and just a regular verb that follows the preposition in this quiz I think there are one or two phrasal verbs and I will point them out all right so are you guys ready are you ready to begin let's let's start with this the first question that I have for you I will read you the question and I will read you the options the first part is multiple choice so you can choose either a B C or D and I want you to write your answer in the chat or in the comments and actually practice your English skills so the question is I've been longing a beach vacation how would you complete that sentence I've been longing mmm Beach vacation is it a bi longing by b4 longing for sea with longing width or de n longing in which you're going to use that verb + preposition combination which one do you think I've been longing by I've been longing for I've been longing with or I've been longing in excellent great job yes Andre just one minute Adan Ximena go SIA farhat perfect the correct answer is be longing for I've been longing for a beach vacation and too long for something it means well too long is like you desire it you want something and you would follow it with that preposition like ah you know right now I could say well I I am longing for a pepperoni pizza I really I would like to eat some pizza I haven't had it in a while and I could say I'm longing for this thing the next question is this excellent no one could believe he escaped mmm prison no one could believe he escaped mmm prison so again the verb is escape which preposition is going to follow that verb escape is it a to be at see-through or D from escape to prison escaped at prison escaped through prison and escaped from prison what do you think write your answer in that chat all right so excellent seeing some good answers yes perfect Lally Julianne Michelle sandy Vijay yes the correct answer is d to escape from someplace now you could say for example you could escape to someplace in that case I think of you know usually speaking it's very quick you kind of just say it if you make a mistake I think most people still understand you but when you're writing since that's more reflective and some people may stop and they're trying to think well which one really goes there my advice it may sound a little simple but what feels right what feels right to you what sounds right and I think many of you got this yes perfect lolly Kanaan miguel sylvia trying to get some different names in there meet meek yes the correct answer is C I've always dreamt of climbing Mount Kilimanjaro now I said this is tricky because many times you might follow the verb dream with about there is a difference when you say you dream about something and you dream of something in this case I'd say like for me because this is true I've always dreamt of climbing Mount Kilimanjaro what that means is that I have like these thoughts these hopes a desire to do this in the future it's something that I wish will happen in the future like I've dreamt of buying a big house on the ocean it's something you think of your thought if you dream about something that is when you actually are describing your dream so if I could say well last night I had last night I dreamt about this live stream not working and having more technical problems which I think have been resolved thankfully so if I in that case I would say well I dreamt about having problems with the live stream and that is something that I was actually dreaming of so keep that in mind to dream of something or dream about something the next question that I have for you the doctor referred me hmm a specialist the doctor referred me hmm a specialist would you say the doctor referred me to a specialist the doctor referred me with the specialist the doctor referred me at a specialist or the doctor referred me on a specialist which preposition best completes that sentence and would follow the verb refer I almost say or almost said the answer I got it I got to try and catch myself before I just give you the answer which one do you think and again if you just joined us welcome we are just practicing prepositions and the the prepositions that follow certain verbs so excellent perfect addis Risa Simo ceci yes the correct answer is a the doctor referred me to a specialist so in this context you would refer someone to someone else or maybe you refer someone to some place like the hospital but when I think of using this verb I often think of doc or some kind of health needs and they may the doctor may refer you to a specialist so you refer someone to someone else or someplace you send that person to this place or to see someone else you refer someone to something I hope that you guys if you know anybody else who is learning English I hope that you refer them to our channel interactive English so that they can practice and improve their English skills let's look at the next one again how would you complete this sentence I don't know if you can see it the the pictures kind of I tried to put them side-by-side but I'd say the wedding coincides mmm my friend's graduation the wedding coincides mmm my friend's graduation so the verb coincide to coincide which preposition are you going to follow that verb with to coincide on to coincide for to coincide with to coincide by what do you think write your answer in the chat in the comments this is how you really learn these prepositions and you actually start to internalize them and what I mean by internalize them is that you end up learning them and you you don't even really you don't even realize it you just start using them correctly when you're speaking when you're writing when you're producing the language so perfect excellent thank you a great job Esther Dimitri names are going so fast Vanessa Alex the correct answer is C with the wedding coincides with my best friend but with my friend's graduation so in this case when you talk about some two things that coincide it basically means that they happen at the same time they occur at the same time and you would say this thing coincides with this other thing to coincide with it's when you're talking about two things happening at the same time it is a great verb to know in case you did not know the meaning of that to coincide with something next is this question right here my grandfather suffers mmm-mmm neva my grandfather suffers mmm amnesia so the verb is suffer to suffer hmm which preposition best completes this sentence my grandfather suffers by amnesia my grandfather suffers over amnesia my grandfather suffers on amnesia or my grandfather suffers from amnesia and if you don't know what amnesia amnesia is it is a condition that I think it happens more often in people when they get older and what it means is they just start to forget their memory starts to go and if it happens regularly if it happens often then a doctor may diagnose this person and say yes they suffer mmm Nisha all right excellent Thank You Ava Angela Marco uh perfect let's see Leonardo yes suffers from dee from that is the correct answer my grandfather suffers from amnesia if you suffer from something it means that you are experiencing the effects of this thing which is which is typically bad so you could suffer from some kind of condition you could suffer from a disease and you would use that preposition to suffer from excellent so we are gonna switch it up a little bit right now but I did want to let you guys know that if you like what we do here at interactive English if you want to show us some love check out our patreon page we have some cool rewards it's a way to support what we do here and keep doing these lessons for you guys each and every week I'll throw a link right there in the chat there's also a link down below in the description if you guys want to check that out if you no problem I still hope that you join me each and every week for these live lessons and watch our normal lessons on Tuesdays so we're gonna switch it up now before I gave you multiple choice and I wanted you to complete the sentence and I gave you ABCD now I'm I'm not going to give you multiple choice I'm gonna give you the sentence and I want you to think about which preposition completes the sentence write your answer in the chat or write your answer in the comments so the first one is this one I just I love this picture right here one of my favorite things to do is to track down these you know just entertaining pictures that I like so the the sentence is she winked hmm she winked mmm me from across the room she winked me from across the room so the verb is to wink which if you don't know what that is it's when you're you know giving that little motion right there she winked mmm me from across the room the cat is the cat is winking right now so what do you think which preposition best completes that sentence yes so have I can't pronounce a 2 - too old - a bold world excellent alright yes just one minute Breann perfect enough Aiden the correct answer is at you wink at someone she winked at me from across the room it is when you kind of you close your eyes - to signal something so I think in this case some people might think like you wink at somebody like oh you like them you're showing some kind of affection or maybe you wink at somebody like there there's some kind of secret between the two of you and you're sending that signal and you wink at someone the next question is right here so think of just this this context as if I'm telling you this and I say hey whatever you do don't bring mmm his recent divorce whatever you do don't bring his recent divorce which preposition completes that sentence if we are at some kind of event our party you and I are at this party and we see this person over here and I tell you hey hey whatever you do don't bring mmm his recent divorce which preposition completes that sentence I will give you a hint this is a phrasal verb so to bring hmm it is a phrasal verb what do you think all right excellent yes the dossier of Lina Lally say eat see mo the correct answer the is up to bring up his recent divorce so you could say again whatever you do don't bring up his recent divorce to bring something up

it's a phrasal verb and it means you're you're introducing something into the conversation you are you're just talking about some topic you are bringing it up and I I think it may often be used in a context if somebody's saying hey don't bring this up don't talk about this topic this issue perhaps it's a little sensitive and people don't want to talk about this thing and in that case you'd say hey don't bring it up and if you did bring something up then maybe some of that's why did you bring this up why did you introduce this into the conversation to bring up to bring something up the next question the next sentence I have for you is this cheating and professional athletics stems hmm a fierce desire to win at any cost cheating and professional athletics stems mmm a fierce desire to win at any cost notice the picture that I put in there for you it's a little bit of current events I don't know if many of you are watch baseball or keep up with baseball but there have been some problems with with cheating and I could say well in these problems its stems mmm a fierce desire to win at any cost so the verb stem to stem mmm which preposition completes this sentence what do you think this is a little more challenging because I don't think this verb I don't think this verb is probably as common as some of the others but it's also a good one to know especially if you're trying to explain some situation maybe in a little more professional setting so yes the correct answer great job Aidan Shakib sandy nice Vanessa just one minute Dimitri stems from so I'd say cheating in professional athletics such as baseball it stems from a fierce desire to win at any cost and if you say to stem from its saying that something is caused by something else so the cheating instead of saying the cheating is caused by a desire to win I could just say the cheating stems from a desire to win it means the the same thing something stems from something else it originates from this thing or it is caused by this at this thing to stem from alright let's see what do we have next there's my breakfast I could say the sentence breakfast consists hmm eggs pancakes and coffee very standard quite a standard American breakfast it's not well I I do like pancakes I I don't often eat pancakes but definitely eggs and coffee so breakfast consists mmm X pancakes and coffee so the verb is consists to consist mmm what what would you say how would you complete that sentence everybody you guys were you were quick on the draw with this one and if you say if I say that expression you are quick on the draw it means that you were not waiting you did not hesitate and you just answered this question right away yes excellent sir perfect Sara Renuka Abdullah Abdullah dead Alisa thank you for a great job breakfast consists of eggs pancakes and coffee to consist of something it means that it is it is made up of specific things and so look at this sentence she apologized mmm her friend mmm lying both of those prepositions commonly follow the verb apologize to apologize hmm so think about which prepositions you would use to complete that sentence she apologized mmm her friend mmm lying what do you think write your answer in the chat or in the comments because that's what I want you guys to do just to participate so excellent to world were bald I know I'm mispronouncing that sorry Lynn not wrong perfect yes the answer Angela Romeo the answer is she apologised to her friend for lying so those are that when you're talking about the verb to apologize you would apologize to someone a person and you would apologize for something something that happened so she apologized to her friend for lying and when you apologize you just say you're sorry so this is a great example of a verb that that can be followed or is often followed by two different prepositions it depends on what you're trying to say to apologize to someone to apologize for something something that happened the next one okay again you have one verb and I want you to tell me the two prepositions that can follow this verb he argued mmm his boss mmm having to work over the weekend he argued mm his boss mm having to work over the weekend what do you think which preposition so the verb is argue to argue hmm his boss hmm having to work over the weekend there actually I I think there may be there may be three different phrasal verbs that you're not phrasal verbs there may be three different prepositions that that you can use all right what do you think yes excellent perfect say eat Alyssa Sara Den's Mendoza nice thank you guys thanks for your answer so I'd say he argued he argued with his boss about having to work over the weekend I think you could also say he argued with his boss for having to work over the weekend I think you could use that as well but I think it's common you argue again you argue with someone when you're about a person and it's common that you would argue about something something happened and you are arguing about this topic or some sort of disagreement and when you're arguing you are just speaking angrily with this other person he argued with his boss about having to work over the weekend excellent you guys you guys did a phenomenal job thank you for participating in this lesson again this is such a great way to really understand these phrasal verbs that you can see how they are used correctly and you just start to internalize that information so that the next time you you're having a conversation and you want to use these verbs you are going to follow it with the correct preposition you're just going to know it instantly and and you'll be quick on the draw with using those prepositions because you have practice and practice and practice some more so I thank you guys so much for joining me today please if you like these quiz lessons hit that like button that tells me that that you guys enjoy this type of lesson and that I should do some more like this in the future if you have questions or comments again write to us in the comments we always love hearing from you and check us out on our social media classes Facebook Twitter Instagram and if you want to join our community you can subscribe to our e-mail list there is a link in the chat there's also a link down below in the description we'll give you access to the secret fluency lesson we'll send you lesson updates as well as some other useful and free resources to help you improve your English skills because that is what this channel is all about so thank you guys for being here today thank you lolly Julianne angel ester Michelangelo Sandee Alisa Maria Miguel just one minute up to a Michelle ninh not wrong Elina sorry if i mispronounce names i apologize perfect elizabeth oh it's okay for lay the video we'll be posted and and you guys can watch the whole thing from the beginning that is what I'd recommend Leila thank you guys for being here I hope you have a wonderful weekend and I will see you

next time so long

PREPOSITIONS that follow ADJECTIVES | Advanced Grammar

hey everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English and well what this channel is all about it's about helping you practice and improve your English skills in order to kind of start reaching English fluency because it is a long path there's many different parts to it but that's what I really want to help you do and specifically I think this is a great lesson for that because I am going to talk to you about verbs that are followed by prepositions so this can be very challenging because I think when it comes to verbs those are words that are more well known and then they're often followed by these tiny little of these prepositions these function words that I think can be easily forgotten so what I want you to do right now I want you to do something for me and that is just say hello just write your name in the comments in the chat tell me where you're from because I I just want to hear from you I love hearing from everybody and just let me know write your name and I just want to say a quick hello to lolly ELISA Angela Carlos Aden how are you thank you guys for joining me Martha sleepwalker Vicki Gustave Stephan excellent glad that you guys can join me today for today's lesson so the way that we're going to go through this is I'm just going to give you a lot of different verbs and the prepositions that follow and it's a little bit of a quiz lesson and I will also tell you what the the verb + preposition combination what what does this mean so let's just look at it this way all right this is my visual that I want to give you so we have our verbs and they're followed by the prepositions now I've capitalized the verbs because again those are that they're arguably it's the most important word in the sentence because it tells us a lot of information it tells us what's happening it tells us when and then they're followed by these little prepositions those function words that again I think they're easily they're easily forgotten and like if you can think of it like this way you have the big the Mama and Papa duck and they're followed by all the children right behind us so the verbs you know they they describe an action or a state and the prepositions what their their purpose is to connect different words the they are going to connect verbs with with nouns they're going to connect verbs with other phrases so I think that again practicing this is just going to help your overall English fluency because the more exposure that you get the more that you're able to read the sentences using the verbs and the prepositions correctly then you're just going to start to remember it and the next time you want to have a conversation or you're writing you will be able to use it correctly as well so let's go ahead and begin I'm going to start out with let's start out with some multiple-choice questions so I am going to give you the I'm gonna give you the verb I'm gonna give you the sentence and I just want you to tell me which preposition best completes the sentence okay so the first one that I have for you is this right here all right the first one is they were convicted mmm a crime they didn't commit what do you think they were convicted mmm a crime they didn't commit can you guys think what what preposition best completes that sentence either a on B by C with or D of convicted on convicted by convicted with convicted of which one do you think and yes all right I'm just I'll give you a few moments and then I'll just tell you the answer it is convicted of excellent a 10 Carlos in English vibes perfect you are convicted of a crime and if you are convicted of something then that just means that you are people say that you are guilty of something wrong you are going to suffer some consequences you are convicted of something it's not a good thing if somebody convicts you of something typically we're talking about a crime you are convicted of a crime here's the next question I have for you he's accustomed mmm driving in snowy weather which preposition best completes that sentence he's a custom hmm driving in snowy weather is it a with B in C 4 or D 2 he's accustomed with accustomed in a custom for or accustomed to what do you think in this situation and yeah I think that's a good example I think that is this is a verb that is typically followed by this preposition and the answer yes is to he's accustomed to driving in snowy weather perfect Ladon Jotham art Safina lin a sleepwalker I'll try and get some shoutouts every now and then so if you are accustomed to something it just means that you are used to it that you are used to this thing happening so in this example you're accustomed to driving in snowy weather then that just means that you are going to be use to right to you when you're talking about these prepositions so I hope that you said the answer again is to the team is devoted to winning the championship excellent what do we have we know it's going so fast now say Tsar Angela is a far yes could devote it to and if you are devoted to something it just means that you are committed to this thing that this is something you really want you are devoted like a team they are devoted to winning they really want to win so you could say they are devoted to this thing the next question that I have for you is this one many believe the iPhone is superior hmm all others superior all right that is the verb which preposition is going to follow that verb many believe the iPhone is superior superior at superior with superior to or superior of all right what do you think many believe the iPhone is superior hmm all others and again I think many people you might disagree about this I don't really have a strong opinion this was just the only example I could think of but the answer is to again I've thrown all those those prepositions those verbs at you that are followed by too many believe the iPhone is superior to all others excellent bow Khan who is a Christa perfect superior to and if you say that something is superior to something else it just means it's better it's better than this thing superior to the next one that I have for you again another another multiple-choice question parents want to keep their children safe mmm danger parents want to keep their children safe mmm danger and some of you again maybe you know these without even looking at some of the choices that I gave you would you say safe - safe from safe around or safe over what do you think parents want to keep their children safe hmm danger all right we're talking about keeping somebody safe I think this is very true I definitely want to keep our little girl safe and I would want to keep her safe from danger parents want to keep their children safe from something else something dangerous yes Safina Anna Esther excellent Aaden all right yes safe from so again I what I want to do because we're gonna keep practicing this but I want to just say that we're gonna I'm gonna take away the multiple-choice now and I really want you just to think about which preposition do you believe goes there because I think this is going to make it a little more difficult but at the same time the one thing that one thing that I don't care about with multiple-choice it's easier it's a nice warm-up activity but I don't want you to associate the the verb with the wrong preposition so now I'm just going to highlight the correct preposition but before I do I just want to say if you guys would like to make a another connection with us you can check us out on patreon I'll throw a link in the description right there there's also a link down below but it's another nice way to support what we do here at interactive English and there are there are some cool rewards as well so check that out okay so I am now just going to give you the sentence and I want you to complete this sentence with the correct preposition I'm not going to give you any options so this is a good opportunity to just say okay well what feels right in this situation what do you think so the first one Oh before I do I want to give you some these hints the best way to learn because some of you may be thinking like well how can I learn which which prepositions follow which verbs there's two simple things that I think you need to do the first one is just read reading more really helps because that way you're able to see the verb your a or you're able to this is a mistake that should say that that should say adjective no addition I'm getting confused it is adjective I have been Mis speaking I think throughout the lesson we're talking about prepositions that follow these adjectives you want to see the adjective and then see the preposition so we use these adjectives all the time to describe nouns talk about you know talk about the way things look and describe them make it more detailed and then you're going to follow it with that preposition so you want to be able to see that and the other way is just to practice like we're doing this lesson because then you're able to read you're able to see these adjectives and then see the prepositions and follow it so I had actually I want to make a mistake that that correction before because I think I wrote verbs instead of adjectives all of these that we're talking about today are adjectives followed by prepositions previously we did a lesson about verbs followed by prepositions but these are all adjectives so for example I could say I really hope you are engaged mmm these lessons okay if someone is engaged that is a way to describe a person that is an adjective and you would often follow it with a certain preposition so what do you think I hope you are really engaged mmm these lessons write your answer in the chat if you're watching this later write your answer in the comments I just like it when everybody is participating in these lessons so in this case yes

Safina ate in perfect June the answer is in I really hope you are gauged in these lessons so if you are engaged in something it just means that you are you are paying attention you want to learn and you are engaged in a certain activity and you're very engaged that's a good thing the next one is I'm grateful hmm your offer so if two people I don't know if you can see that picture it is a handshake I'm grateful hmm your offer what do you think if two people there they come to an agreement somebody might say this I'm grateful hmm your offer which preposition best completes that and you're talking about somebody who is grateful that is an adjective and you would say that they are grateful for I'm grateful for your offer and if you are grateful for something it's the same as saying that you are thankful for this thing and again that is another adjective that you'd follow with that same preposition grateful for thankful for excellent Angela honey lolly rose Claire perfect for thank I'm grateful for your offer the next one that I have for you is their marriage is devoid mmm laughter so this one this adjective may be a little trickier a little more advanced devoid mmm something so look at the picture and I tried to find a picture they don't look they don't look very happy they're not smiling and in this case if I'm describing something it's a whoa their marriage is devoid mmm laughter so what do you think all right the preposition yes Mamadou Jinja smart again sorry if a house of English devoid of their marriage is devoid of laughter and if we're talking about if you are devoid of something it means that they lack something that there it it doesn't exist there there is no laughter in their marriage it is devoid of laughter devoid of something the next one I could say are you concerned mmm your health and I tried to make this question relevant to I have the picture of these Donuts back there donuts that you know they're not very healthy it's not the healthiest of foods so somebody could ask like hey are you concerned mmm your health and if this is the adjective that we're talking about concerned you are concerned hmm something what do you think concerned are you concerned mmm your health all right I hope that all of you yes you were thinking some of the us see it concerned about so if you are concerned about something then it just means you're worried about it so again even in that case you're concerned about you're worried about they mean the same thing and we use that preposition about concerned about something the next one

she is very well acquainted mmm the facts of the case so there in the background you kind of have this picture of a woman and the idea would be perhaps she's a lawyer and we're talking about a case she's trying a case and you could say well she is very well acquainted mmm the facts of the case yet you are acquainted mmm something what do you think which preposition follows that adjective acquainted mmm something she's very well acquainted the facts of the case the answer is with she is very well acquainted with the facts of the case excellent sleepwalker Jacqueline Lally Aafrin perfect you are acquainted with something if you are acquainted with it it means that you are you know about it that you are familiar with this thing all right I'm familiar with the acts of the case I'm acquainted with the facts of the case again you're using that same preposition familiar with acquainted with you know about this thing so the next thing all right now I'm going to try and make it a little more challenging because this time I am going to give you a sentence and there are two there are two missing prepositions so you have two different verbs and two different prepositions and I want you to see if you can think about which ones which prepositions follow these verbs all right so the first one I could say that is this if you're addicted our channel then that means you're pleased mmm our lessons okay so which prepositions follow those two adjectives so we're talking about addicted mmm something or you're pleased mmm something all right and I keep saying hmm for those spaces so what do you think again if you're not sure just think about well which preposition if you're just reading this or if you imagine that you're listening to it which preposition do you think you would hear if you're addicted our channel then that means you're pleased our lesson our lessons so the correct answer is two and with if you are addicted to our channel then that means you are pleased with our lessons if you are addicted to something it means that you must have it that you cannot go without this thing so you could use it for example it could be something serious if you're talking about drugs and somebody's addicted to drugs or somebody might use it in the sense of like a TV show and you'd say ah I'm addicted to this TV show so in this case I'm talking about our channel if you are addicted to our channel then and then that means you're pleased with something you are happy with it pleased with and if you are addicted to our Channel I always appreciate it if you guys just go ahead hit that like button down below if you think if you are addicted to our English lessons the next one that I have for you is this I just like this picture that's why I chose it the dog is notorious mmm destroying my shoes and I'm fed up mmm all right those are the two adjectives notorious and fed up so the notorious and fed up those are the two adjectives in the sentences which prepositions which prepositions are going to follow those write your answers in the chat or write your answers in the comments okay again it's good this is great practice because you are able to read this when I show you the correct answer you are able to read it and try to understand it so that the next time you want to use it use these adjectives you are going to follow it with the correct preposition so excellent I see some great answers yes Karem i think sam el balcón you the dog is notorious for destroying my shoes and I'm fed up with it he's notorious for destroying my shoes if you are if you are notorious for something all right if you're notorious for something it means that you are known for this thing the dog is notorious for destroying the shoes he's known for that and if you are fed up with something you are tired of it you are not going to take it anymore and say I'm fed up with this all right I'm fed up with all the crowds I'm fed up with the loud music you are tired of this thing you could say you are fed up with it all right excellent let's look at the next one and I could say well speaking of crafted places our next sentence the store was crowded people who were eligible mmm the grand prize so those are the two adjectives you're talking about crowded many people it was crowded hmm people which preposition follows that adjective and the other one eligible eligible mmm something what do you think it means the store was crowded people who were eligible hmm the grand prize all right so I think many of you you've got the first one if you're talking about many people you'd say it's crowded with and then the next one is for the store was crowded with people who were eligible for the grand prize so if you say a place is crowded with something it means there are many things you could say it's crowded with people perhaps it's crowded with something else and if you are eligible for something it means that you have met the requirements to get something you are eligible you are eligible for in this case you are eligible for the prize the next one that I have for you is and this is how I feel that's what this is why I chose this sentence I don't know if you can see the picture it's a picture of an airplane and there are seats on the airplane and I would say I'm incapable mmm getting comfortable mmm this seat so when I think of an airplane seat I might think about this sentence right here and use these adjectives I'm incapable hmm getting comfortable hmm this seat so what do you think if somebody is incapable or they're talking about comfortable alright so you would say that I'm incapable of getting comfortable in this seat so if you're talking about you are capable of doing something that you can do it if we want to say the opposite you would say incapable of doing something so I am not able to do this I am NOT able to get comfortable in this seat so we're talking about a seat I think depending on the situation you could say comfortable with or you might say comfortable in but in this case since we're talking about a seat and somebody would sit in a seat you would say comfortable in this seat because we're sitting so in this case I'm incapable of getting comfortable in this seat the next one if you're can mmm this is what I would tell you guys or I try to tell you guys all the time if you're keen mmm improving your English join our community and you'll be amazed mmm all the cool stuff will send you so this is true I'm going to throw a plug for this in just a moment what do you think so the adjective the two adjectives is keen you are keen hmm doing something and you are amazed mmm something all right so I say something because you can put different words in there but in this case I'd say if you're keen mmm improving your English join our community and you'll be amazed mmm all the cool stuff will send you so if you are keen on doing something it means that you want to do it you desire to do it if you're keen on improving your English if you want to do it then I would say join our community and you'll be amazed by all the cool stuff we'll we'll send you its amazed by you are amazed by something and if you check out if you want to join our email list I know many of you are already on it we will send you access to the secret fluency lesson and some other cool things we send messages from time to time talking about some resources that you can use to improve your skills sometimes we send lesson updates about lessons that are coming out in the future and anything else that's happening at interactive English I'll put a link right there in in the chat if you want to check it out it's also one down below so again this is a great way to practice because we use adjectives all the time and they are often followed by certain prepositions and I just want to do a little bit of a checklist so this is our checklist today of all the again I've I got this mixed up in my head because I did verbs and prepositions before today is adjectives so forget about that word right there verbs these are all adjectives these are adjectives plus prepositions these are all the adjectives that we talked about today there are 20 of them so just read this list alright get comfortable with it it's going to help you because the next time you want to use one of these words and some of them are very common they're very there they're often used then you know what a do you know what preposition you need to follow it with like if you are concerned about something or you want to say that you are fed up with something or that you are amazed by something that these are adjectives and you're going to follow them with those prepositions I put those books down there to remind you to read and I also put that YouTube logo down there except remind you watch our lessons this is something that we practice all the time like I said before I did another lesson on verbs followed by prepositions I suggest you check that out but when I was creating this I just messed it up in my mind going back and forth about verbs and prepositions even I get confused sometimes so thank you guys so much for joining me today again if you enjoy these lessons please hit that like button check us out in those links below patreon our email list we just like to be able to make all of these connections with you so I hope you guys have a wonderful day thank you for joining thank you for participating and I will see you guys next time but I'll give some last shoutouts in the end Thank You Angela Aden merits pachoo lolly Rose Claire de xira all right so I have mispronounced that Antonio I am tied at devika and Maud hope you guys have a wonderful day and I will see you guys next time so long

PREPOSITION QUIZ | How advanced is your grammar?

hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel is all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today is really just trying to help you improve your overall english fluency because we're going to talk about prepositions those those tiny little function words that i think can be confusing for some english learners and i think prepositions is often where learners may make a small mistake and in that case when you make a mistake with prepositions people still understand what you're trying to say it's really just a matter of trying to help you speak accurately which again goes back to improving your overall fluency i will show you some sentences that are missing prepositions and i just want you to complete the sentence with whatever preposition you feel is correct i'll give you a moment to think of an answer and then of course i will tell you what the answer is so this is actually a live lesson that i did a while back and that means some of you may have already seen it which in that case it's always good to review and if you have not seen it then i just wish you the best of luck on the quiz let me know how you did down in the comments below and let's just begin and the first question the first sentence that i have for you is this one right here i told you we will start um with something a bit easier and then it's going to get a little more difficult as we move on so the it's just a question that somebody might ask if i'm talking to a friend or whoever if i meet a new class and talk to some students i might just say hey what time do you wake up um the morning we're going to use the preposition in in the morning and this is this is an example of i'd say if you're learning prepositions of time there are certain rules that you can follow if you have these periods of time throughout the day morning afternoon evening you're going to use in in the morning in the afternoon in the evening let's look at the next one what preposition best completes this sentence all right she wore a scarf um her neck this is an example where i think you could use one of two prepositions the one that i was looking for which i gave you in my answer is around she wore a scarf around her neck you could say she wore a scarf on her neck but i i tried to give you that picture because i think when you're talking about something like a scarf most people are going to use a round because of the meaning of the preposition you're talking about a round you're talking about something that moves along the side of something else and it kind of just goes around it so a scarf is something you would wear around your neck but again if you say on it's fine everybody understands that so let's go to the next one all right i hope you enjoy um interactive english which preposition best completes that statement so that it makes sense it's easy to understand and this is a preposition that might commonly follow learning people would learn with someone you were doing this thing together and i'd say look i hope you really enjoy learning with interactive english here this is well this is actually a true a true statement we're missing two prepositions which prepositions would complete this sentence again i think hopefully these are maybe a little easier and they will get more difficult my birthday is um november this year it's um a thursday we're talking about a month and then a day my birthday is in november this year it's on a thursday so if we're talking about some of these prepositions of time we use in with months in january in october in november and on when we're talking about days on monday on tuesday on wednesday all right next is uh this one which is well let's let's they're they're missing two it's easy for learners to get fed there's two blanks prepositions this is actually a phrasal verb it's a verb plus a preposition but in this case it's a three-word phrasal verb the answer is yes you are fed up with it is a three-word phrasal verb you have the verb plus a preposition when we talk about phrasal verbs those are those are other phrasal verbs are also um they can be confusing as well but if somebody is fed up with something it means that they are annoyed or unhappy or maybe they're just bored with some situation uh the next one is think about it there are two different people talking so that's why i've given you a and b so one person says where are you and the other person says i'm m the gym he is running on the treadmill and he is um the gym at the gym and the what i wanted to highlight here is this is where the at and in may be some prepositions that people might find a little confusing because if somebody says at the gym you're talking about the location and that location could be in or around some uh building office home you're just you're talking about that location in would refer to that you are inside or on the interior so in this case you could say like where are you oh i'm in the gym or where are you i'm at the gym either one is okay but i'd say it's more common for somebody to use at simply because when you're asking the question where are you somebody's asking about your location they want to know where you are at now the next one um we knew the plane would leave um time so we had to run and we just barely made it um time all right so you may be looking at this and thinking well wait this that's a little strange because both of these prepositions come before the word time all right but there's two separate uh two different meanings and two different situations that i'm referring to so we knew the plane would leave um time so we had to run and we just barely made it um time we knew that the plane would leave on time so we had to run and we just barely made it in time so i wanted to highlight the difference between on time and in time so if you say that something is on time it means that it is done or it happens when it should something might arrive on time when it should or perhaps it's going to leave on time when it should in time just you're referring to something that is just early enough that we finish the project in time we finished right before it was the deadline and you finished early enough you do something in time uh this one is an expression i'd say well that people can use sometimes i'm not sure what we should do i feel like we're um a rock and a hard place which preposition would complete that sentence and again i told you this is more of i think an expression that you may hear from time to time if people are referring to this specific situation which i'll talk about in just a moment we're talking about between i'm not sure what we do what what we should do i feel like we're between a rock and a hard place so i told you that this is an expression um to be in between or just between a rock and a hard place you don't really need to use in there um that you could but it's more of a typo the expression is to be between a rock and a hard place and it means that you're caught in a situation that is difficult because there's no way out you have um a problem on this side you have a problem on that side and you'd say you're stuck uh between a rock and a hard place uh so that's a good expression to know the next one uh and this is true one day i dream um hiking mount kilimanjaro i actually i think i'd use this in a previous preposition lesson a preposition quiz that i had if you saw that one maybe you remember what preposition that would be a little more appropriate in this case there are two different prepositions that you could use all right i chose of one day i dream of hiking mount kilimanjaro and the reason i chose of i think when somebody dreams of something they're talking about something they hope to do in the future that they wish they could do this it is interchangeable with a bout you could also use a belt that's perfectly fine but i wanted to make a little bit of a distinction between of dream of and dream about the next one the audience was captivated the performance the word captivated is a key because you often follow this adjective with this specific preposition you are captivated by something the audience was captivated by the performance if you are captivated by something it just it really holds your attention and you're really focused on that so in this case a performance everybody's watching it they they it's holding their attention they cannot look away they are captivated by this thing now the next one is another it's another expression that people might say from time to time kind of depending on the situation it's better to ask um forgiveness than permission what what preposition is going to complete this uh this saying that people might use it's better to ask for forgiveness than permission and i told you it's a famous saying because when it's used is like in a situation where you need to act immediately you need to make a decision but that decision could cause problems so you're going to ask for forgiveness and ask to you're going to apologize it for it later instead of trying to get approval to do it how would you complete this sentence i'm thinking a number between one and ten and this is another one where i feel like people may think that they can use a couple of different prepositions all right what do you think how would you which preposition would you use to best complete this sentence if i say hey you know i'm thinking um a number between 1 and 10.

i'm thinking of something like i'm thinking of a number between one and ten but i wanted to highlight the difference between thinking of and thinking about in in this case i think you're you're overwhelmingly going to use of if you're you're telling somebody you want them to guess and you're like oh okay i'm thinking of an animal guess what it is so if you think of something it's something that you're not aware of and you have to imagine it but if you're thinking about something to me then you're taking time to consider it so in this situation where you're asking somebody to imagine something uh you're going to use of this is a it's a great way to practice prepositions because you are reading these prepositions in these sentences you are listening to me use these prepositions and talk about them and you are practicing as well the more you practice the better i think you're going to understand all of these prepositions and how to use them and i hope i hope that you learned something new thank you guys so much for watching have a great week i'm going to end it now i will see you guys next time so long

PRONUNCIATION & EMPHASIS LESSON | Interactive Quiz

so if you are interested in practicing your pronunciation and improving your pronunciation then this lesson is for you my name is Wes and this is Interactive English which you know this channel is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and specifically today today is all about practice because I have a lesson for you which is a little bit of a quiz and we're gonna talk about pronunciation and emphasis we're gonna focus on those two things today and like I said it's a little bit of a quiz so I want you to practice I want you to participate in today's lesson I have some questions for you and I want you to write those answers I want you to write your answers in the chat or even in the comments if you're watching this later participate in the lesson write your answers in the comments so that I know that you were actually you are interacting with these lessons that is the best way to practice your skills so let's just start out we're gonna start out with something a bit easier and basic when it comes to pronunciation and then as we go through this it's going to get a little more difficult as we go through it alright so let's begin with just the basics and I have a question for you and that question is this which word has three syllables so which of those words right there has three syllables is it a subtle B coconut or C television what do you guys think I want you to write your answers in the chat or in the comments I just want to know that you are participating in these lessons so what do you think all right a B you see subtle coconut television which word has three syllables alright so I hope I hope that you answered be coconut all right this has three syllables and if you want to know what a syllable is because when you start learning pronunciation this is a good starting point you want to be able to break down these words into the smallest unit so in case you don't know I have it written right there that a syllable is a single unit of speech in English it usually contains a vowel and it consists of either the whole word or just parts in which the word is separated when it is spoken or written so let me tell you what that means that it could be the whole word if I have the word box okay it's one syllable it's also one word or a syllable can be parts of the word like coconut it's broken down into three syllables coconut alright and the reason that you need to be able to identify different syllables is because when you see a word you need to understand well how many syllables how many units of sound does this word have and if you're able to put those units together you can pronounce the word correctly and then if you put those words together then you will pronounce the sentences correctly and if you put those sentences together well then you're having a conversation and people will be able to understand your pronunciation so let's let's practice this a little more are you ready so I'm gonna give you this word I'm gonna give you a word I want you to tell me how many syllables does this word have what I want you to do maybe I want you to say the word to yourself this is another great way to practice during this lesson is that I want you to speak wherever you are if you are at home if you're on the bus doesn't matter where you're watching this actually say the words out loud try to say these words and practice your pronunciation so think about try to say that word alright and now I will say it for you I do sing cracy how many syllables do you think this word has idiosyncrasy alright so seeing some good answers a lot of people saying five all right now let me show you the answer idiosyncrasy you guys are close it has six syllables alright and I've broken them down there for you alright II do sing cross C alright six syllables if you don't know what the word means I put meaning down there and you could expand your vocabulary so an idiosyncrasy is a it's a behavior or a way of thought that is particular to an individual it's it's like an unusual feature so for example everybody has certain idiosyncrasies perhaps somebody maybe they like to sing in the shower every time they shower they're singing that is an idiosyncrasy it is particular to that person all right now let's get back to the pronunciation idiosyncrasy has six syllables now if you're wondering well how how can I tell how many syllables a word has one way to do that is to take your hand put it below your chin and then say the word and count the number of times that your chin hits the top of your hand so if I say idiosyncrasy it's going to hit by ten six times whoops six times it's going to hit my chin idiosyncrasy and that is the number of syllables okay now let's let's go to the next one ready how many syllables are in this word first I want you to say the word you say it out loud and then you can listen to me say it so the word is scrumptious Ness scrumptious Ness how many syllables can you count in that word and like I said try try to do

has three syllables so now that we've talked about syllables we're gonna come back to that as we move through the lesson but that is a great way just to begin when you think about pronunciation to be able to look at a word especially if you don't know how to pronounce it try to identify well how many syllables does the word have how many different units of sound does this word have and that's gonna help you try to pronounce it correctly now let's move on to the next part which is silent letters okay I've given you a sentence right here and all I want you to do is count how many different silent letters do you see now the reason why this is important is because when you are reading or or you know you are going to come across silent letters you are reading this right now and as you're reading it you're you're probably saying it in your head in your mind even right now I'd say go ahead and say it out loud but when you're saying it in your mind you're still pronouncing the word and if you're not able to identify those silent letters then that means the next time you try to actually speak the language you may end up mispronouncing the word so how many silent letters do you see right here I'm gonna go ahead and say it for you so I would say and you can repeat after me to practice your pronunciation my mechanic told me to fasten my seat belt in case I have a wreck alright my mechanic told me to fasten my seat belt in case I have a wreck how many silent letters do you see in that sentence um alright getting some different ones I like it when everybody has a little different some different answers yes Mahmood excellent AE Maki Mei the correct answer is three all right I tried to highlight them for you I don't know if you can see that so we have the H in mechanic the T in fasten and the W in wreck those are all silent letters I will say it again my mechanic told me to fasten my seatbelt in case I have a wreck those are all silent letters and like I said it's important because usually let's take the word mechanic in this word that CH often we think it has a Chuck sound like in cheese or chess or match but in this case that H it's silent so it has that cooker sound mechanic now of course let's make it more difficult how many silent letters can you find in this phrase right here now what I want you to do is go ahead and say it to yourself say this to yourself right now say it out loud practice your pronunciation then listen to me say it and try to count the number of silent letters there are more than three I will go ahead and tell you that but go ahead say it out loud to yourself practice your pronunciation alright and now you can listen to me say it so I would say on Wednesday the honest night planned to rendezvous with the Nome next to the castle on Wednesday the honest night planned to rendezvous with the Nome next to the castle alright now this is a sentence that you're not just going to say in everyday conversation this is just practicing these silent letters and trying to identify them because there are quite a few in here alright and I don't see anyone yes bucyk aren't perfect there are actually seven silent letters alright you can count them all right you have the D in Wednesday the H in honest the K in night the there are two silent letters in rendezvous the Z and the S rendezvous with the Nome the genome and then the T in Castle those are all silent letters as you're saying this so again just so you can listen to me on on Wednesday the honest night planned to rendezvous with the Nome next to the castle and as I think as you're reading and listening that's a great way to identify silent letters especially if you're doing something like you're reading subtitles if you're watching a movie or a TV show and you're using subtitles that's a great way that you might come across a word and you'll notice oh you know if you say Wednesday you're not going to hear that D sound that D is silent so there are seven total in that all right the we're gonna switch up again we're gonna keep moving along I have a lot of different activities that I want to do with you today but if you guys like what we do here at interactive English then I suggest you can check out our patreon page if you want to support what we do there are gonna throw a link right here in the chat you can also check us out there is a link in the description if you guys want to connect with us through patreon we really appreciate it it really helps us continue what we're doing here at interactive English so let's switch it up again alright my next question for you is this alright the most common sound in English is the MM sound that's the most common sound in English is the MM sound what do you think is it a th sound B the schwa sound or C the the e sound alright what do you think is the most common sound in English and of course if you don't know that's okay I'm getting ready to tell you what do you think is it a th B schwa or C that sound alright well I hope that all of you said I'm trying to find some information that I want to share with you the answer is yes excellent lolly and you know Molly I think many Leonardo many of you got this the most common sound in English is the schwa sound now if you don't know what the schwa sound is it's right here it is the schwa sound which looks like if you're looking at it using the IPA the international phonetic alphabet it looks like an upside-down e that is the symbol for the schwa it is a reduced vowel sound now any vowel can take on this sound and often it sounds like a it's just a reduced sound and it's just gonna sound like an up and a sound now if you want some more information on the schwa sound we did a lesson a long time ago which I'm gonna share with you right here and I will also put links to these lessons down in the description below to give you more information about this so if you're looking to learn a little bit more about the schwa sound and practice the schwa sound you can check out a lesson we did from a long time ago let me I'm getting the link for you right now and here it is so I will throw that in the chat mmm boom there it goes so check out that lesson it's all about the schwa it'll give you I'll give you a lot more information about it now I told you I wanted to come back to the syllables so what I want you to do is I want you to tell me which syllable has the schwa sound so I have given you this word I want you to first identify well how many syllables does it have and then try to determine well which one has that reduced vowel sound which word has the schwa so again I would encourage you say the word say it out loud practice your speaking okay now you can listen listen to me celebrate you can listen to me say it celebrate celebrate which syllable do you think has that schwa sound celebrate now what you should have answered celebrate the syllable that has the schwa sound is that second syllable all right so the word celebrate has three syllables there you go I got to put my fingers in front of the camera three syllables that second one right there has that schwa celebrate it had you can hear that celebrate now I've given I just so you guys can reference this this is the IPA which stands for the international phonetic alphabet some of you may already be some of you may be familiar with it so you can see that it's written how it's written there and again that symbol for the schwa is that upside-down e celebrate I've also given you the phonetic spelling which is if you were going to say the word exactly how it sounds this is how you would spell it celebrate so either one you can use either of these the IPA or phonetic spelling if you would like a better understanding of how to pronounce this word alright so celebrate second syllable has the schwa let's go to the next one all right which syllable has the schwa sound this is your word say it out loud all right what do you think say the word out loud and then tell me which one has that schwa now you can I'll say the word too so you can hear me say it photography photography I'll tell you this is a little bit of a trick question this is a little bit of a trick question so the word is pronounced photography which syllable has the schwa or like I said I could say it's a trick question because I could say which syllable have the schwa sound all right so what I mean by that is yes some of you right many of you some of you said the first one some of you said the third one actually you are all correct because both the first syllable and the third syllable have the schwa sound so in this word photography it has four syllables four syllables the first syllable photography that third syllable also has that schwa you can see in the IPA how it's written that upside down e has that schwa that reduced vowel sound that sound or in the phonetic spelling you can actually see that ah that u H written photography the first and third syllable have that schwa sound all right so this is again this is good practice to take some of these individual words identify how many syllables they have and then be able to understand what the schwa sound is and actually identify okay where is it in the word because so many words have that schwa sound and in what I would encourage you to do next time you're listening to an individual word or take any individual word and actually see if you can identify the schwa sound see if that word has the schwa sound and which syllable has that sound as well now what I want to do because this lesson is about both pronunciation and emphasis okay emphasis is a part of pronunciation the way that you're saying word that's what I want to focus on right now okay so I want to take this sentence right here and we're going to do a different exercise on emphasis so the sentence is a just a simple sentence I didn't say you stole the money okay I think you can I can read that sentence you understand what it means but what we're going to do is I want you to think about how does emphasis change the meaning of the sentence because depending on which word we emphasize the meaning is going to change a little bit and what I would encourage you to do for this is I want you to practice and say these sentences out loud and practice that and this is it's a form of shadowing and what shadowing is it is a great way to practice your pronunciation your intonation your emphasis and that you are repeating something the exact same way that you hear it so you're gonna listen to me say the sentence with the different emphasis and I want you to repeat that and we did a whole other lesson that was all about shadowing I just threw a link in the chat if you want to check that out later I will also put a link in the description for the pronunciation for these lessons that I'm mentioning so let's look at this I'm gonna give you I'm gonna give you the meaning I want you to think which word should you emphasize if you say this so the meaning is I didn't say you stole the money I said you stole something else which word would you emphasize if that is the meaning that you want to convey if that's the meaning of the sentence which word are you going to emphasize alright when you've tried if you're trying to decide well how do I know which word to emphasize think well first think about what the meaning is all right I said you know I didn't say you stole the money I said you stole something else so you're talking about the thing that is being stolen and in this case down here the thing that is being stolen is money that is the word that you would want to emphasize excellent I see some of you put money lolly Angela dairy Ricardo yes you want to emphasize the word money so you can listen to me say it and I want you guys to repeat this as well practice your speaking practice your pronunciation so I would say I didn't say you stole the money I didn't say you stole the money you can hear that emphasis on money and that's what the meaning is I didn't say you stole the money I said you stole the painting alright something else was stolen I didn't say you stole the money I said that you stole the computer I didn't say you stole the money I said you stole the refrigerator alright so you get the idea when you're emphasizing that word that money that's gonna change the meaning I didn't say you stole the money so again this really depends on the context that somebody is accusing somebody of something else like oh why did you say I stole the money it's like no I didn't say you stole the money I said you stole the the the clothes all right anything all right let's look at the next one so again we have our sentence here's the meaning I didn't say you stole the money I implied you stole the money which word would you emphasize to have that meaning I didn't say you stole the money I don't want to I didn't say you stole the money I implied you stole the money and if you don't know what it means to imply something it means to suggest to imply means to suggest that something happened now again if you want to identify the word all right that's the meaning you want to identify the word well if you are suggesting something in this case you're not suggesting you're saying it so the word you want to emphasize is say and that is going to tell us that meaning all right excellent so some of you got it so if I said listen to how I say it and repeat it I didn't say you stole the money so if somebody says I didn't say you stole the money then I didn't say it I did something else to imply it maybe I pointed my finger all right I didn't actually speak it out loud I didn't say you stole the money I used my eyes and said it was this person over here he stole the money right there all right I implied it I didn't say it so if somebody says well I didn't say you stole the money it means you didn't say it but you maybe did something else too imply that this was stolen let's continue because I know this is this is a little challenging this is difficult when it comes to really understanding the meaning of what somebody says now now I've given you the word that I want you to emphasize and I want you to think about well what is the meaning first I want you to say this on your own and I want you to emphasize the word you and then you can listen to me say it and then again try to repeat it practice shadowing so that you are emphasizing it the same way that I am okay so if you want to say it you're emphasizing it I would say I didn't say you stole the money I didn't say you stole the money what does that mean if somebody says well I didn't say you stole the money what do you think all right so if you're emphasizing you um alright excellent uh sandrine perfect lolly nice the 14-j ABC b20 excellent so if you're emphasizing you alright you're saying well I didn't say you stole the money I said somebody else did

I said I didn't say you stole the money I said that Wes stole the money r I didn't say you stole the money I said that the the child stole the money so again when you hear when somebody's emphasizing you then that's the word that's going to change that word is going to change and it's gonna take on a new meaning what if I said let's do a couple other practice so there I don't know if you can see it the word I is highlighted that's the word that I want you to emphasize now I want you to practice saying it and then again listen to me say it and then think about well what is the meaning because this sentence this is a great sentence to use and that you can emphasize each word and it's going to give you a different mean all right what does it mean so if we're gonna emphasize if somebody says well I didn't say you stole the money I didn't say you stole the money what is that now that I emphasize I what does that mean if you're telling somebody and somebody says well wait why did you say I stole the money I said whoa whoa I didn't say you stole the money yes somebody many of you excellent got it so if you're emphasizing I what it means is well I didn't say you stole the money someone else said it I didn't say you stole the money it was this person this person said that you stole the money I didn't say you stole the money so again this is a great exercise to be able to listen to something because you're going to hear this if you're watching a movie or a TV show people are going to use emphasis quite often and depending on the word

they emphasize the meaning can change a little bit let's look at another one all right I've given you this sentence this is the last live lesson of December I want you to emphasize is okay and unfortunately yes this this is actually true this is actually true this is the last live lesson of December I just gave you the example I just emphasized it for you so you can try to practice your pronunciation practice your shadowing say it with me this is the last live lesson of December okay now when I emphasize is what am I really what am I saying because we use I'll tell you this this is a sentence in the present simple we use the present simple in this case to talk about things that are facts all right I could say you know the Sun sets in the west this is the last live lesson of December if I emphasize that is then practice that speaking say that practice you're shadowing now let's look at this one one more um how would you I want you to emphasize the word duh okay now when people emphasize the word though you might hear this is when you might hear them say thee instead of the you might could say thee so you know personally I always just I kind of just stick with uh I don't really catch myself saying thee often but I could say it again practice it say it after me he's taking me to the dance or I could say he's taking me to the dance and we're emphasizing the or you could say thee and in this case think about it when we use that article the we are talking about we are talking about something specific so if I'm emphasizing it and I'm talking about the dance or the dance he's taking me to the dance

he's taking me to the dance what does that tell you about the dance all right now if somebody is emphasizing it that you may even hear them emphasize the word that comes after the noun yes Sayyid perfect it is a dance that everybody knows about it is it is the dance or the dance it means that is either mate maybe it is the only dance or perhaps it is an important dance but whoever you're talking to that person knows about this dance you don't have to specify you can just say well it is the dance or the dance the it might be the only one or it is the most famous one and that is a way that you can emphasize and stress well like it is it is the one that everybody knows about okay so this is great practice about how you can use emphasis to to not only just change meaning but really emphasize the meaning of what you're trying to say because it like in this case you don't need to explain you don't need to give the name of the dance this is the dance everybody knows about this dance so let's do another we're gonna we're gonna practice a little bit more and what I did yesterday and this is something I may do later on in the future I asked all of you guys I said well what are some words that you would like me to pronounce and I've taken some of those words and I've put a list together and that list is right here so I'm not gonna spend a bunch of time going through this I've given you the word the meaning and I've given you both the IPA the international phonetic alphabet if you are familiar with that and you can you can you understand those symbols and you can practice pronouncing it as well as the phonetic spelling in case that helps you to be able to see how it's spelled so again I will say the word I would encourage you to say it after me all right this word is thorough thorough these are some difficult words that that all of you in our community have asked about I've got these words this is from our patron our patron community and then I got to a few words from just everybody so thorough it's just talking about extremely attentive complete I I hope all of you do thorough work I hope that your work is thorough Thoreau the next word is listened some someone in our patron community asked about that IDI ending and if you want to learn more about that again we have another lesson we talked a lot about how to pronounce those IDI words this is very important because if you're talking about those regular verbs that IDI ending it can have three different forms in this case listened alright that final sound is a voice sound that mm-hmm you can hear that feel that vibration in the throat so that IDI is going to have a D sound at the end but it is not an extra syllable so listen has one syllable listened also just one syllable it is one syllable listened listened listened alright that is a good one hope that oh wait let me post that there you go there that is the IDI lesson that I just put in the chat if you guys want to check that out again I will leave a link in the description to these lessons that I mentioned today the next one democracy democracy it's talking about government by the people many forms of governments countries have a democracy now notice that schwa in that third syllable democracy democracy personally I think if I'm speaking I'm having a conversation I act sometimes I actually pronounce that first syllable also with a bit of a schwa sound and I say democracy democracy but again the the schwa really definitely is in that third syllable democracy democracy again say it after me repeat that this is a great time to practice your pronunciation the next word many many people are confused with that RL that especially that our LD combination world world it's talking about the earth or the globe I think you're familiar with this word world there's the IP check out the phonetic spelling in case it helps world alright that LR you can hear that Earl Earl Earl girl twirl alright world you do hear that D at the end world alright the next word is this one sixth sixth this is the ordinal number four six again use the IPA or the phonetic spelling to help you pronounce this word say it after me six I think it ends with that that that X and then you got a transition into the th six six six six all right you can feel like that air coming out the end sixth alright the next one I may do I may do a whole lesson on these words later and just ask you guys four more words the next word I have for you people were asking about this word entrepreneur again this is another loan word that English has taken from French this is a French word that English has taken it we now use it entrepreneur is a person who starts a business it has four syllables entrepreneur with no [Laughter] entrepreneur there you go entrepreneur entrepreneur person who starts a villa business entrepreneurs say it after me entrepreneur entrepreneur entrepreneur and you are going to have that schwa sound in that second and third syllable ah try pro nor entrepreneur alright the next word is somebody mentioned conscientious conscientious I think this word is difficult to pronounce because of the way it's spelled and that spelling I think can really throw people off what it means is that you're you know you are controlled by what youth is right you are going to do the things that you think is right and you might try to make a conscientious decision you're going to just make a decision based on what you think is right a conscientious decision all right it has four syllables and you have that schwa in that final syllable say it after me conscientious I am going to make a conscientious decision conscientious next is the word Q and this is just referring to a line when people are waiting instead of saying a line you could say a Q those two words are synonyms line Q again the pronunciation of the spelling and the pronunciation can throw people off a little bit you're saying it you're pronouncing it like you are saying the letter Q the name of the letter Q Synod and you just pronounce it Q Oh God yesterday I had to wait in such a long queue it was terrible I hate it or you go to someplace and you find that there is a queue there is a line you have to wait in it there is a queue the next word is Erie all right this means something is Erie it's an adjective it means there's a strange or just a weird feeling often that something is wrong Erie the the pronunciation I think if you can use the IPA or the phonetic spelling I I think that you can understand a little bit easier again Erie both of those values start with the long vowel sound in the first set of year and then it ends with that long e sound as well eerie eerie something is eerie it's strange it's confusing it's unusual it's eerie then the next word again months it's a word that I think you know you know this word it's a very common word but people have trouble pronouncing it sometimes it is a challenging word to pronounce a month it's a part of the calendar year months especially I think when you're referring to it in the plural and you're talking about more than one month and you'd say several months several months all right look at the IPA look at the phonetic spelling repeat after me months you can do you can slightly hear that th sound months months all right I am I wish I could take a vacation for several months I'm sure all of us laughter all of us would like to take a vacation for several months but it's just not possible months then we have all right literally this means in a in a strict sense word for word you you do something literally you say something literally I think again it's challenging because of that R and L R that L and R sound literally literally try to repeat it after me practice your pronunciation literally use that IPA that phonetic spelling that is a great guide in order to pronounce these words literally alright the next word hypocrisy hypocrisy has four syllables hypocrisy hypocrisy that schwa is in that third syllable now you guys you know what that schwa sound is that reduced found sounds like a hypocrisy say it after me hypocrisy hypocrisy perfect and massage this is I think some people might confuse it with the other verb message in which you it is spelled differently too with an E but this is talking about you're treating your body you know a rub giving a massage and that first syllable has that schwa ma massage massage okay massage I hope you could say it after me massage this is a great way to actually practice your speaking skills and again these notes this is something that for patrons if you're at a certain level we do put this we do put our notes up on for for those patrons because I think it's useful it's helpful we make those notes available to people so again if you're you know if you're not able to connect with us through patreon that's perfectly okay another way to connect with us is based on our email list if you want to have access to the secret fluency lesson we send different lesson updates and just talk a little bit about what we do we also share some resources with you as well there is a link in the description I'm throwing a link right there in the chat in case you want to check that out so there's a lot of a lot of links that I just gave you today I hope that you found this lesson useful if you did participate in the activity and actually spoke to me and practice your speaking skills let me know write the word speaking in the comments that way I know that you were actually participating and practicing your pronunciation practicing your emphasis if you enjoyed this lesson this little quiz about pronunciation and emphasis hit that like button that tells me well okay I should do more of this next time because there is value that you guys find it very useful to practice your pronunciation to practice your emphasis you can always write to us in the comments we love hearing from you and join us on social media we are active on Facebook Instagram and Twitter and of course here on YouTube all right excellent honey perfect speaking Moda is perfect thank you guys so much for joining remember this is the this is the will be back for a live lesson next next year and I will see you guys then all right so long

PRONUNCIATION HACKS | Speak with the American accent

let's talk about how to sound more American and the very first thing that I want to tell you is that you do not actually need to sound more American you do not have to speak with an American accent or any other English accent for that matter the most important thing is that people understand what you're saying and you're able to communicate with others and be that as it may many of you have still asked me if there are any pronunciation tips or tricks that you can use to help your speech have a more natural flowing sound and because I'm from the United States I can help you in that regard which is why in this lesson I want to talk to you about five different pronunciation hacks that you can use to sound more American let me quickly introduce myself my name is Wes the channel is interactive English which is all about helping you improve your skills so that you can reach your fluency goals if that's what you'd like to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that you will learn about future lessons let's begin with my first uh pronunciation hack which I think is well it's it's I think relatively simple which is why I wanted to begin with this and that is to use reductions and this I think is very common in spoken English not only in the United States but I think among all English varieties but I can tell you that in the US people use reductions especially common reductions quite often I'm talking about reductions like GNA wna have to Hast to and I right here you can see that I am actually spelling these reductions but just know that this is not something that you are going to use in writing here is the full form right here you you're really just going to use this in spoken English because like I said they're very common and you use them in everyday conversation I could say something like we have to go see the new Marvel movie I I really want to see it I'm going to go see it today so just listening to those sentences did you hear the different reductions that I was using let's let's rewind and and listen to those and you can even repeat after me if you want to practice saying them I could say something like we have to go see the new Marvel movie I really want to see it I'm going to go see it today all right I hope you repeated those after me because I I think yeah the more you use them and actually practice saying these reductions the more comfortable you're going to feel just using them in in general conversation though one thing I do want you to be aware of is that in order to reduce a phrase like going to you need to follow it with a base verb gonna play gon to watch gonna visit if you follow it with a noun you are not going to reduce this phrase so I could say something like I'm going to work work is a noun and it's like I'm talking about I'm heading into the office that's very different than I'm going to work in that case now I'm using it as the verb talking about the activity working so so keep that in mind I'm going to work versus I'm going to work if you follow it with a noun you are not going to reduce this and I I yes reductions I think is a very simple and I say simple because I think they are just so common in spoken English it's a very simple way to start practicing and actually giving your speech a more natural flowing sound in in just general conversation the next hack that I have for you is just to go crazy with the schw sound and if you don't know what the schwas sound is it is an unstressed vowel sound it just it sounds like uh and it it we use it a lot in words but we also use it in reductions I I just talked to you about like going to becomes gunana in that second syllable GNA uh you have that schwas sound and I think that well people in the US we use the schah a lot and there are maybe two different reasons for this one is that people like to say things quickly and efficiently and then the next reason would be that people Americans are just kind of lazy when it comes to pronunciation I will like to think it's the first one even though I think a strong argument could be made for the second and really when when I talk about going crazy with the schwas sound uh I really have three words in mind and these are these three words right here very common words so instead of saying the article a you just use the schah uh it's a very weak sound and you can just like fly right through through it and continue to the next word you the pronoun also very common word has two accepted forms of pronunciation one I just said youu but you could also use the schah and say y y and then finally to the preposition in the United States uh I I do this quite often instead of actually saying to I'm just going to use the schah and say t so let's look at a sentence and I'm I'm going to say it quickly and then slowly and I really want you to listen for the schwas sound when I say these three words right here so the the sentence it's really a question I could say do you need to go see a doctor and then I'll break it down slowly saying it one syllable at a time there are nine syllables do you need to go see a doctor and then let's let's break it down into three different parts do you need to go see a doctor so I I hope that you could hear that schwa sound that uh sound when I was saying these words do you need to go see a doctor and again that that schah sound it's just kind of it's a very weak sound it's letting you fly right through the sentence and really the focus is on those other content words like need go see doctor and and that's really the main message that's the real thing that you want to take away from that question but if you're going to say it quickly and you're from the United States you might hear somebody say do you need to go see a doctor I know it can be a little confusing but I think when it comes to using thewwa especially with these words that I'm talking to you about right here like uh Y and T I think it really helps just to get more listening so the schah even though it is a weak sound and and it's still it's the most common sound in English it's kind of like the magic elixir of the American accent I want to take a quick moment and tell you about how you can speak directly with me and practice your speaking improve your pronunciation and that is by enrolling in my speaking course called speak up check out the link Down Below in the description the course is all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally the course includes weekly classes with me using Zoom so you'll talk to me and your other classmates and there are weekly PDFs about a variety of different topics we do different speaking activities the course also includes weekly pronunciation video lessons there are also lesson preview videos resource guides a couple of audio lessons there there's a lot so please check out that link Down Below in the description if you are interested in improving your speaking fluency and best of all you can use the code speak 10 to get a 10% discount if you have any questions please send me an email at info@ Interactive englishvideolessons.net so we have words like time versus dime you can hear that difference between the T and the D but the flap T which is very common in the United States it sounds like a soft D and well let's let's look at the word water so when I say water you probably hear that t and it's going to sound a little more like a soft D water if I were to say this with a an aspirated T sound like a true t- sound you'd hear people well many people from all over the world say it like this it would sound like water water it does take a little bit more effort than just using the flap te and saying water water and so in in that case I can understand if somebody were to make the argument that yes American pronunciation it's it's pretty lazy in this case yeah yeah we're we're kind of lazy when it comes to the flap T so you may say a t as a flap T when it comes between two vowel sounds like like water or city or beautiful you can say a t as a flap T when it comes after an r and before a vowel in words like party or dirty and you could say a t as a flap T when it comes after a Vel and before a dark l in words like bottle or little this is just the tip of the iceberg when it comes to words in which people will use the flap T and I I think what makes it even more challenging is that this also applies to phrases as well think of the if somebody gives you like the command and they say get in the car if I were to link get in now that T it's going to come between those two vowel sounds and I could use the flap T so instead of saying get in the car I could say get in the car get in the car and I I think subtitles can be very helpful when it comes to well understanding which words use the flap T because you're able to see the spelling and listen to the pronunciation at the same time but the flap te it's very American my next pronunciation hack and I I think this is a pretty simple one is just to pronounce certain words like Americans do and what I mean by this is that there are a variety of words in which American English and British English differ and both forms are are accepted both are fine but if you're traveling in the United States and you want to make sure that there is no misunderstanding when it comes to pronunciation it's good to be aware of some of these differences when it comes to some of the words like like the ones that I'm about to share with you so let's start with the word advertisement I'm giving you both the IPA and the phonetic spelling so so that you can see the pronunciation so in the US I would say advertisement in the UK people would say advertisement this word I would say vitamin but in the UK people would say vitamin now to me this is a tomato but but many other people would say it's a tomato and then we have this word right here aluminum which actually in the UK and I think many other parts of the English-speaking World they even spell it differently and pronounce it differently which is aluminium so this is not something that that you need to study but really just just be aware of it because I I think over time as you are listening to people speak English who are from the United States maybe you're listening to them out on the street or or in a movie or TV show you are naturally going to become familiar with the way people pronounce individual words and my final pronunciation hack is for you to develop a rhythm and flow to your speech because well language it's like music especially English and and I don't think that this is anything that is distinctly

American I think all English varieties have a rhythm in flow but the the real question then becomes well well how do you do this one way to try and do this is to speak in phrases with some slight pauses and not word for word so when I just said that I I was giving you an example so let's go back let's rewind listen to it again and and see if you can hear that that Rhythm and flow that I was just talking about one way to try and do this is to speak in phrases with some slight pauses and not word for word so I just took this one sentence and broke it into four different phrases which kind of gives it a nice natural flow instead of well saying it word for word which may end up sounding a bit more robotic one way to try and do this is to speak in phrases with some slight pauses and not word for word okay I it it doesn't sound natural I was trying to say this sentence at the same speed but I think you can hear a difference when when I said those too now I I know that this can be challenging because when you're you're learning another language or when you're in the middle of a conversation you might be searching for the next word that you want to use or maybe you're even doing some translating in your head and when that happens I think you're you're more likely to end up speaking word for word now there's nothing wrong with that but I think over time as you get more exposure to the language and you're you're able to listen to that Rhythm and flow the more practice that you get speaking and having different conversations and feeling more comfortable talking about a variety of different topics then I I think that you're not going to need to speak word for word you'll be familiar with the conversation and you'll be able to focus on speaking in those phrases and developing that natural Rhythm and flow so I hope you enjoyed these pronunciation hacks and you can you feel like you can go out there start a conversation and sound more American but remember you don't have to if you don't want to please hit that like button if you learn something new and also write to me in the comments I always love hearing from you and remember check out that link down below if you'd like to sign up for the speaking course speak up so that you can talk directly with me thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

PUNS IN ENGLISH | Examples of a Play on Words

hello everyone welcome to today's lesson so this if this is your first time here at interactive English the channels just all about trying to help you guys practice and improve your English skills and please especially if this is your first time write your name in the comments say hello tell me where you're from we love hearing from different people and even if this is your first time and you are with us live in the chat write your name tell me where you're from always love meeting new people so today's lesson is I really like today's lesson it's going to be all about puns so puns I really I say I enjoy today's lesson not only because I think it's it's a little funnier it's because I like lessons where I learn new things so even though I am an English teacher I am constantly learning new things about the English language and doing a topic like this and talking about puns I learned some new things and I love doing that and then I can just go ahead and share it with all of you so I just want to give quick shout out and say hello to lolly dev Daniel Abraham Ibrahim Nisha honey hello so Maya Luisa Aden how are you guys thank you guys for joining me today and this lesson I can tell you well if you don't know what a pun is let me I'll just go ahead and tell you and give you the meaning so a pun is a humorous use of a word or phrase that has several meanings or that sounds like another word and often you would use a pun in when you when you're telling a joke many jokes would have a pun which is why they're funny and we're going to look at some of those today or you may people may just use puns when in everyday conversation sometimes it may be intentional and they tried to use a pun in order to be funny and other times it's it's just on accident and they didn't really mean to do it but it would because of the situation they used a pun so puns are meant to be funny and I can say that this lesson all right this lesson is going to be punny all right that's a fault I apologize that's just a terrible joke but it is an example that I wanted to give you instead of punny it sounds a little like funny so this is somewhat of a pun it's more of a play on words because this is something else you hear when talking about puns and it's a play on words or wordplay which is when you're using words in a very creative and imaginative way in order to be funny so I apologize that's a very bad joke but let's I want to get into telling you why why am I doing this so there is a book in case any of you are out there looking for new books to read especially if you love to read in English which is something that I highly recommend this is a book that I have taught English learners before it's called the Phantom Tollbooth and the reason why this book it made me think about doing a lesson like this is because when I've taught this book to other English learners it's it's pretty challenging and the reason why it's very difficult is because this book has so many different puns and wordplay and sometimes as a person trying to learn another language it can be very difficult to identify that and try to understand well why this might be funny so if you if you really want to challenge yourself if you are interested and really challenge yourself in a way to see if you can identify some of these puns and understand what they mean and why it's funny I recommend this book alright excellent awesome thank you for joining the team excellent the other thing I want to point out just to give you an example in this book look at the dog it's a watch dog and that word has two different meanings in English so a watch dog in English is a dog that you may see that is protecting somebody's or its protecting their property it's called a watchdog now it has another meaning a watchdog is also an organization or could be a person that watches over another group to make sure that they are doing what they should be doing to make sure that they're doing their work that okay you're doing what they should be doing this this person or a group is considered a watchdog now in the story that that is the dog's job his job he's watching over this other group of people and making sure that they are doing their work and they are doing what they should be doing so that is a he is a watchdog his job but he is also he's also a dog that has a clock on him a watchdog so it has double meanings like that but that's what made me think of doing this lesson so let's go ahead and talk about some different types of puns now this is where I say I enjoyed learning about this topic because I learn new things because this you don't need to learn the different types of puns the reason why I'm showing it to you is that I hope that it helps you understand the puns a little bit easier and it helps you understand well why this is funny and why is this a play on words so these are not terms like I did not know this before that there was such as a homophonic pun but it is a type of pun and what this type of pun is it uses homonyms which are words that sound the same but they have different meanings so these are words that sound the same but they have different meanings it is a type of pun let me give you an example so the first one it says frog parking only all others will be towed so I I will ask all of you right now which word do you see that is a homonym all right which of these words is a homonym and I'd use this one because I thought I saw it I thought it was funny but this is a good example of a homonym ik poem where our hominid McClung in which it's using a homonym in order to be funny it's humorous all right frog parking only all others will be towed now the hominem that you see in there is the word toad so if you're thinking about parking instead of saying like toad it would really be toad I'm writing it in there and to tow somebody is to well you you take their car and you move it to another place to tow someone's car so in this case instead of saying toad like you're moving a car it's talking about a toad which is a type of frog it's those those big frogs that is a toad so this is a good example of a hominid mcbomb where's your use a pun in which you're using a homonym and i thought it was kind of funny entertaining the next type of pun is a Hama graphic pun now this is a pun that uses words that are spelled the same but sound different okay a Hama graphic pun the words are spelled the same but they sound different all right so let me give you an example of a Hama graphic pun and I want you to see see if you can identify the word that I'm talking about which makes this a homograph ik pun alright I'm gonna I'm not gonna read it because I don't want to to give it away I want you to read this and which word makes this a homograph ik pun in which the word has two different pronunciations that you can pronounce this word two different ways depending on what you're trying to say all right and that's what makes this funny this is this is a quote it was the name I think of an album by REO Speedwagon back in the late 70s but I think this this may be taken from a quote from a book by Douglas Adams who was a famous author he wrote Hitchhiker's Guide to the galaxy great book great movie but I think that is where this cover now wait someone who's saying tune alright you guys are kind of right what makes this we're gonna come back to this pun to what makes this a homograph ik pun is not actually tuned and tuna its bass so look at that last word all right you can tuna fish but you can't tuna you you can tune a guitar but you can't tuna fish unless you play it could either be bass or bass so unless you play bass bass is a type of fish alright that is actually that's a picture of a bass right there it's a big fish but it's a type of fish unless you play bass but it's a Hama Hama graphic poem pun because you can also pronounce that word it has the same spelling as bass all right bass is a well it's a type of guitar the bass guitar so you can see in this picture I have a picture of a bass and the bass is playing the bass okay so what bass is a type of fish a bass the same spelling is a type of guitar so that's what makes it a homograph ik pun the first part tune tune a guitar or tuna fish remember those are that is the same pronunciation actually so we're talking about a word that spelled the same but has a different pronunciation this is a tricky one it is a tricky one n right yes so I told you we're gonna come back to this in just a moment and I'll explain it a little more in just a second so let me talk about the next kind of pun that you have is this one is a homonym ik pun now again these are words that I I had no idea that a homonym ik pun existed but hopefully it'll help you understand it a little bit more when I show you the example so this involves a word that is spelled and sounds the same but has a different meaning alright so it involves a word that is spelled and sounds the same it has a different meaning so and I would it involves a word that it doesn't have to be the exact spelling or well let me show you the example and this will obvious so a homonym ik pun and mm okay homonym ik pun words that sound the same spelled and sound the same but has a different meaning okay so here is like a little comic and you see that those in case you don't know those are bullets and it's like you have a little family of bullets and the the person's asking what happened to you and this other bullet over here came home and he says I got fired so in this case the word fired that is what makes this a homonym ik poem it's spelled the same has the same pronunciation but you have these different meanings okay so he got fired like in this case it's like you get fired from your job but also if a bullet you're talking about you you fire a bullet with a gun so the job of a bullet is well typically if you get fired the job is over so the bullet is saying I got fired and he lost his job in that case all right so that's an example of a homonym ik pun and I thought that that was funny so fired is the key word there the next type of pun is a compound pun and this is a pun that contains more than one pun and this is when I said I'm gonna go back to this example because you could say you can tune a guitar but you can't tuna fish that is also a pun that is a homograph ik pun like the first one we did because we're talking about tune something to tune a guitar is to tune it to make sure it sounds right that that the guitar is tuned and tuna fish it is something that well tuna is a type of fish but if you talk about tuna fish it's typically it's a meal it's food it's something you eat so you can tune a guitar but you can't tune a fish that would be a homophonic pun alright it's it sounds the same but these are different words unless you play bass or bass that is the hama graphic pun so because you have two puns in here it's you could also say it's a compound pun you're using more than one pun so that is an example of a compound pun let me show let's do this one a recursive pun so this is another type of pun it requires understanding the first half of the joke in order to understand the second half of the joke I'll give you an example and hopefully this makes sense that a recursive pun you need to have it's almost like you need to understand something in the beginning in order to understand why something else is funny so for example this is a good example so may 4th the date is considered international Star Wars day actually I didn't know that until yesterday until until I look that up yesterday so may May 4th is the date that's considered International Star Wars day and this is a popular this is like a slogan that they would say may the 4th be with you alright now if you have not seen the movie star wars this may not be that funny but if you have seen the movie and you understand that first part of the joke then you somebody might say this and it's funny it's entertaining because instead instead of saying may the 4th be with you in the movie yes on assume says mommy mommy yes instead of 4th in the movie they say force all throughout Star Wars all those they say this throughout I'm writing it may the force be with you all right so force sounds a lot like forth which is why this is funny but if somebody has not seen the movie this is not going to make that much sense and you may not think this is funny so this is an example of a recursive pun that in order to understand why this is funny you need to understand the first part of the joke to begin with alright so this is another type of pun now like I told you you don't need to understand oh well what is a recursive pun what's a Hama Hama Hama graphic pun the reason why I'm showing you that showing you that is that hopefully it helped you understand those jokes a little better because puns are typically something you see in writing I think it's common so let's look at some more examples but first I did want to talk about some expressions using the word pun so I think a more common one somebody might say no pun intended and when somebody says no pun intended it means that they're going to use a pun but they didn't mean to they didn't really want to but they are using one anyway so somebody could say no pun intended or they might say pardon the pun both of them have the same meaning that you're using a pun because of some situation but it's not because you it's not because you wanted to it's because you could and I'll give you an example more commonly I think you might hear people say no pun intended and they would typically say that at the beginning or actually they they would typically say that at the end so after they say the pun then they might say look no pun intended so let me show you another example this is a conversation I came up with this yesterday maybe it's a bad example but hopefully it makes sense so here the the first part would be that you have a father and a son and the son is saying to the father he says hey dad my friends and I are going camping in the graveyard I don't know why they would want to go camping in the graveyard but this is the boy is telling his father we're going camping in the graveyard and the father says over my dead body no pun intended all right now over my dead body this is an idiom which somebody could use that means that you are completely against something if you're saying no you are absolutely not going to do this over my dead body so I'm gonna go ahead and write that in case you did not know the meaning of that idiom over one's dead body is used used to say that someone is completely and I'd emphasize completely completely against something so in this case the father is saying look you are not going camping over my dead body no pun intended so the reason why that's a pun is because again a graveyard would be full of dead bodies so this would be this would be an example of a way in which somebody could use that expression no pun intended were you you're having a conversation you use a pun but maybe you don't mean to and you could tell that look no pun intended but you're going to use it so hopefully again that makes sense in this situation so let's go ahead now and I want to show you just some different puns just because I think they're humorous they're funny and try to identify why you think again this is funny so I like this one and I got I got some of these from a website which I will link down in the description below and the website just lists I think it was like 80 of the funniest puns and this is good reading practice to go through and read and see if you can identify what the joke is so this says light travels faster than sound that's why some people appear bright and until you hear them speak all right now the reason why this is funny is because of the word bright it has two different meanings bright could be talking about light or bright could be talking about a person's intelligence if I say oh you guys you're very bright it means you're very smart so in this case it's saying light travels faster than sound because some people may look right maybe they look like they're very smart and then you hear them speak and then you think bitten several other people on the other teams and it's it's very strange it's very weird it's it's not good but after this happened this article came out and said it had to be true and instead of saying it had to be you which is a famous song by Frank Sinatra and I think other people have done follow-ups to that song they changed you to chew because they sound a little similar and he's talking about him chewing on another person it had to be true the other one is talking about utter devastation so in this case the word if you're talking about devastation a common collocation somebody could say that there was utter devastation all right this is a common collocation that these words are frequently used together if you want to say that there was devastation you could really say that there was a line say oh there was utter devastation but instead of saying utter they're using the word utter and they're probably using that word I'm just guessing I have not read the article is because there were otters that were causing a lot of problems that were destroying things the otters were causing the devastation so that is why they chose this title for the article there's otter devastation which is funny because they're saying instead of saying utter utter devastation utter devastation so puns are something that you find in not just you know jokes that friends might say but you may see it in on the cover of a newspaper or on the cutter cover of a magazine so let's look at this next one this is another good one I thought it was funny I don't know why so this is you have a lighter which is meeting a highlighter and the lighter says highlighter which a highlighter is a type of like marker that you use to highlight some information people might use them to highlight most students might use them to highlight important information in books you have that tool on the computer you have a tool that says highlighter you can you can highlight important information so the lighter says highlighter and then the highlighter says high lighter all right so they're saying the same things it's a pun it's funny no no I thought it was funny the next one is this one I thought this was good I was wondering why the ball was getting bigger then it hit me all right what do you think why why is this pun funny or why is this a pun why is it funny which phrase has two different meanings what do you think I was wondering hmm I was wondering why the ball was getting bigger and then it hit me alright so the phrase in there that has two different meanings is then it hit me so if you're thinking about the what would actually happen alright I was wondering why this ball was getting bigger and then it hit me so the ball is getting bigger because it's coming closer and closer and closer and then it hits this person it actually hits them maybe in the head I don't know but if you also say something like oh and then it hit me yes excellent I think you guys got it so if you say something oh then it hit me it means that you you finally understood something alright so I think one of the key words in there is wondering if you're wondering something like hmm why is this happening why is this happening oh and then it hit me alright so it finally means that you finally understood something you realized some situation and then you could say that so in that case then it hit me could mean like the ball actually hits this person or it means like the person they finally understand why the ball is getting bigger so it works both ways in that case so that is why this is a pun and it's a funny one let's just do one more quick one so this is another one that I think was taken out of a newspaper and it's ketchup talking to a hot dog it says it was nice to meet you and it says yes hope to see you soon so we can catch up so again this is an example of a homophonic pun because we're using words that sound the same these homonyms it was nice to meet you instead of meat is a homonym because instead of saying meat it has the same pronunciation as meat to meet somebody to greet them it's nice to meet you and again I hope to see you soon so we can catch up so the ketchup the scent which I think this one is a little easier to understand to catch and if you don't know that phrase to catch up with someone it means that you you want to get back together with a person so that you can talk and see what's going on in their lives this is something that people say I think quite often like oh you know if you say goodbye to somebody you say oh yeah let's let's catch up soon let's catch up real soon or like when are we gonna get together we really need to catch up it means that you need to meet and discuss what's happening in your life you want to catch up with someone so that is a great phrasal verb to know to catch up with someone alright so those are all different examples we've talked about these different types of puns and I told you you don't necessarily need to learn you don't need to learn that different names the types hopefully it helped you understand them a little bit better but I do I want to thank you guys for joining me and again what oh here we are if you guys like what we do and you do want to sponsor and support interactive English you can get a membership on YouTube somebody got a membership today uh it was raw was it Rob or rod excellent rod yes there's links in the description down below for either a membership on YouTube or patreon links are in the description there are some cool rewards and we are we're always thinking of different ways to engage with our members maybe I've been doing some like sneak preview lessons and I'm constantly trying to katroo desk Orlando Luna Aiden good to see you Lali Martha thank you guys for joining me today Juwanna I hope you have I hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and I hope you join me next weekend for another live lesson thank you guys so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Phrasal Verb Quiz | Advanced Grammar & Vocabulary

hello and welcome to today's lesson my name is wes and this is interactive english and if this is your first time here with us we are all about helping you guys practice and improve your english skills and the way that we will do that today is is very fun it's very useful because i have an interactive quiz that i'm going to give you and i want all of you to participate in this quiz and take this quiz with me and this quiz is all about phrasal verbs i am going to give you a phrasal verb quiz which is perfect because so many people out there so many learners in our community want to learn more about phrasal verbs they want to practice using phrasal verbs because this is this can be pretty tricky when it comes to learning english and they're very challenging for two reasons all right so why are they difficult to learn the first reason is that you could take the phrasal verb is made up of a verb and a preposition all right and you could take one verb and change that preposition so let's take the verb take and you could put many different prepositions at the end of that take on take out take over take through take back and each of those phrasal verbs will have a different meaning but not only that the next part as to why it's so difficult is that one phrasal verb can have multiple meanings that are used in very different contexts so this is what makes phrasal verbs really challenging and that's why it's a great way it's just great to practice because i think personally probably some of the best ways to learn phrasal verbs is first is just to read all right many of you it's it's okay if you want to learn a phrasal verb and you look up the meaning it's so that's perfectly okay but you may forget it later on so it's just it's good to keep reading because the more exposure you get to the language the more likely you're going to remember the next great way is what we're going to do today which is just to practice practice practice and practice our skills and hopefully it'll just start to sink in the more you practice all right what's up gibson all right there you go so uh let's let's just jump into it right now and let's take the quiz okay so for the first part i've started from easy to difficult all right i am going to give you the question and i will give you some multiple choices but i also give you the meaning of the phrasal verb so here is your first question some learners think it's difficult to pick um english all right what preposition completes that sentence all right so the phrasal verb is to pick um all right and i give you the meaning too it just means it means to learn okay so which which how would you complete that sentence write your answer in the chat even if you're watching this later i want you guys to participate in the lesson you have that comment section treat it like a piece of paper and write your answer in the comments so that i know you are participating you you are trying to improve your skills okay so awesome all right i see some amazing answers yes muhammad uh sorry if i mispronounced names who saw naimo suresh uh lolly perfect junior great job the answer is a up to pick up means to learn so here are some example sentences and each one has a different meaning for pickup i am not going to go through all of them i'm just going to go through some of them so again you can see how it's used in context with each different meaning the phrasal verb pick up i will tell you it has it has like over a dozen different meanings so these are just a few of them so like some learners think it's difficult to pick up english you you might think it's difficult to learn english you could also talking ab you can also use this in the context of picking up a musical instrument or maybe picking up some activity and you're trying to learn it another common way it's used right there my mom told me to pick up my room so in this case you're talking about cleaning and organizing your room to pick up the the you could pick up your bedroom you can pick up the living room you're talking about around the home you're just picking things up you're tidying up or somebody might say could you please pick me up around eight o'clock in that context they're talking about pick someone up to go get someone and maybe you're going to get them at home maybe they're out somewhere else and often you're talking about picking them up in a car so it's like hey pick me up around this time you're going in a car to get somebody you're picking them up and another meaning down there who's going to pick up the bill i think again once once you see these sentences you can try to put them in context and i hope it helps and it makes it a little easier to pick up a bill means to just pay to pay for the bill to pick up the bill so again i'm not going to go through all the meanings but just just a few of them so again you guys can see how they're used in context and i understand yeah this is what makes phrasal verbs so challenging all right your next question is right here all right so i'd say i'm tired i'm gonna go turn what what would it be how would i complete that sentence i'm tired i'm going to go turn and the meaning of that phrasal verb to turn um it's just to go to bed now okay well i'll i'll tell you in just a second i don't want to give it up just yet so again if you're just joining us for this we are taking a phrasal verb quiz in which i am asking you questions and i want you guys to write the answer write the answer in the chat or write the answers in the comments don't be shy don't worry if you're making a mistake just it's all about practice practice practice practice all right so what does it mean if you're going to go to bed take on take in take down take back all right so this one it is i think wow okay a little more confusing uh i see uh nilafar excellent all right great job we have oh so arty well done annan the answer is b in i'm going i'm tired i'm going to turn in so if you're going to turn in it means you're going to bed this one is it was a little more difficult because i i don't think that it you know it's not like people say that all the time so this was a little more challenging i'm going to try and keep making it a little challenging for you but you could hear this if you're watching a tv show or a movie and just say you know i'm going to turn in i'm going to go to bed i'm tired i'm going to turn in another way that it's used i thought this was too easy which is why i didn't want to give it to you to turn in to submit something all right you were doing something and it's often used in like a school context all right i want you to turn in your homework and this is what i want you guys to do your homework right now i want you to turn it in and i want you your homework is to hit that like button alright hit that like button right down there if you enjoy learning phrasal verbs if you enjoy taking these quizzes then then that way i know okay i need to make more quizzes about phrasal verbs because everybody has turned in their homework and they have hit that like button all right the next context would be to turn in like i gave it like okay turn in turn your toes in all right you're taking your whoops let me line up there we go you're turning in all right physically you're turning your toes in all right you're putting something making forcing it inward and then the last context

i tried to i tried to find a picture of a police officer i think he looks a little like a pilot but don't get confused that is a police officer little emoji person down there he turned himself into the police so in that context when you turn yourself in you are basically admitting to some wrongdoing some kind of crime so you turn yourself into the police or again that's the most common way it's used you could say oh you know something happened at school i'm going to turn myself in i'm going to admit that i did something wrong all right um oh shadra you did the homework excellent you hit that like button that's what i like to see perfect okay all right so let's continue the quiz now i'm gonna make it a little more difficult because now i still want you to complete the phrasal verb with the preposition but this time i'm not going to give you the meaning i just want you to try and put the meaning in context based on the sentence okay so here is your next question all right and yes i can't help it uh my wife and i we just had a little baby so i like i just like throwing these examples out there i think little emmy amelia is going to take um her mother so that is the phrasal verb take um all right i'm not i'm not giving you the meaning what is it is it take over take back take after take from all right so think about this this situation if if you haven't and again even if you're unsure just take a guess all right i would always encourage you guys just to practice practice practice take a guess don't worry if if you're getting if it's not right all right it's not about that it's all about practicing so all right yes excellent um perfect uh junior lolly mohammed uh serious lotta yes the answer is c after all right i think this one maybe maybe is a little easier i think little emmy is going to take after her mother the reason why i said maybe this is a little easier because it really just has one meaning and this this is my question for you and i want you to practice using it in the comments who do you think you take after more your mother or father who do you take after your mother or father let me know in the chat write me a sentence practice using the phrasal verb or let me know in the comments so i know yes this person is participating in the lesson so again this this phrasal verb has just one meaning which is great you can breathe a sigh of relief so that you don't have to try to remember different meanings if you take after somebody it just means that you are are like them your personality is is similar to this person and oftentimes we use it when talking about children or and their parents or or people within the family and you could say oh you know i i like to stay up late all right maybe little emmy's going to take after me and she will also stay up late we have the same characteristics similar similarities all right um what else oh lolly said uh i take after my old father all right perfect great example either naturally okay it's okay sometimes you people don't take after their mother or father all right um excellent gibson both perfect so again to take after somebody it means you have those similar characteristics next question all right is right here he's having trouble getting um the breakup okay he's having trouble getting um the breakup again if you're just joining us we are doing a phrasal verb quiz i'm asking you a bunch a bunch of different questions i just want you guys to to participate and and answer these questions in the chat or in the comments okay so context maybe you need to cross a river and you're like okay i need to go from here and i need to go over there and we need to get over there to that point or uh and she needs to get over these hurdles before moving on again you're talking about you're you're getting by some challenge you need to overcome these hurdles before moving on this is something that i would say about my baby girl i can't get over how much she's changed she's four months old i can't get over how much she's changed i'm surprised in that context or he decided to go ahead and get it over with i've added one more preposition to this one and now it is a three-word phrasal verb to get over with all right to get something over with means you just want to finish it you are not excited about this thing you just want to get it over with for example some of you out there you might plan to take the ielts exam now or in the future it's not something that you're really like yeah let's do it i'm excited to take the aisles most of you probably feel like i just want to get it over with i want to take it i want it to be done i want to get it over with so those are some other great examples about how you can use this phrasal verb so next question are you ready all right let me see if she's available please hold um all right which phrasal verb if somebody you know they're having i'm giving you i'm giving you the situation with the picture so you can see what's happening in the picture let me see if she's available please hold um which which phrasal verb is going to uh which which preposition is going to complete that phrasal verb so that it makes sense what do you guys think all right yes perfect uh excellent answers uh lolly junior rohan uh stephanie uh d dino apple what's up how deep seth perfect so again i think this was maybe a little easier please hold on the correct answer is d on let me see if she's available please hold on in that context this just means please hold on please wait a moment and i think we often use this phrasal verb when on the phone you're talking about you're on the phone with somebody you said okay wait please wait a moment just say hey hold on for just one second somebody's knocking at the door please hold on or we can say you know in this case hold on to my hand you're actually holding on to somebody's hand you are holding on here's a an expression that you might hear from time to time if somebody's telling a story and it's a very scary story and they're like oh my gosh they were holding on for dear life you you were able to survive something that was very scary and you're just like oh i was holding on for dear life i was very scared that something bad was going to happen i was holding on for dear life or in the context of sports i'd say the team held on to a close victory the team survived they held on they still won so if you're saying like if somebody just says well the team held on then you know that that team won but they did not win by a lot so these last two kind of have a little bit of a similar meaning in that you are able to survive and succeed but one is talking and more about fear and the other one is talking about sports to hold on all right your next question is this right here our teacher wanted us to read um a stack of books all right and i found that picture it was perfect it's a picture of a stack of books so i'd say the teacher wanted uh wanted us to read a stack of books what is what do you think is the correct answer write it in the chat all right you guys you guys are rocking this uh is it read through read along read up read about what do you think if you're just joining us again we're taking a phrasal verb quiz to help you guys again just practice practice practice using phrasal verbs this is how you improve your skills all right um perfect okay yes excellent uh rohan bassam uh lata sirius anil yes the correct answer is through a through our teacher wanted us to read through a stack of books so if you're reading through something then you are reading it from the beginning to the end and this is a question that i have for you all right how many english books do you read through each year each year how many do you read through from the beginning to the end practice using this write your answer tell me tell me in the chat how many how many english books do you read through each year or let me know in the comments again this is one all right just one just one meaning okay which is good so you don't have to memorize or try to think about oh okay it has many different contexts that i have to figure out this phrasal verb to read through it's just to read something from the beginning all the way till the end our teacher wanted us to read through a stack of books all right excellent uh deep chef 20. appreciate honesty i appreciate your candor and that just means i appreciate your honesty um what else uh lolly uh one book okay is he had three um someone kim a half of a book all right hey that's okay i know again it's it's time consuming to read books i would i would say all right it's it's good to read a little bit each day even if you're reading like an online article but other ways that you can use this instead of just talking about reading through books people might talk about it in business reading through uh documents or even more important make sure you read through contracts before you ever sign a contract you should always read through the contract from the beginning till the end that is another great way to use this phrasal verb when talking about contracts read through okay so now we're going to switch it up a little bit more i have some more questions for you this time i it's you don't have to identify the preposition i want you to identify the entire phrasal verb okay so i'm not going to tell you what it means i'll give you the sentence try to put it in context and see if you can identify the phrasal verb so this is there's no picture on this one it's just me as though i were talking to you so i'd say if you miss one of our lessons then you have to um the work which phrasal verb would best complete that sentence all right it really is just uh i guess really i think just one really makes sense what would you use all right if you miss one of our lessons then you have to um the work and maybe if i were to really kind of get into character and say this i'd kind of tell you in a little bit of a scolding way oh this is this is what you you have to do you have to um the work all right do you have to pay back the work do you have to turn in the work do you have to do over the work or do you have to make up the work what do you guys think all right this one uh maybe okay a little more challenging yes now carla excellent lotta sanguan anil perfect all right the correct answer is d make up if you miss one of our lessons then you have to make up the work so the key is like you're missing something so you have to make it up and if you're making something up then that means well you still have to do it and often it's used in talking about well you have to make up the work you still have to do the work you could also maybe talk about making up time all right you you missed out on the time you have to make up the time and actually still do this thing we can also use makeup because it does have different meanings he's great at making up excuses okay and if somebody is making up excuses then they are just creating excuses you're like it's like you're making up a story you're creating a story so in that context it's like to create something often using you got to use your imagination if you want to make up stories or make up good excuses or i could say in this context women make up half of the workforce i'm talking about something as a percentage of something else or it's a part of something else so women make up half of the workforce they make up 50 of the workforce or i could say something you know makes up 10 or it makes up 50 of something else and that last one um why don't you just kiss and make up if somebody were to say this then it just means to to make things right again two people are are fighting and somebody says just just kiss and make up all right you want to make up with that person so that you're no longer fighting you're friends again that's the that's the context uh in which in which you use this make up all right so let's look at the next one all right i don't want to do it now i'll just um until later all right this is a separable phrasal verb notice i put the direct object between the verb and the preposition okay so again try to put it in context it is going to go between which phrasal verb is it put it off work it off break it off or turn it off which phrasal verb best completes that that sentence what do you think write your answer in the chat or write it in the comments because i just want to hear from you guys okay so uh yes excellent all right you guys doing great with this one yes rohan lali lata mohammed perfect you would put it off i don't want to do it now that is that's your key right there i'll just put it off until later in that case if you put something off until later you are delaying it you are doing it later i think all of us have been there we have something that we have to do but we put it off until later we don't want to do it now we put it off we can also use it in these other contexts right here if somebody says i'm really put off by their behavior if somebody is put off by somebody's behavior or they're put off by something it just means that they dislike it they they don't like it they don't um they just feel like okay this thing i don't care for it i think it's a little you know disgusting revolting i'm put off by it and i i think we could you'd often maybe find it in the context of talking about somebody's behavior the way somebody's acting i'm put off by their behavior or in this case we can put put the meeting off until next week all right you put something off you you are delaying it until later actually now i think yes maybe maybe i made a slight mistake there but it's okay give you another example again that meaning is the same you are delaying it you are doing it later you put something off so again uh the first one i don't want to do it now i'll put it off to later same as the second one the meaning is the same to delay something we put the meeting off until next week and often i think this phrasal verb right here when it's used like that is separable you you are putting whatever it is the it or the work you're talking about or the thing you're going to delay will go between the verb and the preposition okay so now this is going to make it a little more challenging i hope i think i am not going to give you any options i'm going to give you a sentence and i want you to complete it with a phrasal verb i want you to think about which phrasal verb would best complete the sentence are you ready so i i and i tried to make it i think maybe this is a little easy because again i'm not giving you options so i didn't want to make it too difficult um every day my alarm clock um at 9 00 am every day my alarm clock um at 9 00 am which phrasal verb do you think best completes this sentence all right i and again i i have an answer for you um there may be more than you know one answer maybe you think of something that i haven't thought of just yet i'll let you know all right every day my alarm clock um at 9 00 a.m all right junior perfect all right some of you okay lynn perfect all right some of you are just putting the phrasal verb other of you like those names i mentioned are actually using the correct subject verb agreement every day my alarm clock goes off at 9 00 am right there remember my alarm clock goes off at 9 00 am but yes the correct phrasal verb for for the uh for the rest of you many of you got this correct to go off when you're talking about an alarm the alarm would go off it would sound you can also use this phrasal verb in these other contexts right here they started running as soon as the gun went off all right the gun was fired so in that case something goes off like uh a bomb would go off the the gun would go off it's fired it's exploding all right and or you could say again somebody like a parent might say to their child all right stay with us don't go off on your own if somebody goes off it could just mean they wander off to a different location to a different place and again maybe a parent would say this to their child don't go off on your own i want you to stay with us or in this final example the electricity went out in the past tense during the thunderstorm in that case the the electricity when that goes out it means it's just it turns off all right there is no more power the electricity went out all right next one are you ready so this one they were um in the ocean at sunset all right i give you the picture i feel a little awkward in this picture right now because i feel like i'm next to them and it's like okay you know i feel a little uncomfortable that i'm here i'm staring over your shoulder uh they're having this private moment but i'm also here so what would what could you say all right you know they're they're romantic um they were in the ocean at sunset what phrasal verb would best complete that sentence maybe this is a little more difficult okay which what do you think all right um all right some of you some of you are kind of close close all right uh yes junior anil perfect uh serious so in the picture you see that they're they're just kissing and if we want to say somebody is kissing then we just say they are making out make out is to kiss passionately and often i'd say it's a way to describe other people you're not really unless you're like younger maybe in high school or you're a kid you would ask somebody like your your boyfriend or girlfriend say oh let's make out but usually it's used to describe other people say oh i was walking through the park and everybody was making out all right so it's just talking about kissing passionately the phrasal verb has other meanings too all right we're having a tough time making out what she's saying all right we're having a tough time understanding what she's saying we can't we can't make it out we don't know what's happening all right we can't understand we can't make it out or if i say again who should i make the check out to if you're making a check out to somebody then you are writing somebody a check you are making it out and you are signing away on this check and you are making it out to someone all right so if somebody says who should i make it out to they're asking for a name what name should they write down or this last expression if somebody says ah they made out like a bandit then that just means that they if somebody made out like a bandit the end result all right the they succeeded and they got a lot of money because a bandit is somebody who would steal money and it's like oh they made out like a bandit they succeeded and they got a lot of money or they succeeded and in some way that they earned money and maybe it might not be a very ethical way it's like oh they made out like a bandit they really maybe or it could be ethical

it should be fine maybe you buy a house 10 years later you sell the house for a lot more money and you can say yeah i made out like a bandit i made a lot of money all right so if you guys if you understood most of these phrasal verbs i want you to let me know so in the comments i just want you to write i am picking up english quickly that way i know that you understood the lesson you understood the phrasal verbs and that you are picking up english quickly and improving your english skills because that's what i want from you that's what i want for you guys i want you to improve i want you to pick up the language quickly and i hope that our videos our lessons are helping you guys do that so write that in the comments uh when this video is posted or if you're watching this later i'm picking up english quickly so that i know yes this person is learning all right so i hope you guys learned some new phrasal verbs i hope you enjoyed taking this quiz because i would like to do more quiz lessons later on in the future and please if you have not done your homework already hit that like button alright do your homework hit that like button down below write to us in the comments i'm picking up english quickly and you can also find us on social media if you want to keep practicing your english there with us on facebook twitter instagram all right so excellent thank you guys so much for joining me sandra um bushra excellent you're picking up quickly rosalinda excellent krishna thank you i really appreciate it uh be happy now uh gabby serious near new lafar thank you guys so much for for joining me um sorry if i missed your names try and get as many shout outs as i can join me next time we will be back for another live lesson and i hope to see you guys then thanks a lot for watching and i will see you i will see you soon all right so long

Phrasal Verbs Q&A with Interactive English

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson which is a live q a all about phrasal verbs so this this is an opportunity that i just like to take in order to talk more directly with all of you answer some of your questions and the focus of this lesson is phrasal verbs so please as you are writing your questions if you have things you want to ask

let's try to keep it about phrasal verbs because i like to focus these conversations in on one topic in particular and the reason why i chose phrasal verbs is because recently i've had quite a few questions um from people in the comments um asking me about different phrasal verbs uh and it just it's something where that's very challenging when it comes to learning english and there are there are different reasons for that the first one is because phrasal verbs many of them uh they can have different meanings so quite often a phrasal verb will have multiple meanings sometimes uh they can have not just more than two but three or four or five meanings i recently a while back i did a phrasal verb about um pick up and i talk about 20 different meanings for this one phrasal verb and if you haven't seen it i'm going to throw it uh right here in the chat and talk about uh this so this is a a lesson i did a while back um about the phrasal verb pick up and the 20 different meanings it has so that is one reason why phrasal verbs can be really confusing and the other one i think is because sometimes they can be separable or inseparable for example if a phrasal verb is intransitive which means that it does not take a direct object like i i get up which is similar to like when you you get out of bed i get up at six o'clock then that it does that sentence there is no direct obj direct object so you can't separate the verb in the preposition other times if the phrasal verb is transitive in which there is a direct object in the sentence then that can be either separable or inseparable so i know they can be very confusing uh so i want to just give a quick hello to some of you who are with me today uh hello aiden uh good to see you david uh what's up carmen uh black wolf jessica uh sabor jonathan um vicky hello gustav so thank you guys for joining me if you have questions just throw some of them in the chat i will try to highlight them i've also put together a vocabulary document so as we discuss individual phrasal verbs then i'm going to add that to our list and what i will do is i will take this list and once the lesson gets posted i will put all of these phrasal verbs down in the description below in case you want to review um about the meaning of these phrasal verbs uh so hello again who rod hello how's it going good to see you um so if you guys have any questions like if there is a phrasal verb that you find confusing or maybe a sentence that you know of uh throw that in there and i will put that on the put the add that to our list and then talk uh about the meaning but again they can be the these are very tricky um phrases so uh well the first question i think uh vicky gustav brought up a good question about well what what does a phrasal verb mean all right so the difference a phrasal verb is when you have it's a verb the part of speech is a verb that is made up of both a verb and a preposition but when you have those together this verb and the preposition the meaning changes that is different from the original verb okay so for example let me think of the phrasal verb um uh like let's say the phrasal verb uh i'm trying to think of a good example uh okay look after all right look after as a phrasal verb the verb look the meaning is again you're you're looking at something and looking at it with your eyes now look after is a phrasal verb and the meaning changes because look after means you're you're taking care of something or someone and that's what i mean by that when you have this verb and preposition together the meaning is going to change the the meaning is different than just the verb alone um so let's see listen uh luciano uh um get through versus go through okay excellent so if you have some of these other questions um about differences then we can write those down so to get through something what i think most commonly would be used is you're trying to you have some work that you have to do and you're trying to complete it you're trying to just complete this challenge this obstacle and you like for example you're taking a class and like ah i really hate this math class i'm just trying to get through it now to go through means it makes me think that you are looking for something that you are searching through some materials and you are going through it maybe you're going through a book looking for specific information um and in that case you're you might be going through it in order to find information perhaps to correct it and and that would be the difference between those two so uh i'm going to add that to our list and i'll fine tune these a little so to get through um i'm just gonna say is to like endure a challenge or hardship um to go through um would be like to view something um or even revise it all right so let's go back something up is to uh to complete something all right um and usually you would use it in the context you're completing it and then you'll do something else i'm just trying to finish up and then i can do the next thing um to finish off i would say is to stop maybe eliminate or i don't know destroy something and you're just trying to finish it off um because i think you could use it in the context actually of maybe you're you're drinking something um for example i have maybe this water bottle and i'm drinking some somebody wants to have some more and i can say no no no you you finish it off finish it off means you complete the rest of it all right so in that case i think when you're talking about somebody using up the rest of it then you could finish something off but to finish up i think is more off common when you're talking about work something something that you're doing in activity because i would not sell tell somebody this bottle like oh finish it up um i would say yeah people would say you know oh you can finish it off you can complete it uh let's see what else do we have trying to think uh sorry if it's going quickly um low up uh end end up could you explain for the preposition four instead of two in the sentence i'm heading back uh for new york is it correct uh yeah is it michelle leonardo uh gave the sentence i'm heading back for new york uh in this case i think heading back for something it means that you're back two would be you're returning i'm going back to new york um and back for something it makes me think you're going you're returning but in order to do something so um i'm heading back for the house uh in in i think a lot of times they would be interchangeable like if i said you have to go back to your home like oh i'm heading back to the house or i'm heading back for the house i think most people would use back two you're going somewhere you're heading back to this place if you say um back four i'm heading back for uh i'm trying to think if you want to talk about maybe you are um i'm heading back for a sh like something you're going to do like maybe you're going to go take a rest and that's the reason why you're going back like oh i'm heading back for for a quick rest i'm gonna head back for a short rest and then i will continue on with my day so back to again you're heading to this direction back four makes me think there is a purpose there is a reason for going this place so if i say i'm oh i'm heading back for new york um i think mostly i think it sounds a little awkward i would say back to new york um unless you would give a reason like oh i'm heading uh back well you'd still say i'm heading back to new york for something for a meeting or for some purpose uh aidan's ass like uh brush up so that's another good one uh i'm gonna throw it sorry maybe i forgot to add that last one so to brush up um brush up means to um i'd say almost to like review and familiarize yourself um with something you have already studied that for example like uh a language i think it's common you could use that when talking about uh learning a language sorry there's brush up and if you you you're learning english right now maybe you take a break and you stop for maybe six months and then you want to start again you might say well i really i need to brush up on my english i need to go back and review some and and get comfortable using it again so in that case i think of something that you've learned something you've studied or perhaps even an activity that you have done in the past and then you want to brush up on it you mean it means you want to do it again and do a little more practice so that you feel more comfortable with it yet again to brush up on something that is a good one excellent um let's see orlando asks what does it mean to hurry up okay uh i don't know if you're asking that or with my explanations i know my explanations are a bit slow uh but if you tell somebody again to hurry up um it just means to go you know to go faster you're telling somebody hey hurry up and and usually you're saying this and that they there is a lack of time that if you have a time commitment and you need to go somewhere you need to be somewhere you might tell somebody hey hurry up um and in this case it's one of those situations uh in which you could say we need to hurry or we need to hurry up the meaning is really the same you could use either one but i think of hurry up used in the context of time you're late for something oh we need to hurry up um let's see um what else do we have uh yes lol gave it an example i have to brush up on my phrasal verbs this is a good lesson if you want to brush up on your phrasal verbs and kind of review and get some more practice uh let's see open a little water and perp ask about open up so again this brings me um i just had a thought about uh maybe a future lesson so open up is a similar situation um in which you're just talking about to open sometimes you could just use that um interchangeably with that verb like uh you could go to a store and ask the person hey what tomorrow what time will you open up it means the same thing is what time will you open so to open up again it means to to just open for business and i think that's a very common situation in which you would use that to open up if you're talking about a store now you could again i told you phrasal verbs have multiple meanings so let me add the other meaning if you're talking about opening up um like a person so open up could be like a store to open or if you're talking about a person means to i would say to express your feelings or emotions so for example you may use it in the context like for some people you could say it's difficult for them to open up it's difficult for them to it's like they're opening themselves up and expressing their feelings their thoughts their emotions to open up so that is another good that's a good example of a phrasal verb with multiple meanings uh let's see what else do we have sorry it's moving uh quickly um where is it uh claudia asks what's the lean back so to lean back i'm trying to think if there's another multiple meaning so let's see i'll write that down uh lean back is just to recline and i think that um somebody might lean back in their chair and in that case you're just they're talking about you're describing what they're doing that they are reclining back in this chair or um maybe you want to people might lean back to get more comfortable but often i think it would be used when people are sitting down inside some type of chair and you say oh you can you can lean back think about an airplane um all of those seats they recline so you could say some people want to they want to lean their seat back they want to take the seat and recline it back and uh sometimes because i'm very tall that that kind of that can bother me sometimes if uh if the person in front of me leans their chair all the way back and then it just hits my knees um so yes that is a good example i think when you think about airplanes and flying in those chairs they lean back uh let's see where else uh ooh mustafa asked about um bail out so to bail someone out means uh i'll write that down right here in this case bail out you're talking about uh bail out i think you could kind of talk about it to save or rescue um rescue someone for example if you somebody has a problem and somebody helped them solve that problem you could say that they they bailed me out that they really they came to my rescue and they helped me they they bailed me out or if you're talking about uh in a more specific context if somebody goes to jail you could bail someone out of jail and in that case means to uh to get someone released released from jail so to bail someone out it could be either one depending on the context if they go to jail then you could say that you bailed them out of jail in a way you did come to their rescue and you saved them or you could also say in just talking about a problem like oh i i had this um i needed to go travel somewhere but my car my car was broken it was in the shop my friend they let me borrow their car they really bailed me out that they were able to help out and rescue oh excellent thank you hello lolly perfect uh new member thank you for joining uh and becoming a member uh that's something i'll typically i mention at the end if any of you guys want to get a membership support what we do uh there are some different cool rewards that we offer you can do that on youtube or patreon but i will i will let you know about that a little later on so let me see if i can find um some more phrasal verbs okay um i'm going to try to get with different people a mint me says to pass out or pass away that that is uh that's a good distinction so if you say that somebody passes out it means that they kind of they they like they faint and the faint to faint is when maybe it's really hot and you're and you pass right out and you kind of go unconscious or maybe i think it's often used if somebody's drinking they're drinking a lot of alcohol then maybe they will pass out later they fall asleep really easily and they just pass right out to pass away is more it's used to talk about somebody who who has died um that if somebody dies and i think it's a little more of i don't want to say not like necessarily a polite way but more of maybe a gentler way of saying it because the word die can sound pretty um pretty intense a little bit uh depending so i think oftentimes we'd say like oh you know my grandmother she passed away a few years ago to pass away in that case would mean that somebody dies so pass out um i'm just going to add that to our list to pass out would mean like to go unconscious um or suddenly maybe sleep like if somebody's drinking way too much and they pass out to pass away just means if somebody were to die

let's see we have let's see um joe already asked about the stress of the phrasal verb uh i want to say a lot of these verbs it really depends um many verbs are just one syllable so i still think if you're i don't think between if you're talking about stressing the verb or the preposition the stress i think the emphasis would really go on the verb because that is the main part of sentence like to pass out um but i feel like even when i say it in a normal sentence like oh somebody passed away last year uh maybe there is a little more of an emphasis on that that main verb over the preposition again it really depends on the situation when it comes to intonation and emphasis of what you're trying to say who you're talking to um and how like how much you know how much how much feeling or emotion that you want to put into it uh but i feel like that if you're gonna choosing one prepositions in general those are function words they're not really gonna you're they're not really going to receive any type of stress or emphasis in general let's see what do we got um ooh uh claudia double down um that's a good one i want to talk about that because i feel like that's something that maybe you might hear um lately if somebody doubles down so you would double down on something and if you say to double down [Music] sometimes i think it might even be hyphenated to double down and in that case i don't know if it really be a phrasal verb uh maybe it's not it would just be a uh so to double down means to to reiterate and i would say to reiterate means to to say again um your same position um and basically refuse to change your um opinion let me give you an example so for if somebody takes a position about something i'll i'll just do something that's more um maybe uh innocuous and less harmful like oh school uniforms maybe some people think school uniforms are really bad and other people think that oh there's a there's a lot of value to school uniforms and i come out and i say school uniforms are terrible and then all of this information comes out saying why they're good and instead of me changing my opinion i double down and i say something no no no they're terrible and you're not changing your opinion you're restating your same position and usually you're doing this after there has been criticism or people are trying to show you like hey look in this case you're wrong in this situation you're wrong you should change your point of view you should change your stance and somebody refuses to change and they double down and they say the same thing again um let's see somebody sajad asks i'm just gonna choose one of those uh to fight off uh that's a good phrasal verb so to fight something off it makes me think of well the covid19 uh is obviously everybody's familiar with the virus that's going around so i think of to fight off means to to try and resist um something but often like a cold or maybe a virus so if you are sick and maybe you have a cold uh and you're you're just you're trying to fight it off you're taking medicine you're drinking a lot of water you're trying to get as much sleep as you can and somebody asks you they say oh how are you feeling you could then tell them look i have this really bad cold and i've i've been trying to fight it off i've been fighting it off for a few days now so to fight off means you're just trying to resist and kind of fight back this cold but it's often used in that context so let's see um lolly asks what's the difference between finish up and end up is it the same meaning no i i would say like again when we talked about um let's see am i on the vocabulary page yes so to finish up um is when you're i think you're talking about work and or you need to get something done and it's almost done and you say that you're trying to finish up or perhaps you tell somebody like look uh i can't do this thing i still have some work that i have to finish up and in that case you need to complete it when you end up somewhere i often think of um like a destination that you are traveling you are physically going somewhere and you talk about like um

we decided to go for a walk and then we ended up um we ended up downtown and that is that is the point where we found ourselves so to end up i think often i'll add it with somewhere because you're talking maybe about a place then you end up somewhere that that is the the destination that you um reach um destination i'll say where you find yourself because the reason why i say that uh the destination where you find yourself because i think people would use end up in the context of that maybe that wasn't the plan that you went somewhere but you you ended up somewhere else there and that was where the destination you were so that's why i said the where you find yourself because maybe you you have these plans and you talk about things where you go but you end up somewhere else so let me give you another example um maybe you go out for you go out to visit a friend and you're like oh i went out and i had dinner with my friend and the next thing the next thing you know we end up at this dance club and we are dancing all night so in that case that is where you ended up that is the location where you found yourself you ended up at a dance club so to end up again i think about uh some kind of location a place where as to finish up you're more of an activity or work uh

let's see um henry says uh to pitch in all right to pitch in that's a good phrasal verb if you talk about somebody pitch in it means to help out or offer some assistance so in this case i think of somebody like i think of maybe a family and a family that has kids and perhaps they want their children to help out around the home they want them to maybe clean their room they want them to help wash dishes and you'd ask them to pitch in and say look we we i want your help we all i i need you to pitch in the other thing i'd say you're you're offering help and assistance um within when working uh as a group i often think it's really if it's just two people talking you might i think of a situation in which a group of people are working to do something maybe it's a team and everybody needs to pitch in they need to do something to help out to support they need to pitch in uh let's see what else do we have all right a couple more a few i'll i'll do several more but let me see um try anthony's uh louise sorry if i mispronounced names to call out so oh i just realized there is a mistake there so let me see can you guys see this um okay let me move this down to call out um has a couple meanings to call out would be to i don't know to yell to yell to someone and you call out their name so um i think what you're probably uh thinking of is not just like oh you're calling out to maybe your animal uh your your dog is outside and it's away and you call out to your dog because you want your dog to come back i think there are other situations in you if you call someone out on their lie i'd say you are you're pointing out that mistake but you're bringing attention to it that you are acknowledging that okay look you know you shouldn't be saying that this is wrong to call someone out on something uh it's a good it's a good phrase let's see what else do we have um uh abdullah says to buckle down that is um that's a good one too all right so if you're talking about uh buckling down oh wait a second let's get to the next page so to buckle down just means to get serious about doing your work all right so maybe you have something that you need to do um i i think of parents maybe would use it to talk about children in school and that they want to tell their children that they need to be serious about their studies and my parents would say this to me all the time they'd say son you need to buckle down you need to get serious about your work you need to buckle down so when you tell somebody to buckle down i think of your you're telling them to get serious with their their work um so that they do a better job and you're just it's more so like kind of advice or maybe in my parents case perhaps a command saying look you need to buckle down you need to get serious uh stop goofing off so let's see what else do we have um mahmud says to doze off that is a another good one so to doze off means to kind of like you're you're falling asleep a little bit but i think it's like you're taking a uh like a very short nap or it could be to the point where you're getting ready to take a nap and maybe sometimes as a teacher i would see students in class they would do this uh i don't want to say they do it all the time but sometimes that you'd see them they're very tired they're like oh and and they start to doze off they're they're dozing off um yes you could hear emmy she walked through the room uh i was gonna stop her and never come by but uh they just went on into the next row uh but yes that is her uh let me write this down uh and add that to the list to doze off um oh wait you wanna you wanna say a quick hello so yes here's she's growing so quickly um [Laughter] she's growing so fast what what are you doing she's been walking a lot more so now all she wants to do is just get down and run around and run run run run um so where were we at i was getting ready to add doze off to the list uh so doze off it's like to nap or the point at which someone starts to nap and they are dozing off but that is a good phrasal verb good phrasal verb to know to doze off and the reason again these are this is very useful because we we use phrasal verbs all the time and i understand as a learner trying to learn this vocabulary it can be challenging um mostly like i said because for many of them there might be multiple meanings it depends on the situation but i think that the more you read the more you listen you'll just start to understand these naturally so even doing this lesson you guys just us talking about these phrasal verbs and reviewing them it's going to help you in the long run the next time you're having a conversation and you want to use some of these phrasal verbs so well thank you for everybody's like emmy hello emmy she's so cute thank you guys um so let's see what else do we have ah rosalia asked to run around um so if somebody is running around it could be used in a couple of different uh situations so to run around means to i'd say to run in well to run around um to run it could mean like it says to to run around something but i think if most commonly like oh we need to we need to run around uh and do some errands i'd say to go around to different places all right so i used that example like you might tell somebody um oh you know today uh i'm just gonna run around and do some errands which means you're traveling to these different places you could say that you're going to run around like a track or a field in which case you're talking about actually running but more informally if somebody's talking about plans things they have to do maybe they could say i've been running around all day and i'm very tired and i feel like i'm going to pass out to review that other phrasal verb and in that case if somebody's been running around all day then they've been going to these different places and doing a lot of things in which case you know that they are are very busy uh let's see

aiden has to to come up with uh so to come up with means to um create or um create a new idea or plan or let's say create a new create a new idea or plan so this is a three word phrasal verb and you i think of it as uh when people are brainstorming and you have a group of people and you need to come up with different ideas you need to think of different ideas you need to create different ideas um so i'm going to add that think of or create a new plan new idea think of i'm going to say i'll think think of new ideas modifying this as i go along or create a new plan new plan of action so that's good because yes there are three word phrasal verbs um and in this case you want to come up with something you want to create it you want to think of something new to and i think people might often use it with that word ideas to come up with new ideas um let's see what else um we have so okay michelle leonardo asked the difference between um used if you use something or you use something up so in that case um i think of if you use something it's just talking about something you you need like for for example um i well you i use a broom to sweep the floor if you use something up in that case again like talking about like finish up you use something up you finish the rest of it it's complete there's no more you use it up so in that case i want to i'm trying to think of a situation in which um you might use it wait did i okay let me add this so i added come up with so i'm trying to think you might sell buy this new before you buy something else let's use this up first let's use this up um let's see all right uh what what what time are we looking at um because i know like it goes quickly these these q and a's i think i am uh i think i'm gonna i'm gonna call it right there i i will add all of these phrasal verbs um to the description if you'd like to go back and review some of the ones that we've talked about but this is a great opportunity again i like having this interaction with you guys to be able to connect with you directly and take some of your questions and again if you find uh these lessons useful if you want to sponsor and support the interactive english our youtube channel you can check out that you can join either youtube patreon the the rewards are are the same um there are links in the description down below to that if you want to check that out so thank you guys again for joining me today i appreciate you being here if you have some other questions what i would encourage you to do write them in the comments when the video gets posted write other questions about phrasal verbs in the comments i will try to get back to you but even if i don't what i would also encourage you to do even if you're watching this later help each other out i think that is a great way again for you guys to practice if you know the meaning of a phrasal verb and somebody is asking the question go ahead answer that question write the answer in the comments help each other out i think that's a great way for all of us to learn as well as another way for you guys to practice so thank you so much for joining me today um uh let's call it a day yes abdullah we're calling it a day uh athanasius uh lolly michelle leonardo aiden i'm the sleepwalker uh rosalinda harriet thank you guys so much for joining me uh i hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will see you guys next time so long

Phrases Native Speakers Use ALL THE TIME | Binomial Pairs

today i want to teach you some useful and common phrases that people use in everyday conversation my name is wes and in case this is your first time here at interactive english the channel is all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today i really want to help you build your vocabulary because these are great phrases and i want to teach you some different binomial pairs and if you don't know what a binomial pair is i'm talking about a phrase that has two words that are combined with a conjunction and usually that conjunction is either and or or and the word order for these phrases it's most of the time it's fixed but not always and i will come back to that a little bit later on so what i'm going to do is i'm going to teach you the meaning of these different binomial pairs and then i'll talk to you a little bit about how people may use them in everyday conversation and i will also show you some different video clips so that you can hear how these phrases are used in context let's just begin with our first one which is down and out and if somebody says that they're feeling a little down and out what this means is that they're they're just really going through a difficult time they're having no luck no money no opportunities so if i maybe i recently lost my job i could say yeah i just lost my job and right now i'm feeling a little down and out [Music] you are saying when you're down and out and everybody thinks you're finished that's the time to stand on your two feet of child then we have leaps and bounds and with this binomial pair there's going to be a preposition that comes before it and that preposition is by you would say by leaps and bounds and what this means is really just very quickly and you're really going to use this phrase to talk about something that is progressing or developing or even improving very quickly i could say that well by watching these video lessons i hope that your english will improve by leaps and bounds and i hope that it's going to improve very quickly sheldon what's going on his research and it's leaps and bounds ahead of mine dr evil over the last 30 years perchikon has grown by leaps and bounds you are just progressing by leaps and bounds next is the phrase sink or swim and i really like this binomial pair and what it means is that well you're not given any more help and whether you succeed or fail it's really determined by your own efforts and well think about it this this phrase it kind of means exactly what it sounds like if you sink well then you fail if you swim then you succeed so maybe somebody is getting some training to do something and then at the end of the training they're not going to receive any more help and then whether they succeed or fail it's really up to this person and then you could say well your training's over it's time you're going to do this on your own it's sink or swim now you're just going to have to accept the fact that for now this is beyond your control francis is gonna have to sink or swim on his own and frankly i don't think that's such a bad thing i remind you mr dylan this course has no shallow end sink or swim so right now i want to take a moment and tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson which is lingoda because if you are feeling a little down and out maybe you think that your english is not improving as quickly as you would like

then i have a recommendation that i think will really help you improve your english by leaps and bounds and that is by participating in the lingoda language sprint and the cool thing about the language sprint is that if you attend all of your classes you can get 50 cash back i can tell you lingoda is an awesome language school the people are amazing i have worked with them for several years and i have even studied with lingoda there i am taking a spanish class and the classes are great for helping you develop your language skills because these are small group classes the curriculum is excellent because you get to do a little bit of everything and classes are also available 24 7 which is perfect if you have a busy schedule so i told you that the sprint is a great way to improve your english by leaps and bounds and that is because when you sign up for the sprint you will take 15 classes a month for three months you do not need to pay for a deposit you just pay for the classes each month but remember if you attend all of your classes you can get 50 cash back the more intensive super sprint has already sold out but there's still a little time left if you want to sign up for the sprint but you got to hurry because the sprint will begin on april 28th and you have until april 23rd to sign up so there's still a little time left if you want to join but i imagine this will also fill up quickly and if you decide to join the sprint you can use the voucher code change 115 to get a 10 euro discount off your first month's payment click on the link in the description down below for more information please read the rules carefully don't square i didn't overrule you on the other i beat you fair and square then we have high and dry and with this binomial pair there's a phrase that comes before it and that is to leave someone to leave someone high and dry and what it means is that you are doing something that is not at all convenient for someone else and it really may put them in a difficult position so maybe my friend wants some help they want me to come pick them up and i say look i just can't do it right now then i am leaving them high and dry so i might ask you i'd say hey can you do me a favor please hit that like button just please go ahead and do that don't leave me high and dry what did you do what you do sis you left me high and dry how'd you like a shortcut to the bottom of the river if it's your shortcut i'll be high and dry hey are you cool with this i mean i want to leave you high and dry out and about i i really like this binomial pair this is one that i use and what it means is that well you're just saying that someone's active or they're they're out doing normal things that they usually do and i use this informally just to tell somebody maybe i'm i'm doing things that maybe aren't very important it's just what i usually do i'm outside of the home and i just tell somebody yeah i'm out and about or maybe you could use it if you don't want to be specific and tell the other person what you're actually doing and they ask you hey you know what are you up to and you just say yeah i'm out and about where is she oh here and there out and about i spilled his guts it'd be a big hit in prison what about morelli he's out and about well you had us worried dusty glad to see you're out and about then we have first and foremost and this binomial pair means well more importantly or more than anything else and i could say i am first and foremost a teacher this is the thing that i do more than anything else this binomial pair may also commonly be used as an introductory phrase so they would say this at the beginning of their their speech or their statement i i could say first and foremost i would like to thank all of you my audience for hitting that like button because i know that you don't want to leave me high and dry and i'm really i'm really fishing for that like but just to give you a little bit of review with high and dry first and foremost this commission worked for the good of the country first and foremost it's the face we present to the world i am first and foremost a journalist the eu bowl is first and foremost a dance then we have on and off and remember i i told you that most of these phrases are fixed you can't really move them around but this one is not fixed because you may hear somebody say off and on and it really it means the same thing it means that something is happening or existing some of the time and you could use this binomial pair to describe things that well that may sometimes happen during the day or perhaps you're describing things at work or maybe even a friendship if things are good and then they're bad you could say well you know it's off and on or on and off see your boyfriend we're on and off and she just sits there alone all the time how long has this been going on on and off since the seventh grade are you still taking your medication off or not it's really sort of helped me stay sober off and on then we have ins and outs and this is referring to the the detailed and complicated facts of something and for this binomial pair i think people may often use it with certain verbs like you're trying to learn the ins and outs of something or maybe you're telling someone that you know the ins and outs or perhaps you're trying to teach someone the ins and outs i am trying to teach all of you the ins and outs of these different phrases so that you have a better understanding as to how they're used okay i have spent the last 15 years learning the ins and outs of the paper industry you know i've done my share of ride-alongs

i know the ins and outs of your profession donner taught rudolph all the ins and outs of being a reindeer null and void this binomial pair means that something is having no legal force no binding power no validity and often i think people might use it to talk about some type of agreement or maybe even a contract i could say well you didn't you didn't sign your name so this contract it's null and void this is an unenforceable contract it is null and void your friends found a loophole when they made seven human rendering all agreement null and void conrad's prenup with you is null and void then we have all or nothing and this means that you are either doing something completely or not at all there's really no in between and i i think often people would describe some situation and they're going to say that statement right there after they talk about it they'll say it's all or nothing we're going to do it completely or not at all it's all or nothing we're playing to keep this team you up for it dude i'm in all or nothing what was love like in your family it was all or nothing there's no partial credit baby with me it's all or nothing then we have step by step and notice with this one we're not connecting the words with and or or like the other binomial pairs we're using by step by step and it means to gradually and carefully move from one stage to the next i could say that i have been trying to walk you through this lesson step by step so that you easily understand the meaning of these different binomial pairs and right now i want to check i want to see how much you remember from this lesson and how much you've learned with a quick little quiz i'm going to give you a sentence and i want you to complete the sentence with one of the binomial pairs from this lesson so your first sentence is it's rained um often use with maybe an agreement or a contract and that is null and void i'm pretty sure i'm confident that's what all of you said our agreement is null and void if you don't keep up your end of the deal then we have when you learn the um of these useful phrases i truly believe it will help you build your vocabulary by um okay there's two of them i think you know this let's look at that first one i said that we we often use this binomial pair with the verb learn when you learn the ins and outs of these useful phrases i truly believe it will help you build your vocabulary by leaps and bounds you will build your vocabulary quickly i truly do believe that and i know i i went through this quiz rather quickly but it's always good to get a little bit of review i hope that you enjoyed this lesson i hope that you learned something new and as always thank you guys so much for watching and i will see you next time

Phrases for Casual Conversation (improve your speaking fluency)

welcome to today's lesson in which we are going to talk about phrases for casual conversation these are useful phrases that you can use in a variety of context and if you enjoy building your vocabulary then please subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and if this is your first time here let me know right your name in the chat in the comments I just love hearing from you now you'll notice that this is a quiz lesson I am going to quiz you on these phrases and I want you to participate I want you to write your answers in the chat in the comments and I'll try to give some shoutouts as we go through the lesson now the first uh little quick announcement that I would like to make is that if you are someone who would like to practice and improve and develop your your speaking skills you can check out my speaking course there is a link Down Below in the description it's for intermediate to Advanced speakers it's all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally you can also use the code speak 20 to get $20 off I'll go ahead and throw a little uh that little announcement in the chat right there as well and maybe Circle back to this because actually the phrases that we're going to talk about in today's lesson are from the upcoming course these are some of this is some of the vocabulary that we'll be practicing and and uh using in the upcoming speaking course so here is your first question and the way that I've done this is I've given you a picture to help you think about well what is this phrase it's a little bit of a hint and then I've given you the meaning and as we go through this I I think it'll get a little more difficult so but I I tried to include a variety of things different phrases Expressions idioms that are you know very common very useful as well as some that maybe you don't know so I tried to to give you a range uh CU some are very specific like this one to entertain someone at a restaurant with good food wine uh you know Etc I I don't want to give it away but what do you think what would you say what what is this phrase your entertaining someone at a restaurant with good food and wine it's a nice meal what is it that you are doing what do you think any any guesses let me go ahead and I'll I'll I'll tell you cuz this one is a little more challenging so you see the picture of you know pouring the wine so the answer to wine and dine excellent all Mila perfect good job so uh Alfredo uh nice wine and dine this is a verb it's a binomial pair which is a phrase that contains two words joined by a conjunction and often that conjunction is and or or it's not always the case I've given you some examples right here pros and cons more or less little by little those are all binomial Pairs and I think those are more often used you're probably familiar with those already and notice little by little we're not using and or or in that case but if you say that you are whining and dining someone you're entertaining this person at a restaurant and there there's really a reason for that you're really trying to impress someone so let me give you some examples so you can see how this binomial pair how this phrase is used in context so I I've found some news headlines so the first one calling all New York City exists tell us where you whine and dine your client ients so think about that you're whining and dining your clients you might use this in the context of work you're trying to impress and entertain some clients and you might whine and dine them or Japan Japan's first date Awards reveals the best places to whine and dine when dating in Tokyo you go out on a date maybe the first day you want to impress this person and you're going to whine and dine them and then the last one how to whine and dine your way through through Hungary this fall this is actually an article that I should probably read because I live in Budapest but hopefully that gives you a little more a better understanding how you're going to use this phrase in context and just keep in mind that yes it is a verb

so let's look at the next one again I like I saw all these answers maybe uh I think you guys rock that one what do you think agreeing about something such as how things should be done so what phrase would you use and you can see the picture of the book right there you're agreeing about something such as how it should be done th this is an this is an idiom and I'll go ahead and tell you that I think this one is important with when you're talking about work especially when you're talking about working on as a team and you're working with a group of people in that case it's important that you agree about something such as how things should be done and you want to make sure that everyone is what all right it's very close I saw one seeing eye to eye yes that does mean to uh agree with someone hi she's like what's going on not familiar with these live uh videos so I love you too I love you too so the meaning is to get to the point without wasting time what again this is it's another idiom you're getting it to the point without wasting time and you might say let's do this what do you think and when I give you the when I give you the answer then I'll talk a little bit more about this picture but as you can see in the picture you have all those police cars following this other car so when you want to get to the point without wasting time you're going to cut to the chase when you cut to the chase that's exactly what's happening uh great job nice LLY awesome good to see you uh Jad uh Perfect all right Julia good job so I thought I would go ahead and give you the origin of this idiom this phrase it I don't think it's this should be no surprise it originated in American in the American film industry in the earlier movies that ended in like a chase scene that is the final action sequence and when you cut to something when you're talking about movies or TVs that's where you're going to move to you cut to the chase you go straight to the end to that chase scene now the the question that I had for for you that I wanted to ask you about uh was this Chase I didn't want to say the word Chase do you recognize this famous chase scene right here this is not from a movie this was uh real life I think uh I might be dating myself a little bit because I remember watching this on TV uh back when I was in uh high school so I'll I'll go ahead and uh tell you uh this is a famous Chase uh from 1994 the California Highway Patrol officers were chasing this white Ford Bronco that had Al callings who was driving an OJ Simpson in the back seat uh this was in in California 91 freeway so again this was an old trial OJ Simpson when he was alleged to U have murdered someone but that it's kind of a a well-known I think picture but that's more American culture anyway let's let's move on to the next one and I'm switching it up a little bit now I'm going to give you the meaning of the phrase as well as an example sentence in which you would fill in the blank and I I always say I think it's going to get a little more difficult but then you all generally prove me wrong when I say that so the meaning of this phrase is to confront or accept the unpleasant consequences of something you have done and and I'm giving you this sentence down here to try to help you figure out the phrase that I'm talking about I need to tell her that it was my mistake it's time [Music] to what would you say and I I think not always you might hear it like that last sentence it's time to do this it's time to what I see some answers so really again you are confessing in something this has it's a synonym for confess but this is this phrase is another idiom and you would say it's time to face the music when you are going to accept these you know bad consequences you're going to confess and then you're going to face the music and say yes it was me I have done this and it's time to face the music nice job uh I saw some good answers just throw some new ones snowflake Angela uh Ava T perfect it's time to face the music here's one that I think is probably a little more difficult and it is a phrase that is more specific it's not one that uh you may end up using all the time it really depends on what you're talking about but you would use this to indicate that there is no practical reason to continue discussing a particular topic uh it's basically impractical to keep talking about this you know there's just not going to be a satisfactory resolution so here's the example sentence down below whether or not I would have been a good doctor is a as I have as I have decided to become a teacher so in this case it's like look it's it's irrelevant why are we talking about this it's a h and that's a little bit of a hint because this is a we're going to use this phrase as a noun and you would say it is uh what I like that it's a waste of time that is true so this also would be kind of a synonym for a waste of time but in this context it has more to do with a discussion and you're having a discussion with someone else or a group of people and basically you're saying look this is irrelevant there's not going to be an answer so why are we talking about this it is a what and always with these I hope it is maybe a little more challenging my goal is that you always learn something new with these lessons learn a new word or phrase uh just some new vocabulary so I think some you guys are kind of on the right track talking about like useless waste of time again there are different phrases that you probably could put in there in this case talking about a moot point and I'm giving you the pronunciation is around there that first word a moot point moot right you can hear my pronunciation sounds like boot or suit or Moot and when you say something is a moot point that is exactly what you mean like why are we talking about this it it doesn't matter it's a moot point so in the context hopefully it makes a little more sense if someone has decided to become a teacher the fact that you're saying oh you'd be such a great doctor this is you know you what do you think about this you say look it's a moot point I've already made a decision why why are we talking about this so here are a few synonyms maybe to to kind of help you wrap your head around this if this is the first time you're hearing this phrase so in the example I gave you it's more like pointless or irrelevant like why even discuss it it's pointless it's phrase all right here is the next one the meaning thinking that you are very important in a way that annoys other people and there may be some other phrases in here but to put a finer point on it check out the example sentence he thinks he knows everything he's so M of and of is I guess you could say it's a key word hopefully it's a hint it's part of the phrase this is you could say that someone is M of when they think that they are just important they know everything and they do it in a way that is annoying so if you use this phrase to describe someone to describe describe a person it it has a negative connotation it's not a good thing when you say this about uh someone excellent uh Rael you nailed it you would say that someone is full of oneself so you're going to use that reflexive pronoun full of himself full of herself uh full of yourself in this case he thinks he knows everything he's so full of himself and I tried to show you that picture right there uh that that guy looks like he's uh full of himself and you saying someone is uh like a know- at- all it also has a negative connotation saying that somebody you know they know everything and it annoys other people so I think you guys are kind of on the right track again using words like I saw one like narcissistic that works as well but if you say someone's full if you say oh you're so full of your yourself that's that's what you're saying that you know this person is just annoying you they think that what they do is amazing they're very important they know everything and you can say oh they're they're full of he's so full of himself uh here's the next one and I told you that I'll try to make it a little more difficult and now I'm just giving you a picture so I have a few more and I'll give you a hint but just looking at this picture can you think of the phrase I I feel like uh no maybe I think you can get this you see this picture everybody's out they're looks like they're singing songs they're drinking they're having a good time they're partying but in the middle of the picture what do you see what's what's in the middle of the picture let me I don't know if I'll give you the answer the next one or if it's just a hint let's let's let's find out if I go ahead and give you the answer I apologize oh so yes so the answer is a social butterfly and I'm going to give you the meaning down there it's a person who often likes to attend parties and other social events you would say someone is a social butterfly this is a phrase that you could use to describe a person uh somebody who's very social they like talking with others and you could refer to them as a social butterfly I think it does have it it has a more of a positive connotation but it's just really a descriptive phrase when talking about someone's personality excellent seems like you guys I I think knew that one I didn't give you uh probably long enough to answer so I apologize here is uh oh I give you an example sentence as well he he used to go to a lot of parties he was a real social butterfly in this example it'd be like you're talking about someone in the the past they used to do this thing they used to be like this and he was a real social butterfly here's the next one right just looking at the picture can you think of a phrase that that would apply to this picture you see these Footprints and I can go ahead and tell you it's like they're trying to sweep them away so that another person doesn't notice them doesn't know that they're there and it like that says at the bottom I was never here all right love those hearts if you guys are learning some new words uh new phrases let me know you when I see those hearts it makes me think okay maybe you guys are learning some new new things it's always great to build your vocabulary and again take these quiz lessons participate this is interactive English after all so I saw like to sweep something under the rug no that is another one when you're trying to hide something or conceal in this case what I'm talking about perfect pink thumb uh we're trying to I'll give you the meaning this is where I feel like I I maybe messed up and gave you the the word too soon on the last one you're trying to hide something that you have done so that other people do not find out so it's like there's some evidence that would say that okay you're there and you try to get rid of the evidence and you're trying to what excellent Julia we're trying to cover Your Tracks I didn't want anyone to know that I ate the cookie so I had to cover my tracks maybe I cleaned up the mess and I just didn't want anyone to know it was me so this is one that you may use or you may hear people use it if you're watching something related to I don't know crime or a mystery and somebody is trying to cover their tracks and conceal the evidence once again to give you a better idea as to how this phrase is used in context I have some news headlines for you and as I was looking this up I think this is also a relevant phrase when talking about the the internet and things that you do online because privacy is really important so this first head line is how to cover Your Tracks every time you go online you don't want uh other uh businesses or apps to know what sites you're using and what you're looking at and maybe you want to cover Your Tracks the next one how to cover Your Tracks when snooping on someone's phone or computer okay so that probably when you're you're snooping on someone's phone or computer that's not a good thing but I imagine if this and what do you what could you say that you had to do you had to buy it maybe you didn't have a choice and you were frustrated and you're telling someone else oh I just you know I had to so let me I hope I don't give it away again I think I maybe give you hint or the meaning and then the word but maybe I'm wrong yes so you're paying too much for something and to add a little more to that you're paying too much for something that normally it would not be this price so often you may use this phrase this idiom when talking about things where the price may fluctuate and I'll give you an example and hopefully it'll make uh a little more sense so I saw one answer before nice Tila good job Armen Angela Julia we're talking about when someone says that they had to pay through the nose for something I waited until the last minute to get my flight therefore I paid through the nose for the ticket so I just mentioned things like fluctuate airline tickets concert tickets hotels and maybe there is an event that's going on and you go to book a hotel and so many people are trying to come to the city you're going to have to pay a lot more money to book a hotel room and then you tell somebody yeah you know I I had to pay through the nose to to get this hotel room or I paid through the nose for your flight so in a way it's like you're you paid too much for something and there might be a reason for that in this example you wait until the last minute to get your flight once that happens the prices they just go up and up and up and up and then you have to pay through the nose in order to get it so hopefully that makes a little more sense adding that that slight Nuance so here are a review there were just nine phrases that I wanted to go over and I'm I'm going to go back through them one more time and I told you all of these phrases are actually part of the speaking course if you're interested in practicing and improving your skills there is there are still there is some uh availability check out the link Down Below in the description so let's go through these we talked about the first one is to whine and dine someone this is not the most commonly used binomial pair but it's very specific you're entertaining someone you're showing them a good time it doesn't necessarily mean that you have to be drinking wine but it's like you're just you want to impress this person we talked about whining and dining business clients would be a good example then we talked about being on the same page I used it with the verb to be because often you will use it like we are on the same page um we need to be on the same page it doesn't mean you're always going to use it with that verb you could say we need to get on the same page and we need to agree about how things should be done and what's going on and you need to be on the same page the next one cut to the chase you're gonna go straight to the point without wasting any time let's just cut to the chase to face the music this is when you are confronting or accepting unpleasant consequences something you've done it's time to face the music then we have a moot point so we use this when you want to say that well there's no reason to continue discussing something we're not going to reach a resolution yeah it's kind of a

it's it's a moot point and full of oneself thinking that you're you're very important the way you do something uh what you know what you do it annoys other people you could say somebody he's so full of himself social butterfly this is a phrase where that you could use to describe a person somebody who likes to who's very social they go to a lot of parties they go to a lot of events and they are a social butterfly then we had to cover Your Tracks your trying to hide or conceal some evidence and you want to cover your tracks and we just talked about the this one right here when you pay through the nose you're you're paying a lot for something you're paying too much and you would pay through the nose so there are many many of these uh somebody was asking I believe that are are these idioms many of them are idioms some of them uh are not really a phrase is in idioms could be one word really a phrase is just any expression that has two or more words so it's very broad but most idioms are phrases because they have more than one word and one thing again I'll just leave this up here I do want to I do want to ask you how how did you do on the quiz I'm going to put a little poll in there uh quickly and then you can let me know so so let me know what do you think if you nailed it you knew I don't know most of them you got eight out of 10 or eight out of nine there are nine that we talked about today or did you say you know not bad maybe you knew uh four or five of them and you knew about half or you didn't know many of them and you could say well I learned a lot of new phrases today and again this is not something that if you learn something new that you're you're going to remember it forever I always think it's good to go back a few days later a week later review the word uh or phrase anytime you're trying to build vocabulary get that spaced repetition I always think it's good to to keep a a document with new vocabulary so that you can go back review it I know a lot of times people like tell me they go back and watch these lessons and I think that's great that's the best way to take new vocabulary move it up here make it a part of your active memory so kind of curious just seeing where we're at right now looks like many of you you learned a lot of new phrases and that makes me happy I'm always glad when people I'm always happy when people learn something new and about 10% of you said you nailed it all right so I want to say uh well I want to thank you for joining me for today's lesson this is our first live lesson of the new year and there are going to be many many more to come throughout the year and I look forward to seeing you in those lessons and having you participate at in them as well because once again this is interactive English that's what it's all about having you be a part of these lessons and actually take part in these lessons so I'm going to end the poll I think uh uh got quite a few votes hope you all have a wonderful day um thank you just quick some shout outs

Loi great to see you uh Sid Angela Julia Kevin uh sleepwalker good to see you Alfredo thank you guys so much for being

Phrases to Fine-Tune Your Speaking Fluency

I want to teach you some very common and useful phrases but we're going to pay extra special attention to the preposition and that's really what I want to quiz you on I have these different phrases and I've taken out the preposition and I want to see if you can identify them because this is when people will make very small simple mistakes and they may use the incorrect preposition so that's what I mean when I say fine-tune your speaker fluency and if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary learning new words and phrases please subscribe to the channel turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so the first thing I want to mention if you would like to get a copy of these lesson notes right here you can join our email Community if you are already a part of our email Community check your inbox Bo because I have sent them to you or they're on the way so let's just go ahead and begin with our first question and I would love it if you participate in the lesson write your answer in the chat in the comments even if you're watching this later this is in fact interactive English I I want you to take part this lesson I I almost I almost said it just as I was telling you this uh because yeah I thought this would be a good way to start out because I hope that you will take part in this lesson and there is a specific phrase that I want to focus on even you know that in the the the preposition is part of this and I think uh this is a pretty common phrase and I see a lot of great answers and the com the the answer is in I want you to take part in this lesson to take part in something means to participate to be involved in it and when I do these lessons I I love it when you take part in these lessons I want you to take part in these lessons because that's what I think is really going to help you be well make these phrases a part of your active memory because you're participating you are involved in the learning process you're taking part in the learning process I feel like the more I say the phrase it's just going to burn right here into your memory take parton take parton uh but excellent great answers Julia Loi Zoe uh I'll try to throw out some shout outs as we go through this here's the next one and the way that I wanted to present this question is well showing some news headlines and I've basically blocked out the missing word the preposition and these are real headlines that I've gotten U well just last week why are women more sensitive the cold than men or when talking about stocks 10 uh these 10 oil oil stocks are the most and least sensitive price swings and finally fear of the unknown are you more sensitive uncertainty than others so in each of these headlines it's the same word that's missing and again we're talking about the phrase I'll go ahead sensitive and I think when it comes to these prepositions I would always say just just go with what feels right if you're having a conversation I understand if you pause and you're trying to think of the correct verb or noun or adjective those are descriptive words but when it comes to these prepositions I would just say just say what one feels right even if you make a mistake I think most people still understand what you're trying to say but once again that's when it comes back to fine-tuning your fluency because in each of these news headlines the missing word is sensitive to and I've underlined them right there well done uh Daniel tal Ava you're sensitive to are are more sensitive to the cold than men are the most and least sensitive to price swings are you more sensitive to uncertainty than others and you might be sensitive to something now one thing that you may be thinking is well I I know the the word sensitive but but I have heard it being used with other prepositions as well and this is when I think it can be a little confusing because you might have one verb or noun that could be followed with a number of different prepositions and the meaning may change so just quickly I want to look at the difference and talk about sensitive to versus sensitive about and I I just chose these to give you an example and I took the meaning I believe this is from Collins diction so I'll I'll just read it to you if you are sensitive to other people's needs problems or feelings you show understanding and awareness of them so when I think of sensitive to something I think of that awareness and there may be some sort of change sensitive about if you are sensitive about something you are easily worried or offended when people are talking about it so just because I'm giving you a word follow by a preposition that does not mean that it's only going to be followed by this preposition and I'm going to give you an example of this later on as well so keep in mind in this context right here in these context we're talking about sensitive to something here's the next one I I think we're we're starting out a little easy and it's easy and then it's going to get a little more difficult so if I were to ask you how are you going to react this video and you see that thumbs up and thumbs down and whether you give the video a like or a dislike I I appreciate any reaction but I might be wondering this how are you going to react this video so we're talking about the verb react which word are you going to follow that with you're going to react something in this case I'm asking you about the video so I love it I love that all these people participating love it love it love it so we're talking about to react to something great job Bianca Mohamad uh VI uh Zoe curious ghost nice so you react to something and this is a pretty common phrase so really think about this and I know that I I mentioned speaking and in in this activity it's just more reading because I'm showing you the sentence you can see it and it does change a little bit because when you're speaking again you just you're going to use one and even if you know oh react to this or react to that sometimes I I still hear these slight little speaking mistakes and when I would tell people and point it out to them and show them what they said and say okay let's change this people automatically okay re react to I know this so of course I hope that you react favorably to this video and you can hit that like button I would really appreciate it here is the next one and this is one that I I think I hear um that that people have trouble with so it I'm just asking a random question can you see something M the background and I'll I'll tell you that the phrase that I'm really focusing on is M the background because when I I do some activities in in my course in which people will describe a picture or talk about it and sometimes they will talk about the background they'll use this phrase but I often hear people use the wrong word so in this case can you see something the background and the the two that I think are kind of mixed up is either in well in on and at and I see a variety of answers in the the chat so hopefully again this is one in which some of you will learn something new when we're talking about the background you're going to use in in the background what do you see in the background can you see anything in the background or if you're describing something like oh in the background I can see this or that and I notice these things in the background so when we're talking about the background just keep that in mind and say it to yourself repeat it in the background in the background in the background and just try to keep reinforcing that now I wanted to bring this up because it's fun the you you may recognize pictures like this they're called stereograms it's you have this two-dimensional image which when viewed correctly appears three dimensional and this was popular I think when I was younger a long time ago and you had to like loosen your eyes and then you can see this image kind of comes out at you I'm not going to spend too much time on it if you want to uh pause it and see if you can the see the image but I'll I'll tell you it is a horse if you're able to kind of just relax your eyes you can see this horse will just appear in the background all right in the background keep that in mind I like this picture uh I saw this cat and I was like okay I got to figure out a way to use this cat who is going to take care my cat while I'm away I think when you see the question and again reading listening speaking these are are different skills and right now you you're reading it you can hear me you're listening to it and that does make it a little easier but once again I'm I'm bringing this phrase up because I often hear people make speaking mistakes when they're using take care so that is the phrase that I want to focus on who is going to take care my cat while I'm away and once again I just want you to try to burn this word into your memory I'm going to give you the answer because I see so many uh so many correct answers I appreciate those hearts love it take care of you're going to take care of something or take care of someone and you may use this phrase often when talking about pets or animals who's going to take care of my cat take care of my dog can somebody take care of my plants while I'm away and traveling so you would take care of something or someone and again just say this phrase to yourself take care of take care of take care of this is a cocation these are three words that are used together to take care of something and someone and this is my This Is My Method I'm just going to keep saying it you hear me say it numerous times take care of take care of take care of because when you're having a conversation I just want you to say you know say go with your gut what feels right but if you hear it enough you get enough exposure the next time you're talking it's just going to come out you're gonna say take care of how about this one the decision is entirely M to you this is an idiomatic expression and I wanted to point that out because again it's good to build your vocabulary I do think this expression is quite common so it's a good one to know it's a good one to use and you say something is M to you and you would use this when talking about a decision or a choice so in this case awesome great job everyone you guys are you guys are rocking it today the decision is entirely up to you and if something is up to you it basically means that the choice is yours to make should we do this should we do that I say well it's it's up to you what do you think we should do it's it's up to you I really don't care it's up to you and you might even say to someone it's up to you to make the decision and saying there is a choice to be made but I am going to leave that decision up to you again up to you up to you up to you just think let's say this is a conversation even though it's a maybe it's a bad conversation but I'll I'll just say if I oh I know that I have a limited amount of influence on you because we only know each other through these English lessons and I see you guys participating I love it. Loi Stephanie uh you know it's great to see everybody but ultimately I still hope that I have a positive influence on you and of course I would appreciate it if you write to me in the comments I always love hearing from you and everybody else and maybe you will do this unless you are under the influence um another maybe some other English coach I don't know but I that last one is I I just really tried to force it in there but there are three different words that are missing so that first one have a limited amount of influence on you the next one a positive influence on you and Under the Influence on you another so I think some of them are going to be easier than others because like that last phrase I think this is a common collocation Under the Influence something or someone but there are three different ones missing and let's talk about them right now so the answers and again I'll read it again with these prepositions so the first one I know I have a limited amount of influence over you and I've highlighted the verb have as well you have influence over someone and if you have influence over someone it's like you can control some of their actions like what they will do in the future specifically if you have influence over someone and I think you could relate to this I'm sure you know someone in which one person whether it's a friend or a colleague has influence over you or someone else and they can kind of really control or even manipulate what's going on so to have influence over someone and I said that you know my I think I have a limited amount of influence over you because we only know each other through these English lessons But ultimately I still hope that I have a positive influence on you and that it affects you in some way and I would say these are some common collocations in talking about somebody having a good influence on someone else a bad influence on someone else a positive influence on someone and a negative influence on someone so think about it being used with those adjectives good bad positive negative and of course I hope that yeah I have a positive influence on you that uh yeah that that I have a it has a positive effect on you I would appreciate it if you write to me in the comments maybe you'll do this unless you are under the influence of another now under the influence of someone or something a lot of times you may hear this being used like something for example a common um usage of this phrase is under the influence of alcohol somebody was driving under the influence of alcohol so under the influence of someone or something so this is another example where you have influence but it could be followed by a variety of prepositions and this is why they can be a bit tricky because when you're having a conversation again you're speaking it's it's a very different skill you may not be thinking exactly about it but you hear these different prepositions being used and perhaps you end up using uh of instead of over in a certain context again most people will understand what you're talking about but it goes back to fine-tuning your speaking fluency to have influence over someone to be a positive or a good influence on someone and then maybe to be under the influence of someone or something but most of the time it's it's like a something like you are under the influence of um I mentioned alcohol is a common collocation that you may hear here's the next one so that was I know that was a lot that I just gave you as far as influence goes we need to review our health care policies the national level so when thinking about government in this in this case you may hear this phrase the national level and I think if you kind of piece it together it's going to make sense because the noun that we're talking about is level we need to review our health care policies the national level um well done nice uh Samuel Loi Bianca we're talking about at the national level you read uh news article this is something that you will come up you you'll come across this phrase at the national level and just to really put a point on this at the M level there are different adjectives that you could put in there here are some examples understanding the impact of climate change at the national level we just mentioned that State play navigating immigration policy at the state level so depending on the country you live in in the US there are different states so you may use this phrase with State like something happens at the state level and finally enhancing disaster risk management at the local level so those are some words that you may hear with this phrase at the national level at the state level at the local level great job Stephanie Sarah Reza just want to give out some more more shoutouts because I see so many different answers I love it when everything just keeps going and people are participating here is the next one everyone was captivated the performance this is a more of a grammar question and I'll explain why in just a moment but what word is missing everyone was captivated the performance this is another one that I often hear people they make a slight speaking mistake everyone was captivated the performance and of course I see so many excellent wonderful answers you guys are rocking it so everyone was captivated by the performance and um yep that's right Julia we're talking about the passive voice and that is why I said this is you know grammar involved because you might say you were captivated by something you were Amazed by something or you were shocked by something the passive voice in this case what you might thinking well why would you use it because often you're going to use the active voice and you could say the performance captivated everyone but you might use the passive voice in this case because it puts more emphasis on the action or the result and I think that's why when you would say something like this the passive it it's actually better I think it's better to use the passive than the active and put put the emphasis on the action or the result everyone was captivated by the performance we were Amazed by the presentation she was shocked by the news but once again you're going to talk about like the passive voice the object the verb to be um you know in this case you have those different uh participle adjectives followed by by and then the actor by something by someone and we're just going to use by and then here's another one where there are two different words missing several years ago I worked M the city a group of us were hired to work a transportation project so work you could follow this with I think a variety of words but think about the situation the context because there is a specific um there are specific words that I want you to use in this case there are two different missing words several years ago I worked M the city a group of us were hired to work in a transportation project uh so now that I see it I think a lot of people this is interesting because I guess there there could be um more than one response and I'll explain this as we go through this so what I would say what I said is the correct answer several years ago I worked for the city you work for someone you were employed by them a group of us were hired to work on a transportation project you work on something like this is what you are doing now for that first one I saw a lot of people they're putting in and in this case that I understand that I guess that would work I don't want to say that is incorrect because you could say you worked in the city as far as talking about your location this is where you worked the reason why I think I would go with for is because of the next sentence because it more aligns with what you're saying I worked for the city and what happened well a group of us were working on this project but if you say you worked in the city that is not incorrect that is okay but the meaning would still be different because in that case talking about where you worked as opposed to saying who you worked for I worked for the city so again lot of great answers that's perfect and I think many of you got that next part you worked on a transportation project you work on a project so I really hope that you learn something new let me give you a little review and I'm just going to see if I can use some of these different phrases as I'm just talking off the top of my head so I really appreciate that many of you were taking part in this lesson because I think that's the best way to learn these phrases is when you take part in these lessons and I really think that I I try to make these lessons interesting and I hope that I could say that you are captivated by these different lessons because that I want to make them interesting and really at the end of the day when it comes to improving your English skills building your vocabulary it is entirely up to you it's really the choices that you make will determine how much you're going to improve it is definitely up to you but I would say really try to learn from people maybe like myself that are going to have have a a positive um you know a positive influence that I I want to be a positive influence on you and uh really uh trying to think about others that I could say I'm just gonna I'm gonna wrap things up but I do want to ask you like I always do with these how how did you do on this quiz because I saw so many people participating in the lesson and that is what I love to see so I'm going to put a little poll in there and just say how did you do on the quiz and say I rocked it and I'll put like a a 100% Emoji there and I the next one I did pretty well would be maybe about 50% and then let's add another one uh I have some work to do which would be more like 25% kind of gives me an idea as to the difficulty of these because I I always love it when there's like a bit of a mix as far as you know if I don't want it to be too easy I also don't want it to be too difficult and of course I want this to be relevant I wanted to choose phrases that you're going to come AC AC cross listening to something or reading a newspaper as well as phrases that you would actively use when you're having a conversation and I just want to say a quick thank you to Rosanna for becoming a member and joining joining the community well thank you very much rosan Rosanna so let me know how you did you can write to me in the comments I always love hearing from you and just keep practicing keep studying keep learning review these words and phrases I told you if you want to um join our community the email Community click on the link down in the description you can access these lesson notes and if you're already a part of it I will send them to you and you can find them in your inbox so it seems like uh all right so getting a little bit of a mix right here but I I feel I'm it makes me glad that so many of you are like yes I rocked it you did well that you've heard these before you are able to identify them and I think again I will say when you're seeing it when you see it written it is a little easier the challenge would be speaking and when you're having that conversation but again throughout this lesson I just kept saying these phrases over and over and over because the more you hear them the better because then you're when you're having that conversation you're just going to use the correct one if you're talking about something that's in the background or saying that a decision is up to you or referring to something that's happening at the national level at the local level and you're just going to use that correct preposition so I'm going to wrap things up thank you guys for joining me I hope that you learn something new and I will see you soon for another lesson

Phrases with IN, ON, and AT to Greatly Improve Your English Accuracy

some very helpful phrases. And mostly what I want to do is reinforce the prepositions in, on, and at. So, I'm talking about verbs, nouns, and adjectives that you would follow with one of these prepositions. And the goal of this lesson is really to help you improve your speaking accuracy. Because this is when I notice when in speaking and writing people make small mistakes and they use the wrong preposition. And since these are very common prepositions, I want to look at some verbs, nouns, and adjectives and the preposition that follows. So, for the most part, I think you should do very well and you probably know many of these already, which is what I hope.

So, let's look at this first one. And in the chat, in the comments, I would love it if you participate and write your answer. Again, you only have three choices, in, on, or at. First sentence. His attempt at solving the puzzle was unsuccessful. Which of these prepositions best completes this sentence? And I say best because sometimes there is more than one answer. That does happen in English and I know that makes it even more confusing and I will talk about that in just a moment. His attempt at solving the puzzle was unsuccessful. So the answer I see some people putting on, not on or in. So what I would say is this. This is we're talking about an attempt at doing something. Attempt at and then you're going to follow it with a noun that is. So I'm giving you the meaning of an attempt. I think you know this. We're talking about it using it as a noun. An effort to achieve or complete a difficult action task or action. Here are some example sentences just to reinforce this. His attempt at solving the puzzle was unsuccessful. Her attempt at baking a cake ended in disaster when the oven malfunctioned. And finally, the team's attempt at winning the championship was thwarted. Thwarted by a last minute goal. And thwarted means it was prevented. So again, this is just to reinforce this phrase, an attempt at something. So I feel like you know that noun, an attempt. One thing I want to point out is that when you're using it as a noun and following it with a verb to make is the verb that we're often going to use to make an attempt at doing something.

Now I will say you could say to make an attempt to do something. And if we're using it as a verb, then we are just going to follow it with to in the infinitive to attempt to do something. So again, this is when it can be a little tricky when the part of speech changes. Sometimes that preposition will change, but not always. Again, I will come back to that in just a moment. The next one, I really hope you get this one because I often hear mistakes with this adjective. Are you interested in joining my email community? And this is a genuine question that I have for you in case you are not already a part of it. Are you interested in joining my email community?

And I don't know if sometimes this is a language translation thing because when people use interested, I often hear a variety of prepositions that follow. But in this case again we're talking about it one preposition and then that gerund in this case joining and I see all those great answers. Excellent. Uh great job to Kaya Julia Talal. Interested in are you interested in joining my email community. So of course you know the meaning of interested. You have that curiosity or concern about someone or something. Here's another couple of example sentences. He's interested in finding a new job or we are interested in working with you on the project. These sentences you're going to hear me read quite a few because again this is all about reinforcing it. I think you know many of these nouns, verbs, and adjectives.

We're focusing on that preposition that follows. And yeah, just in case you are interested in joining my email community and getting access to these lesson notes, you can click on the link in the description, join the community and uh you can access the notes. If you are already a part of it, don't worry, I will send them to you. How about the next one? Many companies have reliance on foreign labor. Once again, we're just talking about those three prepositions down below. In, on, at. Which one is going to complete this sentence? Many companies have reliance on foreign labor. So, what would you say? We're talking about the noun reliance, and we're going to follow it with which preposition?

And the answer is to have a reliance on someone or something. In this case, a reliance, we're talking about that dependence on someone or something. Now, in this case, if we have the noun reliance and we're going to follow it with on. If we change it to if we use it as a verb to rely, once again, we're going to follow it with on. To rely on someone or something. Here are some other example sentences besides the first one. Many companies have reliance on foreign labor. Her reliance on coffee to stay awake is starting to affect her health. Or the company's reliance on outdated technology has slowed down its progress. My goal I hope as long as I keep saying the phrase reliance on, reliance on, reliance on, it's just going to it's going to stick up here in your brain. Here we go. Our success depends teamwork. Now we're talking about a verb to depend. Are we going to follow that with in, on, or at? Our success depends. Teamwork. This is another I I told you these are common phrases. These are phrases that you're going to use in daily conversation when you're talking casually with a friend or a family member or a colleague. And you're going to say that something depends on something else. Excellent, Lai Joanna. Um, Marty, perfectly. Perfect. To depend on. Depend. I I think you know the meaning, but just in case, I'm putting it up here. To be influenced or determined by something else. Our success depends on teamwork. Our ability to finish on time may depend on the weather as we're working outdoors. And you can always depend on Sarah to help you out when you're in a bind. And if you're unfamiliar with that last phrase, in a bind, it just means that you are in a difficult situation and you could say you're in a bind. But you can depend on Sarah. So depend on, just keep that in mind. She has a wealth of experience managing projects. Once again, we're just keeping in mind that those three prepositions in, on, at, a wealth of experience, managing projects. We're we're talking about the noun experience and we're going to follow that with which one? So the answer in this case and I I would say definitely use this preposition again sometimes you may hear others but she has a wealth of experience in managing projects. So you have experience you have knowledge or skill in a particular job or activity and you know you may not always follow it with a preposition but if you do you and you're going to talk about the area of expertise or some field we're going to follow it within. She has a wealth of experience in managing projects. His experience in graphic design helped him land a job at a at the creative agency.

And finally, I'm looking for someone with experience in data analysis to join our team. You have experience in something. Just to keep this a little uh, you know, casual, here's a funny little meme joke that I I found. So, I thought I would share it with you. But again, still using experience in. So, it's like this woman interviewer is asking, "You're asking for a pretty high salary for someone who has no experience in this field." And the person who's applying for the job, this guy says, "Well, this job is going to be super hard since I have no idea what the I'm doing." All right? So, it's it's kind of humorous in that he has, look, you have no idea. That means you're going to have to work very hard to learn what you should do.

keep it light from from time to time. What do you think? I was skeptical first, but now I believe it's possible. And this one I I will clarify something, but think about the the expression. That's a little bit of a hint, but I feel like this is a phrase that you've heard of before. You may even use it. I was skeptical first, but now I believe it's possible. So, this is one of those situations when you're not sure. Even if you're unsure, I would say what what feels right. Often times, it's not always best to just go by feeling, but when it comes to these prepositions, I absolutely think it is. I was skeptical at first. skeptical at something. So skeptical, it just means you're not easily convinced. Maybe you're having doubts or reservations. So I said to think of it like an expression skeptical at first. So we're really talking about that phrase at first.

We're going to use at. At at first I I felt this way and now I feel this way. So we're when we're talking about that entire phrase, I was skeptical at first, but now I believe it's possible. often. And the thing that I wanted to point out is that when you use the adjective skeptical, most of the time you're going to follow it with of. Now, I know we're talking about in, on, and at, and this is a specific phrase, skeptical at first, but then, you know, talking about how you're no longer skeptical, but mostly you would say that you are skeptical of someone or skeptical of something. To reinforce this, I gave you those news headlines down below. It just says why some EV researchers are skeptical of BYD's fast charging tech.

And then finally, analysts are skeptical of Apple's $1 billion deal with Nvidia. So, keep in mind if we're talking about this phrase, skeptical at first, and often it's used together like that, uh, but generally speaking, that the adjective skeptical is often going to be followed by of. you're skeptical of someone or something. I know with these prepositions they can they can be certain. They they can certainly be confusing which again is why I hear mistakes small minor mistakes. These are just very small mistakes which goes back to accuracy. This is all about accuracy speaking and writing accuracy. Their success business is impressive. Which of these prepositions are you going to use?

In, on, at? We're talking about the noun success. This is a word that you know that you use. But in this case, which preposition are you going to follow it with? I hope that you said, and I see a lot of them. Excellent. Uh Joanna Tayo, John. Success in the accomplishment uh of an aim or purpose. you have success in something, success in life. Their success in business is impressive. Or here's another couple of sentences for you. Their success in the startup world is attributed to their innovative approach and teamwork. Or the company's success in launching the new product exceeded all expectations and you have success in something or excess in in doing something. This uh I this is not really humorous. I just thought it was kind of cute. Your greatest success in life may not be something you achieve, but someone you love. All that the dog with all those little puppies around there.

Yeah, I just thought it was cute. Maybe a good way to reinforce success in something. And I hope that Yes, thank you. Excellent, Lilly. I hope that you read my mind. I hope that all of you have great success in learning English, improving your skills, whether it's vocabulary, grammar, pronunciation. I just want to help you reach your fluency goals. And again, I know these prepositions sound like, oh, in, on, at, I know these. I use them all the time. This can be a little tricky, and it's all about accuracy. When you say the verb, noun, adjective, I want to make sure that you're using the correct preposition. So, how about uh this one? He was insistent getting the job done his way. Which preposition are we going to follow insistent with? He was insistent getting the job done his way.

So, in this case, you are going to say someone was insistent on doing something. So, if you're insistent, it just means you're you're firmly saying that uh something must be true or done. He was insistent on getting the job done his way. They were insistent on getting the best seats for the concert even though they arrived late. Or, my parents were insistent on me attending college even though I wanted to travel the world first. That sounds like me. Um, once again, we're talking about the noun insistent, and we're going to follow that with on. If we're going to use this as a verb, we're still going to use on. To insist on something. I insist on you answering, participating in these lessons. I insist on you participating and writing your answers in the chat, in the comments. This is, after all, interactive English. And yeah, I want you to participate. What do you think?

This beautiful picture right here. They gazed the beautiful sunset. I feel like uh I feel like that many of these you you should know. I hope that you're doing very well on this quiz. That's the idea is that this is just reinforcing it and just trying to iron out these small mistakes. It's all about accuracy. They gla they gazed the beautiful sunset. So again, if you you know what the word gaze means, it it makes it a lot easier. Uh they gazed at the beautiful sunset. If you're gazing at someone or something, you're just it's a look steadily or intently, especially in I don't know, admiration, surprise, thought, beauty. They gazed at the beautiful sunset. I often gaze at old photos, reminiscing about the good times I've had. And finally, he couldn't help but gaze at the beautiful paintings for hours, admiring every detail. So gaze, you you see in the meaning right there, that that look whenever we're talking about that meaning, you're going to follow it with at. You gaze at something. You look at something. You stare at something. More or less. Those are synonyms. I think using gaze or stare is a little more precise. Gives more information. But in either way, you're going to follow all of those verbs with at. Gaze at, look at, stare at. What do you think? I have faith. your ability to succeed. And this is true. I would say this to you. I have faith your ability to succeed. I almost just said the preposition there. So what uh you you have faith someone or something. And I feel like this is often uh you could even think of this as a collocation using faith someone's ability when talking about uh again I'm almost the more I talk the more I actually almost accidentally give the answer but since many of you yes you wrote it down there perfect faith in so faith means you have complete trust or again confidence in someone or something you believe in someone or something. All of those again the they they sometimes can be used interchangeably. You have faith in someone. You believe in someone. You have confidence in someone. But let me give you some more example sentences just to really Yeah, I'm going to keep saying that. Reinforce faith in I have faith in your ability to succeed. That is true. His faith in humanity was renewed after seeing all kinds of uh acts of kindness during the crisis or despite the challenges they never lost faith in their vision for the company. You have faith in someone. Lai I really appreciate it. You have faith in me. I have faith in in in you as well.

Perfect. So, one thing I I also wanted to share with you was some more collocations because I talked about faith in someone's abilities. And that is a phrase that you may often hear using the faith in. You may also hear somebody talk about faith in humanity. You heard it in one of those example sentences. You may also have blind faith in someone or something that you you have blind maybe you have you know you're not going to change your belief in that case and you have blind faith in this person. You may also use it with the phrase to put your faith in someone and it's like putting your trust in someone. Notice with all these uh words that I'm using, trust in, believe in, faith in. And then finally, just you maybe you tell somebody and you want to convince them of something and say, "Look, have faith in me. I want you to have a little faith in me. It's very important. How about this? They decided a new course of action." So this picture I think is relevant. We're talking about change. And we're going to follow the verb decide. In this case, we're using in the past decided something. So, how are you going to complete this sentence? In, on, at? Write your answers in the chat, in the comments. And I love seeing all of these correct answers. Again, I feel like these are phrases. is these are definitely words that you should know and then it's just figuring out that preposition that follows. They decided on a new course of action. So you know this verb to decide. You come or bring a resolution in your mind as a result of consideration. And you may decide on something. Here's some other examples.

It's hard to decide on the perfect gift when there are so many great options or we still haven't decided on where to go for vacation this year and you need to decide on something. How about this next one? I was surprised how well the event went. We're talking about surprised this adjective. I was surprised how well the event went. Which of these prepositions are you going to use? I'd like to give you a moment so I can see some answers and then uh um we can uh I'll let you know. So I was surprised. I see some differences in this case. You were surprised at something. I was surprised at how well the event went. You're not really you're not really going to follow this adjective with the preposition in.

I saw that come up a few times, but you would be surprised at something. So, you know, surprised this feeling you get when you know something happens and you didn't expect it. Here's another couple of sentences for you. I was surprised at how quickly she finished the entire project. Or I was surprised at the price of the new phone. It was much cheaper than I expected. And you were surprised at something. Once again, I I don't think this is new necessarily. It's just about if if you didn't get one correct, just thinking about that answer, say looking at these sentences, reading them, maybe saying them out loud. It's all about accuracy and following these words with the correct preposition. What do you think about this one? There was a noticeable change in the weather. And once again, I think this is a bit of a collocation. We're talking about a change in something. And often people will use this when talking about the weather because the weather is constantly changing. And you may talk about a change in the weather and the fact that I'm talking about the weather again if you're unsure just what what feels right because I'm sure that you have probably heard this before and somebody talking about a change in the weather or a change in something. So when we change uh we make something or be it becomes difficult uh or uh different sorry or alter they decided um whoops that was a that's a little typo. I should have put that the first uh this first sentence up here. There was a noticeable change in the weather.

Here are another couple of example sentences using change in the change in the schedule caused some confusion among the team or she made a noticeable change in her diet switching to healthier plant-based foods. So there is a change in something a change in the weather a change in your schedule or a change in your diet. I think those are actually topics that you may all they talk you may talk about hey there is a change in this thing and I I once again as I keep feel I feel like as long as I keep saying change in change in change in it's just going to stick up here in your mind that is the goal and maybe the next time you're talking you're just going to hear me saying change in change in how about this he is an expert ancient history. He is an expert. Ancient history. We're talking about an expert. Again, this is a common word. I think you know it. And how are we going to follow uh what what are we going to say? An expert. Ancient history. This is one that again this can be confusing and I will talk about why in just a moment and this is why English can be confusing and in particular this is why prepositions can be incredibly confusing and I understand why people make slight speaking mistakes. So we're talking about an expert and then we're following it with this this topic. So in in this case, this is what I would say. He is an expert on ancient history. So you know what an expert is? A person with a great deal of knowledge uh about something or maybe they're very skillful in a particular area. Here are some example sentences and then I'll tell you why I think this can be very tricky. He is an expert on ancient history. The professor is an expert on climate change and has published several groundbreaking studies on the topic. And finally, as an expert on nutrition, she helps athletes optimize their diets for peak performance. So, the reason why I said this can be a bit tricky is because you you may hear people say expert on or expert in. And this is something that I thought was helpful and I thought uh Chenary summarized it well. And I'll read what was highlighted there. uh if you if you had said expert in instead of expert on both of them are correct but there is a slight difference in meaning. So it says in when you say in it makes the emphasis slightly heavier on the person who has expertise. So if you want to emphasize well the person is like their their expertise then you could use in. It says while on places some emphasis on the subject in which expertise is shown and they gave you an example my brother is an expert in foreign policy. So in that case if somebody is an expert in foreign policy it's like the the emphasis would be on the person the brother whereas if I like in our example sentence I said um he is an expert on ancient history it's like the emphasis is on the the topic the subject which is ancient history expert on expert in both of them are correct and once again for for this reason yeah it can be uh a bit confusing what What do you think about this sentence right here? The company aims in increasing its market share. We're talking about the verb aim. This is a verb that you probably know. It is not the most common verb in the world, but it is one that you may come across. You're listening to a movie, TV show, you're reading a news article, and maybe you even see a sentence exactly like this. The company aims increasing its market share. Well done.

Um, excellent. Lai, Talal, Aama, uh, Joanna, aim at uh, Alfred. So, when we're talking about the verb to aim, we're like having the attention uh, intention of achieving something. The company aims at increasing its market share. The new advertising campaign is designed to aim at younger a at a younger audience. And finally, the policy changes are aimed at improving health care access for undeserved communities. Aim at aim at aim at again just with that repetition. So here is a review of the the phrases that we were looking at today. And I've I've broke I've broken them down with the ones with on, in, at. So like on, we talked about a reliance on someone or something to depend on and someone is insistent on something or an expert on or in. We just talked about that or you decided on doing something.

The phrase is within very common. I think often we use interested and you are interested in something or maybe you have a lot of experience in taking these quizzes and you do a great job which I hope you did. I hope you had a lot of success in taking this quiz and you did really well because I have faith in you. kind of just now ad libbing sentences as we go through these change in remember we talked about a change in the weather and then finally those phrases with at there there is an attempt at doing something or you aim at doing something you're gazing at someone or something same with look at or stare at you were surprised at something and finally skeptical at first remember I I wanted to include that as a phrase together you're skeptical at first but but once Again, if you're talking about the adjective skeptical, often we're going to follow that with the preposition of.

So, what I'd like you to do is let me know in the comments how well you did on this quiz. I I hope that this was I hope that it was pretty easy for you, that you were able to get most of these correct because these nouns, verbs, and adjectives, I think, are fairly common. We use them all the time and I just want to make sure that you're using the correct preposition and this is a good way to practice. This is a good way to reinforce these words. So, these are very useful phrases, great way to build your vocabulary and improve your speaking and writing accuracy. I want to thank you guys for joining me today. Um, thank you to Kaio. I'm glad again I think you bring up a great point. If you feel a little more confident using these because when you're having a conversation, you don't need to stop to think about the correct preposition. Just use what comes naturally. And then what comes naturally, it's going to develop. Participating in quizzes like this, watching more movies, TV shows, reading more. I think reading is incredibly important, which is why I gave you all of those example sentences.

And remember, if you want these lesson notes, join my email community. Check out that link down below in the description. Hope you all have a wonderful rest of your day and I will see you soon for another lesson in the near future. So long.

Polite Ways to Express Sympathy in the Event of a Tragedy

Today I'm going to talk to you about different ways to express sympathy when there's a tragic or unfortunate event. In this lesson, I will talk to you about some very, very useful expressions. Now these expressions are to be used when somebody close to you, or somebody you know, or somebody from work is going through a rough time. And these are things you can say to comfort a person, express your concern, or just express your sympathy. So something that I wanted to mention that is very important, is that when somebody's going through a rough time or when they're going through a loss, we want to make sure that we have the right words to comfort this person.

We don't want to use something that can be potentially offensive. So it's very important that you pay attention to the context and that you say the right things. I'm going to provide you kind of some of the context that we can use these words in and what you should say. So first I want to talk to you about smaller losses or problems. If somebody is going through an issue but that's not...it's not incredibly tragic. So here's something you can say in this case.

Now this one is very general. It can literally apply to almost any problem that somebody is going through. Maybe they're having a rough patch in their relationship. Or maybe they... the situation at home is not good. Or things that work a little bit difficult. This can cover a whole lot of different things. It just shows that you care and that you want this person to be better. I hope things get better soon. Let's look at another one. So this one is obviously a little bit more specific. And it has to do with illness. If somebody is going through an illness or through a sickness, you can tell them that you hope they feel better.

Well I hope you feel better, Clark. I hope you feel better Santa. I hope that you feel better Gus. Well then... I hope you feel better. Now again, something important to mention is you shouldn't really say this to somebody who's going through a really bad illness or chronic illness. Because they might not get better. And it might be one of those things where it's just really inappropriate. Only use it for illnesses where you know the person is going to recover. Okay, so what do we say for even more serious illnesses, more serious problems, or even death? Here are some things you can say. The most common one by far is...

This one's very, very common and it can also be very professional. If a co-worker or your boss or somebody at work is going through a personal tragedy like a death. We say "I'm sorry for your loss." I'm sorry for your loss. I'm sorry for your loss. I'm sorry for your loss. My lady, I'm sorry for your loss. It's very appropriate. It's not offensive. And you can safely use it.

Now if somebody's going through something, and this doesn't have to be related to death, but it can be it, is... Now, many people, if they're religious and if you know that the other person is religious as well and they would benefit from this you can also add... Otherwise you can just say "You are in my thoughts" or "I am thinking of you." And this can mean if somebody's going through an illness, a serious illness, or a personal problem, or tragedy, or a death. You can say "You are in my thoughts." This next one is only in case of death. You can say... Very important. You only say this if somebody had passed away.

Please accept my heartfelt condolences at this most difficult hour. Please accept my sincere condolences for your father. Please express my condolences to their families. Mrs. Ostrova. Please accept my condolences on behalf of the President and the people of the United States. And that's the only time that it's appropriate to say this expression of sympathy. Here's another one. This again has to do with death, and it can be interchangeable with some of the ones we've already said. And the last one also relating to loss is... And this one, just like the other ones, are expressions that relate to to to a loss of life, to death.

Now what I wanted to say is that you can use a combination of these or more than one of these to express your sympathy to somebody. So for example, you can say... But you don't have to. You can use just one of these and it will effectively convey the message that you're trying to send, which is that you are thinking about this person in their time of need. So I hope you really never have to use these expressions. But the truth is that sometimes life is unexpected and somebody that we know is going through a rough time. And this is when this vocabulary will really, really come in handy. It's very, very important that we have to find the right words to comfort our friends and family and co-workers in their time of need.

Popular American Slang That People Always Use

Today, I am going to blow your mind with some popular American slang. BOOM! So in today's lesson, I'm going to talk to you about some popular and common slang that Americans regularly use. And remember, learning slang...it's mostly important for your listening comprehension. I've had many English learners tell me like... you know in the classroom I understand everything. But when I go outside in the streets, or if I'm watching a movie, it's really hard to understand. And that's because people use it informally, casually, in colloquial speech. If you're an English learner, it's not really necessary that you go out and use these words. But it is good for your listening comprehension.

So let's talk about some common American slang that Americans love to use, especially me. The first one that I want to talk to you about is COOL. And no, I'm not talking about the temperature. I'm talking about something or someone that you like. If something or someone is cool, it means that that you are impressed by this thing, or you are impressed by this person.

Now, if you are really impressed, then you could say that something is AWESOME. I use this all the time if I want to express that this is something that I really like, I really enjoy. I'm really impressed with it. I say that it's awesome. For example, if you guys hit that like button, that would be awesome. You guys...you'd be so cool. Next is the word BABE.

Now, this is used to refer to a person's loved one. One's girlfriend, boyfriend, husband, wife. And you say babe instead of saying their name. I think it's a little more common that men use it to refer to their girlfriend or their wife. But it is a gender-neutral word. Women do use it when referring to a man as well. Be aware. Don't just say this to anyone. Not to an acquaintance, not to just a friend, or a colleague. Because it can be very offensive, and they might take it the wrong way. Why are you calling them babe? Are you trying to be romantic with them? What's going on? Just don't do it. Now, younger people might not use babe as often.

It's a little bit of an older slang term. Instead, they may use BAE. And this is an acronym that is short for Before Anyone Else. It's also a word that can refer to your boyfriend, or girlfriend, your loved one. Someone that you have a romantic relationship with is your BAE. Next is a slang word that I like to use. And maybe I use it a little too much. And that is DUDE. And this just refers to a younger man, a guy. Because if somebody says "It's a dude." Then they're talking about, well...It's a guy. It's a man.

Now I found a lot of fascinating information about this slang word. Because it's been around for a long time. And according to the Urban Dictionary, over a hundred years ago the word used to mean a person that was very snobbish and stuck-up. Then the meaning changed and it referred to a person that moved out west into the countryside. And this person just didn't know what the hell they were doing. And the meaning of the word has changed again. Because today it just refers to a younger man. A guy. A dude.

Next, we have RIPPED. Most of us would just think of the verb "to tear something." But that's not what we're talking about. Instead, we're talking about somebody that is very strong very, very muscular. Muscles are really well defined. You would say that person is ripped. For example, I think I'm pretty ripped. Here's a picture of me at the gym. Muscles very well defined. Very strong. Ripped. This slang word also has another meaning which is to be intoxicated. If somebody is ripped, then maybe they've been drinking a lot or maybe smoking a little too much. We could say that this person is ripped. If you're talking about somebody who's intoxicated, ripped is not the most common way that somebody would refer to them.

Instead, the slang word that they would probably use is this one right here, which is WASTED. So if somebody is very, very, very intoxicated, I'm sure you've probably seen somebody who fits this description. Somebody's intoxicated. They've been drinking way too much. Then, they're wasted. Another popular slang word is LIT. And no, this is not the past tense of light. It used to mean somebody who was intoxicated. However, that meaning is outdated. People people don't use it anymore. Nowadays, younger people use lit as an adjective to talk about something that is that is really awesome, really exciting. Or maybe even a person that that is really cool. So you could say that movie is lit.

Or my best friend, she's lit. Interactive English...it's lit. I don't really use this word. So I feel a little strange saying it because I think I'm a little too old to say it. It's mostly younger people nowadays. Another slang word that I really like is ANTSY. And this is an adjective to refer to somebody who is impatient. Somebody that just cannot wait any longer. They're ready to do something else. They don't want to sit still anymore. That person is antsy.

Another popular slang word, and one that is not so good is DIS. Dis this is short for disrespect, and it means to disrespect someone. So it can be either a verb "to diss (someone)," or it could be used as a noun, "a dis." But it means to disrespect someone in some way. You say something mean or nasty and you dis someone. We should all be respectful. You shouldn't dis anybody. It's not nice. It's unnecessary

Next is BROMANCE. And this is just a cute amalgamation of the words "bro" and "romance." And it means love or affection shown between two heterosexual men. So most guys out there, they may be involved in a bromance. Or maybe they were involved in a bromance at one point or another. But it's when...guys, it's nothing sexual. Maybe you're gushing over this other person and maybe showing a little too much affection and expressing it. And other people see it. And they could think, "Oh okay. These guys have a bromance going on."

The next line word which you might hear in TV or movies is GAYDAR. This is another amalgamation between two words. And those words are "gay" and "radar." And gaydar is just the ability to tell whether or not somebody is a homosexual. And it's not really used in a derogatory sense at all. It's mostly...you'd hear it in conversation if you're talking about some other person, and you're trying to think well maybe this person's gay, maybe they're not gay. And you talk about that person's ability to tell. And you mention somebody's gaydar. If you are in school or when you were in school, I'm sure you came across this word and that is CRAM.

So cram is used as a verb. To cram is to try and learn a large amount of information in a very, very, very short period of time. So things that you can cram for. You can cram for an exam. You could cram for a test. Cram for a quiz. We've all been there. I think we've all done it. We didn't study, and we waited until the night before. And we have to cram I hope some of these words were new for you. And that the next time you are watching a movie or listening to music, you could try to listen for some of these because again, it's good for your listening comprehension.

Now I want to hear from all of you guys. So in the comments, I want you to share with us any slang that you know, that you are familiar with. And this could be American slang. It could be British slang, Australian slang. Just write the word and tell us what it means. It's great to be able to expand our list and learn more. Even if you don't know of any slang, we still want to hear from you. Write to us. Tell us something that you think is awesome. We just want to hear from you guys. If you enjoyed this lesson, please hit that like button. And as always, thank you so much for watching, and I'll see you next time.

Bye.

Popular English Proverbs to Sound Like a Native Speaker

what's up everyone hello hello hello welcome to today's lesson my name is West this is interactive English which of course is the place that you guys you want to be when you want to practice and improve your English skills so today today I have a very cool lesson for you it's a lesson that I've been wanting to do for some time and that is talking to you about English proverbs so proverbs are you know they're they're nothing new I think many of you might be familiar with some proverbs or you've heard them before either on TV or watching a movie so some of these we'll see how many of these you know but I want to take a quick moment and say hello to people that are joining us lolly Allie nassima niya go xie kamila Hasan Raphael Jimmy and sorry again if I'm mispronouncing names I'm trying to go through this quickly Bertrand if you're joining us please I really want to hear from you say hello in the chat write your name tell me where you're from tell me if this is your first time here too I love hearing from new people that are just discovering us and even if you're watching this later please write it to us in the comments let me know your name where you're from I want to hear from you again I want to make that connection with you guys so today we're gonna talk to you about proverbs so the first thing again just to answer the question well what are proverbs just so you know in case you have not heard this English word before well a proverb it is a well-known saying that states a general truth or just gives a piece of advice so again it's basically we use them to talk about a certain situation now bonus points to anyone out there for you guys that are here with me right now bonus points who can tell me what what movie is this from I don't know if it's really an actual proverb but it was in a movie from uh while ago I don't know how old many of you are but bonus points if you can tell me which movie is this from write it in the chat just write the name of the movie you don't have to complete the proverb I'm curious to see if you know if you don't know I will tell you in a second so again proverbs they they state a general truth or they stayed a piece of advice now in the title of this I had said okay well this is going to help you sound more like a native speaker the reason the reason I said that is because I think we use proverbs a lot to talk about a certain situation and it's kind of like to capture the moment and sometimes proverbs are specific to certain languages and they they're even rooted in culture a little bit so I'm often surprised I take notice if I'm talking to an English Learner or somebody who I know that English is not their first language if we're having a discussion about a topic and they use a proverb it always catches my attention I always notice it I'm like oh wow okay cool well it says something to me about their their level of English and how well connected they are with the English language the culture because they're able to use it and use it correctly in the correct context so that's something when I teach you the meaning of these proverbs to really kind of give you an idea as to to what context you're going to use it in so yes yes yes so many of you go see a junior Nia and Forrest Gump Pablo Darwin excellent yes this is from the movie Forrest Gump it's a bit of an older movie now at this point so yes that's that's a proverb from that movie again I don't know if it's a real proverb but just wanted to kind of test your pop culture knowledge to begin with so the way we're going to do this is as we go through these I'm gonna make it a little bit of a quiz so I'm going to give you the proverb part of the proverb and you have to try and complete the rest all right so it's gonna be like multiple-choice to see if you can the reason I'm doing this is just to see if you can go ahead and I defy the proverb that this is something that you've heard that's something that you're familiar with so I kind of want to just check and see if you can identify it so it's gonna be a little bit of a quiz at that first part and then I'm actually going to tell you the answer and tell you the proverb I'm going to tell you what it means and I am gonna try and talk to you a little bit about the origin I'm not gonna spend a lot of time on this but so many times many of you when we've done lessons on idioms people have asked like well where did this come from where did this start and usually we don't focus on the origin but because we're dealing with proverbs I've looked some of this up and I've given you the origin now keep in mind that I think some of this is debatable this is not like so many times you might hear something and people say well now this person said it or this person said it so again this is just I did some quick checking online to see what it said and then this is what I found so again don't take this as like oh this is absolutely where it came from you might find different things but the reason again I want to highlight like why proverbs are so important because again we use them all the time often when I teach proverbs people will tell me that you know oh I have we have a similar

first part when in mmm so what do you guys think write your answer write it in the chat write it in the comments what city are we are we talking about when you might hear this proverb and then I'll let you know I think it is a bit more common and you guys could tell me if it's the same in your native language or maybe it's completely different but yes excellent awesome lolly whiffy so yes When in Rome exactly in the full the full proverb When in Rome do as the Romans do most of the time and this is just my opinion I think probably like 80 or 90% of the time most people just throw out like when in Rome because you people get the idea and what it means is that when you are visiting another country or another place that you should follow their customs you should follow their rules you should follow their traditions the the people that live there so for example like when I lived in Korea and I would go out to eat dinner in Korea you know that people use chopsticks I you know growing up in the United States we didn't often use chopsticks but it'd be something like you know okay When in Rome I should use chopsticks I should I should follow that custom when when having a meal so that would be kind of an example When in Rome so again When in Rome do as the Romans do when you travel go somewhere you should try and follow those customs and again III think this is so true as many places as I've been I've tried to always follow this and and keep in mind we'll eat if this is not the way it's done in the United States you know doesn't matter you should try to follow their customs try and respect the culture and the traditions and and keep that in mind and you know when in Rome the expression if you want to know it was found in a letter from Saint Augustine and 3390 ad this information right here is probably not something you really need to know but many of you have asked like oh well where do these come from so that is where it came from the next one alright are you ready a picture is worth oh wait I just realized I see a mistake not if should say a picture is worth uh words all right how many words what do you think a hundred a thousand a million all right and again that is a typo right there I just realize it it's amazing as you go through I create these lessons I create these slides I go through them I check them again like okay this is good this is perfect yes I got everything and then as we're doing this I'm like oh my goodness simple mistake alright it should be is a picture is worth uh words what do you guys think alright I this is a common one I think I think you you people hear this all the time so we're getting some different answers in here but the correct answer is a picture and again I made the same typo on this slide a picture is worth a thousand words that's the that is the proverb that you will hear a picture is worth a thousand words and it is the the notion that or the idea that a picture can provide more information than words or that that you can basically summarize some complex idea or thought with just a picture you don't have to have this long written document to explain something a picture can usually tell us a lot of information fun fact as I was looking through this it seemed like the original one was saying a picture is worth ten thousand words but that was the that was the earliest use and then I came across this it said an early use of the exact phrase as it is here as people say it today appeared in 1918 in a newspaper ad for the San Antonio light that is I guess the earliest they could find this this exact phrase printed somewhere a picture is worth a thousand words so again that's just like yeah you know you usually I feel like you might hear it in a TV show where you know somebody's like a cop show or something a detective and they got a picture of somebody and somebody's like they see the picture that yeah picture is worth a thousand words that's that picture summarizes everything it says it all as to why they went a hundred as to why they got a thousand honestly I have no idea like I said I read that the original one it seemed it was ten thousand words but then what became popular is this one a picture is worth a thousand words the next one that I have for you guys is this one okay don't mmm the hand that feeds you don't mmm the hand that feeds you I'm getting ready to have a daughter so maybe later on in life if I'm arguing with my daughter or something maybe I might say this say hey don't mmm the hand that feeds you what do you think bite chew or rip okay and I think a lot of times again you can kind of put them in context based on what this statement is and you can put the meaning in context yes excellent thank you Mary go see autumn on Katherine nuyen all right yes bite bite bite bite bite don't bite the hand that feeds you and that just means if you tell somebody that it's like you're it's like you're giving a warning to them like hey don't disrespect me because I'm the one who's helping you I'm the one that's supporting you I'm the one that's providing you some benefit so it's saying like don't disrespect someone who is helping you or providing some benefits all right like don't bite the hand that feeds you and this one first scene in print in the 18th century Wow a long time ago by a political writer Edmund Burke so don't bite the hand that feeds you it's a good one I like it next one I think this one it's one it's probably my favorite of all of them and I think it's probably the most common one too and I know that in other languages there is either a similar proverb or they're just joining us we

about a person that you shouldn't judge a person whether they're a nice person or a mean person based on the way that that looks our don't judge a book by its cover it's it's what's inside that counts that's where the real value is what's inside and it's especially that's true for like a book because the story is why you're reading a book it doesn't matter what kind of cover it is on the outside but this is just so you know the phrase is attributed to a 1944 edition of the African journal American speech you can't judge a book by its binding that was actually the original by its binding and then it kind of changed into cover and we have been using don't judge a book by its cover ever since so that is like I said I think this is one of my favorites and I think it's one that yeah we use quite often or I like to say because it's so true it's so true quickly I want to let you guys know again you can check us out on patreon if you haven't if you like what we do and want to show us some love check us out on patreon there are some cool rewards and I will leave a link in the description for you guys check that out so again if you are joining us a little late we are talking about popular English proverbs there meaning and kind of the context in which we use them so let's continue with our next proverb right here all right the grass is always greener on the other side the grass is always on the other side this is actually I think again the full-time you might see it the grow the grass is always on the other side of the fence often I think it's shortened to this sometimes it's even shortened just to say the grass is always greener what do you think all right the grass is always greener on the other side so it depends on how you're looking at something somebody asked what the meaning is a binding the binding is kind of what what holds the book together like its spine so it's not the cover the front of the book but its spine that holds those pages together so excellent you guys Wow I think you know a lot of these you guys are rocking them I hope that you guys are able to use these in conversations if you're talking to somebody and throw these out there depending on the situation but yes the grass is always greener on the other side you could add make it the full proverb the grass is always greener on the other side of the fence I just often as I say it's like When in Rome you kind of shorten it you truncate it and this one you say you know yeah the grass is always greener and people know what you're talking about they know based on the situation that you're speaking of because it's talking about when people think the the life or situation of others it always looks better than their own that oh this situation is always better than their situation is always better than mine it's like oh the grass is always greener even if it's not true even if it's just it's all in your mind that you think this situation that this life is better and you think the grass is always greener this is so true nowadays with with Instagram and the way everybody sees other people's lives and they just see these pictures these snapshots and they're traveling they're doing all these things and people think wow oh my gosh their life is so amazing it's so wonderful except that Instagram is not true it is not the the actual reality of somebody's life even now like people will talk see us like because again people want to post pictures of the amazing things in life the cool things nobody nobody really posts a picture of them like watching Netflix but so again this this is really applicable today because of the way that we view each other based on the information that we have the grass is always greener another example that I think of is when I've lived in different countries you know I'll I'll leave a country or something and I'll go back to United States and well when I'm in a country you know when or when you guys are in a country you start realizing that oh like this doesn't work as well or this is not how we usually do it oh I wish it were like the other way and then when you go back all right to your home country you start to realize all the good things that actually existed there because it's like huh I didn't appreciate this when I was there it's like oh the grass is always greener you don't know and you you don't know until you've gone that but what was good what was the better situation so yes this is great this is a great proverb I like using it I also like using the next one which is this one what do you guys think mmm heads are better than one I think I think even if you've never heard of this you could probably take a good guess and get the right answer what do you think two three or four what do you think I mean again they're there you can get the right answer but again think of just think of the proverb all right you're talking to another person what would somebody say mmm heads are better than one what what do you think write your answer in the chat in the comments just want to hear you guys all right so yes all right Thank You Lally Christina Garcia Pablo Javed lady Olivia gosh you guys you rocked it excellent two heads are better than one and I don't know why I thought that that picture of the giraffe was funny so I threw that in there so when you're talking to somebody and you know you're like two heads are better than one it's basically just saying that it's helpful to have the advice or opinion of another person that so that you don't have to make the decision all you know solve it ask your partner ask your husband your wife ask your children whoever your friend two heads are better than one why should you ask them because two heads are better than one then yes where was it this proverb was first recorded and John Hay woods a dialogue containing a number in effect of all proverbs in the English tongue 1546 and yes I realize though there are a bunch of mistakes in there and you can look it up if you want I checked it because I was like wait a second is this was this a typo but apparently this was actually the name of this this document or this story I don't even know or this book or this paper even with all of these mistakes that's where this proverb was kind of first found and first recorded so yes yes three is good for is confusing yes exactly the more people sometimes it gets there becomes more problems in trying to solve a problem too many people might not be a good thing but two heads definitely is better than one what about so for this next one all right I'm gonna make it a little more difficult I am NOT going to give you a B or C I'm not going to give you multiple choice I'm just gonna give you a blank and I want to see if you can complete it alright what do you think better mmm then sorry I mean if you've heard this before then you know write that answer write it in the chat write it in the comments even if you haven't heard it try to try to put it together alright you know right right what feels natural to you because I think oftentimes we're unsure even though at some point you may have heard this in the past you have met you maybe you have read it somewhere and you just don't remember exactly sure like Oh Dwight do I know this just go ahead and write it it doesn't matter if you make a mistake here this is the one place where it is perfectly fine I encourage you to make mistakes all right better mmm then sorry okay getting some different answers yes the correct one is better safe than sorry somebody might say you know hey better safe than sorry and what this means is it's better or wiser to be cautious and careful than to be hasty and rash and do something you may later regret so instead of like if if you have to you know maybe you have to get somewhere and you can either you can either fly or you can take the train and you think of like though maybe the way maybe there's a plane strike or something there's an airline strike and you're not sure if it's gonna be flying you're thinking well it's faster to take the it's faster to take the plane but I I know that if I take the train I'm going to get there it's not going to be a problem better safe than sorry I'm gonna take the train even though a plane might be faster but it could get cancelled and then I'm really screwed so it's a situation and that you know you the decision that you make is the safer one it's the more cautious and careful one even though the other decision might be better if it works out you'd say you know it's better safe than sorry better to be safe than to be sorry okay so it's a good one that if somebody's asking you you know two heads are better than one somebody's asking you for your advice and they're like I don't know what I should do if I do this decision well I'm gonna get there quicker I'm gonna get this done faster or it's gonna be easier but if I do this other one then it's gonna be slower but I know it'll work and you might say you know I would just do this one I'd do the slower one better safe than sorry you know you don't want to regret this so just take make the safe decision better safe than sorry next one let's do this one so now you know if you guys didn't know that one now you can use it this one I think maybe you've heard of all right if first this is something I say to students all the time or anybody in life I even say it to myself if at first you don't succeed what what do you think how how would you finish that proverb it is a very very very famous proverb a very proper mmm a very popular one what do you guys think write your answer in the chat or again if you're watching this later write it in the comments if at first you don't succeed what do you think all right what should you do and again there's different ways that I think you could finish this sentence the the proverb is one that you'll hear most often but again you could you could finish it in different ways so yes actually excellent good job Katherine lolly perfect if at first you don't succeed what you would hear most often people would say try and try again if at first you don't succeed try again or you could say or again you know first you don't succeed try and try again keep going don't give up keep trying alright so this is a statement of encouragement you want to encourage somebody who has failed or they didn't succeed to just keep doing it don't don't give up on it keep trying again and again and like I said I use it a lot I say it to students because so many times and I felt the same way when I've been learning Spanish and Romanian that you feel like giving up you're like oh alright I'm not making any progress it's it's too difficult like I'm just gonna stop for a while it's okay to take a break but I would always say you know you know just keep trying don't don't completely give up on it try again and again because at some point you're going to make it you're going to succeed you're going to reach your goals or that is the best way to potentially reach your goals and what you want to achieve and what you want to accomplish first you don't succeed try and try again this proverb I think it makes sense it was traced back to the teachers manual by American educator Thomas H Palmer and the children of the new forest by English novelist Frederick Marriott 1792 to 14 to 18 48 again this is information you you don't really need to know but just so you happen to have it in case you're out one night at trivia and somebody asks this then you'd be like oh I know where this proverb came from so again I would encourage all of you the same thing if you are your you're learning English you're trying to improve your skills you're trying to practice your your skills even if it feels like you're not making progress or progress is slow again hitting that like button so that we know that you guys enjoy these lessons so I hope that you guys enjoyed this lesson on English proverbs that you can that you understood them and depending on the situation that you can go out and use these Proverbs in conversation the next time you're having a conversation most of the time they're used in speaking it's not often you would see it in in writing unless somebody's writing a dialogue if they're writing a conversation so again this is more for for speaking for conversation or you might hear it listening to a TV show or a movie so please please please like and share the lesson with anybody that you know who's trying to practice and improve their English skills write to us in the comments let me know which proverb do you like which proverb or which proverb did you learn I just want to hear from you guys and again you can join us right there these social media classes were on Facebook Twitter Instagram and of course right here at YouTube Thank You Lally Olivia go SIA Rafi ottoman ceci you Yin it's me Molly Amano thank you thank you thank you so Jen Adriano Thibault Curtis Gor to this I'm trying to just sorry again if I mispronounce names I just try and go through this quickly quickly quickly but thank you guys for joining me keep an eye out for a next lesson not sure when that will be I know this was a a random Sunday lesson but with the end of the year approaching there's a lot of end-of-the-year craziness right now but keep an eye out thank you guys for being here with me today I hope you enjoyed the lesson and I will see you next time so long

Popular Internet & Computer Symbols to Improve Your Vocabulary

Today I'm going to talk to you about some common internet symbols that you probably see every day and what those words are in English. That's coming up. So most of us use the internet every day. Most of us probably use it too much. So we see these symbols all the time. These are symbols that are on the keyboard, but maybe you don't know what these names are in English. And it's important to know the names because if we're communicating with somebody else, especially in business. We need to be able to tell people the right information. Even for something as simple as giving out your email address, you need to know these symbols.

What are these words? We need to know these words. So I'm going to tell you. So the first symbol that I want to talk to you about is this one, right here. And if you've studied English grammar you may be looking at this and thinking well, it's just a period. Or maybe it's a full stop. Well, it's neither one of those. If we're talking about it as an internet symbol, it is just a dot. When you see this if you're looking at a website or talking about an email address, you would just say dot. Dot. Dot. Dot. Dot. This is a dot. So say dot.

The next symbol, this one right here, is also used when we're talking about email addresses. And you would just say "At." If you're saying this symbol, you just say "At." It's like you're pointing somebody to a specific location. Where is it at? So for example, if I were to give you our email address, I would say it is... Where can you find it? You can find it at gmail. And then everything pretty much always ends with a dot something. All email addresses and most web addresses end with .com But there are other dots out there. But that is how you would correctly say your email address or or somebody else's email address.

At something, dot something. Now, perhaps the most common internet symbol that we use, and people even talk about this symbol nowadays is this one right here. And it is called a hashtag. And we use a hashtag as a way of labeling a conversation or labeling a topic. Most of the time when we post stuff on Facebook and Twitter, we will use a hashtag to identify that it's from us, Interactive English. Just do a search, #InteractiveEnglish. See what you find.

Another symbol you might see is this line right here, and this is called an underscore. Now this line is low. It's at the bottom because it's used to underline words or phrases in order to give emphasis. And I think it's more common that people use an underscore in documents or passwords if they want to make it look like there's a space in between the words. So for example, I could write... And now it looks like there's a space between the two words. And that sometimes makes it just a little bit easier to read.

Next is a slash. And a slash...we can make it a little more specific and say a backslash or a forward slash. Often times you don't actually have to say this word. But it's always good to know what it means. If I have a Documents folder, I'm looking for a specific file. And you could say, well it's in... That would be how to find this video.

Another internet symbol that you will encounter from time to time is this one right here. And it is called an asterisk. And we use an asterisk mostly to kind of make a note about something, maybe a footnote. Sometimes when you guys write a sentence in the comments like we asked you to do I might point out a correction and use an asterisk to make a note about that correction, so that you are aware of it.

Another symbol that you might see from time to time is this one right here. And this is a hyphen. If this is a longer line, then it would be called a dash. So a hyphen is the shorter one. A dash is the longer one. Now, you're probably wondering... What the hell is the difference between a hyphen and a dash? Well a hyphen, which is the shorter line, is used to join two words. And these could be compound adjectives like... We could also use it with compound nouns. A dash, on the other hand, which is that longer line, is used when we want to add comments, statements, or emphasis to a sentence.

And there is a space on either side of a dash. Another internet symbol that you'll see on your keyboard is this one right here. And the caps lock just means that all the letters that you type are going to be capital letters. We're using capital letters, maybe to give emphasis to something. But caps lock is just a way of making sure that everything we type is in capital letters.

If you enjoyed this lesson, please share it with anybody you know who's trying to improve their English skills. As always, thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time.

Practice PREPOSITIONS in English | Advanced Grammar Lesson

hello and welcome to today's lesson my name is wes this is interactive english and our channel is all about just trying to help everyone practice and improve their english skills and work toward achieving english fluency so today i have it's a bit of a practice lesson it's definitely a practice lesson but there's also a bit of grammar as well as vocabulary i have some words and phrases that maybe you don't know and you will find useful but specifically we're going to be talking about prepositions we're going to be learning and practicing the use of prepositions which is why i said it is bit uh has a little bit more of a grammar focus but also i'm going to incorporate some of that some new vocabulary in there so i'd start out by saying that prepositions can be very difficult and confusing for english learners because these are not words that typically stand out they're very small function words that are easy to forget we can use so many different prepositions with with adjectives and verbs and the one thing i would say is that when when i hear a learner make a mistake and maybe they use the incorrect preposition it does not mean that somebody probably won't understand what you're saying i think even if you make a mistake people will understand what you're trying to say this is just a matter of when when i mention working toward fluency so that um you were speaking correctly you were speaking accurately and i think by far the best way to learn prepositions is more reading and more listening which is exactly what we're going to do in today's lesson i'm going to give you some sentences that you can read that you can listen to me speak and use these prepositions and of course we are going to be practicing so i encourage all of you who are watching this right now to participate in today's lesson i'm going to give you different sentences and i want you to complete the sentence with the correct preposition so yeah yes rod prepositions get they prepositions can be nightmares sometimes so i hope that that these are not too much of a nightmare we're going to start with questions that i think are a little easier and then we're going to get a little more difficult and i've tried to choose prepositions that i think people may sometimes confuse and ones that well we'll get into it there the one thing i would say is that prepositions uh there are some rules that you can follow but i would not focus on just rules because sometimes there are just certain prepositions that are going to follow specific nouns or verbs or adjectives and that's what i mean by more reading more listening will help you understand um which ones to use so let's just go ahead and begin and the first question the first sentence that i have for you is this one right here i told you we will start um with something a bit easier and then it's going to get a little more difficult as we move on so the it's just a question that somebody might ask if i'm talking to a friend or whoever if i meet a new class and talk to some students i might just say hey what time do you wake up um the morning what preposition are we going to use in that blank we're talking about the morning which is a period of the day all right excellent lolly yes the i think most of you should probably i think most of you know this um were you going to use the preposition in in the morning and this is this is an example of i'd say if you're learning prepositions of time there are certain rules that you can follow if you have these periods of time throughout the day morning afternoon evening you're going to use in in the morning in the afternoon in the evening all right excellent uh great job uh esther angela silvio good to see you um so i i think many of you should be familiar with using this preposition of time let's look at the next one um what preposition best completes this sentence all right she wore a scarf um her neck okay again uh i just want you to fill in the blank with a preposition and this is why i said like i'm giving you some sentences you are reading these sentences you're going to listen to me and you're going to see the correct answer and the more you read the more you listen the better i think you're going to understand all of these prepositions so the the there's the one thing that i think uh prepositions can be tricky is sometimes you can use more than one this is an example where i think you could use one of two prepositions the one that i was looking for which i gave you in my answer is around she wore a scarf around her neck you could say she wore a scarf on her neck but i i've tried to give you that picture because i think when you're talking about something like a scarf most people are going to use a round because of the meaning of the preposition you're talking about around you're talking about something that moves along the side of something else and it kind of just goes around it so a scarf is something you would wear around your neck um another example would be something like you wear a belt around your waist or a satellite might move around the earth or another key expression would be somebody saying that something is uh around the other side of something else like oh it's around the other side of the fence um and you have to move along that side of the fence and go around it so in this case i think a round would probably be the preposition that most people would use but again if you say on it's fine everybody understands that um and i think that works as well too um so let's go to the next one all right uh i hope you enjoy learning um interactive english all right what preposition would you use to complete this sentence and uh i i think it's true i hope i hope that you do enjoy learning um interactive english which preposition best completes that statement so that it makes sense it's easy to understand and this is a preposition that i think we you might commonly follow that might commonly follow learning if you're talking about learning um someone else all right again i saw some great answers uh yes uh lolly uh eloisa i i think uh again you could use one of two the one that i'd say i think more common people would learn with someone i so notice some people put from i think you could use from but i think mostly you you're talking about learning with someone you were doing this thing together and i'd say look i hope you really enjoy learning with interactive english um but again you could use from it also makes sense so those i think are the two prepositions that you would want to use to complete this sentence and it's true i really hope that you guys do enjoy learning with interactive english and i did want to take a quick moment to talk to you about a opportunity to not only learn with interactive english and learn with me but to speak to me as well we just recently launched our first course at the interactive english school it is a speaking course that's called speak up and enrollment is now open that this is a speaking course it is a 10-week course that uh we're going to meet once a week for 50 minutes and it's all about just giving you more opportunities to speak and and practice speaking um so i hope that the way that again it works is that i've each each week there's going to be a topic and i've created a bunch of questions like expressing opinions and it's all about just giving you more speaking opportunities because we're going to have the class on zoom and we're going to come together we're going to look at the questions and then we're going to break into smaller groups and that'll give you more opportunities to speak and i'm going to be jumping in and out of different groups talking to everyone making sure that everybody is getting as many speaking opportunities as possible so it's a 10-week course it's mostly for intermediate to advanced learners and again we're going to be looking at a bunch of different topics and talking about that and it's just all about speaking speaking and more speaking and what i think this class is going to just help you do is build your confidence help you with your listening skills because you're not only going to be speaking but you're going to be listening to others and we're also going to work on vocabulary like new words phrases

idioms expressions that are related to the topic we do a little bit of practice with pronunciation as well to help people speak clearly and i i really hope that again it's going to help you overcome any speaking anxiety there is a link down in the description so please check out that link if you think you might be interested in joining speak up this is a class that we're launching now a class class is going to start on september 17th and 18th so you have until uh you have until september 15th to enroll in the course that's the final thing i want to say um about that you have until september 15th and we will run this class again in the future um because right now we're only starting out with a few different class times and um we will expand on this in the future again if you guys want any more information about speak up check out the link you can find out about times the price and all that all that good information okay so let's just jump back to our lesson that was my own little promo that i wanted to do and let you guys know about uh is available let's go back and continue talking about prepositions and uh here this is well this is actually a true a true statement um i'm missing we're missing two prepositions which prepositions would complete this sentence again i think hopefully these are maybe a little easier and they will get more difficult my birthday is um november this year it's um a thursday all right which prepositions uh would you use to complete this sentence all right we're talking about uh a month and then a day so again these are more some rules that you can follow um so this is true uh i think you guys got that one excellent my birthday is in november this year it's on a thursday so if we're talking about some of these prepositions of time we use in with months in january in october in november and on when we're talking about days on monday on tuesday on wednesday all right next is uh this one which is well let's let's they're they're missing two it's easy for learners to get fed um there's two blanks prepositions all right this is actually a phrasal verb and if you don't know what a phrasal verb is it's a verb that well it's a verb plus a preposition but in this case it's a three-word phrasal verb so which two prepositions follow that verb all right what do you guys think it's easy for learners to get fed um prepositions all right excellent uh lolly armin louisa uh rainier angela maria hellum so the answer is yes you are fed up with it is a three-word phrasal verb you have the verb plus a preposition when we talk about phrasal verbs those are those are other phrasal verbs are also um they can be confusing as well but if somebody is fed up with something it means that they are annoyed or unhappy or maybe they're just bored with some situation uh the next one is think about it building office home you're just you're talking about that location in would refer to that you are inside or on the interior so in this case you could say like where are you oh i'm in the gym or where are you i'm at the gym either one is okay but i'd say it's more common for somebody to use at simply because when you're asking the question where are you somebody's asking about your location they want to know the location uh they want to know where you are at so in that case uh i think it's more common for somebody to say hey i'm at the gym so keep that in mind if you're talking about at and in those can be a little confusing if you want to know what the what's the difference at is location in is specific location that you are inside some place now the next one um we knew the plane would leave um time so we had to run and we just barely made it um time all right so you may be looking at this and thinking well wait this that's a little strange because both of these prepositions come before uh the word time all right but there's two separate uh two different meanings and two different situations that i'm referring to so we knew the plane would leave um time so we had to run and we just barely made it um time all right which prepositions would complete this sentence right here all right what do you think uh excellent um yes savitha rod um angela perfect so we knew that the plane would leave on time so we had to run and we just barely made it in time so i wanted to highlight the difference between on time and in time so if you say that something is on time it means that it is done or it happens when it should something might arrive on time when it should or perhaps it's going to leave on time when it should in time just you're referring to something that is just early enough that we finish the project in time we finished right before it was the deadline and you finished early enough you do something in time so i think of a situation in that um in that sense like you're you're doing something you have to meet some kind of deadline and you try to get something done in time in this case we made it in time uh we caught the plane just in time we were early enough to get on the plane so on time versus in time uh this one is told you a little bit of vocabulary um an expression i'd say well that people can use sometimes i'm not sure what we should do i feel like we're um a rock and a hard place which preposition would complete that sentence and again i told you this is um this is more of i think an expression that you may hear from time to time if people are referring to this specific situation which i'll talk about in just a moment so which preposition would you use i'm not sure what we should do i feel like we're a rock and a hard place all right excellent uh anna angela um so so bemida we're talking about between i'm not sure what we do what what we should do i feel like we're between a rock and a hard place so i told you that this is an expression um to be in between or just between a rock and a hard place you don't really need to use in there um that you could but it's more of a typo the expression is to be between a rock and a hard place and it means that you're caught in a situation that is difficult because there's no way out you have um a problem on this side you have a problem on that side and you'd say you're stuck uh between a rock and a hard place and you could be talking about some physical problem that there's nowhere to go or it could be um just more of a um an analogy that there is some just difficult situation that you don't know how to handle and you could say that you're between a rock and a hard place so that's a good expression to know the next one uh and this is true one day i dream um hiking mount kilimanjaro i actually um i actually i think i'd use this in a previous preposition lesson a preposition quiz that i had if you saw that one maybe you remember what preposition that would be a little more appropriate in this case uh there there are actually uh a couple of ones that you could use what do you think one day i dream hiking mount kilimanjaro what do you think all right so i think uh all right i think there are two different prepositions that you could use all right i chose of one day i dream of hiking mount kilimanjaro and the reason i chose of i think when somebody dreams of something they're talking about something they hope to do in the future that they wish they could do this it is interchangeable with a bout you could also use a belt that's perfectly fine but i wanted to make a little bit of a distinction between of dream of and dream about because i think often when people say dream about they dreamt about something they're talking about an actual dream when they're sleeping at night and you could say well last night i dreamt about this thing i dreamt about hiking mount kilimanjaro but if i dream of it then i'm talking about some kind of hope or wish that i want to do in the future the one thing that i would say that um is just me in this sentence i'm using it in the present tense if somebody is talking about something they hope to do or wish to do in the present tense i think it's more common that they would use of one day i dream of doing this all right if you're talking about something in the past that same situation that in the past you dreamed about doing this thing then i think that people might use about um i don't know why this is just my opinion about a difference between uh of and about if it's the present tense i think people might be more inclined to use of if it's the past or maybe you're talking about the present perfect like oh i've always dreamt about hiking mount kilimanjaro in that case i think i might use about so that's just like a little subtle nuance between the two but really they're interchangeable dream of dream about when you're talking about something you hope to do in the future the next one the audience was captivated the performance all right the audience was captivated mmm the performance so in this case um the word captivated is a key because you often follow this adjective with this specific preposition uh the audience was captivated um the performance so think about that word captivated which preposition would typically follow that adjective you are captivated something excellent um uh corey excellent great job yes mina you are captivated by something the audience was captivated by the performance if you are captivated by something it just it really holds your attention and you're really focused on that so in this case a performance everybody's watching it they they it's holding their attention they cannot look away they are captivated by this thing so again this is a good example of an adjective that is often followed by this specific preposition captivated by now the next one is another it's another expression that people might say from time to time

kind of depending on the situation it's better to ask um forgiveness than permission all right what what preposition is going to complete this uh this saying that people might use it's better to ask um forgiveness than permission and i told you this is a way of more building vocabulary as well because i told you this is something that people may say from time to time kind of i guess maybe giving advice in this case and the key is ask if you're using that verb you ask um something everybody you guys rock that you ask for something it's better to ask for forgiveness than permission and i told you it's a famous saying because when it's used is like in a situation where you need to act immediately you need to make a decision but that decision could cause problems so you're going to ask for forgiveness and ask to you're going to apologize it for it later instead of trying to get approval to do it so i think of a situation in that

um you want to do something maybe um you want to go out with your friends or something if you're you want to go out with your friends and uh you want to leave work early and you're worried that your boss is going to get upset somebody said hey you know instead of asking for permit it's better to ask for forgiveness than permission just go ahead and do it have fun and then you will apologize later for the thing that you did wrong so this is a good famous saying that you may hear from time to time then we have um this one how would you complete this sentence i'm thinking um a number between one and ten and this is another one where i feel like people may think that they can use a couple of different prepositions all right what do you think how would you which preposition would you use to best complete this sentence if i say hey you know i'm thinking um a number between 1 and 10.

what would you say how would you complete that sentence right there uh excellent so i think many of you get this because you're familiar with that saying if somebody says i'm thinking of something like i'm thinking of a number between one and ten but i wanted to highlight the difference between thinking of and thinking about in in this case i think you're you're overwhelmingly going to use of if you're you're telling somebody you want them to guess and you're like oh okay i'm thinking of an animal guess what it is um so if you think of something it's something that you're not aware of and you have to imagine it you have to in this case you have to imagine the number um but if you're thinking about something to me then you're taking time to consider it so in this situation where you're asking somebody uh to imagine something uh you're going to use of i'm thinking of a number between one and ten i'm thinking of an animal can you guess what it is um but when you think about something you're really taking some time to consider it so i wanted to highlight the difference between think of and think about so again this is a it's a great way to practice prepositions because you are reading these prepositions in these sentences you are listening to me use these prepositions and talk about them and you are practicing as well the more you practice the better i think you're going to understand um all of these prepositions and how to use them so i hope that you enjoyed the lesson don't forget if you are interested in working on your speaking and you want more speaking practice um you can join our new course check it out link is in the description down below if you want to find out more information about speak up thank you guys so much for joining me today i appreciate you being here on this sunday and i hope i hope that you learned something new thank you guys so much for watching um just give some shout outs uh mahmoud aloisa najma learn english with kd excellent uh omnidi lali great to see you thank you guys for joining me hope that you have a wonderful week because sunday tomorrow's monday hope you guys enjoy the week um where is it uh yoka shakira though angela anna um corey have a great week i'm gonna end it now i will see you guys next time so long

Present Perfect vs Present Perfect Continuous | When to use each so that you don't make mistakes

i have studied english i have been studying english are these sentences the same or are they different let's find out [Music] hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english and the channel is all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today i want to help you improve your grammar because i want to talk about the difference between two verb tenses the present perfect tense and the present perfect continuous and these two verb tenses can confuse many english learners who may not be sure about how and when to use them as well as if there are any differences between these two tenses so before we talk about the differences between these two tenses i want to focus on how and when we use them and let's first begin with the present perfect tense which on its own can be very confusing because there are many languages that do not even have a present perfect tense so i want to first begin with how you're going to form the present perfect you're going to have a helping verb and a main verb the helping verb is going to be have and the main verb is going to be the past participle and we often use the present perfect to talk about a finished action in the past at an unspecified time we don't know when it's happened and it may have happened once or even more than once so let's look at this sentence right here i've been to china there i am right there again we have the helping verb have plus the past participle been it is the past participle of the verb to be and you know that this happened in the past it's finished but you don't know when it's an unspecified time i've been to china or i could say well i've been to barcelona twice this happened in the past we don't know when but we know that it happened more than once there were two different trips to barcelona one thing that i want to say about the present perfect tense is that when you use it the the result is really what matters it's like you're more interested in the result than the action and i will come back to this when i talk to you about the present perfect continuous so let's let's think of this situation right here i'll i'll use a question and say have you hit the like button all right this is a question in the present perfect the the helping verb have the past participle hit that's our main verb have you hit the like button and again i'm really more interested in that result and i really am and i hope you would say yes i have hit the like button it happened in the past sometime between when the video started and right now and if you have let me know write that to me in the comments just say yes i have hit the like button practice writing using the present perfect and then i will tell you that you are awesome all right so with all of those examples that i just gave you we were talking about finished actions in the past so let's now move to the present perfect continuous and let's look at how this verb tenses form again we're going to use the helping verb have plus the past participle of the verb to be which has been have been plus our main verb with an ing at the end all right so in this case it's like we have two helping verbs have been and then the main verb and we use the present perfect continuous to talk about an unfinished action that started in the past it has continued to right now which is the present and then it will likely continue into the future so i could say well even right now i've been teaching this lesson it's an unfinished action it started in the past it has continued until right now and it's going to continue into the future and i hope you keep watching now one thing that i will say about the present perfect continuous is that when you use this verb tense the focus is more on the action because something is continuing so with the present perfect tense the focus is on the result with the present perfect continuous the focus is more on the action one thing that i want to remind you of and the reason why i'm so close is because i want you to remember this is that there are many non-action verbs that you should not use in the continuous tense and i'm putting a list of these verbs up here right now so you you should not use these verbs with the present perfect continuous but again with english there the people are always breaking these rules especially in spoken english but just to give you an example the if i give you a sentence like oh i have an iphone i'm talking about uh ownership possession i could use it in the present perfect tense and say yeah i've had an iphone for a long time uh it's an iphone 6 so it's pretty old but i could not use it in the continuous tense and say i've been having an iphone that just sounds awkward so just keep that in mind there are many non-action verbs that you should just avoid using in the continuous tense so now let's look at some differences between the present perfect tense and the present perfect continuous and i want to make some quick comparisons so you can see a clear difference between these two verb tenses especially how the focus is different so let's look at these two sentences right here we have redecorated our home and we have been redecorating our home the sentence in the present perfect we have redecorated our home it's talking about an action that started in the past and it's now finished we don't know when it started we don't know when it ended but the focus is on that result that yes it's finished the home it's it has been redecorated with the present perfect continuous we're talking about an unfinished action it started in the past and it's still going on right now so the focus is on that action that continuing action also and this may help you know when you should use the present perfect continuous if we're talking about an unfinished action that started in the recent past people may use this verb tense with the words recently or lately so i could say well recently we've been redecorating our home or lately we've been redecorating our home that tells me that this action it started in the recent past it's a continuing action that's gone until now and yes it's probably going to continue into the future here are another couple of sentences i have thought about buying a new phone or i've been thinking about buying a new phone so with the present perfect it suggests that okay i i thought about this in the past and then maybe i decided well no not to buy a new phone it's just something i thought about and then i stopped thinking about it and as you can see i still have this old iphone 6 and maybe i just made the decision not to buy one if i use the present perfect continuous and say well i've been thinking about buying a new phone that that suggests that i have not made a decision not yet i'm still thinking about it and maybe maybe in the future i'm going to make a decision and upgrade and get a new phone because yes this iphone 6 it's pretty old and then we get to these two sentences right here the sentences that you have been waiting for this entire lesson i have studied english versus i have been studying english and the difference between these two sentences is nothing well pretty much nothing because they're interchangeable you can use them and they basically mean the same thing because with both of these sentences we're talking about an unfinished action and i know this can be a bit confusing because you're probably thinking like wait a second we you told us that the present perfect tense is used to talk about finished actions at an unspecified time in the past yes that is true but you can also use the present perfect tense to talk about an unfinished action that started in the past and and it's gone on for a duration of time or since a point in time and those are two key words that i really want you to remember and be aware of because we often use the present perfect with those words for and since so i could say i have studied english for three years a duration of time or i could say i've studied english since 2018 both of those sentences mean the exact same thing the only difference is for and since i could also say this using the present perfect continuous i've been studying english for three years or i've been studying english since 2018. so if somebody were to ask you how long have you been learning english you could respond with any one of those sentences it's it's really your pick there there's not much difference between them but there is a very there is very slight difference of course i didn't want to i didn't want to disappoint you i wanted to really get into details here so i was saving it for the very end and let's talk about those slight differences right now which is going to help you kind of will not only improve your comprehension but your overall fluency as well so the good news is is that when the present perfect and the present perfect continuous are basically interchangeable and they pretty much mean the same thing we're only talking about a handful of verbs we're talking about the verbs like teach play learn study and work all right so those are five verbs that when you're using either verb tense they're fairly interchangeable and they mean the same thing but again there may be a slight difference in a certain context situation it may be more appropriate to use one over the other so let's look at these sentences right here we've lived in budapest for four years and we've been living in budapest since 2017. so just looking at them generally speaking they're very similar they're they pretty much the same you could use them interchangeably but there may be a slight difference when talking about the permanent versus temporary so let me give you a couple of other sentences that i think are probably a little easier to understand when i talk about the difference between permanent and temporary so you're more likely to use the present perfect tense when when talking about an unfinished action that's more permanent and you're more likely to use the present perfect continuous when you're talking about an unfinished action that's perhaps temporary so i could say well i've worked for the company for 25 years i'm using the present perfect it's unfinished because i still work for the company and and it's more permanent it makes you think well i'm not looking for a job i'm not going to change jobs i'm just giving you this information i've worked for the company for 25 years if i say this that well i usually work downtown but i've been working at home ever since the pandemic started in this case i'm i'm referring to an action that started in the past it's unfinished because i'm still working at home but it's only temporary it makes you think that in the future then perhaps i'm not going to be working at home anymore i'm talking about a temporary situation i've been working at home ever since the pandemic started so hopefully that makes it a little easier to understand the difference when i say permanent versus temporary and you could even apply this to other sentences that you may use interchangeably so those two sentences that i told you a moment ago we have lived in budapest for four years or we've been living in budapest since 2017.

study you can use these verb tenses interchangeably you you could read a little more information into it if you want to think about whether something is going to be more permanent or if something is temporary i hope that that this lesson was easy to follow and easy to understand i know that i went i tried to go into a fair bit of detail in in talking about this information so that you have a better understanding to help you improve your comprehension but also your fluency as well if you are talking to somebody and you're trying to explain some situation that you are going to use the appropriate verb tense between the present perfect and the present perfect continuous if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time

Present Simple vs Present Continuous | How to Improve Your Grammar

what's up everyone welcome to today's lesson which is a super awesome grammar lesson and I promise you if you stick around you will learn something new [Music] what's up my name's Wes this is Interactive English which is the place that you want to be to practice and improve your English skills now we get so many comments and requests from learners asking us like we want to know more about the verb tenses verb tenses verb tenses verb tenses so ask and you shall receive we are slowly going through each verb tense and we're gonna talk to you about them and practice them and today we are going to look at the present simple and the present continuous now I know that you might be thinking oh wow this is gonna be this is this is too easy I've already done this I would say well first it is always always always good to practice and review grammar that we've already studied because I think one issue is that everybody always wants to do oh new grammar new grammar new grammar even if they're making mistakes simple mistakes with with grammar they've already studied so it's always good to review it's always good to practice also I promise you like I said at the beginning you will learn something new

I think there is there are some new things that I think there will be some new things that I will tell you about the present simple and Present continuous so if you are joining us live please write your name tell us what's up in the chat hi bassam Tirana you see Anna Bogdan thank you guys Anna welcome welcome welcome glad you guys are here with us again write your name let me know in the chat even if you are watching this later write to us in the comments tell me your name tell me where you're from we just want to hear from you we want you guys to interact with these lessons be later we are going to practice using the present simple and the present continuous so let's just get right into it and first I want to talk to you about the present simple so I'm not going to go through the different ways that you form the present simple I'm just gonna tell you when you use it give you some example sentences and and I'll talk a little bit about the grammar so we use the present simple to talk about the following we use it to express habits for example I watch TV at night alright notice the conjugation i watch if we say he/she/it he watches she watches we use that s general truths we use it when we're talking about things that are generally true the earth is round the verb to be it's gonna have different conjugations I am he is she is it is we are they are keep that in mind also we use present simple to talk about repeated actions okay actions that are happening again and again the baby cries every day so every day that is a key signal word that tells us oh okay it's a repeated action and remember if the Verb if the verb ends with Y like cry we're going to use IES the baby cries every day and again a good rule of thumb is when when we see adverbs of frequency also usually always usually sometimes that that's also a signal word that tells us okay it's but it's probably the present symbol that's not always the case but it's it's something to think about we also use it with unchanging situations he teaches English online this guy that's me all right unchanging situations we use the present simple now if we want to get a little more advanced in talking about the present simple we can use this verb tense when we're talking about the future and we use it when we're talking about scheduled future time the key word there is scheduled that something is happening and we the time for example the movie starts at 8:00 p.m. it's talking about the future but 8:00 p.m. that's the scheduled time so we can use the present simple all right we can also use future like will but again in this case I think present simple is more common when you're talking about scheduled time the other example the plane arrives tomorrow tomorrow again tells us well that's the future but it is it's a scheduled time because we know that tomorrow the plane arrives the plane arrives tomorrow the other one which is something that I think can confuse learners all the time is when we're talking about future time clauses now remember that we use the present simple in the dependent clause and it's going after the subordinating conjunction now the subordinating conjunction if you're thinking of common ones those are words like you know before after when those are some of the more common ones and the present simple is going to go after those words so for example I'll turn off my phone before the movie starts talking about something in the future now the future tense will turn off that's my independent clause that's my main Clause right there before the movie starts that's my dependent clause and the present simple comes after before so so many times learners would want to say I'll turn off my phone before the movie will start and I'm like no no no no no no we don't use the future in both of these cases all right in the

in the dependent clause after the subordinating conjunction use the present simple here's another example I'll pick you up when that's my subordinating conjunction the plane arrives again present simple I'll pick you up that's the future when the plane arrives present simple so this is a little more getting into more advanced grammar complex sentences and keeping in mind that you're not going to use the future twice all right you would use the future in the main Clause the independent clause and the present simple in the dependent clause which is after the subordinating conjunction now let's quickly talk about negatives and questions so if we're forming negatives we're going to use not but we're also going to use a helping verb which is do so for example we do not play basketball it's in the present I don't have a car it's in the present and again with don't we can contract the the helping verb and the negative not we don't I don't now the exception would be is if we're talking about the verb to be we're not going to use do I should have provided an example but I don't have it up there so I will just tell you if we're using the verb to be for example I am not hungry we're not using the helping verb do but it's in the present simple I am not so with the verb to be we just use that verb plus not when we're talking about negatives and with asking questions again we if it's not the verb to be we need the helping verb do ok do they travel every summer it's a question in the present simple now keep in mind that the subject is going to go between the helping verb do and the main verb travel do they travel do they travel every summer does she work from home does she work from home question in the present simple and notice the conjugation do they does she so the conjugation of our subject she is going to go with the helping verb do they does she and again if we're using the verb to be we don't need the helping verb do so for example

I would just say okay are you hungry it's a question in the present simple are you hungry and they were son I am not hungry answer in the the present simple so this is that that's talking about the presence well I think it's more again when we start learning English this is this is some of the verse first grammar that we learn is how to say sentences in the present simple next we start learning then the present continuous so let's look at the present continuous and there's a bit more information and we are then going to practice okay so with the present continuous these are the times when we would use the present continuous if we're talking about something at the moment something happening in action right now so I said for my example at the moment right now she is sleeping so the one thing to look at if we're talking about the grammar to form the present continuous we're using the verb to be plus the verb plus ing is sleeping so that is the form for the present continuous we use the verb to be plus the verb and ing is sleeping we also use it if we're talking about something temporary all right that's going to happen for a certain amount of time and then it you know it's it's not happening anymore so for example I would say you know I'm studying English this semester that for this semester I'm studying English it's temporary and remember I am studying we have the verb to be plus that ing and again there's there's different rules with the contractions we can contract the subject and the verb to be instead of I am studying I'm studying I'm studying English this semester we also use it with things that are changing things that are growing so you guys I hope you guys watch our lessons and you are learning a lot and then I would tell you you know your English is improving your

English is improving its growing it's changing it's developing we can also use the present continuous when talking about reoccurring situations reoccurring Scituate they are always traveling they're always traveling they're always traveling now this is a little bit different from the the present simple when we're talking about unchanging situations that's just things that it doesn't change it's always happening reoccurring situations would be like something happens and then later on one month later two month later who knows it happens again and you're just talking about people in general and the reason I highlighted always is because it's often used with this adverb if you're talking about somebody in general I said wow they're they're always traveling wow they're they're always going to the coffee shop oh wow they're always dancing at the club alright that that that's definitely not me not dancing at the club but as an example if you're talking about reoccurring situations you usually use it with always and say that somebody's always doing something now we can also use the present continuous to talk about future and in this case future plans now the first two examples I am giving you right here you're using going to so most people when we think about the future tense you think about using will or be going to and that is okay but be going to is it's essentially it's the present continuous so for example if it's a future plan he is going to study abroad next semester all right that is my that is his future plan or future plan for tomorrow I'm going to the dentist tomorrow I'm going to the dentist tomorrow it's a future plan now if you want to use will with either of those sentences it's perfectly okay now one difference which you may not know and I think can be confusing if you're not talking about a future plan if you're talking about something sudden in the future you cannot use be going to you cannot use the continuous tense for example if somebody knocks on the door it's it's sudden we didn't know about you would say I will get it I will get the door you would not use going to in this case because it's a sudden decision you wouldn't say I'm going to get the door no it's not a future plan so you're only using be going to with future plans and again we can use it with other verbs as well if you're talking about you know next week I'm starting a new project next week we're doing another live lesson and we hope you guys join us again next week so we can use the present continuous to talk about the future and this is where I think it gets a little more advanced grammar when we're talking about the different uses of the present continuous and the present simple so when we're talking about negatives and questions again for the negatives we're going to use not and not is going to go between the helping verb to be and the main verb Wes is not working hard all right I I try to work hard but maybe maybe sometimes this is true and you'd say Wes is not working hard the next example they aren't talking anymore or they're not talking anymore the reason why I gave you both of these is because again we can use contractions differently and we can either contract the verb and not they aren't talking anymore or we could contract the subject and not they're not are the subject and the verb to be they're not talking anymore the meaning is exactly the same so the meanings the same you can use either one they aren't talking anymore they're not talking anymore keep in mind that for this other contraction you can only contract subject pronouns and the verb to be so I am I'm they are there you are your if the subject is a person like wes is we cannot contract those two but we can contract the verb to be and not we could say Wes isn't working hard but keep that in mind if we're contracting the subject and the verb to be it has to be a subject pronoun if we're asking questions right here again we're gonna put the verb to be at the beginning the subject goes in the middle are you paying attention I hope that you guys are paying attention to this lesson because we are going to practice this very soon are you paying attention and if we have a question right here to go with that picture that picture from a long time ago is Wes working hard in that picture is Wes working hard and then you could answer you know wes is not working hard in that picture so that is asking questions now for a fun pronunciation tip so a pronunciation tip with the present continuous is that like I said it's the verb to be the verb in the ing so I am studying now a pronunciation tip when we're talking most native English speakers they they don't often say that in sound they will drop the G and I'll tell you what I mean so what's practice saying that with a few sentences and and wherever you're watching this repeat these after me say say this out loud okay and we're gonna drop the G so I will say it twice and you can listen to the difference I could say you're talking way too loud and in that case I'm saying the G but most of the times I would just say many native speakers would just say you're talking way too loud you don't hear that Aang you really they drop that G you're talking way too loud talking the next one if I say the G and you're speaking slowly I'm not doing this anymore I'm not doing this anymore if we drop the G which is how you know I would say it in normal conversation I'm not doing this anymore so you guys can repeat that I'm not doing this anymore and drop that G same with the other one if I drop the G we're always coming up with new lessons we're always coming up with new lessons coming up that we're dropping that G and that other one right there all right you're going to hit the like button we could control we could reduce going to and say gonna you're gonna hit that like button you're gonna hit that like button but even if I if I if wanted to say too I would still drop that G and say you know you're gonna hit that yeah you're going to hit that like button you're going to hit that like button so again you can hear it without that G but most of the time with going to people would reduce it with gonna but again this is a good pronunciation tip if you're looking to you know reduce your accent a little or sound a little more like a native speaker when you're using the present continuous you can just fix that G off the end I'm not doing this anymore you're talking way too loud you're gonna hit that like button alright I'm trying to be suggestive here so if you like learning grammar please go ahead hit that like button let us know so that is my pronunciation tip and now again we're not done talking about the present continuous there is something else that I think is very very very important when talking about the present continuous and that is stative verbs because you cannot use the present continuous with stative verbs now maybe you're asking what the heck is a state of verb well I will tell you stative verbs are verbs that refer to states as opposed to actions so they're not really actions that you could just do physically these are states so we're talking about right here you're talking about senses opinions emotions mental states measurements with verbs like that we cannot use the present continuous so these are some examples of some common stative verbs now I want you to look at that list real quick real quickly and you might see it and be like wait a second I've seen some of those verbs used in the continuous tense and that's what I want to talk to you about so look at these verbs that I'm highlighting right there the verbs have C and love the one thing you need to keep in mind is that in English sometimes you have words that have different meanings this is the same with verbs verbs can have different meanings and depending on the meaning would depend on whether or not you can use the continuous tense so here are some examples first one up there I have a pencil in this case have is talking about possession something you have you cannot use this in the continuous tense now if you're talking about the other example in blue I'm having a bad day in this case you're not talking about possession you're talking about inexperience somebody is experiencing something I'm having a bad day that's perfectly okay now the verb see there in red he sees a spider that is your senses it's something you see with your eyes you cannot use that in the continuous tense but if we're talking about the next sentence he is seeing a therapist okay he's seeing a therapist he's seeing a physical therapist who knows in this case the verb see it means that you're visiting so you can use it in the continuous tense he's seeing a therapist it even has another meaning if I said you know what she's seeing my best friend in this case it's talking about dating you're seeing somebody else she's seeing my best friend you're talking about dating it can be used in the continuous tense and the last one which is probably the most confusing right here is love and you would say I love it it's talking about an emotion and nowadays you might even see people are you might hear it in a song or might hear it on TV or in movies and somebody says you know I'm loving it and they're talking about an emotion technically grammatically speaking again this should not be in the continuous tense you should not use I'm loving it however over the last 10 or 20 years it's become more and I think McDonald's was even using it as part of their slogan they're like hey let's just use some bad grammar it'll stand out more and at this point somebody says you know I'm loving it in my opinion I almost think it's in it's almost an idiom now it's an idiomatic expression that that is becoming acceptable in spoken English I don't I would not I would refrain and avoid writing it because that's a little more formal but again this is an example of how grammar rules are changing people are breaking the rules and it's just something to be aware of and something to keep in mind but typically love as an emotion it's a state of verb we should not use it in the continuous tense so now it is time to practice all right everybody if you are in the chat all right I'm looking at all you guys I want you guys to practice even if you guys are watching this later on I want you to write your answers in the comments practice using these stative verbs so what we're going to do I'm gonna give you some questions and we'll start easy it'll get a little more difficult but I just want you to complete the sentence using either the present simple or the present continuous now one thing I want you to keep in mind is sometimes with some of these sentences grammatically you could use both I want you to think of try to use the one that's the most appropriate given the context given the situation try to use the one that's the most appropriate are you gonna use the present simple or the present continuous I want you to write your answers so I know you are participating ready the first question is this one right here I usually mmm English at night I'm giving you the verb so I want you to complete the sentence are you going to use the present simple or the present continuous I usually mmm English at night what do you guys think and then I will show you the answer all right getting some good answers Farhat Marcela Kiera Giselle Stephanie Rosa excellent yes we're gonna use the present simple I usually study English at night the key word in there I think is usually again when we're talking about these adverbs of frequencies that should tell us okay it's probably gonna be present simple next let's look at this one so I hmm in there so this is a negative using not and go okay what are we going to use are you gonna use the present simple or present continuous think about the context the situation I mmm in there what do you guys think write your answers in the comments in the chat all right we're starting a little easier and then it'll get a little more difficult alright so yes think about this situation in if we're talking about that house right there I would say you know what I'm not going in there I am NOT going in there or I'm not going in there excellent so the next one what do you think she mmm on the phone at the moment how would you complete that the verb is talk she hmm on the phone at the moment write your answer in the comment write your answer in the chat don't be shy alright don't worry nobody you know get a wrong answer it's no big deal what do you guys think all right so excellent you should say the key word there is at the moment and I just say you know she is talking on the phone at the moment she's talking on the phone at the moment we're talking about something that's happening right now we use the present continuous next we have this one it is a question okay hmm to see a movie later the subject is you the verb is want how would you write that question what do you guys think write your answer in the comments in the chat hmm to see a movie later so again we're talking about subject you verb want excellent you guys great answers do you want to see a movie later we're using the the present simple remember want is a desire that you cannot use that as a stative verb all right it's a state of verb so you cannot use it in the present continuous so you say do you want to see a movie later do you want to see a movie later what about this one okay not like to eat fast food alright again it's always good to practice even if you know all these that's perfect so I actually I want you I want you guys tell me if you get all of them right have a couple more for you so what do you think they hmm to eat fast food we're using the negative and our verb is like alright excellent they don't like to eat fast food again like is a state of verb we do not use it in the continuous tense what about this one alright tomorrow night I mmm an old friend tomorrow night I mmm an old friend what do you guys think alright tomorrow night I mmm an old friend so in this case again we're talking about a future plan that's happening tomorrow night excellent I see some good answers so tomorrow night I'm meeting an old friend we'd use the present continuous that's the most appropriate response if you're talking to somebody say yeah it's morrow night I'm meeting an old friend alright we're getting together we're having a drink we're having some coffee on meeting an old friend what about this one okay this is this is one I want to know the answer to all right it's a question hmm our YouTube lessons regularly subject is you and the verb watch what do you guys think keyword regularly what do you guys think keyword is regularly mmm our YouTube lessons regularly so I just told you the keyword is regularly it's it's something that is a repeated action so again we're talking about a question we need to use that helping verb do do you watch our YouTube lessons regularly what do you guys think let me know tell me in the comments do you watch our YouTube video lessons regularly I hope so so this is some good practice again using the present simple and the present continuous and so many of you would like us we're gonna talk about more verb tenses later but if you haven't already seen there are other lessons using these other verb tenses I highly recommend you check them out we've done other grammar lessons that I think will help you guys and we give more information and do some practice so I hope I will link those lessons I will link those lessons in the description and you guys can check those out and please I think it will really help you improve your grammar skills now if you got all of those right I want you to let me know write in the chat I want you to write new grammar or are no

Graham right right grammar rocks alright I got all of them right grammar rocks you did you did got all of them correct even if you even if you're watching this later write that in the comments so I know that hey you guys rock that you rock those questions so thank you guys so much for watching I appreciate you guys if you would like and share this lesson and help us spread the word so that everybody can join these classes that we do on Saturday if you have any questions write those in the comments and please whoops it's over here check out our social media classes you can find us on Facebook Twitter Instagram and of course right here on YouTube so thank you Judy Patricia Wow Marcelo Bassam Giselle jr. Kira good of years Stephanie Palmer Tilo Bogdan I had Marla sorry if I miss some names Thank You tadhana excellent I really appreciate you guys being here with me today and practicing your language skills practicing your English skills hope you guys have a wonderful day and I will see you next time

Professional Writing for Business, University, IELTS, TOEFL

here are 13 tips to help you write professionally and what we're going to do is we're going to start with the big picture which is an idiom that means like the entire view of a situation or issue and then we're going to try to narrow it down to your actual writing so the first tip that i have for you the first thing that i want you to do is understand your purpose so it's a very simple question that needs to be answered what is the purpose of your writing now in general there are four major types of writing it could be a narrative and you're telling a story maybe it's descriptive and you're trying to capture an event or perhaps expository you're giving facts and information or even persuasive and you want to influence someone's opinion now whatever your purpose is you just need to have one because without it your writing is going to lack direction it's like trying to understand what is your purpose for being here right now you would like to improve your writing skills and if you'd like to improve your overall english please subscribe turn on notifications and then i can become your new english teacher my name is wes and that's what interactive english is all about is trying to help you reach your fluency goals the next tip that i have for you is that you need to know your audience who is going to be reading your writing is it your boss your teacher your peers your colleagues or or just the public in general because once you know your audience then that's going to help you choose your style and in a nutshell which is another idiom i'm giving you some idioms in this lesson it really means in the fewest possible words in a nutshell when i'm talking about style i'm really referring to formal or informal writing so if we're talking about formal writing you should avoid idioms slang just those colloquial expressions you're also going to want to use more complex structures which i'll get into a little bit later with informal writing well then the rules are relaxed you can use some of those colloquial expressions but because we're talking about writing professionally i really want to focus on helping you develop your formal writing style this is the style that you need to use if you'd like to appear professional you want people to take you seriously so that is the big picture now let's talk about your actual writing when you put pen to the paper or even your hands to the keyboard but before i share those tips with you i'd like to quickly thank the sponsor of today's lesson which is italki and when you use italki there is always a teacher for you you will find qualified teachers from all over the world sharing their languages their dialects and their culture and there are so many benefits to using italki i think the absolute best thing is that well these are one-on-one lessons which means you get to focus on your learning goals so if you would like to improve your writing skills well then you can find a teacher who will help you do just that because you get to stay in control of your learning in addition you get to learn at your own pace you get professional feedback not to mention you can practice for free with the italki community there is no subscription there is no commitment you just pay per lesson so click on the link below in order to sign up find your teacher and improve your english skills you can also participate in the language challenge in which you can win certifications and coupons while at the same time achieving your learning goals all you have to do is click on that link in the description to get started let's get back to our lesson on writing professionally because i have many more tips for you and now as i mentioned we're going to talk about putting pen to the paper or or your hands to the keyboard so the next tip that i have for you is that you need to organize your ideas this is so important i don't want you just to think about this i want you to write it down start with brainstorming use that information to develop an outline and when i say develop an outline i want you to develop a comprehensive outline don't just write down a few words write down complete thoughts because when you do this it's going to help your writing have cohesion and unity when i say cohesion i'm just talking about your sentences are logically ordered unity means that your paragraphs are centered around one idea so when you organize your ideas and you write this down it's going to make sure that your writing has cohesion in unity it's very important the next thing that i want you to do which can be a little challenging i'm not going to lie and that is find your voice and when i say find your voice it's really referring to the words that you use the way that you write your sentences think of voice like your your fingerprint when it comes to writing that maybe you forgot to write your name but somebody reads your writing they know that it's you because of your words because of your sentences now when i say find your voice that means that i don't want you to think about well how would somebody else write this and present these ideas or what are the words that my audience probably wants to hear you need to discover what is unique about the way you present the topic use your words your sentences be authentic people appreciate originality and i mentioned that this can be challenging and if you're having trouble finding your voice i think the best thing that you can do is just to write as much as you can and you can start by writing to me down below in the comments but once again if you're putting together that comprehensive outline this is something that should start to be reflected in your outline when you're organizing your ideas something else that should be reflected in your outline is your tone you need to establish a tone and there are many examples of this uh tone could be aggressive or humorous nostalgic cheerful sad and what what this really does is it shows your attitude about a topic no matter what topic you have you can have different tones but you need to be consistent you don't want to switch between an aggressive tone to a cheerful one humorous back to aggressive all right writing is not a roller coaster don't think about it like that think about it more like you're traveling down this straight road moving from one idea to the next going from one paragraph to the next which then takes me to my next tip is that you need to organize your paragraphs so i talk to you about organizing your ideas and then you can take a closer look at those ideas and make sure that each paragraph is organized with a topic sentence with supporting sentences and then wrapped up with a conclusion and this is a structure that you can follow over and over and over especially if your purpose is you're you're writing something that's descriptive or persuasive or even expository and just to emphasize how important this is when you organize your paragraphs it is the easiest and most effective way to convey your ideas something else that's going to help you move smoothly down that road of ideas is that you need to take full advantage of transition words and phrases so these are words and phrases that will allow you to effortlessly and seamlessly move from one idea to the next now there are many transition words and phrases out there i think it's very useful vocabulary for you to learn but just to give you an example if i want to add information i could use in addition if i want to contrast different ideas i could use however if i want to start out and say well this idea is very important i could begin with first and foremost and then share my idea now what this does is it makes it so much easier for the reader to follow along not to mention it's going to help you sound more professional because you're going to sound like you know what you're talking about my next tip is that you need to vary your sentence structures so when i talked about formal writing i said that you'll use more complex structures and this is part of what i was talking about so you have four different sentence structures you have simple sentences compound sentences complex sentences and compound complex sentences and i've given you some examples here so you can see what the sentences are like but when you vary your sentence structures it's going to make your writing a lot more engaging people are going to want to continue reading because if you're using too much of one structure if you're only using simple sentences it's just going to sound really choppy if you're only using compound sentences well then it may sound a bit repetitive when you vary your sentence structures it's going to create a nice rhythm and flow to your writing and and this is probably something that that you're not going to be able to do the first time it's likely something that you can do and develop when you proofread you may go through and find a couple of simple sentences that you can turn into a compound sentence or maybe you'll add a dependent clause and create a complex sentence and then you'll be developing that rhythm and flow as well as finding your voice and this leads me into my next tip which is to keep it simple especially at first use the vocabulary that you already know if you're writing a rough draft don't stop and analyze everything use your outline keep it simple find your voice and then when you're done you can go back and proofread it and really fine tune some of those words and sentences and proofreading is what i want to talk to you about next because i want you to effectively correct your own mistakes so when you're writing i think many of you are going to use a computer and you need to use those programs to your advantage because if you're using something like word it will tell you if something is misspelled or perhaps there's a problem with the grammar use these programs to your advantage now if you're just going through and proofreading on your own what i would suggest you do is look for one mistake at a time don't try to look for all the problems at once so you could start with punctuation read through your writing and only look for punctuation mistakes and then go through it again and only look for spelling mistakes go through it again and only look for word choice and maybe change some of those words so what you end up doing is that you proofread your writing multiple times and the more you do this the more you go through it you're likely to find some mistakes you'll make some changes to make your writing better another tip that i have for you is to get others to look at your writing it's always good to have a second set of eyes because people may find spelling mistakes or grammar mistakes that you did not see before it's also good to get feedback in regard to the content but one thing i would tell you is that remember just because somebody gives you feedback about the content that doesn't mean that you have to accept it you can take it into consideration and then decide whether or not you would like to make the changes because remember it's your writing it's your voice and then i think it is very helpful for you to maintain healthy writing habits and there are two things that i think you should be doing a little bit each and every day first i think you should read regularly this is going to help you distinguish between different writing styles you'll get a feel for how someone else's writing is organized you'll also be able to see how people use transition words and phrases as well as varying their sentences and how that makes their writing more engaging i also want you to write regularly and this is something you can do writing in a journal each and every day or like i said you can write to me down below in those comments it's going to help you develop and find your voice you'll also be able to explore different purposes in writing as well as writing to different audiences in addition you'll be able to practice correcting your own writing so i hope you found these tips useful and that you can now go out there and try to write professionally if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Pronounce 25 Major US Cities Just Like an American

let's talk about how to correctly pronounce 25 major u.s cities and what i'm going to do is i will give you really the standard american pronunciation for these cities some of these cities will have more of a regional pronunciation which i i will talk to you about i'm going to give you both the ipa and phonetic spelling so that you can actually see the pronunciation and we're going to move from the west and go east if this is your first time here let me introduce myself my name is wes the channel is interactive english it's all about helping you improve your fluency if that's what you'd like to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that you will learn about future lessons

let's begin with our first city which is honolulu this is the capital of hawaii and this at the beginning you are going to pronounce this h and the second syllable has that schwa that uh sound hannah and the third syllable is the one that's stressed honolulu honolulu then we have junco so this city is the it is the capital of alaska has two syllables the first one stress but i really wanted to point out that second syllable because it's going to be pronounced with a long o junco so keep this in mind when you see a word that ends with that e a u you're going to pronounce it with a long o junco next is seattle and i chose this city i think this is very important because though those two t's you're going to pronounce them as a flap t and the flap t it's very distinct in an american pronunciation and it really just sounds like a soft d seattle and the reason that we use the flap t is because it comes before a dark l seattle and that just means that that l that final l it's not going to be released when you say it the the end of the word your tongue is still going to be touching the top part of your mouth

seattle seattle then we have portland this is the largest city in oregon has two syllables and there are a couple things that i wanted to point out you're you're going to have a stop t portland which means that the air is not going to be released and also in that second syllable you may have noticed as you heard me say this that i'm dropping the d even though the phonetic spelling and the ipa they include the d when when you say this you're going to drop the d and this is this is common this happens when the d follows an n portland before we continue i would like to thank the sponsor of today's lesson which is skillshare and let me tell you a little bit about skillshare because this is a great way for you to improve your pronunciation your vocabulary and other skills as well because skillshare is an online learning community where you can take thousands of classes i have even taken a class by thomas frank called real productivity and it was very useful and of course there are classes to help you learn english vocabulary grammar idioms that there's a lot but when it comes to learning english what what i think is extremely useful is that you learn about something else in english learn about something you're interested in maybe travel or technology or healthy living and that way you are developing your english skills as you learn about one of your passions and right now skillshare has a special offer for all of you the first 1 000 people to click on the link in the description will get a free one month trial of skillshare so you can start exploring your creativity today so click on the link in the description to get your free trial take some online classes with skillshare you can learn english and you can learn well just about anything else you would like to learn let's get back to those 25 major cities that are difficult to pronounce and the next two cities are in california so let's begin with san francisco san francisco is a beautiful coastal city and if we're talking about well that second word the first syllable has the schwa and that c is gonna sound well more like an s and that second syllable is stressed san francisco san francisco then we have los angeles los angeles is another well very famous coastal city in california it is referred to as the city of angels and again in that second word the first syllable is stressed the g is going to sound more like a j and the second and third syllable have that uh that schwa sound los angeles los angeles then we have boise which is the capital city of idaho and boise two syllables the stress is on the first syllable but i think when most americans say this city they're going to pronounce the s more like a z boise boise however locally people may pronounce it with an s and they may say boise boise then we have phoenix this is the capital of arizona and as you can see two syllables stresses on the first syllable that ph is going to be pronounced as an f which is it's pretty common in many other words in english and you're you're first syllable the second syllable has that schwa that uh alba and then the third and fourth syllable that q you you'll just pronounce it with a k albuquerque after that we have sioux falls this is the largest city in south dakota and the name sue comes from the native american tribe now sioux falls this is one where the the pronunciation just does not match up with the spelling it's almost like you have a silent i and o and x but just listening to me say it it's pretty simple it's pretty easy sioux falls sioux falls next is the city of houston and this is the largest city in texas two syllables the stress is on that first syllable and it's almost like that first syllable you have like h plus like you're just saying you hugh houston houston let's move to the capital of iowa and we have des moines des moines

the stress is going to be on that second word the first word you're going to have that schwa duh moin so in that second word it's almost like you're dropping that es des moines des moines after that we have st louis so st louis is a major city in missouri it's right on the mississippi river and the first thing that i wanted to point out with this city is that that st abbreviation so when you see this before a name the abbreviation is for saint you're going to say saint if you were to see this after a name well then that abbreviation may stand for street but in this case we're talking about saint saint louis the other thing that i would say is that when you're you're saying this name people often pronounce it as louis but in this case you're going to say louis st louis let's move a little further south to new orleans now with this one there are different pronunciations i say new orleans so in the second word i'm stressing that second syllable new orleans others may stress the first syllable and say new orleans and then with for like a southern accent you may hear people say new orleans new orleans but i think for for many people in the united states they would say new orleans and then there's chicago chicago is well it's one of the largest cities in the united states the first thing i want to say i want to point out with this city is that the ch you're going to pronounce it kind of like an sh it's not a ch sound it's a shh sound and the stress is on that second syllable chicago chicago let's move over to mobile which is a port city in alabama now i think uh mobile has two syllables the stress is on that second syllable but i i think this can be confusing because people might think of like well like a mobile phone the pronunciation of this city is very different mobile and that second syllable you're just going to say it with the long e sound mobile mobile and then we have louisville which is the largest city in kentucky has three syllables the stress is on that first syllable and with this one you are not going to say louis you're going to say louisville louisville now if you are from there i think regionally if you're from kentucky many people would pronounce it as louisville and they're going to say that second and third syllable with more of a schwa sound louisville louisville then let's go to cincinnati and cincinnati is the largest city in ohio and both of those cs they're going to sound like an s that second syllable has the schwa since the third syllable stressed and that fourth syllable has the long e and also that final t it is a flap t so there's a lot going on with this word cincinnati cincinnati cincinnati then let's go to detroit it is the largest city in michigan has two syllables the stress is on that second syllable and in that first syllable even though we're spelling it with e it's just going to sound like detroit detroit then let's go south to miami miami is a very well-known and famous coastal city in florida and the one thing i really want to point out with this is that it does have three syllables miami miami the stress is on that second syllable there are many spanish speakers who live in miami and spanish speakers may pronounce it as miami but most people throughout the united states will just say miami miami then let's go north to pittsburgh it is the second largest city in pennsylvania and it has two syllables the stress is on that first syllable but i really wanted to highlight the end of the word that gh it's almost like you're just going to drop the h and you'll just say pittsburgh pittsburgh that's a little different than this next city which is raleigh raleigh is the capital of north carolina home to duke university very well known university and with this one there's two syllables the stress is on the first syllable but again it's that second syllable that i wanted to point out that gh it's really silent in this case so you're going to pronounce that second syllable with the long e sound raleigh raleigh and then we have worcester it's not really well perhaps a very famous city in the united states it is the second largest city in massachusetts behind boston which i well that's pretty easy to pronounce but i chose worcester because well as you can see the spelling and the pronunciation they they don't match at all worcester it's almost like you're you're getting rid of the rce those letters in the middle of the word two syllables you just say worcester even in the u.s you have a worcestershire sauce worcestershire sauce and that that spelling is similar to this town at least at the beginning that first part of the word so if you happen to be in massachusetts and you're traveling around the state then now you know how to say this city worcester and then we have new york it is the most populous and famous city in the united states i i think it's pretty easy to pronounce but i included it because it's well i just had to it's so well known it's so

Pronounce the 50 US States Just Like an American

I think many of you out there may be familiar with the different states in the US but do you know how to pronounce them all correctly that's coming up [Music] what's up everyone my name's Wes this is Interactive English and guess what I'm American I'm from the u.s. secret's out and the reason I'm telling you this is because often when I tell people and from the United States people will ask where you know a lot of people around the world are are confident with geography in the u.s. they're familiar with many of the different states but from time to time as we're talking about the US and places to visit and places that people may have been or they want to go I may hear them talk about a state and they'll they'll have a slight mispronunciation maybe they're stressing the wrong syllable or or they're just saying it incorrectly so I thought today would be a good time to talk about each state and show you how to pronounce them correctly so I'm going to tell you the state I am going to tell you how many syllables each word has I will show you the phonetic spelling and the IPA version as well so all of that means that by the end of this lesson you will be able to say each and every state perfectly the first state and I'm just gonna go through these alphabetically is Alabama it has four syllables and the stresses on that third syllable that damn Alabama and if you're in Alabama you might hear people pronounce it with a rather strong southern accent Alabama I was actually born in Alabama no it's true I was I've lived in quite a few of these states so I'll let you know the next state is Alaska it has three syllables the stress is on the second syllable that final syllable just has that schwa Alaska it is a beautiful state if you love the outdoors I highly recommend it I worked up there for the summer it's gorgeous then we have Arizona it has four syllables the stress is on that third syllable Arizona zou zou zou Arizona not much to say about Arizona except it's hot next is Arkansas three syllables stresses on that first syllable Arkansas this is a common one that that people have a little trouble with be cuz again don't don't think of the spelling don't try and pronounce it based on the spelling you can get all screwed up that final syllable saw saw Arkansas next is the most populous state and that is California it has four syllables stresses on that third syllable California sometimes if you're very cool you just shorten it to two syllables and just say Cali Cali you know I used to live in Cali I've just been informed that nobody cool says that then we have Colorado the state has four syllables the stress is on that third syllable even though it's our ID it's Colorado not rat Oh Colorado the

Rocky Mountains beautiful state I did my university there University of Colorado go buffs next is Connecticut this is another one where the the spelling can can throw off the pronunciation a little bit if you're trying to say it how it's spelled but Connecticut has four syllables the stresses on that second syllable Connecticut Connecticut I also used to live in Connecticut now I think about it I've lived in quite a few of these states next is Delaware has three syllables stresses on that first syllable Delaware I don't know anything about Delaware I've never been there I've never lived there so let's just move on to the next date Florida it also has three syllables and the stress is on that first syllable Florida it's the Sunshine State my parents live there now known for its beautiful beaches Florida next is Georgia two syllables stress on that first syllable Georgia or again if you're in the south if you're in Georgia people might say Georgia I also used to live in Georgia Atlanta Georgia I'm sure people are like wait that's not how we say it in Georgia it's just Georgia my southern accents pretty bad then we have a state that I would like to live in and I think many people romanticize this state it's our only island state Hawaii has 3 syllables stresses on that second syllable Hawaii and again the spelling can can throw off the pronunciation a little bit but yeah just remember Hawaii then we have Idaho has 3 syllables is on that first syllable Idaho Idaho when I think of Idaho I think of potatoes that's what the states known for Idaho potatoes then there's Illinois also 3 syllables but the stress is on the third syllable Illinois again the spelling and the pronunciation can get a little crazy that last syllable that final syllable noise Illinois the next state Indiana has four syllables stress is on that third syllable Indiana I think many people might be familiar with this famous movie Indiana Jones not really have anything to do with the state just the name so let's just move on to the next one which is Iowa Iowa has three syllables and the stress is on that first syllable Iowa again Iowa spelling pronunciation a little crazy I that second syllable has that schwa Iowa and when I think of Iowa I think of corn because there's a lot of corn in Iowa the next state is Kansas the great state of Kansas two syllables stresses on that first syllable Kansas and what I have to say about Kansas is nothing really I drove through there once it was a long drive so let's just keep driving on through to the next state which is Kentucky this word has three syllables stress is on that second syllable Kentucky Kentucky the next day Louisiana it has five syllables the stress is on that fourth syllable that and Louisiana and when I think of Louisiana I start thinking of food I think of that gumbo Louisiana known for their gumbo and while we're on the topic of food our next state Maine has one syllable just one Maine Maine I also think of food I think of lobster when I think of Maine and then again let's just keep going Maryland this state has three syllables the stress is on that first syllable Maryland it's not Mary you don't really hear that why it's just Maryland also think of food crab Maryland has Crabbe then we come to Massachusetts not a food state well actually no no that's not true there is New England clam chowder there which is pretty amazing in Massachusetts they also have four syllables and the stresses on that third syllable that chew Massachusetts and I think in Massachusetts you know how people from each state have names like if you're from Georgia then you're Georgia and if you're from California then you're California if you're from Massachusetts then you're a Masshole I don't know why I always I always laugh at that joke I guess if you're from Massachusetts you probably don't think it's funny then we have Michigan the state has three syllables stresses on that first syllable Michigan and very close to Michigan is Minnesota four syllables stresses on that third syllable that's so that second syllable just the schwa Minnesota there's also a pretty distinct accent in Minnesota Minnesota minute Minnesota - I am just terrible at accents new soda Minnesota miss okay I'm just gonna let's just move on then we have Mississippi this state has four syllables the stresses on that third syllable that second one is just that schwa miss sybbie Mississippi after Mississippi is Missouri this state has three syllables and the stresses on that second syllable Missouri Missouri that S is gonna have more of that Z sound Missouri then we have Montana three syllables stresses on that second syllable Montana Montana another beautiful state gorgeous mountains Montana near there is Nebraska three syllables stress is also on that second syllable Nebraska Nebraska not really mountains in Nebraska sorry next we have Nevada it has three syllables stress is on that second syllable Nevada and when people think of Nevada I think most of us think of Las Vegas Sin City gambling Nevada next is

New Hampshire two words three syllables the stress is going to be that first syllable in the second word looking at Hampshire now that last syllable it's not Shire it's not like Frodo in the Shire it's sure New Hampshire New Hampshire I also for a very short time lived in New Hampshire live free or die that's what it says on the license plate check it out next we have New Jersey three syllables stress is on will the first syllable of the second word that journey Jersey New Jersey again a state that I think probably has a more distinct accent Jersey a lot of times people will just say that second word just Jersey where are you from Jersey Jersey Jersey from Jersey I apologize for these terrible accents but let's just move on next is New Mexico four syllables again the stresses on that first syllable of the second word New Mexico Mexico New Mexico don't know what to say about New Mexico except yes very hot then another very well-known state New York two syllables stresses on that second syllable that second word New York often when people think of New York they may think of New York City first so sometimes people need to clarify that no I'm talking about New York State New York State the state of New York then we have North Carolina this state has five syllables but Carolina the stress is going to be on that third syllable in that word Carolina Carolina North Carolina another state with a more distinct accent all my relatives and my parents they're from North Carolina North Carolina North Carolina oh goodness I'm gonna get raked over the coals for my accent then we have North Dakota four syllables but Dakota has three syllables and the stresses on that second syllable Dakota North Dakota then Ohio three syllables stresses on that second syllable Ohio Ohio let's just keep these O's going with Oklahoma the state has four syllables and the stress is on that third syllable Oklahoma you can hear it emphasized that Houma Oklahoma I don't know why I think of Cowboys next is Oregon three syllables stresses on that first syllable Oregon that last syllable sounds like gun because it's unstressed so it's just Oregon then we have the great state of Pennsylvania has four syllables stresses on that third syllable Pennsylvania Pennsylvania and also I did I used to live in Pennsylvania not bad that's that's all I have to say then we have Rhode Island three syllables stresses on that will the first syllable of the second word Island Rhode Island and no Rhode Island it is not an island it's just called Rhode Island then we have South Carolina these words together have five syllables but the stress is gonna be on that second word that Carolina that third syllable again mmm I will I almost said North Carolina but no no this is South Carolina we're not talking about North Carolina South Carolina why are there two Carolinas I have no idea then we have South Dakota this state has four syllables but the stress is going to be on that second word Dakota that second syllable Dakota South Dakota moving right along we have Tennessee this state has three syllables and the stress is on that third syllable that final syllable Tennessee Tennessee after that is Texas two syllables stress is on that first syllable Texas it's one of the biggest states and people in Texas like to say everything is bigger in Texas I don't know why they say that it's just an expression from Texas then we have Utah two syllables stresses on that first syllable Utah after that is Vermont also two syllables but the stresses on that second syllable Vermont Vermont next is Virginia three syllables stress is on that second syllable Virginia Virginia and an expression with this day people say Virginia's for lovers why not assure exactly what it means but I guess Virginia's for lovers then we have Washington three syllables stresses on that first syllable Washington sometimes people may confuse it with the capital Washington DC which is not a state it is a district District of Columbia next is West Virginia the state has four syllables but again the stress in that second word that Virginia is on that second syllable West Virginia if you say it quickly you really almost don't hear that T at the end it almost sounds like you're saying my name West Virginia then we have Wisconsin the state has three syllables and the stress is on that second syllable that conne Wisconsin people think of Wisconsin they think of cheese it is the cheese state finally there is Wyoming also has three syllables and the stress is on that second syllable Wyoming Wyoming there you have it that is the pronunciation of each state so now that you have all this information you can say each and every state perfectly but now I want to hear from you guys I want you to tell me which state in the US would you like to visit where would you like to go or if you have already been there where did you travel to what did you think I'm always curious to hear what people have to say about the US if you enjoyed this fun pronunciation lesson hit that like button down below and as always thanks so much for watching and I'll see you next time

Pronounce these Famous Brands with the American Accent

today i want to teach you how to pronounce 20 famous and well-known american brands and yes i am going to give you the american pronunciation because i am from the united states my name is wes and well my brand is interactive english so if you would like to improve your english skills please subscribe turn on notifications that way you'll learn about future lessons and i can become your english teacher so this lesson is useful if you live in the united states or perhaps you're going to visit the united states and also some of these brands are famous all over the world so i'm going to tell you how to pronounce each brand as well as talk a little bit about why it may be difficult or challenging so let's begin with our first brand which is levi's it's a very famous clothing brand they make jeans and both of the vowel sounds they're they're long vowel sounds leave eyes sometimes i've heard people say levees but just remember it's a long e levi's then we have bows they make headphones and speakers and that s yes it is more of a z sound bose bose and then we have this is one of my favorites in and out burger and with this one it's if you've been to california you'll know what i'm talking about people are crazy for in-n-out burger and i've included it even though you say it like it's spelled in and out burger but it's a great example of linking because people will typically say this quickly in and out burger so that final consonant sound is going to get linked with that starting vowel sound just listen in and out burger in and out burger you can say it with me in and out burger one more time in and out burger and then we can say it quickly in and out burger that's how most people are going to pronounce it and if you were practicing with me let me know by hitting that like button i always love knowing that people are interacting with these lessons the next brand which is well very very famous nike you've probably heard of this company before they make shoes but nike has two syllables in the past i've heard people say nike with just one syllable but it has two syllables named after the greek goddess of victory nike the next brand is costco okay it's a very famous retail store you can find these all over the world and the reason why i've included it is because it's a great example of a lesion a lision is when certain sounds or syllables are removed so in this case the t is removed you're not gonna you're not gonna pronounce that t costco and the reason for that is that when the t comes between two consonant sounds it may be removed and it just gets removed costco costco another example of elision another pretty well-known american brand old navy in this case the d is going to get removed because once again it comes between two consonant sounds old navy old navy and then just to just to keep going with illusion this is one of my favorite brands especially in the morning cinnamon toast crunch so this is a cereal that people will eat for breakfast the word cinnamon on its own can be a little challenging it has three syllables the stress is on the first syllable the second and third syllable have that schwa sound it's an unstressed vowel sound just sounds like a cinnamon cinnamon and then to well continuing with elision the final t in toast it's gonna go away because it comes between two consonant sounds cinnamon toast crunch cinnamon toast crunch if you have not tried it already i recommend cinnamon toast crunch and then well another brand that i enjoy

i would also recommend is ben jerry's okay they they make ice cream and the reason why i've included this one is because you see that sign for and ben and jerry's but nobody's going to pronounce and they're going to reduce it and just say n ben and jerry's and we can also link link this the same way we did with in and out ben and jerry's ben and jerry's another example of a famous brand that has that sign for and black and decker and this this company makes uh power tools that you can use around the home and once again you're not going to say and you're going to reduce it to just n black and decker black and decker next reese's pieces it's a well-known candy and both of those words end in s reese's pieces and it can be a fun little tongue twister if you're trying to say it quickly reese's pieces reese's pieces then we have doritos doritos it's uh it's a well-known brand of chips and i really don't know how to describe doritos all i can tell you is that my favorite flavor is cool ranch but the reason why i've included it is because that tea in doritos i am going to pronounce it with a flap t which is very common in the united states so when the t comes between two vowel sounds you're going to use a flat t it sounds like a soft d doritos doritos you also hear the flat tea in other brands of chips like cheetos you hear that softie cheetos i really like cheetos except the you get cheese stuck on your fingers and then you hear the flap t in tostitos that second t i'm gonna use a flat t comes between two vowels tostitos and well let's let's keep going with some more examples of the flap t gatorade this is a well-known i guess you could say it's like an athletic drink that's at least well that's how they try to market themselves but gatorade that t i'm gonna use a flat t and that second syllable i'm gonna use the schwa that uh sound gata raid gatorade and the same goes for this next brand caterpillar i'm not talking about the insect even though the pronunciation is the same caterpillar is well known for making machinery and again that t i'm going to use a flat t and that second syllable has that schwa caterpillar caterpillar let's switch gears and talk about medicine so tylenol is a very famous brand they make medicine for for headaches or to reduce fevers and i think it's very useful because people may not say hey do you have something for my headache they may ask for it by brand name and say hey do you have any tylenol and this one the spelling and the pronunciation are not too similar that y is pronounced with the long i sound tai and then the second syllable has the schwa tai la nal tylenol and then there's benadryl benadryl is an antihistamine for for allergies so again if i have allergies i might just ask and say hey does anybody have any benadryl and with this one again that second syllable has the schwa benedryl and the y is actually going to have a short i sound this time benadryl benadryl so with tylenol that y has the long eye with benadryl you have that short eye sound whirlpool this is a company that makes home appliances like washing machines and it's a great example of the dark l both of those l's are dark l's in which your is going to come up to the top part of your mouth and you're not going to release it whirlpool so that rl combination can be tricky in many other words as well but let's practice this and you should feel your tongue getting pulled up two times for that dark l whirlpool whirlpool whirlpool and then there's charmin charmin makes paper towels toilet paper and i really i don't know why but that's ch it's not a cha sound it's going to be pronounced like an sh sh charmin and that final syllable has that schwa charmin charmin and then we have listerine it's a it's a well-known brand uh mouthwash and the one thing i want to say about this is that that r-i-n-e it's not pronounced rhine it's pronounced with that long e listerine listerine so in the comments i'd love to hear from you let me know what is one of your favorite american brands especially if it is a brand that you find difficult to pronounce let me know down in the comments if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

Pronunciation English Lesson | Q&A w/ Interactive English

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson this is it's going to be an interactive q a that is all about pronunciation so this is really a pronunciation lesson to help you improve your speaking skills so that you are speaking clearly so that you are speaking accurately and what i want to do is just take your questions your questions anything um that you want to know if there is a word or a phrase that you may be a little unsure about the pronunciation i want to take those questions you can write them in the chat and you can hear my pronunciation and i'll talk to you a little bit about that so today i really want you to be thinking about all of your pronunciation questions any pronunciation questions that you may have and i realize i've said pronunciation quite a lot already so the first thing that i want to say is well happy halloween i hope whether you celebrate halloween or you don't celebrate halloween i just hope you i hope you have a wonderful saturday and i want to give some quick hellos to um lolly great to see you angela sleepwalker um chris yingo ario alex what's up uh glad you guys are here thank you for joining me and what the way we're going to begin i'm i'm going to begin with questions from our uh members and our patreon community because i posted there saying hey do you guys have any questions uh pronunciation let me know and if you guys are interested in showing us some love and want to support and sponsor interactive english there are links down in the description if you want to get a youtube membership uh patreon uh it's down there in the description so the first word uh that i have from from our uh list of patrons um is this right here somebody asked about uh adapt and adopt so this is a great example of a minimal pair and i think when you're talking about pronunciation minimal pairs it's it's excellent to understand what that is it's when you have you have two words and the only difference between those words is one sound so right right here we have two words and the only difference is that vowel sound that uh ah and the ah all right adapt adopt that is the only difference and that's what makes this a minimal pair and minimal pairs it's a great way to practice your pronunciation especially difficult sounds or even confusing sounds or some sounds are very similar so that is another reason why you could practice minimal pairs so let's look at this one where we have adapt and adopt so the difference is that like that a sound like um hack or that that ah adapt adapt and adopt adopt that ah sound so when i think about like that ah let's start with that ah sound both of these sounds are formed with your tongue your tongue is kind of at the bottom the ah think about going to the doctor the doctor will want to look at your throat and they say hey can you you open your mouth and say ah ah that is the sound that adopt a is similar but i think of look at my mouth when i make this so i'm going to make the ah sound first you should see my jaw drops a little and it's almost like i'm smiling a little more so the position of my mouth changes adapt adopt adapt adopt so if you want to learn more about minimal pairs because that is something i recommend you can check out english club i'll just put a link right here um boom a link right there in the chat

the this is a good site that i think you can check out here i'll show you a picture of it and they list a bunch of minimal pairs so here you can see different vowel sounds minimal pairs different consonants and it's good for your listening comprehension but also you can repeat after you hear the sound and that's going to be good for your speaking and your overall pronunciation so that's a good resource that i would suggest that you guys check out the next question that we had from one of our members is this these three words right here now the pronunciation is very different we have so sewage and sewer all right so i'm gonna separate these because the meaning is different so is different than sewage and sewer so let's look at this one on um on its own the pronunciation i know it sounds a little crazy is so it's a verb and it's talking about like the action like you you use a needle and you might sew uh close and you are sewing the pronunc the spelling is s-e-w even though the pronunciation sounds like s-o so to so close um i tried to look up the history of this because it is really strange the the spelling does not match the pronunciation but i could not find any information really about saying why this is why is the pronunciation so different from the spelling but just know that the pronunciation is so and we're talking about that action like you're sewing some clothes um the next words that uh i had on that list were sewage and sewer so in this case the s e is more like that ooh sound sue like you're saying the name like uh susan or susie sewage so it's going to have like that ooh like that u sound let me see my lips around allow you opportunities to see where spelling and pronunciation are a little bit different so this that's a good reason to use subtitles because we have so sewage and sewer another question i believe from silvio came from sylvia oh hey what's up silvio was regard and was asking about the more so like comprehension about how to comprehend this word and how it's used so one thing i'll say about the pronunciation it ends with that d sound most of the time uh well when you think of the d sound that d it's an aspirated sound which means that there's like that puff of air that you have so if you put if i say the d sound you're gonna feel like a puff of air but sometimes with certain words like regard it it's really you're stopping that aspiration that air is not flowing out and what i say it kind of sounds like a like a soft

d sound because it's not really you you're you're not going to feel that aspiration when i say regard regard you kind of hear that d sound so i think keep that in mind when you're thinking about comprehension and listening to it and the other way that you could improve your comprehension when you want to when you hear the pronunciation of this word is to understand the different ways in which the word is used for example regard could be a verb to regard something like i regard um i regard youtube as a great place to learn languages and to learn a lot of different things in that context i regard it means that i i consider this or i think about this like i consider youtube a great place for learning i regard youtube as a great place for learning so that's one usage you could also you could also hold someone in high regard this would be more of a noun and you're talking about um that you think of that you think well of this person that you you could hold someone in high regard that you um or you could say in that same meaning that this person has no regard for something else which again you're talking about respect so you have a lot of respect for someone you hold them in high regard or you have or you don't respect something that you could say this person has no regard for something else so these are some common ways in which this word is used which is all going to help your comprehension the other way that i would say that you might say in regard to something or in regard with something you're talking about a connection so perhaps um i apply for a job and i i don't hear anything and i write to them and i'm saying like i'm writing an email i'm writing to you in regard to my application all right in regard to something so there are many different ways that you can um use a word like this one and when you understand that it's going to help with your comprehension when you hear the word and then it's going to help your with your pronunciation when you speak using this word i want to show you another great uh resource so i told you about um uh minimal pairs with english club when it comes to like learning the meaning of new words my favorite source uh i like cambridge this is the one that i like using so you he you hear i looked up the word regard and it gives you the different meanings some example sentences and then i also think that these online dictionaries are useful because they they have the pronunciation right here as well if you want to listen to the way that a word sounds i'm clicking on the link maybe you're not able to hear that but when it comes to pronunciation if you uh are on your own and you don't know how a word is pronounced use an online dictionary i think most of them nowadays have this feature where you can hit the speaker button and it will pronounce the word for you and then you're able to listen to it so take advantage of these resources uh i think it's it'll be very useful for you and well i don't you probably maybe know some online dictionaries i i prefer cambridge but again you'll find this uh feature on all of them so those were some questions from our members now let me take some questions from uh all of you guys how to say some words um i have let's see mustafa said flowers all right so here i'm gonna type the word um i'll just throw it in there so you guys can see the word that i'm talking about flowers the one thing i don't know if the question was that s sound and this is one of those um times where it's going to end it sounds like a z flowers and the reason for that is because that r at the end it's a voice sound and when you have a voice sound followed by an s it's going to have that z sound flowers flowers uh lolly's asking about effect and effect these are homonyms they're really the the pronunciation is the same let me i'll make a distinction in just a moment so effect with an a this is going to be these are the words that i'm talking about in case you don't know effect with an a uh to affect something is a verb effect with an e is a noun most of the time like in for me i would say both of them with that schwa sound uh uh at the beginning to affect something or something has an effect sometimes people may pronounce that noun that one the with an e they may say effect so that one you could have a couple of different pronunciations which in that case would be different so effect versus effect but and for me when i'm saying these words i will treat them as homonyms um uh and i will say both of them the same way with that schwa sound in um that that beginning position that uh uh sound effect and effect uh all right um angela is asking that's a good question this one um i'll say this one so i talked about flowers like with a z like beautiful like roses daffodils those are flowers this one is a flower uh for cooking and flower for cooking again let's see um fahad thanks for your help you're welcome thanks for being here let's see i'm gonna get to well let's see stuff at ass and then i'll do the next one uh this word is pronounced pessimism pessimism pessimism four syllables pessimism then we have uh assad asks for these two i wouldn't i don't know about that first spelling um here are a couple words career career you have that long e sound in that second syllable the r can be a little tricky because you have double r's there career career and career career so think about career has two syllables career career career you have three syllables so that's really the distinction between those two words courier courier uh let's see angela is asking uh good good halloween words because we're talking about which which and which those are homonyms the pronunciation is going to be the same

last week i talked about a halloween lesson and one of the the tongue twisters that involved both of these words uh what was the tongue twister if two witches were watching two watches which witch would watch which watch and again that is a tongue twister because you are well you're just practicing saying the those homonyms which which which which it's the same pronunciation let's see we have okay here's another one i'm gonna go uh alexandra is talking about ear and year so they they can sound a little similar i think when you're listening trying to make the distinction can be a little challenging the only difference is that y sound at the beginning of year year year so again when you're making that y sound yeah yeah you're gonna drop your jaw kind of looks like you're you're smiling a little bit and i think if i say the words you should be able to see that ear year ear year so let's see what else do we have uh meat is asking about this is a good one because i like uh again uh did you and i think again pronunciation part of that deals with connected speech did you is often connected it's reduced and it might sound like didja didja did you did you um so instead of saying like what did you do yesterday i i might just casually informally very quickly say what'd you do yesterday did you what'd you do yesterday and this is when i think listening can be a real challenge when you have a lot of words and phrases that are connected they're run together and you the more you listen the more you'll get comfortable with that again a great way to practice would be using subtitles because you would hear that and you're actually seeing the words so you know exactly what the person is saying when you use subtitles uh that is another another example as to why it can be useful for your pronunciation let's see i'm gonna go okay roja is asking about these two words and then i'll get to yours lolly um we're talking about endure endure is the first word that u r e endure and the next one endeavor so again there's difference in syllables endure has two syllables endeavor has three syllables endeavor so that is the the real difference you should be able to hear those different syllables endear endeavor then we have uh let's see i told you i get to use i'll leave these right here let's talk about these so moon soon and here the difference that uh again those are minimal pairs the difference would be that one sound the m and the s moon soon and look book so i don't know if that maybe you're asking about the that double o that pronunciation that did that difference between because again the spelling and the pronunciation moon soon that that double o has that ooh ooh sound moon moon soon but then look book look book there is a poem in english called uh chaos and this the purpose of the poem was that the author was trying to show that spelling and pronunciation did not always go together so they came up with this poem it's called chaos i did a lesson uh on this poem a while back trying to show that really english spelling and pronunciation it's it's a little crazy if you have not seen the lesson here is a link to it i'll put it in the chat it's a long poem and what i did is i i didn't practice it but i read the poem and then i was highlighting where i made pronunciation mistakes and i made a lot of them so if you're curious um in checking that out i didn't write the the name of the poem let me write the poem uh is called the chaos and here there's the link again i put it in the chat again so check that out it's a long it's a long poem and you get to see how how much how many mistakes i make because from time to time i think it's very common even in your native language you're going to make pronunciation mistakes you're going to misspeak it happens let's see um fabio ask this word i'm going to try to get as many as i can so um keep asking major and mayor again this is a good example of a minimal pair that j y major may your and the j y the pronunciation is a little similar um the j really j j j you're real your tongue is going to hit the behind your back front teeth on the top part yeah the y your your tongue is not going to hit the sides of your tongue should be uh between your teeth so again i think when you're talking about these minimal pairs with these individual sounds you can look up online there are so many different images and telling you okay this is how you need to position your mouth this is where your tongue needs to be this is how the air is going to flow through and then you can just practice major mayor and i hope if you if you guys want practice at home right now when you hear me say these words you can always repeat listen and repeat um risha asking about this word uh entrepreneurial all right so entrepreneur is a person who starts a business it's a word that english has taken from french and you're this we're using it in this case as an adjective someone is entrepreneurial entrepreneurial like um they like to start businesses that's their personality they're entrepreneurial then we have omar this is a good word veterinarian all right and i think one way to kind of understand this word is to break it down into syllables veterinarian all right six syllables veterinarian all right veterinarian that t sound because i'm from the united states that t sound is going to have a it's a it's called a flap t and it really sounds like a d veterinarian so you're not really if when i say that you're probably not hearing that t sound you're hearing more of a d sound that's a flat t sound veterinarian the same way if i say water it's going to sound like a d that flap t w-a-t-e-r but i would say people from the u.s water um sleepwalker good word this was in i think uh a lesson that i did recently flabbergasted flabbergasted keep in mind that the ed at the end it's going to be another syllable that id because the word ends with a consonant t sound flabbergast flabbergasted so you have that extra syllable at the end keep that in mind um then we have janna's asking about this word right here government government and you really i would say that that e that n for the most part is omitted you you might hear it slightly government but i think for the most part it's omitted government government uh let's see i'm trying to get to a couple others uh someone because i wanted to do this one this is another one that i think people have difficulty with um antarctica antarctica antarctica so you do hear that c it has that you do hear that um ant arctica you do hear that first c a little bit antarctica antarctica you guys can repeat this stuff after me uh let's see we have uh mustafa is talking about uh this word supremacist supremacist i don't think the the spelling is correct i know what you're trying to say supremacist let's see [Music] somebody's okay and then i'll get to the next one here we go culture culture so that u r e really it sounds like that your sound culture culture uh that's another i think common commonly confused word such is asking about almond almond so that o nd is kind of like an und almond almond almond two syllables almond uh i feel like saying it a lot sleepwalker i don't know this we kind of talked about um that ah sound that's another one draw draw draw saw um law uh silvio asked about thaw so there's many that aw that that's uh that's a good one um i'll ask i'll do this one i guess maybe the uh es17ch24 uh interactive interactive the channel interactive english interactive in case you don't know what it means it's kind of like they're you're you're doing something kind of you're engaged you're participating so that's why i named the channel interactive english because i try to do these lessons where it's not just passive learning and you're watching a video a lot of times we'll i'll ask you to do something and participate answer the questions especially with these live lessons like right now you guys are participating you're writing words i hope that perhaps after i say it you are repeating the words and practicing your pronunciation uh that's what i hope let's see um aileen asked about this this is another homonym both of these words have the same pronunciation complement but they do have different meanings complement with an e m e and t means that you are that these two things go well together peanut butter complements jelly when making a sandwich a pb and j complement with an i you are you are telling somebody something positive you're saying something nice and you give someone a compliment ralphson asked about these again this these are homonyms uh you're your same pronunciation sounds the same different meaning because y-o-u apostrophe r-e is the contraction for you are um let's see um roja i said i get to this one uh you were asking about laboratory laboratory laboratory so i would say it um laboratory that second syllable more with the schwa sound and uh sound laboratory laboratory the stress is going to be on that first syllable laboratory uh this is a good word angela paraphernalia paraphernalia para pha that schwa sound again that is the most common sound in english that unstressed vowel sound paraphernalia paraphernalia a good word i think more advanced word uh if you're talking about different items that somebody might have often i think this word is associated with drugs like paraphernalia let's see um this one all right you can just so you can hear me say it ticket ticket ticket that's what you were asking about emmanuel um trousers trousers trousers trousers so again remember i said that r that final consonant sound it's voiced so that s is gonna sound like a z if that was the question trousers mustafa oops entourage entourage again this is another french word that english has just borrowed and taken but the the pronunciation um i think is going to remain slightly the same i don't i don't speak french so i'm i'm just guessing entourage la is asking uh this is a good one this is psychic psychic it's a silent p at the beginning of the word uh psychic so uh this one let's just do i'm just gonna do one more cause i gotta wrap things up um reservoir reservoir that s is going to have more of a z sound reservoir again this is a word that was borrowed uh from by french from french that o r sound reservoir so that is the pronunciation for that word again i hope you i'd encourage you listen repeat practice your pronunciation if you guys like what we do i'll do more of these lessons later on and i'll do the same thing i'll probably reach out to our members first if you want to uh sponsor support us check that out links are in this description down below and if you enjoyed the lesson let me know hit the like button which tells me that the lessons useful it's helpful for you to be able to ask your questions anything that you want to know about pronunciation if it helps to hear me say it and then you can practice or give you some information like i said i told you about um that site for minimal pairs which i think is very useful um this is cambridge online dictionary but right here english club you can check that out and find some more information about minimal pairs it's another great way to practice and improve your pronunciation so i hope you guys can check that out i hope you find it useful so thank you so much for joining me on this halloween this kind of halloween pronunciation day i hope you have a wonderful weekend give some shout outs thank you uh for joining me moadin meet aline christine angela hope you have a wonderful weekend enjoy the rest of your weekend karil onion onion uh i like that annyeonghaseyo i like that changed it to onion a little bit of a play on words i like it um roja sleepwalker uh enjoy the rest of your weekend and nekla thank you all right i gotta go i will see you guys next time so long

Pronunciation Q&A Lesson | You ask and I'll tell you how to say it

all right we are live I first just want to say hello to all of you out there today we are going to do it's a pronunciation lesson it is more of a pronunciation Q&A and I want to take some of your questions if you want to know how to pronounce different words or phrases or sentences you can write that in the chat and you can just hear how I would pronounce it and I would say these words phrases or sentences but before before you start writing stuff in the chat just yet I do want to mention just one thing right off the top I know that you know this this coronavirus has taken the world by storm it's pretty much everywhere right now so I just want to say I hope that that all of you guys out there are staying home staying safe staying healthy and that I wish you guys all of the best and again just wish all of your countries all of the best and hope you guys are able to stay healthy so when it comes to pronunciation I want to start out by talking about some resources that you can use just two of my favorite ones when I want to know how to pronounce a word and again I'm gonna put this right here in the chat so you guys can see it and the first one that I have is this one dictionary.com I think this is a great resource I'm putting these links in the chat so even if you're watching this later please watch the chat because that's where I'm gonna throw a lot of these links dictionary.com you can find out the American pronunciation the the British pronunciation it also tells you the phonetic spelling of a word as well as the IPA the international phonetic alphabet another great resource I think is Cambridge dictionary those are the two dictionaries that I like to use or you can just google it and if you google the word like how-to announced and then some word it's going to come up in the search and it'll just be right there and you can listen to the pronunciation Google also will allow you to record yourself saying the word so after you hear how it's pronounced you can try to repeat it and then listen to that recording and you can listen to the word and then the recording and see if they match up and see if you think your pronunciation is close so again this is an idea it's kind of like practicing shadowing and shadowing is a great way to practice your pronunciation to improve your pronunciation it's when you are basically saying the word or the phrase or the sentences just after you hear it almost like you're saying it at the same time and again this is a great way to practice your pronunciation now those two those are some great resources and before we begin I'm gonna throw some words in there I'm going to start with questions that I got from our patreon community as well as our members and that's also something I wanted to mention we now on our YouTube channel we do have memberships if you want to check that out there is a link in the description or if you want to join our patreon community you can do that as well and there are some rewards that we offer and I'll put a link to the patreon right here but again there's a link in the description so I'm going to start with some of those questions from our patrons but before again I just want to say hello give some shout outs to people vivica Rosario Irene Kaleo proud Nikki Samuel Rohan Louisa Angela hello hello Gibson how are you guys zelich Aiden I saw you in there glad you guys are here so I'm gonna start with questions from our patrons and our membership community first I'm just gonna tell you I got a list of words that they were asking about and I'm gonna give you the word as well as the phonetic spelling and when I say phonetic spelling it's almost like how how you would you would I'm tryin saying you would spell the word the way that it's pronounced it may look a little strange to some of you but you get the idea so the first word that someone asked about I believe it was you Aiden is this one right here I'm writing it in the chat the word quarantine so it has three syllables and that the stress is going to be on that first syllable that qu a sounds like cor cor quarantine it has that schwa that second syllable has an sound and if you don't know what the schwa sound is it is an unstressed vowel sound it is the most common sound in English and often vowels will have that schwa and that's that sound quarantine quarantine and again if it helps you guys practice saying these words as I say it repeat it say it out loud it's all about getting some practice quarantine quarantine another word that I had was this one agnostic I'm throwing it again in here in the chat it has three syllables the stress is on that second syllable agnostic agnostic and I think when you hear this word maybe it's you make sure that you're stressing that second syllable agnostic agnostic you can hear that I'm stressing it when I say agnostic then we have this word unwittingly unwittingly

States Americans tend to pronounce that flap T often when the tea you have a tea sound in the middle of a word the flap T sounds like a D a very soft D so if you hear me saying unwittingly it's you're not really gonna hear that T much it's going to sound like a light D sound unwittingly same with the word if I were to say this word right here water and I would pronounce it it's going to sound like a little bit like a D sound water water okay so let's see wait why is this not going through okay the next word that I have for you is this one right here wait a second why okay I'm gonna have to go over here because I popped out the chat and now the words weren't popping up this word okay plutocracy so plutocracy again it has four syllables and the stress is on that talk that that second syllable plutocracy and if you're wondering what a plutocracy is it's a form of government it's really a government by the wealthy by rich people by the wealthy that would be what it is when people refer to a plucked plutocracy another word that I think people often have trouble with this word pronunciation wise is this one aisle all right it's one syllable aisle aisle that s is a it's a silent letter you're not going to hear it aisle all right another word that we have is this one candidates so this is a word well it's a word because there's a political election in the United States if you follow that at all you might hear this word candidacy candidacy the stress is on that first syllable candid see that third syllable has that schwa that duh duh candidacy candidacy again if it helps practice saying these words say them out loud to repeat them after me I'm gonna pop up the chat again so it makes it a little easier for me to move around the next word that somebody has is this one it's a very common word but I think it's a little it can be challenging because it's a long word but only two syllables Mountain mountain now you could say the pronunciation Mountain the mountain but often I think when people say this in a sentence like I'll say it we're gonna go hiking up the mountain it's almost like you're really reducing that second part to mountain mountain mountain mountain so I think quite often when you're just you know having a conversation oh that's a big mountain let's go hiking up the mountain did you guys did you and did you climb this mountain this last weekend Mountain mountain so it's Mount and and that you're just following it with you're just going right into that end sound mountain mountain mountain the next word somebody asked about was gnarled gnarled and gnarled just means like you're chewing something but again this has a silent letter that silent G at the beginning gnarled gnarled that EE D is going to have a sound gnarled because the L gnarled is voiced voice so it's going to have sound like that he'll gnarled then we have another word which again I think is because of the spelling a silent letter Castle castle that T there there is no T it's a silent T castle so I'm putting that phonetic spelling I think by now that I've added that hopefully that makes a little more sense the phonetic spelling is spelling the word the way it sounds because with some of these silent letters gonna it can be a little confusing and then the last word that I want to go for from our patrons is this word and our members horizon has three syllables and the stress is on that second syllable again this is when syllable stress it does become important horizon horizon that that you can hear my emphasis on that second syllable horizon that first syllable has that schwa that huh uh-huh rise and horizon all right and you see the horizon it's talking about like kind at the end like the Sun sets on the horizon all right there are maybe maybe there are mountains behind you and then the Sun is setting on the horizon all right so those are words that from our patreon community from our members I wanted to go over those first so right now if you guys have some words phrases or even sentences if there is a sentence that you would like me to say write that in the chat right now and I'll go through and I'll try to answer as many as I can and again I'm gonna try to write them give you the phonetic spelling which means it's going to take me a little more time so somebody Jose I saw you asked about comfortable all right this is another word that I think it can be really challenging alright so I'm writing it right there comfortable comfortable comfortable comfortable alright so again there's that it's a comfortable comfortable alright I think the reason why this is challenging is because again it kind of gets short and sometimes you might not even hear that are comfortable are you very are you comfortable right now how's this seat is this seat comfortable I think you do when I say it you do feel

I hear a little bit of that are sound comfortable comfortable but I think that's a great word because it's a great adjective I think it's a very common word comfortable comfortable let's see Sayid would you pronounce one have and shouldn't have I'd have one t'v one so I think one reason when you say wouldn't have I okay I'll use it in a sentence and I'd say this sentence if I knew so I'd say you shouldn't bought the gift alright so if I say oh you you shouldn't have bought the gift you shouldn't have bought the gift that have almost sounds like it gets reduced to like an of like a and you could think of it like an of like of or Ovie in phonetic spelling shunt of shunt of alright one tough same with wouldn't have wouldn't of so in if I were just saying this naturally you shouldn't have bought the gift I'd

if you're watching the news especially in English you might hear this word and people talk about many people are trying their their hoarding supplies they're keeping a lot of supplies hello lisa is asking about hostile and hostile yes I say as far as I don't know in British if you're talking about they are sometimes I think sometimes people might pronounce it hostile they are hostile so in and I think again hostile is a place where you'd stay let me put those down so you get the phonetic spelling so a hostile is a place that you'd stay the pronunciation I just say hostile let me throw down the phonetic spelling hostile here we go hostile alright again it's like Mountain you're moving in from Mountain right into just that n hostile it's the same way you're moving right in to that TL hostile now you wanted to compare that with this next one hostile I think in American English I think it is pretty common like I would say pronounce it the same way that I would say hostile like wow they're and they're being very hostile right now it's a way of somebody's behaving somebody's acting they're acting hostile I think also people in the America in America might say hostile which I think is what they would say in British English and in that case you are going to hear that long I sound in that second syllable hostile hostile in the United States they might say both hostile or hostile but in British English you would hear hostile Willington asked about the word development so the word development again the stress is going to be it has four syllables the stresses on that second Stila bull development and again I'll put these in the chat so if you're watching this later please utilize the chat because I'm writing all these words in there the

the stress is going to be on that second syllable development development and that third syllable has that schwa that development development development Abu Abu Bakar alright thank you for the question the difference between debt and date so the difference is really that the vowel sound that you find in these two words so debt is going to have that short e that short e sound and it's going to sound like this debt alright you go into debt where you are losing money and you could say some businesses business might go into debt people can go into debt if they spend more money than they make date which is going to have the long a sound is going to be well let's do it this is the phonetic spelling date they put for it so debt versus date again short e versus the long a sound let's see a couple of Holly alright disciplinary disciplinary let me get the phonetic spelling for you so disciplinary again this is an adjective means like you're you're kind of trying to enforce some rules or laws the stress is on that first syllable dis disciplinary disciplinary again that second syllable has that schwa DISA DISA disciplinary say it with me disciplinary Mary asks well Mary asked the difference between while and a while so again the only difference would be that extra syllable in front of a while so while again very useful word very common word let me get the phonetic spelling for you I'd say while there is a silent H in there you're not going to pronounce that H sound while a while you're going to have that schwa in front of the word while so you're saying the the pronunciation is very similar it's the same you're just adding that extra syllable that while verses a while here is a while so you can see how that's about that schwag is at the beginning and I'll say it again because the sound is so common it's so popular that it is an unstressed vowel sound the schwa sound is an unstressed vowel sound and it just sounds like a while the next word Muslim English asked me about entertainment entertainment it's a longer word again I think it's it's a pretty common word because people might ask you like hey what do you do for entertainment what do you do for entertainment I think when I say it quickly here's the you can see the phonetics billing entertainment entertainment but again if I were to say it quickly I almost like enter entertainment I almost reduce it to entertainment so I might ask you just say it quickly what do you do for entertainment and you might not hear that second syllable very well that Terr so again I'm trying to teach show you like well what I would say if I'm having a natural conversation but also if you were to pronounce the word individually entertainment and I think it is good to pronounce it completely entertainment but I would tend to reduce that entertain entertainment let's see could you please Heidi hottie is asking could you please tell me how to pronounce crew crew so again it's that vowel sound crew has that it's just more like an ooh ooh sound crew let me write it there for you again practice saying it with me crew like you're talking about maybe a group of people your crew a work crew crew which is different from the bird that's going to have that long o sound crew crew crew versus crew let me write it for you boom okay crew crew alright so don't sing in German English no I think German Vicki I think German is way it's the pronunciation is very hard for me but I will try to pronounce that good girl Germer governor sutra government governor sutra is what I would say governor Sutra I'm sure my German pronunciation is is not very good let's see Morgana asked about wrists and wrists those are homonyms all right because wrists with the W it is a silent w so the pronunciation is going to be the same wait a second no no oh I'm sorry those are two different words risk and wrists so they could be confused but this the final letter is going to be different risk all right you can hear when I say you can hear that K at the end risk and the phonetic spelling is going to be just exactly like you say the word risk you should see that here that K risk now if I were to say wrist you should be able to hear that T at the then repeating and shadowing again is a great way to do that if you listen to somebody you're listening to me saying these words and I would encourage you to say the words out loud repeat them after me so that you again you can try to mimic my pronunciation when you're you're trying to improve your pronunciation and say these words so Lali asks between ball and Bowl I can't see that really well that in this one ball ball Bowl so again in that case mmm let's see ball like a bouncy ball it's really the difference in pronunciation ball is going to have that short a sound ball ball and it almost has like you're gonna hear that W in there as well ball and Bowl is that long o Bowl I think that other word Bowl bol L is like a for I don't know is that like a botany word but it's pronounced the same as bo WL so bowl as well as I think this one but that other one vo WL is much more common because it is we people use that every day maybe in the kitchen you are using a bowl ball bowl let's see what else do we have I'm asked word world so let me put that first one in there again both of these words have one syllable and I think that L is in the middle of world that's where I think again you just really have to listen for it so word word you hear that one syllable word versus world world the RL is a tricky combination because again your tongue when you're saying the R sound your tongue is in the middle of your mouth and then you're gonna transition a little upward for that L world world now world I don't think this time usually the L sound you're gonna your tongue is gonna touch the top of your mouth but when you're transitioning it's very quick your tongue is actually not going to hit the top of your mouth when you say world world world world it's a big world alright it's a different world world is a difficult is a difficult word to pronounce the word world let's see Andre asks for feature future so the the first syllable is what's difference between those two words these are great getting a lot of good information about words that two words that you think are maybe a little difficult to pronounce and maybe you confuse these so feature if we're talking about the adjective feature that long e sound versus future where you're going to have that it almost sounds like you're saying you're pronouncing the letter U future feature versus future feature future all right Linda asked this is a very I know it's a difficult word rural rural rural because you have that R and that L so it has two syllables row row and that second syllable has that schwa sound rural rural all right the rural like you might be talking about a rural community kind of like the countryside farmlands rural alright let's see Wilbert says please pronounce party alright so I would say party again this is another good example of that flap T sound people from the United States are going to use that flap T sound and that T is almost gonna sound more like a soft D sound party so that's how I would say it we're going out tonight and well we're going well we're not going to have a party because again with everything going on we need to practice that social distancing staying at home but pronouncing this word many people in in British English you are going to hear that T sound but many Americans party party juh Tov asked how do you pronounce a Corona Corona I think it's a relevant word it's a word that you hear all the time Corona so it has three syllables but the first and the third syllable are going to have that schwa that sound alright so when you hear people talk about it that the coronavirus corona is going to be pronounced like this there's the phonetic spelling ro know alright that first and that third syllable have that that schwa sound Korona um Michelle Leonardo says could you pronounce torture torture alright so here is the word that he asked about I know some of you have not you might not be following this that's why I'm writing the words that I am saying so you can just follow the words torture oh whoops I misspelled it sorry sorry sorry sorry it has an R in there there it is so two syllables tore sure torture torture Mary asked about the word unprecedented another word that I think people here more often that something never really happens and it's an adjective and they could say it is unprecedented so let's see mm-hmm getting spelling it for you if something is unprecedented let me write it in here for you so you guys know the word right there unprecedented it has five syllables all right unprecedented the stress is going to be on that second syllable that press unprecedented unprecedented all right unprecedented rumah ask between the P and the B sound that pair bear so again this is good where it's a great minimal pair and I practicing that PB that pop but pop but one way to practice is that P sound you're gonna have that breath of air you should be able to feel that puck all right it's a much different you'll feel a little bit of air with the B sound but when you say that pair you should feel the air hitting your hands pear bear pear bear all right the B sound should be much softer let's see what else do we have mmm masking let's see dreamer ass metal metal those words I would say for me they're homonyms again because in many people from the United States that flap T I'm going to pronounce it more like a D so it would sound the same to me they're sinan but in British English you would hear people pronounce that teeth metal so again there is the phonetic spelling but for for me from the United States I would pronounce them basically the same metal metal alright so let's see so he'd asked about the word manipulate so this is a verb to manipulate it has four syllables and the first syllable is gonna have that schwa sound that ma ma ma nip you late so can you hear where the stress is manipulate manipulate it's on that to improve three things all right get more exposure listening to the language practice shadowing and actually I thought there was a kind of a third thing I forgot it so two things all right listen and practice those two things you will improve your pronunciation and the more you do that you're again you're gonna improve your overall fluency because this is important we need this in order to communicate so once again I want to let you guys know if you enjoyed what we do and you guys want to make a connection with us you can connect with us on patreon we offer some cool rewards there or you become a member on our YouTube channel now and get yourself a membership this is something else that we have done there's a link in the description I'll also throw a link right here in the chat if you guys want to check that out we again we offer the same rewards for both but it helps us do what we do here at interactive English and the last thing another way I'm throwing all these ways for you guys to connect with us right now if you haven't joined our email list again we give you send you different updates we do send you resources from time to time and that is another way to to connect with us and that is free so definitely check out climb on to our email list and yeah that that is it again thank you guys so much for joining me today please you know stay healthy stay safe I wish you guys all the best want to read some comments thank you Syed our Shiva and Aidan Lally thank you guys for being here dreamer Sanna tonyia supercalifragilistic expialidocious all right there you go that's how you say that one supercalifragilistic expialidocious all right that's a good way to practice right there it's not a word that you're going to use aloha says Samwell so new mariangela honey guitar sorry I'm a mispronouncing name shallow Ahmad Frantz Fanon's Jessa Morgiana live for India room Michelle Leonardo Shama Andre thank you guys so much for being here I hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend again stay healthy stay safe and I will be back next time for another live lesson so long

Q&A About Learning English, Life Updates, and More

all right so I think this may be working right now I'm gonna have to see so I know some of you were in a different location and let's see if I can tell people okay um live at a different spot link okay so first I want to apologize because this is a complete a bit of a complete mess because we're trying to go live on this other on our regular event and it just wasn't working and it's one of those things I know this has happened to everybody where you you are ready to do everything I sit down I test everything to make sure that it's working and then all of a sudden as soon as I'm about to go live just boom kaput it just it's it's not working so this it's it is incredibly frustrating because like I said I think people are waiting in another spot and Here I am live right here so it's a little confusing but I'm gonna see if I can kind of get that information and share that with people because I don't want them to be waiting around so today there's there's quite a few things that I'd like to talk to you about and kind of go over with you but first you know it's been a crazy month I'll say that so as you know some of you know you want and I we had our first child a baby girl Amelia she is very healthy mother is doing well so it's been a and adjust to Parenthood very little sleep but it's been very exciting as well and that's the reason we kind of took a break from the live streams for a couple of weeks but now we we are getting back into the swing of things and we're going to try and do live lessons every Saturday again and kind of keep up with our normal schedule this is the link to our current live lesson I'm writing the other people in the other chat so they know okay where to go and where they should be so what I want to do now is you know let me just say hello I want to say what's up ma vie uma mu Richard Tate Oh Lotus Dario Renea Anna Sayid Asura Robson thank you guys Gabriella thank you guys for joining us thank you guys for being a part of the community I really appreciate it hello hello hello want to welcome all of you guys today is just gonna be a bit of a hangout we're gonna just hang out and this is a little different from the other lessons that we've done because usually it's very it's something very specific that we're doing each week and I'm teaching something specific and we do some activities and I interact with you guys today I just kind of want it to be more of a hangout and I want to answer some of your questions directly so if you guys have questions just write them in the chat and even if you're watching this later I think this is great because it's going to be great listening practice if you just want to listen to English and practice your listening skills it's also going to be great because I will be answering questions about English and anything that you guys have any questions about learning English or if you have questions about me if you have questions about you wanna if you have questions about interactive English so it's also going to be great so that you get to know us a little bit better and you know what we are all about here on this channel so again hello Giselle Veggie from Brazil Taha

hello hello what's up Asif long so many familiar faces thank you guys for being here in joining us so awesome says please talk about inform contractions well I would say again we had a whole lesson on contractions that you should check out and I there are a lot of them in the lesson that we did before we talked about just your typical subject and verb contractions especially with the verb to be and I'd say any contraction is informal it's important to learn because we use it all the time especially in speaking instead of saying I am you'd say I'm instead of saying we will will so it's good I highly recommend to check out that lesson you could just search our channel contractions and I go over a bunch of them with you and it's great listening once you know them if you can identify them it is great for your listening because when you're having a conversation I just used it when you are when you're having a conversation we use them a lot so it makes it so much easier to follow along the conversation so check out that lesson um Brian asked are you coming to Columbia I would love to visit Columbia I was actually in Columbia about ten years ago I went to Bogota Manizales meta-gene Cartagena and hiked around in Parque tyrona and I would love to go back because it is such a beautiful country um John a hello from the Philippines cebu I would love to visit Cebu I've heard a lot of great things about the Philippines and would love to visit ayesha hello from Pakistan hello hello welcome what's the difference between I like to plus infinite or like plus ing I like to go and or I'm liking I'm kind of thing it like if your question is about gerunds and infinitives like is a verb that you can it can be followed by a infinitive I like to play or it can be followed by a gerund I like playing so there are several verbs that can be followed by either a gerund and infinite or infinitive and like is one of them so I don't know if that was your question but you can follow it with either personally I tend to go with the gerund most of the time I like playing I like dancing I like singing that's that's just me personally so again as you guys are asking questions I want you again try these are great questions try to keep keep in mind make them specific because sometimes we get very broad questions and people would ask explain all the verb tenses and that is something that would take hours to go through and talk about so again just try to keep the questions specific like whether it's about a word and a meaning or how to pronounce a word and we can kind of run through a bunch of different ones please spell my name lotta Lotta is it split spam spell my name you want me to say your name lots of lots of bottom n hello welcome thank you guys for joining us what's the difference between two and four it's really that that really depends because prepositions can be really challenging that was a question from hey Yin about the difference between two and four prepositions are very challenging because they're those small little function words that follow nouns they follow adjectives and sometimes you just need to sometimes you can learn them and there are rules for example when talking about time and you say in the morning in the afternoon in the evening and that way you you can okay I know this other times you just have to kind of memorize and be familiar that you use it in this case so for example I said to you guys before I said I look forward to this live stream I look forward to this event and when you look forward to something that's when you would use to if we're talking about being responsible you are responsible for something we use it with that the best way to learn those prepositions honestly is to read read read read the more you read in English you're seeing the words you're seeing the grammar you're seeing how these prepositions are used and that is the best thing that I think you guys can do for yourself amano put attrition patricia pretty hello how are you thank you guys for joining us welcome again you guys feel free to ask questions somebody said Oh same how do you spell what's the difference between desert and desert so the pronunciation is a little bit a different dessert - desert is to abandon it is a verb that is des ERT desert and then desert are you know that it can also be a desert so it can be - desert or a desert which is a noun which is a place the desert now desert ditches des ser t desert is what you would have after your main meal you would have desert you would have a cake you would have some ice cream and you would have that for dessert so don't don't confuse it desert and desert desert is the noun but again that is a multiple meaning word desert des ERT if we're using it as a verb it also could sound like desert so it can be a little confusing but again the spelling for those two it is different sir let me ask you I'm trying to find some more questions Rosalinda asked about active and passive voice again that is a it's a bit of a more a broader topic we do have a whole lesson which I recommend you guys check out about the active and passive so many times you guys will ask us about different things and we have a full lesson on it so what I'm going to do is this is a great time because we're here you guys are in the chat I'm gonna just see if I can find some of these links and I'll just throw them in there so if you are looking for information about the active and passive I will find that for you right now and I will link it in there because I suggest that you guys watch it gives you a bunch of information active and passive so while it's searching I will do that let me see hello hello from Thailand Indonesia great great to have you guys here sorry if I miss some of your questions I'm trying to read through this quickly when somebody says how are you fixed for job or cash or money so how should we answer that question how are you fixed for a job I'm not sure what you mean by like you're fixed for a job how are you fixed are you fixed for cash or you fixed for money I don't know if they're asking if you need some cash or you need some money is what are you it's kind of an expression and maybe try it you can ask it again maybe I'm reading it wrong whose name is John or called John which is the right thing now our ask I know someone their name is John or whose name is John or call John okay in this case you could say again I I know someone if you want to say I I know someone period their name is John or his name is John then it's just two sentences if you want to keep it as a if you want to make it a complex sentence I know someone whose name is John in that case it would be an adjective clause and you're just adding that information I know someone whose name is John or you could say I know someone call John I think it's more but more common to say I know someone whose name is John or I know someone his name is John I think those are the more common ways but it's a matter of of grammar whether it's two sentences or you're going to use it as an adjective clause please tell us your favorite idiom and its meaning tt99 all right great so I'd say my favorite idiom I often uh I often say like a lot of times

I say play it by ear because I'm not somebody who likes to make definite plans I like to make plans but I also like to keep it open so often I'd say let's make a plan let's let's go out to dinner and they say okay well where are we going to go so I don't know let's let's play it by ear it means like let's just let's just take things as they come and we'll decide a little later or we'll decide at that moment we'll just play it by ear it's kind of like we're going to do this thing but you're going to be flexible to play it by ear so that's something that I always tell people like oh what are we going to do and say you know let's just let's just play it by ear we'll see what happens who knows let me give you the link so if you guys are looking for that active and passive voice here is the link to the lesson that you can go check out all right I'll just write it here active versus passive boom alright so you guys can go check that out that is a good link and good information talked a lot about active and passive so pretty Judy asked pretty much pretty well is that American or British hmm honestly I'm not sure how popular it would be in British English I think it's used in both I think it's used in American English people would say yeah you know pretty much or like yeah how are you doing you pretty well I I think pretty much is definitely something that's used a lot in American English but I don't think that's really much of a distinction between British and American English I feel like it's probably it's used in both so please visit India Vishnu yes we would love to visit India that is another place it is on our list and if we come to visit India we will be sure to ask many of you who are from there where we should go where should we visit if we go to India but we do love that is probably perhaps one of our favorite cuisines we'd love to eat Indian food you want and I go out to eat Indian food all the time and it's great let's see what else do we have is it normal yet Itza says is it it is nor that you could be better in grammar but when it comes from speaking English you sometimes can't be fluent as much as you want any suggestion I think that that's very common that people have different skill levels so for example we would teach students before that might be you know great at speaking or they might be more competent at speaking but their writing was not so good or other students who were great at writing or they had great listening skills but when they were trying to speak and express themselves it was a little more challenging for them one thing I think for speaking when that makes it so much difficult if people are afraid to make mistakes and and they're filled with a little anxiety then it becomes that much more challenging to speak and try to communicate with other people so one thing I definitely suggest was it when it comes to speaking don't worry about making mistakes just just go out there and say what's on your mind and and if you're having trouble trying to express yourself think of other ways to say it and oftentimes people would say that they're like oh I don't know how to say this in English if that's the case one thing I would recommend try to build your vocabulary the more you build your vocabulary the more you're going to be able to say exactly what you want to say and that's really going to help you so that you don't have to think and say well I'm not sure how to say this in English so building vocabulary I think is something that will really help and again just trying to get that confidence so that you're not worried about making mistakes and you'll just say whatever we've heard people students are worried about making mistakes could be because of grammar or even pronunciation I know people have they've avoided saying certain words because they think they're not pronouncing it correctly so let's see English I said who else women trying to read wow they're going through these very quickly I was wondering if you could tell us about the proper to pronounce the flap T alright no no yeah kissaki great question in the future we're actually we we have done a lesson on the flop t yeah I'm editing that lesson right now and it'll probably come out in a couple of months but the flat T is very common especially in American English it's when that T is kind of in the the middle of the word so that T sound is in the middle and it just sounds like a D so better I instead of B et ter instead of saying better like you might hear more in British English I just say better which sounds more like a D watr water water is another one it just sounds like that D sound in American English when that T is in the middle that's basically the flap T let's see one left eeh why don't you visit Rocco yes come on I'd love to visit Morocco and if we come to Morocco we're gonna let you know so many places to visit and it's just again there's too many places on the list and too just not enough time so hopefully we'll get to visit all of these places where you guys are from and that we'd get to let you know and maybe even do some meetups one thing that I want to tell you guys which again I am so sorry for is that we've now come out with a bit of a newsletter to to make another connection with you to send you guys useful and free information so if you're looking if you're interested in signing up for that newsletter here is the link I'll say sign sign up here alright you can go to the site put in your email we're not going to spam you and send you emails every single day we'll just send you stuff from time to time about useful free resources things that we're doing you can also access our secret fluency lesson the reason I'm apologizing is because we many people have signed up already and we've been in communication with them but there was a problem that we were not receiving emails and a few days ago I fixed that so now that we are receiving emails if you respond to one of our emails and sent us something we will get that now if you wrote us an email in the past and we didn't respond it's because we didn't get it and I apologize but things are working now Kurt

Bart and can you come to Canada yes we would we were in Canada two years ago we were visit we visited a friend in Montreal and it was great I saw syw I'm in Hana I'm from Hong Kong the first time watch live broadcast welcome thank you thank you for joining this live broadcast so here we're all about practicing and improving your English skills if you did not know what interactive English is and you guys are joining us for the first time my name is Wes and that is what we are all about doing we come out with weekly lessons each week all about helping you guys practice and improve your lessons practice and improve your English and if you guys like what we do please hit that like button we always appreciate that Lily I love your video lessons from Saudi Arabia thank you thank you so much we're happy to have you as part of our community love it when you guys are here and just hanging out so just how can you help us to pronounce okay

let's look at some of these words curtain the first one curtain button you don't really hear that T sound button Mountain again sometimes American English suppose to say Mountain and you almost dropped that T but mountain in the American act so I'd say curtain button mountain in the American in my very American accent um was it sighting in the answers why we you she for any country Ayesha Khan asked why do we use she for country that that's a good question I think that's something that sometimes certain objects will just get assigned gender I really don't know why for example oftentimes cars will get referred to in the female gender and they will talk about it as she I'm not really sure exactly the history behind that but I right a lot of times countries will get referred to at with the feminine female gender please who is it or is it Andrea please answer my question - it's really confusing wait where was your question maybe I missed it before oh why the words work would homework house work etc never a pronounced like the word nurse while their phonetic for the vowels are the same work world homework are are not pronounced like the word nurse even though the vowels are the same honestly the I have another great lesson that's going to come out in the future the thing we did another lesson before about spelling and pronunciation and in English it's just crazy and confusing and so much of it doesn't make sense the spelling and the pronunciation the reason for that is because over time pronunciation changes it doesn't change immediately but over hundreds and hundreds of years it does change and it's changed in English but one thing hasn't changed sometimes spelling has not and for that reason sometimes we get silent letters that are no longer pronounced for that reason sometimes vowels are pronounced differently within words in the future we're doing a lesson it's not really a lesson it's a pronunciation poem it's called the chaos and the reason for this poem is that it's all about just showing you that spelling and pronunciation are ridiculous and they don't match up and sometimes there is no rule to it you just need to learn how these different words are pronounced and said and a great way to do that I know many of you practicing your listening sometimes people don't like using subtitles because they think well if I'm using subtitles I really just want to practice my listening but if you're using subtitles it does help make it a bit of a pronunciation lesson because then you're able to see the word you're able to see the spelling and you're able to hear the correct pronunciation so I think that's a great way to to practice to kind of identify certain words of pronounce Curt Curt Barton say pickle in English pickle all right a pickle you can be in a pickle if somebody is that's an idiom if somebody is in a bit of a pickle it means that they are in a troubling situation so there's another idiom to be in a pickle you can have a troubling situation and in French and Spanish and French and Spanish I'm not really sure so sorry I can't help you with that one let's see greetings from the Ukraine

Olivia thank you very much yes glad you guys like our lessons glad you guys hope you guys glad you're glad you think I'm a good instructor I've been teaching English for gosh about thirteen fourteen years now started a long time ago I've talked in several different countries Korea and Namibia the Dominican Republic the United States and now this is like kind of started teaching online with this channel and doing these live lessons and I think the reason I love these live lessons is because we are have we have lessons in real time you guys can interact I can ask you questions you can answer them and you can have as many people as you want in the classroom and keep it large so that's the one thing I love about these live lessons so Wow turns out that you are an old man Tennyson yes I am an old man and proud of it so I am no longer in my 20s I'll give you that I'm not gonna tell you exactly how old I am but it I don't think it would be it would be hard for you guys to find out so Mustafa irani says sometimes the dictionary pronounce the word in a weird way for example bottom and Cambridge dictionary sound isn't clear I hear autumn instead of bottom so yeah I think if you're I think it's great to use online dictionaries and you can listen to the pronunciation sometimes I forget which dictionary it is one of them will give you both the British and the American pronunciation I'm not sure if it's the Cambridge dictionary but a lot of them will just give you the the British pronunciation but bottom yeah if you if I were to say it in my American bottom and autumn so you do hear that be it's a voice sound but but but bottom bottom and autumn how to wear is it somebody asked I'm a back or how to accept or decline an invitation in English politely I I would say how to accept I would say yeah I would love to if somebody's asking you to do something or you'd say yes I would love to do that or if somebody's offering you food I would love to have some I think it's great to use the word love because it shows you're excited if you want to decline to say no thank you no thank you is perfectly fine to decline something somebody asked where am i from I am from the United States I have lived in about maybe 15 different states so I've moved all over grew up along the East Coast the last place that I lived in the United States was the great state of California louis angle hi hello how are you yes Suhani asks could you tell me why english it's become an intern to be the international language that's a great question I think a lot of it has to do with just just the history mostly the history within the last hundred years before you had the British Empire and that spread all over the world and that I think it helped it made English a primary language in many countries in Asia and Africa and then I think towards these last 50 years I I know that the United States has developed a lot they've become you know especially economically and because of that I think the u.s. exported a lot of the language they exported the language in movies in music in TV a lot of pop culture and I think because the last hundred years you know because of the UK because of the United States it's kind of just become the international language and honestly I know some some students think like ah you know like it's difficult to learn I think it's good for for many of you guys I I almost think it's not a it's something that I part of me almost wish it wasn't the case because sometimes it for me trying to learn another language sometimes it becomes more difficult because you go to another country and you want to practice the language and many people will speak English and it it some what it does is sometimes I think it makes people a bit lazier when if you're a native English speaker and it's not a good thing I think people tend to maybe become a little bit lazier when it comes to learning anguish English or when it becomes to learning other languages because some people will have it's a very ignorant viewpoint that they'll they'll have this expectation that other people should speak English and they become too lazy to try and learn another language but yeah I think it's something I wish you know i-i've

I've learned Spanish when I was growing up I'm trying to learn Romanian now I learned Korean when I was in Korea and my Korean is a bit rusty at this point but yeah I think it's good to always learn other languages I think it really really really keeps the mind sharp and it's great for your mental health so who else how do you say hola in English Pete hola it's just hello usually you could say hello informally you'd say hi I tend to just say what's up I always start out my videos what's up everyone welcome to today's lesson Darya asked do you often use idioms in your daily life yes I do I can't say that everybody will use idioms but I noticed that when I started teaching and especially when I sometimes I would stop and say oh here's an idiom and once started doing that I noticed just how many idioms that I tend to use not only in my you know conversations with other people but even when I'm teaching I tend to just throw them out there and then I try to catch myself and explain what the idiom is so yes I end up using English I in English I end up using idioms quite often what does it mean speaking of an idiom be happy ask what does I hate to turn up out of the blue uninvited mean so if somebody turns up out of the blue it means that you show up unexpectedly if you show up and people were not expecting you to be there then you can say oh you turned up out of the blue or somebody turned up out of the blue

let's see kind of getting through these again you guys are asking a lot of great questions what's the what's the most difficult thing about learning Spanish for you I think the most difficult thing about Spanish for me what for me the most difficult thing is listening because and I think that goes for any language if I'm learning Korean Romanian listening is always a challenging skill for me and I think for many of you it might be one of the more easier language skills but it's always been a challenge for me so I'd say listening was the most difficult thing because it's always easy for me to just tune out and I'm listening to the conversation and then suddenly I tune out for like maybe five seconds and then suddenly I'm lost so listening is one of the most difficult things in a lot of the country in many of the countries where I visited like especially the Dominican Republic people would speak pretty fast so that made listening a bit more challenging but as for my speaking skills like I again that's something like I'll just do I know that I make a ton of mistakes when I'm speaking Spanish but I'll just go ahead and say it anyways I don't really care so that is one good thing for me about speaking I'll just go ahead and say it even though I know I'm making mistakes and typically people they can understand for the most part did you like teaching in the Republican Dominican public party asked yes I really liked it I was teaching at a Catholic orphanage I taught there for one year it was a public school and I taught grades five to nine so teaching middle school students at that age it can be it was a

I understand your English 100 or spend but when I'm in the u.s. I don't understand native speakers yes so a lot many many students have told us this they say oh I understand when you're speaking but I don't understand when I'm listening to English out on the streets or if I'm watching a movie part of that be is because I just tend to speak slower and this is my natural speed some some of you have asked me they're like why don't you speak faster and it's like now you know this is this is the speed that I speak English and I think part of that has developed over time because I've been teaching English for so many years I've just naturally slowed down my speech because I want people to understand me and now this is just the way I talk so I tend to speak a bit slower which I think is good for English learners because I think it's always great to listen at your level so if you don't understand then that might mean that that listening is a little higher than your level it's always great to practice at that level but it's great if you understand especially if the speech is a little slower YouTube I tell people before if they tell me speak faster or speak slower YouTube allows you guys to control that you can speed up the speed of the the speech you can also slow it down if it's too fast so YouTube is great for that and I think it's good to practice listen at your level and over time you will just get better so that the next time you're out on the street and listening to somebody else even if they're speaking really fast then you're going to understand what they're saying let's see what does how are you Lanisha I am good how are you can you say hello in Spanish imagine okay who stays gustaría escuchame hablando espanol por que siempre estoy hablando sobre ya zwei yo soy un estudiante espanol you a esta hablando espanol si como es años más o menos en este momento necesito practicar mass practical practical porque en este momento no no tengo algunas oportunidad is de hablar español y por ESO me vocabulary Oh Mae Mae olvidar Oh muchos palabras estos estos Ultimo's onions so there there is some Spanish for you guys if you guys want to and I'm sure again you're thinking about the my grammar you're like oh my gosh that's horrible or I'm my pronunciation may be off on many words but again it's all good practice I think I know people have practiced using YouTube and actually they put up videos of this them speaking the language they want to learn so you guys could do that in English and and try to practice speaking so mm-hmm

let's see what else Chandra which language are you speaking I can't understand well I was attempting to speak Spanish and talking a little bit in Spanish so again what's difference between how do you feel and what do you feel I think Oh South Korea excellent right on so if somebody asked like how do you feel it's maybe asking I think like you know if somebody feels sick or they feel tired or there's something maybe not like a little wrong with that person and say hey you know how do you feel or maybe you're asking their opinion about something like how do you feel that would be similar if you're talking about an opinion because nobody asks like what do you feel they'd say what do you feel like doing what and in that case if you're asking somebody what do you feel like doing then you're asking their opinion what do you want to do what do you feel like doing I think that's a common way that it's used if you're talking about what do you feel what do you feel like doing looks like do you speak Portuguese Nancy asks no unfortunately I don't except for Oh Buddha God oh that is the only that is the my limit not the extent of my Portuguese or just want to ask what's your favorite food ooh that is a good question like I said we we eat Indian a lot I love Indian food I also love Mexican food is great and there's so many I don't have one specific favorite food I do love beef stew that's another one but I think my tastes change over time so it's like one year I eat a lot of this and then another year I'll eat this food so my favorite food tends to change over time all right so another thing that I wanted to share with you guys again if you guys like what we do and you want to connect with us further and help support our lessons we are on patreon I wanted to throw that plug out there I'll put this in the link if you guys want to check it out our patreon page you can check that out right here and again remember sign up for that our email list we will send you guys we will send you guys some very cool stuff from time to time as well as give you updates because one thing that we want to do here at interactive English we are going to start offering online courses and when I say online courses it's going to be in a similar format like our live lessons because we want to have as many people as we can in the classroom and we're going to come out with a beta and if you're talking about a beta it's kind of like an initial practice and the first course we're going to do is all about building vocabulary because that will really help you improve your other skills like it's going to help you read faster it's going to help your speaking and your overall English fluency so the first course that we're gonna do is building vocabulary we're going to do a beta version of it probably in a couple of months and if you guys are sign up to that newsletter we'll give you more information about it and you guys will be the first ones that will be able to sign up for that so again thank you guys again I'm gonna have to have to call it quits there's so many other things few other things I need to do today especially editing some videos it's been about 40 minutes thank you thank you thank you guys for being here thank you for being a part of our community if you have other questions please write those in the comments we love hearing from you guys and we try to answer as many as we can so thank you guys so much for being here thank you but et angel demon AVI I'm gonna try I'm gonna read your name in Korean so song it's a song eeeeeek so song ich thank you probably my pronunciation was not good Giselle Olivia Linda Tamera booties baby hello thank you for being here Krista thank you thank you thank you guys for joining me today and we will be back next week for another live lesson we'll make a post about it later set it on your calendar hopefully everything is working perfectly at that point we'll see if we can work out the kinks thank you guys again enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you next time solo

Q&A Live-Lesson with Interactive English | You ask, I'll answer...

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson this is a q a a question and answer session in which you can ask the questions and i will try to answer as many of those questions as possible and if for some reason i i don't get to your question still write to me in the comments uh because i love learning about well what is it that you need to learn about because it always gives me some great ideas for some future lessons so we are going to be doing a q a session and i'm going to start with uh questions from our members and patrons and as we go through these i have my vocabulary uh my document here to maybe give you guys some examples to help you better understand some of these uh questions that people are asking so i want to give a quick hello and a shout out to some of you who are with me today hello uh spiritual akiba esther hi samuel um i am died of cooking hello welcome uh thank you guys for joining me sleepwalker lolly saw you guys in there great to have you with me so let's just get into some of the the first questions which i said i asked um some of in our community some patrons some members um what what are questions they had and i i'm going to get to them first so what i would say is if you are with me um right now just hold your questions off for just a moment and i'm going to talk about these first and then i will open it up to more general questions so let's uh go ahead and look at the first one which is from lolly who is asking about the difference between even if and even though that is a great question the difference between even if and even though so let i think it would be helpful to go over to our vocabulary document so and i'll give you some example sentences because if you say both of them are talking about a condition a certain condition even though is talking about a condition that is true it is actually happening even if is more of a hypothetical situation so i could give you this example sentence and say um uh we're going to play um we're going to play basketball um even though it's raining all right this is true all right it's happening so if you say even though and the condition even though it's raining that is something that is true if we use even if and i change it uh we're going to play basketball even if it's raining all right then again i'd say it's hypothetical all right we don't know if it's going to rain or if it's not going to rain and uh we don't know this it's hypothetical but i say well even if it rains we will still play all right so keep that in mind we're talking about even though versus even if we're using even though to talk about something that's true all right it's happening even though it's raining all right which is true i think it is raining outside right now or if i want to say like before i don't know if it's gonna rain um it may rain it may not rain even if it's raining that's the one that you would use so again that is one of the main differences uh we're talking about that condition in the sentence one of them's true even though one of them is hypothetical even if the next question is related to this which is why um i wanted to touch on that next and that is from uh patron uh takayo who asks about confusing about if or when and this is a little similar and again i think it's going to help if i give you some examples so let me go back well to our vocabulary document and i'm going to scroll down and talk about um well if versus when so i could say something um we will eat when she arrives okay in this case you're talking about um something is going to happen all right you know it's going to happen all right if i change it and say we will eat if she arrives all right you're i would say this is uncertain so in that case if we're using when it's something you know is going to happen if we use if there's a level of uncertainty maybe it will happen maybe it won't happen um so in this case we will eat when she arrives we know she is going to arrive we will eat if she arrives well maybe she arrives maybe she doesn't so in that case that is a clear example of um how those two are different if we're using when it's expressing certainty something will happen if we're using if it's uncertain you're unsure maybe yes maybe no um okay let's look at the next question i'm trying to go through these a little quicker so that i can open up to just general uh questions oh you're welcome loli i'm glad i hope that explanation helped so the next one um is from uh a member joyful and they asked about this um in a situation in which this expression is used speak for yourself it is a great question because i think that when you learn an expression like this and you learn the meaning then you can apply it to certain situations speak for yourself so if somebody says speak for yourself the situation is that you are talking with another person or maybe you're within a group of other people and it's like someone is making the decision for you and you are saying no no no no that is not what i believe that's not what i think you speak for yourself all right don't talk for me speak for yourself so for example say that i'd like to give examples with you and i all right um with you and me so if we are maybe we're in a group okay and we are going to um we're trying to decide where to go to dinner and i say hey you know let's we're going

we're going to get pizza everybody everybody wants pizza and maybe you're thinking well wait i don't i don't really want pizza and you would say okay well speak for yourself i would rather go um get thai food so again in that case if you use that expression and typically it's going to come at the beginning of a sentence so you're going to start out the statement if somebody says something you're going to start out and say speak for yourself all right this is what i believe this is what i think so if somebody's trying to kind of include you in what they think you can tell that person no no no no no that's what i i don't think that speak for yourself so it's a good um phrase i'm going to add it to our vocabulary document let's go down here so they were asking about the expression speak for yourself i said it comes at the beginning of a statement where it's kind of saying you're telling others um that you have a different opinion all right and then you state your opinion um and they should not be speaking on your behalf okay so this is when you would use it if you want to tell somebody look i don't agree with what you're saying i have a different opinion speak for yourself okay great expression uh the next part uh let's see we have another question which this question is the longer one i will summarize it this is from uh a patron uh couple husband wife vicky and gustav gustav uh i know is feeling a bit ill so i wanna say i i hope you feel better soon gustav we wish you all the best um but vicky's question is talking about um gustav is learning english and learning the the present continuous and using the present continuous and the reason why this is challenging and this really applies to i think uh language learning in general because in this case gustav is going from german to english and part of the challenge is that english uses a different structure than uh it may be used in german and how do you overcome that uh because she was saying that this talking about helping verbs and this idea of helping verbs how do you learn that how do you use it correctly if it's different in your native language and that is an excellent question so when i think of helping verbs i think of the present continuous tense something that's happening now i am teaching i am teaching right now the verb to be is the helping verb or if we're talking about perfect tenses which in that case have is the helping verb i have seen this movie so what i would say to answer that question about well if it's different in one language how do you do this because i think when people are trying to do um grammar a lot of it is just um drilling kill i don't know if you know what i mean by that drilling kill it's just like you just like try to drill it into your mind and do it do it do it do it and hopefully you remember and i had this similar problem um when i was learning korean because the structure of korean and hopefully this will help out uh maybe with answer what vicky and gustav were asking the structure of korean the korean language is very different than english for example in korean the verb goes at the end and when i was learning uh this grammar i could not wrap my head around this it was so difficult for me to think about okay putting the verb at the end and anytime i tried to speak or say something and i i would try to think about okay where does the subject go where does the verb go and what it would do is it would um it would hinder my speaking and i could not express myself because i was too busy trying to think of the grammar in the middle of a conversation so one way that i got over this was it it helped me and maybe it will help you gustav is this idea of chunking and if you're unfamiliar with chunking it is a it is a way that people use to build their vocabulary and what it is is that instead of learning just one word and the meaning you learn an entire chunk and that could be three words four words or five words a perfect example of this is when you travel somewhere and you learn survival english or survival in any other language and you need to know how to say um okay where is the toilet so instead of actually learning each and every word and how the grammar is formed you're just going to learn that one phrase and you know that when you say this that is the question where is the toilet and that is what chunking is that you're not focusing on the grammar so much you're just thinking about this entire phrase or statement and you're learning it and you know okay that's what this means and i think maybe you could do the same with trying to do um these helping verbs like the verb to be and thinking of like a common question in the continuous tense like what are you doing what are you doing and knowing that the meaning of that is you are asking somebody right now what are what is happening what action is happening at that time and you know that okay what are you doing what are you doing what are you doing and you now learn that chunk and that's what you say and then you could apply it to some answers as well so if there's something that like let's take uh gustav for example um maybe if gustav likes to read and somebody said what are you doing oh i'm reading i'm reading a book or i'm reading this book and you just learn that chunk and you know that then you're using i am reading instead of trying to think about the grammar of like okay i'm with my subject now i need my helping verb then i need the verb plus ing you just learn that chunk i'm reading and then you know that you're going to automatically give that answer at least that's what helped me with korean in trying to just learn the chunk of this phrase instead of trying to think about the verb that i'm going to use and that it needs to go at the end of the sentence so i hope that maybe helps and chunking is a great way to again it's a great way to build your vocabulary um the next question uh that we have uh we talked about this one uh is from silvio and silvio says uh is asking about the difference between no longer and anymore great question so for this one uh i'm gonna go back over to our vocabulary document right here and talk about uh let's see no longer versus what i'm going to add is not all right and the reason why i'm adding not is because you're using when you use anymore you're you're pretty much going to be using it in the negative and in this case no longer and not anymore they're they're pretty much synonyms you're saying that something is not happening it was it was happening in the past but it's not happening now the difference would be a little bit in the the grammar okay so for example let's take the same the same sentence and we're going to use it uh it's the same meaning but we're going to use each one uh i could say i no longer play guitar all right i want to start playing again that's true can you guys uh see this let me move it down a little bit okay i no longer play guitar i don't play guitar anymore all right these two sentences they have the same meaning really you could say either one i no longer play the guitar um somebody asked me about this in you could you could say the guitar in american english americans like when you talk about instruments we like to take out the um like i play piano i play guitar um but i'll add the so in case somebody people might be confused about the um the article so no longer versus anymore when you use no longer it's going to go in between the subject and the verb i no longer play we no longer study they no longer go so no longer is going to come in between the subject and the verb when you use anymore you're going to say you're going to use the the negative not so in this case i do not do something and any more is going to go at the end of the sentence i don't play uh i don't play the guitar anymore um i don't study i don't study korean anymore uh now that i'm not living there i i haven't studied in a long while a long time so i no longer study korean so we use these both both of them you can use them to say the same thing but the difference would be the real main difference to me is where you're going to use it no longer is going to be come between the subject and the verb anymore is going to be at the end of the sentence but you need to use it in the negative with not all right uh let's look at the next uh question what are we at uh so we just answered sylvia's question um aiden is asking about um the the perfect tenses and this is something i'm not it's a long explanation so i'm not really going to get uh too deep into it right now but talking about the perfect tenses i think also like the past perfect the the present perfect continuous and the difference between these two and what i think i'll probably end up doing is following up with some future lessons and specifically focus on the difference between some of them like the difference between using the present perfect and the present perfect continuous and i know that these some of these can be very confusing because sometimes it's interchangeable and somebody might ask me well what's the difference between um i've uh i've lived in budapest or i've been living in budapest and you have these small little nuances so what i'll probably do and this is why i think it's great this gives me ideas for future lessons um so again i thank you for aiden for bringing this up and drawing some more attention because what i think i'll do is probably go through some more especially like some quiz lessons and give you guys a lot of questions so that you can practice and then i'll tell you why this is the correct answer um another question from lolly was talking about the difference between pledge and promise and are they interchangeable so the short answer to that is yes they are interchangeable but there is um there is a little bit of a difference between pledge and promise both of them are talking about a a commitment that you will do something in general overwhelmingly people use the word promise this is this is much more common than somebody talking about the word pledge when i think of the word pledge i think of something that is more official something that is more um professional and and that when i looked it up actually because i was kind of curious as well that's what it said um it said the difference between promise and pledge uh let me write it down here promise uh versus pledge um so promise is kind of like you're making a commitment to do something when i looked at pledge was just talking about it basically said a serious promise so i said that yes they are interchangeable but i think promise is just used in general like you promise to um meet somebody uh for dinner or you promise to help somebody with some work pledge is more serious and i'm gonna add like more formal because i think of a situation and like take a take the police for know um let me look through some of them uh if you have like i'm talking about uh pronunciation vocabulary a little bit of grammar i'll do i'll answer them the best uh as i can let's see so yeah that was one question um i see some people talking about like the when talking about instruments it's very interesting about whether or not to use the or not and i think in british english people would definitely use the like i play the guitar but in the united states many people will just take out the as though it were a non-count noun which is a little strange i play guitar i play piano um something to keep in mind uh

let's see some of this i will please make about up usages i'll i'll i'm gonna consider that i think i have some phrasal verb lessons like pick up other than that like the word taking one preposition because actually um somebody else i think lali had asked the question about the prepositions two and four prepositions are really tricky and what i will say about prepositions is that the best way to learn that is with more reading and more listening because as you read and you see how the prepositions are used and used with certain adjectives or nouns or as you listen and you hear them used with that you're going to store that up in your active memory and then the next time you try to speak you will start using that that preposition correctly so it's a little difficult to take just one preposition and just talk about all the usage the only thing that i can do and that i was thinking about doing um later on would be taking a category for example like prepositions of time which prepositions are used with certain times like in the morning in the afternoon or if you say at night and learning those differences that is i think a manageable way to actually study prepositions prepositions of time prepositions of place but it's hard to isolate just one preposition and just talk about it but just more reading more listening that is uh that is definitely my suggestion for all of you guys uh excalibur can you speak hindi no uh i do not speak any hindi um so let's see muhammad asks what's the difference between entire um and whole so that i think in in many ways i think entire and whole they could be interchangeable because if you're talking about um entire you're talking about all of it same with whole so for example i think um i want the uh i'm going to eat the entire pizza or i'm going to eat the whole pizza the meaning is really the same in that case i think um people might use entire to emphasize really like that there is a lot of it more than usual like i ate the entire amount so in that case if you're talking about like eating which is when i think people might think they're interchangeable i think oftentimes people will use entire like oh i can't believe i ate the entire cake you could say i can't believe i ate the whole cake the meaning is the same but in that's in that context i think entire would be a little more common it adds a little bit more emphasis um all right i know some of you said the transmission sorry i guess uh i'll to check the the streaming uh it doesn't seem like uh it seems like it should be streaming okay um hopefully it's not uh too bad for someone uh let's see um trevor says uh what is roll ups meaning to roll up so i feel like uh roll up can have a couple of different meanings because again we're talking about a phrasal verb many phrasal verbs have multiple meanings so you could like roll up your sleeve in which case you're talking about actually just rolling something and making it kind of shorter you can roll up your sleeves maybe if it's raining and you roll up your pants you don't want to get wet um it could also mean like somebody could say we you're driving somewhere and you could sit and you say we rolled up to the house in that's in that context you're talking about you arrive somewhere or you approached some place we rolled up and most of the time i think you're you're talking about driving so those would be two different meanings for the phrasal verb uh roll up let's see uh yeah sleepwalker yes you cannot remember all prepositions at once brick by brick that is a great way of putting it uh prepositions are like putting together like a brick wall you're just doing it one at a time brick by brick slow and steady wins the race um let's see um where is it hold on try and see english-wise yeah you can roll up things uh like to ball up to roll up yes those can uh be used interchangeably um adriana asks when do you use come by so come by i think uh it basically means like to visit it's an informal way of saying you're you're going to visit um and for for example if i were to go talk to uh maybe i'm going to stop by somewhere i say tomorrow i'm going to come by and we're going to have a cup of tea i'm going to come by i'm going to visit i'm going to stop at this place and we are going to visit so i think uh i'm trying to think if it has any other meanings but that is i think the most common one you're going to visit somewhere uh you're going to come by rosemary asks what is a roller coaster a roller coaster is a ride that you would find at an amusement park it's probably people think of it as the most exciting ride at the amusement park you go fast sometimes you loop around and people will use it in a different uh context as well if they say that some experience that it was like a roller coaster so we often talk about it um kind of as uh as to compare it to something like um trying to think um you could say uh learning english it's wow it was like a roller coaster and it basically means it was fast you're changing directions it's not the smoothest ride and in that case like i said if you're talking about somebody's experience perhaps at work or um going somewhere and you want to compare it to a roller coaster it's a great uh it's a great visual way could be talking about perhaps some kind of food or a meal they're going to eat or an experience that they're going to have and they just want to they want to wet their whistle and they want to try thing it's like you want to get a taste of this um would be uh one way of explaining it to wet someone's whistle uh junior hello from brazil how are you um eli has to come by and drop by have the same meaning uh yes in that case i think if you're going to drop by come by yeah you're going to visit uh i think they're interchangeable i think most people would say they're going to come by when i think of drop by for some reason maybe this is just me i think of a shorter visit if somebody's typically like i'm just going to drop by i think it's just going to be a shorter visit and then they have to go on to some other place so uh if i say hey tomorrow i'm gonna drop by and i'm gonna pick something up and then i'm gonna leave again uh i think that might be a slight difference between drop by and come by but you could still use either one i'm going to come by and pick up some books but then i got to leave but if somebody says drop by i think for me i think of a shorter visit um ivana asks what's the meaning of get through to get through something uh one meaning i think that i think is the most common is like to survive something you're trying to survive something that's difficult something that's challenging you're trying to get through this experience or maybe you're taking a class i'm just trying to get through this class i'm having a very difficult time with it i'm trying to survive i'm just trying to get through it um let's see angela's asking is i don't know maybe the uh you're answering somebody else's question uh you're tight means uh you're awesome yes i think some i i think tight and this maybe i'm too old for some of this slang when i think of somebody i think mostly people would say i haven't really heard this word too much be talking about another person like your type i always hear it mostly referring to a situation like oh that's tight and if somebody says oh that's tight that's awesome that's cool uh that's tight but nowadays who knows maybe people are using it to refer to other people as well um uh where is it uh releasing that says very helpful keep it up thank you uh rahul glad it's helpful i'm trying to get to different ones here um cindy asks what does it mean like tickle me means um tickle me it kind of means if somebody says well that really just tickles me it means that they find pleasure in it that something is funny that's it's amusing and you could think of like the literal meaning like to tickle someone they're laughing so if somebody says that something like tickles them like oh it really it really tickles me to see this thing it means that it just gives somebody pleasure um what is the meaning of pashu says what is the meaning of bloody so bloody to me means like actual it's an adjective you're describing something that there's a lot of blood coming out but in british english it's used more as an like i guess like kind of an adjective like a phrase people like oh that's bloody hell or they may say something is bloody impossible or bloody difficult in that case i think it would take on a similar meaning as very so it's a way to uh like an adverb of degree in british english of saying like very or like an expression like bloody hell is just like oh crap um so uh yes jacques let's hit the like button please do if you guys enjoy these lessons do hit that like button if anything it tells me that these are useful that it's nice for you guys to be able to come in and try to ask some questions um half court asks what's blasphemy means so blasphemy is it's a noun and what it's referring to is somebody speaking ill about uh maybe someone or something and it's like oh that's blasphemy it's some it refers to something that you should not say because it's inappropriate it doesn't necessarily have to be like profanity and you're saying bad words but it could be that you're you're just saying something that is not correct perhaps because it could be because it's cultural or maybe some tradition and you should not say this thing or you shouldn't do it and say oh that's blasphemy it's bad it's incorrect you shouldn't do it um ali keeps repeating what does it mean bear with me bear with me all right ali i will let me let me help you out uh giving you an example i will answer that question in just a moment i want you to bear with me okay i will get to that phrase in just a moment just please bear with me all right uh what is meaning uh swati astro would mean overwhelming overwhelmed so this is a difference between edie adjectives and ing adjectives we use ed adjectives to talk about like in general the way somebody feels like i feel overwhelmed with all the work that's the way i feel overwhelming is talking about more a situation like my work is overwhelming so my work is overwhelming and it makes me feel overwhelmed and there are so many different ed ing adjectives like uh confused i am confused but this is confusing or um uh i'm excited something the movie is exciting all right edie ing adjectives uh though those are very common and this is where people make just these simple mistakes all right so d hopefully did you guys for for those of you who are unfamiliar with the phrase bear with me were you able to put it in context when i gave you that example so if somebody's saying bear with me it means like um okay just wait a moment and like just it's kind of saying um not not really telling somebody to be patient really but it's saying that to kind of continue on the same path that we we're going gonna do something we will get to it in just a moment maybe if you are unhappy with something

all right so i this is kind of it's uh going going on i am going to end the q a right there i will do this again in the future but if you enjoyed these q a's please hit the like button if you have other questions write to me in the comments and i may not be able to go through and answer all of them we get so many comments but what that does is it gives me ideas for future lessons because if some of you have the same question then i know okay there is definitely a need to talk about this in a future lesson so write those questions let me know what is it that you want to learn or you need to learn or that you find confusing that will help give me ideas for some future lessons so i hope that this helped uh i hope maybe you learn something new i tried to get through as much as i can um but i really appreciate all of you guys being here with me thank you guys um uh for joining me today i hope you enjoy the wonder the rest of your weekend yes you too thank you rose sleepwalker english vibes um uh go out enjoy the rest of your day lolly good to see you uh and i will see you guys next time so long

QUANTIFIERS for Non-count Food Nouns | Grammar Quiz

hey everyone welcome to another interactive English lesson with me my name is Wes and the reason why I say this is an interactive English lesson is because I want you to participate I want you to write to me in the chats write to me in the comments and actually answer some of the questions because today it's kind of like a quiz lesson but we are going to talk about food quantifiers now I think this is really important because well I think many of us we talk about food all the time it is a very popular and common topic so I think it's useful to be able to be more specific when we're talking about food but you also want to make sure that you are using the correct quantifier because there are different quantifiers that you can use when talking about the same food now I've already said the word quantifier several times so you may be wondering well well what is a quantifier when I talk about a quantifier I'm referring to a word or phrase that's used before a noun to indicate an amount of something and often I think when when you think of quantifiers you might think of these words right here many much some any a lot a few but in today's lesson we're not going to talk about these quantifiers I want to actually be more specific when you're talking about these non-count food nouns so instead of saying like hey can I have some water we're going to use a different quantifier and talk about a glass of water so these are phrases that you have the quantifier followed by of and then the the non-count noun that you're talking about and we're talking and today is about non-count food nouns so we're talking about food and drink that is what today's lesson is all about so let's let's just get right into it I'm going to start the quiz and again I want you to write your answers in the chat don't be shy write your answers in the comments because I just want to hear from you tell me your name tell me where you're from we love hearing from new people so let's begin with the first question right here and that is this okay so I want you to try and think about putting these questions into context these first few questions that I have for you they are a multiple choice and think about the situation okay first thing in the morning I like to put a mmm of coffee I like to sorry first thing in the morning I like to put on a mmm of coffee alright how how would you complete that sentence right there okay first thing in the morning I like to put on a mmm of coffee so again we're talking about that non-count food now we're talking about coffee very common people we I drink coffee almost every day many of you probably drink coffee but again think think about the context first thing in the morning I like to put on a mmm of coffee alright right now I'm seeing a lot of different answers okay I haven't seen the right answer yet now I told you we're talking about coffee with all three of these you can use you can these are quantifiers when talking about coffee the answer is C first thing in the morning I like to put on a pot of coffee and the reason I said think about the context when I'm giving you these examples to put on is a common phrase of when you're talking about making coffee that you would put on a pot of coffee which basically means that you are going to start making the coffee and then you will pour yourself a cup of coffee or you could pour a mug of coffee both of those quantifiers are okay but in this situation you would put on a pot of coffee all right so our head is trying to trick you guys a little bit for that first one I think it may have worked a little bit so let's go to the next question and again remember think about think about the context of the sentence what is what is being talked about would it try to put a picture in your head in your mind that may help you understand exactly which quantifier we're talking about so here is the next question when you go to the store it's question when you go to the store can you pick me up a mmm of cheese when you go to the store can you pick me up a mmm of cheese okay which quantifier are you going to use a wedge of cheese B wheel of cheese or C slice of cheese when you go to the store can you pick me up can you pick me up a mmm of cheese all right what do you think write your answer in the chat in the comments and I am gonna try and give you guys a little more context here all right so I noticed many people are saying see a slice now if you're talking about a slice of cheese you're usually talking about a thin slice of cheese that you would put on a sandwich so when you are making a sandwich you may slice cheese but if you buy if you go to the store you could buy a pack of cheese which would have slices inside them or you would buy a wedge of cheese and this is a picture like those pictures right there those are wedges of cheese and what a wedge is is it looks like this shape right here it's basically the shape of a triangle and you would call that a wedge a wedge of cheese a wheel question that somebody might ask you if you are at a cafe a restaurant and you order some coffee and then I say how many mm of sugar would you like for your coffee a bags be pieces C boxes or D packs all right what do you think which quantifier best completes the sentence with sugar and again it's tricky because all of those quantifiers you could use when talking about sugar it really just depends on the context of the situation so in this case it's a question that if you are at a cafe the server comes up to you you order some coffee and they say how many mmmm would you like for your coffee all right I see some some correct answers yes Angela could I perfect Eloisa aha the correct answer is d you're talking about a pack of sugar so how many packs of sugar would you like for your coffee this these little this picture right here those are packs of sugar when I think about a bag of sugar that is something you would buy at a grocery store maybe a bag or a box of sugar which are they're quite large and you would take that home and that's what you would use at home but if you're in this situation and you're out at a cafe they would typically they would give you a pack of sugar instead instead for your individual coffee okay so let's do let's do another one all right there's one more one more multiple choice one that I for you there's a mmm a flower in the top cabinet can you hand it to me so again think about the situation what's the context there's an mmm there's a a flower in the top cabinet can you hand it to me which one which one best completes that sentence think about where these people are they're asking a question and I say hey you know you and I we're in the kitchen and I say oh there's a flower in the top cabinet can you hand it to me mm-hmm what kind of what kind of flower is somebody going to have in their cabinet is it a carton of flour a sack of flour a bag of flour or a stick of flour yes excellent great job Simona nicosia lolly Fabio farhat Felina the correct answer is C because that is what people would typically buy at the grocery store a bag of flour and they would put it in their cabinet and I'd say there's a bag of flour in the cabinet can you hand it to me you could say trying to thank some of those other ones you don't really find there is not really a carton of flour a sack would be really a large bag of flour typically you would not have that in your home or especially up in the cabinet a big sack a sack really depends on what the material is like a burlap sack there may be smaller sacks and you could have that in your cabinet so pot I would accept that but I think mostly you would have a bag of flour up in the cabinet all right so before we continue because we're gonna switch it up and I have some different types of questions for you but again if you guys want to show us some love support what we do here at interactive English and bringing these new English lessons to you each and every week check out our patreon page it is another great way to connect with us I will leave a link in the chat and there's also a link down below in the subscription down below and I've seen some patrons who are with us hey Aidan how are you excellent thanks for joining this today's lesson so now we're going to do some more questions and this time I'm going to give you the quantifier but I'm not going to give you the food I'm not going to give you the the non-count food or drink and the picture is blurred so you really have to think about well okay what what what picture are you looking at and this is this is difficult alright but try try to put it in context so here so you understand what I'm talking about here is the first one it's hot outside

let's make a picture of mmm all right there's the picture you can see that I've blurred this thing out which I will show you when I reveal the answer but think about that situation and you know when it's hot outside it's summer it's hot outside let's make a picture of what what what would somebody make a picture of what drink you know that it's talking about a drink but what do you think right write your answer in the comments all right see again there's no I I guess in this case there's no wrong answer because maybe you would make a picture of something that would be different from me I'm just thinking of something that's typically probably common during the summer time yes REME goes Luisa Monica Sophia the word we're looking for and I didn't know maybe that yellow would give it away a little bit a picture of lemonade so if it's hot outside let's make a picture of lemonade I don't know about other countries in the United States it's it's common maybe in some areas a little stereotypical that young children will go outside and they make a lemonade stand and they will sell picture pictures of lemon they'll sell glasses of lemonade but they will make a picture and they will sell it around the neighborhood so a picture of lemonade that is the answer so now you know what you know what I'm talking about with these questions the next one we finish the carton of mmm we'll have to buy another all right this one I realized that that that picture I've really blurred out maybe a little too much but again think about the the situation when you think of carton of what what's the first thing that comes into your mind I just want you to write that down and that's your answer because again if you're not if you're not sure because you could have you could have cartons of different things but I think quite common you know it's very what what do people talk about we finish the carton of mmm we'll have to buy another all right yes excellent try and give some different names here if they excellent be happy Marta Sophia for hot lollies yes we're talking about a carton of milk so milk this is what the the quant this is what it looks like that is a carton of milk again you can use this quantifier with other things I know somebody mentioned eggs you would say also a carton of eggs but in this case the picture which I really blurred out so maybe it was a little too difficult to actually try and get any hints I'm talking about a carton of milk we finished the carton of milk we'll have to buy another alright the next one are you ready here we go I like those milk emojis thank you perfect would you like a stick of this is a question it's a question that probably people might not ask you I just I couldn't think of anything else but think about that quantifier we're talking about a stick of something would you like a stick of mmm again I'm trying to give you a hint because it's maybe if you're cooking and you're cooking some food you're preparing it and you need this as an ingredient and somebody's saying hey you know I have this would you like a stick of mmm do you need a stick of mmm what do you think when you what what on count food known are we talking about a stick of something what do you think all right excellent yes Lally Orlando that is what I'm looking for Mon okay we're talking about a stick of butter again that that yellow over there you can see it now I apologize because that picture is a little misleading it is yellow like like the color of butter but those are actually that is a picture of those are cubes of butter if you want to be specific but often when you go to the grocery store and you buy butter you might see it's sold in these long sticks a stick of butter that is the answer that was looking for all right are you ready for the next one look at the colors I guess I'll give you that hint and maybe that will help out a little bit she found a grain of mmm on the floor she found a grain of mmm on the floor so again I've given you the quantifier I'm asking for well what is the non-count food or drink now in this case we're talking about a grain of something so you should know it's a food what how would what what food would you put in there that would best complete that sentence and it's also the picture right there and I've blurred out that picture so what do you think what food would complete that sentence write your answer in the chat or in the comments she found a grain of hmm on the floor so some of you put corn interesting again I'd say think about the the the color salt I get you could have a grain of grain of salt that is true yes Aidan you Alyssa well duh I was talking about a grain of rice one so if you're talking about like in small amounts this was one little piece a grain of rice she found a grain of rice on the floor and you could see that well those are several grains of rice that that's on the floor but that is the picture a grain of rice but again there are many different types of food nouns that you could use a grain of something a grain of salt a grain of sand of course you're not going to eat sand at least I hope you don't but again you would use grain to quantify that this last one is just another fun one I just like this activity so I did an extra one I can't believe you ate the whole the entire plate of mmm what do you think that that is a picture a picture of right there that is a plate it is a red plate what's in the middle there I can't believe you ate the entire plate of I'll give you a hint this one I told you that these are more about non-count nouns this is actually a count now this is something that you can count so I don't know if that's going to help you at all I can't believe you ate the entire plate of you could say fruit okay pizza maybe those are all yes

artim excellent that that was a little tricky maybe I covered these these pictures up too much I blurred them too much I can't believe you ate the entire plate of cookies again cookies is a count noun it ends with an S you can count them there are 1 2 3 cookies right there but if we want to quantify it as a whole it is a plate of cookies is sometimes how you might hear it being used all right now we're going to switch it a little bit again I'm going to give you the sentence I'm going to give you a picture and it's not blurred so I want you to look at the picture closely and think of well what quantifier is this all right what what quantifier would I use with this food noun with this picture all right and let's just let's begin I think it helps maybe make you'll understand what I'm talking about right when I give this to you so and and maybe there could be there could be more than one answer because I told you it's quite often that you you can use different quantifiers in front of different food nouns the important thing here is context like that very first one I talked about a pot of coffee you put on a pot of coffee you start making it so at the store all right he bought a mmm of gum at the store he bought a mmm of gum at the store think about that situation what if you go to the store you would buy a mmm of gum all right excellent yes Fuko Michele a lot of gum yes I guess you could but we're talking about these other these other quantifiers Angela yes Sophia worked the answer is pack he bought a pack of gum at the store you could again if you're talking about one stick of gum it's not something that you would usually buy at a store just one maybe you would I don't know usually in a pack there are several sticks of gum so when you're talking about gum you'd say a piece of gum a stick of gum if you're saying hey can I have some but if you go to the store I think it's likely you will buy a pack of gum an entire pack excellent I think you guys got that one perfect think about this situation I'm so hungry in the morning I try to get a big mmm of cereal for my first bite and I try to I want to give you that that picture maybe it will help you I'm so hungry in the morning I try to get a big mmm of cereal for my first bite which quantifier will is that that picture right there a big mmm of cereal it's a way cereal is a non-count food noun so what would you say what it what is that quantifier right there um it's a minute you're close Eloisa you got your clothes you're on the right track unity perfect excellent yes Fuko it's it's a spoon you cereal with the spoon if you're talking about the quantifier it was a spoonful of cereal I'm so hungry in the morning I try to get a big spoonful of cereal for my first bite so whenever you're talking about food non-count food nouns with a spoon you would be talking a spoonful of cereal maybe you have a spoonful of honey perhaps you're sick and you're taking a spoonful of medicine so in this case when you're talking about those non-count foods or drinks when you're using a spoon it's a spoonful a spoonful of something perfect excellent some of you guys got that excellent all right at dinner my wife and I split a mmm of wine think about the context and look at the picture this this is a little bit of vocabulary as well do you know the vocabulary word that that I'm talking about right there at dinner my wife and I split hmm of wine now there are different quantifiers that you can use when you're talking about wine but one thing I want you I want you to first think about the context talking about splitting something and look at the picture those are the two things that I would say all right yeah actually so I would say first let's go through some of these all right you do see a picture of a glass in there I think often you would not you would get your own glass of wine you wouldn't split a glass of wine you could split a bottle of wine but in this case look at that picture again I guess it's semantics as to what you want to call a bottle or not but when I think of a bottle I think you know the bottle has the cork in it you're gonna take it out that is not technically the picture of a bottle what would you say you could say a jug yeah that would be cuz it would come in a glass jug if you haven't heard this word before it's talking about a carafe so sometimes if you go out to a nice restaurant and that you you have wine maybe you can get a bottle of wine or perhaps you can get a carafe of wine and this is like a smaller it's more it is more like a jug it's less than a bottle of wine usually it's it's less than a bottle of wine and it's more than one glass of wine so I think in this case a carafe would be I'm just guessing maybe about two glasses of wine and they come in those specific bottles there is no cork on the top that you have to open it they would serve they bring a carafe of wine and then you would pour yourself a glass that is the word and again that that may be a new vocabulary word for many of you but think about that if you go out to a restaurant and you are in the UK or

Australia Canada the US and you go to a restaurant look for that on the menu you may see that a carafe of wine next one let's is this is this is also I think a little difficult this M of steak is called a New York Strip and to be quite honest I don't actually know if that is technically a New York Strip it does like I think it may be because a New York Strip is kind of it's a longer type of steak but it but it is a it's a type of steak but in this case what what quantifier would you want to use with with that all right this mm of steak is called a New York Strip and when you're talking about steak this is a quantifier that that you may use and again there there could be more than one answer I'm looking for something specific for steak many of you are writing piece all right and in that case I think you could use that a piece of steak this piece of steak is called the New York Strip sure everybody would understand that we know what you mean a chunk of steak I think you could use that it's a little I think less common now one thing when you're talking about steaks and you're giving the names New York Strip or a ribeye or a filet mignon then it's often yes I saw an answer um yak-yak been here yeah Jacques been here so I have I'm mispronouncing it yes a cut of steak if you're talking about a cut of steak you're really talking about well what type because the cut of steak it depends on well what part is the meat coming from it's talking about how you cut it and that that particular cut what it's like so I'd say this cut mm-hmm

this cut of steak is called a New York Strip so again that is something that you can think about if you go out to dinner especially to a steak house the the waiter or waitress maybe they will talk to you about the different cuts of steak and when they talk about a cut of steak they're talking about well what what how is the meat cut and it typically it's going to have a name a ribeye a New York Strip a porterhouse or my favorite filet mignon the cut of steak all right excellent you guys you guys rock that today I hope you enjoyed taking this interactive quiz and learning about some of these food quantifiers because again lessons like like this this is all about practice trying to take what you already know and put it to practice and if you didn't know it then perhaps you learn something new perhaps you you didn't know that if you're preparing coffee you would put on a pot of coffee or like I said the the the glass of wine that's well it's boot it's more than a glass it's less than a bottle and you could say it is a carafe of wine or a cut of steak so I hope you enjoyed this lesson and learn something new if you did please hit that like button show me some love than I know ok we should have more quiz lessons in the future because this is helping you practice your English skills but I hope it's also helping you improve your

English skills so please hit that like button share this lesson with others that you know who want to learn English write to us in the comments you can join our social media classes I know I'm throwing a lot I always throw a lot you at the very end but we we try to get out there as much as possible on Facebook Instagram Twitter and of course right here on our YouTube channel so thank you guys so much for being here thank you Michelle you Lissa eight in Jimena Luisa Lally Jonna unity I really appreciate it Mary Chris Vanessa Sophia trying to get in try to get in as many shoutouts as I can sleepwalker Gosa have a wonderful day and I will see you guys next time so long

READING + VOCABULARY LESSON | Immigration in the US

hey everyone uh my name is wes this is interactive english thank you guys so much for joining me today uh so this lesson is all about um it's it's about immigration is the topic that we're going to be learning today but it is a reading and vocabulary lesson so let me kind of explain what we're going to do uh i've chosen this topic um which is something that i think all of us can relate to in one way or another immigration it's something it's something that's happening all over the world people will move to other countries to live permanently for work or for education or more opportunities and what we're going to do is look at a few different articles that are related to immigration and i'm going to pick out some useful vocabulary words that i think will help you uh with with your comprehension that if you're going to talk about this topic or perhaps you're reading another article about this topic or you're even listening to um a news report then i think this is going to help you better understand um immigration and it's it's just going to help you build your overall vocabulary okay so let's let's begin with uh the the other thing i wanted to tell you about is that you may notice that uh this on this video there's like a donate button or uh this video is a fundraiser because what we've decided to do my wife and i and our little girl uh emmy we've decided that this month because it's we're we're getting to the end of 2000 um 2020 it hasn't been a very good year i think that most of us would agree that this year has not been the best because of the pandemic what we want to do is we want to highlight some different uh charities that we think are doing some good work uh and we're gonna make a donation and we've just decided to make the video like a fundraising event if other people would like to make a donation if you don't want to that that's perfectly fine um but we're going to look at let me show you and we're going to kind of lead into it i'm going to come back to this at the end of the lesson so we're going to highlight freedom university and we're going to kind of lead into this throughout the lesson i'm going to start with some articles we'll go over the vocabulary and then eventually uh at the end i'll talk to you a little bit about freedom university what they're doing why we chose to highlight this charity and give you a little more information about that but that's just something we wanted to do this month so next saturday and the following saturday it's going to be the same thing we're going to do reading and vocabulary about a topic and i'm gonna be doing some fundraising and highlight uh a charity i do want to give a quick little uh shout out to everybody with me hello uh cthulhu solo welcome excellent new member awesome uh hi takayo nekla uh maggie good morning um gertrudis how are you angela thank you guys for joining me so what i really hope is that after this lesson you'll be able to understand the topic a little more as well as build your vocabulary because i do i have a i have a vocabulary list for you guys which we're going to get to all of these words uh after we do some reading and what i will do is i will include all of this down in the description i will include links to the articles if you would like to read them because we're only going to read parts of the article i'll also include a list of the vocabulary words in case you want to review so the reason why i chose immigration i mentioned this before that i think it's something that everybody understands because it pretty much in all countries there are immigrants that may be living there for work or for education or perhaps there are people that you know that are maybe trying to immigrate to other countries so let's start with this article um right here okay and this is just talking about um around the world all right how do people view immigrants and in this research study that they did it said more people in most countries view them as a strength rather than a burden let's look at two of those words right there in that title right there i wanted to basically been because our topic is immigration to talk about immigrant and uh if you don't know what a burden means so right here if we go over to our vocabulary list okay here we go so an immigrant as you can see is a person who comes to a different country to live there permanently and you would refer to this person as an immigrant now this is a noun because we're talking about a person but be aware that you could use this as a verb to um to immigrate uh or as a noun immigration all right and the meaning is pretty much the meaning is the same because you're always going to be referring to people that move to a different country in order to live there permanently now again i'm going to throw some other vocabulary at you be careful because another word that's similar um emigrate uh whoops maybe i misspelled that emigrate is talking about a person who leaves um a country in order to move to another one this is something some people might confuse those words um to immigrate or to emigrate with an e so immigrate you're really going to the country emigrate you're leaving the country so the way that you understand the difference would be the preposition that follows you immigrate to another country because you're going to there and you would emigrate from because you're leaving a country so you emigrate from another country so this good vocabulary and sometimes those those words may be confused so um another what i want to say because uh another reason why i'm doing i chose this topic is because i think there are a lot of people um that watch these lessons that are uh immigrants that may be living in the united states which is where i am from i'm from the u.s and i i kind of wanted to again i think that is an important topic it's an important topic in the us and we are going to focus um some of the articles afterwards about the the us and what's going on so i wanted to talk to you about those first a couple words like uh immigrants are more than a strength and a burden an immigrant person who comes to a different country to live there permanently a burden would be talking about something that is a heavy load that you carry now often you might say that you're carrying something it's heavy and you're like oh this is a burden it's too difficult in this context the article is saying well immigrants are a strength it's a good thing if they're saying it's a burden then people would say oh it's not a good thing so be aware of that context as to how people are using it so let's go back to um let's go to our article all right what i'm going to do is i'm just going to read some of the article and then i'll talk to you about a few more words as we go through this and again there are i will leave links down in the description all right so it's talking about public divided on immigrants willingness to adopt host country's customs so i'm going to read some because we're going to come back to that word adopt all right so if we go down and i'll just read a little bit of this so it says majorities of publics in top migrant destination countries say immigrants strengthen their countries according to a 2018 pew research center survey of 18 countries that host half of the world's migrants in in ten of the countries surveyed majorities view immigrants as a strength rather than a burden among them are some of the largest migrant receiving countries in the world the united states germany the united kingdom france canada and australia each hosting more than 7 million immigrants in 2017.

by contrast in five countries surveyed hungry greece south africa russia and israel see immigrants as a burden to their countries with the exception of russia those countries each have fewer than 5 million immigrants meanwhile public uh just read the rest of that meanwhile public opinion on the impact of immigrants is divided in the netherlands in italy and poland more say immigrants are a burden while substantial shares in these countries do not lean one way or the other 31 or 20 respectively okay so let's go back and talk about this first part um because this is part of i think um immigration when people come to live in another country and then that first that that subtitle where it says public's divided on immigrants his willingness to adopt host country's customs so let's look at that word adopt because i think it's very important um adopt and adapt when you're talking about immigration so if i go back over here to our vocabulary list if you want to know what the difference is so we talked about the difference between um to immigrate is to go to another country to emigrate is to leave a country adopt is when you start to accept you accept or you start to use something new so it basically becomes a part of your customs to adapt is to change in order to survive or become more comfortable in a situation so if you think about let's think about immigration if you go to another country and you're going to live there i think first off most people would adapt they're becoming they're trying to become comfortable in this new country perhaps it's a new language a new job new traditions new food and you want to adapt over time people may likely adopt to some of these customs and norms and traditions and then it becomes part of their lives so let me give you an example um we just had the in in the united states you just had the the thanksgiving holiday so for example somebody may move to the united states um from any country in south america central america africa asia it doesn't matter but perhaps somebody moves from a country that does not celebrate thanksgiving and then they start living in the u.s and over time they may start celebrating this holiday it's not really it's not a religious holiday it's really uh part of u.s history so that that is one example as to how people may adopt and they start celebrating a holiday such as thanksgiving so this can be um again when you think of immigration again this is something that people might talk about whether or not people are adopting to a country and the culture and the traditions or maybe they're they're not adopting so the one thing i definitely want you guys to distinguish is the difference between adapt and adopt i think first people will adapt and then over time they will adopt certain traditions the next word it's talking about a migrant because again these are words that are very similar when you think of immigrant or migrant a migrant it refers to a person who travels to a different country or place temporarily usually to find work so one thing you may notice in some of these articles or if you're listening to a news report people may use immigrant and then they may use the word migrant and you might be wondering well why why are they using these different words the the one difference i want you to understand is when you think of an immigrant think of that that is somebody who is more permanent that you are planning to stay in that country a migrant is possibly it's just going to be temporary you're going to live in another country and then you're you're going to leave for example i've lived in some different countries teaching english i i've i've never really stayed i was in korea for three years um the dominican republic for one year in namibia for one year and i guess you could say that i i was more of a migrant i was there working temporarily and then i left the reason why i think people will use them um together sometimes is because typically somebody may come to another country as a migrant and then they end up staying perhaps they fall in love they get married perhaps they continue working at this job and they stay in the country and then they become an immigrant because it's going to be more permanent so again i know i'm i'm giving you words and trying to really give you a little bit of a nuance so you understand the difference so an immigrant think of a person who is more going to stay and live permanently a migrant is somebody that may be there just temporarily but if they stay then you could say they are really becoming an immigrant uh substantial uh in the article we saw let's go back how was it used um so they're talking about um substantial because i wanted to go over that word for you ah

so it says while a substantial in these countries do not lean one way or the other substantial is just talking about a large or no it's just talking about a value size or an amount of something often you're going to follow this word um with the word amount a substantial amount of something so if you're talking about substantial it just refers to a large large in size value or or importance another thing that i thought was interesting about this article many of you don't you may not know i am from the united states but right now i live in hungary uh and i found this interesting because in hungary according to this research uh most people view immigrants as a burden that it's not really um perhaps a very strong immigrant friendly country but this is actually where i am right now um i'm living in hungary i don't i would not say that i'm going to stay so again i'd probably i'd be more of a migrant i'm here i'm living uh i'm working and then i may move somewhere else all right so that is the first article kind of just talking about immigration in general now what i want to do is look at the next one okay and talk about which which talks about more immigration in the united states

so again this is a little more of this is definitely more of an advanced article uh i would say so let's go back to the site right here um okay and this is the next article that i wanted to look at so let's see hold on one second okay so this article is talking about a new paradigm um a new paradigm for humane and effective immigration enforcement this is from the center for american progress i will go ahead and tell you this is a more liberal um a liberal organization so again this article is more about the immigration policy in the united states the organization does not agree with it they don't like it and that is um the reason for this article but there are some useful words i think that are related to immigration so a new paradigm for humane and effective immigration enforcement you kind of get the idea let's look at some of the vocabulary that um i think is useful so if you're wondering well what is a paradigm a paradigm is talking about a model for something in this case it's talking about the way the government is trying to handle immigration so the paradigm it's trying to say we need a new paradigm a new model for handling immigration one that is humane and effective so if you if you're talking about something is humane it is an adjective and it just means kind of like showing sharing uh kindness care and showing sympathy towards others especially people that might be suffering in some way so this again it's saying that it does not agree with the u.s policy on immigration you need a new paradigm one that is more humane so let's again i'm going to read some of this um and then we'll talk a little bit about it so let me go down here over here to the article ah okay so again i'll read you can just listen and follow along and then we'll look at some of the vocabulary it says in recent decades detention and deportation have become the entirety of america's immigration enforcement strategy this will strike many perhaps even most americans as both intuitive and inevitable how else is a nation uh to enforce its immigration laws but u.s immigration and customs enforcement ice which is the the government agency that handles immigration and customs ice is for sure um ice mass detention and deportation strategy is in fact both a sharp break from historic norms and neither the only nor the most effective way to enforce immigration law as a result of isis unprecedented mass deportation agenda the united states now spends more on federal immigration enforcement than all federal criminal law enforcement combined and has removed more than twice as many people in the first two decades of the 21st century as the entire previous history of the united states the brutality and enormous investment of immigration enforcement have created a well-documented humanitarian disaster that is increasingly driven the american public to reject isis heavy-handed tactics however less well-organized are the ways in which the agency's enforcement enforcement-only approach has utterly failed as a law enforcement strategy the noun deportation and the verb is to deport so again uh we can use this in different ways uh the meaning is kind of the same to uh whoops sorry i'm gonna add to deport and then you might be referring to a person so to to deport someone is when you would be making this person leave the country to deport so this is the situation where people might be detained again i'm now using the word in different ways they may be detained and kept somewhere and then later on then they are deported they are made to leave the country and they talk about this word i chose to use this word the article mentions unprecedented this is a word that we've heard i think a lot in 2020 especially in the united states people talk about things that are happening it's never happened before you would say that it's unprecedented so again this article is critical very critical of the u.s policy the immigration policy that they don't like it people are detained and then deported and the other thing they say it also goes against the historic norms so this kind of gets into the history a little more of the history of the united states that traditionally historically i think the united states is viewed as a country that has always been very open to accepting immigrants and people coming to the u.s for work uh for education to just start a new life it has a history like that and what this article was criticizing is that they're saying well we're moving away from that history not really just in the last four years but in the last couple of decades they they've really become a little more aggressive with um detaining illegal immigrants and deporting them and that is why this article was asking for a new paradigm again i'm trying to use these words again so that you may start to recognize them a new paradigm a new model that they want uh that is more humane that is showing a little more kindness a little more caring all right so again um these words are going to be down in the description if you would like to review i would encourage you um i'm also going to leave links to these articles if you want to keep following up on them alright uh let's uh let's look at the last one and then at the end i'll try to take some questions if you guys have them the last article kind of involves the charity that i want to highlight which is freedom university so if we go back over to uh the website um right here okay so here this is freedom university educating undocumented young people in georgia so this is kind of like an informal university and it's talking about undocumented young people i'll i'll explain this um a little more in just a bit so it says um if somebody is uh an immigrant you know that this person is now they they live in another country and they're doing so permanently if you say somebody is undocumented did i have that word uh let's see down here um yes okay just so uh we can go ahead and look at this so if something is undocumented uh you can say it's not supported by written proof so you can use this word in different ways but if you're talking about a person who is undocumented it would be a person who is living in the country that they they don't have documentation that says they can stay there that they can live there and you may hear people talk about an undocumented immigrant so those that's like a collocation you may hear those words used together people might refer to an undocumented immigrant a person who is living in another country but they don't have papers they may not have a visa to support that so this article let's go back to it and then i'm going to read a little portion of it and then we'll look at some other words so it says fewer than one percent of the 11.2 million u.s undocumented immigrants have completed any type of college degree in the united states and only 16 percent of undocumented college-age young people are enrolled in institutions of higher learning this is the result of many factors including restrictive policies in some states an exclusion from all forms of federal financial aid across the country dr laura mikko soltis is working to change this she leads freedom university in atlanta a modern day freedom school for undocumented young people that offers free college level classes college application assistance and liberatory spaces for learning her goal is to empower undocumented young people and advance their human right to education okay so it's talking about uh providing undocumented uh students these are college-age students with higher learning and she hopes to empower them okay so let's look at to go back there

those are the words that i'm going to focus on so higher learning is talking about college or university level so if you ever see those two words somebody's talking about higher learning they're just talking about college or university and in this case it's offering uh undocumented students higher classes of higher learning hoping to empower them if you want to empower somebody it means that you want to give them the authority or freedom to do something i think all of this can agree that um education is so important education is very important and it definitely empowers people it provides people with more opportunities to work and make more money uh it provides people with opportunities to communicate with others like right now like this interactive english the whole channel is about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills which hopefully will empower you later on if you want to get a job or perhaps if you're traveling and you can communicate with people so that is what freedom university is all about um i've actually i discovered freedom university to just show you give you a little bit of a background as to how i came across it it was actually um this well daca which refers to basically that some uh maybe immigrants came to united states they were undocumented they had children there so the children also maybe they didn't have uh documentation because their parents the came there illegally and because of that they well they grew up in the united states and some of them they still don't have documentations but the united states is their home they are american and they don't have the documentation it's a it's not a good situation again it's become very political and they it i don't think there is any clear resolution at this point obviously in my personal opinion these people should definitely stay they should have their documentation but some of the students i think at this university that that's kind of what they would fall into they've lived in the u.s their whole life but they're not able to receive the same opportunities as some other people because they are undocumented so that's what freedom university is um if and if you want to make a donation they do the donations through this other organization um called the the praxis project so that is actually the the donation goes to the practice project who supports freedom university and just so you know the praxis project um they they are a movement they do a lot of different initiatives helping out with uh equality for all racial equality um education like freedom university and that is the organization that accepts the donations on behalf of freedom university and supports freedom university i don't know if freedom university could not uh register as a a charitable organization on their own again watch the video it will give you a lot more information about it but this is the this is the organization that we that i wanted to highlight that i think is doing a great job that's doing a very important work uh and yeah if you guys want to get involved support people's uh education you can make a donation uh

click on that donate button and even if you even if you can't right now i completely understand that check out the website i think it's always good to read this information practice your reading skills go on to the praxis project website as well because if anything you're reading about something that's good and something that's positive i think there's so much if you're reading like newspaper articles so much of it is just negative it's good to actually read something that is inspiring that makes you feel good so even if you can't make a donation that's okay i'd still encourage you go on those websites read a little bit more about it practice your language skills and it's just i think it just makes people feel better at least that's that's my opinion so i i hope that you guys learn some new words um again i will put these words down below in the description these are all the words that we talked about from the article that i think will help you understand a little bit more about the the topic of immigration which is an important topic which i think all of us can relate to because i think countries from all over the world um the the world is becoming a lot more connected um i like i told you i've lived in several different countries uh and and in my opinion i think that's a good thing i i think it's great that we're all being connected that we can communicate with each other um it's it's something that's positive i hope this was useful again i apologize i know that uh the the streaming i don't know if it cut in and out a little bit uh because of because of my shoddy internet uh but i i hope you learned uh some new words and uh thank you guys again for for joining me sorry it wasn't as much of a back and forth with you guys who are in the chat uh because of the type of lesson it is there's so many different windows that i'm having to jump back and forth between the the articles the vocabulary i'm trying to look in the chat uh to see what's going on but thank you guys uh so much mohammed zanat uh adir um brayan know about uh just give some quick shout outs at the end saad uh angela canule uh thank you guys um thank you for joining the the uh new member uh ka kathu kathushillo sorry if i mispronounce names um always good to see members and patrons takayo catrudus maggie um thank you guys so much for being here i hope that you enjoy the rest of your weekend and again next week what i want to do this month we're going to highlight uh some different charities uh make a donation i'm going to do the lesson as a bit of a fundraiser and just try to have it be a little more positive and and try to end the year on a little more of a positive note because 2020 has well it's it's kind of just sucked all right so we're gonna try to focus on something a little more positive and highlight some of these charities uh olga peter uh naoko mario great to see you uh mary uh roshan hope you guys have a wonderful weekend and

READING QUIZ Learn Vocabulary & Answer Questions about the Cheetah

would you like to practice and improve your reading skills well I'm gonna help you do just that [Music] what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English skills today we are going to focus on reading and we are going to do an active reading activity to help improve your reading comprehension so what we're going to do is I am going to show you a text you will read it and then afterwards I'm going to ask you some questions to see how much you understood and how much you remember from what you've read today's topic is about the cheetah a truly amazing animal and if you don't know much about the cheetah then you will very soon and just so you know this reading is probably around the level of intermediate to advanced before we begin I'd like to go over some vocabulary words with you these are some words that you are going to find in the reading the first one is characterized and what this means is it's talking about the features or the qualities that something or someone has the the things that really distinguish this person or or this thing characterized the next word is slender and this is an adjective that means the same thing as thin but it's really a way of saying that somebody is thin but they're also fit they're thin and they're fit they are slender the next word is contrast and this just means that that something is different you're talking about the differences between things so if something is in contrast to something else you're referring to the differences between these two things finally we have uniformly this is an adverb that that basically means the same that something is the same throughout so if something is the same in all cases we could use it as an adjective and say that something is uniform or as an adverb uniformly now that you know those words you can keep an eye out for those as you're reading the text and hopefully this will help you understand the material a bit better so I'm going to show you the reading and the words are just going to scroll across the screen and just try to do your best try remember as much as you can and really try to put a picture in your mind because that's going to help you remember the information after we're done reading I will ask you some questions to test your reading comprehension and I'll also give you the answers as well are you ready to learn about the cheetah let's begin you now that you've read that information about the cheetah I have some questions for you and I'll give you a little bit of time to think about the answer and then I'll tell you what it is here's your first question what are two characteristics of the cheetah the answer is a small rounded head and a spotted tail so in the text there were several characteristics of a cheetah that were mentioned a cheetah has a small rounded head a spotted tail it has a deep chest a slender body and what else does the cheetah oh yeah a spotted coat and black streaks across its face here is your next question the cheetah is hmm the answer is a taller than a leopard remember in the reading it said that cheetahs are taller than leopards but much smaller than lions you ready for your next question here it is how much does a cheetah weigh the answer is be 21 to 72 kilograms this is very specific information from the reading and it's like you're really trying to read for those key details because numbers those are often key details when you're reading so how did you do are you now experts on the cheetah if you did this activity and you performed well then let me know write that in the comments and just say I am a cheetah expert that way I know that you did the activity you answer the questions correctly and you practice your reading skills thanks so much for watching if you enjoyed this activity please hit that like button and as always I will see you next time

READING YOUR POSITIVE COMMENTS | Share the Love

- Today we're sharing some positive and loving comments from you guys. As you probably know by now, the internet can be kind of a dark place at times. So we wanted to stay away from that, we wanted to kind of highlight the best part of it. Sometimes we get these amazing and loving comments and they make us so happy. So we wanted to share them with you. - We did a lesson talking about some of the mean comments which we will link around here. We didn't wanna just highlight that, we wanted to also really highlight the good things. - 'Cause this is more important, to be honest. - It is much more important. We just grabbed a few real quick, even though we appreciate your comment if you don't see one of yours.

- Let's get to it! (claps) (laughs) So one of our comments is from Francisco du Vietnam and yeah. - This is a great one. - And you know, they're always welcome but this one's really, really cute. Because Francisco got really angry. And the comment goes, one hater dislikes this video, angry face, because he can't understand English and moreover furthermore he's jealous of our handsome teacher. (laughs) - So this is a good one because it was like it's like he's sticking up for us. Defending our lessons so. - Thank you Francisco. - We appreciate that, Francisco and we wanted to highlight that. - Thank you for sticking up for us. I love this one. - Another great comment is from Gisele and she says-- - She's super cute. - I greatly appreciate your lessons, a bear hug for you both.

Thank you, Giselle. - So cute. Thank you. - Appreciate all your comments - A bear hug for you too - A bear hug to all of you guys out there for being a part of our community. - This one is from Moon Shiekh. I hope I'm pronouncing that correctly. It's very cute. It says, thanks a million guys. You brighten up my day. - It's always great to get those comments 'cause they brighten up our day.

Another comment from Firdavs Islomov and that is, the first time watch your videos. Liked it so much. Greetings from Tajikistan. Well, greetings to you. Thank you. - Greetings. - It's always great to hear from new people. I always love it when they're like, oh, this first time came across your channel, watched some of your videos. - Thank you guys for sharing with us where you're from and-- - Yeah-- - just commenting, it's really nice. The next comment is from blabla, blabla, ellipsis bla. Blabla bla says, a hell of a vid fella. Thanks a bunch. Pretty please keep it on. - This is a great one. I like the use of the informal - Fella?

- Like slang. Well that aint just fella but like, hey that's a hell of a video, a hell of a lesson. - Hell of a party. - Hell of a nice guy. - Hell of a summer, bud. - You did a hell of a job. - Mhm. - Next comment is from Almaz, and it says, hi my name is Almaz from Azerbaijan. Thanks for your videos, I like them. Thanks again for-- - Heart, cat face. - Your comment, yes. We love the emojis too. - Yes, please, keep them coming. - Thank you so much for your comment. - Thanks for the cat face. I love cats. They're always welcome. - This is just one that I wanted to include I thought it was good.

From Gouranjoy Mutum. It says, you look like Ben Affleck. Thanks! Do you think I look like Ben Affleck? - I think you're about-- - I thought I was more of a Matt Damon but... - You're about 20 times more handsome than Ben Affleck. - Aww. - Our next comment is from Xime Forero. OMG, you're such a great teacher. Learned so much today thanks to you. Thank you. I don't know if this for me or Wes, I forgot. - I think it's for both, you know. This is we're both interactive English, so thank you so much. - Thank you. - For your comment. The reason why we choose this comment is because for so many of our lessons we want to make them interactive and a lot of times we will ask you guys to write something in the comments that's related to what you just learned about vocabulary or grammar and this is an example because this was from talking about like politeness I think and he said I wonder if you could give me a cup of coffee so we wanted to highlight this comment because we wanted to say thank you for participating in the lesson we love it when you guys do that. - And as English teachers, we encourage you to participate because that way you practice. So please keep on participating but it's also really nice that you guys do it. Thank you. Another comment is from Veronica Cedillo. E, the most commonly letter used. And this is another participation - Exactly, yeah. - Comment and again we wanted. - Love them. - To say thank you for participating. - I feel like some people might look at some of these comments in the videos and be like, wait, why is this person writing this? - But we know. - If they haven't seen the lesson. But of course, yes, we know, and we love those comments.

- I think it was you, that one's for you. - He's cuter. - You're the cute one. This comment is from Jasmine and I just really like it. It's just like, thumbs up. - Four of them. - Yes. - Emojis. - Four thumbs up. We love getting these emoji comments they're simple. Sometimes usually I'll just respond with a couple of emojis. - Emojis are the best. - Happy face, thumbs up. So thank you for this comment. - Martha Lopez says it is a useful class, thanks a lot. Thank you for sharing. You know we're happy to hear if you think it's useful for you. - I'm glad people think it's a view it as a class too.

Because I know some of our videos are a little shorter but then those live lessons are longer. It's actually like we really try to make that like a full class. So this comment from Sagur Khan, very effective lesson, God bless you. Thank you Sagur Khan, God bless you. Thank you for watching and commenting and we're really glad that the lessons are useful. - So these comments are really just a sample of the comments that we received. We love teaching you and it just means the world when somebody tells you that we're making a difference and that we're helping them. And that's really what we're here to do. - We really love all of your comments and hope you guys keep commenting and communicating with us. - Keep them coming. In the comments we like to keep kind of this positive vibe going so we want to ask you to write something positive and it doesn't even have to be about us it can be about anything, anyone. Think like that. - Just something positive. - Something good, okay? We want to keep the love going. So we'd like to really really really really really really thank you so much. We hope you enjoyed this lesson. If you did, give it a thumbs up. And we'll see you next time.

READ FASTER IN ENGLISH | Become a Speed Reader

okay I think we are live um welcome everyone Welcome to our Saturday um lesson uh today's topic is um reading fast or speed reading actually um so I have a question for you how fast can you read do you think you could read a little faster um and I think the answer to this should be yes for all of us uh yes uh keep watching okay so uh today's lesson like I said is about um speed reading and today we're going to talk about a few different things I'm going to give you some resources on um speed reading I'm going to tell you why it's important to read faster than you are reading now uh who can benefit from speed reading uh and what can you do to improve your reading and to make it faster uh because believe me faster reading is better reading if you do it right okay so I'm going to uh change my camera a little bit and I'm going to uh show you some online resources um and then I'm going to show you some um even an app that you can use on your phone and then what to do with books that you're already reading uh so first um before we do anything I just wanted to let you know um that if you'd like to practice with us if you've been following us or if you haven't uh it's very useful if you join our social media classes because um we have different kinds of lessons there uh on Facebook on Twitter Instagram Snapchat and of course here on YouTube we have different kinds of lessons for you we ask questions you can practice with us every day so it's a very good way to improve your English so if you haven't done it already please join our class classes because we have different questions on these different platforms um um the other thing I wanted to let you know is that um if this is a live lesson um I'm here talking to you but Wes is um in the chat room answering any questions so if you have questions please write them uh we'll get to them and we'll be able to answer them uh but again okay so going back to today we are talking about speed reading resources okay so we are going to talk about why you should speedread okay so let me tell you something um have you noticed that when you learn a new language whether it's English or whatever other language you're trying to learn you are not as fast as reading as you are in your native language because that happened to all of us I think especially when you're learning a language so generally speaking most of us most people who are learning a new language are not as fast English language Learners are just usually slower than native English speakers and that's just true for most most people um because of that when you read in English you're going to be slower right um so you're already at a disadvantage because you don't speak or you can't read as quick as um native English speakers can so of course you can improve your your reading um by doing some of the exercises that I'm talking to you today um the other reason is because when we read faster we read more it's it's a very simple simple way of putting it but it's true and when you read more what happens is that we improve your our grammar our vocabulary and our writing uh all of these in one so here I'm just going to get my mic a Little Closer okay so we when we are able to to to read faster we can improve these other very very very important parts of the language um so there we go the other reason and I'm going to talk about this a little bit later is if you're training for any kind of test um like the TOEFL or the I you know in English speaking test you need to improve your reading um and to make it faster because that's the most difficult part by far of the exam and um they give you these very complicated long texts and you have to read them fast and there's other skills you have to do with it but you really have to make sure that you improve your speed so it's very very very very important that you doing okay but we'll talk about this a little later okay so um now I'm going to move on to who this lesson is for uh so like like I said before if English is your second language and not your first this lesson is for you because any and all Ells means English language Learners any and all English language Learners need to read a little faster um it's also for future uh University students or any kind of students who read books in English for school or not just books but articles um anyone like that if you are reading something uh this lesson and will help you uh for any kind of test takers like I said if you're taking the I or the TOEFL these standard tests all have a reading comprehension section that speed reading will help you tremendously with uh because speed reading is not just about reading fast and I want to make myself understood and I'll explain about this later but it's also about reading fast and remembering what you've read being able to understand and process but also being fast it because if you read fast and you them they're very good um you can practice on your phone so I have an app that I want to talk to you about today and you can practice with a book or an article like a physical copy also so I'm going to teach you how to do that too and then the last and I think the best because it's the most fun is how you can practice with us because we have some uh reading lessons that are very fun and entertaining okay so let's um let's move on to um the first one which is the the self test okay so you can do these online there's some good uh free uh speed reading tests online um that I think are very are very good uh I'll show you the first one let me switch to my um browser there it is I'll show you the first one there there are a few different ones I like this one because and I'll I'll show you in a second so if you're here um it's called free reading test.com I'll put by the way I'll put all the links in the description of the resources today uh so it's called freeing test.com and the reason I like it is because it has these really cool um things up here so you can you can select the the theme oh gosh okay I don't know why it's doing that okay my thing is not really working um never mind I won't use this tool um okay so you can select the theme um you can select the uh complexity level and you can select the story um and by theme I mean you can choose whatever you want what topic you want to talk about so you can talk about you know you I'm sorry read about so you can read fun facts you can uh choose general or American history so that's really good uh and it has this is what I really like it has levels so maybe if you're your level is not the highest um then you can still take this test because it's catered to any kind of level so it goes from 1 to 13 you do your complexity level and you even choose different stories so it gives you a stories and then you hit begin and then it gives you a story and then um you have to go through with it and once you're done reading you hit done reading and then it asks you these comprehension questions okay so once you answer the comprehension questions uh then it will tell you your speed and your um your comprehension how well did you score in both because like I said it's very important for um it's very important to be able to do both so I I really like this um this resource like I said because you can customize it some other websites that I found online only give you one text and you have to go through it and if for example you're at kind of a lower level then it's very hard to able to get through all of that and it might not be um true truly where you are so this one is really helpful because of that okay so uh that's why I really like it um okay so you can do the self test like I said on uh freeing test.com very useful you can come back after you've practiced a little bit and retake it on a different level different story however you want to do it okay so now that you know how to test yourself and you figure out a base reading speed that you have we have to figure out how to increase it right okay so we're going to move on to how to do this online and uh what kind of websites we can use I have a few of them for you and I think they're all very useful so let me just show you what I mean so okay so there are ones that I like um this zap reader it's just called zap reader.com um it's a very easy very simple very easy one so let me show you uh I you can copy and paste any text so I'm going to go through this chocolate text that I got off of simple Wikipedia and I'll talk about that in a second and then I paste it here and then I hit zap it and then I hit play and then if you can see it goes goes by really goes really fast right so you have to read as fast as the text is moving so this helps train your brain to move faster and to read faster and it gives you word by word so you can only focus on that word at a time so it's very very useful and again this works like I said with any text that you have um oops so this was zap reader um so it really works with any text that you have uh and it's very useful very simple free no problem another one that I like is spreer and spreer works very similarly um and you really you you do the same thing you just copy and paste uh in the in the text and then uh hit play and it just moves on however you want it to so this is a very very very good way to this is a very good way to be able to practice on your computer computer it really does help you know 10 15 minutes every day it will improve your speed your speed um another really good way and this so like I said this text is good for for everyone and anyone because you can put any kind of text so if you're wondering what kind of texts you should include um I have some suggestions for you and like I said I'm going to put these in the description um so let me go back to the chocolate reading that I was telling you about uh this is simple Wikipedia simple Wikipedia is is a page a web page from Wikipedia but it uses simple English so it uses English that is a little bit more simplified and it's not as difficult as the regular Wikipedia so because of this the language level is going to be lower so if you are just beginning to learn English this is really really really useful because you can use this text to um to to speed up your reading basically uh and you again it has a lot of different topics I have chocolate here because obviously I love chocolate um but also because um it's kind of a fun reading so you can really do any topic and it will find it and you can enter it in the in the zap reader or the spreer um another one for more of a me medium content if you want something a reader or the uh spreer and it will be um a little bit more challenging for you um another one if you don't like National Geographic there's the Atlantic it's a new source uh I like this one because the vocabulary used that they use is usually more difficult than others so if you really want to challenge yourself uh this is a good one and then there's the economist or other ones but these are very very useful now something I wanted to uh show you that's specific to just English uh language Learners is uh this website that I found that is right here I I don't know um this website but it has some really good exercises especially For Speed reading it's called Interlink language centers uh but I wanted to um get your attention uh for some of these exercises so if if you for example look at the speed reading exercises here so I'm going to click on number one it will give you an exercise uh like one by one sentence by sentence so it's really really helpful if you are an English language learner this is who this is developed for so if you hit next did you see how fast that was it was insanely fast so you have to be really fast but what I like about this is that it really focuses on your spelling so again if you're trying to take a test if you're learning English it's very important that you're you pay all you pay a lot of attention to your spelling and your Grammar and this is exactly what this focus is on okay because if you put belief it's wrong it is believe not a Believer so you really have to pay attention to the word but also this helps you pay attention to the grammar and then you do the next and then again you've seen it really fast so you really have to pay attention Okay so I really like this resource um because like I said it really is for English language Learners and it really helps if you want to challenge yourself to not only to read fast but to remember why you've read the part of speech all of that the spelling and I know some of you have problems with spelling um this will help okay okay so we going to move on to how you can practice on your phone okay um so we all have phones you know we use them all the time oops yeah there we go we use them all the time we all have them uh one of the apps that I like to uh practice my my reading with is called spreer uh the website I just showed you they they also make an app uh the app is a little better than the website like it has has more features and I'm going to show them to you in a second so okay so that's what it's called this I'm going to show it to you that's kind of what it looks like that's the app um and then I have a screenshot over there for you and let me tell you why I like it uh number one you can set your speed so like I said you know when you do the self test you find out what your speed is how many words per minute can you read and then when you go into this app you can change that so you can change how many words per minute you can read so you can maybe make it just a little bit more than you're than you're reading or you can do it a lot more it's up to you but I suggest doing just a little bit more at a time uh so you can set it and it so in that way it can be used you know as you get better you can keep increasing the speed um so that's very useful the other reason is you can add your own text like we've seen you know just copy and paste from another source but if you don't have a text handy I really like that they have a really big Library so you can do um as you can see in that picture right there um you know I've SE you've seen war in peace they have so many books they have articles they have different kinds and I've said this before when you read you should read something you like because if you like it you're going going to be interested and want to read more so if you don't like reading about economics or about the news don't read about the news read about you know I like I like Russian literature so I'm going to read War and Peace okay so you can really it really is helpful because you can choose your text and you practice with it the other thing I really like about it is the fact that it has these progress reports and um let me show you what they look like they look like this so basically now I just did a couple trial runs last night but basically it tells you what your speed is and then as you move and read more text you can see how you progress um so how how you're moving on so this is really useful because I think especially with learning a language sometimes it's hard to see if we have you know if if we've made any progress it really sometimes it's really hard you feel like you're stagnating you feel like you're not challenging yourself but with this you can actually see it and that's really nice sometimes be like look I've improved this much I can read so much faster and I think it really helps because with learning a language sometimes we feel like we're up here then we go back down here and then this really helps see that so I really like it for that purpose okay so I'm going to move on uh okay something to mention that I I'm not 100% sure about this app I think it may only be on iPhones I'm not 100% but you can of course look up any other speed reading apps that are on uh your phone if if it's not on Android or um a different kind of platform if it's not make sure to look for these features because if a phone if an application has a way to see your progress and if they have different kinds of reading speeds and different kind of texts that's all you need it doesn't have to be this app okay so I'm going to move on to how you can practice on your with your books or any kind of article um so this is something you don't need an internet connection for you just need a hand or a pencil if you'd prefer but I like the hand and you need a

can read in that one minute when your timer goes off you count the words you've read you write it down and then this is how you keep your progress but you can do this at any time I suggest keeping like a log sheet if you don't want to use one of these apps so that you remember where you were where you started and where you're moving because it really helps to see how you've improved like I said okay so that's the way to do it um with um with a book or an article and of course you can choose the book or article that uh you want to to use okay the last and the best is um for me in my opinion of course I'm biased oops uh is to practice with us and the reason I say to practice with us is because we have some reading lessons that we've prepared for you and why I like them is that they're a lot of fun and they're interactive uh so you can um I'll show you what I mean by that actually so let's go back to our browser and I'm going to move to our page uh so these are our interactive reading activities um so what happens is as you can see I'm obsessed with chocolate I'm sorry but if you click on these different reading activities uh we do several things for you so I'm not going to oops put the volume on right now but it moved to okay there it is okay so what what we do in this in these videos is we give you different text that scroll so and they scroll typically at the uh speed of uh uh native English speaker so you can of course challenge yourself to read at that speed uh but then of course we also help you with your comprehensions I like this because they're not they're they're really in-depth learning so we really give you ways to help you to um especially for your reading comprehension for example we have questions here okay um we have questions here and then you have to click on the answer that is correct and then if you click on something that is not correct for example um we tell you we we give you help so that's why it's really cool it takes you to another video and then we give you more hints so this helps you you know it's good to have the good answer is it helps if you have the right answer um but it's not enough if you just know what answer is right we actually tell you how to find the right answer where the answer is so this really helps your comprehension which like I said is crucial it's if you can read fast but if you don't understand what you're reading then there's no point of reading fast so this will help you improve un your understanding of the text so I I think it's it's very very useful um and like I said it's fun because you can click on the answers it takes you to different places you know we have fun practices like chocolate and and La Tomatina which is like a tomato throwing festival and uh all kinds of fun stuff so I definitely recommend checking it out um like I said it's free we're going to put the link in the description okay um so those are my those are my those are my um oh my gosh my resources that's the word I was looking for but before we leave um I just want to leave you with some tips and tricks um do you guys like my bear it's cute no very cute I love it okay um okay so what should you what should you do in generally speaking I would definitely suggest to practice daily and when I say practice daily I don't mean take three hours out of your day to read a GI book like we're in peace and really make sure you read it fast no you can take 20 minutes minutes 10 20 minutes of your day every day but every day is important and dedicated to just speed reading so just take time make sure you read because that will improve that will help you improve definitely so even if you take a little bit it's more important to do it daily than to do three hours here and then three hours next month because it's harder to improve that way when you read books use your index finger and only focus on the word that you are U that your finger is under okay because if you try to read more or go back then you're not practicing speed reading okay uh time yourself and test yourself often um like I said this is important because then you can see your progress so if you time yourself and you write it down uh and if you after maybe a month of speed reading you want to check yourself to you know your level again it's very easy just go back to that free speed reading test do it again choose a different level maybe and see how you're doing or do the same level different story and see how much you've improved on that level it really helps and that's why I like that test because you really you can really choose um and customize what you need from this from this um exercise okay um one of my other tips is start easy and then move up what I mean by this is don't start with a very very difficult text like I show you the one from the Atlantic and then type that in and then realize you're very slow because the vocabulary is so complicated uh you know start with something that's easy for you to read that you're comfortable with but then don't forget to move up to a higher level when you have gone comfortable because like I said you need to challenge yourself and when I especially if you're taking one of those difficult a or or um TOEFL tests the vocabulary there is pretty difficult so you need to make sure that you're improving that you're not just using I don't know like first grade level um or just a really low level make sure to keep going up so keep choosing harder texts like the ones I gave you and then for more practice uh I was going to go back to the browser to just show you one more thing that I have um okay so we are back here uh and I'm just going to show you in Google Google uh what you can do is type in ESL means English as a second language speed reading exercises or activities and then hit enter and there are quite a few that you can use that you can really practice so there are some on ESL flow or different kinds of exercises that you can do so there's different readings um there's different activities this is how I found the one that I was telling you about earlier so there is definitely a lot but it really helps if you this is what you look for ESL speedreading exercises because um I know the reason why I showed you what I searched for is because I know many we many times we get questions um from students and they're like how do I find this how do I find that and Google is such a huge place the internet is so big and vast that sometimes we don't know how to find the resources that we need even if they're there and they're free so this is what you need to look for and you'll find a lot of good information um make sure that what you do I mean it's up to you if you want to find a course that you want to pay for but there's so much free stuff that I don't think you really need to pay for anything so you just need to know exactly what you're looking for so that's why I said if you practice with the information I gave you with the free test uh speed uh speed test with Wikipedia simple Wikipedia regular Wikipedia these other free uh news sources um and more other I don't know articles and and other things if you practice with your zap reader or your spreer on your phone or on your computer with a book there's so much you can do and it's all free and you will improve so next time you're taking you know one of these tests or you're trying to just improve your your English or your reading in general think about speed reading um make sure to do a daily practice and um you will see that you will definitely and drastically improve so you can read more and get even better and it's more exciting and more fun okay so uh that's that's it for my video today uh if you feel like you've you know learned anything new um or you found this interesting please share a video you know with your um friends friends or anyone that's interested in speed reading because um this is for

English language learners but I think it's applicable to Anyone who reads so anyone um and yeah just share it and uh thank you for joining us today we had a lot of fun um and I hope you also had fun and learned something uh thank you and we will see you later

ROMANTIC PHRASAL VERBS FOR LOVE & RELATIONSHIPS

today we're talking about dating phrasal verbs super fun topic so today we are talking about one of my favorite favorite topics and I say it's my favorite because I love phrasal verbs because they can be tricky but also fun and also dating and who doesn't like talking to talk about dating so I'd like to welcome you guys today super fun lesson dating phrasal verbs we've done a lesson like this before but these are more okay so because it's such an important topic I think the reason I say it's important is because dating is very common we always have to talk about dating and there's so many dating phrasal verbs that kind of come up all the time so you should definitely know these phrasal verbs so if you are just joining us today thank you please let us know you know say hi tell us where you're writing from and welcome welcome welcome to our beautiful lesson okay so

I'd like to say hi to a few people who I see here welcome Devika welcome Robbie Patricia I did ask Diego Robbie if I didn't say that welcome if I miss some names I'm sorry I can't see all of them but welcome to all of you and thank you for joining so let's begin so as you may know phrasal verbs we can separate them into separable or non separable phrasal verbs and if you had watched if you've been watching our live lessons you have seen this slide before but I'm going to keep showing it to you until you really remember it so what why why am i showing you this because phrasal verbs in English some of them we can't separate them they're separable so what determines that it's the transitive verbs okay so in English transitive verbs are verbs that take a direct object which means that many times when they do that they can be separable so we have the example here of taking out the trash the direct object is the trash so you can take the trash out or you can take out the trash so you can use it as it is or you can use it separate the verb from the preposition but they can also be inseparable at times alike for example we the one we have here is we got on the plane you cannot say we got the plane on but what's really important is if you're kind of ever wondering like is this verb separable is this verb non-separable if it is intransitive meaning if it cannot take an object right so like waking up you can't wake it doesn't--it's intransitive that will never be separable so it is always inseparable so if you're ever wondering and if you don't really know and if you don't remember how the verb is used this is kind of a good clue to help you and this is valid for all phrasal verbs whether they're dating or food or whatever category you put them in this will kind of help you get through that okay so this is our first one so we have the verb make up make up to make up it's kind of it's a good one it has a positive it has a positive connotation because you know with means maybe you've been fighting with your lover significant other spouse whatever friend even and it means to kind of forget about those differences reconcile and everything is okay again Wes and I have been together for about five years now almost and we have had our share of fights but for all those fights we have made up so that's very important of course so here is my sentence for you guys after some time apart they decided to make up very important phrasal verb we use this all the time and like I said yes of course a lot with dating but you can also use it with for example family or friendships all kinds of relationships ooh this is one of my favorites okay check out check out or this one is separable so you can check someone out and this is how we usually use it when we're talking about dating because when you check someone out it really means like you're kind of looking at them up and down well you don't have to be creepy about it but just look at somebody that you find attractive so somebody you're like wow this person they're cute um so for example I have my example here you know we just had the World Cup there have been a lot of cute cute soccer players out there in the field and my example is check out the cute French soccer player right I'm sure I'm not the only one who thought about who thought about this about soccer players sure a lot of people did but that is how we use it you check someone out okay or check out someone settle down okay so like I said these are about dating but it's also a we use them a lot to describe our daily life when you settle down it means that you start living a quiet life in one place with a partner any time you know when we're younger in our 20s we don't know where our lives are gonna go we're kind of all over the place but as we get older maybe some of us are looking to settle down it means to kind of find our own place in the world find a good job not good but like you know something more established more stable that's kind of what it is to settle down especially with a partner so my example here is it's not necessarily about me it's just an example one day I'll want to settle down and have a family so we use it a lot in fact this settle down and have a family together you'll see it often people talk about it because you know it's very common that somebody when they settle down with a partner they might want to start a family so these the this phrase you'll kind of see together a lot which is why I used it over here again if you guys are just joining us make sure to tell us where you're from and what is your name it's good to meet everyone and even if you're doing it later write it in the comments it's always nice to to see to see who's who's writing to us from somewhere okay our next one it's kind of two-in-one and it is to move in and to move out I put them together really because they go together and they're kind of easy to remember right when you move in you start living with a person and when you move out you stop living with a person so usually you say like you move in with someone but it doesn't always have to be that way like you can talk about two people and they move in together and that is my example here they will move in together in December they will move in together in December and that is my example so Wes and I moved in I think it was December 2014 very specific but I remember this so yeah let's move in and move out okay so just a quick reminder we are now on patreon and you know if you like what we do and want to support us the link for patreon is in the description and you can follow it to get us there it's just a fun fun way to support us so check that out okay so now that we've talked a little bit about some of these verbs we're going to I have a tip for you a tip that I think is very very important in how to learn how to learn and review and I put these together because they literally inseparable you can't learn with reviewing okay it's just not really learning and what do I mean about learning and reviewing phrasal verbs so my tip to you guys is the following there are different ways you can learn phrasal verbs there they're kind of difficult because the prepositions can be all over the place but you can what you can do is learn them by category like we're doing here so you can separate them you know buy food or buy clothing dating like in this lesson different ways another way to do would be to separate them by verbs so for example you can have phrasal verbs with take or phrasal verbs with check or something like that so there's are different ways you can learn it helps if they're in a category like I said but really what's most important is something I firmly believe in especially with phrasal verb is to practice them in context and what do I mean by context is to because of these prepositions it's really useful if you remember them in phrases and in the way you hear them so for example when you're watching TV and by TV I mean like just things you hear in them and TV shows or movies or even on YouTube just if you hear a phrasal verb just remember how it's being used and learn it like that and make sure that when you learn it to use it in a sentence to use it in an example because that way you'll learn it correctly otherwise there's a big chance for confusion and we don't want that and the second part is review oh my goodness this is so important okay so when you learn something today tomorrow make sure you review it go over all of your examples everything you've learned and review that three days later review it again I don't know a week later review it again two weeks later again three weeks four weeks every you don't have to do it every day but come back to what you've learned because that is a way to solidify your knowledge solidify what you've learned and the best way to remember and that's really what we're all trying to do so that is my tip and now we are moving on to moving on to move on I'm such a dork but that's our new phrasal verb dating phrasal verb it's non-separable so you cannot separate it but to move on and this one honestly you hear it a lot and it's it has a it's a good connotation it just means that you know you get over somebody but it's also like you know a relationship has ended and and all of that pain and suffering that kind of went with that you can put it behind you and you're able to move on to new experiences or any person many times it's a new person but it's that ability to okay except somebody new in your life or something new other than what you've had before sorry for the only explanation but it's just that feeling to move on that's why it's good we have phrasal verbs my example here is he's been finding difficult to move on since the break-up right so if somebody's having a hard time sometimes you know they can't really move on but eventually I think with time we all do so the question here was have you ever had to move on after a breakup so right write that down in the comments was it difficult please write it down because

I'm sure it was for a lot of us um my next example is to drift apart this one's sad this was non-separable also you can't separate it and it really just means it's a gradual one it means over time you become less intimate restful less friendly just like you know you just drift apart you kind of grow apart and then it's just it's it's very gradual so when you're talking about two people in a relationship maybe they've been together for a long time maybe things aren't going great we can say they started to drift apart in this case when he moved to London for work question have you guys ever had a relationship where you ended up drifting apart because I know I haven't it happens it's not it's not fun but it's true it can happen so drift apart drift apart it's a good one even though it's sad drift apart I like this one do you that's our picture so cute good memories that's what it means to fall for someone it's a good good one it's always good to fall for someone it's fun ooh this one by the way all of the ones I'm giving you today are very like they're very common ones so you can use them in many situations but they're very common speaking of common to lead someone on this one is separable it's not that good okay when you lead someone on it's like lying deceiving a little bit a little bit misleading really what it is if you if you don't really like someone but you pretend like you'd like them for different reasons I don't know what those are you can lead someone on and and it's not really a nice thing to do I don't know if that's casting judgment but it's just it's just something that people do sometimes and you're just kind of making somebody believe that you're in love with them or you're attracted to them but you really not it's not nice right because we're playing with people's feelings so that is that is if you've ever wondered what do you call the situation and you haven't had a way to express well it is to lead this person on have you ever let someone on I hope I haven't but you never know my example here is it's not right to lead on your date if you're not really interested and I'm sure that a lot of you have had to date people maybe have had this experience sadly and you felt the same way right it's not it's not right it's not okay to lead to lead on someone if you're not interested in them it's just a waste of everyone's time don't do it if you can okay so that is to lead someone on okay are you guys ready for some practice I've thrown a lot of these I you and I think what's going to be even more fun is that I'm going to include you know how I told you that my tip my that a very very good tip is to review very important to review well we've actually done a lesson a previous lesson on dating phrasal verbs and I'm going to include those in this practice so if you've watched them and now it's time to review them so we're going to include some of them not all of them but I think it's a good time a good way to review it so are you guys ready for an exciting dating phrasal verb practice okay here he goes here he goes cute okay so I hope you guys like my pictures I tried to find the cutest pictures I possibly could and this one was one of my favorites um so here here it is so here I give you the verb but what I don't give you is the preposition and then we have this little penguin girl here and sometimes sometimes she flirts hmm her colleagues at work what could it be so this one's from the dating phrasal verbs that we had previously not from this lesson but to see if you guys remember so sometimes she flirts look at her flirting I'm very bad with her colleagues at work let's see some answers I see some good answers some good answers over there hopefully you said sometimes she flirts with her colleagues at work she flirts with if you said with give yourself a pat on the back good job you got it right flirts wit so you flirt with someone great start sorry for my cheesy pictures but it's so cute um this one okay this one is from today's lesson would you like to move mm with me so from context he is asking her would you like to move with me what do you guys think would you like to move with me yeah you guys got it right would you like to move in with me so so far just looking at your answers you guys are rock stars and you're doing amazing and even if you're watching this later please make sure to write down those answers in the comments because that is a great way to practice and you are doing great so far would you like to move in with me it's a great it's a great question great question let's look at our next one okay so this one check mmm the new chick in my class she's so cute so here I made a little bit of a pun a play on words because chick I put a little picture of a chick like a little baby chicken that's a chick but also if you know in English chick is kind of a slang word or yeah slang word for girl like like a cute girl so check mmm the new chicken in my class she's so cute so what could it be check what let's see how you guys are doing let's see looking at some of your answers beautiful beautiful you should have said check out check out is such a good one check out the new chicken in my class she's so cute check her out this one separable check her out look she's so cute very pink very happy very nice eyes the Swan is a double threat and what do I mean by that we have two of them here again I still give you the verbs but I do not give you the prepositions it's gonna get a little harder last year I had a big fight with my boyfriend you like my cats they fought but since then we've made em and now we're ready to settle em together okay so what could it be we've made em ready to settle em together okay what could it be I had a fight you know but not anymore we're not fighting let's see what you guys are doing seeing some some confusing answers some good as there's two let's see so here is the answer last year I had a big fight with my boyfriend but since then we've made up okay so you should have said we made up when you make up with somebody it means you are no longer fighting with them you're you're you're you know everything's okay in the world everything's good you're back together everything's great and now we're ready to settle down okay remember settle down is ready for a family kind of ready to be with this person for a long time you know excuse me that is - settle down settle down together so hopefully these were your just it's been a long time move on okay see if you guys I know this was a little bit harder but really what it was the intention of this was move on you know it's been a long time let it go get over it move on those are a few different ways to describe this kind of situation but really just move on so I hope that that's what that's where you guys were we're writing okay and I believe we have we have a couple more oh one more this one's cute yeah this one is separate but it really is I'm not giving you the verb here I'm not giving you the preposition so you're gonna have to put it together from the cute context of this cute little bear holding flowers because he will ask her on a date oh I made a mistake oh well so it's I don't know if you guys caught it it's actually easier than I meant it to be so let's see because it's from an older one maybe we'll it will kind of give you a little bit of a challenge but some of that was not intentional okay let's see how you guys okay so what is he doing so he's trying to get a date with her so what what is the right what is the right answer he will mmm her on a date so that second blank should not really be there that was a mistake if you're wondering so here's the answer he will ask her out on a date I meant to block that on but I I think I missed it so he will ask her out on a date should be the right answer so when you ask somebody out on a date you are you know you want to go out with them you want to get to know them better in a romantic way that is to ask somebody out on a date if you're wondering where this verb came from it is from our previous ones so if you guys haven't seen them yet please check out our dating phrasal verbs the previous ones it's a really really good lesson we had a lot of fun with it and I think it's very very useful so that's where that's coming from well you guys did an amazing job today practicing with us thank you keep practicing these verbs I wanted to thank you so much for watching Thank You jr. thank you go sir Thank You Bassam Jessica Ronin rod Victor if I'm missing some names I apologize I don't see them all properly but thank you for joining me today keep practicing your verbs if you found this lesson fun if you thought it was interesting or useful please like it share it and any kinds of comments or questions write it out in the comments and we are going to answer thank you have a lovely Saturday and a great rest of your weekend and I'll see you next time

Reading + Vocabulary Lesson | EARTHQUAKES

hello everyone welcome to today's lesson thank you very much for joining me this is well to me it's a very important lesson this is going to be uh one of the fundraiser a fundraiser lesson which we do from time to time so uh what how this works is i'm it's a vocabulary lesson and what we're going to do i say reading plus vocabulary because we're going to look at some articles and i'm going to talk about some words and pick out some words that i think are relevant that i think are important and useful make a list and all of these words are related to the topic and today's topic is about earthquakes it's a very serious topic and as i mentioned this is a fundraiser lesson i want to highlight a an organization that's very important to me i worked with this organization about 10 years ago and i'll talk a little bit more about that uh at the end i'm sure you may see a fundraiser button

when as you're watching this video but the one thing i would say um if you can get involved that's great and and show some support even if you can't financially right now i'd still encourage you go check out some of the organization read about it they do great work it's another great way to practice your english skills your reading but also i would say please like share this video like this video write in the comments anything just to increase engagement in order to kind of will spread the word a bit more so as i mentioned this lesson um because of the way this works i have like so many different windows open i'm not going to be able to talk too much in the chat i would like to say hello to um some some familiar faces hello lolly welcome thanks for joining uh takayo hello angela sleepwalker uh glad you guys could be here yasmine uh amar abdullah so i i'll may try to check on the chat from time to time but mostly i'm just going to kind of go through this lesson talk about some of the vocabulary and then as i mentioned at the end um i'm going to circle back around and talk about the organization so i said today's topic is earthquakes so the articles that we're going to look at um are related to the earthquake that happened last saturday i believe august 14th in haiti so those are the articles that we're going to look at i'm going to point out some vocabulary that's related to earthquakes um again it's a natural disaster it's a it's a terrible thing very dangerous people lose their lives but i think it is also a topic that you're you're going to encounter in the future because earthquakes happen it's something that you are going to will listen to if you're watching the news it's going to be something that you might read about and it's also going to be something that you might be ha talking about in conversation about what's happening what's going on in the world so i think the vocabulary learning this vocabulary it's going to help uh your english skills it's related to i'd say it's more you could use these words in other contexts but i think again you you would commonly hear some of these words and phrases when people are talking about earthquakes but it's also going to help you get engaged a little more in what's going on so let's uh let's go ahead and look at the first article and then i'm going to pick out some words and then i'll hop over to our vocabulary list which you can find down in the description the words the articles everything from this lesson you can find down in the description so here um this is the first article that i want to look at it's from world vision who is a that's another organization that that works uh all around the world um that i believe does good work i have not worked with world vision i've heard about them but this is an article they wrote um talking about the earthquake and what was going on so here the first thing um i'm not going to read the entire article we're just going to read a little bit and then kind of i'll highlight some words and then put them put them on our vocabulary list so here you can see a magnitude 7.2 earthquake struck haiti on saturday august 14th 2021 causing widespread destruction in the caribbean country according to the u.s geological survey the death toll has risen to at least one 1419 as search and rescue teams are racing to find survivors in collapsed buildings and rubble um at least 6 000 are injured and many more are still missing so this article is from it's from maybe uh four or five days ago i know that the the death toll has changed so this article is from a few days ago this is a situation that i think is still evolving and updating the first thing that i want to point out when you talk about earthquakes is like magnitude um so you when you're talking about the size of an earthquake and it will reference a number 7.2 this is a very large earthquake but it you're going to often you may see this word with it talking about the magnitude of the earthquake the other one other word that i want to look at in this first paragraph struck so this is a verb it's in the past tense that if you're talking about an earthquake because it is sudden that you say an earthquake strikes causing widespread destruction in the the caribbean country this is an adjective that i also want to highlight because again when you talk about certain disasters and you say they're widespread that's that it's everywhere that it's not really just in one location it can be all over the place so if we were to go over to our again the vocabulary document which i have right here i have these first few words that we can look at so again if you say is the magnitude it's referring to the measure of how strong or violent an earthquake is so again this is a word that is very specific when talking about earthquakes like what if you say if somebody were to say well there was an earthquake you might ask and say well what what magnitude earthquake was it so you understand just how strong and violent it was i mentioned strike is a verb that you may hear people use but struck is in the past tense um to cause a person or place to suffer severely from the effects of something very unpleasant that happens suddenly so that earthquake uh just struck it struck haiti last saturday and then widespread reverse to existing or happening in many place among many people all right so those are the first three words that um i wanted to have a look at if we go back to our article there's quite a few actually that i wanted to touch on in this article so it says the death toll has risen um as i mentioned i believe uh this has since changed that number death toll is a phrase that i think when people are talking about natural disasters um that have taken the lives of others this is a phrase that you may hear people talk about or if you're reading the news that you're going to come across so death toll i'll put that on the list search and rescue teams so search and rescue i think is another phrase that's related to not just earthquakes but other natural disasters and they might talk about search and rescue or search and rescue teams collapsed is another adjective that i think when you're talking about natural disasters specifically earthquakes is a word that you're going to come across and rubble is the other one so let's look at let's go back to our vocabulary list and i'm gonna move this down so you guys can see these um so again they talked about this uh disaster being widespread which as i mentioned uh well wait i already talked about that one so i i mentioned where we left off the death toll uh i said if you're reading about natural disasters or talking about that this is a phrase that people might bring up it refers to the number of people who die because an event such as war or an accident in this case we're talking about uh this earthquake that occurred um search and rescue you may i think every country might have some version of search and rescue but i've included this because i feel like it's a phrase it's a collocation when people might talk about those that are trying to help like to search for and offer aid to people who are in distress and danger so search and rescue i don't think really refers to a certain group but really kind of just in general um the people that are offering aid and help like they're part of search and rescue collapse i said when you're talking about an earthquake um so it's to fall suddenly because of pressure or having no strength or support so in this case when earthquakes strike buildings may collapse and then rubble if you're talking about like after a building may collapse rubble refers to the piles of broken stones bricks etc that is left when a building falls down or is destroyed so again if you're just joining we're talking about uh earthquakes i'm giving you looking at articles talking about words that are related to that so all of the words are down in the description if you want to review and as i mentioned relating this to language skills because sorry i know it's a topic that it's um you know it's not it's sad what's going on it's unfortunate um but i think it is important because as i mentioned at the end i want to circle back and talk about an organization that is important to me that if you want to help support get involved we'll talk about that a little bit later but as we go through these so i gave you those first i think seven words and i keep an eye out as you we look through these other articles um there are two more you're likely going to see these words repeated because as i mentioned um if you're focused on one topic it's a good way to build your vocabulary because you you read one article about this topic in this case earthquakes you learn maybe a new word or two or three and then the more you read about it you'll see these words again the more you see these words and you continue reading and see them used in different contexts it's going to help you move these words up here into your active memory so that the next time you are talking about this uh this topic or you're reading about it you're more likely to remember um the vocabulary so this is a good way to build your vocabulary um and again i do think this is a very uh important topic all right uh so uh we have those words now let's look at the next one and i'll i'll add a few more words to our word list so the next one it's not really um it's not an article it's really kind of the opening i think there is a video um that's with this i'm not going to show the video but really what um i wanted to do let me change this so you guys can see it uh a bit better i wanted to look at um this information that's over on the side here so i'm going to move this and change this around a little where is it so let me just bring this down here this is the article right here this side part right here is what i want to look at they're talking about this drone drone footage shows damage near haiti earthquake epicenter as death toll tops 2100. so in the previous article it was a few days before the death toll was lower um i think as this uh go as the days go by they keep updating uh i want to talk about the the next one epicenter so it talked about quake quake is another word that instead of saying earthquake people might just um refer to it as a quake or the quake if you know what earthquake everybody's talking about so that is just a shortened word for it but epicenter so this is another word that i think would be really specific um talking about earthquakes there if you're reading about it um or having a discussion and people say well there was an earthquake somebody might ask well where was the epicenter or maybe they give this information and say well the epicenter was in this location he this is where it was it refers to the point um the point on the earth's surface directly above the earthquake would be the epicenter as i mentioned again this is a word just like magnitude which is going to be more specific uh talking about earthquakes it said in the article um if we go back because there's a couple more um that i wanted to highlight uh when looking at this so we talked about uh collapsed it says in the picture you can see i'm not going to play the video but you can see like that church the the church caved in um along with other homes this is a phrasal verb that you could use and this another phrase where it says locals are taking matters into their own hands this is also a phrase that i wanted to talk to you about um which is used in this context but it could be used in others as well so if we move back over to the vocabulary list to talk about the meaning and then i'll show you how the context is used so if something caves in it's similar to collapsed but it's a phrasal verb to cave in is when the roof uh or ceiling or structure it breaks it breaks and falls into the space below so you might say the ceiling caved in or the roof caved in i think one difference would be i think cave in you're going to talk about like something above you like the ceiling or the roof if you're talking about an entire building um you could use cave in it's probably more likely you would say that it just collapsed to take matters into their own hands is to deal with a problem yourself because the people who should have dealt with it have failed to do so so to bring it back in give you context in the that little small article we were talking about is saying the locals are taking matters into their own hands because at this point the the central government has not been able to provide support so they're dealing with the situation themselves they're taking matters into their own hands so those are some other phrases that again i mentioned some words are specific to earthquakes like epicenter or magnitude and some of those other phrases you might you could use in other contexts depending on the situation and depending on what you're talking about so let's continue again as i mentioned as we build this list you can check because even in that last article they used some words or phrases that we had already looked at in the previous article talking about um the the death toll talking about um well we'll get into it because there's a couple other words that i want to look at in the next article um so i saw in the the chat darby derbyshire luis haiti is your country i don't know if you're in haiti uh darby jean i hope uh i hope you are uh okay everything's all right um let's look at the last i have one more article and a few more words that i want to pick out and then i want to just highlight this organization um quickly so if we go back to our sites right here and here is the final article that i wanted to to show you guys again it's about it's the same topic it's talking about the earthquake in haiti and as i mentioned relating it to vocabulary relating it to language learning if you're reading about a topic like one topic it's a good way to build your vocabulary you're more likely to come across the same words so just looking at this um the title there's a few couple words that i wanted to highlight so tremor strike haitian city still reeling from quake um authorities say the official death toll has risen to 2189 following the earthquake in the country south so this article i'm trying to look uh what's the date so this article was from august 19th a few days ago again i will link these articles down below in the description if you would like to read the uh the entire article i'm only just reading the very beginning part of it so there's a couple things i want to talk about tremors um i've already mentioned it said like in that first article they say the earthquake struck i had mentioned that when talking about earthquakes this is a verb you might come across like an earthquake strikes i think strike is used when referring to something that happens suddenly such as an earthquake so it says tremors strike this haitian city still reeling i'm going to put that word down on the list from the quake i said quake is just a short invert of earthquake so in this article they say the death toll which we talked about this phrase has risen i imagine this number is still going to change um if you're looking at a recent article today um so let's uh look at a couple of those words and then we'll read just that first part of this so if i go back to our vocabulary list um and go down here so here's the the article that i'm looking at um tremor strike haitian city still reeling from quake tremors a tremor is just a slight earthquake so typically if there is a big earthquake again they said this was a magnitude 7.2 magnitude refers to the size how violent it was typically after the uh major the big earthquake there are tremors and there are smaller earthquakes uh that may occur and that's how you would refer to them as a tremor even if they're i'd say is a small earthquake and it's not a big one and you tell somebody like oh i felt an earthquake last night and they might ask well what what size was it a big earthquake if it's something smaller if it's a slight earthquake you could then say well they were just tremors there were only tremors um but tremors refers to a smaller slight earthquake reeling i said it said that the town was still reeling and if you say in that context using it uh like that it it really just means like very confused or shocked or unable to act so if you um experience something that uh like a horrible event a catastrophe such as a natural disaster and you could describe uh your the way you feel and you could tell somebody like yeah i'm still reeling from from this event i'm still confused and shocked and unable to act it could you could use it to describe um i think often instead of people like using it to describe an individual person which you can i think often reeling would be maybe used to describe like in this case like a community a country a group of people that are still shocked from some some event that happen and it's difficult to act let's move back to the article because i want to read where is it down here so if we move down right here so it says new tremors um new tremors have hit the southern haitian city of las que les que la case um a reuters witness said a few days after a devastating earthquake killed nearly 2 200 people across the caribbean nation and injured thousands more a police officer on patrol in laches on wednesday said there were no immediate reports of further deaths or damage in the region which is still reeling from the magnitude 7.2 earthquake on saturday morning so we talked about tremors those slight earthquakes strike or hit hit is another verb that you may use when when you may hear people use when talking about earthquakes uh devastating you may know this adjective i'm gonna add it to the list because i think when talking about natural disasters it's very common um and then as we mentioned um again it's talking about the region in this case i said like really a larger area maybe a community a group of people it's still reeling from this magnitude 7.2 earthquake and magnitude i think we've we've seen that in all of the articles we looked at really talking about the size and how violent it was so if we go back over to our list um just really this that last word that i wanted to add from this one devastating and devastated those are both adjectives so you have like that ing adjective to describe a situation or thing um and uh devastated that edie adjective to describe maybe the way you feel so like if i'm my feeling like i was devastated but in this case they're talking about the earthquake the earthquake was devastating um it caused a lot of damage and destruction so you could say it was a devastating earthquake so again this is the the list of vocabulary that i'm taking from these articles um all of it's down in the description along with the articles in case you would like to follow up and read more about what's going on or even just review those words that we were talking about now i want to highlight the organization that like i said i had worked with them um almost about 10 years ago i was looking for pictures like i think it's on another hard drive i had pictures of me there so this is part of like the let me make sure to see what you guys see like a bit of a memo nph it stands for um nuestros pequenos hermanos and i was working with them in the dominican republic it's a home um it's an orphanage so it's a home for for supporting children they have orphanages all like throughout latin america i believe there are about nine homes they have a home in the dominican republic which is where i was and they also have a home in haiti another thing they do in haiti which is so cool is that they run a hospital called saint damiens and here is like saint damian's hospital right here it's it's a pediatric hospital for children so they do st damien's the hospital does amazing work um in haiti they they've been there for gosh i want to say almost like maybe like two decades so they've been working in haiti for a long time this if i click on the about you can see i think a picture while i was in the dr i went to visit haiti i visited the home in haiti which is located in kenskoff which is outside of port-au-prince up in the mountains but here st damiens as i mentioned is a pediatric hospital there's a picture of saint damien's which is located in port-au-prince they have these um you can see the main hospital right here and then they have like tents down here for like visitors or doctors um there are doctors that will come from uh abroad internationally from the the us europe uh many other countries to support saint damiens to do some temporary work there again uh as i mentioned i think saint damiens does uh amazing work so this is the organization that i want to highlight if you see that donate button that is um where the the money is going to nph usa supports um these orphanages throughout latin america so this is this is really the reason why i i said we do these fundraiser lessons from time to time this was really why i wanted to go ahead and do this now i got this email maybe a couple a few days ago so i kind of wanted to try to spread the word talk about this again teach you a little bit of vocabulary because again this is a topic these words are relevant earthquakes are going to occur you're going to read about them you're going to listen uh to people talk about them and you may even also be having conversation so this is um what i got i'd link this down in the description um below again if you want to read a little bit more about nph what they do in haiti or in general i would encourage you to to do so it's always good to read about well read in english but i think it's good to read about organizations that are doing good work um because i know a lot of the the the articles that we talked about it's a horrible thing that happened um so of course it's not positive news or anything but i'd still i've linked those below

i would encourage you guys to to also go ahead keep reading about this as well so this is nph um i'm gonna go back over here uh again i appreciate you guys joining me today um i know this was a lot a lot more of a serious topic um but i'll i'll leave all that information down below there the vocabulary that we talked about those three articles um i'll link those i've also linked um nph the home page if you want to read more about that or even saint damian's if you want to learn a little bit more about what that hospital is doing in haiti and of course there's that donate button that you may see around you if you want to support and support nph what they do they do they do really great work i wanted to show some pictures i mentioned i thought i think they were they must be on another hard drive because i had pictures when i visited saint damien's pictures i had a lot of pictures from the dominican republic but i don't have them on this computer uh right now so um somebody says ct i push the donate button but it's not working uh i don't know if maybe refresh it we cause we made uh like as part when we do this we uh my wife and i we make a 50 donation

i think she was able to do it so i don't know maybe if you want to try to refresh it and and do it if that button's not working if you still want to there there i've linked it down below in the description um if you want to click on that link and you could do it directly that way instead of doing it through youtube but i really appreciate you guys again listening um and joining me today sorry i was not able to engage a bit more in the chat um oh rod how are you good to see you um but thank you guys for being here thank you rod thanks lolly um uh darby thanks for joining me ct i appreciate it um sleepwalker to kyo um thank you for being here and and all the the rest of you um miriam just trying to give some some quick shout outs um jennifer as we go there uh bamini good to see you bamini um thank you guys for joining me hope that you uh have a great week i know this is a random lesson that i do on sundays my schedule is changing a little bit there the next video lesson is going to come out on thursday which is a little different and then i'll see i'm going to try to get back on a normal routine a normal schedule posting new lessons and doing these live lessons as well i hope that you learned something new today i hope you can read those articles check out uh nph they do phenomenal work uh throughout latin america it's a great organization um and of course uh announcement anonymous donate awesome awesome thank you uh anonymous i don't know i guess it says anonymous uh they were able to get that working awesome i really appreciate that um so yeah this is great this is one way that i think i want to start using the channel more and more we started this last year when something happens to talk about it again this is a channel for learning english relate it back to that which is why i do these reading vocabulary lessons and then highlight in organization so this is something that i want to continue doing throughout the year so of course we will do this again thank you guys have a wonderful week please like share comment if you can't make a financial donation and completely understand but if you like the video comment share the lesson create that engagement so we can spread it uh as far as we can thank you guys um and i will see you in a lesson very very soon so long

Reading + Vocabulary Lesson | HELP FIGHT HUNGER

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson thank you guys so much for joining me my name is wes this is interactive english and if this is your first time hear from you uh this if this is your first time here please let me know write to me in the comments write to me in the chat love hearing from new people but uh it's all the channels all about trying to help you practice and improve your english and today is going to be it's a reading plus vocabulary lesson and what we're going to do is we're going to um look at a topic and we're going to look at some different articles related to that topic and i'm going to highlight some important and useful words that i think you should know that are helpful in understanding this topic so it's a way of using reading to build your vocabulary and i think it's very useful that you can do this with anything if you are reading about a certain topic it's likely that you're going to come across many of the same words so that's why i think it's a great way to build your vocabulary because the more you see words the more that you're likely to remember the meaning and just put that up here in your active memory so that's what this lesson is all about um and it's also about uh i think i mentioned before that it's the end of the year with these lessons what we tried to do is talk about a charity or an organization that we think is doing a good thing and we really want to highlight that we're going to make a donation some of you may see the donate button uh around on the page and what i'm going to do is later on i'm going to talk about this site right here why hunger this is the organization that we're going to highlight today they do a lot of great work relating to the fighting fighting hunger in the us and around the world and i'm going to circle back to that a little later but there's a link down in the description uh which if you want to read a little bit more about why hunger and there's also going to be a link to all of the articles that we talk about in this lesson as well as the vocabulary list that we're going to put together i know that i've kind of opened up with a lot right now but that's what's going to happen in this lesson and now i want to give some shout outs some recognitions to all of you uh some of you that have joined me great to see uh so many members and patrons you guys make this all possible hello uh lale takayo um uh maggie good to see you uh welcome john angela um abdulrasheed samir martha so many so many familiar faces mina uh if you guys have some questions try to write to me in the chat i'm going to try to keep an eye on the chat but again i'm going to be flipping back and forth between reading these articles putting together the vocabulary list that it's a it's a it's a lot to keep up with but i will try to keep an eye on the chat to see what's going on in there so you guys feel free to keep the conversation going today is a topic um that i think is very important i think we can all agree uh on this and that is about fighting hunger and it's not something um i i think this is an issue that many countries face all over the world especially now because of the global pandemic it's i think the issue has become even more serious and more severe and if you're reading an article about this uh about fighting hunger about this crisis or if you're listening to a news report or a podcast it's likely that you're going to come across an or hear some specific vocabulary words or specific phrases and that's kind of what i wanted to point out in this lesson so let's just go ahead and look at the the first site that we're going to do and i'm not going to read the entire article i'm just going to read a little bit and then kind of go over and put these words in our vocabulary list so the first one is this it says the un warns of an imp of an impending famine with millions in danger of starvation so just looking at that title there's two words that i want to highlight if you're talking about fighting hunger and the crisis that um that is fighting hunger un warns of an impending famine with millions in danger of starvation let's look at famine um famine and starvation those are two words that i think are that are important to know what they mean so if we go over to our vocabulary list you guys can see here that uh a famine this is just in the title it's a situation in which there's not enough food for a great number of people and a famine can happen for for different reasons it could happen because of a natural disaster it could happen because of a war but that's what it means it's this it's a situation a terrible situation in which there's not enough food starvation is kind of the the result of a famine so this is the state oops let me highlight it it's the state of having why won't this highlight i'm just going to do this the state of having no food for a long period so a result of famine could be starvation you have no food for a long period of time so those are two words right from the beginning that i think are important to understand when looking at some of these or talking about this topic so let's go back to the article right here it says i'm just going to read some of it again i will link these articles down below and somebody asked mustafa means impending means imminent are about to happen yes that's correct so if somebody says it's an impending famine it it basically means yes this is likely going to occur now it's going to happen um and this is recent this is as of november so it's kind of um in related to the virus and everything that's going on because of that so it says that um i'll read it again you can hear like again my pronunciation uh just good for your listening uh i'm not going to read all of it but just some of it so it says that the numbers are staggering as reflected in the ongoing coronavirus pandemic which has triggered a new round of food shortages famine and starvation according to the rome based world food program 690 million people who do not have people do not have enough to eat while 130 million additional people risk being pushed to the brink of starvation by the end of the year hunger is an outrage in a world of plenty an empty stomach is a gaping hole in the heart of society secretary general antonio guterres said last week pointing out that famine is looming in several countries striking a personal note guterres said he could never have imagined that hunger would rise again during his time in office as secretary general

the wfp singled out 10 countries with the worst food crisis in 2019 yemen congo afghanistan venezuela ethiopia and south sudan syria sudan nigeria and haiti the list is expected to increase by the end of the year so they're referring to the the un secretary general um in this article that's his quote but let's look at um let's look at some of the words that we've we talked about famine and starvation i want to look at this word right here shortage and often people may talk about a food shortage we're going to add that he talks about people being pushed to the brink of starvation so we you we talked about starvation is having no food for a long period of time i want to look at that expression the brink of starvation as well as saying that something is looming so in this case they're saying that famine is looming so we'll go back to our vocabulary list which again i'm going to throw these words down below in the comments are in the description part so you can see that a food shortage is just a situation in which there's not enough food if you have a shortage of something it just means you don't have enough in this case not enough food it's a food shortage that's a common phrase when talking about fighting hunger or the crisis that's going on the brink of something remember in the article it said pushing people to the brink of starvation it refers to the point where something new or a situation is about to begin in this case the situation is starvation that it's about to happen and the because of this it's pushing people to the brink um to the point where starvation may occur so that's what that phrase means and remember loom to loom is uh it's when something appears that is large and frightening and you may hear it used in the context like you could say you see dark clouds and you say oh those clouds are looming in the sky that they are large they're frightening they're looming in this case the article talked about the that famine is looming famine is the situation there's not enough uh food for many people it's looming it kind of means that it's it's there people can see it it's large it's frightening so you could use it in that context all right so again those are some very important words to to know like arya asked oh what does starvation mean that's uh up there on the food the the vocabulary list so you're not having food for a long period of time um abraham asked is it on similar like to on the horizon um yeah looming in on the horizon could be uh something you could say something's looming something's on the horizon that same meaning and that it's there but different in that something is looming it's frightening um so if you talk about something being on the horizon it could be something that's good but if something is looming it's typically uh something that is bad it's frightening it's not good uh all right excellent oh i appreciate you guys in the comments with the assist all right helping each other out that's perfect um excellent thank you lolly so um let's look at our next article so we've we've talked about those words right here and again as we look at some of these other articles you will see some of these same words and that's why again reading is so useful for building your vocabulary if you can take a topic learn some words about that topic and then as you keep reading about it you're going to see those words again and again and again and they'll they'll just become a part of your vocabulary so the next article we're going to look at is this one right here let me zoom to the top let me see is that can you guys see this so the title is in multiple countries alarm over hunger crisis rings louder crisis is a word that um i think we talked about in a previous lesson it's just talking about a really really bad situation that this is a crisis it's a noun um so the hunger crisis is this uh bad situation where hunger exists so that is the title of the story and this is more related to i think um the world uh in general so let's again i'm just gonna read parts of it but i will link it down below in case you guys are want to read and continue reading these i always would encourage you guys to read if you just if you're just joining us we're talking about reading and building vocabulary and we're getting ready to look at this article right here so it says um this is in yemen the twin baby boys lay on a bed of woven palm leaves in a remote camp for displaced people in yemen's north their collarbones and ribs visible they cried loudly twisting as if in pain as if in pain not from disease but from the hunger gnawing away at them here united nation officials is increasingly dire warnings that a hunger crisis is growing around the world are becoming reality un agencies have warned that some 250 million people in 20 countries are threatened with sharply surging malnutrition and even famine in coming months the u.n humanitarian office this week released 100 million dollars in emergency funding to seven countries most at risk of famine yemen afghanistan south sudan ethiopia nigeria congo um and bukina fusau so this is the situation it it starts by referring to this situation right here with these um these two uh baby boys and the words that i kind of want to pick out um to highlight here at the beginning it's talking about this is a remote area um what that means is just kind of an isolated area that's unknown but really i want to look at this knowing to not i want to teach you what that means it talks about these un officials are giving a dire warning dire is another word that i think is very common if you're talking about any crisis or bad situation and another word that i had in here was malnutrition that surging malnutrition so let's go over to our vocabulary list have a look at those words and then if we need to jump back we will so again i know sorry i uh i know that this topic like talking about hunger and fighting hunger it's definitely a bit of a downer but i want to again use this situation to highlight we're going to highlight the charity and organization that is doing some good which is something to be a little more positive about so let's look at these words um it's talking about to gnaw this is a verb and you might follow it with the preposition away to gnaw away at something it's talking about biting or chewing repeatedly using making a whole in this case people might use it if they're hungry if there is starvation um they refer to like something is gnawing away at my stomach it's almost like saying that you're so hungry it's like your stomach is eating itself and it's your knowing hunger is the way it was used in the article so it's a way of kind of describing how serious the situation is that it's not just hunger it's really extreme it's really serious like a gnawing hunger that it's like eating away at you and people might use this also in other contexts as well um not really to refer to actually biting or chewing but if something is like really bothering you you could say that it's it's gnawing away at you if it's really bothering you maybe you feel guilty about something that's another context in which this this verb is used dire remember the in the article it said the un officials is warning of a dire uh this dire warnings um and if you say something is dire it just means very serious very extreme um again it's another word another adjective that i think is very common when talking about a crisis a very serious situation speaking about hunger malnutrition it's talked about surging malnutrition surging means that something is increasing becoming more and malnutrition refers to like physical weakness or or just bad health because there's a lack of food malnutrition and then humanitarian it's talking about the the un or this humanitarian organization and if somebody humanitarian um is an adjective it means that it's involved in improving people's lives or reducing suffering so whatever crisis it may be whether it's environmental hunger humanitarian again this is another very common word that you would read when when uh researching these topics or reading about these topics or listening to them so i hope that some of these words are new for you guys as well so let's move on to the next one and this is an article that's taking place the first two were referring to the situation um around the world this one specifically happening um this is the u.s i'm from the united states uh so i i do end up watching more news from the us or read about it because i'm from there and it's talking about the current hunger crisis in the u.s showing photos uh it says that subtitle uh food banks across the country have seen a staggering uptick in need since the onset of the pandemic so let's go down and there's a picture of like a food bank is where if people are homeless or they're uh they're suffering the from hunger they um they can go there and pick up some food some food that people will give out so let's read i'll read some of it again and then i'll pick out just a couple of words so that we'll add to our vocabulary list it says among the pandemics many dire effects there's that word dire again very serious it's making food insecurity in the us much worse in the past america's food banks have completely have been completely overwhelmed by demand uh in cities like pittsburgh san antonio and phoenix residents have lined up for hours at food banks attempt to address the massive influx of need some organizations have been forced to turn people away while others are struggling to maintain the supplies necessary to keep up images of lines at food pickup points underscore how devastating the economic fallout from this pandemic has been these photos are visible a line of long-standing issue um in one of the richest countries on earth millions go hungry each day so let's look at some words from this article again i told you that as you read about these topics that are the same you're going to come across similar words like dire we just talked about that but i want to talk about food insecurity if we're talking about hunger specifically this is a word a phrase that you may hear food insecurity i also want to talk about this massive influx of need an influx of something and that at this point it's difficult people are just trying to keep up we'll look at that phrasal verb as well as economic fallout so those are words that uh i want to highlight so let's go over to our vocabulary list um so we can have a look at these so again we talked about i just showed you or i just highlighted food insecurity if you're talking about fighting hunger and this crisis food insecurity refers to the fact that a person or family is not always able to get enough food so it's a little different it's it's different than starvation which is you have a long period of no food food insecurity is kind of like well you you have some food but maybe next week you don't know if you'll have any food or not that you may not know that is what food insecurity is talking about if something is completely overwhelmed that's a very common collocation it means it's just too much to too much to deal with so in this situation because of the pandemic many people losing their jobs these food banks where people can go get food these food banks have been completely overwhelmed and it's just too much there's too many people and it sucks about uh in the article or referred to a massive influx of need if we're talking about an influx of something in this case an influx of need it just means that a large amount of need need is referring to like the the food that people need a large amount of need arriving at the same time so if you have an influx of something it's really talking about a large amount at the same time and you're going to follow this word you would refer to an influx of something in this case an influx of need and then keep up if it's a phrasal verb and it means that you're able to deal with something that is changing fast and in the article it talked about that it's they may not be able to keep up that it's too difficult the other two words from this article it referred to uh things being devastating this the impact being devastating which devastating is i think a very common word it means that that causes a lot of damage and then the phrase the economic fallout so this is another collocation people may talk about the echo a fallout in this case they're referring to an economic fallout and it refers to the unpleasant results of the economy becoming worse so a fallout is just the the unpleasant results of something but typically an adjective may come before that in this case you're talking about the economic fallout so it's the results of the economy becoming worse so again um i'm sorry that i know that these articles it's not uh it's not something that is pleasant to read about it's difficult but i think it's something that's very important that i think people should read about because hopefully it might inspire um not just you but everyone to kind of take action and one organization one organization that is taking action is this one right here why hunger which is the organization um that we wanted to highlight in this lesson that we think is doing a great job um fighting hunger and i hope that uh i i hope that you guys will go check it out again there's a link down in the description i'm going to tell you a little bit about it and i have a couple of words we're going to add some more words to our vocabulary list so why hunger what they do um again they're fighting hunger i'm just going to read this part right here about their approach it says we don't just ask why we find solutions to hunger that transform and last our answer is to build the power with grassroots initiatives that nourish people and enrich the communities so those are two words that i want they're talking about grassroots initiatives and what that really means is like working at the local level that nourish people so if we go back to our vocabulary list i've added those two to the list right here from the y hunger website it's talking about grassroots initiatives at the local level ordinary people working in an organization and they work to provide to nourish people provide people with food in order to keep them healthy nourish is another word that i think is very common that's related to fighting hunger and and dealing with this crisis um nourish so if we go back uh and look at this so this is an organization that was actually you may hear about it because of music it was co-founded by and i didn't know this uh before it was co-founded by harry chapman who was a famous singer from a long time ago he wrote a uh and sang a very famous song cats in the cradle uh you can look up that song i'm not gonna sing it for you i'm a terrible singer uh but he is one of the co-founders of this organization he passed away a while back but he was a very famous musician and that's why they do these events and they'll do concerts and they get other famous musicians to raise money for this cause in order to fight hunger so again i'll leave a link in the description there's a donate button if you would like to get involved make a donation we're going to make a donation to why hunger um as part of what we wanted to do at the end of the year now which is kind of just there's so many bad things going on we wanted to we ended up talking about those bad things but then at the end trying to highlight an organization that's doing a good thing um and and really getting people hopefully getting people to think about how they can get involved why we should get involved and not only that part of the reason for doing these lessons is that hopefully you'll continue reading about this and other people will continue reading about fighting hunger we've talked about immigration last week i talked about protecting the environment because the more we read about this the more we learn about it i think that is just better for everyone because that makes us want to well make the right changes so i hope that you learned some new words from this lesson links to the articles are down below the words from the vocabulary list are down in the description if you would like to review and um again if you want to check out why hunger there's a link to there as well so uh i hope it was useful thank you guys so much for joining me let me give some quick shout outs uh at the end uh hello nekla santosh hello um fabio jesus uh he says is nourish the same as nurture um yeah like again you have like these words uh they're very similar nourish i think you're referring to food and keeping somebody healthy nourish nurture i almost think is like taking care of someone so in order to help them grow so the words are a little similar we might use them in different ways when i think of nourishment specifically i think of somebody getting food when i think of nurturing somebody um

i think of not just food but taking care of someone or something uh protecting them there's a little more that would uh go into it uh thank you lolly for joining me always great to see you uh mustafa angela abdulrasheed uh maggie thank you guys uh just reading some comments uh mina i'm glad it was very helpful uh again re keep reading about these uh key like articles like this you'll come across some of that same vocabulary it's a great way to continue building your vocabulary um in the beginning let's unresolve situated economy safely or failing out and yeah i know i know it's uh i really i'm hopeful and i'm optimistic for 2021. i know all of us are at this point uh and i want to try to stay optimistic for 2021 and that things will we've we've things will just keep getting better i hope um and we will i'm gonna do from time to time uh we will do more articles like our more lessons like this where we will tip pick a charity that we want to highlight pick a topic that's involved with that charity we'll look at some articles build your vocabulary and then make a donation thank you guys um uh nekla rosa linda thanks for being here i'm nutty uh karina uh where is it just ryan to read uh santosh glad you like the lessons uh uh takayo thank you for joining uh we'll take uh join the action excellent uh boutique uh elizabeth angela i know that i like next week i'm gonna take a little break i know i'm dragging this on a little bit right now um we're gonna take a next saturday there's not going to be a live lesson i haven't decided whether i'll put out some other type of lesson or some other type of announcement because i do have an announcement coming up very soon that i will share with all of you guys stay tuned but uh there's not going to be a live lesson but that's kind of this is how we wanted to end the year focusing on these different charities um and do these lessons with reading and vocabulary and we will do more like this in the future so this uh yeah this will be uh let me look at a calendar uh this will be the last live lesson of 2020 so i really just want to give all of you really just say thank you thank you for joining me thank you for tuning in thank you for participating in these lessons uh and answering questions asking questions uh helping each other out it really uh it really means a lot to me and i hope that it means a lot to you and that these lessons are helpful so thank you guys so much for being here um i i wish you all the best i know the year is ending and i think many of us are very happy about that at this point because it has been a very rough year look forward to 2021 seeing you guys uh there and yes that that's when i will see you guys in the next live lesson i will see you guys in 2021 enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will see you

Reading + Vocabulary Lesson | Mental Health

hello and welcome to today's lesson my name is wes this is interactive english and if in case this is your first time watching one of uh the interactive english videos the channel is all about trying to help you improve your english skills in a variety of ways vocabulary pronunciation grammar today is a lesson that really is about using reading to build your vocabulary so it's kind of both about reading and vocabulary and how you can actually do this on your own and that's a great way to build your vocabulary is with reading so i do want to well just give a quick hello to some of you who are with me right now in the chat so many familiar faces uh great to see you lali hello uh good to see you uh let's see naima angela sleepwalker teresa how are you excellent you're everywhere awesome uh maya takayo hello

nicholas eduardo um esther olivia i will try to keep an eye on the chat as i'm going through this but with there's a lot of windows that i have open right now um when i do these lessons and kind of switch back and forth between articles to the vocabulary list uh so i'll try to keep my eye on the chat a little bit but today's topic is a very important topic it's a very serious topic and we're going to be discussing mental health and the first thing that i want to say is kind of obviously i am an english teacher i am not a mental health expert and we're going to be talking i'm going to be looking at some articles that are related to mental health of course this is something that is very serious it's something that again happens all over the world and if if somebody out there thinks that um they they may be going through something some issue with mental health obviously i would encourage you to try to call somebody talk to somebody um a professional about that so the the reason why i'm doing these lessons right now give you a couple reasons we're talking about mental health is first to discuss something that is well relevant and that's happening in the world today typically a current event this is something that i think many people go through and experience the second reason is to highlight an organization uh that we feel is doing great work in trying to help out and really kind of shine a light on that organization make uh we're going to make a 50 donation some of you may see that fundraising button around there if you want to make a donation i'm going to be talking about the jed foundation and i will discuss that a little bit later on and then the third reason is like i said is to help you build your vocabulary because one great way to do that is to read articles that may be related to the same topic so i told you that today we're talking about mental health all of the articles that we're going to look at are related to mental health and as we go through the article i'm going to pick out some words that i think are a little more common that are a little more useful if you are reading about this or you're having a conversation about it and you'll see you should see that the more articles you look at you tend to come across the same words and as you continue to do this and you come across those same words the more likely you are to remember the meaning of that word if you want to use it in the future and that's what i mean when i say really building your vocabulary and doing so effectively so that you're not just forgetting the information so let's start out with uh this i'm going to start out with our first article all of these articles too are related to mental health during the time of covid because with uh the coronavirus with the pandemic there have been lockdowns all of us have been a lot more well in our homes it hasn't been normal and i think because during this time there have been some more issues with uh mental health some more challenges and that's kind of what these articles are looking at so let's look at the first one this is the first article that we're going to look at is kind of starting with children and then kind of moving into adults and it says keep paying attention to your kids mental health in this pandemic because i think uh you know it's definitely been very very different for children especially they're trying to go to school and all of these changes have been taking place uh before i pick out some vocabulary words i want to look at this first part right down here and this is what i'm reading right here uh if you can see it says keep a watchful eye on kids right now experts say the national suicide prevention lifeline number b the one to campaign shares five steps every person can take to help prevent suicide in a person of any age so there are a few words in there that i would like to talk about that i think are very relevant to this conversation so this is when let's move over to the vocabulary list that i've already created with this lesson and you can see right here that this is the title of the first article we're just getting ready to look at keep paying attention to your kids mental health in the pandemic so there were a few uh words right there in that short little first part that i read to keep a watchful eye to keep an eye on someone it just means you're paying attention to them it's a very i think it's a very common phrase in this case they say keep a watchful eye if you are watchful that's an adjective it means you're really well you're really watching somebody you're focused on this um and that that's a good expression you want to keep a watchful eye um and looking for signs maybe that somebody might be struggling with mental health so this is a good phrase to know prevent to prevent something is to stop something from from happening or from occurring and again this is another good verb to use and then it talks about suicide suicide would be the act of killing yourself intentionally one thing this is a noun one thing i do want to say about this word if we're talking about suicide people might often use it with the verb commit to commit suicide i've heard people try to use it as a verb like to suicide i think grammatically you can use it it's not very common in this case again in the article that i just read they are talking about trying to prevent suicide but if something if this happens uh you would use it with the verb commit so there was a quite a few words in just that first part that uh i was talking about and again these are words that you will see later on as we look at some of these other articles so let me just look at let's just look at this first part right here it says

i'll read it and you guys can just follow along for nearly a year most of our children have been navigating the new difficult norm normal social isolation deeply stressed parents the effects of financial and uncertainty school from home and from wi-fi equipped school buses if they don't have internet while kova 19 itself has largely been sparing of children's physical health studies have shown it has taken a toll on their mental health associated with an increase in suicide-related behaviors experts say i'll just carry on i'm not going to read the whole article just the first part of it suicide was the second leading cause of death among children of adolescence ages 10 to 19 in the united states as of 2018 before the pandemic struck those suicide attempts and ideation were consistently higher in 2020 a recent publication peer-reviewed article in journal pediatrics found some increases basically what the article goes on to say is that they found that where the pandemic was hitting the areas where it hit the most that children were struggling um the most with their mental health so that's kind of the comparison that it was making there was another word that i want to talk about so again even in this article they mentioned suicide again isolation social isolation and that was the other word that i put on our vocabulary list isolation is just talking about being alone and i think that when you talk about maybe people dealing with mental health people might feel like they are isolated so i just used it in a different context because um well different part of speech isolation is a noun and in the article they talk about social isolation social means that you are with other people but during this time um we we a lot of us have experienced some social isolation so these are the first four words um that i wanted to look at and again we're going to keep adding to the list i will also say that i'm going to if you want to continue reading some of these articles down in the description i'm going to leave a link to the articles as well as a list of all of these vocabulary words so that you have them in case you would like to review um let's look at the next part right here so the next one that i have so i haven't been able to look at the chat uh just yet the next article that i wanted to take a look at was this one right here it's talking about mental health difficulties on the rise let's see make sure you guys can see this um okay so this is kind of talking about this starts out talking about the experience of this one person uh claire brennan tillberg's eleven-year-old daughter has been hospitalized twice in recent months after sharing that she was having suicidal thoughts the massachusetts girl has autism depression and anxiety although her daughter has been hospitalized before tillberg said things worsened when the pandemic hit her school went online and she could no longer meet with counselors in person suddenly the structure and support that um that helped many children keep a sense of normalcy work gone so there's a few words just in those first two paragraphs that i want to look at they were talking about the experience of um this one woman's daughter that had been hospital twice suicidal this again is the part of speech it's now used as an adjective i told you that suicide would be intentionally killing oneself as the noun suicidal as an adjective and here when you talk about um just mental health there's a few words right here autism depression and anxiety i want to look at and i've added those to our vocabulary list so again some of these words may be familiar for you and that's great if you already know some of them uh if not it's always good to review as well so if you're referring to autism that is a brain condition that affects the development or of social or communication skills it's something that does affect many children and adults around the world depression is talking about the state or feeling of being very unhappy and without hope for the future so often you might hear people use this as an adjective if somebody says that they feel a little depressed they're a little sad they feel a little hopeless if you're talking about more of maybe somebody who is enduring this constant state they may use it more as a noun and they would say somebody uh maybe suffers from depression or they're going through depression and anxiety is something that i feel like all of us probably get at one time or another this feeling of anxiety which is just nervousness or worry so let's go back over to the article those are the i'm going to go through this a little at a time as we read the article and we'll continue right here so it says that again that when classes moved online in this one person's experience the help that they were getting was gone oh there was one more word that uh i wanted to look at in here it was uh talking about counselors i also added that to the list because it said that the help they were getting for example like school counselors it was no longer there i did add that to the vocabulary list counselors is talking about um somebody who is trained uh to listen and give advice to other people so typically at schools uh there are people who are trained to listen to students if they have problems worries concerns maybe they might be going through some anxiety or depression and they would listen to the students and they would give advice and they would be school counselors let's continue and with the article it says sorry here we go um so it says they were gone it says studies have shown that depression increases during teen years one out of every 13 high school students has attempted suicide and at least half of children with mental illness do not get treatment when schools closed across the u.s in mid-march in 2020 it separated students from other students along with advisors teachers and other adults at school additionally for many students school was the only place to get mental health services so this was a big challenge this was an issue that many students our children were having to endure the other again looking at some of these words that here talked about again it mentions depression that was in it increases during the teen years um talking about students that do try to commit suicide and also uh that the where it says suicide at least half of the children with mental health illness do not get treatment this is another word that i wanted to highlight and put on our vocabulary list whoops sorry about that was down here so if we're talking about treatment in general it would be like the use of drugs exercise therapy to improve the condition of an ill or injured person so treatments a very broad term that you could use to talk about well somebody who's sick they may go see a doctor and they receive treatment and in that case it might be some drugs or medicine in this case i think when you're talking about mental health uh i think a lot of the articles especially that we're looking at today it would refer more to therapy that they would go see somebody and talk to somebody who is like a counselor they would listen to them they would give advice and that's actually another word that we will talk about in just a moment in the next article so again these the first two articles were talking about the more students in in children the next article is right here i have four uh articles today so it's it's quite a bit this says nearly half of u.s workers suffer from mental health issues since covid 19 pandemic uh hit report finds of course as you can see from these articles a lot of it is focused around um they're from the united states which again i think is i think people around the world are experiencing this whether you're talking about school children in the united states or school children in other countries because the experience during the pandemic i think for many people has been similar and same with work but uh these articles right here are are just talking about uh are really referring to things that are happening in the united states so this article nearly half of u.s

workers suffer from mental health i just want to look at a few things and add to our vocabulary list so it says again i'll read it you can just follow along if you're stressed out anxious or feeling lonely you are not alone nearly half of american workers have been suffering from mental health issues since the covid 19 pandemic began at a significant cost to their well-being and potentially to their employers as bottom line there has been a significant jump in full-time u.s workers dealing with mental health issues in the last 12 months according to a report from the portland oregon based insurance company the standard um i want to look at where is it uh here it keep going sorry i lost the place here about 46 percent um of the more than 1 400 workers surveyed at the end of last year reported that they were struggling with mental health issues compared to 39 percent a year earlier and more than half of workers 55 percent said a mental health issue has affected them more since the pandemic began yet many may not know where to turn for help the stigma of mental illness therapy and mental health at work can keep many employers from using resources said dr george james a licensed marriage and family therapist and member of the cnbc financial wellness council so it has to be driven encouraged and supported from the top down so let's look at a few of the words from this that i added again we talked about anxiety the noun your feeling of worry here we come across the word again but they're using it as an adjective you feel anxious one word that uh i want to talk about was well-being all right i've added that to the vocabulary list it's talking about people have well there's been a significant cost during the pandemic to everyone's well-being another word they're talking about the stigma of mental illness and then therapy and therapist so let's go over to the vocabulary list and have a look at those words and i'll refer how they were used in the article so oh i forgot yes to suffer suffer is a i think another common verb when talking about somebody who's uh struggling with mental illness or again it can be used in a variety of contexts if somebody's perhaps talking about like medicine medical field but to suffer is to experience physical or mental pain again the articles that we're looking at would really refer to that mental pain well-being as i pointed out in the article it was saying that um people's well-being was suffering that the state of happiness or just our feeling of happiness our our general well-being and that last one it talked about stigma it said that there was uh are there any yes the last two it said the stigma of mental health so this is a word stigma is talking about a strong feeling of disapproval that most people in society have about something so when i think you talk about like there it could be used in a variety of ways but something that in society that maybe they don't approve of and you'd say there's a stigma on this thing it's not a good thing so just to give you another example of what stigma might mean think about um a long time ago in some countries they may think that marrying a foreigner from another country they say oh like we disapprove of that society would disapprove and you could say there is a stigma on international marriages that society disapproves of it and you could say there's a stigma on this thing and again i think when it comes to stigmas

i think just in general as societies become more open-minded as societies become more tolerant people in general these stigmas start to go away and i think that's that's a good thing so it's talking in the article it mentioned the stigma on on mental health that if somebody is suffering from mental health um maybe they worry about calling somebody or trying to contact a therapist because they worry about what their friends might think and that there's a stigma on this and it talked about the i mentioned it before therapy is treatment that helps someone feel better and you would typically use this with the verb get you get therapy and the person that you would see if you're talking about the person is a therapist someone whose job it is to treat a particular type of mental um or physical illness one thing i want to point out in case some of you might be wondering well what is there a difference between counselor and a therapist i would say that in just my view like i was trying to look this up the way it was explained um like counseling is more of a broad topic and you could say that therapy might fall under it so counseling i think generally deals with more listening and giving advice therapy would be more of a specific um thing you're working on and you would help someone could be physical or mental there there's physical therapy if you get injured or if you are suffering from a mental illness you could go see a therapist that might work with people who suffer from depression or who deal with anxiety high levels of anxiety and you would see a therapist specific for that uh let's continue i have one more article that i want to look at and then i want to highlight today's organization that do they do good work i i have been kind of uh glancing uh at the chat sorry i know you guys are kind of talking with each other that's great uh if you have questions if you want to ask each other i love it when people are able to help help one another with like certain words if you don't know what they mean so i have one more article that i want to show you and then we're gonna take one more look at the vocabulary list so here's the last article and let me make sure that you guys can see this let me change this a little bit okay and then i'm gonna whoops sorry about that i'm going to try to move over here maybe this will help so it's talking about i think a lot more people have been going to see mental health professionals so this article is looking at well mental health professionals are the ones taking care of us who's taking care of them and in this article says usa today spoke with half a dozen mental health workers who told us the pandemic has been the most challenging year of their professional lives they're seeing probably a lot more people so again i'll read this you can follow along and then we'll add a couple of words to our list when a world in pen um when a world and pandemic shut down the mental health professionals did not they kept working many more than ever counseling patients on how to survive something they'd never seen before something they feared themselves they counseled while the virus ravaged their neighborhoods with their children in the background through months of racial unrest and a presidential election that was the most polarizing in many of our lifetime this has without a doubt been one of the toughest years of my life let alone my career said michael mendel a licensed clinical professional counselor who works with adults and adolescents adolescence is like younger children usa today spoke with a half dozen mental health workers who told us the pandemic has been the most challenging year of their professional lives every one of them said they'd experience symptoms of burnout some are in therapy themselves but most are not these professionals are helping their patients cope with stress anxiety and sometimes unimaginable loss while also managing their own suffering many have taken on heavier caseloads with more patients experiencing trauma suicidal ideation most have transitioned to telehealth which made therapy possible during the pandemic but reduce the intimacy many thera therapists count on to connect let's go back and look at some um the things from this article some other words again even words that we talked about i told you that counselors are the people that would listen and give advice in this case they're talking about counseling people you could use this as a verb to counsel someone to actually give them advice to listen and give them advice so a lot of i think in this article in all of these articles we're coming across the same words but they may be using it as a different part of speech like a noun or an adjective so again they're using it as a noun they counseled these these people these health professionals counseled the people during this time of the pandemic this is not like it's talking about the election was polarizing if you don't know what that means it means it's very divided it was a very divided election um right here again this gentleman talks about he is a counselor and the other one uh i wanted to highlight i didn't add this to the list but it's talking about burnout symptoms of burnout burnout is when you basically just you're you're overworked and you just get too tired and you can't continue symptoms is a word that i wanted to add because i think it's useful when talking about mental health but also again it's something that you might hear being used medically your doctor might mention that so symptoms if we go over to the vocabulary list here it is oh wait i did not add them uh sorry maybe i could add it uh in just a moment because i had another question uh symptoms are the things that maybe identify that something is going on and somebody might have symptoms that tell you something uh is wrong or a problem exists the the last paragraph had some of the words that i wanted to look at said these professionals are helping patients cope uh with these things we talked stress anxiety we talked about an unimaginable loss and so patience it's talking about they're helping their patients cope with these things so if we go over to our list patients uh again is a very it's it's a common word that you might also hear people will use like doctors doctors have patients dentists have patients uh therapists have patients and these are people who are receiving medical care in some way could be physically mentally and they are patients to cope with something this is a verb it means to deal successfully with the situation so in this case they're trying to help their patients cope with these issues of stress they're trying to help them cope with anxiety so that they can deal with it successfully another word if i go back over to the article again it's talking about managing their own suffering i pointed out before that verb to suffer to um you are where is it you are experiencing some sort of pain mental or physical and trauma is the other word um that i wanted to point out in this article so if we go back over to our vocabulary list right down here at the bottom trauma is referring to a severe emotional shock that is caused by some upsetting experience some experience is very upsetting and it causes shock in this case like i said the the upsetting experience is really dealing with the the covid the pandemic and the thing everything else that you have to deal with because of that the isolation the social iso isolation that they talked about in one of the previous articles some of you asked about uh the word ideation one of my favorite sites just to show you guys if you want to use um an online dictionary i typically prefer to use uh cambridge i i think that the meanings that when when you put in the word that you want to look up i think cambridge really does a good job of trying to use simple language so that it's a little easier to understand so they talk about suicide ideation is basically i think i saw that in the chat before um referring to the activity forming uh the activity of forming ideas in the mind so i think before it was talking about in the both of the articles like suicidal ideation kind of like that idea of suicide starting to possibly form in some people's minds that's what uh it's referring to so those were the articles again if you want to read more about those articles i've linked them down in the description i've also included the vocabulary from this lesson that these are words that i think are useful if you're talking about well mental health or if you're going to continue reading about it i think you'll definitely come across them i do want to highlight the organization i mentioned that you might see depending on where you live you might see like a fundraiser or a donate uh button around here somewhere and the organization that i wanted to highlight today that was doing great work is called the jed foundation so this is a foundation oh you can kind of see i'll just read this first part which will give you the idea it's protecting emotional health preventing suicide transitioning into adulthood can bring big big challenges and intense challenges the jed foundation empowers teens and young adults with the skills and support to grow into heavy thriving adults so the jed foundation works with uh school children they work with young adults adolescence that was a word in one of the articles i told you it means younger people so they're working with children if they are going through some um you know maybe suffering some mental uh illness perhaps they have thoughts of suicide this is an organization that helps younger people and says protecting their emotional health i read a little bit more about the organization it's called the jed foundation um because it was started by a parent a couple whose son their son was named jed who committed suicide and after that they began this foundation and it's gotten bigger and they just do excellent work so this is the organization that we're going to donate we're going to make a donation to this organization if you guys also would like to get involved um and make a donation that is awesome um but this is again this is something that is i think very serious everybody um all over the world uh people deal with this i know the articles talked about it more so in the context of kovid uh but it's something even after covet that that is going to uh persist so like i said hopefully that some of these words will help you if you want to learn more about mental health if you're reading articles about it or even if you're having a conversation again i am not a mental health professional i'm an english teacher this is about building your vocabulary but again if you think that you're somebody out there might be going through or experiencing something related to some of the things we talked about in that they mentioned in the article anxiety uh high levels of stress depression then i would always encourage people to try to contact somebody talk to others um and and try to uh reach out uh try to keep an eye on keep a watchful eye on others as well because this uh this has been

last year has been uh was a very difficult year this year is also a tough year and i think that we're all trying to get through this uh so i again check out the links down in the description i've also put a link to the jet down the the jed foundation down there if you'd like to learn more about that foundation as well and again even if you can't make a donation right now that's that's perfectly fine i'd still encourage you go check out the website it's great to learn and read about um some of these organizations that are doing good work i think that especially when you see the news and you see all these problems and troubling things going on it's great to learn about organizations or or hear about organizations that are doing a lot of good in the world today so check out those links they are down in the description and i i hope that you guys learned some new words today as well thank you guys want to give some shout outs um oh thank you lolly uh that's great i'm glad that you enjoyed the lesson you had mentioned that you are a health nurse working uh mental health nurse all right excellent um we need we need more more more people like you uh thank you guys uh sleepwalker um muhammad maria teresa good to see you uh i just saw you a moment ago uh vicky glad you're here uh glad you're able to tune into the lesson uh mahdi laura um uh let's see just some quick shout outs yashar ashaan dan uh mary i hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will see you all next time so long

Reading + Vocabulary Lesson | Protecting the Environment

hello everyone welcome to today's lesson uh my name is wes this is interactive english and a channel here is just trying to help you practice and improve your english skills so that you can well just try to reach uh your fluency goals and the way that we're going to do that today is it's going to be two different things we're going to be talking about reading and really using reading to build your vocabulary so i i have some articles that i want to look at and we're going to pick out some words that i think are important that i think are useful and that are really good for your your comprehension so today's topic we're going to be talking about protecting the environment and i know that's a very broad topic there's so many things that are a part of that but obviously it's very important i think it's something that all of us want to do uh because we share this earth so i i have a few different articles about different things and i'm just going to grab some words that are all related to the environment and words that i think are common that if you're reading about protecting the environment you're likely to come across these words again and again which is why i think the more you read and you see these words over and over that's just going to really help you build your vocabulary and you're really going to remember the meaning so i wanna just say some quick uh shout outs hello uh members and patrons excellent takaya lali uh gertrudis uh great to see you thank you guys for joining me fabio karina richie lucas i i'm going to be going back and forth a lot between the articles our vocabulary list and i'll try to keep an eye on the chat to see what you guys are saying if you have any questions about some of the words i am going to include several things down in the description i will include a list to all of the words that we've talked about in today's lesson i will include links to the articles that we're going to look at in case you would like to read them i'm only going to look at part of the article and i'm also going to include a link to today's charity organization that we want to highlight i mentioned before that this month i'm doing live lessons just like this and i want to highlight an organization that i think is doing good work we're going to make a um a donation to this organization and i yeah i would just suggest go go check it out uh go read about it it's good to practice your reading and it's just good to hear about other organizations doing great work if you want to make a donation there will be um the links in the description but there will be a donate button around here somewhere um i i had to it takes it may take a few days for youtube to approve of the organization but that'll it'll show up uh later on and i i will show you the organization um about it and talk to you a little bit about it today so let's go ahead and look at um let's go ahead and just look at our first article so again i told you that we're talking about the environment protecting the environment and all of these articles are related to that so the first one uh is this one right here it's an article from the guardian tiny atlantic island takes giant leap towards protecting world's ocean now i think all of these i i think all of the articles are from 2020 so they're fairly recent uh one or two might be from last year but you could see the subtitle says this is from uh an island uh that is a territory of the united kingdom it says uk overseas territory tristan da cunha never heard of that but new marine protected area will be fourth largest sanctuary of its kind so right there we have a couple of words that i think are good when you think about the environment marine and sanctuary so if we go over to our vocabulary list which i have right down here you can see that um marine is talking about it's an adjective and it just says something that's related to the sea so you talk about a marine project it's related to the sea uh marine environment uh again anytime you hear that word it's something that's related to the sea a sanctuary refers to a safe place typically i think in this case in the environment you're talking about land or the ocean a safe place that is protected from pretty much people that are possibly causing damage and you want to protect it you want to keep that area safe and you might refer to it as a sanctuary so those are i think two words right from the start that i wanted to highlight um they used it in this article they said it's talking about ooh new marine protected area now that's a good example of you have several adjectives before the noun area it's a marine area where it's uh you have that sea that wildlife but it is marine protected area actually a new marine protected area so this is what the article is about uh this sanctuary and you can see those cute little penguins um right there that uh wait actually sorry i meant to go back over here show you guys this how it was used that new marine protected area i told you those adjectives together um you can see those penguins so i'll read um i'm just going to look at that this first part right here we'll read some of it i'll pick out a couple more words that are related to the environment uh and this again the idea is that the fourth largest uh such sanctuary in the world in doing so the community will safeguard the area's wealth of wildlife including sevengill sharks the globally threatened yellow yellow-nosed albatross and atlantic petrol hop rock hopper penguins and other birds that live there and help the uk government achieve its target of protecting 30 of the world's oceans by 2030. i'm i'm not going to go over those animals um but there are a few words that i wanted to pick out from uh this so let's go back to our vocabulary list um it talks about this island as it's a remote island it's which means if you talk about a place that's remote uh it's far away from any populated area and the reason i included this is if you're talking about uh the environment uh forests deserts you may hear this adjective used to describe that the environment that it's very remote it's far away from anything from really any human activity conservation this is a great word it's a great noun it just is talking about the protection of plants and animals and natural areas especially from from humans and it says that these animals [Music] were threatened and that is another it's not a good word but this is a word i think when you're talking about the environment that you will hear again and again and again if it's talking about uh certain animals or plants if they say they're threatened it means that there uh could be harm or damage that's caused to someone or something so if we go back to um our article you can see it was a remote island and it's talking about the contribution to marine wildlife conservation again we have that adjective marine marine conservation and where else did they use some of those words i can highlight them right here so their sanctuary again that protected area and it talks about these animals it goes on to list some of the wildlife that is threatened by human activity and again i think these are words that are pretty

these are words that i think are pretty common if you're talking about if you're reading about the environment all right let's look at another site which is right here let me go up to the top so you can see what the title of the article is um [Music] let me see juan okay there we go it's called um eight billion trees is coming to kangaroo island okay so this is uh eight billion trees is an organization that is just really planting a lot of trees i think probably you may be familiar with some of these organizations that are just planting a lot of trees to offset a lot of the the carbon footprint that people talk about so um welcome again if some of you are just joining us we're talking about protecting the environment we're looking at some articles and picking out words that are related to protecting the environment to help you guys build your vocabulary i saw maggie you joined us hello welcome maggie uh so let's look at this article 8 billion trees coming to kangaroo island this is an island um that is i believe it's near australia and i'm just going to look at this first part and pick out a couple of words so sadash says conserving the plant yes again to conserve conservation very common words with the environment so again this is just you can write if you guys uh sorry if i lost you for a second um so it says the organization oversees planting operations in many countries with the majority of its efforts focused in the amazon rainforest so let's look at a couple of words this here is my vocabulary document um so to rebuild it mentioned about rebuilding habitats uh is to build something again that prefix re just means again and habitat is talking about the the natural environment in which some place lives so again that's another word that i think when you're talking about the environment protecting the environment people might talk about uh an animal's habitat native means it's referring to plants and animals that grow naturally in one place it's used as an adjective and sequester it's i think they mentioned about sequester carbon it means to store this this substance in this case it's carbon in a way that keeps it safe so let's go back over to the article and look at some of those words right here so it says that they want to again rebuild these habitats this this is where these animals live they refer to the native animals the animals that live there locally and you had all these words right in a row basically um which help rebuild habitats for native animals the animals that live there sequester carbon store keep this uh keep carbon keep it in a safe way and promote healthy landscapes throughout the world so again those are some useful words that i think um you will often hear when talking about uh the environment let's look at oh okay is there a big difference between preserve and conserve i think that they're they're they're very similar i think one one thing is like when you preserve uh because that's a great question to preserve is like to keep something that the way it is like you want to preserve land and you don't want to change the land and develop it you could also conserve something and in that case you're really talking about saving it so depending on what you want to talk about you could talk about some land you want to preserve the land this specific land keep it the same but at the same time you could also say you want to conserve the land because you want to save it because we're using up a lot of land but when you think about uh when i think about well when would you use these words con conserve and conservation it makes me think more of like resources and things that you're using up and in that case you might talk about conservation and conserve because we're using things up and you want to conserve it conserve it preserve is really the idea is just staying the same it's going to stay the same great question let's look at the next article and i'm going to try and go through these again a little faster so this article right here let me go up so you guys can see the title this is actually kind of giving an opposing point of view we just talked about um 8 billion trees there are many organizations out there that plant a lot of trees and this article i just chose it because there's a few words that i wanted to pick out uh it says planting trees won't stop climate change not only are planted trees not the carbon sinks you want but tree planting frequently ends up doing more harm than good these articles that i'm not really trying to share my opinion about any of this one way or the other i really was just looking for certain vocabulary that i thought was useful in order to make that list so this is referring to planting trees to offset that that carbon footprint and i think it refers to it as the carbon sinks like a sink at home with the water goes down that the carbon is just going to go down and disappear but there is uh let's read this and there's a couple words that i want to go over let's just stop right here okay so it says humans have long believed that planting trees any kind of tree anywhere is good something mother nature cries out for something that might even solve our climate crisis tree planting initiatives um tree planting initiatives proliferate the bond challenge trees for the future trees forever the 10 billion tree tsunami plant a billion trees eight billion trees that's the other organization we just talked about the trillion tree campaign and one trillion trees initiative just to mention just a few the passion for planting trees comes partly from the fact that in some places they sequester carbon there's that word again sequester this has been broadly interpreted to mean that festooning the earth with trees will solve the problem of climate change which is why tree planting programs are so popular with carbon polluters to avoid cleanup costs so i think in general this article is saying that well planting trees not that it's i don't think they're trying to say that it's bad it's just i think maybe they're trying to say that we should be careful because sometimes depending on when and where we do it it may not always be helpful um but i wanted to look at a few words from this article right here so if we go back here okay just a few words so mother nature is a phrase it just refers to nature instead of saying nature you may hear people use this phrase mother nature i think more uh like the earth the natural environment crisis that is another word when talking about the environment especially protecting the environment because often there might be some harm that's happening and people could refer to it as a crisis it's a noun and that is just a time where there's a lot of disagreement or suffering in this case talking about nature i think it more refers to nature suffering in some way the the environment's suffering and people say it's a crisis to proliferate this is a great verb um you could use it in a variety of contexts it means to increase a lot and suddenly so increasing a lot increasing subtly then you could say it's proliferating so we go back to the article and i can just point out where it's used they talk about mother nature um that like mother nature it's good to have trees um but they're saying that it might not solve this uh crisis of climate change because again they refer to it as a climate crisis and these initiatives so it's talking about these groups that are planting the trees they are proliferating there's many of them they're growing and they're growing quickly as well but i think that you might hear this when talking about the environment they might be talking about some form of pollution that has been proliferating it's been growing suddenly and quickly uh we've already talked about sequester festooning is more it's not necessarily an environmental word it just means decorate so they're talking about these trees festooning or festooning the earth with trees like decorating the earth with trees is what it refers to um so let's look at uh you guys with me all right hopefully you guys are learning some some new words uh let's see uh miranda like i'm glad you like our lessons um you're improving so i right now i don't there's we're not doing uh don't do private lessons i do have a speaking course which again i will talk about that later on the second half of the month because i'm gonna start a new course uh again but i'll let you guys know about that so the the last article that i want to look at um and go over some vocabulary is this one deforestation raised eight percent of amazon um in 18 years according to a study and it just says that the destruction is fueled by logging farming ranching mining and infrastructure projects on forest land so with the title i think that's a important word that you may hear deforestation raised is a word it just means destroy but i don't think it's it's definitely more of an advanced word but maybe not as commonly used i think people tend to use the word destroy like or destruction which is down there it says the destruction is fueled by logging farming ranching mining so deforestation and destruction are a couple of words that i wanted to look at right away so if we go back from uh to our list so deforestation refers to cutting down trees in an area and people are doing this so it's like when people are cutting down trees and they're doing this because they want to use the land for some other purpose could be farming uh in the article they mentioned mining could just be building like a shopping mall but when you're cutting down this forest land and i think it really refers to like a large amount of land deforestation destruction uh i mentioned that it said the destruction is fueled by mining uh logging and it listed a few other things destruction is the noun it's the act of destroying something and this is a good way to build your vocabulary learning the noun destruction the verb is to destroy so to destroy is to cause damage to something so that it really you can't use it anymore and this is another great way to build your vocabulary learning these word families destroy is the verb destruction is the noun the meaning is really the same it just depends on the part of speech so let's look at the article and again i'm not going to read that much of it in a second i think okay all right i think it's back again just drop for a second uh i'll continue read it says the amazon plays a vital role in curbing climate change but destruction of the rainforest has only accelerated in recent years found uh the study by the amazon geo referenced socio environmental information network wow that's a long name raise so i want to look at a few words right here it's talking about deforestation again um destroying the the land taking out the trees uh wiping out is one word that i wanted to add so let's go over here to our vocabulary list um right here it mention i'm gonna add that word that word in there to wipe out it's a phrasal verb and to wipe out uh i'd say is to completely destroy something so wipeout i think again is a phrasal verb that you may hear if you're talking about protecting the environment perhaps the in this case the forest was wiped out or maybe they're talking about a population of animals or plants that are being wiped out they're being completely destroyed it's said it's vital that's a great adjective vital just means really important and in in this case to curb something means to limit something that's not wanted so let's go back to the article so you can see how it's used in context it said that the it is deforestation was wiping out eight percent all right it's destroying eight percent the amazon it said of course it is a vital uh it plays a vital role it's very important in limiting climate change so it's curbing climate change it's limiting climate change but that's another word that i think if you're talking about protecting the environment people will do things to curb negative effects so in this case um the amazon which is mother nature is vital to curbing climate change it's very important so those are a few words again i have uh this entire list down i put all these words in the description in case you like to review and the reason i chose these words specifically is because i think that as you talk about the environment you're more likely to use these words as you read about the protecting the environment you're more likely to come across these words and as you listen to news news reports anything these are words that i think you will hear again and it's really going to help you improve your comprehension another thing again that i wanted to show you was today's organization charity that we are highlighting we're going to make a donation there's a link in the description it's the amazon conservation team and they they do a lot of great work um working in brazil and colombia working with locals in the area on programs for conservation in order to combat these things that are going on such as deforestation so you can check out the website there's the donate right there again later on at once youtube approves this organization there should be a donate button that occurs on the appears on the page if you guys want to make a donation but even if you can't that's okay but i suggest it's good to read about this you're again you're gonna find these words that we talked about today and it's just good to read about um organizations that do a lot of good work they do a lot of great work uh i notice on charity navigator which is how we kind of try to vet some of these charities because we want to make sure that they're they're doing what they say they're doing this is a website that will use um which is good they had really high uh scores um on charity navigator like a lot of the money you donate really goes to the work that they say that they're doing in these countries in order to uh protect the amazon and actually save this land and i think many of you probably it was not long ago you had all of those forest fires that devastated um the amazon which a lot of that was brought on by uh even the man-made activity that was going on in that area so even yeah maggie said due to the california that is another uh place that really uh is devastated by forest fires i hope that you guys learned some lessons thank you heidi i'm glad you enjoy these lessons uh karina excellent uh margaret thank you guys i i appreciate all of you guys being here sorry if it dropped a little bit my internet's been a little spotty lately and it kind of drops and then it comes back um but yes my yes are we locate the article yes in the description down below there is a link to all of the articles from today's lesson if you'd like to reread them and really i just went over the first few paragraphs so even if you want to just re-read those first few paragraphs and see if you can identify those words that we talked about and just remember the meaning just from this lesson that would be a good way to practice what we've learned today those links are in the description i've included a list of all of the words from today's lesson that is also in the description um a link to the amazon conservation team in the description and uh again a donate button will appear here later if you guys uh are interested in making a donation they do a lot of great work so it gives some more shout outs thank you uh maggie for joining us today uh haresh yes i'm saying your name haresh verma all right sometimes people like uh give me a quick little shout out abraham um sajad maria alberto um thank you guys for joining me lol thanks for being here as usual i appreciate it thank you for being a member too you make all of this possible um who is it let us i'm trying to give some quick shout outs uh asan uh amnati surinva sorry i couldn't like chat as much i know when i do these lessons it's really more focusing on these articles and then the words and then kind of really discussing how they're used in context because i think that's going to help you really remember the meaning uh ricardo takayo good to see you uh thanks for joining uh uh maggie yes see you next week next week there will be another we're gonna do another live lesson just like this we're gonna talk about like we're gonna read some articles pick out some vocabulary i'll highlight another organization another charity um we're going to make a donation uh chef lao um i can't read that name how are you doing i'm doing really i'm doing great how are you fala it's okay i've came late this is gonna get posted you guys will have plenty of time uh to check this out um shift paul uh esther okay i gotta i gotta call it thank you guys so much for joining me i hope you enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will see all of you next time so long

Reading + Vocabulary Lesson | Vaccines

hello everyone welcome to today's lesson i have well this lesson is consist of two parts it is a reading lesson and a vocabulary lesson specifically it's really looking at how you can use reading to build your vocabulary and we're going to kind of walk through that step by step and i'm going to show you some articles highlight some words and create a vocabulary list which is something that uh all of you could do at home so today's topic we're we're going to be talking about vaccines i tend to i try to choose when i do these lessons i try to choose a topic that i think is relevant that people are discussing that is current and of course this is something that i think we are all aware of it's happening all over the world and i think it is very super important that we look at that and i want to teach you some words some words and phrases that are related to vaccines i will tell you i am somebody i i have not gotten um received a vaccine just yet we are on a waiting list but we are going to get one as soon as we possibly can i truly believe in vaccines i trust the science and i think that is the best way to kind of move past um this whole covet crisis that has engulfed the world but this lesson again is primarily just trying to show you some words that are related to this if you are well you want to read more about it or perhaps you're having a conversation you're discussing it with somebody else these are some useful words that you should know for your comprehension but they're also good for you to use your vocabulary uh as well and the the organization that i'm going to highlight today is doctors without borders um we've made a 50 donation to them if some of you would like to make that as well that's awesome if not that's no problem but i'd still encourage you to go to the website learn more about them they do great work but i will talk about that at the end of the lesson i want to say a quick hello to oh so many members gertrudis lolly hello good to see you vicky great to have you here takayo hi um angela ester ten critica andre thank you guys for joining me i will try to glance at the chat from time to time i'm going to be moving around on quite a few different screens between the articles and the vocabulary lists so i won't be able to uh read as much as i usually do in there but let's just go ahead and begin with the first article all of these articles that we're looking at um are pretty relevant you can see this article right here from something from cnn and it's from may 13th the title of this article because i know i'm kind of blocking it right now is that this is what vaccine inequality looks like so i'm not really i didn't choose these articles necessarily because of what what they're trying to say they're very different articles i was just trying to find some articles that had words and phrases especially at the beginning that i think were relevant that you're likely to find in other articles that you may be reading that are related to this topic of vaccines so before i pick out some of the words i'm going to just read this this part right here and then we're gonna go back through and we're gonna look at some of the vocabulary words i'm going to create a vocabulary list and i will also put all of these words down in the description if you would like to review i will also link these articles if you would like to read the rest of it because i am just going to read a very short portion of the article so this is talking about well it says america has been inching closer to herd immunity with 17 million more people becoming eligible for a covid19 vaccine cvs pharmacies in some hospitals across the united states will start administering the pfizer uh bio biointex shots to 12 to 15 year olds today following a recommendation by the u.s center for disease control and prevention cdc it's yet another major step in america's road out of the pandemic while severe illness due to covid19 is relatively rare among teens they can still spread the virus and their inclusion in the vaccination program is key for any hope of achieving herd immunity but as as the focus of the us shifts to inoculating younger people and convincing those who are hesitant to get the shot much of the rest of the world is struggling to get vaccines even for those who need them most including vulnerable people and healthcare workers so let's start at this the beginning up here and i'll just go through a couple of words because i know which ones i've highlighted we saw this um phrase twice in the article herd immunity i think this is something if you're talking about the the covet 19 pandemic vaccines this is a phrase that people often talk about um eligible is another word that i want to highlight and talk about as well as administer so it's talking about more people becoming eligible for the vaccine and this pharmacy cvs is starting to administer the vaccine so let's go over to the vocabulary list i'm going to bounce back and forth whoops that's not the vocabulary list uh or satisfying the necessary conditions so for example i think uh with this covid vaccine in most countries uh around the world i imagine that the people who become eligible first would be those who the older population the elderly would be eligible first because that's who um people uh that's who we want to protect um that are most susceptible uh to the virus so the next one i said to administer i chose this because if we're talking about um just a vaccine or a shot this is a verb that you would use to administer a shot or administer the vaccine to cause someone to receive something you could say you could just use the verb receive as well that's perfectly fine um but i think administering is like the well the person giving it so i would say for example when i go and get the vaccine i would receive the vaccine and the the health care worker the nurse the doctor would administer the vaccine they're the ones who are giving it they would administer it let's go back to the article there are a few more words that i wanted to point out from here and it was talking about well this i i did a lesson before talking all about the pandemic but i wanted to include it again because if we're talking about vaccines the this is a very common word that you would come across people talking about the global pandemic and the spread the spread of the virus this is an important verb you see this word again uh herd immunity it's coming up once more and then there was another word down here it's talking about the uh shifts to inoculating younger people to inoculate is another verb which i also highlighted on our vocabulary list so i told you that we're talking about the the pandemic i said it's a global pandemic the cova 19 this is a disease a disease existing in almost all of an area so i mentioned the the adjective global before it a global pandemic in which case we're talking about covid which is existing across the globe spread is also used when talking about uh viruses disease it's just means to spread is to affect why can i highlight all of this to affect more and more people and you would say that the disease is spreading the virus is spreading it's moving around it's infecting more people a very common verb i think that you would use to talk about a situation like that so this is a very useful verb and inoculate uh it said that the u.s is changing to inoculating younger people and to inoculate means to you're giving somebody a weak form of a disease usually by injection um as a protection against that disease and you would inoculate somebody so you are giving them uh the the disease like i said usually uh it's talking about somebody would administer a shot and it would protect you against the disease to inoculate another another useful verb if talking about health disease medicines vaccines a verb that you will come across quite often all right so this was the first article that i wanted to look at and we have uh oh there's one more word that i think where was it in the article vulnerable so it's hot it was talking down here okay um talking about vulnerable people and healthcare workers i mentioned before that was the word i was looking for the people all over the world protecting the elderly because they are most vulnerable and as well as healthcare workers they're getting uh more exposure to the to the virus so vulnerable means that you um able to be easily physically emotionally or mentally hurt so you could use it in a variety of context in this case they're talking about somebody who is vulnerable to the disease that they i guess it would be like more physically that you're vulnerable you're more likely to get the disease you could say you are vulnerable so again it could be used in a variety of ways let's look at the next article so that was an article the overall it was talking about i think the the vaccine program and the title was about u.s inequality i will link it in the description if you want to just read the entire article again we're just looking at a small portion of these articles the next one is um over here okay so the title is unicef calls on uk to give 20 of vaccines to other countries children's charity urges uk to set example and start sharing jobs with lower income countries from june so if we go down here again i'm just going to read a couple uh a few paragraphs and then we'll look at some words uh i'm gonna come back to the words we already talked about and like i told you this is a great way to build your vocabulary because what we're what you're going to end up seeing is those words are going to be used in the this article and subsequent articles so that's why i said if you're trying to learn about a topic and you learn a new word related to that topic don't just read one article try to find another because the more you continue to come across the same words again and again and again the the more likely you are to remember the word to learn it and then it's going to become a part of one's your active memory so this article um the uk should says the uk should commit to giving 20 of its vaccines to other countries that are in urgent need of them as early as june according to unicef which says the uk will still have enough to vaccinate every adult by the end of july the children's charity estimates the uk will have enough spare doses this year to fully vaccinate a further 50 million people around the world and urges the government to set an example to the g7 by starting to share them next month vaccinating the populations of other countries is the only way to ensure new coronas new coronavirus variants do not spread it says unicef made its call before the g7 summit in the uk next month and as france announced it would donate up to five percent of its vaccine stocks to kovacs the u.n backed initiative to get vaccines to lower income countries the one thing i want to point out in this article right away we're talking about vaccines you know what a vaccine is it's a noun i wanted to show you how it's used other parts of speeches so you see vaccine being used here as a noun and then we can also use it as a verb to vaccinate to vaccinate other adults it's used here as a gerund at the beginning of a sentence vaccinating the the populations of other countries so a lot of these words it's another good way to build your vocabulary if you're not just thinking about how else the word might be used as a noun as an adjective or even as a verb great way to build your vocabulary the two words that i wanted to point out in this article right here doses because talking about vaccines that is a word that will come up talking about well how many doses did this country receive or how many doses are people getting in this case they're talking about spare doses extra ones that they can donate and then the other words coronavir virus variants this is another common word if you're talking about the the situation that's going on you may hear this word being used quite often so let's look at those two words so if we go to the vocabulary list over here looking at doses doses refers to a measured amount of something such as medicine um and you might hear people talk about like well one dose two dose three doses you can use it um talking about all kinds of medicine like if you are taking some medicine to help you sleep at night and it might tell you to take two doses um which is the measured amount in this case when they're talking about doses of the vaccine i believe they're talking just like one shot um one shot of the vaccine like one dose of it and then variance means something that is slightly different from other similar theme other similar things sorry and they referred to the coronavirus variance which means that the original coronavirus may ha has slightly changed and if it slightly changes then that becomes a variant a coronavirus variant and there are several variants uh around the world and i think that's something else that they're testing is how effective are these vaccines against some of these other variants so another very common word if we're we're talking about um about covid and the situations that hap that's happening around the world and vaccines let's look at the next article i'm gonna keep moving through these i know uh see some people uh conversing in the chat the next article is about uh well there's only a couple words that i wanted to to highlight that's saying the title is anti anti-vaxxers aren't the cause of america's dropping vaccine rates the this fact is crucial to getting the u.s vaccination campaign back on track i'm going to come back to the first word because i wanted to tell you what anti-anti-vaxxer means or what that is it's a word that you may have heard already and just look at the first paragraph it says america's coven 19 vaccine rollout has dwindled in recent weeks plummeting from a previous high of nearly 3.4 million doses administered a day on average in april uh to around 2.2 million a day this week i'm not gonna look at more it then goes into an analogy uh about what's going on and then down here it kind of talks a little bit more about well why this is happening i really just wanted to point out two words in this article which is the first one talking about anti-vaxxers um and then the other one is rollout and as you can see i talked about words that you would see again and again as we go through this right here we just talked about doses 3.4 million doses they're referring to to doses of the vaccine administered when they're they're giving something somebody's going to receive it the vaccine so those are two words that we just talked about 3.4 million doses administered but let's look at those two words anti-vaxxer and rollout if we go back to our vocabulary list and look what we have so an anti-vaxxer is just somebody who does not agree with vaccinating people and what i would say is that i know there are some people out there that i think in the first article it referred to some people being well hesitant that maybe they're unsure if somebody i think is unsure then i don't know if i would refer to them as an anti-vaxxer an anti-vaxxer is a person who just who just does not agree with it they think it's for some reason that it's dangerous or they don't believe that people should get vaccines then you could call them an anti-vaxxer often i think this is there's so much bad information surrounding this that i think a lot of people end up reading and then they start more maybe become more part of that anti-vaxxer community but speaking of vaccines it's a i told you this is something that i think all around the world in every country there might be a group of people that are like this that are against vaccines and you could say they are anti-vaxxers anti that prefix right there just means against so it against vaccines is what it means rollout is another common word talking about these vaccines because each country is rolling out their own vaccination program and the rollout is the act of making something available for the first time so you have this program you're starting it for the first time you would refer to it as like the rollout the noun the rollout all right let's look at i have one more one more article for you and then i want to talk to you a little bit about doctors without borders the next article i have a few more words is this one it says why um japan has been slow to roll out vaccinations and again i i know i'm blocking that first part uh but yes it says there we go why has japan been slow to roll out vaccinations what i would tell you to do take notice of the words that we've uh already learned and i'm going to highlight those even that first one i talked about the roll out the the rollout of the these vaccines um they're using it right now as a phrasal verb to roll out vaccinations the

let's go down here i'm just going to read a couple of paragraphs and then again see we've already talked about several words see if you can pick up on the ones that we've already discussed throughout the lesson i told you if you read articles similar articles you're going to end up coming across the same vocabulary words again and again it's a great way to build your vocabulary so this is saying japan's rollout of covid 19 vaccines began belatedly in mid-february months behind the united states and many other countries officials blamed a shortage of pfizer a pfizer vaccine from europe as the main culprit in the delay but three months later with shipments stabilized and officials attempting to accelerate vaccinations japan remains one of the world's least protected officials say there is a critical shortage of trained staff to give shots despite prime minister um yoshihide suga's pledge to have all eligible people fully vaccinated by the end of september some officials say it could take until next year it will be impossible for japan to achieve protective herd immunity in the two months before the tokyo olympics are to begin so i think this article was kind of um written in the context of the japan is supposed to host the summer olympics and this poses an issue right now for the country we talked about roll out you saw in the title it was used as a phrasal verb here again it's being used as a noun they're making these vaccines available for the first time belatedly i didn't add that to the list because all it means is something happens late it's it's happening late you could say it's belated oftentimes i think people might use that to wish someone a belated birthday uh would be an example i wanted to talk about there's a couple words from here speaking of vaccines shortage is one of the words that i wanted to highlight because i think you some countries are experiencing a shortage of vaccines and the next word that i wanted to talk about here it is they use shortage again um was this one oh wait wait uh i meant to read this last part down here but just to go through that other paragraph we talked about eligible people that they meet the necessary requirements uh herd immunity they're using that one again and that last paragraph which i forgot to read but there's a word in there that i wanted to go over it's uncertain let me make sure you guys can see this it's uncertain whether japan's already strained healthcare system can treat extra visitors during the games as it struggles to handle local patients and mass inoculations so this is the other word that i want to point out strained if you say that a system is strained um i want to show you what that word means and we just we again in one of the previous articles we talked about to inoculate you're giving somebody a weak form of the disease in order to protect them against it let's move over to the vocabulary list i told you those two words if we're talking about a shortage of something you're often going to follow it with the preposition of a short i said some countries are experiencing a shortage of the vaccine it means a situation in which there's just not enough and then strained they talked about the strained it's already strained healthcare system that problems current problems are just making things more difficult and it's kind of getting difficult to a point that it's it could become a real big crisis so if you say that something is strained it's just really it's difficult and challenging because the problems keep intensifying um is what i would say so these uh are the different articles that i wanted to show you related to vaccines you can see here this vocabulary list that i put together i'm leaving these words down in the description below also there are links to the articles as well if you would like to read the rest of them i am a very i am a big advocate for for reading in english and just reading more and more i think it's a great way to build your vocabulary it's a great way to improve your grammar because you're seeing the correct grammar structure being used there are so many benefits to reading so i think it's always great and one other thing the last thing that i think you should read and check out is the site doctors without borders so even if you're not in a position to make a donation go check out the website read about them it's a great way to again build your vocabulary learn about an organization that's doing some good work i think so many things that we read about especially if we're talking about the news it's typically negative it's not something that is overly cheerful so it can be good to read about things that are a little more positive people doing good work doctors without borders it's uh it's originally i think um a french organization they work they have offices around the world at this point and basically they they serve they work on different medical projects helping um countries in need that are experiencing some great difficulties and you can read a lot more about them it talks a little bit more about some of their ongoing projects right now learn about what they do it's um yeah it's a good organization so that is the organization that we wanted to highlight in this lesson that is related to vaccines it's related to the the covid crisis the covid the global pandemic um right now so wanted to give a big shout out to doctors without borders go check out go the link is also down in the description if you want to go read about this so go check out the website learn a little bit more about them practice your reading skills um so that you can continue to build your vocabulary i know that um again i haven't been able to really pop into the chat too much i hope that you guys enjoyed the lesson i hope that you guys learned some new words and phrases again this is a very important topic it's very relevant because this is well this is going on right now so it's something that you may we'll read about in english but you may also be talking about it with your friends and families so these are good words and phrases to know thank you guys so much for joining me i hope uh i hope it was useful um yes okay lolly confirming yes it is a french organization excellent um and i like i said i hope you learn some new words and just continue to read because i think if you're able if there's something you enjoy like a topic read about it but read several articles because you're going to start identifying the same vocabulary word again and again and again and then suddenly yes it's going to be up here in your active memory and you're going to be able to use that the next time you're writing or having a conversation and you're actually to produce the language uh thanks for joining me lolly um vicky thanks for being here good to see you uh takayo glad you learned some new words juliana good to see you uh glad you were here awesome seeing a lot of people who are uh in the speak up course as well awesome great to see you guys gatrudus thanks for being here um sarah andre um please hello hello to brazil uh tenkritika um james tenten louisa these are articles we'll do i'll do more of these lessons later on i like doing these uh reading vocabulary lessons it it allows us to talk about something current something relevant something that i think is important and then also highlight an organization um that we think is doing good work so i like to make these uh fundraising videos from time to time i think it's good uh all right um which vaccine did you apply for we don't know so the way it works in hungary like we've we've registered we're waiting and then they'll call you and then tell you um when you're supposed to go in for the vaccine and then i think at that point you can ask and say okay can you tell me which one it is um it hungry is not in a position where i think they're not you're not allowed to choose at least um as far as i know um but i do want to get it as soon as possible um kareem uh yes all the best to you as well gettrudes uh anastasia leo um alisher khaled hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend um and i will see you next time so long

- So, we really, really, really love hearing from you guys and it's such positive community but today we're gonna do things a little different and talk about some of those haters out there. (laughing) - We're gonna read some mean comments and we're gonna laugh at them. - So, when you're making videos like we do, I think whether it's education or anything, there's always haters out there. You're gonna have people that are, they're trying to just be mean and I don't know. - Sometimes for no reason. - Honestly, I don't know what possesses people to really do it. - That's mean. - Some of it can get really nasty. I don't think, for the most part, it doesn't really bother us.

It's not really a big deal. - One of the reasons why it's easier for people to be meaner on the internet is because you're not seeing the person. You're not face-to-face and people are just mean. - They're hiding behind fake names. - Yeah. - But we get those comments and, not a ton of them, but what we wanted to do is try to make this a bit of a teachable moment and kind of use some of the words, and it's kind of a vocabulary lesson, I guess. We just kinda wanted to share some them with you and, again, make it a teachable moment and talk about some of the vocabulary and it's a little bit of a different kind of lesson.

- I mean some of them are really funny. So, they make us laugh. - Some of them are very funny. Very very funny. (laughing) - So, thanks. (laughing) - We're just gonna read through some of these and then talk a little bit about them. - You want to read it? This is my favorite one by far. (laughing) I love it. - This comment, 'cause it's for me, Ian Joel, "Go talk to someone that doesn't speak English, you condescending prick." (laughing) Why do you enjoy that one so much? - Because first of all, because you are trying to talk-- - I know, well, Ian Joel, we are actually English teachers so we're trying to teach people and talk to people who not that don't speak English but people that are trying to learn English or improve their skills.

Now-- - It's literally what we do. (laughing) That's our job description. - Yeah, Ian. In case you're wondering 'cause, again, I think some of these people are native speakers. I think a lot of them are trolls. It's not a good word but it's a good word to know what it means because that's kind of a new word I think that's come up in the last five, 10 years. - Yeah. So, a troll is basically somebody who says something mean or negative. Not that they really feel that way, they're just trying to provoke a response from somebody else and trying to upset another person or another group of people and getting them to react.

So, a prick is a noun and it's basically slang. It's talking about...If you call somebody a prick, it just means they're a jerk. They're just somebody you don't like. It's always used in a negative context. - Hendricks, huh? Prick! - Just keep it down, yeah. - Prick. - Heavy, what I wouldn't give to know what heavy feels like, you insensitive prick. - The other good vocabulary word to know, which is again, not a good word, is condescending. - It's a good word. - And condescending is, it's an adjective and basically it means a way of talking to someone or communicating to someone like acting like you're better than they are.

You're talking down to somebody. You're kind of being condescending and being mean and rude. We appreciate your condescending comment, Ian. So usually with unruly students, we just kick them out of the classroom. Ian, you're out of here. - Get out. - Get out. (laughing) Go outside Ian, get out of here. - Get him out of here. - The next comment. - I love this one too. (laughing) - Why do you hate on me? 'Cause this is another one for me. - Because they're like teacher. - Huh. Oh, okay. - Yeah. Icepeak C&E. - "Boy you must be the most boring teacher on YouTube. "They call a dollar a buck, wow, really?"

Well, yes, Icepeak. This was from the, I think, the slang video and talking about different American slang words, that a dollar is a buck. But yes we are actually, I don't know why the quotes. If somebody does, this is another good thing. If somebody does the air quotes, basically it means it's the opposite of what they're saying. So in saying that I'm a teacher would imply I'm not. - Yeah, jokes on you, Icepeak C&E. - Yeah. - We are teachers. (laughing) It's what we do. - So we are teachers, so that doesn't really make much sense. But I could say, you know, Icepeak C&E is a smart guy. - It doesn't matter, don't be a hater. I mean, this is a funny comment without air quotes.

- It is a funny comment. But still, Icepeak C&E, get out of the classroom. Get out. - And also, they do call a dollar a buck. - Get out of the classroom Icepeak. - Not everyone knows that! - Yeah. If you don't know that, get out. - Get out. - Get out. - The next comment is, you wanna... (laughing) You can explain this one. Give us some context. - This one was in one of my videos and it was a food idioms video and I believe that maybe at some point I've asked like-- - I don't think this might've been a hateful comment or anything, it's just funny. - We're not sure. But I believe I may have asked if people know other food idioms.

Maybe. But, the comment was, "You eat like a horse." - So, we're not sure if that's a food idiom in somebody else's language or something. (laughing) - Or people are telling me that I eat like a horse because in another video, I was eating something. - In another video, but not in this one. - Not in this one. - Yeah. - So I'm not sure, do you really think I eat like a horse? What does a horse eat like? I mean, do they eat good stuff? - Maybe we got this comment all wrong. Maybe it's a compliment. - Maybe. (laughing) - A horse's diet is very healthy. - It was a fun one, we thought we'd share it with you guys.

- You eat like a horse. (laughing) You can stay, I think, Matteo. - You can stay. Next comment. (laughing) - I think this one is yours. No, mine? - Yeah. - Melissa Hurles says, "waffling rubbish." (laughing) - Tell us how you really feel, Melissa. - This is short and sweet. If somebody is waffling, it just means that they're not making a point, they're going back and forth and back and forth. Of course rubbish, I'm sure you know that it's trash. - It's more of a British term. - Right - If something is rubbish, they say, "ugh, it's terrible." - Is she saying that you are waffling rubbish or the content is waffling rubbish? - I think this was on mine too.

I think it was maybe just the lesson, waffling rubbish. - Ah, Okay. - I think part of this has to do with, I think, with another future comment that we're gonna show you in just a second, which maybe helps explain some. But, yeah, waffling, you're just really indecisive and kind of like, what, what. - You're not making a point. - What, what's going on? What's happening? - Yeah. - It kind of has to do with Mit's comment, right here. - Mit Mumo. (laughing) I like your profile picture. Is that UCLA? That looks like UCLA. - Maybe, I don't know. Get to the point! Like, yesterday, geez. - All in caps. (laughing) - I know. This is very frustrating.

Mit's frustrated. - Screaming at us. - So I think this is part of it was some of our lessons because when we talk about a topic, we kind of go through the beginning about, okay, what the lesson is gonna be about and kind of talk about why it's useful and why this is important for you and how you can use this information. - Yeah, we think you should know why you're learning something. (laughing) - Yeah. Yeah, Mit. We don't just go in and say, okay here's the first word. Here's the second word. Here's the third word. - Yeah. - I think some people, I mean, again, everybody wants different things.

Some people, like Mit, just want that. They don't want any, you know, don't talk to me about how I can use phrasal verbs, just tell me the phrasal verb or something. And that's just not what we're gonna do. We're not going to change that, but I think that goes with maybe the waffling part. - Maybe. - That she was talking about. - But why rubbish? That's just mean. (laughing) - Rubbish is just adding insult to injury right there. (laughing) - Yeah. - Like ugh. Oh yeah, we forgot, Melissa, boom, you're out. Get out the classroom. - Yeah, get out Melissa. - Get out. Mit, you too, follow her. - Get out. - You're out. You're done, Mit. Geez. - Get Out.

(laughing) - Foysal. So this one again is pretty mean. (laughing) Foysal Ahmed, or Foysal. Are you sure you spelled the name right? Because I think it's Foysal. - He misspelled his name, you think? - Maybe. - Maybe. - "By far the worst one I have ever watched." Exclamation mark. (laughing) - What else do I want to say about this? - Why did you have to write that? (laughing) If you don't like it you don't have to comment. - He's entitled to his opinion. - But why, like-- - It's okay. - Write it down. - Even though the opinion may be waffling rubbish. - Your opinion sucks, Foysal. (laughing) Foysal Ahmed. Foysal Ahmed. - Yeah, all right, we're done with you Foysal. Get out. - Get out. - Get out of here, you're done. - Out. - Get out of here! - Oh, this is ridiculous. I'm gonna laugh so hard. Let's laugh. - I think this was a comment that was on a video we did together, obviously.

- Obviously. - It's like, you're overreacting while you're teaching. - Over-acting. So here's the comment. Junaid Khan says, "Don't do overacting while you are teaching. You both laugh more than teaching. Please don't laugh more." (laughing) I'm sorry I keep laughing at your ridiculous comment. I think it was pronunciation. - I don't know. - The brands pronunciation video. - But it was. I think we were having fun with that lesson, and there was a lot of laughing. - So first of all, can I say something? We don't act, because we're horrible actors. We did try to act once with our skit-- - Yeah, it didn't go very well. - In our "your welcome" video. - It was pretty bad, pretty bad acting.

- You're so amazing. - Thank you. - Can I get a refill on the coffee? - Yeah. Here is a refill on your coffee. - Is there sugar in this? We're not acting. We constantly laugh at each other because Wes is ridiculous and he makes me laugh. - If anything, I think we're probably under-acting. - If we laugh more than teaching, teaching is about having fun. If you're not having fun when you're learning, why are you even learning something. You have to have fun with it. That's how you learn, Junaid Kahn. (laughing) - From now on, Junaid, we will teach all lessons just like this, in a very monotone voice.

- Nope. - And there will be no laughing per your request. - No, but you can go to a teacher who does that. So get out. - Get out of here, Junaid! - Get out of here. Now. - I just want to keep laughing now. (laughing) - Keep laughing. That comment makes us laugh, yeah, thank you. This is-- - I like the emoji, too. - This is one my favorite comments because we saw this one. "You look just like Sara Jay." This was one on one of Ilana's videos and of course the first thing I wondered was, who is Sara Jay? - Who is Sara Jay? - So you do a quick little Google search on Sara Jay and you find out she's a porn star.

(laughing) - So. - Which tells us something about you, Adam. - It's just not a great thing to tell somebody, especially a teacher, that you look like a porn star, with a kiss emoji. It's a little... (laughing) I know it's the internet, but it's a little... It's a little... It's inappropriate. - It's a little creepy. - I had a student who told me I look very sexy with my eye-liner, and I'm like, you can't say that to your teacher. This was face-to-face, a real student. Some students, especially if you're learning a new language, maybe you don't know how to compliment somebody-- - What's maybe culturally appropriate...eh, maybe. - Yeah, so don't call your teacher sexy.

Don't tell them they look like a porn star. It's just not appropriate. (laughing) But thank you. First of all, I Googled her too and I don't think we look alike. I like the kiss emoji. We appreciate like-- - You can stay in the classroom. - Your happy feelings but... So this was pretty good. I'm not sure, I don't think we're sure which video this was on. It doesn't really matter because-- - It might be on the fun and funny one. - Oh. - Which is why, I don't, we don't know if this is, again, a misunderstanding or like just kind of-- - Maybe. Either way, they told us we look funny.

Or it was Wes. You look funny. No, you're looking funny. - Hey, thanks. - They're usually like you look funny. It's not a good thing if somebody looks funny it's not something you want to look like. - Yeah. Yeah, they may have been trying to say maybe you are funny or you know-- - Or they wanted to say you look funny. - Or you look like you're having fun-- - Or it's a legit-- (laughing) - Or maybe, I just look funny. I don't know. It's kind of... You wouldn't say looking funny, you'd say funny-looking. - Mm-hmm. - Harry is the funny-looking one. (laughing) - You're a funny-looking little thing, aren't you? - Don't! - You just... Look funny.

- I look funny? You ever seen The Shining? - You still shouldn't say that. - But, that's still not a nice thing to say to somebody. - Culturally, it's wrong. - You're funny-looking. - If you say something about somebody's looks, always have good things to say, like, you look great, you look amazing, you look beautiful. - Stay positive. All right, so, you can stay in the classroom. - Gosh this is a long one. (laughing) Wait, this is mine. Oh my God. I haven't seen this one. (laughing) So, Nasir Boota says, "Bad see he sent me to be dd be she the we can submit yeah he egg cheese fee see ex be seen by it and return bee-do."

What? - I just included it because every now and then we get this nonsensical rambling about something that I don't know how to interpret this. I don't know. - What? (laughing) Oh. - Do you know what this means? - Maybe they're writing-- - Is this code for something? - Verb-tenses. No, to be. - I don't know. - Be. - It's like one of YouTube's great mysteries. What-- - What is this, Nasir Boota? What are you trying to tell us? - You need to translate this for us. - What language is this? (laughing) - Is that it? - Yeah. - Awe. - I know, I'm like sad. We're like, that's all? That's all that we have so far? - It was fun. We like to over-act.

- I'm sure we'll get more negative comments in the future. So what we want to do is, because again, the internet, it's so, it can be so full of negativity, of hate, what we want you guys to do in the comments, you don't have to write to us, just go write something positive. Just go say anything, anything about anything in life, that's positive, that's happy, that's cheerful. Write that in the comments and look at what other people wrote and comment on theirs, and let's see how much-- - 'Cause that's how we want to promote. - Positivity that we can have. - We want to bring back positivity-- - It's what Interactive English is all about.

- This is a fun space. I know not everyone likes it, that it's a fun space, but that's what we want it to be. We want it to be a fun learning space, because when you're relaxed and having fun, you are learning. So please keep it positive, keep it fun, keep it light, and practice. - If you guys enjoyed this lesson and enjoyed us sharing those negative and mean comments, and weird comments, too, hit that like button down below. Thanks so much for watching, and we'll see you next time. - Bye. - Bye.

Reported Speech vs Direct Speech | Advanced Grammar Lesson

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is Wes this is interactive English which if you want to practice and improve your English then you are in the right place and that's what this channel is all about and today I have a grammar lesson for you and we are going to talk about direct speech versus reported speech and I'm gonna give you some different examples and talk about well when to use them but also how to change back and forth between direct speech and reported speech but Before we jump into it if you are new here and this is your first time watching one of our lessons please write to me in the chat or write to me in the comments tell me your name where you're from because I just love I love hearing from everyone especially people who are new to the channel but I want to give a quick shout-out to those who are with me right now hello Gladys Angela Sam Sam well

Samuel Lally Hawaa your Lea Abdullah Murillo Mary Jane Garcia thank you guys for joining me hope you help everybody is having a wonderful weekend Gertrudis of the Rahman I understand Michael Angelo I'm gonna try and throw in some more shout outs here and there because I am going to have you guys practice a little bit today with reported and direct speech and changing back and forth between the two so let's just go ahead and begin and really define well what what are these what does it mean direct speech and reported speech so direct speech is talking about the actual words that a person says and this is when you would have quotes around the words it's really what the person says and you could think of it like well what are they directly saying reported speech which is also called indirect speech they're they're the same it's a description of what someone else has said without using the exact words now the reason why I chose to say reported speech instead of indirect speech because I think most of the time if you are looking up about this grammar in particular I think often people are going to use the phrase reported speech instead of indirect speech but they're the same they're one in the same because in this case you are you are reporting what someone else has said it's not direct you are reporting this information to someone else and because you're reporting it often you're talking about what someone has said in the past they have already said this thing and you're telling this to someone else so it was something they said in the past so this is what that means direct speech and reported speech so let's now look at let me give you some examples okay this is this is a conversation that using direct speech you see I put it in quotes this was a discussion that I had this morning my wife and I were talking and I said I'll just read it for you and he well it's talking about me so I could say he said we need more wine I thought you bought some she replied I'll go to the store he said can you also get some Nutella she asked okay so this is a conversation a real conversation that my wife and I we had this morning talking about getting some wine my wife she loves Nutella so she asked me to get some more Nutella now this is direct speech these are the exact words that we said now if we're gonna change this if if you were you heard this conversation and then you were telling someone else like whoa whoa what what did they talk about this morning what was their conversation we can change that to reported speech and it would look something like this he said we needed more wine she thought he had bought some he said that he would go to the store she asked if he could also get some Nutella so in that case is the same conversation using reported speech now I'm gonna talk about specifics of how we change that right now I just wanted to give you a little bit of an example of when you well what direct speech would look like a conversation and then what how we would change that to a reported speech so the first thing that I want to show you is this little graph right here and I apologize because you're gonna see me moving all around the screen today so if you're talking about direct speech this is a graph wait it's up here that you might see in grammar books if you're changing direct speech from reported speech if the direct speech if it's in the present simple it's gonna get changed to the past symbol if it's in the present continuous it'll get changed to the past continuous if it's in the past simple you change it to the past perfect present perfect past perfect will gets changed to would and can gets changed to could now we're gonna go through there it is we're gonna go through each one of these and I will give you an example and show you how it's changed and then we'll practice it a little bit because like they say practice makes perfect so let's start hear people and and I'm guilty of this too I may not change it to the past simple I might just say she said she goes for a run every day that is something you might hear now I'm not gonna I'm not putting that on here because I want to stick with what the the grammar would specifically tell you if you were to research this in a grammar book present simple gets changed to the past simple now the other thing I want to point out is I said she said that in this case the reason why I put that in parenthesis is because that is optional all right you don't have to say it you can omit it if you want this is your preference she said that she went for a run every day that's fine or you can take it out she said she went for a run every day the one thing I will say is that I think it's more common that if you're talking about verbs like very common verbs like say I think it's common that you will omit that and you're not going to use it that's just my opinion I think it's very common in that case you would omit that when introducing when it's introducing this relative clause so if you say something like common verbs like say she said she went for a run or common verbs like no instead of saying I know that you would just say I know that I know she went for a run every day so keep that in mind and I will come back to that in in just a second so again present simple gets changed to the past simple let's look at present continuous gets changed to the past continuous an example we were taking a vacation my parents said we're taking a vacation my parents said in this case I'm actually using the the present continuous to talk about future time and I know that's confusing I apologize if it is but the rule still stays the same if we change it to report its speech my parents said they were taking a vacation present continuous gets changed to past continuous all right now let's look at past simple gets changed to the past perfect he said my I met my friend for dinner I met my friend for dinner is in the past simple if we change that to report its speech and you're saying it to someone else he said he had met his friend for dinner he said he had met his friend for dinner it gets changed to the past perfect so again I just really I'm doing this because I want you to think about the changes in the verb tense right now from direct speech to the reported speech okay the next one is if you have the present perfect it also gets changed to the past perfect she explained I have witnessed a crime that's in the present perfect I have witnessed a crime if we're going to change that to report its speech it's going to be in the past perfect she explained that she had witnessed a crime so I have witnessed a crime she had witnessed a crime in the past perfect

now the one thing I would say is I changed that that reporting were changed that verb instead of she said I used she explained and because I'm using explained here I felt it would it would be better to keep that instead of omitting that I'm going to keep it I'd say she explained that she had witnessed a crime instead of said which I told you if you're using a common verb like say you might omit that for example I said she said she had witnessed a crime so again I realize I'm throwing a lot of different little things at you and I may come back to some of this a little bit later and do a more in-depth thing but I wanted to try and just focus on some of the basics about when to change these things so for example very simple will gets changed would we will help you move tomorrow my friends said alright we changed that to report at speech and we're not going to use will we're going to use would my friends said they would help us move tomorrow my friends said they would help us move tomorrow alright that is reported speech you're talking about what this other person said will gets changed to would and of course can indirect speech is going to get changed to could he mentioned he mentioned she can drive us to work tomorrow she can drive it he mentioned she can drive us to work tomorrow remember I said mention so now I'm going to keep that he mentioned that she could drive us to work tomorrow alright instead of she can drive us she could drive us excellent well hello seung-ki Park thank you for for thank you for becoming a member excellent so let's let's practice this a little bit and now you get to you get to practice your your typing skills because I'm going to give you a sentence and I want you to change it from direct speech to reported speech alright so here is this one all right Wes said reading is a great way to improve your English skills and Here I am up in the corner of I told you I'm moving around a lot how would you change that to report its speech Wes said reading is a great way to improve your English skills and again the thing that I would tell you to focus on is that that verb how are you going to change the verb in the direct speech okay so I'll give you a moiety if you can write out the full sentence what would you say Wes said reading is a great way to improve your English skills and I think yes that is something I always say and I truly believe reading is it's it's a great way to improve your English skills so what do you think getting some answers yes Katie WD all right he said that yes go SIA excellent it's in the present simple so you're going to change it to the past excellent NAT rock odd and Tunis perfect Carlo West said reading was a great way to improve your English skills I'm changing it from the present simple to the past simple and again I've omitted that in this case I just I didn't say that it's your it's your choice you can do you can use it you can not use it it's up to you let's do the next one if I were to say she proudly proclaimed I was the

was the best student in class now the one thing I will point out with this I wanted to use that proudly proclaimed because I feel that that it's a little bit of a collocation these are words that you may hear use together you might hear that adverb used proudly proclaimed all right you were very happy about it so if you don't know what to proclaim means it means you're stating something kind of in an excited way you might proudly proclaim something so what do you think she proudly proclaimed I was the best student in class the direct to direct speech is in the past simple so in that case we're going to use change it and use the past perfect she proudly proclaimed that she had been the best student in class so the verb to be was is going to get changed to the past perfect had been all right the the past simple will get changed to the past perfect and again this is another example in my opinion I do think you may hear somebody change it to reported speech and they may also just use the past simple and say she proudly proclaimed that she was the best student in class you may hear people say that but I'm just gonna stick with what a grammar book would say that you're going to change the past simple and you're gonna change it to the past perfect all right she proudly proclaimed that she had been the best student in class excellent whoo let's see do we get some of you guys are rocking this yes NAT perfect Andreea yes lolly again yes that works if you want to stick with the past simple in my opinion I think that works Rose Claire yes it's a she had was she had been remember the the past participle of the verb to be I have been I had been in that past perfect all right excellent so again remember had been is what we're looking for now so far we've talking about statements in just taking a statement and changing it from direct speech to reported speech now not all sentences are statements so I have another I have another chart for you to look at all right so here is another chart and hope I hope that this would make sense that down below me you can see statement question and command and when you change it the sentences are gonna change a little differently when you change it to a reported speech because that reported Clause is going to be that that's going to change so for example let's look at the statement and I've used the same context about somebody being tired so the direct speech in the statement I which is right over up top there he said I'm tired alright if we want to change that to report speech I am tired present simple gets changed to the past he said he was tired now when we're talking about statements we're going to use the that clause and in this case I said that you can keep that or you can omit it and take it out he said he was tired he said that he was tired all right both of those that's fine if we're talking about a question and somebody says are you tired she asked are you tired she asked if you want to change that to report its speech you could say she asked if he was tired so instead of using that you could use an if clause if we're talking about a question with the verb to be are you tired are you happy are you basically anything are are you confused I'm sorry sir if you're a little lost I know I'm throwing a lot at you right now so if somebody's asking a question are you tired and you want to change that to reported speech you're going to use an if clause she asked if he was tired the verb is still going to change the same we're gonna change it from the present are to the past what was she asked if he was tired now I just I know it could be a little more confusing you could use an if clause or a weather clause so for example I could say she asked if he was tired or I could say she asked if she asked whether he was tired now another type of question would be those WH questions who what where why when and in that case you're just going to use that question when you change it to reported speech so everybody look at the question who is tired she asked who is tired if we change that to reported speech she asked who was tired we're changing the present to the past she asked who was tired all right now if we're talking about a command because in it with a command you're talking to another person you're giving another person a command go to bed she said so if somebody's like oh I'm tired just said go to bed she said that is a command if we want to change it to reported speech and this is definitely more advanced she told him to go to bed so if you're talking about command you're going to use two plus the infinitive to go she told him to go to bed now the other thing that I would say that is a little challenging is because she said go go to bed she said when we talk about say it's this you say something but when you're reporting the speech you're going to change you're going to use tell because you used tell you say something you tell someone so when you're giving a command you're giving a command to someone so that's the reason why the verb changed instead of you're not gonna say she said him no no she told him because that's the difference between say and tell you say something you tell someone so again different way so the last one I wanted to do I wanted to do another little challenge another example so is this one wait we did this practice and I just showed you this so here is one more all right that I wanted to give you and I want you to change it to report its speech can you also get some Nutella she asked all right it's a question I don't know if you remember that about how can you change a question to report its speech let me let me go back somebody s show the slide all right so here is if you have a question you're gonna use the if Clause all right now I think I you kind of have a hint because this is the question in the conversation that I showed you at the very beginning and I changed it to report its speech do you remember what it was

can you also get some Nutella she asked so when you're going to change it to report its speech start with she asked that's sure that's your starting point we're talking about can can gets changed to could now the other thing about a question remember we're going to use an if clause she asked if he could also get some Nutella because she was talking to me she asked if he could also get some Nutella excellent um let's see she asked yes Mina excellent Robi Ricardo very nice excellent you guys seem to get that sir hey also yes she asked yeah you just need the if if you could say you you know she asked if you could get some also get the but remember if it's a question she asked if he could get something so I know that this was a lot to throw at you today I wanted to try and start out I was hoping that it might be a little easier if we just start with some statements and that's when I wanted to show you this and go through each one and change the statement from direct speech to report its speech if you're still a little confused this is what I would recommend go back through these examples and look at these changes right here because this is very useful if you want to understand well why do we do this we do this when you're writing if you're writing a story you will want to you might want to say things using reported speech you're not always going to use quotes or if you're telling a story to somebody else and you're telling them what another person said that's when you're going to use reported speech so if it helps go back through these statements and look at about about how they were looking at how they were changed alright I think that would help you this right here this chart was definitely a little more advanced because we're not just using statements I was also talking to you about questions and commands so I think that we may practice this a little later on it's a lot of information to go through there's a lot of little grammar changes that need to take place mostly today I wanted you to focus on those verbs and see how those verbs changed from direct speech to reported speech that was the main thing that I wanted you to take away from this lesson I hope you enjoyed the lesson I know that some of you may be a little bit where it found it a little confusing that's okay just keep at it just keep practicing also if you guys and then we had a new member today welcome saw some other members sue ray with us other patrons like Vicki and Aiden I saw you guys in there if you want to show us some love if you like what we do and want to sponsor and support interactive English there are links down in the description to become a member or a patron we offer some different rewards for example one thing I'm gonna do which I haven't even put up there as a reward do like a sneak peek at a future lesson so Tuesday's lesson which will come out on Tuesday I'm gonna put I'm gonna post that today I'm gonna get let the members and patrons you can have a sneak peek at Tuesday's lesson I'm trying to get ahead with my lessons but sometimes it's difficult because there's so much going on right now thank you guys so much for joining me I hope that it made sense a little bit I know it's a lot to take in but it's always good to try to practice a little bit because I think that's the best way to learn and I love doing these live lessons because it gives you an opportunity to try to practice some of this grammar so thank you guys thank you kamila iris ami Amina Lali Ethiopia great to see you I'm just trying to throw out some more names get some names out there Wilbert Hani Marta münster sireesha Luna Anderson so ray Nats Thank You Abdul Rahman thank you guys so much for joining me we will be back next Tuesday with a regular lesson and then next Saturday with another live lesson in please if you are new write your name tell me where you're from in the comments I just want to hear from you you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend and I will see you

Rhythm & Flow in English | Thought Groups, Word Stress, & Connected Speech

so Rhythm and flow in English it's so important for your speaking fluency as well as your comprehension because it it's just going to make it so much easier for other people to understand what you're saying and we're really going to have a look at three different things thought groups stress and a little bit of connected speech we're going to talk about linking and I just I don't want to just tell you about this and have you hear it I also want to show it to you and the way that I'm going to do this and demonstrate this to you is with a poem and because it is Christmas time I've chosen a poem called a visit from St Nicholas it is very popular so it it this is also a little bit of a cultural lesson because this is a poem that you will hear if you're watching a TV show or movie now before we get into Rhythm and flow I I want to quickly go over some of the vocabulary so that you definitely understand everything that that you're going to hear so it begins TW the Night Before Christmas went all through the house twas is the very old contraction of it was it is not something that you should use in spoken English you may hear it like at the beginning of a story if it's from a long time ago but it is the contraction of it was the next line is not a creature was stirring not even a mouse stirring just means moving slightly and then the stockings were hung by the chimney with care so stock stockings are talking about like just this large sock that you would uh at Christmas time hang by the fireplace and it gets filled with presents and then speaking of the fireplace a chimney is just like this vertical pipe in in the home that would let the smoke uh allow it to escape from the house then we have in hopes that St Nicholas soon would be there St Nicholas is just talking about Santa Claus the big Jolly fellow who brings kids all of those gifts the children were nestled all snug in their beds so nestled means that well just settled comfortably and often you may hear it as a verb to Nestle but it just refers to one's comfort and that's a little similar to Snug snug is an adjective that means comfortable warm cozy and you may hear people use this uh with that collocation all snug I'm all snug under the blanket in this case the children are all snug in their bed and finally while visions of sugar plums danced in their heads so sugar plums it's just a small round sugary candy it's it's not really a plum it just looks like a plum let me say it again but but this time together and then we're going to talk about thought groups because part of the flow is determined by thought groups ready TW the Night Before Christmas went all through the house not a creature was stirring not even a mouse the stockings were hung by the chimney with care in hopes that St Nicholas soon would be there the children were nestled all snug in their beds while visions of sugar plums danced in their heads so as I was saying that I'm sure that you heard the the different thought groups because in spoken English we will use a short pause in order to break down a longer sentence and really we're just we're grouping together meaningful information which is why they're called thought groups it just makes it easier for others to understand what we're saying and grammatically these pauses are often accompanied with a comma but but that's not always the case if you have just a question would you like coffee or tea all right there's no comma in that question but you heard the two thought groups would you like coffee or tea the other thing I would say is that at the end of a thought group you you're typically going to have a stressed word and I want to talk about stress right now because that's going to help us create a r and that's because well English is a stressed time language what does that mean this means that English is a language where stressed syllables or words are said at approximately regular intervals and that means that the time between one stress syllable and the next are approximately the same and then if there are any words that come between they're going to be shortened or reduced to fit this Rhythm so I have now moved to the table and the reason I have done this is because very soon we're going to create a beat which is really going to help you understand Rhythm but before we do that I wanted to quickly let you know that if you would like to develop your speaking fluency you can join my speaking course click on that link Down Below in the description the course is all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally and best of all because it's 2022 you can use the code speak 22 to get 22% off so click click on that link down in the description if you'd like to sign up the course includes weekly group lessons with me there are lesson PDFs lesson preview videos uh pronunciation video lessons a couple of audio lessons resource guides there is a lot so click on that link down in the description to find out more about class times and availability and if you have any questions or would like to take the course privately with me just send me an email at info@ interactive English videos. and I hope to speak to you soon so let's talk about Rhythm and the reason why I moved to the table is because well we need to create a beat and that's really going to show you that you're going to say this poem using those stressed intervals and I'm going to say each of those intervals for approximately the same amount of time and the first thing that I need to do is we'll just just create a beat okay so uh here is my beat and it's a little fast but every time you hear my fingers tap the table that that is a stronger sound that's going to be a stressed word or or a stressed syllable okay we're going to fit everything into this Rhythm are you ready here we go it was the night before

Christmas went all through the house not a creature was stirring not even a mouse the stockings were hung by the chimney with care and hopes that St Nicholas soon would be there the children were nestled all snug in their beds while visions of sugar plums danced in their heads okay so I told you that was a that was a bit of a fast beat but you can see the different stressed intervals each one of those took about the same amount of time to say so even though I don't have to keep a beat that fast those intervals are are still going to be said at approximately the same amount of time the other thing I'd point out is that you you can probably tell that the stress is going to come toward the end of the interval now that doesn't mean that you're you're always going to stress the entire word like you have a word like Christmas okay the stress is in that word but Christmas has two syllables and the stress is going to be on the first syllable if we really wanted to get specific so if I wanted to show you exactly where the stress is then it would look like this it was the night before Christmas went all through the house not a creature was stirring not even a mouse the stockings were hung by the chimney with care in hopes that St Nicholas soon would be there the children were nestled all snug in their beds while visions of sugar plums danced in their heads no matter whether you're keeping a quick beat or a slow beat as long as you are saying those intervals and approximately the same amount of time that's the most important thing because that's going to develop that Rhythm and flow so now let's talk about well smoothing things out with connected speech and really what I'm talking about is linking so I'm back over here on the couch to talk to you about linking and this is part of connected speech and really what it means is that the end of one word is going to blend with the start of the next word and this often happens when the final sound of one word is a consonant sound and then the beginning sound of the next word will be a vowel sound so let's go through the poem and I'm going to point out all of the phrases that we can link it was the night before Christmas went all through the house when all you have that final consonant sound that n we can link that with the vowel sound in all when all and and really what it would more sound like is that that n is going to get moved over to the beginning of all it was the night before Christmas when n through the house all right that's a little exaggerated but just want to make it easier for you to to hear it not a creature was stirring not even a mouse so let's first talk about not a okay the first thing I'm going to do is I I'm going to pronounce the article a with the schah sound and I'm just going to say uh it's an unstressed vowel sound and then I'm going to change the t a little bit because it comes between two vowel sounds I'm from the United States so I'm going to pronounce this with a flap T it's going to sound like a soft D NADA NADA okay and again we can link that that D sound at the end of not with the article a NADA all right n a creature was stirring not even a mouse all right we can do the same thing with not even a again I'm going to use a flap T so it's going to sound like a d that's going to get linked not even and then we'll link the N with with the article a not even a not even a mouse not a creature was stirring not even even a mouse the stockings were hung by the chimney with care no nothing we need to link here all right yay excellent uh in hopes that St Nicholas soon would be there again there there's nothing that we need to link so let's continue the children were nestled all snug in their beds okay so there there's a couple of things going on the first thing that I want to look at nestled all so you you could link that D that Eed has a D sound with the vowel sound in all nestled all it really depends on how quickly you're reading this because remember that is a different thought group so because it's a poem there there's no rule as to how fast you need to read this you can find your own Rhythm and flow if you are reading it a little quicker and you're making a much shorter pause then you may hear people link these words the children were nestled all snug in their bed okay in that case you do hear a little bit of linking if you're you're reading it slower and you really make a pause then you're not going to link those words together the children were nestled all snug in their beds okay in that case I'm not going to link the the final consonant sound in nestled that D with all I I think generally speaking if words are in two different thought groups you're not going to end up linking them but again it really just depends on on your own Rhythm and flow and how quickly you would be saying this poem now the next phrase snug in we're definitely going to link that final g sound with the vowel sound in snug in their beds and finally while visions of sugar plums danced in their heads so visions of we're going to link that that consonant Z with the vowel sound in of vision Z and dance in that Ed has a voiceless T sound which we will link with uh the vowel sound in in danced in danced in their heads so let's review everything we've been talking about and I want to read this poem again and let's read it together okay so I want you to say it in the exact same way that I do are you ready TW the Night Before Christmas when all through the house not a creature was stirring not even a mouse the stockings were hung by the chimney with care in hopes that St Nicholas soon would be there the children were nestled all snug in their beds while visions of sugar plums danced in their heads so one thing you may be wondering is how can how can you practice this on your own and continue to work on Rhythm and flow well the first thing I would say is just find something that you can read and say I think it really helps if there's something that you're able to read as you're trying to work on the Rhythm and flow which means uh a song or a poem or or even a speech personally I think poems are the best way to practice this the second thing I would say is I think it really helps if you're able to listen to someone else say it and then you can try and say it in the exact same way that's that's shadowing I just asked you to say the poem with me I asked you to Shadow me and try to say it in the exact same way it's not always necessary for you to analyze everything that that you're trying to practice with and break everything everything into different thought groups and find the stress and Link the different phrases shadowing allows you to do this naturally and you're really just letting your ears do all the work and that would be my suggestion the reason why I tried to break everything down for you in this lesson is just to help you better understand how that Rhythm and flow is created and why we talk the way we do right you could say why we talk the way we do okay I think if you were to do this continuously it would get a bit annoying after a while but I just hope that uh Rhythm and flow is a little bit easier for you to understand now if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Riddles in English | Improve Your Comprehension

Hello, welcome to today's lesson. My name is Wes. This is Interactive English. The channel is all about helping you practice and improve your English. And I know I say that all the time with the hundreds of lessons that we have, but it's true. Uh, I really just want to help you practice your English skills. And today, the way that I want to practice is more so really getting you to really have to think critically and and think hard because today we're going to be doing some riddles in English. We're going to be looking at some English riddles. And I just I just want you to see if you can figure out [snorts] the answer and to solve these riddles. So, this is I think it's a fun way to practice a language, but I think it's also useful because you're really having to concentrate and think about, well, why why is this um why is this riddle challenging? How is it maybe trying to trick you? And what is it what is it trying to say? Before we begin, I just want to give some shoutouts uh to some people, especially uh especially some of our members and patrons. Hi, Teao Lai. Good to see you. Uh, Hotti, say Hazel, um, Ferreran Hanan, how are you? Uh, Antonio, Sami, welcome. As we go through this again, I want you guys to participate in these lessons. Write your answers in the chat. Even if you're watching this later, you can write your answers in the comments section. Use it like it's a piece of paper. So, let's begin with um well, just just to make sure that you know what a riddle is. A riddle is it's a type of question that describes something in a difficult and confusing way, and it also has like a clever or funny answer. And you can do this as a game. So, that's why I said this this English lesson is a little more fun.

Uh but it can also be a nice little challenge as well. So, we're going to start out with some easier riddles and then it may get a little more difficult as we go through this. And if you need uh a little bit of help, maybe I'll give you a hint. So, let's just begin with our first riddle, which is this right here. Kind of you have the sequence of letters, and all it's asking you is what are the next two letters in this? So, uh you see the first six letters. What are the next two letters that you think would follow? All right. And I don't want to I don't want to give you a hint for this one. I think probably uh many of you could figure this one out. But what do you think? What do you think are those next two letters? And then of course I will show you the answer and then tell you why. Maybe maybe this is a little tricky uh for some of you. But you see that sequence of letters and then there are two letters that should come next and which which two letters do you think should come after those? All right. So, wow. Nobody I don't have any guesses just yet. Wow. Maybe maybe we're starting out uh a little too difficult. So, the hint that I would give you is to think of a calendar. All right. And if you're thinking of a calendar, then you probably could guess that the next two letters should be the letters J and A. So those were the first letters of the months, January, February, March, April, May, June, and then we get to July and August. That J and A. All right. Sorry.

Maybe maybe that was I thought maybe that might be a little easier one. That's okay if you guys didn't know it. All right. So, all right. Maybe uh I'll try to give you uh some more hints. So, that sequence of letters should have been followed by J and A. What about this one? Um what can you catch but you cannot throw? So, often you think of catching something like you would catch a ball and you could throw a ball, but what is something else that you can catch and you can't throw? And in this case, I would say think of the word catch. What are some other ways that you can use that? You can use it with some very common phrases, common expressions. I would even say it's a collocation.

Collocations are words that are frequently used together. So, you could say that somebody can catch this thing, but it's not something that you're going to just be able to throw back at somebody else or throw in general. All right. So, excellent. Um, say uh I guess well Dr. Lee Lai yes I'm talking about a cold. Some people put a disease. I think most of the time you're when you talk about this you would talk about catching a cold. If you're talking about the word disease I would say maybe you're going to use the verb get. You would maybe get a disease but you're going to catch a cold because a cold is typically not as serious. It's just something that uh is a bit annoying, frustrating. It lasts for a few days and you would tell somebody I caught a cold. Excellent.

Vicki, how are you? Good to see you. say flu. I think Lois, you could catch the flu. I think that's another one. But in this case, like I said, I think it's useful thinking about that verb catch. And other ways you would use it instead of just thinking about catching and throwing things. People put like a butterfly. You could catch a butterfly. Technically, you could throw a butterfly, too, but I I would not encourage you to do that. The next riddle that I have for you, uh, and this one, just really really think about this. Uh, some of them maybe you're familiar with. That's okay. A woman and nine friends are under one umbrella, but nobody gets wet. Why?

All right. So why is it that this just this one person, this one woman, she has one umbrella, nine friends are around, nobody gets wet. Why is that? Why is that? Why is it that nobody got wet? And I would say that typically the the easiest answer in some cases when talking about riddles, the easiest answer is often the correct one. All right, so what do you guys think? Uh Katrudus, hello. Welcome uh Noel. Good to see uh everybody. If you're just joining us, we're doing riddles. We're It's a fun lesson. We're doing riddles in English that can be a little confusing, tricky. Uh yes. All right. So, I was going to give you a hint and say, think of the obvious reason why nobody would get wet. You guys got this.

Excellent. Paul, uh Vu, Pentu, Lai, Olope, Suana, Dinara, uh Sami. Yes. Nobody got wet because it's not raining outside. Uh, so this is more just kind of a humorous answer as to why nobody nobody got wet because it's not raining. All right, the next one. Maybe I should have started with this one. That was a lot easier than that first one. What is something? What gets broken without being held? And for this one again, I think about that other riddle that we talked about. What can you catch but you can't throw? And the answer was you catch a coal. So think about that word uh that verb um broken. All right. And how else could you use that word? So this is again I think it's not just riddles but this is related to uh learning English because well I don't want to give away I don't want to make it too easy but think about something that you can break but it's not something that you can hold in your hands like for example you can hold a cup in your hand and if you drop it you can break a cup but what do you think uh what are some things and there is more than one answer. All right. Excellent. I see some good answers. Uh, perfect. Uh, yes, Daniel, Nilma, um, Dari, Yasher, uh, [laughter] [gasps] excellent. Um, Arena, SK, say, uh, just give as many shout outs as I can. Um, the these are just a few examples. So again, I I wanted you to think about that word break and how else you might use this word. These again are some collocations in English. These are words that are often used together. So most of you said heart. You can break someone's heart. You can't hold their heart. But in this case, you're talking about um somebody it is sad. Um maybe they're they're no longer in a relationship and they would say their heart is broken.

You can break someone's heart. You can also break a promise. Uh if you well you don't keep your promise then you break your promise. And you can also uh break one's silence. Somebody else uh if they're not talking and they break their silence and they start talking. So these are just some examples uh useful collocations in English. These are pretty common phrases I think uh with that verb break. The next one. So you guys excellent. You guys rock that one. Um, this is just more of a I think a tricky and funny one. You enter a dark room. There is a candle and a lantern. You only have one match. Which one do you light first? All right. You enter this dark room. There's a candle.

There's a lantern. Uh, you only got one match. And which one are you going to light first? All right. So for this one, uh I'd say if I were just to give you a hint, uh just think about this exact situation and think about what you are going to do. What is it that you are exactly going to do and that that basically is going to give you the answer. Uh excellent SK say um B Neil Mosuana Suana wrong. Yes. Uh if you before you light the candle or before you light the lantern, you're going to have to light the match. So in this case, you are going to light the match first. All right. Then we have here we go. Here's another riddle for you. This is again this is related I think to English language learning. Um, what fiveletter word becomes shorter when you add two letters to it? All right, so this may sound a little confusing because you're adding two letters to it. What fiveletter word becomes shorter when you add two letters to it? Typically, again, the the simplest answer is typically the correct one. And I want you to read this carefully and I want you to focus on exactly what the question asks. All right? Take the question like think about this um in a literal sense. All right. What fiveletter word becomes shorter when you add two letters for it? Excellent. Uh Lucy Lai say um Suana Medatan. Uh so the answer the answer is short. So we're talking about the word that becomes shorter.

It's becoming the word shorter when you add the letters eer. So short becomes shorter when you add those two letters. So the correct answer is short. That is the fiveletter word. Awesome. You guys, I think you're really uh maybe uh maybe they are maybe these aren't too difficult. All right, then we have uh we're going to get to a few that are more listening. Um and I'll get to those in just a moment. Here's another one for you. What goes up but never comes back down. What do you think? Um, what goes up but never comes back down? I'll give you a hint in just a moment. I kind of want to give you an opportunity to think about this question uh for a little bit. So, I think excellent people got that. Um, excellent. All right, Stefan. Ready? Uh, what do you think?

This is another one because I do want to explain this word or situation coming up and I don't think I'm giving away uh too much of a hint. What has a neck but no head? I put a picture of a giraffe there because a giraffe has a long neck but it does have a head. So giraffe is not the answer. What is something that has a neck but it does not have a head? All right. And I think this one maybe is a little uh more difficult, but once I tell you the answer, I hope that it uh it makes a little more sense. All right. So, what do you think? What has a neck but no head?

All right. I I don't maybe I don't need to hint. Uh people are are getting this. Yes. Uh Gatrudus Paul. Um Yerry uh Christian. Excellent. Great job. Uh SK Vupentu. Uh Emna. I'm talking about a bottle. A bottle has a neck, but it has no head. And the reason why I wanted to look at this is I want you to think about Well, there's You could probably hear Emmy in the background. a bottleneck. So you would call that that arrow is pointing to a bottleneck. But you could also use this word to describe a situation and you would say the bottleneck is something that causes uh it's a problem that delays a process or stops it from continuing. So for example, think about um work and you have different steps in the process that you have to do and right here this step things are delayed that's your problem and then it's getting backed up. You would say this is your bottleneck and you say oh that's a bottleneck. So often you might hear this word being used in business and people want to make things more efficient. They want to make it go faster and they want to eliminate the bottleneck uh so that there are no delays. So that is uh again you would say the bottle has a neck but I think it's a good word to know. It's a noun if you're talking about a bottleneck. It could refer to a problem that delays a process or stops it from continuing. Excellent. Um, let's see how well your listening comprehension is because now uh I'm not going to show I'll show you the answer, but I want you to listen to it first and think about what I'm saying and try to write the answers in the chat or in the comments. So, the first one that I have is this one right here. I just want you to listen and think about think about what I'm saying. So the riddle is this.

What begins with T, finishes with T, and has T in it. All right, it's all well, I'll just tell you. It's one word. It's one word. Um, what begins with T finishes with T, and has T in it. This riddle, I think, is I think it's pretty common. Um, this is a riddle I think often comes up from time to time. If you've ever done uh riddles in English or you've been in a class and they're talking about riddles, you may have heard this one, but it is for listening and because if I show it to you, I think you'll you'll get the answer. Uh, it'll be too too easy.

Uh, all right. Well, I'll read it one more time. Um, and then I'll give you the answer. What begins with T finishes with T and has T in it. Yes, Li Paul. Um, Jerry, perfect. Uh, Ibad, I'm talking about a teapot. Sometimes, uh, let me show you the answer. So, it begins with T, like the letter T, finishes with T, the letter T, and it has T in it. Sometimes if you see this riddle written then they're going to instead of saying spelling the word tea, they might just write the letter. But I think that can be a little confusing because in this case I think the riddle is meant to be um well read to somebody and they would just listen and try to solve that uh try to figure out the answer because again you might confuse the letter T with the word T. uh in a teapot will it it begins with t it ends with te and of course you put tea in a teapot. So let's do another one. Again this is listening and I want you to listen closely to what I'm saying and then see if you can figure out the answer. So the riddle is this right here. Um all right. There are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens. How many didn't? I'll read it again in case you in case you're a little confused. All right. There are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens. How many didn't? There are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens. How many didn't or how many did not? That is my question. The question is at the end. I'm giving you the situation. There are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens. My question is how many didn't?

All right. And I know most people when you hear this, you're probably thinking, "Wait, what? You you didn't didn't what?" You're wondering like, "Wait, what's going on?" I'll give you a hint. And what I want you to think of um are homonyms. All right? Words that have maybe the same pronunciation, but perhaps they're spelled differently and have a different meaning. So, think about homonyms. That's your clue. And when I show you this, I'm sure you'll read it and then you'll be like, "Oh, yeah. Now it makes sense. Uh, yes. Excellent. O, Lopez, Vicki, perfect. You guys, you got the correct answer. So, remember I said there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens. How many didn't?

How many did not? Now, I told you to think of homonyms because I'm talking about the difference between 28, the number, and saying 20 uh 8. The number 20, and then the verb 8. So, of course, a cow is not going to eat a chicken, but again, this is just a riddle. Uh, there are 30 cows in a field and 20 ate chickens. So, 20 uh so 20 of the cows ate chickens. How many didn't? The answer would be 10. 10 cows did not eat chickens in this case. But again, it it can be confusing because of uh you you I'm sure mostly everybody you're thinking of 28 the number instead of 20 the number and then ate the verb 28 chicken. So eight and eight. Uh yes, that can be a bit confusing. Uh let's do one more um one more listening one and this one I think is very uh I think it's famous and it's from I think 18th century England and it is a riddle and I think maybe you've heard it perhaps in a movie or a TV show maybe not but I want you to listen and then tell me what you think the answer is. Okay. So, here again, this is another listening one. Um, and then, oh, I don't think I have a slide for this. That's okay. I can tell you. Um, so it says, "As I was going to St. I met a man with seven wives. Each wife had seven sacks. Each sack had seven cats. Each cat had seven kits. Kits, cats, sacks, and wives. How many were there going to St.

Ives? All right. You may be thinking, you may be listening to that thinking, "What? What? What's going on? I'll read it again. And again, when people read this, because maybe I'm trying to trick you, I'll I'll read it quickly. So, as I was going to St. Ives, I met a man with seven wives. Each wife had seven sacks. Each sacks had seven cats. Each cat had seven kits. Kits, cats, sacks, and wives. How many were there going to St. Ives? This again is an old riddle from 18th century England. I think it's pretty pretty famous. You could probably Google it and learn more about it. Uh yes, you like what's going on? Yes, I'm sure.

I'll read it one more time and then I'll just tell you the answer. Um as I was going to St. Ives, I met a man with seven wives. Each wife had seven sacks. Each sack had seven cats. Each cat had seven kits. Kits, cats, sacks, and wives. How many were there going to St. Ives? So the idea behind this riddle is that the only important sentence is the very first one. Okay? Because basically they say that first sentence right there. Listen to the first sentence. As I was going to St. Ives and then he starts talking about this other people meeting them and throwing out all these numbers. I met a man with seven wives.

Each wife uh each wife had seven sex. So as I was going to St. Ives, let's pretend it's me and say, "Oh, I met a man." Well, I don't know where that man's going. We I didn't say that he's going to St. Ives. I'm just saying that I met somebody. So in this case, I told you the very first sentence is the only one that really matters as I was going to St. Ives. So the correct answer is how many are going to St. Ives? one just one person who is the narrator who the person who's telling the riddle is the only person who's going to St. Ives as I was going to St. Ives I met a man with seven wives and then they throw out all these other numbers so that just to confuse people so again that is uh a famous riddle from a long time ago in England. All right so I think you guys you guys did excellent. I know that it kind of we went through this pretty quickly. Maybe next time I'll add some more riddles. But I hope if you guys enjoyed this lesson, if you enjoyed doing riddles, I told you this is a great way to practice your comprehension because you're listening to or are you're reading sentences that I think are pretty easy to read and understand, but they typically have a confusing or tricky answer. Uh, I also want to say if you guys like what we do here at Interactive English, and you want to uh show us some love, sponsor and support us, links are in the description for Patreon, for YouTube. It was great to see so many members and patrons here.

Uh, Vicki, Teao, Lai, Gatrudis. Um, always good to see so many people here uh that are supporting what we do, really making this all possible. I really appreciate it. So, thank you guys for for joining me on this Saturday. I hope that uh you you understood these riddles and that the answers make sense and that in the future if you're going to do some riddles in English, it's quite possible quite possibly you somebody will give you these same riddles and now you know the answer. So, thank you guys so much uh for joining me today. Thank you. Thank you. Um let's give some more shoutouts. Uh yes, Maddie. Sorry, Mary Jane. Yes, we we're finishing up wrapping up for right now.

Uh uh but the the lesson will get posted if you want to watch it uh and check out these riddles. But thank you um Sanjana, Vupentu, uh Kasak, uh Daniel, Nadia, uh Wooty, Christian, Jack. Um thanks for being here. Hope you enjoyed the lesson and of course I will see you guys next time. So long.

SAY vs TELL | Confusing Words in English

Today, I'm going to tell you a secret. Well, it's not really a secret, but you should listen carefully to what I'm about to say because I'm going to tell you the difference between these two words Welcome to our global classroom. Before we begin today's lesson, I want to remind you to subscribe to our channel for more video lessons on how you can practice and improve your English And while you're at it, maybe you could share a video, or two, or three, or four. It won't hurt. So today I'm going to talk to you about the difference between say and tell And these two words confuse English learners, but mostly because their meaning is pretty similar So let's get right to it First, let's look at the verb SAY. Now, we use this verb when we want to say something to someone.

Now we don't necessarily have to identify the person or people that we are saying something to but we're just saying something in general and that something might be general information. The weather report says it's going to rain today. In this example the weather report is saying something We don't really know specifically who they're saying it to but they're just saying it in general.

Another example is that you might be saying your opinion about something The kids said Wes teacher is crazy Or perhaps you're reading what the instructions say. ...Instructions say if we finish the game it'll all go away. So in each of these examples we were saying something to someone Now, this is different from the verb TELL, which is when we tell someone something. In this case we usually identify the person or people that we are talking to which is why "tell" is often followed by a direct object Take a look at these examples Ioana told Wes to take out the garbage. In this example Ioana is telling Wes (me), she's telling me something. She's telling me to take out the garbage.

Wes can you please take out the trash? Yeah? Yeah, I'll do it We tell our students to join our social media classes This of course is something that we tell you all the time. We tell you to join our social media classes. So join them! Here are a few more examples using TELL and keep in mind the object that follows the verb. She told me to sit in this chair. The teacher tells us to do our homework. My mom told me to take a bath. I told you not to wake me up.

Now keep in mind that there are a few exceptions when it comes to using TELL. I know, English and all the exceptions... it sucks. But you don't always have to tell someone. Sometimes you can just tell something. For example, You can tell a secret. You can tell a lie. You can tell the truth. You can tell a joke. And you can also tell a story. These are several exceptions when it comes to using TELL. And you just have to memorize them, use them, and you will eventually remember them. I'm telling you the truth. Okay. Let's practice what we've learned, and this is a listening comprehension activity I am going to tell you a sentence, and that sentence is missing a word, which is either SAY or TELL.

After listening to each sentence, I want you to say your answers out loud. You'll be saying this to me, and I'm going to be listening. I'll give you a moment to say your answer, and then after I will tell you the correct answer. So let's begin. I don't want you to _____ any more lies. I don't want you to _____ any more lies. The answer is tell. This is one of those exceptions: you tell a lie. I don't want you to tell any more lies. I can't hear you. Can you please _____ your answer again? I want you to _____ your answer. I can't hear you. Can you please _____ your answer again?

I want you to _____ your answer. The answer is say because I want you to say something, which is the answer. I want you to say your answer out loud. That was so rude. I can't believe he didn't _____ hello. That was so rude. I can't believe he didn't _____ hello. The answer is say because we were talking about something that the person didn't say. I can't believe he didn't say hello. Umm... I can't remember: What did you _____ I should do? Umm... I can't remember: What did you _____ I should do? The answer is tell because we're talking about telling someone something. What did you tell me I should do?

Perhaps it's a little easy when I do the activity. Now let's see if you can listen for these words when other people say them. Be careful what you _____. Be careful what you _____. Be careful what you say. Now _____ the truth. Now _____ the truth. Now tell the truth. Just _____ the first thing that pops into your mind. Just _____ the first thing that pops into your mind. Just say the first thing that pops in your mind. Don't _____ his name. Don't _____ his name. Don't say his name. And what did you _____ her? And what did you _____ her? And what did you tell her? _____ something I'm giving up on you.

SENTENCES in English | Everything you need to know about TYPE & STRUCTURE

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson thank you for joining me my name is Wes and this is Interactive English and in case this is your first time here we are all about helping you practice and improve your English and the way that we'll today's lesson it is it's a grammar lesson because I want to talk to you about something that I think it is so important but I think sometimes people might tend to overlook this grammar and I want to talk to you about sentence types and sentence structures so this lesson it consists of two parts I'm going to talk to you about first sentence types and then I'm going to talk to you about sentence structures and I'm gonna go through this one at a time and I'm also going to tell you after I talk to you about it I'm gonna tell you why this is important why this is information that you need to know and how it's going to help you improve your English and achieve fluency because I know for many of you out there that's what you want to do you just want to keep improving and getting better and better and better and I think that's why that's why we're here that's why I'm here because I want to help you in that mission so we're gonna talk to you again just a reminder we're gonna talk to you about sentence types and sentence structures I told you already that the lesson then it has these two parts types and structures first we'll talk about the types then we'll talk about the structures and as we go through this but the way that I want all of you to participate is I want you to write some examples in the chat and actually practice as we talk about the different sentence types and the different sentence structures but first I want you again if I'd say hello to me write your name in the chat in the comments if you're watching this later tell me your name tell me where you're from I just want to hear from you so hello just quick shout outs hello Ada and Angela Aziza nesrin tirsty great to have you Oh Dena George thank you guys for joining me today so let's get into the first part which is talking about the the different sentence types and as a little bit of a warm up I have a question for you all right well I want you to think this is the this is the sentence answer the question this is a sentence what type of sentence is this answer the question is it a declarative sentence an interrogative sentence an imperative sentence or an exclamatory sentence which which do you think so this is the sentence I just say hey answer the question I want you to tell me what sentence type this is and afterwards we're gonna go through these one at a time we're gonna go through them individually so what I hope that you've said is that this sentence right here is C it is an imperative sentence if I say answer the question it is imperative excellent you guys you guys did great for that warm-up question so I just wanted to put this little graphic up here showing the different sentence types because there are four of them you have declarative which sometimes people call like simple sentences I don't want to confuse that because then we're talking about sentence structure but we will discuss this a little later on but we have declarative sentences and those would just be well we're gonna go through them one at a time but I gave you an example as well you answered the question that is a declarative sentence an interrogative sentence also known as a question sentence did everyone answer the question I hope I hope that you did that is an interrogative sentence a question an imperative sentence the command like like the warm-up the example I gave you when somebody says will answer the question that is an imperative sentence and then an exclamatory sentence down here you might say I got the correct answer and it ends in that exclamation point so let's go through each of these right now and then afterwards I'm gonna tell you why this is important why is this information that you need to know so let's first begin with the declarative sentence and a declarative sentence I told you some people may refer to it as a simple sentence but that that's more talking about structure so a declarative sentence is it's a statement that relays some information and it ends with a period and I put the the punctuation mark at the end and that is something that's important when you're thinking about sentence type as well as structure punctuation is important keep that in mind and here are some examples right here like the the first example I gave you you answered the question period I'm just making a statement I play basketball in the morning I'm giving you some information and again if you guys want to practice if you're with me here write write some declarative sentences in the chat and just practice your English skills that's what it's all about or the last example I gave you down here I could say well it's going to rain I'm making a statement I'm providing some information each of these sentences ends with a period and you should know that when you are writing and when you are speaking most of the time you're going to be using declarative sentences you're just going to be speaking or writing and giving some sort of information so this is the most common sentence type right here is the declarative sentence let's look at the next one which is I think this is this is the fun one is the interrogative sentence which is known as just the question sentence it's a sentence that asked a question any question and it ends with a question mark that little question mark at the end so you can see that at the end of all of these examples did everyone answer the question what do you do is it true the reason why I put that little you see the red line there with the arrow going up the reason I put that is because of the intonation I want you to think about the way that I'm saying this because when people ask questions there is that that rising intonation at the end which tells us that somebody is asking a question and you would any time you're having a conversation if you ask a question at the end you're gonna hear that rising intonation so just just listen to me I will repeat these questions you can also practice with me

save the questions out loud again practice your speaking skills so I could say well did any did everyone answer the question all right you had that little rising intonation or maybe I'm talking to you and I want to know about your job and I ask you what do you do what do you do what do you do and you hear that rising intonation or somebody could say is it true is it true is it true and you hear that rising intonation at the end which tells us it's a question and somebody is asking this and again this is important especially for when you're talking about your your overall fluency and you just want to when you're speaking you want to sound natural you want to sound you know as fluent as you can and that's where punctuation and these little things are important like when we're talking about questions in that rising intonation at the end the next sentence type I told you is an imperative sentence and often these are known as command sentences you're giving someone a command so it can be more than that because it is a sentence that can give a command and instruction to make a request or even offer advice now these sentences can end with either a period or an exclamation mark and again I put those symbols in there so that you can recognize them and this goes back to the way that we speak in fluency so here's the first one right here this is something that you well you could see I think any type of instruction preheat the oven anytime you buy maybe you you buy some food you buy a meal and you look at how to prepare this thing and it says preheat the oven that is an imperative sentence it ends with a period or I could say this this is something that I ask you all the time and I would say this is more of a request please hit the like button because if I ask you that please hit the like button I say it's a request because of the word please I'm not giving you like a firm command if we take away please and I just say hey hit that like button that would be more of a command of me telling you something to do hit the like button but when we add that please I think it becomes more of a nice request and I hope you guys do if you find these lessons useful please hit that like button and then the last one get out of here alright you're giving somebody a command you're telling them what to do get out of here and it ends in that exclamation mark now this is when somebody might see that exclamation mark and they say well is it really is it an imperative sentence is it a command because it could also be an exclamatory sentence which is the next sentence type right here this is a statement that shows an emotion a strong emotion and it's going to end with one of those exclamation marks right there and I put that that word mood there because I want you to think about emotion as well as those emojis hoping that it just it helps you think a little more about expressing if you are happy or you're sad or you're angry and you you capture that emotion with that exclamation mark right there and I'll read these to you and again repeat after me this is a way that that you can practice and say this out loud because if you are reading a story and you see this word right here with that exclamation point with that exclamation mark you're not going to say you're not going to say awesome you're gonna read it like awesome alright show that emotion or somebody maybe say though we had a baby and they say oh that's great news and you're happy you're astonished that's great or I think maybe this is something that if you're arguing with another person you really don't like them and you want to just show you're angry and you say I hate you and you capture that emotion with that exclamation mark or perhaps food and you say something is Wow it's it tastes so good and you just really want to express it express it and you say that's it's delicious all right oh it's so delicious and you you capture the feeling with that exclamation mark or that last one when whenever there's a problem and something goes wrong you might hear somebody say I say it when it happens to me and you say

oh oh all right there's a problem something's wrong oh and you can capture those emotions with that exclamation mark and again to go back to the main point all right why why is it important that you understand a declarative sentence and those statements the interrogative sentence those questions with that rising intonation the imperative sentence you're giving somebody a command or even these exclamatory sentence sentences I think it really goes back to reading because when you read you are saying the sentences in your mind or you might be reading out loud it's really up to you but you're saying the sentence is you are following the punctuation and you're trying to capture the flavor of each sentence and this is what helps you develop a nice rhythm and flow to your speech so that you sound natural because when you are reading something out loud or when you're reading it in your mind and you see a question or you see a period and you pause a little bit or you see an exclamation mark and you capture that feeling that is what's going to help you develop your overall fluency and that's why I say reading is so important because when you're reading to yourself and you're listening to yourself say these words in your mind the next time you have a conversation you're going to try and speak the same way so that you sound natural and you want to show an emotion with an exclamation mark or you want to ask a question and you have that rising intonation so when you think about okay why should you understand these sentences because it really helps with your reading if you're able to identify which type of sentence it is and understand how you should be reading it it's going to help your overall fluency so you guys excellent you guys Rock that we talked about the four sentence types and now we're going to move on to the second part which is talking about those sentence structures but before before I move on if you guys like what we do here at interactive English and you want to show us some love you can check out our patreon page it's just another way to connect with us support what we do here at interactive English I know some patrons are with us already like Aiden I saw you earlier and again check it out I put the link in the chat there's also a link in the description down below so let's warm up a little again but before we do a warm up we're talking about sentence structure and this is really getting into grammar more specific grammar about you know how these sentences are put together and first thing I want you to know before we start this is you need to know what an independent clause is and you need to know what a dependent clause is so an independent clause it's just it's a sentence it expresses a complete thought and it can stand alone it is a full complete sentence that is an independent clause a dependent clause it's just the opposite of that it's a phrase it does not express a complete thought and it cannot be its own sentence so in order to understand the different sentence structures and to understand why they're different it's important that you know the difference between an independent clause and a dependent clause and we will I will identify this for you and we will get into it so let's just start with a number another warm-up question so I could say I give you this sentence right here after I brush my teeth I get dressed for work what kind of sentence is this this is a mmm sentence what do you think is this a simple sentence is it a compound sentence is it a complex sentence or is it a compound-complex sentence those are the four different structures that we're going to talk about so I give you this example what type of sentence do you think this is write your answer in the chat write your answer in the comments I just want you to interact participate in these lessons after I brush my teeth I get dressed for work this is a what do you think simple sentence compound sentence complex sentence compound complex I hope that you guys said see actually this is a complex sentence and let me show you this other chart right here and we're gonna go through each of these as well so here is the chart the first one up at the top is just a simple sentence I eat a healthy breakfast this morning all right I eat a healthy breakfast I should say actually this should be in the morning I eat a healthy breakfast in the morning that makes a little more sense that is just a simple sentence compound sentence as we go through these see if you can kind of identify like well how are these different from each other compound sentence I eat breakfast in the morning and then I brush my teeth that is a compound sentence complex sentence was the example that I gave you after I brush my teeth I get dressed for work that is a complex sentence and then the compound complex sentence I usually take the bus when I go to work but sometimes I like to walk that is a compound complex so we're gonna go through each one of these I will give you some other examples I'm gonna try to break down the grammar so that it's a little easier to understand and then I'll tell you what why why is this important why should you know this information right here so let's begin with a simple sentence all right a simple sentence has one independent clause this is a sentence that has a subject and a predicate so the subject is just who or what the sentence is about that is my subject the predicate is talking about what the subject does and the predicate is going to include the verb so let's look at this sentence right here she watches the movie it is a simple sentence now let's break it down into its different parts where we have a subject and a predicate because an independent clause it's going to have a subject and a predicate who is the sentence about well it's about she she is my subject what does she do that's my predicate she watches the movie so I tried to color code this for you to make it a little easier to see so the the independent clause simple sentence is going to have a subject and doesn't play football all right it's one sentence it's a compound sentence with two independent clauses so let's let's break this down little bit for you so we have he plays basketball all right that is one independent clause he is the subject plays basketball is the predicate the conjunction that connects these sentences is the word but and often you would find I think the most common conjunctions are there's four of them I'd say our but and so and or those are the four ones and but or so those are common conjunctions then we have the second independent clause he doesn't play football again subject and predicate so he plays basketball first independent clause but he doesn't play football that is my next independent clause so again a compound sentence it's going to have two independent clauses now let's keep moving forward with a complex sentence so a complex sentence and we're gonna get a little more detail is a sentence it's going to have an independent clause and at least one dependent clause it may have more than that but it's a sentence that's going to have one independent clause and at least one dependent clause the dependent clause is likely going to begin with a subordinating conjunction and you're probably thinking what is a subordinating conjunction so those are words like after before while when and that is a subordinating conjunction and they often come at the beginning of a dependent clause so let's look at my sentence right here before I go to sleep

I like to read in bed this is a complex sentence it has one dependent clause and one independent clause and the way it's broken down is like this so before I go to sleep that is a dependent clause it is not a full sentence if I just say something like before I go to sleep you're probably thinking well what I need more information so that's what I mean where it's not a complete thought it's not a full sentence that is a dependent clause in order to make it a full sentence you need to have an independent clause with it so before I go to sleep that is my dependent clause before is the subordinating conjunction it comes at the beginning of the dependent clause now I like to read in bed this is a full sentence it is an independent clause it has a subject I and it has a predicate like to read in bed I like to read in bed it is a full sentence it's easy to understand if I tell you this on its own you understand what it means so together when we put these together before I go to sleep I like to read in bed that is a complex sentence now this sentence right here notice again think about punctuation so before I go to sleep comma I like to read in bed the dependent clause is first the dependent clause it does not always have to come first it can come before the independent clause it can also come after the independent clause so let's change this around and if I put the dependent clause second I might have this I like to read in bed before I go to sleep what's changed do you notice that the punctuation has changed so when the dependent clause this this brings me to the rule what is the rule when the dependent clause comes first you need to separate them with a comma dependent clause comma and then the independent clause when the dependent clause comes after the independent clause there is no comma all right I like to read in bed before I go to sleep again if you're you're having a conversation you're telling a story this becomes important because there is a slight pause when you have that comma I say well you know before I go to sleep I like to read in bed did you hear that pause or I could say well I like to read in bed before I go to sleep oftentimes even when we're speaking even when we're having a conversation this this is going to affect the way that we say things and again it goes back to two people wanting to speak naturally and and that's why this is very useful to learn so remember that complex sentence if the dependent clause comes after the independent clause there's no comma alright and I know that this is a lot of information to take in we're going pretty quickly but I wanted to make sure I got through all of this so this is a complex sentence now let's look at a compound complex sentence and because you know what a compound sentence is it has two independent clauses because you know what a complex sentence is you have an independent clause and a dependent clause well then you could probably guess that a compound-complex sentence has is a sentence with two independent clause and at least one dependent clause maybe it has more but it's at least going to have one and when you have this you would call it a compound-complex sentence it is the fourth type of sentence structure that I wanted to go over with I wanted to go over with you and here's the example right here so I could say you left after 10 minutes but then you came back this is an example of a compound complex sentence now let's break it down so it's a little easier to follow and understand so we have our two independent clauses we have the first one which is just you left so if I say this to you it's a very short sentence it has a subject and a verb but it's a full thought it's a complete thought because if I say well you left he left she left you understand what that means it is a complete thought after ten minutes is my D pendant claws remember the dependent clause often it's going to begin with that subordinating conjunction after before when wild because those are all subordinating conjunctions which tells you uh okay it's a dependent clause so you left after ten minutes this is like the the complex part of my sentence and then we're going to combine it using the conjunction but you then you came back that is another independent clause it has a subject and a predicate so when we put all that together you left after ten minutes but then you came back that is a compound-complex sentence alright and now again you may be asking yourself why do I need to know this why should I understand the different sentence structures before I told you the sentence types are great for your reading so that you can identify and understand well how should you how should you read this when in your mind and then how should you say this when you're having a conversation well this is very important for your writing because when you are writing it's great if you can use all of the sentence structures you should try to write using a variety of sentence structures and you should do this if you are writing a story if you are writing an email at work if you're writing even a text message or a letter to someone it's always good to use a variety because it's more engaging for the reader that people want to read a variety of sentence structures it makes it more interesting and it makes it easier to read as well because if you do this it's going to allow you to develop a more meaningful rhythm and flow to your prose which is another way of saying it's going to make it's going to make your writing it's going to you're going to be able to develop a more meaningful style and have a nice rhythm and flow to your style which is what you want because when you write something whether it's an email or a story you want other people to read it if you just have a story that is only simple sentences that's going to be pretty boring you want to make sure that you have a variety so that it's more interesting and that is why it's useful to understand the different sentence structures as well as be able to use them it's very important for your writing that you know how to use these sentence structures like let's go back through that go back over them like a simple sentence right using simple sentences you should write using compound sentences you should be able to write using complex sentences as well as right here a compound-complex sentences so understanding the sentence types good for your reading I think understanding these structures is great for your writing and this is stuff that you you want to do so let's practice these a little bit I have some sentences that I want to give you and this is going to be good review and I want you to identify two things I want you to identify the type of sentence as well as the structure so we this is everything we went over in today's lesson is just a reminder those are the four sentence types declarative interrogative imperative exclamatory and as well as the four different structures simple compound complex and compound-complex so let's practice I have here this is your sentence right down here tell me the sentence type and then tell me the structure so those are two different things that we're talking about so if somebody says okay I'm gonna say this go wash your hands or you can't eat go wash your hands or you can't eat what type of sentence is that first off think about what type of sentence is the way I'm reading it go wash your hands or you can eat and then think about the structure look at the way that it's written and then think about what is the structure of this sentence so excellent yes great job Hayden the the type of sentence go wash your hands or you can't eat it an imperative sentence because it's like a command I'm giving you a command I'm telling you to do something it's also a compound sentence because I'm giving to come to commands go wash your hands or you can't eat and I'm combining them with that conjunction or go wash your hands or you can't eat it is an imperative sentence and it's also a compound that is the sentence structure excellent perfect the fact that you guys got a lot of that yes door Angela it makes me feel like yes you are you understand this a little better so again I'm giving you the type I'm giving you the structure here's your this is this is my question and this is something that that I might ask you and I might say to you okay hey what are you going to do after this lesson it is a very common question that somebody might say well what are you going to do after something what are you going to do after this lesson what are you going to do after you eat dinner what are you going to do after the movie what type of sentence is that and what is the structure so what do you think that that think about this is a question what are you going to do after this lesson write this set did I first identify the type and then identify the structure all right so I think close I see somebody yes I think you guys got the you got the the declaratory interrogative part so it is it is an interrogative sentence but it's also it's a question but it's also a complex sentence because what are you going to do that is well it ends in a question mark that is my my independent clause because I can just say well what are you going to do that is a complete that's a complete thought it is a question after this lesson remember I told you that the the dependent clause is talking about it's going to begin with a sub or a conjunction a subordinating conjunction after before when wild because so in this case that is my dependent clause what are you going to do after this lesson what are you going to do after this lesson is a common question that I think you can get let's look at the last one another one the list of this is the last one yes you did a great job today what type of sentence is this I was about to I was about to just say the answer I kind of I almost did it's a I think you should get this it's very easy it's very simple I think you should know what type of sentence I told you that most of the time when you are writing when you are speaking this is the type of sentence that you're going to use it is going to be a declarative you talk about structure I think this part of sentence structure is useful these are the four different types of sentence structures which i think is wonderful for your so I hope you guys enjoyed this lesson thank you guys just to give some more shoutouts for for being here today lolly Carlos Evelina Aiden pachoo Angela Rafi player players and not 1953 thank you guys Ladon Maria Aziza naughty thank you guys for joining me today I hope you found this information useful keep practicing keep up the good work again reading is a great way to continue improving your skills because you're reading this to yourself you're seeing you're seeing these sentences you're able to identify the type of sentence and you're seeing the correct structure as well when you're reading so don't underestimate the value of reading hope you have a wonderful day and of course I will see you guys next time so long

SEXUAL INNUENDOS How to understand these suggestive remarks....

let's talk about sex actually i want to talk to you about sexual innuendos so that you know if somebody else is talking about sex let me quickly introduce myself my name is wes the channel is interactive english which is all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today it's all about really helping you improve your comprehension because sexual innuendos this is something that you will hear and you may come across them in tv shows movies possibly even casual and informal conversation so i think this lesson it's gonna have some vocabulary in it but it's also cultural as well so let's begin with well what an innuendo means an innuendo is when somebody makes a remark that suggests something sexual or unpleasant without directly saying it now not all innuendos are sexual but many of them are which is why in this lesson we're just going to focus on sexual innuendos and uh let's let's just begin with well it's maybe it's a bit of a creepy example if you enjoy learning english i want you to hit that like button go ahead and pound that dirty like button because you're a naughty englishman all right i i apologize all right i'm not going to do that again i felt a bit awkward just saying it but i told you that that was a bit of a creepy example now even though i was just asking you to hit the like button i was suggesting something sexual and i think it was quite obvious i'm sure that you understood that because of the words that i was using my intonation and my emphasis and those are three things that may help you identify a sexual innuendo there are many words out there that people may use when talking about sex so if we're talking about well the act of having sex words like hit pound or smack may be used if we're talking about perhaps uh the anatomy body parts of a man or a woman words like big or hard or wet or even if you're talking about somebody's behavior their personality you may use words like naughty or even bad and i would like to point out that naughty i think this is a common one even though this word is used to describe somebody's poor behavior i think often people may refer to children as naughty if you are talking about an adult and there are many adults out there that have bad behavior but if you say they're naughty i think there's a good chance somebody may think that you are talking about this in a sexual way so just be careful about describing somebody as naughty especially if it's an adult but since these are all words that people may use when actually talking about sex they may also be used when people are trying to make some sort of sexual innuendo intonation may also be used if somebody is trying to say some sort of sexual innuendo because the rising and falling of my voice may sound a bit sexual and suggestive even though i'm not saying anything that's very important and finally emphasis if you emphasize a word it really draws attention to that word it's like you're saying that okay this word is important so if you emphasize one of those words that i talk to you about like like big or smack or hard then people are going to think okay well why is this word important why are you emphasizing this word are you trying to suggest something else so word choice intonation and emphasis are three things that i think can help you easily identify a sexual innuendo there are also some common expressions and jokes that people may say which is another great way to identify whether or not someone is using a sexual innuendo one expression that i think you would hear is if you know what i mean so somebody would say the sexual innuendo they would make some suggestive remark and then follow it with if you know what i mean you're my kind of man if you know what i mean that's not what i meant a joke that you may hear which i think is probably more common uh if you're watching a tv show or movie it's not one that you may hear just in in conversation is that somebody would refer to something that is perhaps in a man's pocket something that is around their crotch and they would follow it with or are you just happy to see me is that a candy bar in your pocket or are you just happy to see me trying to suggest that the man is aroused excited and just really happy to see someone dawson is that a tree branch here are you just happy to see me is that coke in your brain you're just glad to see me even emojis can be used as sexual innuendos so you don't even have to say anything i i can just show you these emojis right here and you could probably guess what it may be trying to suggest let's look at a real life example of a sexual innuendo and i'm going to show this to you i'm going to show you an ad and i want to see if you can kind of understand what it's trying to suggest and think about some of those suggestive words here's the ad congratulations george brownridge for pleasing 15 women for an entire day we were all exhausted and very satisfied and we look forward to next year we all thank you so this ad it's quite funny because i think the sexual innuendo is pretty obvious and i i did not read it with much intonation or emphasis because i really wanted you to think about some of those suggestive words the first one is please so to please someone i think people may use this when referring to sex that the other person is happy with the the performance and and that they're quite satisfied which is another word another suggestive word that appears in this ad i think just another word that just adds on top of everything is exhausted that the fact that everyone was very tired it really does make the sexual innuendo more apparent now i don't know if this was this was maybe an accident or perhaps somebody at the paper was having some fun with this ad or maybe if the whole thing was a joke but the following day they came out with this apology our sincere apology to george brownridge and staff our intentions were to thank him for a generous holiday shopping trip which he arranged this annual tradition is much appreciated any inappropriate innuendoes were unintentional and we take full responsibility for the ad that appeared in yesterday's papers that is a real life example of a sexual innuendo and i i chose it because i think it's pretty easy to understand to identify and to know well okay why why is this a sexual innuendo but as i mentioned before i think many times sexual innuendos they're not going to be so obvious and they're going to be quite subtle and to find that we have to look no further than children's movies that's right children's movies well some of them have a lot of sexual innuendos so i'm going to show you some right now and we're going to talk about it this is something that has gone on for i think many years but i would say that i think one film that kind of really changed the way that this was done and they did a very good job of putting some of these sexual innuendos in there very subtly is toy story and then since then i think a lot more movies have been doing this but let me let me show you an example from the movie toy story so you have one of the main characters woody who has these interactions with little bo peep and i think quite often when they have their interactions there's typically some sexual innuendo involved like this one right here oh hey it was uh nothing what do you say i get someone else to watch the sheep tonight hell yeah so this is a suggestive question she doesn't use any words that i think are unpleasant or graphic she does use that that intonation which really i think tries to make it a little more obvious what she's trying to say somebody else watches the sheep we can go off together we can fool around have sex and there is your sexual innuendo another popular movie frozen also has some sexual innuendos which i think adults would find very humorous in the clip that i'm getting ready to show you one of the main characters anna she she's talking about her fiance and this is a guy that she decided to marry just after meeting him and the other character in the clip kristoff he's very surprised by this he's like i can't believe you're you're marrying this guy right after you met him how well can you possibly know him so he starts asking her these questions to to see if she really knows this person what's his last name of the southern isles what's his favorite food sandwiches best friend's name probably john eye color dreamy what size foot size doesn't matter the sexual innuendo it's at the very end when he asks about foot size and he even says it with a different intonation foot size and she responds foot size doesn't matter so this is a sexual innuendo because they're not talking about the size of his foot they're talking about the size of his and i'm not talking about an eggplant here's an example from the movie shrek and shrek and well let's just talk about it on the other side that's it right there that's doula i told you i found it so that must be lord farquaad's castle yeah that's the place do you think maybe he's compensating for something so they get to this castle and they see the king's huge castle and shrek asks do you think he's compensating for something suggesting that the king has this very big castle because really he has a small and this question do you think he's compensating for something is a question that you may come across in other tv shows and movies you somebody may even use it in casual conversation if they're making a joke perhaps a guy has a very expensive car and he has this car because he wants to impress all these different women you could ask do you think he's compensating for something if you know what i mean here's an example from the film rat tattooey when chef linguine he's trying to confess to this other person colette that well he's really not a great chef he's getting all this help from a rat and he's having a difficult time telling her pay attention to her eyes as he's as he's saying this you have a rush no no no i have this this tiny uh a little little a tiny chef who tells me what to do so i i thought this was kind of funny that he's he's talking about this tiny little and you see her eyes quickly glance down to his crotch as though he's suggesting something else and eventually yes he tells her it's a tiny little rat

but again it's very subtle and i think it's something that maybe children might not catch on to but adults they're going to find it funny and then i wanted to show you this sexual innuendo from the movie cars because well it's not about what's being said it's about the action so just have a look and see if you understand the sexual innuendo we're like your biggest [Music] so the two cars which we can presume to be women are flashing their headlights at lightning mcqueen and the the sexual innuendo is well we it's suggesting that they are showing lightning mcqueen their breast because well there's two different things headlights can be an innuendo for a woman's breast but also flash that verb to flash means to show something well quickly and for a short period of time but if we're talking about how it may be used sexually women would flash somebody it's like they're revealing their breast and if you're talking about a man if he flashes somebody he would be revealing uh his crotch try to keep an eye out or listen for a sexual innuendo the next time you may be watching a children's movie i told you i think nowadays they're pretty common i hope that this lesson was easy to follow and understand i'm not telling you that you need to try to use sexual innuendos in your conversation if anything it's just good for your comprehension but right now what i want you to do is i love hearing from you guys so in the comments i just want you to write me a big comment if you know what i mean actually i don't even know what i mean i just want you to write me a comment and actually if you want to try to practice and try to use a sexual innuendo write one in the comments see if you can say something suggestive that we could well interpret as a sexual innuendo write that in the comments share with us let's see what uh you guys come up with you can be creative thank you guys so much for watching and i will see you next time

SHOPPING PHRASAL VERBS TO IMPROVE FLUENCY

hello and welcome today we are talking about a super fun lesson shopping phrasal verbs [Music] so today like I said I have a fun but also very useful lesson phrasal verbs are always good to teach because we use them all the time also because they're difficult and learners have problems with them all the time they're difficult because first of all they're not it's not easy to guess what they mean it's a verb and a preposition and the preposition it doesn't tell us what the meaning is but also because I don't know they're just they're just you kind of I just have to memorize them so they're difficult so that is coming up today a super fun super cool lesson and I think it's very very useful because we use shopping verbs and shopping phrasal verbs all the time but before we start I wanted to welcome you I wanted to see who's here and and welcome you guys lolly hello fried swallow young Masumi ibrahim Bijou faith in union marceline david abdul aziz welcome welcome welcome thank you for joining us if you are joining us a little later please write down where you're writing from and what is your name because we always want to know so thank you guys um and I think we have a great group today and a very fun lesson so just like I said shopping phrasal verbs they're very useful we go shopping all the time whether we go for groceries whether we go for clothes for things we need around the house we use these every day and you know phrasal verbs are not easy and I think anytime we get a chance to practice we should take it so let's begin with the beginning I guess if you're new to phrasal verbs here's a useful tip phrasal verbs can be separable or non-separable and what on earth am I talking about you know what I'm talking about write it down in the comments what do you think means separable or non-separable well first of all verbs in England English going in these different categories if it's a transitive verb it means that a transitive verb can take an object and the direct object can go with it you guys here my cat you see her right here but those are transitive verbs they can take a direct object now many transitive verbs are separable meaning that you can separate the verb from the preposition so for example the verb I have here you may have seen the slide before I like to use it because there's a West example on there that I like so if it's separable like take you can take something for example you can take the trash out so you can separate you can say take out the trash or take the trash out that makes it separable so you can use them with something in between the problem is that some transitive verbs can also be inseparable like yet so we got on the plane you cannot say we got the plane on and really the best way to study these is to memorize them and just kind of listen for them and see if something sounds strange or weird it's just it probably means it's not separable and then you'll learn that you learned that later I'm sorry about my cat she's just yeah sorry what she's saying hi hi so that's that's what it is now a good rule which finally we have a rule is that intransitive phrasal verbs verbs that do not take a direct object are always inseparable you can never separate them so we have here that west wakes up at 9:00 a.m. well you can never say wakes West weeks at 9:00 a.m. up it just sounds completely wrong you can't do it so that's a good rule so that is separable non-separable and for the verbs that I have today I will tell you if they're separable or non separate and again the more you listen for these the more that will sound it will sound off to you if you're trying to change it and it's just like it doesn't work trust your instinct because because it will help you so this is my first border but I have a question for you guys so it's to stress out and my I'll tell you the definition and then I'll ask you my question the definition is to worry or feel anxious or and and that's kind of what it is when you stress out about something you're very worried about it you you're just like feeling very very stressed about it so I wanted to ask you is this is this common with you do you stress out when you go shopping and then because I'm very curious to see and then again welcome if you just if you're just joining us write down where you're coming from and write down any questions you have and we'll try to to answer them so I'll share for me I don't like crowds it's pitch and I don't like big stores so for me stress like especially being in a physical store I always get stressed out so I have my my example they're crowded shopping malls stress me out especially around Christmas time and Wes knows this very well I freaked out and I just get out and I'm just I can't I can't I can't deal with it many times so that is my that is my example okay

let's see so I'm gonna keep going it's our first one and it is separable so something stresses me out the stress is wes out its can stress anyone out its separable you can separate it stand out okay this is another one that is common with shopping I think especially with shopping for clothes when something stands out it means that it is different it is it kind of you see then you're like oh wow that is that is distinctive that is that is really usually in a good way when we usually talk about something that stands out is in a good good way my example here is these rain boots stand out from the rest because they're red you don't really see a lot of red rain boots out there I used to love I used to like going shopping with my mom sometimes and we'd look at something that really stands out and when we checked the price tag it's it was like four hundred dollars so I learned that many things that stand out are sometimes the price stands out too so it's not always it can be problematic but that is to stand to stand out and you can't separate this one okay we're in we're in when you wear something in again like I said if you're finding phrasal verbs difficult it's probably because of stuff like this that it doesn't make any sense the prepositions made absolutely no sense as to how they're placed near the verb however to wear Ana means to wear something to make it more comfortable and I really just hear this with shoes maybe with jeans but I heard it with shoes most of the time so for example if I were in my shoes it's because I'm trying to make them more comfortable and the process of wearing in shoes it's not the most pleasant because maybe I'll get a blister or something like that so my question for you for my girls out there do you girls wear do you like do you find heels comfortable even if you wear the man even after you wear them in I'm just curious do you ever find them comfortable share even even if it's in the comments later after this lesson I'm very very curious and I'll give you my answer because I don't I've never had a pair of heels that I thought was comfortable just never never never ever so I don't know about you but I've never heard weren't anything like that that was comfortable my example here is she'll wear in her heels before the wedding I mean I guess the wedding is when you'd have to wear heels but they're just not comfy okay are you guys ready for the next one did I like this one so this one can go two ways you can say look for or you can say lookout for and I'm looking for something yeah you I think they're both comment you can say either/or I think the hope the whole verb will be to look out for something but you can also say look for something and they mean the same thing and it's to search okay to search for something when you are looking out for something it's kind of you're regularly trying to find this object and I'm sure it happens to all of us like if you have a special event and you have something they specific that you're looking for that is when you would use this phrasal verb so it's not separable you can't pull these apart but you can use it just like that and you can opt out of the out so for example you can say like me right now if you guys didn't know I'm pregnant and when you're pregnant you can't fit into your normal clothes so right now I am looking out for a nice maternity swimsuit because we're gonna go to the beach next month and I really need some kind of swimsuit that fits me so I'm looking out for a nice maternity swimsuit or I could even say I am looking for a nice maternity swimsuit so either/or it is fine you can use it just don't change the for to something else okay now before I move on I wanted to let you guys know a reminder we're now on patreon and please check us out there it's a it's a really cool opportunity to support what we're doing and to kind of see what word what we're up to check us out check us a chick check out our page sorry I was apologizing for my very very bad dancing moves for some reason I keep wanting to dance today anyway if you guys are looking for something specific let us know what you are looking for when you go shopping because it's always fun to see what other people look for ok now before I move on and give you the rest of my verbs I have to show you one of my best learning tips for phrasal verbs and here it is it is listen and learn listen and learn why on earth do I mean by listen and learn when you listen and this is very important with phrasal verbs by the way quick and for quick informational tip I don't know what to call it but native English speakers never really learn phrasal verbs in school they just know them and the reason why they know them it's because they've learned them throughout the years by listening when we use phrasal verbs we usually use them in our speech we don't use them much in writing or in reading because they're a little bit more informal however we do use them all the time so don't it just because they're informal doesn't mean that you don't need to study you have to know them especially if you're a non-native English speaker because they make up so much of our daily conversation but we learn them through listening and this is when it's very very important to listen for phrasal verbs and try to listen either you know conversations that you hear from native speakers and if you can't do that in a place like YouTube or a place where there's a name for a lot of informal dialogue going on that is when you really need to pay attention for phrasal verbs because a lot of it comes through listening if you want something different you can do a podcast or something but always always keep in mind that this is where you will learn your phrase verbs through listening very important I know it's difficult some silicon for some people but you have to do it and I promise you after a while things will sound like hey this goes I think this is okay and other things will sound like no no like that sounds wrong that verb does not go with that preposition so you will develop that at some point I promise it will happen but you have to expose yourself so keep working on it it will you see it all the time and is non-separable okay you cannot separate it this is one I do not like don't like this one but it is coming so pay attention the reason I don't like it I mean it is kind of funny because it's fork out or fork over so anything that has to do with forks it's kind of funny but I don't like it because it means something bad it means that when you fork over or fork out a lot of money you have to pay them you have to pay a lot of money at once and many times you don't do with this happen you do it unwillingly for example I don't know if you guys saw the iPhone and the new iPhone just came out it's gonna come out in why I forget when they're selling it but the point is that it's a lot of money and my example sentence here is I don't want to fork out a thousand dollars on a new phone I'm sure I'm not the only one so I don't want to fork out I don't want to fork over a thousand dollars on a new phone that's how you use it for counter for fork over they're interchangeable you can use them either or equally equally common I think you hear them at the same time this one's better bring in okay so usually when we talking about something that is bringing in I it's always about money or some kind of profits or some kind of something that has to do with money so it's non-separable you always see some actually it is separable I think I made a mistake there because you can bring money in but I think it's more common to say something brings in money so for example it just means to generate or produce money and I have there an example from Amazon I have a question for you guys before I share my example and my question is do you guys like online shopping do you like shopping on Amazon or what is your what is your opinion of Amazon um because I am slightly addicted to it yeah I think that's fair to say I a lot of the things that I can't find in stores I always go to Amazon for and I think a lot of us do and it is crazy how much money they are bringing in so Amazon's online shopping is bringing in a lot of money is my example right there so I'm curious to see what is your opinion on Amazon or online shopping in general do you like it do you miss regular shopping the Yuma stores what do you think about it I'm just very curious about this because I love it I'm at home with a my cup of coffee life is good I don't have to be in a store stress out it's wonderful okay I just have a couple more and then an amazing practice okay this one I think is the most probably the most straightforward out of all of them it is to pay for okay to make a payment when you pay for something you you're making a payment for something that you're buying so my example here is we need to take out cash so we can pay for our meal this has happened actually to Wes and I and my cousin when we were dining out where we didn't have cash but we needed cash so was it to run to an ATM and take out cash so that is to pay for you pay for what you consume or what you buy yeah so you guys have shared some of your answers thank you for sharing them yeah some some people some of you guys like online shopping some of you don't like online shopping I get it my sister I don't think likes online shopping too much but I I love it so thank you thank you for for sharing that now our next one is two and one kind of it's to queue up or to line up and I think depending on where you're from one can be more common than the other for example in America and the u.s. we usually say to line up we don't really say to queue up much so I think that one is more British so but either way like people will understand whichever one you say is just one is more common depending on the country where you're trying to use it it really just means the same thing to wait in line behind people I don't think anyone likes lining up or queuing up but it's it's normal we all do it because it keeps order it keeps things in order so it is kind of a normal part of all of our shopping lives right now here's my example and I want to say I was curious if you guys know about this so if you guys know or don't know I don't know Black Friday in the u.s. is an event that happens after Thanksgiving where a lot of stores have these huge sales because everyone's off nobody goes to work and many times the sales start at crazy hours in the night so in my example here it says on Black Friday some people start lining up at 3 a.m. in front of the store this is not a made-up example this is a true a real example many times people will start lining up at 3 in the morning in front of this store is am I the only one who thinks that's crazy like what 3 a.m. and they wait the store doesn't open at 3 a.m. the store opens at like 7 so they'll wait for hours in front of the store so craziness but that's a bit of culture that you may have not known a lot of this has changed with the with online shopping actually so but this used to be the case craziness maybe I should dance every time I changed when you want what do you guys think maybe not to ring up someone or something so you either ring someone up or you ring up someone or something you can ring up a person meaning that when the person is ready to purchase whatever it is that they're buying you are recording their sale on the cash register tip tip tip to do you know like scanning and things like that that is to ring someone up or you bring something up like if they bought let's say banana they're in the grocery store they bought some bananas you ring the bananas up so you could you could use it either way it has the same meaning you record that on the cash sir ring up someone ring someone up here's my example right here the owner of the store rang up customers on a vintage cash register vintage cash register it's like an older type of cash register ring someone up oops well I just meant it's practice time so those were those are our verbs that were working with today I hope it wasn't overwhelming I think honestly they are they're not simple because they're not intuitive so you can't get some but I think what makes them a little bit simpler than others is that they are common they're so common you will hear them all the time so very very useful shopping phrasal verbs if you have not seen it yet or if you have I want to remind you that we have another lesson on shopping phrasal verb that has some even more useful well not more useful they're the same equally useful phrasal verbs so you can check this out on our web page on our YouTube page I mean you can check them out because we have more so this is kind of the second lesson that we're doing about shopping phrasal verbs because they're so helpful okay so that is what I'm talking about so today I have a few exercises that you guys can practice and I want to ask you are you ready for the first question see how you guys are doing okay so you started school some of you may have started school if you have I hope you don't have to deal with this situation here is my sentence this semester I have to out $500 on textbooks okay now here I have taken out the the verb and I've left the preposition so you have to tell me what verb is the reason I did this is because I thought it was more difficult this way so I was trying to make it a little harder for you this semester I have to

mmm out five hundred dollars on textbooks let's see if you guys got the right answers before I check I'll give you a little bit more time I just wanted to say I hope you don't have to go through this I know if you're in the u.s. and you're a student sometimes you do have to pay this much money on textbooks and I've been there I'm sorry I know how it is let's see a lot of good answers thank you lolly fork out Mary fork out or over exactly okay you guys are exactly right this semester I have to fork out or over five hundred dollars on textbooks again I hope this is not the case I hope you just know the verb but don't have to actually pay the money it means you don't want to pay this money but you have to anyway fork out or fork over okay exercise number two now there's two of them that are missing and here I've given you the verb but taken out of the preposition I am looking huh a new jacket in a vibrant color that stands hmm okay I am looking mmm a new jacket in a vibrant color that stands hmm what could it be remember I'm looking for prepositions so here you'd have to insert the correct preposition so let's see if you guys are writing some answers in there what could it be what am I saying so hopefully you guys were answering I am looking for or I am looking out for a new jacket in a vibrant color that stands out okay so those were the two phrasal verbs I know I put two in there like I said I'm trying to make this difficult so you guys can really be challenged okay so I see some good answers good job good job good job good job good job good job Shakir Ibrahim Giselle marine in irene good job okay here's another one again to hear I took out the preposition again he is stressed mmm because the race is tomorrow and he hasn't worn mmm his shoes yet okay he's stressed mmm because the race is tomorrow and he hasn't worn hmm his shoes yet what could it be I hope you guys get this right I hope you never go through the situation because it's not a fun one to be in but if you answered he's stressed out because the race is tomorrow and he hasn't worn in his shoes you would be correct now if you're doing this now thank you thank you thank you for for doing it now but please know that you can do this later also and write down your answers in the comments later too because we check them all the time so make sure to do that it's very helpful if you if you actually go through these practices and do them so a good job for everyone who's answered I see some wonderful answers perfect great job let's keep on going I have more for you I am NOT I'm not letting you get off that easily okay here it is do you like my jeans they're kind of weird-looking but the questions of sentences I don't think that top ah these jeans now I've taken out the entire phrase over here to make it more challenging so I want to see the entire phrasal verb written in the answers okay I don't think that top ah these jeans what could it mean what could it mean I don't think that top mmm these jeans so I'm looking for a meaning of matches if you are wondering if you need a hint so basically I'm saying I don't think that top matches these jeans what is the correct phrasal verb some beautiful answers you guys are rock stars I always say this because I'm always impressed with you guys but yes you are correct I don't think that top goes with these jeans goes with these jeans so yeah Kristina Shakir dissolve no Louise good job good job good job okay so you're you guys are doing amazing the top does not go with these jeans okay now here's a here's a really tough one because I have three that are missing okay so let's go out with a bang okay we lied mmm to try the new donuts at the bakery but they ran out right before the cashier could ring me mmm these delicious treats bring ah lots of money for the owner okay why don't know am I talking about here okay what do you guys think what what is the right answer okay we lied huh to try the new donut to the bakery but they ran out right before the cashier could rank me mmm these delicious treats bring lots of money for the owner and if you guys know me of course I talk about food I talk about food constantly I love food I love sweets of course I put them in my practice let's see what you guys are writing oh my gosh you guys are doing so well some really really good answers I'm so proud of you I'm so happy

yes yes yes yes yes good job good job good job good job we lined up to try the new doughnuts at the bakery but they ran out right before the cashier could ring me up these delicious treats bring in lots of money for the owner so great job cops go good job gizelle Kristina thank you if I don't see your answer it it doesn't appear in time that's okay keep writing it you guys are doing amazing because I think the more you practice the easier these will become and I just wanted to thank you that was it for my practice I told you we'll go out with a bang it will be a harder one but you crushed it so be proud of yourselves you did amazing I wanted to thank you for watching thank you for practicing with us if you found this lesson useful please like it and share it in any questions write them in the comments and we will answer and I just wanted to thank you guys again I thank you Irene Marie Giselle Rajesh

Edson @fa christina cubs Mildred thank you thank you thank you thank you thank you for joining us and for being with us today have a wonderful weekend and I'll see you next time bye

SHOULD HAVE | COULD HAVE | WOULD HAVE - Modals of Lost Opportunity

i should have joined the interactive english community or i could have joined the interactive english community or i would have joined the interactive english community so today i want to talk to you about these modals should have could have and would have and they're often referred to as modals of lost opportunity because we use them to describe situations that we imagine are different now the good news is that you have not lost this opportunity if you would like to join the interactive english community there is a link down in the description it is a great way for you and me to to keep in touch but let's get back to these modals because i want to make sure that you are using them correctly and i think this is very useful because quite often we want to describe our feelings about past decisions so you're going to use should have when something did not happen but you wish that it did happen you'll use could have when something was possible but it did not happen and you will use would have when something happened but you're just imagining a different result now before we just dive right into these modals i want to talk to you about pronunciation and grammar because with pronunciation these modals will often get reduced so what's happening is that the h in half it's it's just going to get removed and then that vowel sound is going to become more of a schwa so we're left with of and then the final d that consonant sound will get linked with that schwa so it's like we have should of could of would of all right it's linked together and people may even reduce it further if they're speaking really fast and they're gonna drop that v and you just hear the schwa shoulda coulda woulda but in general i think it's often you're going to hear these modals get reduced and you can listen to me as the lesson goes on i will i will reduce them the other thing i want to say uh when it comes to grammar is that with these modals you're going to follow them with the past participle so with with regular verbs you're just going to to use that ed should have played could have called would have walked with irregular verbs you just need to know the past participle should have won could have broken would have bought now that we got grammar and pronunciation out of the way let me give you a little more context with each of these modals and we'll begin with should of so when you think of should've think of regret i i told you that something did not happen but you wish that it did happen so perhaps you're you're thinking about a past decision and somebody had a good idea or a recommendation and you did not listen to it and you lost that opportunity when when talking about that situation we can then use should've so i'm i'm constantly asking you to subscribe to the channel and turn on notifications so let's just let's just imagine that uh you you don't do this and then in the future you're gonna look back at this situation and you might say i should have listened to wes my name's wes by the way in case this is your first time here you'd say i really want to practice and improve my english skills therefore i should have subscribed to the channel and turned on notifications now if you want to use should have in the negative should not have in that case it's like you regret something that was wrong i should not have yelled at my brother i should not have cheated on the exam i should not have eaten that and that's one that i feel like i i probably use from time to time yes i should not have eaten that bad decision now let's move on to could have and with this modal i want you to think of possibility that's the one word i want you to keep in mind possibility i i told you that with this modal something was possible but it did not happen i was so tired i could have stayed in bed all day it did not happen but i it was possible and i know that i i give you a lot of examples so today i have a special guest the famous marlon brando is going to give you the next example you was my brother charlie you should have looked out for me a little bit oh excellent marlon a little bit of review with should have so you should have looked out for me again something that did not happen but but he wishes that it did happen now i will make a quick little grammar correction you would not say you was instead you're going to use you were but that that's okay let's just focus on these modals so please continue you don't understand i could have had class i could have been a contender i could have been somebody of a bum so at this moment he feels like a bum but those other things were possible i could have been a contender i could have been somebody and and what he's referring to is uh boxing he was a third conditional those if statements so i could say the team would have won the championship if their best player had not gotten injured so in this case i'm imagining that different result because the real situation is that the best player was injured and the team did not win the championship i want to make a quick distinction between could have and would have because it's possible for you to use could have in that sentence the team could have won the championship but again in that case we're talking about a possibility if i say the team would have won the championship now it's more certain and that is the result that that i'm imagining so it's really a difference between possibility and certainty could have and would have you could also use would of to show that you wanted to do something but you were not able to i would have given you a ride but my car broke down and once again i could use the third conditional to say the same thing same meaning i would have given you a ride if my car had not broken down now using it in the negative would not have you're still imagining a different result but instead of imagining a result that would have happened you're imagining that your your real situation would not have happened if some other things occurred i would not have finished the project without your help so the real situation is that i did finish the project and i'm just imagining a different result or i if i had not been stuck in traffic i would not have been late for work so it can be a little tricky to to wrap your head around some of these examples just know that with would have you're imagining a different result now something you may not have known about these modals is that you can use them together as an idiom should have could have would have mostly people would use this in spoken english and they are going to reduce these modals should have could have would have or they would reduce it more and say shoulda coulda woulda so what what this means is that you are dismissing someone else's regret or worry about a past action or some lost opportunity and you're just dismissing that so it's kind of a cold response and it's just unsympathetic so let's say that we work together and you're a little upset with me because i i made you do more work and i'm telling you like yeah maybe maybe i should have worked harder so that you did not have to do my work for me and you're a little annoyed you're a little upset and you would say yeah shoulda could have would have uh it's already done it's too late i've already did your work and then i could keep going and say i know that you did that extra work and i would have offered to help but i was stuck in traffic and once again you could dismiss my regret and say shoulda coulda would have i don't care about your excuse i'm still angry should've could have would have all right you can't change the past so that idiom is a fun way to wrap up the lesson i hope you learned something new and i hope you have a better understanding of these modals should have could have and would have and i could honestly tell you that interactive english could not have gotten this far without you that is absolutely true and well we can make it more certain and say interactive english would not have gotten this far without you and for that i really do appreciate it if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

SLANG from All Over the United States

today we're guessing slang it's coming up [Music] today we have a super fun lesson and it's a very informal lesson because we're talking about slang specifically American slang and we are going to quiz each other on slang from the East Coast versus slang on the west coast it's slang so keep in mind that we might not know this is not common slang to so this is not so soon as we do this you guys can play along see if you can guess some of these words I'll be very very impressed if you know some of these oh now I'm worried I mean a big part of this is we're challenging each other to see who knows more who's cooler well let's I mean obviously me let's see who knows more we'll start with the west coast so I'll ask you start with the west coast so I think I'm gonna make it easy for West and give him an easy one you know so my first one is - bum - bum it's a verb - bum okay - bum something is basically to borrow something from from another person right because people will talk about bumming a cigarette is a common way that it was used like oh can i bum a cigarette can i bum a smoke I think that's kind of across the country thank you you hear that that's a little more common alright yeah one one one one boom this one I think I'll start easy for you alright okay alright wicked wicked Oh like if some things we kids really cool or like like a wicked hangover like you've had like a really bad hangover is just something that makes something strong this is slang it's from Boston and think of like oh you know my friend he's wicked smart Oh like that that's wicked cool yes it's like something that emphasizes something else exactly yeah so it means like yeah very or really kind of an adverb of degree like yeah that's wicked cool he's wicked funny what do you got what do you got for me okay number two oh you I don't know if you actually know this one this is a California specific one it's June bloom June bloom gloom June gloom can you use it in a sentence June gloom is the best time of the year although it's usually used like Oh June gloom again I guess it like it when it rains in June or something like when it's like you're kind of depressed nothing to do with like personal okay what does it mean it's a two-week period usually at the beginning of June or if it happens in May it's called Maigret where because of the ocean and the tides or something it is it gets cold in California at the beginning of June for about two weeks it's a period of cold weather our cool weather cool weather yeah I did not know that it's pretty nice because California is always so hot alright your next one is from the great state of Pennsylvania oh my gosh bafflehead a bafflehead bafflehead irene oughta baffle is that guy was a real bafflehead annoying stupid ridiculous yeah it's slang for an idiot so if somebody's like an idiot or stupid oh you bafflehead I like it bafflehead do you know this one before you know you never use honestly a lot of these that I have for you I did not know some of these I didn't know either but I knew jinglin this is a one that's more another one California related the industry or the industry so I would think if your time of the industry you're talking about like Silicon Valley kind of like the tech companies the tech community do you work in the industry no think more like la la oh okay Hollywood are you in are you in the movie like movies TV acting are you in the industry really absolutely I'll be there like oh you part of the industry yeah because everyone somewhat is somewhat connected to that make sense film TV entertainment industry so don't ask if you're part of the industry I'll give you another one that I think we've talked about before so you should know this okay Snowbird okay so I do know this just because because of where his parents me just talked about it a couple months ago yeah so snowbirds are people that they're people who usually live up in the Northeast but then for the for the warmer month for the colder months of the year they travel down south to like Florida yeah so Florida is a very popular state where you would hear this term snowbirds people come from Canada or in the Northeast where it's snowing and cold and they come down there for the winter season the next one I have for you I think you should know this one hey you know you see it you hear it a lot in movies it's bomb or theball something's the bomb mm-hmm it's it's the best it's the greatest it's awesome it's the bomb interactive English the bomb mm-hmm when I was working with a bunch of people who were who were Mormon they said that they referred to as the The Book of Mormon the bomb that's me they're like hey did you want to read the bomb and I was like what is the book of Mormon bomb this is one that I think I had heard before like on during like a BuzzFeed quiz or something Genki it's from it just said it says from the Northeast Genki something's janky yeah okay like you know that that janky ol car won't start like like John J it like almost like like I think once we give sentences then it's easier to put into context like oh that janky old car yes if something is in poor condition it's not good janky okay I'll give you one that I don't know if you use III don't I haven't used this one although it makes sense it is heavy not in weight so you give me a sentence yes I can so the story made me feel very heavy or I feel heavy when I see street children sadness or like a feeling like yeah well yeah because you could use it like the I think I've heard it before like talking about like Oh like this is a heavy situation like it's very serious it's very sad it's okay is that from California okay heavy this is one that I think you should get it's it says it's from Boston but I think it's kind of across the country sketchy oh I've heard it's kitschy yeah so what does it mean like it's problematic like you don't want to go there like a sketchy neighborhood is like I'm not sure about this place yeah yeah so it could mean in that context like yeah it's a neighborhood a sketchy place it's unsafe you're unsure about it you talk about a person some guys somebody's a sketchy character or you can't trust them great oh the next time I think you should know but it's a good one so we should definitely mention it it's to bail if you bail then you leave you're you're basically yeah you're bailing like people like go to a party with somebody and then you bail you get out of there you leave yeah but it doesn't always mean like almost it's like they only do on someone is just to bail like so for example because you know I'm tired I'm gonna bid yeah I'm gonna bail yeah just I'm gonna what are you gonna do I'm gonna bail I'm taking off I'm out of here I'm bailing yeah this party's janky mmm mad mad so this one I can go ahead and give you a sentence it says it's from like New Jersey New York mad that's mad tight yo there was mad people at the party last night yeah like is it another quantifier like it intensifies something or like yeah yeah many very I hear like you would talk talking about giving mad props like you're giving props to somebody you're giving them compliments and saying oh like mad props like a lot a lot of okay my next one is something that apparently is very very common in the Bay Area but I've never heard of it cuz I'm just not cool enough um and I hope I'm saying this right oh goodness Yatta de mean what yet it I mean or yet it up that's English yep yet it Amin I'll give you a sense sounds like something like out of a Disney movie or the West Coast has its own slang yet it a mean is that like a shortened form of you know what I mean it is yeah yet it Amin apparently mean I found it good me every website about this what okay yes I mean it makes sense if you say fast enough it seems like you know you gotta say it really fast yeah I mean no no no I mean I mean you don't mean maybe thank you to me that's good because that leads into the next one that for for me this is mom in um mom and it says it's from New Orleans mom and um now let me give you a sentence and you may you may get this Oh like you know how's your how's your mom and um Oh like how's your family mm-hmm so it's like mom and um II am like them mom in um so yeah if you just say it mom and um and people like wait what is that but then you explain it like Oh mom and mom and them mom's good but do you see our or is mom and um that's a good question I don't know I'll go with swoop swoop swoop swoop sentence swoop so apparently can mean two things so I'll give you both sentences but keep in mind they're two different meanings okay swoop me up at 5:00 p.m. is the first meaning okay the second one is are you planning on swooping the wallet so swoop me up if I like to pick somebody up to swoop in and and quip pick them up mm-hmm and to swooping that wallet like do you plan on getting that wall are taking it yeah but not neither of those that you just mention okay so what what does that mean in that contact to steal - steal Oh swap is whoo whooping so you can swap a cookie baby with that cookie to pick up maybe like in a car yeah but do you wouldn't slip somebody up or would you just swoop you just swoop them would you swap what may it eight o'clock

all right this one this is a good one you are definitely not going to get this and I will be amazed if you guys get this it's from the great state of Alabama Oh caddywhompus haha I I swear I've heard this one no I think again this was another one probably I'm like one of those BuzzFeed quizzes no idea what it means but I have heard it so I don't know I don't know if you'd say like oh the picture is a little cattywampus like a mess yeah something like if it's like like sideways something's like either unorganized and messed up but especially like something that's crooked caddywhompus interesting so first of all what do you think better maybe we both did equally janky okay so in the comments we want to hear from you guys we want to know why you're interested or maybe interested in learning slang so many learners ask us about that what's your motivation for learning slang and trying to understand if you guys enjoyed learning some of these new slang words hit that like button down below and also check out our patreon page there's some cool rewards up there really cool to connect with us yes it is not janky you guys can check that out link is in the description thank you so much for watching thank you and we'll see you next time it's a little cattywampus right now alright yeah thanks for watching

SOME vs ANY | Commonly Confused Grammar

hey everyone welcome to today's lesson my name is wes this is interactive english and if this is your first time here of the channel it's all about just trying to help you practice and improve your english with a lot of different lessons pronunciation grammar vocabulary and today i have well this is a grammar lesson because what we're going to do is we're going to talk about the difference between i think this is some commonly confused grammar we're talking about the difference between some and any some and any i'm going to talk to you a little in detail about each one of these i'm going to give you some example sentences i'm going to ask you some questions so i want you to participate in the lesson and then toward the end i'll talk a little bit about some maybe idioms and expressions that also use some in any before we start the lesson i just want to say hello to some of the people who are with me right now hello lolly uh katrudis good to see you so many good to see some members patrons with us uh sleepwalker rosalia pussycat lover leo how are you olga angela uh takayao hi uh i will give some more shout outs as we go through the lesson um because i do i have some questions that i would like all of you to answer so let's begin uh we're gonna go we're talking about sum and any and we're gonna start from the absolute uh beginning and what i mean by that is some and any they are both determiners so the first thing you should know is well what is a determiner in grammar this is a word that is used before a noun to show which particular example of the noun you're referring to so down here i have a list of different types of determiners like articles a and the a chair the bottle of water uh you also have demonstratives which are which is this that those these all right those chairs these uh bottles of water numerals is just really referring to like numbers one two three four one chair five bottles of water that i guess those are the examples that i'm going to use ordinals ordinals again ordinal numbers we're talking about first second third fourth so i could say um this is the first bottle of water that i've had today uh or i sat in the last chair uh possessive my his her uh ours my bottle their chair or quantifiers and this is what uh what i wanted to get to so sum and any are determiners but specifically the type of determiner they are they are quantifiers and quantifiers it's a word or phrase that's used before a noun to show the amount of it that is being considered an amount is the key word that i really want to would want to focus on when i want to when i well i keep saying when i talk about the differences between some and any so these are some examples of quantifiers many a lot of few less and then of course we have some and any down there so let's look at some first a i told you it's a determiner it's a quantifier we're talking about an amount the other thing i've put up there with an asterisk is that it's used with plural and non-count nouns please keep that in mind all right remember that with plural and non-count nouns so some and these these definitions i get from cambridge that's like my my go-to online dictionary when i'm looking to explain like the meaning of something i think they do a great job using simple words

so sum is an amount or number of something that is not stated or known it's like a part of something some will have it has different meanings which i will come back to at the end but i'm focusing right now on an amount so it's talking about an amount or number so for example i gave those are some example sentences i bought some new clothes it's like you about you bought an amount of new clothes clothes is a plural noun i bought some new clothes or that question would you like some coffee coffee is a non-count noun and i could ask that and i would use some before coffee would you like some coffee any it's also a determiner it's a quantifier and again keep that in mind it's used with plural and non-count nouns any just means sum i told you they're commonly confused in grammar uh or even the smallest amount or number of so again we're talking about an amount here are some questions and then i'm gonna really look at the difference between the two so is there any ice cream left you're talking about even the smallest amount of ice cream is there any ice cream left sounds like something that i would ask uh and then the next one i don't have any cash on me can you pick up the check so you're saying that again an amount of cash you don't have any on you or we weren't expecting any visitors in this case we're talking about an amount of people an amount uh we're talking about any visitors we weren't expecting any visitors even the smallest amount of visitors all right so let's look at this and hopefully looking at this you can see the differences a little bit more i'm going to spend a little time on this page right here and for you members and patrons i will post this lesson later on this is a great little uh i think resource guide when talking about the difference between some and any so before forget about those exceptions to the rules down there i'll come back to those at the end i want to first look at the well no it's over this side right here all right sum i have that plus right there i'm talking about is generally used in positive statements all right or you could say affirmative statements and i have that example sentence i have some extra pizza all right that is a positive statements affirmative i have some extra pizza any is generally used in negative statements typically you're saying not in that case um so for example they might say oh i have some extra pizza and i don't want any pizza all right that is a negative statement the question mark is because any is generally used in questions all right do you so if somebody says oh i have some extra pizza um would you would you like some pizza like no no i don't want any pizza do you have any pasta i'm asking a question and i'm going to use any do you have any pizza notice i said generally there because of course there are exceptions which i'm going to talk about right now so going back to some the exception to the rule we're talking about questions you would use some with questions when offering something and you think that the answer is going to be either just yes or no would you like some coffee if i asked that then i would say well the answer is just going to be a yes or no and then it's finished so would you like some coffee coffee is a non-count noun and i think it's very common to use some with that construction would you like some of something the other thing i would say which i wanted to mention earlier when some and any when talking about an amount i think quite often you're talking about food not always because i gave some other examples that were not food related but quite often i think we're talking uh about food the exception to the rule for any is with those positive statements all right any can be used in positive sentences if it's used with the the conjunctions if or whether look at that that example that i gave you please let me know if you have any questions that is a positive statement it's an affirmative sentence please let me know if you have any questions questions that is my that is my count noun so any questions it because of if so i'm trying to think of an example with weather um uh i could say um i want to know whether you want any pizza i have some extra pizza so i want to know whether you want any pizza all right i i'm using weather in that case so again whether you want any pizza and then that's when you could tell me no i don't want any pizza that negative statement so this is a good well over here the those are general rules to follow some with positive sentences positive statements um the exception would be questions if you're offering something yes or no answer and any with those negative statements and questions and the exception would be the positive statements if you're going to use if or whether i know it's a lot to take in but i think as we practice this a little the more you practice the more comfortable you're going to feel i think using these and then when it comes time to use them in general conversation or your writing you'll just use them correctly because that's what i want to do right now i want to practice using some or any i'm going to give you some sentences and i just want you to think about well how would you fill in the blank how would you complete the sentences using some or any and i want you to write them write your answers in the chat that way i can throw out some more shout outs even if you're watching this later if you would like use that comment sense section like it's a piece of paper and you can write your answers down there here are this is a this is a conversation so we have like person a and person b the first person is asking a question did you catch um fish today you can fill in either some or any and then the other person responds yeah i caught but my friend didn't catch um all right

i have three three blank spaces three blank spots right there and i want you to complete that conversation using either some or any if you're not sure if you're trying to think of the rules that we just talked about and you're like oh i forget exactly then this is another example i'd say just just do what feels natural um when thinking about this do what feels right so we're practicing using some or any let's see what we got here uh all right we have all right excellent uh farm on lolly uh honey jam awesome perfect uh i don't want to call excellent uh so here's the conversation uh rosa let's see all right lucy yes it should go any some any that's th those are the three blanks did you catch any fish today we're talking about a question again fish in this case would really refer to a uh like a non-count uh noun or or no a plural excuse me the plural of one fish is several fish did you catch any fish today and yeah i caught some that is a positive um that is my positive sentence but my friend didn't catch any that's my negative sentence so here is an example of i told you any we use with questions and those negative statements which the question you have did you catch any fish some is used with the positive yeah i caught some but my friend didn't catch any all right i hope this was that that probably was not too difficult uh so let's look at the next one this i this is going to be a longer dialogue but we'll kind of go through it just one at a time i told you before that i think often when you use summon any you're talking about food an amount and this is also where they could be maybe a little confused um so we have the waiter and the customer the waiter says would you like um vegetables to go with that should say your not you all right sorry about that i look at this several times beforehand and then there's always that one little typo that that that trips me up so the waiter says would you like mmm vegetables to go with your meal should say your and the customer would say do you have other options what do you think how would you complete that with some or any you guys are just rapid fire right away excellent uh lolly zsb uh angela anna what sleepwalker pascat lover uh who else kareem gettrudis oleg nice so we're talking about some and then any that you guys i think you'd perfect excellent and let's talk about why would you like some vegetables to go with your meal i told you any is used with questions but this is one of the exceptions because when you ask somebody that like would you like typically the answer is just going to be a yes or a no so in that case if you think the answer is just a yes or no you're going to use some would you like some vegetables to go with your meal the next question do you have any other options i i didn't know if you thought this might be tricky because i i thought maybe somebody would think well that could be a yes or no question do you have any other options the reason why you're going to use any is because even though you could answer yes or no the expectation is that you you need to give more information for example if the customer is asking do you have any other options and the waiter just says yes and they don't say anything else that's going to sound a little weird so in this case it's not like you can only answer yes or no you would need to give more information which is why in this case we're using any so this is not just a yes or no question would you like some vet would you like some vegetables to go with your meal uh do you have any other options and then they continue the conversation right here how about um rice or potatoes and the customer says i ate rice for lunch i guess i'll just have mmm caesar salad now the one little hint that i'll give you is i'm i'm trying to trick you here a little bit so we'll see uh if if some of you catch on this is tricky i'm trying to trick you and think about think about the what i told you at the beginning what i told you to keep in mind so we have the first part of the conversation would you like some vegetables to go with your meal the customer says do you have any other options and the waiter responds with how about rice or potatoes i ate rice for lunch i guess i'll have caesar salad and i told you i'm trying to trick you so that's uh your hint all right i think uh you guys are kind of getting this uh so far i haven't seen any correct answers because i'm trying to trick you all right and the the one that i'm trying to trick you on is that last one and the one thing i'd say before i'll show you the answer because i haven't seen any correct answers remember some and any they're determiners and i put that little asterisk up there used with plural plural nouns and non-count nouns okay so that's your that's your hint right there we're talking about for the first part actually the the last one should not be summer any all right some some and then uh caesar salad and let's talk about why i'm sorry if that was confusing so the waiter would ask how about some rice or potatoes again it's a question but in this case the answer could either just be yes or no so this also this can be thought of as okay that is the exception you're asking a question you're offering something and the answer could just be yes or no how about some rice or potatoes and the person could say well just yes or no and in this case the customer responds well i ate some rice for lunch it's a it's a positive statement rice is a non-count noun i guess i'll have caesar's salad so a caesar salad this is uh it's not a plural noun a salad it's a singular noun and in this case you're just going to use an article that is the determiner you would use i'll just have a caesar salad all right it's just a salad okay uh sorry if that was uh confusing maybe everybody was just zeroed in on that sum in any uh but i i think as you read this it's a pretty simple conversation dialogue i think uh i hope it makes sense yes it was a trap all right i told you that i would wanted to kind of wrap it up talking about some other meanings for some and any especially how they might be informally used as idioms so this is confusing grammar because they're both determiners they're quantifiers when you're talking about an amount some versus any but they can also have like some can have another meaning in this case it can refer to something that is well impressive that's some and then you would follow it with a noun that's some pig all right can anybody does anybody uh can anybody tell me where that's uh from that's some pig or somebody could say well that's some boat you got there and in that case they're using some to say that it's impressive that's some boat that's some pig and if you don't know that some pig that's coming that's a reference to the book charlotte's web i don't know if anybody's read that but that was like one of the that was the first that was the first message she wrote up in the web to describe wilbur some pig an impressive pig uh yeah so they no longer capitalize the sea and caesar salad i i don't know that's a good question maybe i should have capitalized that uh i'm not sure i'll have to check on that um so some could mean very impressive like this it's also this is another this is an idiom and then some and i told you it's an idiom because idioms don't think of the meaning of the individual word just think of this as one phrase and then you have the meaning and it means and even more and then some it's used informally uh hopefully those example sentences might help if i'm just speaking casually oh they paid us a thousand dollars and then some and it's saying that you got even more perhaps you got more money perhaps they gave you some food we don't know but it's just an expression that you could use uh they paid us a thousand dollars and then some and even more or i had to do all their chores and then some so again we don't know what what more this person had to do but if you want to kind of really emphasize give emphasis to something and really and even more people might throw that and then some and then some so this is a it's a good informal idiom if we're talking about any um this is another a phrase that you may hear i should say it's another idiom by any means necessary if somebody says by any means necessary it just means they're going to do whatever is needed and typically i would say that you're talking about it could be even something like referring to using some violence or cheating or maybe doing something unethical is i think how people may interpret this

ah we're gonna by any means necessary we're going to win this election by any means necessary and in that case like i said they might be talking about doing something that could be wrong or cheating or immoral so think about consider that when you're using this typically people are saying that they're going to do whatever is needed even if it involves something that they probably shouldn't be doing by any means necessary another one um with any and this is another meaning for any let me explain this anyone that you like so for example if i you i don't know i maybe if i have a bunch of cars that you can choose from and i say choose anyone that you like or you can have anyone that you like in this case any is talking about it's one of a particular type of a thing when something's not important so basically oh you can have anyone that you like i'm saying you can have any type of this and it really doesn't matter it's not important which one anyone that you like and that's again that's a phrase that you might hear uh people say this is whoops i always get the the camera mixed up over here this um i just want i i i oh that's another typo i found it okay it should say instead of can it should say can't i can't just wear any old thing to the party any old thing this is more of an expression i think it's a little maybe a little bit of an older expression again can should be can't i can't just wear any old thing any old thing in this phrase really means anything but somebody instead of saying anything somebody might say any old thing they're referring to clothes so we're talking about wearing any old thing i think people that's typically how you would use this expression wear any old thing again we're talking about one particular item of clothing that's not important any old piece of clothing that doesn't matter in this in this context you're saying you can't just wear any old thing you're basically saying the clothes that you're going to wear is very important so you need to be careful you can't just wear any old thing and again i made a typo there that or over there it should not say can that should say can't um yes zsb you're right too many typos today uh i need to i need to need to hone in on these a bit more but yeah every time i look through these several several times and i'm like i got it down no typos and then yes i i get here live with you guys and they all just start popping up out of nowhere so these are just some other examples as to how you may use some or any i think the best um source that i have for you guys is this one right here and i told uh members patrons when i post these lessons then you'll have this available but this is really your guide to when to use some in any when we're talking about quantifiers because then in that case we're talking about an amount all right and if any of you guys are interested if you want to uh support what we do here at interactive english check out those links down in the description if you would like to become a member or a patron uh you can check out those links below so i hope this really i hope this helped maybe clear up some confusion my hair is getting way too long i really i desperately need to get a haircut anyway i hope this is useful and even if you knew some of this information it's always good to review it's always good to practice because sometimes this is where people may make a slight mistake when they're using some or any especially if we're talking about those exceptions that we were looking at on that chart of when to use them thank you guys so much uh for being here today thank you um boomi yashar um samitsa michelle leonardo farman jam where do you live right now i live in budapest hungary that's where i am and we are currently in lockdown right now uh and julio nyan thank you guys for being here lolly yes i want to learn english by any means necessary uh hopefully hopefully you won't have to do anything uh immoral to do that but yes that's it that is another way that you could use it in a positive sense i'm going to learn it by any means necessary you're very motivated very determined i love it uh thank you takayo excellent glad you learned something new if you guys did learn something new hit that like button down below it always uh it always uh just makes me you know it just makes me happy i don't know uh gotrudish you'll re-watch it excellent great um uh thanks for being here keep an eye out i will post these notes if not today tomorrow uh so you guys can access them uh my members and patrons fabiola um mohammed ria vifa thank you guys hope you guys enjoy the rest of your weekend

SONGS TO IMPROVE YOUR LISTENING FLUENCY

Today, I want to talk to you about what songs you should listen to if you would like to improve your English that's coming up. Hi everyone. My name is Wes. This is Interactive English, which is where you want to be to practice and improve your English skills. And today today's lesson is all about music because so many of you will ask, you know, I want to improve my English skills. I love listening to music. So what songs do you recommend? And I'm going to tell you about a variety of songs that you can listen to to help you improve your listening skills and your English comprehension. All of these songs are very different.

Some of them you may have never heard of before, but that's good because it's all about getting exposure, especially the right exposure, which is really going to help improve your comprehension. But first I want to mention that when you're listening to music, I personally think it's really beneficial if you can actually see the words that you're listening to. So down in the description, I have attached a link to each one of these songs so that you can listen to them, read the lyrics and really understand what the song is about.

Let's begin with something that I think is a bit easier and that is John Lennon's Imagine, and the reason I chose this song, well first of all it's very famous but also it's really slow and I think that is a problem when it comes to listening to music is that most of the time people are not listening at their level. They're listening to music that is way beyond their level and they're like, wow, I didn't hear this word. I don't understand what they're saying, but this song is really slow. They speak slowly, which makes it easy to comprehend. Imagine all the people. And I think that's good that this song may even be below your level and it's always good to get that exposure because you want to build your confidence, you want to understand what it is you're listening to and this song will help you do just that.

Now I want to tell you about another song that is also a bit slower. I think it's easier to understand and that is the Police, Every Breath You Take. Every breath you take... Throughout much of the song they're singing slowly, it'll be easy to follow. But then there's a part where it speeds up a little bit and I think that's a good challenge when you are listening to something that is slow and you can comprehend it easily and then test yourself to see if you can keep up. So throughout the song it moves a little slowly and then there's a point where it picks up a little. So they'll be like, I'll be watching you.

And then it picks up a little faster. Since you've gone, I've been lost without a trace. And it, it sounds much better than that. Alright. I'm sorry. I'm going to try not to sing throughout this lesson because I just don't want to hurt your ears. But you get the idea that the song will move from from slow to a little faster and that's a good test to see if you can keep up and follow along with what's being said. Then we have Beyonce, If I Were a Boy. So this song I put this in there because it's good practice. If I were a boy, this is the second conditional. If I were a boy...

She gives that condition, that hypothetical situation. If I were a boy... It's also the subjunctive I were, if I were a boy, if I were you, if I were king of the world. This is a great example of the subjunctive in the second conditional and then throughout the song she says this and we'll give different results and you're going to use wood plus the base verb. If I were a boy I would listen to her. So again, it's great practice for the second conditional to see if you can listen for it and try to identify those different results that she gives throughout the song because she repeats that throughout. If I were a boy and then we'll talk about these different results and what it would be like if this hypothetical situation were true. If I were a boy, then we have Indigo Girls, Closer to Fine. And this is a great song to also practice your grammar skills a little bit because they use the simple past quite often and the song is also a bit faster as well. And the reason I chose this is because I think when it comes to the simple past, for many of you, especially if you are an intermediate or advanced learner, you'll be able to easily recognize the simple past. It's good to choose a song that that's a little faster. I went to the doctor, I went to the mountains, I looked to the children, I drank from the fountain. And they sing it with a lot more melody than I just did right then and they sing it much faster.

Closer I am to fine. So again, this is a great song to practice your grammar skills and try to identify the simple path. Then we have Gloria Gaynor, I Will Survive. One word that I would use to describe the song is mellifluous. And if you don't know what that means, it is an adjective which means that something is pleasant to hear and that's what I think about when I hear

Gloria Gaynor's, I Will Survive. It is mellifluous. It is pleasant to hear, which is one of the reasons why I recommend it. Oh no not I. I will survive. This song also has, it has just a great message. I will survive.

It's mostly that it has to do with a relationship and you know, trying to get past this, this bad relationship and she's saying, you know, I will survive. I'm going to move on with my life. I will continue forward. I will survive. Which I think is something that I think all of us can relate to, that we've had problems in our lives, issues, people that we've dealt with who have not treated us fairly and you want to move on past that. I will survive and this is a great song because it's a different style than these other songs. This is more disco music from the 70s and that's mostly why I chose it is to give you a bit of variety because when it comes to practicing your listening skills, I would always recommend try to listen to songs that you enjoy, music that you enjoy, but it's still good to get exposure to different music, to different styles, to different accents. And that's what I would encourage you to do. Then we have Weird Al's, Word Crimes. I love this song, especially as an English teacher because, well, if you're not familiar with Weird Al, he does music. It's, they're mostly parodies of other songs. So this is a parody of the song Blurred Lines by Robin Thicke. So instead of blurred lines, Weird Al is talking about word crimes. I hate these word crimes. These are all the different mistakes that people make when they are either speaking English or maybe grammar mistakes. So this is a song that I really recommend you've listened to and read the lyrics. Follow along with the lyrics and and see if you can understand the different mistakes that he's talking about. It's a great song. Check it out.

I think you will find it very funny. Word Crimes. Then we have Disney's, I am Moana. And this is from the movie Moana. And I think this song is great. Well I think many Disney songs in general are great because they tell a story they have to do with the movies, which means that the music is also going to tell a story related to what you're watching in the movie. This is a great example of listening to a story which is in the song. So the song begins with the grandmother telling that story, talking to Moana, asking her, you don't want to listen, do you know who you are? And then finally Moana jumps in there and you hear say, who am I?

And then she proceeds to tell you who she is, which finally culminates in her saying. I am Moana... So this is a great song that presents a story that is clear, concise, easy to comprehend. So listen to the song, check it out. And if you haven't seen the movie, I also suggest you watch it. It's a great movie. Next is Charlie Daniels Band, Devil Went Down to Georgia. And the reason I chose this song is because again, it tells a story. It tells a great story, but also it's a different style of music because this is more Southern rock. A little bit of bluegrass. The devil went down to Georgia. He was looking for a soul to steal.

And the song starts out really just giving you the main idea. The devil went down to Georgia. He was looking for a soul to steal. He was in a bind, he was way behind, so he was willing to make a deal. And the devil comes across this, this boy named Johnny and they have this competition so it really tells a clear story in a different way than that a Disney song would. So that's why I recommend this song. It's great. Different style. Check it out. Then we have Harry Chapin's. Cat's in the Hat. This is, well this is actually one of my favorite songs. I love it. I chose it because, well it is a little slower so I think it will be easier for you to comprehend.

And the cat's in the hat and the silver spoon. The story which it tells is perhaps a little more challenging to then like a Disney song or even a the Charlie Daniels band song that I recommended, but still it represents a story, something that I think we can all relate to because it's talking about a relationship and not being able to invest the time and energy that you want to in this relationship. And I think that's something that we can all identify with when we're talking about friends or family and we want to be able to give this person a little more time, a little more attention, but maybe we're not able to.

That is the message at the heart of the song. So when you listen to it, just see if you can identify it. Next is Alan Jackson's, Little Bitty. So I chose this song for, well, a few different reasons. First it's also I think a little slower. It's a little easier to comprehend because it is country music and that's another reason. It is a different style. And I do think whether you like these different styles or not, it's up to you. But I still think it's great to get that exposure and to give it a try. This was a very popular song, and what they're talking about are these things that are little bitty, which basically means it's talking about something that's small or in a small amount. So he talks about a little bitty town, a little bitty check, a little bitty car.

All of these things that are kind of small or in a small amount, I think the message is to say, well, you know, if you just have a small amount of something that that's okay, that's perfectly fine. We all don't need to have too much in life. It's all right to be little bitty. Life goes on for a little bitty while. Then we have Pearl Jam's, Last Kiss. So this is a song that I grew up with. I think it's from the 90s and I was in high school. So that's how I remember it. And I chose it for two reasons. It is a song that is sung slowly and they clearly pronounced the lyrics.

And if you are learning English, it is a great way to do both, to enjoy the music as well as practice your listening skills. But now I want to hear from you. So in the comments, tell me what, what kind of music do you like to listen to? What is your favorite song? It's always great to get recommendations from other, so I suggest that you read down below in the comments and see what other people have to say. If you enjoy this lesson, please hit that like button. And as always, thanks for watching and I'll see you next time.

SOUND LIKE YOU'RE FROM THE US! 1-Hour Deep-Dive into American Accent, Pronunciation, & Culture

We are about to do a deep dive into the American accent. And when I say deep, I mean deep. Of course, I am from the US and I want to share with you what truly makes up the American accent so that you have a better understanding as to why people sound the way they do. And if you are someone who is interested in learning more about accent, pronunciation, even US culture, please subscribe, turn on notifications, that way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes, the channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. Let's get the ball rolling by talking about the American accent in general, the standard American accent, if you will.

And I want to share with you some useful tips if you are interested in copying the accent and sounding a bit more like you're from the US. So, let's begin. In this lesson, we're going to talk about the standard American accent. And I really just want to break it down and talk about what are some of the different parts that make the accent what it is today. Now, the first thing I want to say is that if you are an English learner, you should not feel like you have to speak with any sort of accent. The most important thing is mutual intelligibility, that we understand each other. That being said, I do think this will help with your listening comprehension if you're watching a movie or TV show and really just get a better understanding of why people speak the way they do. And of course, we are going to practice throughout the lesson. And the first thing that I want you to keep in mind is that you need to pronounce those Rs, especially at the end of words.

Father, car, water. that er sound at the end of those words.

I am your father.

Car for car. Car for car. There are some regional accents in the United States. For example, New England, in which you may hear people drop those Rs, but when talking about the standard American accent, you're going to pronounce them at the end of words. So, I want you to repeat these after me and I'm going to really emphasize that R at the end. Father. Car. Water. Good. We're going to build on top of this as we go through the lesson, but I want you to think about that last word, water, because this brings me to the next part of the American accent, which I think is very common. And I'm talking about the flap T. So, the flap T, it sounds more like a soft D, and it often occurs when the T comes between two vowel sounds, like in the word water. You don't hear a true T, you hear a flap T when I say it, water. And this is why these two words right here, with the American accent, they sound like homonyms, metal, metal. A flap T may also occur when the T comes before a dark L, such as in the words little, bottle, rattle. You hear that slight d sound. Bottle of water. I want you to repeat after me. Bottle of water. Now, if you were saying it in the exact same way as I was, then you were linking a couple of different words, and that's the next thing that I want to talk to you about, linking. This is part of connected speech, and it's when you link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word. And it's almost like you're just taking that consonant sound and just moving it over to the next word or syllable. Now, linking is not specific to the American accent. Other English varieties use linking as well as other languages, but I do think it helps give the accent part of its rhythm and flow. So, bottle of water. We can link that dark L in bottle with the beginning vowel sound in of, bottle of. Now, let's add to this phrase, get a bottle of water. So, I've added the words get a. Except I didn't pronounce it like that. I said, get a bottle of water. Now, that final T in get, because it comes between two vowel sounds, I am going to pronounce it as, you guessed it, a flap T. And then I can link that soft d sound with the article a, and it's going to sound like get a. Get a bottle of water. And then we can turn this into a question. I want you to repeat after me, can I get a bottle of water?

Excuse me, can I get a bottle of water? Can I get a bottle of water? Can I get a bottle of water, please? Many learners often ask me, how can I practice linking? And this is something that I think you can easily do on your own. Just take any article, really any paragraph. Go through the paragraph and identify all of those indefinite articles, a, as well as any preposition that begins with a vowel sound, in, on, at. If the word before ends with a consonant, well, then linking may likely occur. And then just go through the paragraph, read it out loud, and focus on those phrases, and make sure that you are linking that final consonant sound with the beginning vowel sound. So, let's look at, well, the very first sentence of The Hobbit, right? Very well-known, famous story. In a hole in the ground, there lived a hobbit. Just with this first sentence, linking occurs three different times. It occurs with the very first two words, in a.

It occurs with the next two words, hole in. And then it also occurs with the words lived a. In a hole in the ground, there lived a hobbit. I cannot stress enough how common linking is in just everyday conversation, and it's really going to smooth out your speech. So, let's build on that phrase that we were practicing before, and we'll create a question. Do you want to get a bottle of water? Repeat after me. Do you want to get a bottle of water? And right now, I want to focus on wanna, and I'm emphasizing it because I want to talk about reductions, which is also very common in spoken English, especially in the United States. This is when speakers shorten, change, or remove particular sounds. And there are many different reductions, but I think gonna, wanna, have to, those are some of the more common ones. Now, even though you see them written right now, I would avoid using them in writing.

I know sometimes you may see people use them in writing, like in a text message, but in general, I would just avoid them. But when it comes to spoken English, I think they're great to use because I think they'll help you develop a nice rhythm and flow. There's one thing in particular that I want you to keep in mind, and that is reductions are not really emphasized. have a tendency to stress or emphasize them. But they're not emphasized. I just want you to listen as I say the following sentences. What are you going to do tomorrow? I want to take a vacation. I have to work in the morning.

So, I'm not emphasizing these reductions. If anything, they're really de-emphasized, and they're just going to help you run right through the sentence. Now, there's one word that I really want to highlight because we often use it, and you're probably not even thinking about it. And I'm talking about the word for. So, this word is often reduced, and that vowel sound changes to fer. It's very soft and subtle, but see if you can hear the difference. Wait here for a moment. Wait here for a moment. And it's actually much easier when pronouncing that vowel sound just to say that fer, for a moment. Again, we can reduce that word and just move quicker through the sentence. Wait here for a moment. Let's keep adding to that question, and now we have, do you want to get a bottle of water for your father?

I want you to say it with me. Do you want to get a bottle of water for your father? One more time. Do you want to get a bottle of water for your father? The next thing that I want to talk about when it comes to the American accent that I really think that you need to master is the schwa sound. People in the United States love the schwa sound. This is just an unstressed vowel sound, and it really is just going to sound like uh. And you hear it all the time in so many different words and phrases, even those reductions that we already talked about, that second syllable would have the schwa sound. Gonna, wanna, have to. When it comes to the schwa sound, it's important to know which vowel sounds in a word may be unstressed because those unstressed vowels may be pronounced with the schwa sound. And at times, this is when I hear English learners make a slight mistake, and they'll end up stressing a syllable with a vowel that should be unstressed and pronounced with the schwa sound. So, have a listen to these words right here. Official, pencil, address, syringe. All of these words have the schwa sound, and they're all different letters, and that's what I wanted to point out, is that any vowel, when it's unstressed, it may get pronounced with the schwa sound. It's unstressed, and another way to think about it is that it's just a weak sound. And that's where I want to go next and talk about weak unstressed function words. So, there are two common words that may have different pronunciations depending on whether the word is stressed or unstressed. And I'm talking about the words you and to. So, when unstressed, you may sound more like ya. And to may sound more like ta. And you hear that schwa sound. My suggestion is that you don't think about these words that you're always going to hear one or the other, either you or ya.

Think about it more like a spectrum, and you may hear anywhere in between. Because the fact that you're not stressing these words, and you're using a weaker vowel sound, that's what's changing it to more of a schwa sound. Listen to this phrase right here, at the start of a question. When stressed, do you want to? When unstressed, do ya want to? Do you want to? Or this phrase, when stressed, to the airport. When weak and unstressed, to the airport. To the airport. Let's add these phrases to the question. There's that ta. To create a pretty long sentence that has everything that we just talked about. Do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport?

Now that we have this long question, we just need to practice. And that is the next thing that I wanted to talk to you about, practice, because it is so important. And if you have been practicing with me throughout the lesson, I want to know. Write the word speaking in the comments. That tells me you've been practicing your speaking skills. So, when it comes to practice, there are several things that you can do. Listen to native speakers and try to imitate their pronunciation. Pay close attention to the way people articulate sounds, and then try to replicate them. Even if we're talking about, well, slight and subtle weak sounds. We just talked about those words, to, you, for, being pronounced as ta, ya, and fer.

This is what can help you develop a more authentic Standard American accent, if that happens to be one of your speaking goals. So, let's practice. And because this question is so long, I am going to break it up into two different groups. And I'm going to put a slight pause between the groups. So, I'll say the question, try to listen for that pause. Do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport? Hopefully, you heard that slight pause after the word father, which is before that dependent clause. And I do this in order to really control the pacing. So, let's practice. I am going to say that first group, and I want you to repeat after me. And then I'll say the second group, and I want you to repeat again. Are you ready?

Do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport? Now, let's say the whole question. I'll say it, you repeat after me, and try it again. Control that pacing with that pause. Do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport? Good. Now, let's say it together. And this is more like shadowing. I want you to say it in the exact same way that I am. And really, what's challenging would be to see if you can keep that same speed. So, let's say the question together. We'll do this three times. Are you ready? Let's begin.

Do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport? One more time. Do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport? Again. Do you want to get a bottle of water for your father before he goes to the airport? Excellent. Now, if you were able to say that question just like me, well, then you're using a lot of the things that we talked about in this lesson. You're pronouncing those final Rs, you're pronouncing that flap T, using reductions, linking, as well as some of those weak sounds like ta, ya, and fer. And remember, the most important thing is to continue practicing and really try to make time for it, because exercises like the one that we did in this lesson are really going to help you in daily conversations. Now that you have a better understanding of the Standard American accent, let's have a look at some distinct regional accents. And this is fun, because it really adds flavor to any English variety. And even though some of these regional accents may be a little more difficult to understand, it really does give you a sense of the the country and the culture. Of course, the US is a melting pot. People move around all the time. And just because you are in one area, it doesn't mean everybody's going to speak with that regional accent. But, if you happen to be traveling around the US, you may come across some of these different accents. And in that case, it's a good way to improve your listening skills. to talk to you about some different and well-known accents in the United States.

And as I present these accents, I'm really going to be demonstrating the the stereotypical accent. It's going to be very thick. And that's just so you can easily hear the difference between a a Standard American accent and a regional accent. I am actually an English teacher, and I teach a lot about the American accent. But I've had many learners ask me about specific accents. So, I thought this would be a good opportunity to talk a little bit about some of the accents you may hear if you are visiting the United States or even living in the United States. The first accent that I want to talk to you about, which is the New York accent. Or, as some people might say in New York, New Yawk.

when the R comes at the end of a word. So, just listen to the difference between a Standard American accent and then a New York accent dropping the R. Before. Befo. Here. Hea. Water. Wata. So, I'm dropping the R at the end of those words. And you will also drop the R when it it doesn't really come at the end, but maybe the middle of a single syllable word like like the word park. People might say, "Pawk." And even the word New York, as you heard me pronounce it already, New Yawk. Something else I want to tell you about the New York accent is that when you have the AL letter combination, it may sound like aw. And and this is very slight with some words. So, if I say the word talk, in the New York accent, "Tawk." And and it just gets stressed a little bit. And it may be easier to to listen for if I were to give you a question. So, instead of saying, "What are you talking about?"

with the accent, "What are you talking about?" "What are you talking about?" Something else I would say is that when it comes to accents in general, I think reductions of all kinds are very common. So, in this sentence, I'm reducing you to ya. I'm using the the schwa sound, that uh sound, so that it's not stressed, and it would just sound like ya. Which is pretty common in spoken English when you comes in the middle of a sentence or the middle of a clause. So, it would sound like, "What are you talking about?" "What are you talking about?" This AL combination is also true in words like call. So, with this one, you can really tell the difference between where your tongue is at in your mouth, because generally, when you say call, the tongue is going to come up to the top part of your mouth at the end of the word, because it's a dark L, and you'd hear that aw sound at the end.

think this is a word that's often used when talking about the Boston accent. And it's going to sound like caw. So, what what kind of car you drive? Did you find your car keys? And when if somebody were to say the phrase car keys, and you are an English learner, yeah, it can be difficult to to catch that that the R is getting dropped, and somebody is talking about their car keys. Did you find your car keys? With the Boston accent, that AL, people may also pronounce it more like an aw. But I I think with the Boston accent, often there's there's going to be an upward inflection at the end of of sentences. So, if I were to say, "Yeah, I I was talking with my friends. We were talking about Star Wars." And I tried to end those sentences with that upward inflection. I like that phrase, Star Wars, dropping the Rs in both of those words. Something else with the Boston accent is the OR combination may also sound like aw. And this is true even if you're talking about the conjunction or, like chicken or beef. Chicken or beef? Coke or Pepsi? All right, hopefully you can easily hear that. And this is true when the OR combination is in individual words like divorce divorce. Force force. May the force be with you. All right, we're talking about Star Wars. So, I'm just just imagining Luke Skywalker with a thick Boston accent. May the force be with you. You know, me and the other Jedis, we're going to go down to the packie and grab some beers. All right, the that's that's more dialect. The packie is it's short for package store, which is just a liquor store where where people would buy alcohol, the packie. So, let's let's go in a different direction and head down south. And I want to talk to you about the southern drawl. One of the main characteristics of the southern drawl is that it's going to sound a little slower, and that's cuz people might drag out those vowel sounds. And I previously I did another lesson talking about the southern drawl. I'll leave that up here in case you're interested. But one reason why those vowel sounds are going to get dragged out is because people will take short vowel sounds and turn them into a diphthong in which you are combining two vowel sounds. And the vowel sounds that people will combine are short vowel sounds with an off glide schwa sound, which is that uh. So, you have the verb have. And it might sound like have. So, it's sounds a little longer. You can kind of hear that that schwa, that uh sound on it. Have have. Y'all have a pen? I need to write something down. So, hopefully you can hear that schwa sound, have. But I also said have a pen. And that's another characteristic of the southern drawl is the mixing of vowel sounds, especially the eh and the ih.

So, instead of saying pen, it may sound like pin. Y'all have a pin? I need somebody to get me a pin. Okay, so even get might sound like git. But while we're in the south, I also want to talk to you about the southern twang. It's a little different than that southern drawl. So, with the southern twang, I might think of places more like the Florida panhandle or Louisiana. And it is going to be a little different than the southern drawl even though they share some of the same characteristics. People are going to take short vowel sounds and turn it into a diphthong. They're going to mix some of those same vowel sounds like get and git. But I I would say that the southern drawl it's going to sound slower, it's more rounded, and like it's coming from the back of your your throat. Whereas the twang, it's going to sound more at a normal speed, perhaps a bit sharper, and really come through the nose. It's going to sound more nasally. So, let me give you a sentence with the southern drawl and the southern twang. Just try to listen for the difference. If I were to say with the southern drawl, I can't wait to get me one of those.

And then with the twang, I can't wait to get me one of those. Okay, I was trying to say it more through my nose. Please, if you're from the south, please feel free to to give me some notes down in the comments below. But just trying to make a slight distinction between the southern drawl and the southern twang. Because if you're spending any time in the south, you may hear a little bit of both. And now let's move Well, let's go to the upper Midwest because I want to talk to you about Minnesota. Okay, and even when I say the name of the state, you should notice that long O sound, Minnesota.

And this is something that's distinct about the accent. If I were just to say it with a a standard American accent, Minnesota. But with the the Minnesotan accent, Minnesota. And you really have this pure O sound in many words. So, instead of boat boat. Soap soap. And it's really it sounds a little like you're just stressing that O a little bit, but you really have that pure O sound. Another thing about this accent, if somebody were to have a very thick Minnesota accent they may pronounce words that have AG as like egg. So, words that like flag may sound like fleg. Or bag beg. Instead of saying put the soda in the bag, you might hear put the soda in the beg. All right, now let's go let's go all the way out west to California. And I want to talk to you about Well, this is more of a stereotypical Californian valley accent. Again, something you might hear in movies or TV shows. And when it comes to this accent I actually think it's more about well, the the way people are stress timing the language. And what I would say is that people end up over stressing words that might have a slight stress and then de-stressing other words that that generally get reduced. So, let me let me give you an example. Just listen to the way I'm talking when I when I say the following. Today, we're going to go to the mall and I'm going to go shopping with my friends and it's going to be hella cool because everybody's going to be talking like me.

Now, to follow up on that, this is I think a stereotypical accent that you might find among younger generations, perhaps kids in high school might talk more like this. But again, this is the stereotypical valley accent. Hopefully you have a better understanding of these accents. I know that I went through them rather quickly, but I just wanted to to give you a sense of of what they sound like and why.

Now that we've talked about different accents that you may encounter in the US, whether it be the standard accent or even some regional accents, let's focus a little bit on pronunciation. Because if you are traveling to the US, you're going to be visiting a state living in different states, so it's important to know how to pronounce them correctly as though you're from there. So, let's practice pronouncing all 50 states right now. them all correctly? I'm from the US, secret's out. And the reason I'm telling you this is because often when I tell people I'm from the United States, people will ask where. You know, a lot of people around the world are are confident with geography in the US.

They're familiar with many of the different states, but from time to time as we're we're talking about the US and places to visit and places that people may have been or they want to go, I may hear them talk about a state and they'll they'll have a slight mispronunciation. Maybe they're stressing the wrong syllable or or they're just saying it incorrectly. So, I thought today would be a good time to talk about each state and show you how to pronounce them correctly. So, I'm going to tell you the state. I am going to tell you how many syllables each word has. So, all of that means that by the end of this lesson, you will be able to say each and every state perfectly. The first state, and I'm I'm just going to go through these alphabetically, is Alabama. It has four syllables and the stress is on that third syllable, that bam. Alabama. And if you're in Alabama, you might hear people pronounce it with a rather strong southern accent, Alabama. I was actually born in Alabama.

No, it's true. I was. I've lived in quite a few of these states, so I'll I'll let you know. The next state is Alaska. It has three syllables, the stress is on that second syllable. That final syllable just has that schwa, Alaska. It is a beautiful state. If you love the outdoors, I highly recommend it. I worked up there for the summer. It's gorgeous. Then we have Arizona. It has four syllables, the stress is on that third syllable, Arizona. Zo zo zo, Arizona. Not much to say about Arizona except it's hot. Next is Arkansas. Three syllables, stress is on that first syllable, Arkansas. This is a common one that that people have a little trouble with because again, don't don't think of the spelling. Don't try and pronounce it based on the spelling, you could get all screwed up. That final syllable, saw, saw, Arkansas. Next is the most populous state, and that is California. It has four syllables, stress is on that third syllable, California. Sometimes, if you're very cool, you just shorten it to two syllables and just say Cali, Cali. You know, I used to live in Cali. I've just been informed that nobody cool says that. Then we have Colorado. This state has four syllables, the stress is on that third syllable. Even though it's r a d, it's Colorado, not rado, Colorado. The Rocky Mountains, beautiful state. I did my university there, University of Colorado, go buffs. Next is Connecticut. This is another one where the the spelling can can throw off the pronunciation a little bit if you're trying to say it how it's spelled, but Connecticut has four syllables, the stress is on that second syllable, Connecticut, Connecticut. I also used to live in Connecticut. Now I think about it, I've I've lived in quite a few of these states. Next is Delaware.

Has three syllables, stress is on that first syllable, Delaware. I don't know anything about Delaware. I've never been there, I've never lived there, so let's just move on to the next state. It also has three syllables and the stress is on that first syllable, Florida. It's the Sunshine State, my parents live there now, known for its beautiful beaches, Florida. Next is Georgia, two syllables, stress on that first syllable, Georgia. Or again, if you're in the South, if you're in Georgia, people might say Jawja. I also used to live in Georgia, Atlanta, Georgia. I'm sure people are like, wait, that's not how we say it in Georgia, it's just Georgia. My Southern accent's pretty bad. Then we have a state that I would like to live in, and I think many people romanticize this state. It's our only island state, Hawaii. Has three syllables, stress is on that second syllable, Hawaii. And again, the spelling can can throw off the pronunciation a little bit, but yeah, just remember, Hawaii. Then we have Idaho. Has three syllables, stress is on that first syllable, Idaho. Idaho. When I think of Idaho, I think of potatoes.

That's what the state's known for, Idaho potatoes. Then there's Illinois. Also three syllables, but the stress is on the third syllable, Illinois. Again, the spelling and the pronunciation can get a little crazy. That last syllable, that final syllable, noy, Illinois. The next state, Indiana. Has four syllables, stress is on that third syllable, Indiana. I think many people might be familiar with this, famous movie, Indiana Jones. Not really have anything to do with the state, just the name, so let's just move on to the next one, which is Iowa. Iowa has three syllables and the stress is on that first syllable, Iowa. Again, Iowa, spelling, pronunciation, a little crazy, I o w a. That second syllable has that schwa, Iowa. And when I think of Iowa, I think of corn, because there's a lot of corn in Iowa. The next state is Kansas, the great state of Kansas. Two syllables, stress is on that first syllable, Kansas. And what I have to say about Kansas is nothing really. I drove through there once, it was a long drive, so let's just keep driving on through to the next state, which is Kentucky. This word has three syllables, stress is on that second syllable, Kentucky, Kentucky. The next state, Louisiana. It has five syllables, the stress is on that fourth syllable, that ann, Louisiana. And when I think of Louisiana, I start thinking of food. I think of that gumbo, Louisiana, known for their gumbo. And while we're on the topic of food, our next state, Maine, has one syllable, just one, Maine. Maine, I also think of food, I think of lobster when I think of Maine. And then, again, let's just keep going, Maryland. This state has three syllables, the stress is on that first syllable, Maryland. It's not Mary, you don't really hear that y, it's just Maryland. Also think of food, crab.

Maryland has great crab. Then we come to Massachusetts. Not a food state. Well, actually, no, no, that's not true. There is New England clam chowder there, which is pretty amazing in Massachusetts. They also have four syllables and the stress is on that third syllable, that chew, Massachusetts. When I think of Massachusetts, you know how people from each state have names, like if you're from Georgia, then you're Georgian. If you're from California, then you're Californian. If you're from Massachusetts, then you're a masshole. I don't know why I always I always laugh at that joke. I guess if you're from Massachusetts, you probably don't think it's funny. Then we have Michigan. This state has three syllables, stress is on that first syllable, Michigan. And very close to Michigan is Minnesota.

syllables, stress is on that third syllable, that so, that second syllable just the schwa, Minnesota. There's also a pretty distinct accent in Minnesota, Minnesota, Minnesota. Gosh, I am just terrible at accents, Minnesota, Minnesota. Minnesota, okay, I'm just going to I just let's just move on. Then we have Mississippi. This state has four syllables, the stress is on that third syllable. That second one's just that schwa, Mississippi, Mississippi. After Mississippi is Missouri. This state has three syllables and the stress is on that second syllable, Missouri, Missouri. That s is going to have more of that z sound, Missouri. Then we have Montana, three syllables, stress is on that second syllable, Montana, Montana.

Another beautiful state, gorgeous mountains, Montana. Near there is Nebraska. Three syllables, stress is also on that second syllable, Nebraska, Nebraska. Not really mountains in Nebraska, sorry. Next we have Nevada. It has three syllables, stress is on that second syllable, Nevada. And when people think of Nevada, I think most of us think of Las Vegas, Sin City, gambling, Nevada. Next is New Hampshire. Two words, three syllables, the stress is going to be on that first syllable in the second word, looking at Hampshire.

Now, that last syllable, it's not shire, it's not like Frodo in the Shire, it's sure, New Hampshire, New Hampshire. I also for a very short time lived in New Hampshire. Live free or die, that's what it says on the license plate, check it out. Next we have New Jersey. Three syllables, stress is on well, the first syllable of the second word, that jer, New Jersey, New Jersey. Again, a state that I think probably has a more distinct accent, Jersey. A lot of times people will just say that second word, just Jersey. Where are you from? Jersey, Jersey, Jersey, from Jersey. I apologize for these terrible accents, but let's just move on.

Next is New Mexico. Four syllables, again, the stress is on that first syllable of the second word, New Mexico, Mexico, New Mexico. Don't know what to say about New Mexico except yes, it's very hot. Then another very well known state, New York. Two syllables, stress is on that second syllable, that second word, New York. Often when people think of New York, they may think of New York City first, so sometimes people need to clarify that no, I'm talking about New York State, New York State, the state of New York. Then we have North Carolina. This state has five syllables, but Carolina, the stress is going to be on that the third syllable in that word, Carolina, Carolina, North Carolina.

Another state with a more distinct accent. All my relatives and my parents, they're from North Carolina, North Carolina, North Carolina. Oh goodness. I'm going to get raked over the coals for my accent. Then we have North Dakota. Four syllables, but Dakota has three syllables and the stress is on that second syllable, Dakota, North Dakota. Then Ohio. Three syllables, stress is on that second syllable, Ohio, Ohio. Let's just keep these O's going with Oklahoma. This state has four syllables and the stress is on that third syllable, Oklahoma. You can hear it emphasize that homa, Oklahoma. I don't know why I think of cowboys.

Next is Oregon. Three syllables, stress is on that first syllable, Oregon. That last syllable sounds like gun because it's unstressed, so it's just Oregon. Then we have the great state of Pennsylvania. Has four syllables, stress is on that third syllable, Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania. And also I did I used to live in Pennsylvania. Not bad. That's all I that's all I have to say. Then we have Rhode Island. Three syllables, stress is on that well, the first syllable of the second word, Island, Rhode Island. And no, Rhode Island, it is not an island, it's just called Rhode Island. Then we have South Carolina. These words together have five syllables, but the stress is going to be on that second word, that Carolina, that third syllable, again, n I won't I almost said North Carolina, but no, no, no, this is South Carolina.

We're not talking about North Carolina, South Carolina. Why are there two Carolinas? I have no idea. Then we have South Dakota. This state has four syllables, but the stress is going to be on that second word, Dakota, that second syllable, Dakota. South Dakota. Moving right along, we have Tennessee. This state has three syllables and the stress is on that third syllable, that final syllable, Tennessee. Tennessee. After that is Texas. Two syllables, stress is on that first syllable, Texas. It's one of the biggest states and people in Texas like to say everything is bigger in Texas. I don't know why they say that, it's just an expression from Texas. Then we have Utah. Two syllables, stress is on that first syllable, Utah.

After that is Vermont. Also two syllables, but the stress is on that second syllable, Vermont. Vermont. Next is Virginia. Three syllables, stress is on that second syllable, Virginia. Virginia. And an expression with this state, people say Virginia's for lovers. Don't know why. Not sure exactly what it means, but I guess Virginia's for lovers. Then we have Washington. Three syllables, stress is on that first syllable, Washington. Sometimes people may confuse it with the capital, Washington D. C., which is not a state, it is a district, District of Columbia. Next is West Virginia. This state has four syllables, but again, the stress in that second word, that Virginia, is on that second syllable, West Virginia. If you say it quickly, you really almost don't hear that T at the end. It almost sounds like you're saying my name, West Virginia. Then we have Wisconsin. This state has three syllables and the stress is on that second syllable, that con, Wisconsin.

People think of Wisconsin, they think of cheese. It is the cheese state. Finally, there is Wyoming. Also has three syllables and the stress is on that second syllable, Wyoming. Wyoming. There you have it. That is the pronunciation of each state. So now that you have all this information, you can say each and every state perfectly. I want to switch gears and talk about something a little more fun and casual. So people in the US love movies. However, people in the US also love quoting movies and that's why I want to teach you some famous and well-known movie quotes that you may hear and could possibly even use from time to time when you're having a conversation. Therefore, this is a little bit of a vocabulary and cultural lesson. Nevertheless, I want you to really think about how I'm saying these quotes. Try to copy the way that I'm saying them using the same speed, emphasis, and intonation. Movie quotes.

So this is going to be more of a cultural lesson, a casual, fun lesson, which is why I have not shaved. I'm I'm rocking the stubble right now, but I want to teach you some very famous movie quotes that Americans love to use. And these are quotes that have become very popular over the years that they will be referenced in other movies and TV shows and people may even use them in in just general conversation if it's the appropriate context. So I will talk to you a little bit about that. Let's begin with our first quote, which is show ME THE MONEY. AND THIS IS A QUOTE FROM THE MOVIE Jerry Maguire. It is a famous football movie, American football movie, from 1996 and he says show me the money meaning like how much will I be paid? Am I going to get paid for this and how much? You need to show ME THE MONEY.

YOU HAD ME AT HELLO. This is another famous quote from the same movie, Jerry Maguire, and she says it to Tom Cruise, the main character, at the end of the movie. He comes in and says hello and then starts talking about why he loves her and then eventually she says, "Hey, just stop. You had me at hello." Meaning you don't need to say all of those things. As soon as you came in here and said hello, then yes, I want to be with you. So the interesting thing about this quote is that people you can get a little creative with it. So if somebody's talking about something and then they're trying to sell you on it, something or some idea, you could stop them and say, "Hey, you know, you don't have to say anymore. You had me at You had me at comfort.

A lot of times I ask you guys, please subscribe to the channel and I hope that you might be thinking like, "Wes, you don't need to say anymore. You had me at subscribe." Okay? You're going to go ahead, subscribe, turn on notifications so that I can become your teacher. The next quote that I have for you is a very famous one. It's from an older movie and that is, "Here's looking at you, kid." This quote is from a movie classic, Casablanca. And this is Humphrey Bogart's line. He says, "Here's looking at you, kid." Meaning like I'll never forget you. Then we have, "Fasten your seat belts, it's going to be a bumpy night." And this quote is originally from the movie All About Eve from 1950.

And what's really curious about this is that the quote, it's often misquoted. And instead of saying night, people will say ride. Fasten your seat belts, it's going to be a bumpy ride. And what they're referring to is ride like could be you're getting into a car or even using ride talking about like a situation that you have to endure and it's going to be a difficult and somebody could say, "Fasten your seat belts, it's going to be a bumpy ride." Why so serious? I really can't do a good job, definitely not as good as Heath Ledger did. It was an amazing performance in the movie The Dark Knight when he played that role of the Joker. An incredible actor and I think he did such a wonderful job like really getting into that character that people really remember that line. It was a little disturbing, a little creepy.

Yeah. And then there's this quote. Let's see if you recognize it. All right, all right, all right. This is trying to do my Southern accent a little bit. So this quote comes from the movie Dazed and Confused. I love this movie. The movie came out in 1993, but it's about high school kids in the 70s. And Matthew McConaughey, very famous actor, is the one who says this line. And even though he's been in so many different movies, this this quote is probably what he's most famous for. This is what people remember him saying, "All right, all right, all right." And then we have, "Just keep swimming." All right? And I say it like that with that fist pump because it means never give up. You have to keep going.

Just keep swimming. This quote comes from the film Finding Nemo. It came out in 2003 and it's about a clownfish who is searching for his lost son, Nemo, and he has to keep looking. Just keep swimming. And this is actually one of the most famous movie quotes of the 21st century because it has that really important message. Never give up. Just keep swimming. "Are you not entertained?" I'm trying to imitate Russell Crowe. It's from the movie Gladiator. It came out in the year 2000 and he says this, "Are you not entertained?" Like trying to shame the audience because this film, Gladiator, it's loosely based on true events that happened within the Roman Empire and he would fight for the audience's entertainment and he's a little he's a little upset when HE SAYS THIS.

AND TO FOLLOW UP ON THAT, ONE WAY I think this lesson it can be useful if you want to practice and say these quotes in the exact same way. Shadowing, I think can really help your speaking fluency because you're you're trying to say it in the exact same way, same speed, same intonation, same emphasis, and really capture that rhythm and flow. And I think shadowing can be very useful and with these movie quotes, it can be a lot of fun as well. Here's a good quote if you want to practice shadowing and say it, "My precious." You have to say it like that, "My precious." This quote is from the movie Lord of the Rings and the first movie, it's a trilogy, it came out in 2001 and it was actually it's actually based on the the fantasy books by J. R. R. Tolkien.

But the movies brought the the story to life in a new and unique way and people really remember this quote, my precious. And it's become so popular that it's often referenced in other movies and TV shows. Here is another famous quote from Lord of the Rings. You shall not pass. Again, I'm trying to say it in the same way, but I probably don't sound EXACTLY LIKE GANDALF. AND ONCE AGAIN, I I don't know what it is about Lord of the Rings, but this is another quote that is often referenced in other movies AND TV SHOWS. YOU AIN'T HEARD NOTHING YET. THIS is the popular catchphrase from the 1927 musical drama The Jazz Singer.

And o- over the years it kind of changed a little bit and I think more commonly today people will say, you ain't seen nothing yet. And this actually comes from the 1974 song by Bachman-Turner Overdrive. That's the title of the song, You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet. I think if people are going to say one of these they they will use seen. You ain't seen nothing yet. It means however impressive something may seem, it's going to be overshadowed by what will come. So, I could say like, wow, you you think these video lessons are impressive and amazing? Well, you ain't seen nothing yet. Just wait for what is to come. That's another reason why you should subscribe. I'll have what she's having.

This is a quote from the movie When Harry Met Sally from 1989 and well, to give you some context, the the two main characters are sitting in the restaurant, uh Meg Ryan and Billy Crystal and she's pretending to fake an orgasm. And then some other person in the restaurant, it's not even a main character, says, I'll have what she's having as though it's the food at the restaurant or the meal that's making her feel this way. And even though this quote is said by like some real secondary character, it's become so popular and it's still referenced in movies and TV shows today. All right. And I say it like this because it's really like a voice that the main character is hearing in the movie Field of Dreams, which is also from 1989. So, Kevin Costner he hears this voice It's a great example of the first conditional that you have this condition, if you build it, and then the result in the future, he will come. And spoiler, it's talking about building a baseball field and then the players will come. Like maybe your father will return. All right, sorry if I spoiled it for you. The movie it's it's old, you've had plenty of time to watch it.

Hopefully you have learned some new quotes that you can now listen for if you're watching a TV show or movie. I told you these quotes are so popular, they will be referenced from time to time. All right, all right, all right. Let's keep going with the pronunciation of some famous and well-known American brands. And I really want to go into detail and talk about how Americans pronounce these names because sometimes the spelling and the pronunciation don't always match or perhaps people are pronouncing them using different parts of connected speech. Either way, I want to teach you how to pronounce these brand names just like an American. Let's begin. 20 famous and well-known American brands and yes, I am going to give you the American pronunciation because I am from the United States. So, let's begin with our first brand, which is Levi's.

It's a very famous clothing brand, they make jeans and both of the vowel sounds they're they're long vowel sounds, Levi's. Sometimes I've heard people say Levi's, but just remember it's a long E, Levi's. Then we have Bose. They make headphones and speakers and that S, yes, it is more of a Z sound, Bose, Bose. And then we have, this is one of my favorites, In-N-Out Burger. And with this one, it's if you've been to California, you'll know what I'm talking about. People are crazy for In-N-Out Burger. And I've included it even though you say it like it's spelled, In-N-Out Burger. But it's a great example of linking because people will typically say this quickly, In-N-Out Burger. So, that final consonant sound is going to get linked with that starting vowel sound, just listen.

In-N-Out Burger. In-N-Out Burger. You can say it with me. In-N-Out Burger. One more time. In-N-Out Burger. And then we can say it quickly, In-N-Out Burger. That's how most people are going to pronounce it and if you were practicing with me, let me know by hitting that like button. I always love knowing that people are interacting with these lessons. The next brand, which is well, very very famous, Nike. You've probably heard of this company before. They they make shoes. But Nike has two syllables. In the past, I've heard people say Nike with just one syllable, but it has two syllables named after the Greek goddess of victory, Nike.

The next brand is Costco. Okay, it's a very famous retail store. You can find these all over the world. And the reason why I've included it is because it's a great example of elision. Elision is when certain sounds or syllables are removed. So, in this case, the T is removed. You're not going to You're not going to pronounce that T. Costco. And the reason for that is that when the T comes between two consonant sounds, it may elide and it just gets removed. Costco. Costco.

Another example of elision, another pretty well-known American brand, Old Navy. In this case, the D is going to get removed because once again, it comes between two consonant sounds. Old Navy. Old Navy. And then just to keep going with elision, this is one of my favorite brands, especially in the morning, Cinnamon Toast Crunch. So, this is a cereal that that people will eat for breakfast. The word cinnamon on its own can be a little challenging. It has three syllables. The stress is on the first syllable. The second and third syllable have that schwa sound. It's an unstressed vowel sound. Just sounds like uh cinnamon, cinnamon. And then to well, continuing with elision, the final T in toast, it's going to go away because it comes between two consonant sounds, Cinnamon Toast Crunch. Cinnamon Toast Crunch. If you have not tried it already, I recommend Cinnamon Toast Crunch.

And then well, another brand that I enjoy, I would also recommend is Ben & Jerry's. Okay, they they make ice cream and the reason why I've included this one is because you see that sign for and, Ben and Jerry's. But nobody's going to pronounce and, they're going to reduce it and just say n. Ben & Jerry's. And we can also link link this the same way we did with In-N-Out, Ben & Jerry's. Ben & Jerry's.

Another example of a famous brand that has that sign for and, Black & Decker. And this this company makes power tools that you can use around the home. And once again, you're not going to say and, you're going to reduce it to just n, Black & Decker. Black & Decker. Next, Reese's Pieces. It's a well-known candy and both of those words end in s's, Reese's Pieces. It can be a fun little tongue twister if you're trying to say it quickly, Reese's Pieces, Reese's Pieces. Then we have Doritos. Doritos, it's it's a well-known brand of chips and I really don't know how to describe Doritos. All I can tell you is that my favorite flavor is Cool Ranch. But the reason why I've included it is because that T in Doritos, I am going to pronounce it with a flat T, which is very common in the United States. So, when the T comes between two vowel sounds, you're going to use a flat T. It sounds like a soft D. Doritos.

Doritos. You also hear the flat T in other brands of chips like Cheetos. You hear that soft D, Cheetos. I really like Cheetos except that you get cheese stuck on your fingers. And then you hear the flap T in Tostitos. That second T, I'm going to use a flap T. It comes between two vowels. Tostitos. And well, let's let's keep going with some more examples of the flap T. Gatorade. This is a well-known I guess you could say it's like an athletic drink. That's at least well, that's how they try to market themselves. But Gatorade, that T, I'm going to use a flap T and that second syllable I'm going to use the schwa, that sound.

Gatorade. Gatorade. And the same goes for this next brand, Caterpillar. I'm not talking about the insect even though the pronunciation is the same. Caterpillar is well-known for making machinery and again that T, I'm going to use a flap T and that second syllable has that schwa. Caterpillar. Caterpillar. Let's switch gears and talk about medicine. So, Tylenol is a very famous brand. They make medicine for for headaches or to reduce fevers. And I think it's very useful because people may not say, "Hey, do you have something for my headache?" They may ask for it by brand name. Say, "Hey, do you have any Tylenol?" And this one, the spelling and the pronunciation are not too similar. That Y is pronounced with a long I sound, ty, and then the second syllable has the schwa.

Tylenol. Tylenol. And then there's Benadryl. Benadryl is an antihistamine for allergies. So, again, if I have allergies, I might just ask and say, "Hey, does anybody have any Benadryl?" And with this one, again, that second syllable has the schwa. Benadryl. And the Y is actually going to have a short I sound this time. Benadryl. Benadryl. So, with Tylenol, that Y has the long I. With Benadryl, you have that short I sound. Whirlpool. This is a company that makes home appliances like washing machines. And it's a great example of the dark L. Both of those L's are dark L's in which your tongue's going to come up to the top part of your mouth and you're not going to release it. Whirlpool.

So, that RL combination can be tricky in many other words as well. But let's practice this and you should feel your tongue getting pulled up two times for that dark L. Whirlpool. Whirlpool. Whirlpool. And then there's Charmin. Charmin makes paper towels, toilet paper. And I really I don't know why, but that CH, it's not a ch sound. It's going to be pronounced like an SH, sh. Charmin. And that final syllable has that schwa. Charmin. Charmin. And then we have Listerine. It's a it's a well-known brand mouthwash. And the one thing I want to say about this is that that R I N E is not pronounced rine. It's pronounced with that long E, Listerine. Listerine.

We've covered a lot of things in this lesson and I hope that you have a better understanding of the American accent. And if this is one of your speaking goals, I would recommend that you keep getting exposure to the language. You can practice using shadowing, trying to say things in the exact same way. You can do it. Keep at it. Just just keep swimming. If you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time. So long.

SPEAKING ACTIVITY Practice using descriptive vocabulary

so many people tell me that they want to practice their speaking skills but they don't have anyone to talk to and there are ways for you to practice on your own you can pretend like you're giving a presentation or talk to yourself in the mirror or sing a song or even shadowing but today i want to do an actual speaking activity and this is one that i would do in class with my students it's very easy it's very simple and it's an activity in which you are going to use the vocabulary that you already know and you may even discover a few new words that you don't know and i also think it's fun because it gets you thinking in a different way because well there's more than one way that you can do this so to start out all i want you to do is listen to what i'm telling you and put a picture up here in your mind so for right now this is just listening comprehension for you i am going to be speaking and if i do my job well well then it should be easy for you to understand what i'm saying you'll hear these words i'll try to be very descriptive and it should be easy for you to put that picture right up here so just listen to what i'm saying and picture it so this is a picture at the airport and it is at a gate and it looks like the gate is empty because you can see two rows of black chairs that are empty nobody is sitting there and the chairs are across from each other the chairs are also next to a giant window in which you can see outside and outside it looks like a nice day it's a little cloudy and there is a plane that is out on the tarmac and it looks like the plane has just landed because it's pulling up to the gate the plane is white has a little bit of orange in it there are also two airport employees out there they're very small and you can see them wearing a yellow vest and i say that the plane has just landed because it looks like it's pulling up to the gate next to the gangway and then the passengers will disembark but right now it's not it's not attached to the gangway it's just pulling in so i hope that you understood what i was saying and you could put a picture in your mind and that picture looked like this and you can let me know in the comments if your picture looked like the one that i was showing you so with this activity i was using vocabulary that that i already know and i said that maybe you'll discover some words that you don't know so i used words to describe this picture like gate tarmac gangway these are words that you might not use every day but they are important if you like to travel and if you fly when you're traveling well these are words that you might hear or you could use so the gate is an area in the airport where well passengers will enter the plane or leave the plane the tarmac is a smooth concrete area where planes generally park and you refer to that as the tarmac and then a gangway is an elevated walkway that people will cross so the planes will pull up to the gate the gangway will connect to the plane and then the passengers will disembark so this is what i want you to do i want you to describe a picture to me so the goal is just to try and be as descriptive as possible you can do this with so many different pictures related to topics that you think are important and i told you that it's a fun little mental exercise because there are different ways that you can do this not everyone is going to describe a picture in the same way and sometimes i've had people tell me that they get stuck when they're having a conversation they're trying to describe a situation and they're searching for that right word or phrase so practicing this is a great way to challenge yourself and try to get unstuck so that's what we're gonna do right now but before we start this speaking activity i wanted to let you know that you can sign up for my speaking course if you would like to practice and improve your skills and when you click on that link down below you will find a special discount just for you we do a variety of different speaking activities such as the one that we're doing in this lesson right now and the course is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally each week there is a different speaking topic you will learn useful vocabulary as i already mentioned we do engaging speaking activities we warm up each lesson with pronunciation or connected speech in addition there are pronunciation video lessons included in the course and i am also going to teach you some of the language nuances like when to use certain words and phrases just click the link to sign up or learn more about the course and yeah i just hope to speak to you soon so let's get back to our speaking activity and now i want you to describe a picture to me this is the picture you're going to describe i want you to give me as much information as you possibly can the goal is to be descriptive so what i want you to do is pause the video say this out loud take your time and be descriptive and then when you're done you can continue watching and listen to how i would describe the picture and that way you can check to see if we were using some of the same vocabulary i told you there are different ways that you can do this so right now just pause the video describe the picture to me and then keep watching so this is a picture at the beach and at the front of the picture there is a huge pier and on the pier there are many colorful buildings because it's an amusement park and at the amusement park you can see this huge ferris wheel and in front of the ferris wheel there's a large solar panel collecting sunlight providing energy for this amusement park so this large pier then extends further out into the ocean uh on a more narrow pier to a couple of other buildings that are out on another platform further out into the ocean and then in the background behind the pier you can see the beach the beach is pretty empty you can see the white caps where the ocean waves are breaking and further off in the distance you can see these green hills where the forest is so hopefully you use some of the same words that i did when you were describing this picture a pier amusement park ferris wheel solar panel white caps and there is really no wrong answer because like i said there's more than one way to do this it really just gets the vocabulary juices going you're using the words that you already know and then hopefully maybe you just discovered a few words that well maybe you forgot or maybe you didn't know and now you can try to make them a part of your speaking vocabulary but this is a great activity to practice being descriptive because when you are talking about your experience traveling at a party some event you want to use precise words and phrases so that others easily understand what you're saying and if you participated in this speaking activity i want you to let me know down in the comments just write the word speaking that way i know that you were describing the picture you were speaking out loud and practicing your skills if you enjoyed this activity please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

SPEAK FAST (and clearly) like an American

have you ever wondered to yourself why is it difficult to understand the American accent when watching a movie or TV show I I want to help you I want to explain this and help you get a better understanding why this may be and what's going on because I I want to talk to you about fast speech and really this is hopefully going to help with your listening comprehension and understanding well why certain people sound the way they do what's going on when it comes to different parts of connected speech and I think this can also really help with your own speaking fluency even though we all have different goals but I think if you want to speak naturally and clearly in which case I mean that it is understandable then I I believe this will help you because you don't want to necessarily just always pronounce each and every individual word because the way I said it right there that's not necessarily how you're going to hear other people speak you can still use different parts of connected speech that we're going to go over right now and it's understandable it's natural and and that's really what I want to focus on and if this is something that you enjoy learning Please Subscribe turn on notifications then that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and I want you to practice this is not just a lesson I want you to look at and think okay that's sure not not make it passive learning but more active because we're going to go through these sentences right here we're going to do a deep dive but I want you to practice and say them with me you can Shadow me try to say it at the same time maintain that same pace so let's go through these sentences one at a time and to begin with this is like a little mini dialogue I just want you to listen to How I would say this dialogue and then we're going to jump into each individual sentence so if I were saying this dialogue right here I would say don't you want to get out of the pool what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy let's go to the restaurant to get a b and get a bite to eat I'm going to do a few more laps and then I'm done so as I'm saying this and you're able to see the dialogue it's probably pretty simple and you think well okay I I understand this and if you're watching a movie and TV show if you use subtitles which there's nothing wrong with that I imagine it makes it a lot easier to understand again the challenge would be when you're having a conversation or you're trying to listen to someone while they're giving a presentation the the subtitles or the words may not always be available and that's when you want to fine-tune and hone your listening skills so let's look at this first sentence right here this question question don't you want to get out of the pool and let's look at what's going on as we go through I'll try to give a few uh shout outs here and there but it's great to see uh so many people Julia Rafael uh Tessa excellent so the first part that I want to look at up here so don't you want to two things going on don't you that t and Y May blend together to create a new sound this chch sound it's very light it's almost like we're going to insert it between the two words and that allows us to then connect this phrase together so of course there's nothing wrong with saying don't you and you may hear that it's it's not like this is not a rule that you have to do this or you're always going to hear it but it is common in this case don't you don't you can you hear that slight CH sound don't you don't you want to a very common reduction in English want to gets reduced to wna Don't You Wanna Don't You Wanna so the next part I'm I'm going to put it up there in phonetic spelling so you can see the pronunciation hopefully that makes it a little easier to understand what's going on don't you want to get out of again I just pronounced the individual words but I would end up saying get out of get out of I'm going to use linking and a flap te and a reduction so linking is when we link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word so in this case get out of we can link those three words together now I set a flap T and this is more specific to the American accent because I'm from the US when the t comes between two vow sounds especially when it's in an unstressed word or syllable then it may get pronounced as a flap T it's going to sound like a soft d get out of get out of can you hear that that flap te get out of get out of now out of this is the reduction because I could red I could say out of or out of especially when the next word begins with a consonant sound get out of the get out of the all right just say try to say that phrase get out of the get out of the now I've chosen this phrase specifically because get out of is very common this this phrase is often used in English and if you are looking for a starting point to practice linking you to you know repeat after me don't you want to get out of the pool okay now let's say it together and just shout don't you want to get out of the pool now let's speed it up don't you want to get out of the pool say it with me again try to maintain that same speed and I think that is the value of shadowing ready don't you want to get out of the pool one more time don't you want to get out of the pool so this is the first question these different things that are going on and you're going to see I'm going to talk about this again assimilation reductions and we're going to practice this at the end if you are practicing with me let me know down in the comments ju or in the chat just write the word speaking that way I know that you are participating in the lesson and if you would actually like to literally practice with me this is something that we talk about in my speaking course we always warm up with something related to pronunciation connected speech most of the time it deals with connected speech and we're working on these sentences talking about what's happening and then we move into our speaking topic learning different vocabulary different uh engaging speaking activities so the course is for intermediate to Advanced speakers it's all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly speak naturally check out the link Down Below in the description if you like to learn more or enroll and in that case you can yeah you'll be speaking directly with me and practicing some of the very things that we're going over with going over right now let's look at the next uh next sentence all right and again I'm G to give uh some shout outs especially I love seeing people uh actually participating practicing that is what this is all about another question and then a statement what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy this is the response to that question don't you want to get out of the pool so what's happening here again we've already talked about a simulation sounds blend together a lot of times this happens with questions so in this case what's sure if the S and Y blend together you get that sh sound like you're telling somebody to be quiet sh again we're going to insert it between the two words that is what allows us to connect them so what's sure it's really a natural transition from one word to the next this is not something you have to force if you say it it'll it'll just occur naturally what's your what's your name uh is a very common question in this case what's your hurry what's your what your what's your you hear that slight sh sound and then the next one so we have what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy so just often times the when the next word starts with a consonant sound and the t comes between two consonants it's going to alide this often happens with the the t or d so in this case just taken that t is going to alide it's like it gets removed now it really doesn't matter anyway because the next word begins with a t sound so it's really also like you have these overlapping sounds but I just wanted to point out I just wanted I just again I just wanted that ww is a consonant sound you don't hear the T it alides that is what I wanted to point out that when the next word begins with a consonant sound whether it's a t or some other consonant it's going to alide just wna just taken now in with verbs in the continuous tense I think I think it's quite common in the US I will drop the G this is referred to as gropping so instead of taking which you can say there is absolutely nothing wrong with that but I would make it it sound like taken taken take can you hear the difference taking taken taking taken taking taken now once I drop the G I can then link it with the vowel sound in it and I think this often happens especially in this case because it's easier to link that n Sound instead of the in take in it Tak in it easy I can link that whole phrase together right there on the bottom and once again that t in it you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T it's going to sound like a soft D taking it easy taking it easy just say that phrase at the at the bottom taking it easy taking it easy so there's the phonetic spelling that I tried to provide taking it easy taking it easy so let's practice this together I saw some people already prella Ron uh excellent love it uh when people are practicing keep it up let me know I want to know so let's say this right now and I'll say it slowly and then I'll say it a little faster what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy so just repeat after me what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy now let's say it again say it with me I'll say it a couple of times what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy again what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy and that can be a little tricky that linking taking it easy because you can you can really move right through the phrase now connected speech does allow you to speak faster and that is why I think in movies and TV shows it can be difficult to understand but that does not mean you're you're always going to speak fast I can give a presentation and speak a little slower but still use these different parts of connected speech so let's let's practice this again together I'll say it at a normal speed repeat after me what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy now let's say it together I'll say it a few times just join in I'm just going to Loop it and just repeat it what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy again let me know right speaking if you're practicing participating that is what this lesson is all about and the sounds that's why I have it saying right there it's going to sound like a flap T go to thee go to the just say say that one phrase go to the go to the this is again specific to the American accent and we use this phrase often go to the what I'm gonna go to the park go to the mall go to the gym uh go to the office and you hear this go to the go to the go to the so this is something that I would say just definitely listen for it because you'll hear this a lot uh I'm let's go to the restaurant and is another reduction that it changes and it's going to sound like n get a i can link that phrase together and that t you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flat tea bite to eat Co this is some coarticulation we have overlapping sound so it's not necessarily you don't want to say it as two words bite two and take that break we're just going to you say that one t bite to bite to and we're releasing it into that reduced two bite to bite to eat so this is what it's going to sound like let's go to the restaurant and get a bite to eat let's go to the restaurant and get a bite to eat so let's say it's say it repeat after me slowly again let's go to the restaurant and get a bite to eat now let's say it again let's say it a little faster and just Shadow say it with me practice that pacing in these different things um let's go to the restaurant and get a bite to eat let's go to the restaurant and get a bite to eat let's go to the restaurant and get a bite to eat again if you wanted to speed it up you could say it much faster F let's go to the restaurant and get a bite to eat let's go to the restaurant and get a bite to eat so again these are definitely things that I want you to keep in mind those unstressed words in which case the vowel is going to get reduced so to may sound a little more like T and may sound more like n this is very common in spoken English and it will really help with your overall listening comprehension and understanding okay that is what that is the sound I'm hearing that unstressed um weak sound I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done except I am not going to say each individual word like that the way that I am speaking right now it sounds a little robotic I would just say I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done since you see the sentence there I imagine you're listening and it's okay I understand that I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done but let's do a deep dive we're talking about the pool so this is very relevant doing a deep dive and talk about what's going on I'm going to you could reduce that to I'm gonna going to getting reduced to Gunna very common it happens all the time gonna wan to have to I think those are some of the most common reductions however when we have I'm going to you could reduce that entire phrase and it's going to sound like Amina Amina I feel like when I teach this some people are a little more comfortable than others saying Amina it's not something you have to do but it will help with your listening comprehension if we're talking about movies TV shows the way that people are just speaking out on the street you will hear that am am I'm going to do this I'm going to do that I'm I imag imagine you've heard me say it already as I've gone through this lesson I end up saying it a lot i'mna i'mna do a so I I did want to point out intrusion which would be it's another part of connected speech when you're adding sounds either a slight y or a slight W do do in this case I think you can hear that slight W sound because once again it just allows us to link two vowel sounds together do do I'm gonna do I'm gonna do a few laps and then I'm done so the the entire first part up there it's going to sound like i'mna DOA i'mna DOA I'm gonna do a few laps and I've already mentioned it may get reduced and sound more like n than I'm I can link that phrase together linking the final consonant sound with the beginning vowel sound then I I'm done I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done let's let's say it slowly and I want you to repeat after me and and give the i'mna a try you can let me know how you feel in the comments in the chats you can just give it a try and see what you think I'm gonna do a few laps and then I'm done one more time slowly I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done now let's start to speed it up you can Shadow I'll just say it several times you can join in practice with me

I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done I'm GNA do a few laps and then I'm done I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done and again because we're using connected speech if I were to say it very fast I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done if you hear somebody say this and you don't see the written words that's when it can be a little a lot more challenging I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done I think there are definitely words that you would hear and pick out those stressed words but this is what makes it a little more difficult to really identify the individual words because people are actually saying them together they're saying them as a phrase let's practice now I want you to participate and say this dialogue we're going to say it together once again I'll say the whole thing and then we'll we'll take turns so there's a and b these two people having a conversation don't you want to get out of the pool what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy let's go to the restaurant and get a bite te I'm going to do a few laps and then I'm done let's practice how about uh I I'm going to start I will say a I want you to say B and then we'll switch ready don't you want to get out of the pool let's go to the restaurant and get a bite to eat well done now I want to switch I want you to say a and I I'm going to say B so you can begin right now what's your hurry I'm just taking it easy I'm going to do a few more laps and importantly just to be able to understand that well there might be a c a small sound getting inserted between two words or an elision A sounds getting removed or a reduction is happening and The Vow sounds going to change just slight I so excellent uh great job excellent Julia VI thank you for participating that is what I love to hear and again if this is something that interests you and you actually want to practice with me check out that link Down Below in the description if you'd like to join my course practice different parts of connected speech there are audio and video lessons included in the course so that you can practice on your own and lessons are each week it's an 8-week course check out the link down below if you'd like to learn more about it and of course if you have any questions just send me an email so I I hope that you found this lesson useful I hope you have a better understanding and if you did let me know hit that like button that tells me that I should do more lessons like this in the future so I appreciate everyone joining me today I really appreciate you participating in the lesson saying these sentence with me it's been uh great seeing you just to give a few shout outs uh latow vid Julia uh Alex thanks so much for being here Rafaela it's good uh seeing you I will speak to you soon um Manuel Peter thank you guys I hope you have a wonderful rest of the day and of course I will see you very soon in the future

SPEAK FAST (and easily) like an American

Let's talk about fast speech. And the reason why I want to go over this topic is because often I hear people say, "Look, they I they understand me when we're having these lessons right now, but if they're watching a movie or TV show or just out on the street somewhere, it's really a lot more difficult to understand what people are saying." So, when I talk about speaking fast, you should never feel like this is something you have to do. That's not necessarily the goal. I know that we all have different speaking goals and some of what I'm going to talk about does have to do more with the American accent and you shouldn't feel like you have to speak with any particular accent. But I do think this is really going to help your listening comprehension and understand well why people especially people in the US like me sound the way that we do when we're not just pronouncing individual words but mostly phrases.

Because a lot of what we're going to talk about today has to do with connected speech and the different parts of connected speech, which is pretty much why people well sound fast or they're able to speak a lot quicker. practice and I would love it if you practice with me. I know I told you you shouldn't feel like you have to speak with any accent, but just to kind of familiarize yourself with these sounds, with some of the transitions, I would encourage you to say these sentences out loud, practice them with me, and we're really going to do a deep dive and talk about what's going on. What's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around? It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time.

Yeah, I'm going to see if I can find one on the app. So I know reading and listening are really well two different things. Of course, you're able to read the dialogue, follow along, which is perfect. And that therefore, it's probably a little easier to understand and like, oh yeah, yeah, I get it. I I can hear the sentence and know what this person is talking about. So, let's do a deep dive and talk specifically what's happening with each individual sentence. And one thing I want to mention, if you would like to get the lesson notes that are next to me, click on that link down below in the description. Join our email community. And if you're unfamiliar with it, because I haven't even introduced myself. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals. So, check out that link, join our community. I'll I'll give you a bunch of resources, lesson notes from time to time, as well as updates when it comes to new lessons, courses, and and and pretty much everything. So, let's look at this first uh well, two questions right here. What's up with the bus? Should we should we keep waiting around? The first thing I want to point out down here, uh what's up with something? This is a little more informal and I feel like it's a little more American English. You're more likely to hear this in the United States. And if somebody says, "Well, what's up with something?" They they would use this to say that, "Well, you don't understand something or you're trying to get an explanation for it." So, like, what's up with the bus? It really implies that the bus is probably late. What's going on? We've been waiting here for a while. What's up with the bus? Why is it late? So, when you say, "What's up with something?" You're you may be asking for clarification or like, "Wait, why why is this happening? What's going on? What's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around?"

The first I basically I'll go through this one at a time. The first thing I want to point out is that linking is going to occur with the phrase what's up. We're going to link the final consonant sound in what's with the beginning vowel sound in up. What's up? With the there is co-articulation. This is when you have overlapping sounds. Now, those th's are not the same. You basically have a voiceless th with with and a voiced th sound in the ' and you're going to feel that vibration. But really we're just going to smoothly transition from one into the other because the tongue in your mouth is in the same position. So the last thing that I want to point out and there's a lot going on down here is that we have some gdropping which is going to change that t to a glottle t as well as some linking. So when when we have verbs in the continuous tense, this is something that's also I think very common when people are will just speaking in the United States, they may drop the g. So instead of waiting and you hear that ing sound, I'm going to drop the g. For example, if I have the verb taking, I'm taking a break. I'm gonna drop that g. And taking is going to sound more like taking. I'm taking a break. I'm taking a break. The one thing that is a little more is a little trickier with waiting, if I drop the G, then you may hear people pronounce it as a glottle T. So, normally you might hear me say waiting and that T is going to sound like a flap T, which is something I'll get to in just a moment, and it's going to sound like a soft D. But with the American accent, when you have the T followed by an N sound, you may hear people pronounce it as a glottle T. This is not a fixed rule. But think about some other words that follow this mountain. All right, you have the T followed by an N sound. Kitten, mitten, and instead of waiting, waiting. And basically, if you're trying to think about, well, what the hell is a glottle stop? What is a glottle T? The glottis is closing. It's stopping the flow of air. To give you another example, if you and I'm sure you can make this sound, somebody makes a mistake and you say uhoh. Uhoh. In between that uhoh, you should feel that tightness in your throat. That is a glottle stop. Uhoh. Wait. And you can feel it down here. And then I can link that n sound with the vowel sound in around. I know it's a little tricky, but just give it a try. Waiting around. Can you feel that? Hear that linking too?

Waiting around. Waiting around. Should we keep waiting around? Should we keep waiting around? Now, if you pronounce this with the uh flap t, that's that's perfectly fine. That's also a part of the American accent. Waiting waiting around. So, let's practice these two questions. And up top here, I've basically given you more of the phonetic spelling of what's going on. Maybe it's a little easier to look at or think about. But let's say these two questions. I'm going to say it slowly, and I just want you to repeat after me. Just repeat that first question. What's up with the bus?

Now, repeat the second question. Should we keep waiting around? Now, let's actually let's shadow say it together. I want you to just say it with me. I'm going to say it a couple of times slowly just so you can again feel like get the get a sense for that rhythm and flow as well. So, I'm going to say it two times slowly. Just say it with me. What's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around? What's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around? So, let's speed it up. Just repeat after me. What's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around?

Now, if you wanted to challenge yourself and try to say it fast, uh, I'll say it quickly. What's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around? What's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around? I want to know if you're practicing. Just let me know if you're practicing. Saying this out loud, that's I love uh knowing that you're practicing. So, just write speaking in the comments or in the chat. That tells me that you're actively participating in the lesson, which is that's what I want that I want I want you all to participate and feel and and really practice your speaking skills. So, write speaking in the chat in the comments if you are actually saying these sentences out loud. So, let's go ahead and look at the next sentence.

It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. So, the first thing I want to point out, it's your call. This is a uh statement that you could use if you want to tell someone like, look, you should be the one to make the decision. Somebody's like, well, what do you think we should do? Like, well, it's your call. You know, you make the decision. I trust your judgment. It's you're the one who is well the better person to make the decision. It's your call. This is another informal phrase, but a good one to know. Something you may hear from time to time. It's your call. But I think uh you may we may want to consider other options. All right, let's look at what's going on with uh this sentence right here.

Love it. All these people participating. Excellent. Teao suma. tal. Perfect. It's your call. The first thing I want to mention is that assimilation may occur. This is when you have two sounds. They blend together and it creates a new sound. This is not something that you have to force. As you transition from one sound to the next, it's just going to occur naturally. This is also not a fixed rule. So, you may hear the individual sounds. It's your or you may hear it blended together. That ts plus the y sound gets a ch. It's your call. It's your call. It's your call. But I we can link that phrase and I told you that we would talk about the flap T because Americans like me, we love the flap T.

Probably the most common occurrence is when the T comes between two vowel sounds. But I. So but ends with a T, but the next word I begins with a vowel sound. So, even when we're talking about a phrase, that T can still change to a flap T. But I But I you could you should hear that soft D sound, that duh sound when I say this phrase. But I But I but I think we may um want to a very common reduction w. I'm sure you've heard this. You may even use this already as part of your speaking fluency. Consider other options. We have three words right here that we can link together. We're going to link the the final consonant sound, which are those R sounds in consider and other, and we're going to link it with those vowel sounds. Now, this is not something that is overwhelming. It just really provides a smoother transition, which is why I also say this is going to help you speak a little more naturally. And we're really just moving right into that next word. Consider other consider other options. And it's almost like we're moving that R sound over to the next syllable, but we're going to move right through it. Which is also why if somebody is just first uh learning the language and you hear somebody say this, they may not be able to pick out those individual words because of linking. It may sound like one long word. Consider other options. consider other options. So, here uh is the sentence. And again, I've provided you with a little bit of the phonetic spelling so you can kind of see what's going on. It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. I know consider other options.

I could not put that on the same line, but you get the idea. We're going to link those final three words. So, let's say it slowly two times. I want you to shadow. Say it with me. And actually, we'll practice these different parts of connected speech. So, let's say it together. I'm going to say it twice. It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. Let's just do it again just for the fun of it. It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. If we speed it up a little, let's maybe do a listen and repeat. It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options.

Now, let's say it together a couple of times. I'm going to say it quickly. See if you can maintain that pace. I think that's one of the more challenging things when it comes to shadowing. Here we go. It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. All right, we're going to go through this one at a time and then we'll do the dialogue together. Again, if you're practicing, just let me know. Just write that word speaking in the chat in the comments and that way I know that you are actually will watching this lesson and practicing your speaking skills. The next sentence, we're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. What is going on right here? So, we're going to This is another common reduction. Gonna and wanna, I think, are the two most common ones. Once again, you may already be using this as you're when you're speaking and having a conversation. We're going to have to. We can reduce that to have to. We're going to have to. It is a little trickier when you have one right after the other. Get an Uber. I can link that entire phrase and that final T in get once again with the American accent. You're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T. Get an Uber. Say it with me. Get an Uber. Get an Uber. Get an Uber. Okay, [laughter] we'll just keep doing it again and again. A lot of this when it comes to well, not just pronunciation, but transitioning from one sound to the next is a little bit of muscle memory. You know, where is your tongue in your mouth? Controlling the airflow. and it makes it just easier, especially with some of this repetition. The next clause, so I'll probably separate this into two different thought groups, which is a way of structuring our speech. And after the word Uber, I'm probably going to have a short pause before I say that other dependent clause. If we want to, there's that reduction. If we want to make it on time, make it on. I can link that phrase together. Once again, that T and it, you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T. Make it on. Make it on. Make it on time. Just say that final phrase. Make it on time. Once more. Make it on time. So, I'll say this slowly. I I implore you. I encourage you to say it with me.

And I love it that everybody people are participating. Elsie, uh, Chide R, excellent. Great to see you, Marama. Perfect. So, let's say this together slowly twice. We're going to have to get an Uber if we're gonna if we want to make it on time. Sorry, I think I kind of botched that a little bit. Let's Let's do it again two times. We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. Once again, we're gonna have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. Even though I'm trying to say it slowly, it may still seem a little fast. Let's uh let's say it more of a at a normal speed and just say it with me. And notice that pause. We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time.

We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. And now if we speed it up again, I'll say it twice. You can try to say it with me. Maintain that same speed. We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. All right. Once again, let me know if you're uh give me How about this? I'm kind of curious because I told you that I think when it comes to shadowing, maintaining that same speed is is probably one of the more difficult things. All right, just give me a a thumbs up emoji or something if if you feel like you're able to maintain that same speed as I'm saying it a little quicker. Uh, we're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time.

We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. The final sentence and then we're going to do this dialogue. So, somebody they they say this, "Well, we're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time." And then the other person replies, "Okay, I'm going to see if I can find one on the app. I'm going to see if I can find one on the app." What's happening here? I'm gonna now Well, I'm going to You could reduce that to I'm gonna One thing I want to point out, and this is something that you will hear in in spoken English, you may hear people reduce this even further. And instead of I'm going to, it may sound like I'm going to. I'm going to I'm going to I'm going to. So, I'm going to go to the mall. I'm going to go to the mall. I'm going to go to the mall. I'm

R. That T after the N in interactive, you do not hear me say it. So find is is another example. Find one. If I were to think of another word, um, uh, mind, I'm not going to release it into that d sound. Mine. Mine. Um, or, um, what else? What's another n d word? Fi. Well, I if I said I can't find uh I can't find my phone. I can't find my phone. I can't find my phone. You don't really hear that D. It allides. It almost sounds like I'm saying f I N E. Fine. One on. One on. I can link that together. One on the app. The one thing I want to point out with the article is that often it has a strong and a weak form. And often you're going to hear that weak form which is going to have that schwa sound. The the car, the cup, the glass. But because the word app begins with a vowel sound, you're going to hear that strong form. The app, the elephant, the air. So in this case, it's going to sound um like this. I'm going to see if I can find one on the app. So let's practice this together and say it. I know some of you are saying like, okay, it is fast or a little too fast. Uh trying to maintain that same speed. So, let's say this slowly and just say it with me. I'm gonna see if I can find one on the app. I'm gonna see if I can find one on the app. One more time. I'm gonna see if I can find one on the app.

Now, a little faster. I'll say it three times again. Kind of like a a middle speed. I'm going to see if I can find one on the app. I'm gonna see if I can find one on the app. I'm gonna see if I can find one on the app. And then at a more regular speed, if I were standing out uh on the street at this bus stop and having this conversation, I would say again, I'll say it a few times. Try to say it with me. I'm going to see if I can find one on the app. I'm gonna see if I can find one on the app. I'm gonna see if I can find one on the app.

The one thing I want you to again keep in mind just highlight that I'm gonna hopefully as you hear me say that I'm gonna you can kind of pick it out and you hear it you know that oh I'm somebody is saying I'm gonna all right so let's uh let's start putting this all together. Excellent. I want you guys to keep practicing with me. Talal, Lai, uh, Peter, uh, Freddy, uh, Chad, keep keep let's keep practicing. And I I'm gonna say part A. Well, I'll say it one more time just so you can hear it and then we're going to switch and uh, we'll we'll pretend like we're having this conversation. So, just keeping everything in mind that we talked about, I'll just go through it once and you can hear my pronunciation. What's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around? It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. We're going to have to get an Uber if we if we want to make it on time. I'm going to see if I can find one on the app. And just so you know, I know somebody had asked, and Uber is kind of like a taxi. Again, it depends on what country you're in. I don't know if they operate they well, they don't operate all over the world, but they are pretty common in places like the US and and Europe. And you use your phone, the Uber app, to call an Uber like a taxi. So, let's practice this. And basically, I I'll start out. I will say A and I want you to say B. And then we'll switch. Are you ready? Let's begin. What's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around? We're going to have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. Okay, now let's switch. I want you to say A and I'm going to say B. And hopefully I know that we're syncing this up a little bit so that it does sound a little bit like a a real conversation. So you're A, I'm B. You can begin now.

It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. I'm gonna see if I can find one on the app. All right. Excellent. If you were participating, let me know. I want to know that you're practicing because that's what this is all about. Even though this is a video, you can still practice your speaking skills. Write that word in the comments or or the chat. Just write the word speaking. If you are actually saying these sentences out loud, practicing your speaking fluency. But I told you at the very beginning, I think one of the the most valuable parts of lessons like this is your listening comprehension because this is you're you're going to hear this. People are going to sound like this if you're watching a movie or TV show. Hey, what's up with the bus? Should we keep waiting around?

It's your call, but I think we may want to consider other options. Well, we're gonna have to get an Uber if we want to make it on time. Okay, I'm gonna see if I can find one on the app. and they're going to run through these sentences and it will sound fast and that's okay. But the more you hear these sentences and really understand what's going on with some of these reductions with assimilation and the sounds blending and especially linking that is so common in just casual conversation. It is all going to start to come together over time. you feel like you learned something new, you can really do me a big favor and and hit that like button. That tells me that, okay, I should do more lessons like this in the future and talk about fast speech. Not just to to say, well, okay, you need to try to speak with an American accent. If that's one of your goals, then that's fine. But most importantly to help you improve your listening comprehension because well especially if you watch movies, TV shows, you are going to hear probably hear the American accent quite often. So

SPEAK FAST LIKE AN AMERICAN #shorts #americanenglish

Speak fast like an American here's a sentence for you I'm going to get an Uber and go home except I'm not really going to say it like that I would say I'm going to get an Uber and go home so what's happening I'm going to we can reduce going to to GNA I'm going to or we can reduce it even further and just say I'm going to I'm going to take a walk I'm going to get you I'm going to have to call you back I'm going to go get an Uber we can link these words together linking the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word get in Uber now that final T and get I am going to pronounce it as a flap T it's going to sound like a soft D if there's anything that Americans love more than fast food it's the flap tea get an Uber and of course and in spoken English is often reduced to just n so I'll say it slowly I'm going to get an Uber and go home say it with me I'm going to get an Uber and go home you sound just like an American and now you know how to

SPRING IDIOMS & EXPRESSIONS TO BRIGHTEN UP YOUR DAY

Okay. Check this out. I swear that one month ago these trees right here were basically naked. And then all of a sudden...color explosion. You know what that means. You ready to go outside now. Yep. It's so bright outside. So, today we are going to talk to you guys about some common spring expressions. I feel like the sun is attacking me. Yeah, it's really bright out right now. How would you rate this beautiful spring afternoon? It's great. There's trees. There's shade. Greenery. Sun's out. All we need is ice cream. So our first expression is a weather-related one. It is not a cloud in the sky. And really, it's just what it sounds like it is.

When it's gorgeous outside. It's sunny. It's beautiful. It's not cloudy It's just super sunny and there aren't any clouds in the sky. We say "Oh, it's so nice outside. There's not a cloud in the sky." So this is grass and another fun expression is saying that something is like watching the grass grow. And this is a simile because we're comparing two things. So you're comparing something that's very boring and unexciting and saying it's like watching the grass grow. It's just...yeah, it's not something that we want to do. And you're trying to say...describe something that's boring. It's not exciting. It's like watching the grass grow. Can you give us an example?

An example... Waiting for Ioana to get ready is like watching the grass grow. We go through three different outfit changes. And it's like watching the grass grow. Everybody out here is enjoying this weather. So Wes. What your favorite... That's me. Yes. Yeah. What up? How are you today? Fine. What's your favorite thing about spring? I like that it... the days keep getting longer. After those dark winter days, the days get longer. You can spend more time outside. It's true. That is my favorite thing about spring. And you? Flowers. So many flowers. It's beautiful. The flowers are fine. He knows nothing. They don't bother me, but actually... They don't bother you? Actually, they do because I... My least favorite thing about the spring is the allergies.

I get bad allergies. Yeah, me too actually. Partly, you know...the flowers are partly responsible for that. But they're so pretty. Another great spring idiom is to brighten up one's day. And for example, it just means to make your day better. If something brightens up your day, it makes you feel better. Greater. Everything is wonderful. So for example, these flowers right here behind me...they brighten up my day. So while we have this gorgeous view, I want to tell you about two expressions that actually have the word "spring" in them. And they're kind of a little similar in meaning. The first one is to spring into action. And that means to start doing something quickly and with a lot of energy.

So if something happens, and you're trying to help somebody, maybe you will spring into action and start helping that person. The other one is spring to life, which basically means to start moving. That you've been one place...maybe you're sleeping and then - BOOM - you wake up, you start moving. And you spring to life. For example, Ioana, she likes to take naps in the middle of the day, and then suddenly she wakes up, and she springs back to life. Say 20 minute nap so people don't think I'm lazy. Because it's true. They're three-hour naps. No! They're 20 minutes. Our next expression is to spring something on someone. And usually we use this when we are talking about something, some kind of information that somebody gives you at the last minute.

It was unexpected and maybe not so welcome. So for example, if you're at work...maybe it's 4:50pm, and you normally leave at 5:00pm, and your boss gives you a new project to do. You can be like "Uh. How could you do this? How can you spring this on me at the last moment?" Or something like that. It usually deals with unexpected or unwanted information.

Another fun expression is saying somebody is not spring chicken. And if you say this, you're basically saying that this person is not young anymore. And you'd say "He's no spring chicken," or "She's no spring chicken." And often you'd hear it about...when somebody, they think they're younger than they really are. Give it a try. No. I don't want to get my shoes wet.

Another spring expression that's really useful is spring cleaning. And what this means is when springtime comes along people like to clean up their homes. And I'm talking about a big, big cleaning. In the sense that you clean up every little corner. You just clean it really, really well. And that is spring cleaning. So I hope you guys learned some new spring expressions, and now we want to hear from you. So in the comments, let us know what your favorite thing is about the springtime. What do you like about Spring? Let us know. We love hearing from you guys. And if you enjoyed this lesson, please like and share it. And thank you guys so much for watching, and we'll see you next time.

Bye.

START USING THESE REDUCTIONS - gonna, wanna, hafta, gimme, lemme

i'm going to have to insist that you participate in this lesson and you're going to want to watch this until the very end at which point you're going to give me that thumbs up and and hit that like button now i just said several reductions and i said one after the other did you hear them you're going to want to watch this gonna wanna and reductions are basically when we push words together and when this happens certain sounds are removed and and we use reductions all the time in spoken english they really just allow us to say more in a shorter period of time now using reductions is not something you have to do if you do not feel comfortable using them when speaking it's no big deal but i do think it's important to learn them because they can really help your listening comprehension and if you would like to improve your listening and speaking skills please subscribe turn on notifications so that way i can become your teacher my name is wes the channel is interactive english and it's just all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals so in today's lesson i'm going to talk to you about the reductions gonna wanna have to give me lemmy and even though i'm giving you the spelling of these reductions so that you can see what it is that people are saying reductions are really only for spoken english i do not recommend that you use these when writing we're really going to speed things up and talk about when reductions may be used together and you're going to say one right after the other and this may seem like a simple idea but it is challenging it is more advanced when it comes to speaking and pronunciation and trying to use these reductions so believe me when i tell you that you're going to want to practice this with me and did you hear those reductions just then you're going to want to practice this with me gonna wanna and if you want to get even more practice then check out the link down in the description and you can download a free audio lesson to continue practicing these reductions while you're in the car or if you're out walking check out the link down in the description so the way that we're going to practice is simple i am going to give you some example sentences and i just want you to repeat after me and the goal is just to help you feel a little more comfortable saying these reductions one right after the other and just just developing a more natural way of speaking so let's begin with gonna wanna because i've said this one a few times already so you may use gonna wanna when you're talking about someone and and something that they may want to do in the future so a sentence that you may hear is you're going to want to see this and the one thing i want you to notice is that the reductions are not emphasized or stressed sometimes when practicing reductions i think it's natural for for people to focus on them and then they end up stressing them but just try not to do that these are not content words so when i say you're going to want to see this really the the main focus should be you see and this gonna wanna it's not stressed and again that's why it's reduced and then we just fly right through the sentence you're gonna wanna see this so when you are repeating i want you to keep that in mind try to keep the same speed intonation and emphasis as we practice so i'm going to say the sentence three times and each time i want you to repeat after me the first time i'll say it at a normal speed then i'll say it slowly and then i'll say it again at a normal speed are you ready you're going to want to see this you're going to want to see this you're going to want to see this everybody's going to want to get these shoes everybody's gonna wanna get these shoes everybody's gonna want to get these shoes i also want you to listen for these reductions because you will hear them when you're watching a tv show or movie and it's really going to sound like these sentences are fast so i have some clips to show you and i just want you to listen for the phrase gonna wanna nobody's gonna wanna watch that you're probably gonna wanna eat someone now you're gonna wanna see this everyone's gonna wanna carry it sj you're gonna wanna get this i told you these reductions are common and ones that you will hear from time to time so now let's talk about gonna have to and people may use gonna have to if you're talking about well something that someone will have to do in the future and it's kind of like you're telling them hey this is what we need to do so i have a couple of examples and again i just want you to repeat after me and we'll say these three times are you ready she's gonna have to bring it back she's gonna have to bring it back she's gonna have to bring it back we're going to have to give a presentation we're going to have to give a presentation we're gonna have to give a presentation all right you're gonna have to sign a waiver well you're gonna have to keep on waiting we ain't got no room we're gonna have to study them you're gonna have to know them i'm gonna have to pass it's gonna have to wait you're gonna have to reconsider you're gonna have to choose and now let's move on to gonna give me so gonna give me is used to talk about something that a person will give or do to the speaker in the future and in this case the speaker it's me so you may often use this with questions because the speaker is the object of the sentence it's like you're doing something to the speaker or for the speaker again me so i have a couple of examples but before we practice these i wanted to teach you a couple of different phrases so to give someone a hand means to help someone and to give someone a hard time means to deliberately make a situation more difficult okay we're gonna use these phrases so i will say the sentence three times again i just want you to repeat after me are you ready are you gonna give me a hand with this are you gonna give me a hand with this are you gonna give me a hand with this he's going to give me a hard time he's going to give me a hard time he's gonna give me a hard time yeah you gonna give me a dog for a pet give me a pitfall you gonna give me something don't give me a chance you're gonna give me a wedding and then there's gonna let me so we use these reductions when we're talking about something that a person will let the speaker do in the future and again we're talking about me so here are a couple of sentences and i just want you to repeat and say them with me are you ready are you gonna let me drive are you gonna let me drive are you gonna let me drive you're gonna let me review your work you're gonna let me review your work you're gonna let me review your work you let me in you're gonna let me know you're gonna let me go you're just gonna let me die you let me know right you know i love hearing that you participated in the lesson so if you did you can tell me down in the comments just write the word speaking that way i know you were participating and hopefully you feel a little more comfortable using these reductions one after the other because it can be a bit challenging and remember if you'd like to get more practice using these reductions you can download that free audio lesson just click on that link in the description if you enjoy the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

STOP Making This Common Grammar Mistake!

I recommend that you watch this lesson or I recommend you to watch this lesson are these sentences the same are they acceptable the answer is no to both of those questions these sentences have subtle differences in structure and usage and it's also much better to use one instead of the other and before we get into all of that if you are someone who likes to fine-tune your grammar skills Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals now to begin with let's get something very simple out of the way just to make sure that we're on the same page and I want to talk to you about the meaning of the verb recommend and I actually like the definition from Longman dictionary the best to advise someone to do something especially because you have special knowledge of a situation or subject this is an incredibly common verb we use it all the time and I want to make sure that we iron out any possible mistakes if you use this verb when speaking or writing so let's begin with the sentence I recommend that you do something this construction is the subjunctive mood now you may be thinking what the hell is the subjunctive mood that is a good question and let's have a little fun we can ask chat GPT the subjunctive mood is a verb form used to express things that are not certain or real like wishes hopes suggestions or hypothetical situations so let's focus on the suggestion or advice part and it says I recommend that he study more the studying has not happened yet it's just a suggestion but I want you to think about that he study because it may look a little strange we're not going to conjugate that subject in verb I'm not going to say he studies which is what you would normally think about this is the subjunctive mood so I'm going to to use the base verb I recommend that he study more think about the pattern we're going to use recommend plus that plus the subject plus the base verb we're going to use this pattern when speaking and writing now there are other sentence patterns that we can use with the verb recommend which definitely makes this confusing and I will come back to that a little bit later on but I also want you to keep in mind that the subjunctive mood is more commonly used in American English which is where I'm from I'm from the US than it is used in British English and here are some more examples I recommend that you take an umbrella I recommend that she see a doctor I recommend that we book our flights in advance and yeah that is something that I would typically recommend here are some other real life examples commend that you formally apologize I am going to recommend that she leave the relationship I recommend that that you start now I recommend strongly that you come forward now one thing I want to point out is that we have our verb recommend followed by a noun clause which begins with the word that and you do not have to use that at the beginning of the noun clause you can omit it if you want I recommend you take an umbrella I recommend she see a doctor I recommend we book our flights in advance now the meaning is the same but if you are curious as to which which form is more commonly used we can check out engram viewer which allows us to compare the frequency of different words and phrases so if we're talking about recommend plus go it's a little more common to omit the word that I recommend you go if we're talking about recommend plus take once again it's more common to Omit that and then finally if we're talking about recommend Plus work it's slightly more common to use that I recommend that you work but really the the point is that you can use either one whether you want to use that at the beginning of the noun clause or omit it both are perfectly fine and the meaning is the same now let's talk about I recommend you to do something and we can keep this short and sweet because the use of to after the verb recommend generally is considered incorrect In Standard English because look I'll be honest if someone were to say I recommend you to take an umbrella it just sounds really unnatural and a bit awkward when when I hear this and I really wanted to point this out because I hear people use this form all the time when having a conversation and they say I recommend you to do something and I recommend that you avoid using this form and use the other form that we talked about and I want you to say I recommend that you do something but let's try to get a better understanding as to why there is some confusion first in some languages the structure is more natural so if you are just translating in your head I understand why some people would make this mistake and they use this form second this form is not necessarily incorrect it's just very uncommon if you are going to come across this form it's much more commonly used in the passive voice so in this case our pattern is the subject receiving the action plus the verb to be plus the past participle of the verb recommend followed by the infinitive so consider the following this is an active sentence if I say Airlines recommend that passengers arrive 2 hours before their flight this is an active sentence I'm using the form recommend that someone do something Airlines recommend that passengers arrive now if I were to change this sentence to the passive then I could say passengers are recommended to arrive 2 hours before their flight this is in the passive voice so my subject the passengers receiving the action plus the verb to be plus the past participle of the verb recommend passengers are recommended and then we have that to because we're using the infinitive passengers are recommended to arrive so in this case we have that form using two however the sentence is in the passive voice both of these sentences sound natural to my ears whether we're talking about the active or the passive but here are some more examples of this form with the passive portable electronic devices with lithium ion batteries are recommended to be removed and placed in carry-on baggage teenagers are recommended to get 9 to 10 hours of sleep and adults normally around to 8 hours now the vast majority of the time when you are speaking or writing you're going to use active sentences and that is why I recommend that you use the form that I'm using right now now I mentioned earlier that there are other sentence structures using the verb recommend and I want to have a look at them right now so you could recommend doing something and we're going to follow the verb recommend with the Jared I recommend taking an umbrella I recommend eating healthy foods I recommend hitting the like button and I just wanted to sneak that suggestion in there here are some more examples using recommend and the Jaren I recommend taking Surface trats well I recommend keeping the door closed I recommend knowing before speaking but I wouldn't recommend giving him any of our travel plans no one you could also recommend something to someone and this is also a little confusing because you see that too in there but we're talking about recommending something to someone and we're going to talk about a a person or a pronoun so often you're going to use this structure in the past tense because the recommendation has already been made I could say she recommended the movie to her friend or they recommended a restaurant to us now that doesn't always mean that you're going to use this in the past tense I could also say I recommend this channel to anyone who would like to practice and improve their English fluency and yes that is true here are some more examples using this structure can to recommend this to your friends yes very good firm but tender recommend you to a friend why are you reading a comic book Denise recommended it to me so the main takeaway is that I want you to use the form I recommend that you do something when making a suggestion to another person we're going to use recommend plus that plus the subject plus the base verb I'll give you one last example I recommend that you watch another video Lesson if you'd like to continue practicing and improving your English skills and that is everything that you need to know about using this very common and useful verb recommend and if you enjoyed the lesson and learned something new you can let me know by hitting that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

STOP Mispronouncing These 5 Verbs! Quick Pronunciation Fix

Can you correctly pronounce these five words right here? Let's begin with misinterpret. It has four syllables. The stress is on that third syllable. Misinterpret. You can really hear it. And it just means to basically get the wrong idea or have the wrong understanding of something. I hope that you do not misinterpret how to correctly pronounce this verb. The next one is perpetuate. to just keep something going. Again, it has four syllables. The stress this time is on that second syllable. Perpetuate. Keep in mind that tu has more of a ch sound. Perpetuate. Say it with me. Perpetuate. Then there's decipher. Three syllables. The stress is on that second syllable. Decipher. It just means to convert something into normal language. Keep in mind the c has a s sound, more of an s sound. Decipher.

Reciprocate. This word has four syllables. The stress is on that second syllable. Reciprocate. It just means to respond to an action or gesture. I hope that you enjoy this pronunciation video and you will reciprocate by hitting the like button. One thing that's a little tricky about this word is that you do hear a slight R sound in that third syllable. Reciprocate. Reciprocate. Say it with me. Reciprocate. And then there's acknowledge. This is a long word, but it only has three syllables, and the stress is on that second syllable. Acknowledge. When you acknowledge something, you just admit that it is true or real. I will acknowledge that this is a common verb.

So definitely make sure you are pronouncing it correctly.

STOP SAYING BAD Use these 46 words & phrases instead

bad is not what i want you to say instead i want you to say hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english the channel is just all about helping you practice and improve your english skills and today i have it's it's a vocabulary lesson for you it's really related to one word and that is bad first i want to say that i'm not telling you that you should never use bad of course you might use this word from time to time i just want to encourage you to think of other words and phrases that you can use to express your opinions about things that you might not like because the problem with bad is that it's so common it's not very descriptive and there are so many other words and phrases that you can use that would really tell someone just how bad something is and you're just giving them more information which is always good so what we're going to do is i'm going to tell you some very common questions that somebody might ask about different topics and instead of saying bad i'm going to give you some other vocabulary that you can use so let's begin with a very common question that someone might ask which is how's it going and instead of saying well i'm having a bad day there's a lot that you could say you could just keep it simple and really kind of just say the opposite of bad and say well not good or even crappy that's a synonym for bad that's a crappy day or even use an interjection like meh how's it going meh that really means that well the day is not very exciting perhaps it's pretty boring it's just meh or you could use a phrase like well i've been better that's a way of really not being too negative about the day and but just still telling somebody that that things are not things are not good i've been better or even one day at a time that really would tell someone that you're just trying to survive today perhaps it's been difficult very exhausting you just want it to end one day at a time another common question someone might ask you and it's also a conversation starter is well what did you think of the movie or what did you think of this tv show and instead of saying bad you could say well it's terrible terrible really means very bad or even atrocious i think atrocious is even stronger than terrible or if you want to give a little extra information talking about a movie or a tv show you could say that it's slow maybe you thought there would be more action more adventure and it's just it's not moving fast it's just slow or if it doesn't meet your expectations which i think happens when we watch a movie or a tv show then you could say it's disappointing yeah it was just disappointing it was bad don't you don't need to watch it it's disappointing now i know in this lesson i'm teaching you all these different ways to say that something is bad but i want to take a moment and tell you about something that is actually really good and it has to do with the sponsor of today's lesson which is lingoda so if you feel that your english is is maybe bad but i don't want to use bad so maybe you feel that your english is well just not good or maybe it's coming along slow or if you just want to improve your english skills and achieve english fluency then lingoda can help with that and right now lingoda wants to show you a little bit of love by offering a 20 discount on all marathon and monthly courses but you need to sign up between now and march 1st so lingoda is great because well they have small group classes which means you have plenty of opportunities to speak those same classes are available 24 7. you get to learn from the comfort of your own home and classes start as low as 8 euro per group class and i know all this because i have also studied with lingoda i took some classes in spanish and it was a really great experience lingoda has even started doing things like quizzes and homework and and these are new features that will just help you continue improving your language skills all you need to do is click on the link in the description and when you sign up you can even get a free seven day trial and make sure you use the voucher code love 2021 to get a 20 discount off your first month's payment easy to remember valentine's day is upon us love 2021 get that 20 discount and then once you do all that you will be on your way to reaching your fluency goals and that is a great thing and now let's get back to talking about well how to say things are bad so we're going to head back in the opposite direction and we're going to look at this question right here maybe somebody might ask well how's the food or how's the meal and instead of saying that it's bad maybe you want to be perhaps a little more polite you could say it's disagreeable if you say it's disagreeable it also maybe means that you don't feel very well maybe it makes you feel a little sick it's unpleasant you could say that it's disagreeable if you if you're not worried about trying to be polite and you really want someone to know that something tastes bad you i know i asked this question before i go outside and i just say well what's the weather like and well of course the weather can be bad but instead of saying bad you could be a little more descriptive and actually say what the weather is like you could just say cold or hot or windy or rainy and in all of those cases you're actually describing the weather and i think when people do this what they're really implying is that they're not really excited about this if somebody says what's the weather like you're like hot that really doesn't mean that you love that weather you're really kind of saying that well it's it can be a little annoying probably it's too hot and you could also use two in front of those words as well to give it that extra emphasis it's too cold it's too hot too windy or maybe it's just too rainy outside and you're going to stay inside you could also say the weather is yucky so i when i think of somebody describing weather as yucky perhaps it's like raining and snowing and it's just dark and it's just not a you don't want to be outside in that weather when it's yucky or you could describe the weather and say that it's lousy it's just we have lousy weather right now or nasty that's another word that people may use when talking about bad weather it's nasty weather outside uh let's not go out it's really bad it's nasty then we have this question right here what do you think of well some piece of work such as art and sometimes art it may look pretty bad and if you really don't want to hold back then and you say you want to say it's bad you could just say dreadful oh this is dreadful or it's hideous this this picture is just hideous or garbage that can be a little mean and hard to hear if if you call somebody's piece of work garbage it's just oh that's that's really bad or if you're talking about like uh somebody's work perhaps like a paper or an article uh i'm i'm a teacher and sometimes students would give me their their writing assignment and i could say it's unacceptable all right this it's it's not good it's bad it's unacceptable or even you could tell somebody in this situation like they're handing you some assignment you could just say it's wrong so those are two words that you can use when you're you have a situation in which somebody might be submitting something to you at school or work and it's bad maybe you could just say it's unacceptable or wrong now let's look at this question right here what do you think of like this person and often you might be referring to a person's behavior the way that they act because some people they they have really bad behavior and you could say that someone is naughty naughty this is a word that i think people would mostly use to describe children instead of saying bad like oh this this child is very naughty you would not really use this word to describe adults a word that you could use to describe adults would be well juvenile that's a good one if you want to say that an adult is acting like a child because juvenile means a young child or a younger person and you could say that this person's very juvenile sometimes i can be juvenile i'll be honest or if you want to say that somebody's behavior is just really bad you could say that it's appalling or maybe even be a little more descriptive and say obnoxious this this person's just obnoxious very unpleasant bad obnoxious behavior people could also ask about your vacation you go on vacation you come back it's very common somebody might just say well hey how was the vacation and if it was it was a very bad vacation you could say well it could have been better and this is a way of not really well just being like oh it was it was bad you're trying to soften it a little bit but if somebody says it could have been better of course then there were problems there were issues it's not the vacation you were hoping for could have been better or even somebody might just say all right and in this case i would say all right has more of a negative connotation and you're saying that the vacation was kind of bad because when you think of a vacation people go on vacation to have a great time they they look forward to it they want to enjoy it so if somebody describes their vacation is just all right that's not a good thing that means their vacation was kind of bad or if you want to be completely open and honest you could say that it was awful i just had an awful time or even you could add to that word and say god awful oh it was just a it was a god-awful time that was that vacation was just awful or you could describe your vacation if it was pretty bad perhaps you might just say it was uneventful if something is uneventful then well nothing exciting happened again when you go on vacation usually exciting things should happen so when you say it's uneventful then that tells that tells us that well it was a bad vacation and then we have this question right here what did you think of the performance and it could be any performance it could be a musical performance or even a sports competition and sometimes a performance can be pretty bad but instead of saying that if you're actually going to use the word performance then you could say it was a poor performance i think this is a common collocation a poor performance that the team the team lost badly because it was a poor performance or another great collocation you could say something is a weak performance the business lost money because management had a weak performance or if you just want to describe the performance and say that it's really bad you could say it's it was a disaster everything went wrong it was a complete disaster or even say that it was horrendous that performance was horrendous i want to forget about it because it was so bad it was horrendous you may even want to talk about an activity or an event and somebody could ask you well how was this event and if it was bad you could say that it was unpleasant you didn't like it it was bad it was unpleasant or especially if you're talking about an event or activity usually you would think it's very exciting and if it's just not exciting maybe it brings you down you could say well it was a downer or even it was a bummer or it was just depressing yeah it was bad it was it was really depressing people may also talk about a class or a meeting they say how's the class how's the meeting and if it's a bad class maybe you want to say why it was bad and you could just say it was boring all right or another word that you could use is lame that meeting was so lame it was bad or even ordinary ordinary it's just not special and in this case if you're describing something like a class as ordinary yeah it's not a good thing i i hope that you do not think that these lessons are ordinary i hope that you think that they are completely the opposite of every word and phrase that i just taught you in this lesson but again this vocabulary is very useful because you always want to use different words and phrases when you're expressing yourself so instead of saying bad i hope you learn some new vocabulary if you did please hit that like button down below as always thanks so much for watching and i'll see you next time

STOP SAYING GOOD! Use these 77 words & phrases instead...

good is not what I want you to say instead I want you to say this hi everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is all about helping you practice and improve your English skills and today I want to teach you many different words that you can use to answer some common questions and not have to say the word good now I think you are very familiar with the word good it's a very common word according to Oxford English it is the 65th most common word in the English language it means something that is well very pleasant enjoyable interesting but the problem with good is that it's often overused and it's not very descriptive so I'm going to talk about different questions that someone might ask and ways that you can respond instead of saying good and really I just want to get the vocabulary juices flowing I really just want to get you thinking of other ways that you can respond to some very common questions so let's begin with perhaps one of the most common questions that somebody might ask you and that's just how's it going they're talking about your day or even life in general how is it going and instead of saying good you can say yeah great fantastic I'm doing well or you could even say never been better if you think that that you're just doing you're doing very good now if you want to express that well that you're good but not really show a whole lot of enthusiasm then you could just say well not bad I like to use that one how's it going not bad or you could even just say okay which is another very common word but you could use it instead of good hey what's going okay hi Tiffany hi Roger how's it going then we have the question how was the movie or maybe even somebody could ask you how's this TV series these are common questions because we like to talk about movies and TV and yeah I would always get this whenever I'd ask students you know well you know how was the movie everything good good good so instead of saying good you can say that well it was it was spectacular or it was a must see if it's a must see then that means that well you really you have to see it but it's a great way to describe a movie as a must-see or maybe you could say it was entertaining fascinating we're captivating those are some great adjectives or even riveting that's another that's another good word if if something keeps you on the edge of your seat you could say wow it was riveting or if the movie or TV show is funny you could say it was hilarious or if it's scary it was frightening or disturbing or even it was powerful it really it affected me it was a powerful movie or maybe it was something and made you think you could say was it was thought-provoking that TV show it was thought-provoking that's another great adjective that you can use instead of saying good documentary now has presented audiences with the world's most thought-provoking cinema now if you want to start expressing yourself using many different adjectives like the ones that we're learning in today's lesson then you just need to practice and a great way to get practice is by taking some online classes with lingo des who is the sponsor of today's lesson and if you want fluency success then I recommend you check out the lingo to language marathon because learning a language is like training for a marathon if you are learning over a longer period of time that is just going to help you continuously improve your skills and there are three different options for the lingo de marathon challenge you can take the three month the six month or even the 12 month marathon and you can also get up 400 euro cash back if you attend 90% or more of the lessons during the marathon period which means that you could pay as little as 6 euro per class the reason this will really help you is because you will have small group classes with a native speaking teacher and I know this because I took some Spanish classes with lingo de and I had a lot of opportunities to speak I was able to learn new vocabulary and actually practice using the grammar in conversation you'll also have the flexibility to take classes anytime anywhere just click on the link in the description if you want to give the marathon a try and you have two choices you can take a 7-day free trial if you want to see if the marathon is right for you or if you know that you want to sign up for the language marathon then you can use the voucher code interactive ten and get 50 euro off your first month so click on the link in the description if you'd like more information about the language marathon and sign up if you want to make this your year for fluency success and don't forget use that voucher code interactive ten to get 50 euro off your first month so let's get back to our lesson on on what you should say instead of saying good and another common question that someone might ask you is how's the food or maybe how's your meal and instead of saying good you could say that that it is fantastic it's exceptional it's tasty it's savory it's delicious that's another very common response but let's get a little more specific and you could say that it is it's succulent it means that there's something's delicious and also a little juicy as well another phrase that you could use to mean the same thing is not watering oh it's it's it's so good its mouth watering or you could even say that something is fresh that is a great word that I like to use especially if I want to describe fruits vegetables or bread and I could say oh this is so fresh now those are all very positive ways to describe food and if you don't want to be so positive then you could just say alright ai-ai-ai-aight I'm guilty I used this one quite often it's a very common word and somebody says so how's your food alright it's good it's alright or if you want to be a little more specific and give that extra bit of information then you could say it's a little and then fill in any adjectives it's a little sweet it's a little sour it's a little spicy it's a little bitter and this this tells somebody that the food is good but you know it could be better because well it's a little sweet it's a little sour it's a little bitter it's a little I think two milks a little sour it's like milk here you go they're a little spicy another question that you could get is how's the weather and if you want to describe the weather you could say it's gorgeous outside I love using that adjectives to describe the weather and I say that quite often Wow you know it's gorgeous outside or you could just say it's a nice day or even it's a pleasant day or if you want to give more information you could say it's crystal clear so if you say it's crystal clear then typically there are no clouds in the sky it's blue skies all around it's crystal clear you can also say that it's sunny I think people associate good weather with sunny weather and say oh wow it's a it's a sunny day or even combine it with nice and say wow it's nice and sunny outside you could also say fine and I think people would just use this word if they're responding to the question and somebody's asking well what's the weather like what should I expect when I go outside and if you say fine then it's more like well then you know it's normal there's nothing strange there's nothing unusual it's it's just fine and finally you could be more specific and say it's a bit and then fill in whatever adjective it's a bit windy it's a bit cool it's a bit chilly Wow and again that that just gives people more information so they know exactly what you're talking about so just bit chilly in here don't you think we need a pilot city well I'll go conditions were a little windy another common question is well how's work going how's work and in that case they're talking about your job so you could say that that it's wonderful it's excellent or you say I love it I love what I do I love it or perhaps you could describe it and say that it is challenging maybe it's demanding and if that's the case you could also say that Wow it's you know it's very busy you could also say I'm learning a lot of new things I think this is a great response especially if someone just started a new job I'm learning a lot of new things or if you've been working the same job for a long time then you might say something like repetitive or even monotonous how's work wow it's monotonous I just do the same thing every day day in day out it's monotonous a job could also be lonely if you end up working by yourself all day or if you want to be sarcastic and somebody says this and ask you this question how's work going and you you don't really care for the work and you say well you know it's another day in paradise I don't really mean it but that's a good way to express the way you feel about the job read in the toxic fumes you'll probably die another day in paradise now if somebody's talking about some sort of project when they ask about your work and actually the things that you're doing and they say well you know how's your work going in that case then you could say like something like well we're working hard maybe you could say that well thing things are coming along nicely thing things are coming along or making progress that's another great phrase to describe how you're working on some project or an expression that I I think is a good one you could just tell someone slow and steady wins the race if you continuously work but even though you're not going to be going very fast slow and steady wins the race you're still going to achieve your goal chill out slow and steady wins the race can't have you burning out point is I believe that slow and steady wins the race we don't take risks we make profits something else that people love to talk about is vacation so somebody could ask you you know how was your vacation and there are different types of vacations if you if it's if it's very active you could tell somebody maybe well it was adventurous or perhaps you could say you know we were always on the go or even you could use the word non-stop that you were moving around you were doing so many different things that well vacation it was non-stop now other vacations are a little more calm and in that case you might want to describe it as well it was just it was very relaxing or perhaps you could say it was restful or maybe peaceful that's another great adjective if you absolutely loved your vacation then you could say it was perfect or maybe a great expression is it was just what the doctor ordered this is an expression that means well that you you really needed to have this vacation you needed this thing and in that case you could tell someone it was just what the doctor ordered a visit to the park was just what the doctor ordered Thanks I was thinking after the past few days you've had some tasteful those are some great adjectives to describe more of a formal party about a great dress burgundy a line very tasteful that's Italian silk very comfortable very tasteful although expensive you just threw a million dollar party a tasteful Polynesian affair culturally accurate if we're talking about event somebody could ask how was the the football match or how was the concert or how was the festival and instead of saying good you can say it was amazing exciting energetic thrilling marvelous or non-stop now I told you I would not use the words and phrases more than once so I'm going to add another word and say nonstop action that that things were just continuous and it just kept going it was so exciting you say wow it was just it was non-stop action kids running towards me with a look of joy I've never seen before and somebody might also ask you about your class or maybe a meeting and they'll say you know how was class or how was the meeting and in that case don't use good instead you could tell them that well it was interesting or educational or it was cool it's very cool you could also say informative or helpful or even inspiring I truly hope that you find these video lessons inspiring and well that that's actually what I want to know right now I have one question for all of you and that is what did you think of the lesson let me know in the comments write your answer down below just tell me what what did you think of the lesson and I do not want you to say good please please please tell me anything except for good I hope you now have the vocabulary juices flowing if you want to review some of these words and phrases check out the description below I put all of the questions as well as the responses and the next time someone asks you one of these very common questions you can be a little more descriptive and give them a more specific answer instead of saying the word good thank you guys so much for watching and I will see you next time

STOP SAYING UM, AH, ER, LIKE... | Avoid Using Fillers for Effective Speaking

So this lesson is uh like um so you know it's about fillers. So I have a new word for you and that is dfluency. It's not a word you need to know for just everyday conversation but in linguistics it refers to interruptions in the regular flow of speech. So fillers are an example of disfluency and we use fillers in conversation for a variety of reasons. Perhaps we get distracted or we start to feel nervous or we're just at a loss for what comes next. It is natural to use fillers in conversation. Fillers like um or ah and they can be useful to regain your footing in the conversation. So it's a natural part of communication and you don't really need to eliminate them all together. But, and I'm sure you were waiting for a butt. As a language learner, sometimes people may overuse fillers for the reasons I mentioned before. They they get distracted or they get nervous or they're just at loss for what comes next. And in that case, you want to minimize your use of fillers. And that's what we're going to try to do in this lesson.

So, I've broken this down into three parts. What's the difference between a pause and a filler? How do fillers affect your speaking fluency and how do you avoid them? For right now, let's look at this through the lens of effective speaking because the distinction is important because one is good and one is not so good. fillers. A pause is good and this is when you just stop speaking for a brief moment. It allows the listener or listeners to take in what you just said and it can be useful after emphasizing something. Fillers, on the other hand, may not be good because these are words, phrases, and utterances that tell people you're not done speaking and you need a little bit more time to think about what to say next.

Right now, let's listen to the difference between using pauses and using fillers. When used correctly, short periods of silence can make all the difference in the world. have a greater impact on them. Let's listen to it again. This time using fillers. When used correctly, um, short periods of silence can make all the difference in the world. Like, uh, your audience is more engaged, so people take away more from your presentation. Uh, and, uh, you will certainly have a greater impact on them. With those pauses, the meaning was clear and with those fillers, I sounded unsure of myself. Now, that's formal speech, but even in casual conversation, the result may be the same.

As an English learner, if you're using too many fillers, it may give the impression that you're either nervous or you're just uncomfortable using the language. So, if that's the case, then the goal is just to minimize the use of fillers because it is going to have an impact on your speaking fluency. So, let's talk about that right now. How do fillers affect your speaking fluency? As I told you, we use them naturally. They can help you sound more relatable as well as give you a moment to catch your breath. But if you're using fillers because you're nervous or you can't think of a word or you're unsure about what to say next, that is when they can become a crutch for your speaking fluency. And this is a crutch. It supports you when you have difficulty walking because of an injured leg or foot. And it's a good analogy because if your speaking fluency is injured, you may end up using fillers as a crutch.

And that's also why some people refer to fillers as crutch words. The result of using too many crutch words is that the person listening is less likely to hang on to your every word because using fillers, it really does get in the way of emotional stories. If you're trying to tell someone something fascinating that you really think they should hear, language is expressive. It's emotional. And if you use a lot of fillers, it's just going to take the emotion right out and sound a bit boring and uninspiring.

Now, this is inspiring. and dying in your beds many years from now. Would you be willing to trade all the days from this day to that FOR ONE CHANCE, JUST ONE CHANCE TO COME BACK HERE AND TELL OUR ENEMIES THAT THEY MAY TAKE OUR LIVES, but they'll never take our freedom? You can hear that emotion, those pauses really let everything sink in. and it's very impactful. Now, let's listen to it again using fillers and dying in your beds many years from now. Um would you be willing like to trade all the days from this day to that? Uh for one chance um just one chance to come back here and tell our enemies like that they may take our lives, you know, but they'll never take uh our freedom.

it it's just not the same. The fillers really distract from William Wallace's personality as well as his key message. That second time, he just sounds confused, uh, a little awkward, and it's just not authentic. So then the question becomes, how do you avoid using fillers? The first thing you need to do is just be aware of the fillers that you regularly use. Watch a video of yourself speaking about any topic. If you don't have a video, then record one or listen to an audio of yourself giving a presentation or having a conversation because once you're aware of the fillers that you regularly use, you'll start to hear these words in your day-to-day communication. And then what you need to do is transition from using a filler to creating a pause.

So before saying that filler, you have to catch yourself and force yourself to be quiet creating that pause. But as you build your vocabulary, that just means you're not going to have to search as much for those words when you want to express your thoughts, opinions, and ideas. You'll have them ready, and you won't have to use a filler. And then just be prepared. If you're giving a presentation, you should practice again and again because that's going to help you feel more confident. Please hit that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time. So,

STOP TRANSLATING from English to Your Native Language

hello everyone and welcome welcome welcome to our lesson to our life lesson today let's see today we are talking about and and and the dangers of translation the dangers of translation I hope everyone's having a nice Saturday and welcome to our tour lesson so I'm going to start oh the dangers of translation I should I should play some some some ominous music for you guys because this is how I feel about translation but that's okay I would like to let you know to welcome you today and please if you're in the comments please write your name where you're from hi so tell us about yourself are you writing why are you joining us from today and just say hi welcome everyone hello Perl hello you wanna hello mark oh yeah just let us know what is your name and where are you writing from because today we have an exciting lesson I think I I think it's very useful for most of us because we all struggled with translation so I think getting to expose the dangers of translation will be very useful for most of us and I will ask you some questions hi Jana very nice from India Romania Brazil wonderful Marco wonderful thank you very much for joining us today everyone I hope your Saturday is wonderful I hope you're having a great or a great weekend so far okay so I'm going to start are you guys ready is everyone ready excited I'm assuming yes so I'm just going to do to start so why do I say the dangers of translation and I have this ominous crazy face it's because translation has some problems okay so I will I will talk to you about how we begin to use translation as a method for language learning in the field of language learning or language acquisition there is this method called the grammar translation method and it started when people were trying to translate alt text into Greek and Latin or from Greek and Latin into different languages and it was primarily used to translate text that's very very important because that was its purpose and that's what it worked for the best however because of that it's been used so much to translate all text that it started being used everywhere by everyone basically almost all the schools have used this method and it's it's literally translating sentences from one language into the other and everyone uses it we've used the one I learned English when I was younger everyone uses this method most books use it so we are very very very exposed to this method and I think most of us know it very well so I want to ask you before we start welcome again if you're just joining us thank you very much for joining or listen and please tell us do you use translation okay so please just in the live chat whenever whenever you'd like just tell us if you've use translation and I will be honest and be the first one to say I have used translation and I think if you say I've never used translation I might not believe you because I think most of us have and there are times when we should use it so let's talk about why we do this okay first and foremost like I said we are used to it so we've been exposed to it many times we have seen it it's it's it's just comes second nature also because it's almost an instinct of course when you are first learning the language I think that your first instinct is to oh like what what is it what is this word in my language I want to find out I need to know it's very important that I know it's your first instinct of course but of course as we get as we get more proficient in the language that is when it becomes problematic and I would like you to know to to let us know if you've ever used translation and why you've used it this is very interesting to me because we all have different reasons I've just mentioned a few here but there's so many more reasons why we use translation when we try to express ourselves in a different language another one I said is when we quickly want to say a word in a language and we don't really know it we quickly look it up and then we just say that word and that makes it easy so it's much easier than then having that knowledge of the world insider our minds our brains okay and I think as we get more as we get more proficient in the language we if we have a lack of knowledge in a specific area we don't know a word that's when again when we fall on translation if we have if we don't have confidence and I experienced this a lot with some of my students they don't have the confidence in expressing themselves in English for example then again people fall on translation and they try to translate and this is when it really hurts our progress and I will talk about that in a second [Music] welcome Cynthia welcome welcome welcome from Brazil thank you thank you again for joining us again please let us know why do you why do you use translation if you translate and how do you do it when do you do it because there are times when I think translation is of course very very used and it's okay so let's talk about when it's okay because I do think that a translation is sometimes okay for example I think even Pearl was mentioning any new language learner yes when you first learn a language when you have absolutely no frame of reference to that language of course you're going to use translation you want to know what this word is and what this other word is and you it helps you make connections with the language so let's put it that way so I think then if you're just just starting it's okay now because I'm hoping that after today's lesson you will look and say translation is bad I'm going to try to use it less that's my goal today I'm not here to tell you stop it stop it completely because I'm aware that it is difficult and especially if you've been doing it for a long time it's a habit that we're doing and it's it's normal to for it to be difficult to break okay so just try to use it less that's my goal today if you can't if you can't stop perfect are you guys ready again thank you very much for joining if you have any questions please write them in the chat I would also like to ask you again just at any time if you can write why do you translate and when do you use translations because I think it's important for us to for all of us to see that we all rely a little bit of done translations and we all have maybe will may be using them at different times so I think it would be useful if you if you mentioned that so are you guys ready for the first danger or problem with translation this is the most important I think by far I think they're all important but this one's of course it's important we learn languages for the purpose of communicating not try so not like translating text or anything but if we try to speak in a language it's a problem when people do not understand you and I have seen this a lot when people many times when they translate they translate word for word and language is more than words okay language is is syntax it's it's sentence structure its context its idioms its culture so it's not just words put together that's not what a language is so when you are trying to learn a language you have to be mindful of all of those things and how they fit in the new language okay so it's it's definitely more than that and if you translate word-for-word at that point you're not even speaking English even though you're using English words and I've had some experience with this with students writing to me or people that I've worked with writing to me using a translator translating their language into English and it doesn't sound like English okay so that's the main problem of course because you want people to understand you when you speak you don't want them not to understand you hi hi Ricardo hello from Venezuela thank you for joining us again if you guys are just joining us today welcome thank you for joining and also tell us why do you translate and when do you use translations okay so we were talking about a big danger of translation is people not being able to understand you at times that is a big problem it's a big danger but we have more so I'm going to move on to the second one this one's kind of connected because it doesn't sound natural okay we did a another life lesson on fluency and tips to improve your fluency and there we were talking that fluency the goal of being fluent in a language is to think in that language and express yourself in that line so if your goal with the languages to communicate in English and think in English translation is the exact opposite meaning that when you have to translate something in your language you have to take yourself from the mindset of English and go back into your language so you're you're stopping yourself you're literally stopping yourself from thinking in English and going into your own language which which brings me to my problem with this it is the result is you're not using the the the the language in a natural way so it sounds unnatural it sounds a little awkward and you don't sound like you are fluent which is a problem of course so a Fabio believes the translation is part of learning it can be in the beginning Fabio but keep watching because I have done some of these dangers and I can tell you that it really sets you back translation can make it more difficult and we'll get to that point in one second okay so the third danger okay so I I just realized this little girl looks like me a little bit but huh it's not me but she's cute whatever um okay so every time you translate you are making this girl cry just think about that just think about it okay I'm just joking she's not really crying but she's asking you to please stop okay so I wrote here that danger number three is that you are building bad habits and that's not that's not all you are building bad habits that might be very difficult to break which is the part that's more difficult and what do I mean by bad habits why are we building bad habits many times when you translate a word you using that word in wrong context or in your using the wrong part of speech so you're using a noun as an adjective or something like that and you are every time you're using it through translation you are kind of reinforcing that practice meaning that the more you use it the more you get used to using it wrong so for example I'll give you the example of my mom who every time she she translates directly from Romanians every time she wants to say it wasn't she says don't was it's exactly like in Romanian and she's used to so many times that now building bad habits we also talked about how the biggest problem is that people might not be able to understand you when you translate and that it doesn't sound natural now I know because we are so used to it that many of you I'm reading in the comments translation ISM portant in the beginning yes it is in the very very beginning I'm noticing that you guys are really questioning but the truth is that the trans grammar translation method doesn't really have much backing up from scholars and it doesn't really it's not really proven to work very well it's just that we are so used to it because our teachers taught us this way so it's not it's not a very effective method of learning there are like other ones like language immersion that are much much more effective okay somebody else how can we stop translating Thank You Sajjad for asking

I'm going to actually talk about that at the at the end okay so we're going to go to the fourth danger which I think look language learning is difficult it's so difficult I think we all know it we do not need to make it more difficult but when you're translating you literally are making it more difficult on yourself look at this picture this girl is doing like all these equations just thinking about it that's kind of what your brain is doing when you're translating because your brain is in overdrive meaning it has to go from your language to English to English to your language from your English from your language to English in English to and back and forth and back and forth all while you try to have a normal conversation with someone you are making it so difficult on yourself when you're trying to use translation and the problem with this is you're more likely to make mistakes because the brain is having a hard time and for example this always happens to me when I go to Romania to my country my native country and I spent some time with with my family and I always speak Romanian and my husband is with me and I speak English so then sometimes I'll just switch I'll switch enough to start talking to him and in Romanian and I start speaking to them in English and then I'm like oh wait because your brain is in overdrive it's try to figure out what language you're speaking so it's it's going you're going to make mistakes so that's that's that's one of the problems okay so that's how you're making it more difficult the other the other thing I wanted to say is you are kind of cheating a little bit it's like cheating on a test because because on a test if you're cheating and I'm sure we've all been there we've all tried to cheat on tests if you haven't a good job but I think most of us have and what happens when you cheat on a test is maybe you get a good grade and for that moment you're happy because you got a good grade and you had a quick result but quickly as soon after that you will forget you will forget all the knowledge you don't even have that knowledge so you don't actually know the material well it's kind of similar with translation because you don't actually have the knowledge when you're translating okay I'm going to move on to the next to the next danger in one second but I just wanted to again thank you for whoever just joined us if you're just joining us let us know where you're coming from where are you writing to us from today and if you use translation how do you feel about translating and when when do you translate okay it's very interesting for me to know okay so we just talked about the first four dangers and I'm going to move on to the last one there's there's more but I think these were the most useful ones it's a quick fix one of my favorite teachers used to always say this and he said easy come easy go and if you don't know this expression it means when you get something quickly and then you lose it quickly and this is if I had a model for how I feel about using translation this would be it because you get if you don't know a word in English for example you don't know it and you try to translate it you quickly look it up you find it you use it maybe you'll remember it for an hour tomorrow you won't remember it and that's how quickly that's how quickly we forget and this has happened to me I'm sure it's happened to you too when you just forget the word and it's just not it's just not you you're not using the word so it's just not it's not very effective to do that welcome welcome Kamlesh I hope I'm saying it right okay so we were talking about this the fifth the fifth danger which is this easy come easy go kind of kind of method which is not very effective and you won't remember the word in the future so you have to keep going and keep using and keep translating and you don't have that knowledge in your mind the other thing that is actually pretty important for me as a teacher is when I want to every time I'm doing an exercise with my students or every time I'm asking students to participate it's because there's a skill that they're building or they're practicing well when you're using translation to express yourself you're not actually practicing any skill you're just what you are is you're just a dictionary you're just looking up a word and then putting it in and using it in in another language so you're not building any skills in that language so again my purpose today is to tell you that translation is not effective if you're trying to communicate and be fluent in English it's not if you're trying to translate a text or be a translator because then of course you can translate but you still the point is if you want to communicate effectively it's not very good method okay so if you guys just joined us welcome thank you very much for joining us we just went through the five dangers of a translating and I am getting ready to tell you what we can do about it what to do instead because I told you no no no no no now I'm going to tell you what to do about it okay so I'm just going to go over them quickly again just for anyone who just joined us so the first one is that people might not be able to understand you because many times you're using the words but you're using the wrong words okay and it does not sound natural which is another problem use it doesn't sound like you're actually speaking in English you are also building some bad habits by always relying on a dictionary not having the words within you and also cementing some mistakes you're making it more difficult on yourself because you are actually creating the situation for your brain when your brain has to switch from one language to another to another to another it's familiar it seems easy but you're actually making it more difficult and it's like cheating right cheating on a test is easy but we still don't have that knowledge and the last danger it's a quick fix and it doesn't work it comes easy it goes easy okay we know a word for a few seconds and maybe an hour or two and then we forget it okay so welcome for everyone who's just joined us Cynthia welcome Kayla and welcome hello if you guys are translating please let us know about it how do you feel about translating when do you use translation do you use it do you like it do you feel like it's making your life more difficult sometimes have you had any problems in people understanding how you are if you if you if you try to translate something please let us know in the chat I'm very curious to know because of course we've I understand that everyone's having problems and learning English is not easy let's be honest so let me tell you what you can do instead if you're seeing my first my first point you're probably like oh but it's make yourself think in English and what do I mean by that I don't mean boom you're going to start thinking in English from now on I mean if you make yourself and make a daily practice and exercise of trying to think in English every day you are go you are helping you are helping yourself step outside of your native language and into the English mindset so for example this is what I'm I've been doing with with Spanish on my way to work I force myself to think in Spanish and you can do that in English so on your commute to work or school or wherever you're going whatever it is that you are seeing doing force yourself to say it in English try to think in English and I'm not saying to do this all of the time just a little bit every day will help it is difficult it will be difficult but it is worth it it's you in the beginning when I was younger I could never think in English and now I think in English all the time it's the language that I I think and most of the time so it works you just have to make yourself it's a practice that is difficult in the beginning but it's worth it in for your fluency trust me and please believe me okay the second one is surround yourself with the language now I've made a video about how I became fluent in English and it had everything to do with surrounding myself with the language and this means that you have to or would should try to read watch English everything just try to absorb as much English English as possible okay just try to do it please if you are trying to to use to listen and read and and speak and hear English make sure that you're listening or you're watching and reading current more current literature because for example if you're reading Shakespeare that is going to be a little bit more difficult it's not going to help you be sound natural either so just keep in mind that it should be current but surround yourself with the language this is something I always say please believe me that it's not a problem to make mistakes I believe some people translate because they don't want to make mistakes they want to say a specific word and they want to make sure that it's correct and they're afraid to make that mistake and I'm here to tell you don't don't be afraid so many people are learning English everyone understands English is a world language and everyone understands if you're going to make a mistake if they don't understand you the thing to do is to rephrase and actually this is a question that I always get that I see people English language learners seem to be frustrated sometimes and they say when I speak English I get upset that somebody doesn't understand me do you go through this problem if you do let us know do you ever have a situation had a situation where somebody did not understand you because I'm sure you did and I'm sure a lot of us did and if you did the thing to do is to rephrase what you were trying to say it might seem frustrating but it shouldn't and let me tell you why it shouldn't be frustrating because you are actually helping yourself by rephrasing something you are using different for its different vocabulary different grammar so you're actually strengthening your skills so it's actually a really helpful exercise for your language when I was teaching writing one of the most difficult but most rewarding exercises for my students was paraphrasing which means to say the same thing in different words and it was very difficult but it was very useful one of the most useful exercises you can do for your writing because it has so many benefits okay so if somebody is asking you excuse me I didn't understand use it as an opportunity to express yourself use it as an opportunity to try again and to just better your language learning and you will improve I promise and the scribe is the same way if you don't know the exact word that you're trying to say

please don't translate just describe what it looks like people are going to guess eventually it might be a little difficult but eventually they will so sequest what what does easy come easy go mean Saku in easy come easy go means when you when you see a word and you're translating it really quickly you will forget that word very quickly if you don't if you're not using it if you're not if you just used it for translation yes so it does it does it does make a lot of confusion you are right Marcus oh it could it can be very confusing so these are my tips on what to do I know they may seem difficult they're actually not because you can start small and if you feel like you really really need to translate from time to time I think it's okay as long as you're aware that translation is is not a very helpful process in your fluency if you're aware of the dangers I think it's it's fine just try to do it less so because I know you're not going to just stop because I've been there it's like I said it's instinct but try to do with less because if you do it less and you focus more on thinking in English surrounding yourself in English making mistakes in English rephrasing all of these things are going to help you reach your language goals I promise they will because they helped me and it just i've studied how to study how to study languages and it truly helps when we try to use the language instead of translating so that is it I hope you guys enjoyed our lesson today if you did I would like to to ask you for a favor and please share our video if you think that this will be useful for someone else or if you liked it I think it's useful I never had anyone tell me don't use translation when I was younger and I spent too many years just translating and it actually slowed my progress down so now I know so I'm letting you know because I want you guys to succeed and yeah thank you so much for joining us I hope you have a wonderful rest of your Saturday thank you again and that's it I will see you guys next time bye

STOP USING THIS VOCABULARY Use these words & phrases instead...

today i want to talk to you about some vocabulary that well you you really don't need to be using anymore and what you should say instead that's coming up [Music] hey everyone my name is wes this is interactive english and the channel is just all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and really help you achieve your fluency goals and today i have a little bit of a strange lesson and the reason why i say it's a little strange is because i'm going to talk to you about some words and phrases that you can just take out of your vocabulary you don't really need to use these words and phrases anymore but i want to tell you the vocabulary that you should use instead i'll go ahead and say that the reason why i'm telling you you don't really need to use these words and phrases is because they're a bit outdated and people really don't use this vocabulary today such as the first phrase that i have for you which is world wide web when for computers first came out and people started using the internet i think this phrase was a little more common it was uh reference technology it was a place that people could go to find a lot of different information even when you would put it in a website those three w's that stands for world wide web but even then i think many people would just shorten it and they would talk about the web and you may even hear that today somebody mentioned the web and and that's what they're referring to the world wide web but i i don't think it's as common nowadays i think mostly people are just going to talk about the internet that they're going to go online they're going to search for some information using the internet or perhaps they're going to well just talk about it as an activity and that they're just surfing the internet so you could use internet instead of talking about the world wide web next is just it's just one word and that is groovy and this word i i would say is dated and i say that because when i think of the word groovy i think of the 70s and disco dancing and people would use groovy to say that that something is cool that it's good that it's great that they really enjoy this thing and i think if you're watching a movie that perhaps takes place in the 70s you may hear somebody use this word eric how do you like pops new hair isn't it groovy you're one groovy baby are you guys all right groovy people are not really going to use this nowadays i think if you want to use a word that's casual that's very informal i think people might just say that they they think something is cool or there are so many other synonyms out there that you can use you can say something is great that it's amazing it's it's incredible it's impressive and i would say i would use any of those other words instead of saying groovy just get rid of groovy so i want to take a quick moment and tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson which is lingoda because if you want to speak naturally and fluently and the way that people actually speak today then i have a great suggestion for you you can study with lingoda and participate in the lingoda language sprint this is a great opportunity for you to improve your english and really do so at an affordable price and remember if you successfully complete the language sprint then you can get 100 cashback or 50 cashback to be honest i have even studied at lingoda there i am right there taking some lessons in spanish and i can tell you from my own experience that it's a great place to learn a language i was able to gain more speaking confidence improve my pronunciation as well as build my vocabulary and there's really three main reasons why i really like lingoda the first one is that classes are available 24 7 so that's great if you happen to have a busy schedule second these are also small group classes which means you'll have plenty of opportunities to speak and third as i've said these classes are very affordable so let me tell you a little bit more about the language sprint because you have two different options you can take the super sprint in which you'll take 30 classes a month for three months or you can do the sprint in which you'll take 15 classes a month for three months so each month you'll pay for the classes and then if you complete the required number of classes you can get 100 cashback for successfully completing the super sprint or 50 cashback for successfully completing the sprint the language sprint will begin on january 15th so you must sign up before december 28th to secure your spot when you sign up you will pay a 49 euro deposit but you can use the voucher code win 8 to get a 10 euro discount on your deposit so click on the link in the description if you'd like to learn more about the language sprint don't forget to use that voucher code win8 and just take some online classes so that you can achieve your fluency goals so let's get back to our lesson our vocabulary lesson of the words and phrases that you you just should not be using and the next phrase that i have for you is carbon copy so let me explain what this is because maybe this is something you've heard of maybe you haven't a carbon copy is like a copy of a receipt an invoice and you would find this uh perhaps at a business they would write down the receipt or the invoice and below that is another piece of paper that's really making a copy of everything they're writing so afterwards the business would keep one and they might give you a carbon copy it's just a copy of everything that they've written you may still find some businesses using this today but i think the most common way that this is used is with emails because when you email someone you can include other people on that you can copy people on that email except you are not going to use the phrase carbon copy instead if you're writing an email you'll see those two letters cc those two letters actually stand for carbon copy but you're not going to say that if you want somebody to copy you on an email you're not going to tell them hey can you can you send me a carbon copy no you're just going to tell them hey can you please cc me on that email and in that way you're asking them to copy you on the email and they would be giving you a carbon copy but you're not gonna say that you're gonna use cc then we have one word which is just baloney and i'm not talking about the sandwich meat this word uh it used to be used informally to talk about something that is just fake it's not real it's not true it's baloney there there was even a phrase and people could say that something's just phony baloney it's not true but you're not really going to hear this nowadays i think instead people they may use the phrase fake news i think that's really been catching on a lot lately even though personally i don't really like this phrase because i think people tend to use it to talk about things that that they just disagree with instead of things that are actually not true and they just like to throw that out there and say that something is fake news but it is a phrase that i think is is becoming more popular i think even better than that though if you want to say something is well it's not true you don't believe it just use the word or even shorten that and just say bs like ow you know i don't believe that that's just not true it's a bunch of bs then we have the phrase kodak moment and what this means is it's talking about a special moment in time and the reason why this phrase came about is because of the the company kodak kodak was a very well-known company that would make cameras and of course people were taking pictures of special moments in time and that's really how the phrase began and you would hear somebody say oh this is a kodak moment and you may even hear this phrase if you're watching a tv show or movie look mom i really don't feel like having a kodak moment here okay it has not completely gone away but again because nowadays most of us take pictures using our phones kodak cameras are not as popular i think the phrase is also losing popularity as well but there's really not another phrase that you would use that especially informally that means the same thing you would really just say that something is a special moment or perhaps refer to a past event as a good memory and you would use that instead of saying the phrase kodak moment then i have a phrase which it really takes me back to my childhood and that is roll up the window because a long time ago cars in order to roll up the window they'd have this crank handle that you would have to roll and that's what somebody would would say they would tell somebody please roll up the window and you'd have to crank that handle and and you'd roll the window up nowadays it's it's really automatic so you're not going to tell somebody to roll up the window you're going to use the verb put and you would ask somebody you know can you please put the window up or please put up the window it is a phrasal verb that is separable to put the window up or put up the window either one you don't really need to use roll unless you happen to be in a very old car that that has that crank handle which i think is unlikely so just tell somebody to put up the window and then we have this symbol right here which you may be thinking oh i know what this is but a long time ago it was called a pound sign this is a symbol that you would find on your phone and people would say pound sign nowadays i think twitter has really just taken this over and people know this as a hashtag i think social media is just so popular in most conversations most situations if you're talking about this symbol right here you're going to use the word hashtag i can't really think of a situation in which you're going to talk about this as the pound sign i think you'll probably just say and then i have a phrase for you which is saying that something is like nails on a chalkboard and what this phrase means is you're saying that some sound is just terrible and maybe it makes you feel a little uncomfortable the same way that well if you scratch your nails on a chalkboard i hate that sound it would give me goosebumps and i'd tell some oh please stop stop so people might use this phrase to perhaps tease somebody about their voice or their singing and instead of saying that it's really bad they may say that it's like nails on a chalkboard now this is a phrase that you may still hear from time to time every time she says that's so funny it's like nails on a chalkboard to me no donkey even her voice annoys me nails on a chalkboard the reason why i'm giving this to you is because in the future i i think it could go away and the reason why i say that is because i think we're not using chalkboards as much at school they're really being replaced by white boards and in some cases they're being replaced by smart boards and i i've never scratched my nails on a smart board but i'm i'm guessing that it just does not sound the same it does not create the same effect so as chalkboards perhaps they start to go away this this phrase might go away as well so i just wanted to make you aware of that but if you hear somebody say that some sound is like nails on a chalkboard it's really a terrible and uncomfortable sound so i hope that you learned something new today whether it was the old vocabulary that i told you to get rid of or the new vocabulary that i said you should use instead and this is very useful because i think that if you're having a conversation today you want to use words and phrases that are relevant that are that are popular that are new nowadays because that's well that's what that's what people are going to understand so this is a great way to help you improve your fluency if you enjoyed this lesson please hit that like button and as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time

STOP Using VERY & Use These 54 AMAZING Alternatives!

Today I have a very important lesson for you. But let's just get this out of here because I want to help you supercharge your vocabulary by teaching you over 50 words and phrases to help you avoid using the word very. That's coming up. Hey everyone, my name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about trying to help you practice and improve your English skills. So, if that's what you want to do, hit that subscribe button, turn on notifications so that you will learn about future lessons. Today, I have well, it's a very useful lesson because I want to teach you many different words and phrases that you can use instead of saying very because the word very, it's a very common, it's a very common word. I just used it several times then. It's probably one of the most overused words in English. I end up using it all the time. It's an adverb that means really or to a high degree. But because this word is so common, it presents a unique opportunity for all of you to greatly build your vocabulary. And there are two different ways that you can do this. I'm going to talk to you about both. The first way that you can do this is by learning some different synonyms for the word very. And here are some right here. These are all adverbs that typically come before an adjective to form a collocation. Words that are frequently used together. So, these are some very common and useful phrases that I'm getting ready to teach you. And I'm going to give you a lot. I do not expect you to remember all of them, but the more that you hear these phrases and that you see them, you're just going to end up making a mental note, and that's very important. So, let's begin with the first adverb, which is pretty. Now pretty, it has a similar meaning.

but it's extremely useful because we often use pretty with some very common and simple adjectives and their opposites. So, you might hear somebody say that something is pretty good or they may say it's pretty bad. Perhaps you're trying to do something and you have no problems and you say, "Wow, that was pretty easy." Or if there were a lot of problems, you might say, "It was pretty difficult." Maybe somebody's moving pretty fast. I do not want to do that in this lesson. I'll probably move pretty slow because that'll make it easier for you to understand. Or you're describing somebody and you say that they are pretty smart. And the opposite of that would be pretty dumb. The next adverb, which is probably more of a direct synonym, is extremely, which means a very high degree.

And I'll probably throw in some varies throughout the lesson, but you could say something is extremely important. perhaps it's extremely dangerous. Maybe you are extremely grateful for something. Or you could describe uh something and say it's extremely difficult and I've now used difficult twice. Really just to show you that you can use different words and mix them together because there is a difference. It helps you be more specific. If you're talking about something and you say it's pretty difficult or extremely difficult, then we have the word highly. And you could describe someone and say they are highly successful. Maybe you're talking about a situation that is highly unlikely. You could describe a person's uh personality and say they are highly competitive or maybe they are highly motivated. The next adverb that I have for you is awfully. And instead of saying that that you're very tired, you could say you're awfully tired. Or uh a great phrase is awfully nice of someone. Uh I would say, you know, it's awfully nice of you to go ahead and hit that like button. It's awfully nice of you. Or maybe you say that you are awfully sorry. Or perhaps you're talking about a place that is awfully crowded. Then we have the word truly. I love this synonym. You could say that you are truly thankful. Or perhaps you're truly passionate about something. Or maybe you're truly happy. And we could also use truly with a synonym for happy. It's another collocation and say you are truly content. So either one. Truly happy, truly content. Great phrases to know. Immensely. And this just makes me think well like very big. But this adverb is used in some very common collocations. I threw another very just now.

And you could hear somebody describe a person and say that they are immensely talented. something is immensely popular. I wish my video lessons were immensely popular. Or maybe you describe something as immensely useful. Or you could talk about a business and say that it is immensely profitable. So, I just taught you some truly remarkable, which is which is another collocation with truly truly remarkable synonyms that you can use instead of saying very. And I don't think these phrases are extremely difficult to learn, but I do feel that they are immensely useful in helping you build your vocabulary. And I'm really trying to emphasize these synonyms. But now let's look at the second way that you can supercharge your vocabulary and avoid using the word very. And that is by using more precise language. So I think quite often people will use very with a simple adjective such as the adjectives that you see up here. And instead of using very along with one of these adjectives, you can use a word that is more descriptive. It's more exact. And this is going to help you more accurately express your thoughts, opinions, and ideas. So, let's start with very good. And you might use well very good to describe uh an event, a party, a festival. And instead of saying very good, there are so many different words that you can choose from. You could say that something is incredible, amazing, those are two very common adjectives, or spectacular. And then if you want to use a couple of adjectives which may not be as common, maybe you could say something is phenomenal or breathtaking. I love that adjective.

I've never had anyone describe one of my lessons as breathtaking. I've just been waiting. I've been waiting to hear that down in the comments. And then the same goes for very bad. There are many different words that you can choose from that are going to be more descriptive than just saying very bad like terrible or horrible. Those are those are very common adjectives, great words to use instead of saying very bad. You could also say that well something is lousy or dreadful. That's that is very bad. And then probably I I think the strongest word maybe that you could use would be atrocious. I I really hope I don't see that word down in the comments. Then we come to very happy. Now I have already taught you one way that you could avoid using very if you want to use another adverb and you could say that that you are truly happy. But you could also just use one word instead to be a bit more descriptive. And instead of saying very happy, you have several choices. You could say that that you are cheerful or you are delighted or elated or one of my favorites is ecstatic. That that if I am very happy, I would I love saying that I am just ecstatic. And then you could also say that that you are jubilant. All of those words mean that you are at some level of extreme happiness. You're very happy. But if you're not feeling very happy, and you're actually feeling the opposite of that, very sad, then again, there are many words that you could use that would be a little more specific and tell somebody, well, just how sad you are, but also maybe give an indication as to why you may be sad. So, just in general, an informal word that you could use is down. If you're feeling down, then yeah, you're you're just sad. But if there's maybe love involved in some way, perhaps you could tell somebody that you're heartbroken and then they know that, well, this may have to do with with ending some relationship and they know that love is involved. Or if you want to express that there's no hope, maybe you tell somebody that you you're just you feel dejected. Or bitter. That's another good one. And bitter makes me think that. Well, not only are you sad, but you're also a little angry. And then you could say that you feel wistful. Wistful is like you're sad because you're you're thinking about the past. Maybe there was a bad memory and I was thinking about it and and I became wistful. Beautiful is another common adjective that well people use very with very beautiful. And instead of saying that somebody looks very beautiful, you could say, well, that they look lovely or or they look marvelous. Or if you want to make it a little more intense, a little stronger, you could say that somebody looks gorgeous. Or you could say elegant.

That's another great word. It makes me think of somebody who might look a little more formal, a little more dressed up. You could use elegant. Or I've saved the best for last, stunning. Stunning is a great word. The next time that you you see someone and you want to say that they look very beautiful, just say stunning. They look stunning. Another common adjective that's used with very is tired. Very tired. And I I think instead of saying very tired, probably the most common word that people would use is exhausted. I I use that one quite often. Instead of saying very tired, I would say I'm just exhausted. Or if you want to use a word that's more informal, you could say that you're drained. Or another informal word is beat. I'm I'm beat. And then there is exasperated. And with exasperated, it makes me think, well, you're tired mostly like up here in your mind that you're you're annoyed, you're bothered by something, and you you feel tired, and you're just you'd say you're exasperated. And then if we're talking about work, people get very tired because of work. You could say that you're just burnt out and and you need to take a break. You need to relax because right now you're you're burnt out. So after teaching you all of those different words and phrases, I am beat.

But I hope that you were delighted with this lesson. And if you were, please hit that like button. If you do that for me, I would be extremely grateful because that's just going to help this video become immensely popular. And I'm just trying to give you a little bit of review as I wrap things up. The last thing I want to tell you is that you look stunning. Thanks so much for watching and I will see you next time. So long.

SUFFIXES to Help You Grow Your Vocabulary

welcome to today's lesson which is all about helping you guys build grow and expand your vocabulary and I'm gonna tell you how you can do this very easily as well that's coming up what's up everyone my name is Wes this is interactive English which is the place that you want to be to practice and improve your English skills so today I have a vocabulary lesson for you which is all about trying to help you build grow and expand your vocabulary and the way that you are going to grow your vocabulary is with suffixes now as I said this is a very easy way for you guys to to expand your vocabulary and it is so so so important because that just means that you are able to use the words and the language correctly and really express your thoughts and opinions more more easily and more accurately as well so we're gonna talk today a lot about suffixes and Before we jump into it I want you guys to say what's up in the chat write your name tell me where you're joining us from and even if you are watching this later write your name in the chat we just want to hear from you so Hakim Bassam a mano Reno booked on sorry sorry sorry if I miss some names long nice to have you guys with us thank you for joining us today and let's just jump right into it so today we're talking about suffixes and if you're not already sure what a suffix is a suffix is a letter or group of letters added to the end of a word to make a new word so we're taking one word and we're just building to it and as I said this is a great way to build your vocabulary and and it's very easy to because if you know the meaning of one word you can just build to it and build other words that have a very similar meaning so for example let's look at this word we have the word help and we're going to add the suffix ful to have a whole other word it gives us a new adjective helpful somebody is helpful so in today's lesson I'm going to break this into three different parts we're gonna break it down by the part of speech so we're gonna talk about some suffixes to make nouns we're gonna talk about some suffixes to make adjectives and as well as some suffixes to make verbs and as we go through this I'm going to give you the suffix and again there are many of them in today's lesson we're gonna go over about 20 different suffixes but there are many many others and I suggest that you learn them and learn the words that go with them so we're just gonna talk about these three parts of speech and some of the suffixes that go with them but as we're going through these what I would ask you guys to do is I've given you some examples of words that have these suffixes right some other words in the chat just go ahead and throw those words out there so that people can see other words that are used with those suffixes whether you are watching this now or even watching this later you can read along and see some of the other words so let's go ahead let's look at some noun suffixes so here are the first two that I have for you is we have the ER suffix and if you see this it's it's just creating a noun a person who performs an action for example I could say where does the teacher work so you have the the word teach the base word and we add that ER then we have teacher a person who teaches the next example I could use a helper you have the base word help we add that ER and now we're talking about a person someone who forms this action someone who helps so now in the first two minutes I've just given you two different examples with the base word help helpful helper we can just add these suffixes create new words and it is such a great way to build your vocabulary so again if you're if you're in the chat write some other words what other words have that er suffix or even this m en T suffix and if you see this suffix we're talking about the the action or result of something so for example I stared at the sky in amazement most of the time we think of the adjective something is amazing but if we want to say the noun amazement and often it's used with that preposition in we can also say retirement is a little boring so we have the word retire the verb to retire to stop working and we can make it a noun retirement which is the time when you are no longer working you you have hopefully saved money you retire and retirement is talking about this time period retirement is is a little boring alright so again it is such a great way to build our vocabulary and somebody Mildred yes burner exactly a great ER noun that's using that suffix thank you thank you for the example so let's look at the next set of nouns suffixes we have this one H ood which describes it's talking about a state a condition or character so for example if something is likely then you're asking about the possibility but if we want to use it as a noun you might ask what's the likelihood this happens this is a common way that this noun is used somebody's asking about the likelihood what's the likelihood of this event what's the likelihood that that something happens this is a common way that it's used this other word I think people know okay a child we know what

what that means she remembers her childhood she remembers her childhood childhood is talking about this this condition of the state this period when you were a child so this is when I said it's a great way to to build your vocabulary because some people would say maybe they don't know the word childhood and they would say oh she remembers when she was a child and that's perfectly fine but again if you're able to build your vocabulary and use these suffixes you can say the same thing using less words she remembers her childhood it's very specific it's very to-the-point if you guys can think of any other words in that chat just write them down throw them down there now we have this one n e SS and you often you see this one a lot at the end of certain adjectives and verbs and it's talking about a state or quality so for example I might ask you you know what does happiness mean to you happy I think most of us know that word if we want to make it a noun that adjective a noun happiness happiness same with a we're alright somebody is aware we want to make it a noun awareness he lost his awareness all right we got some other good examples yes Rizwan a brotherhood a mono neighborhood Mildred Parenthood SQL madness excellent perfect thank you guys for sharing with us now let's look at some other noun suffixes we have these up here and you see these all the time I know you guys see these si o n tion and the pronunciation I know we've said this in other lessons is just tion if you see these four letters up here at the end of a word it's pronounced tion and it's talking about an action a state or being so for example wow and I just realized I made a mistake because I used some other examples which I didn't change but one of the most common words I think of would be with tion for example and if you guys know of any write them down transportation it is a noun transportation the way you move if I want to think of something with s i o n comprehension comprehension understanding to comprehend the the verb the noun comprehension so these are very very common the next one I am if you see is M then it's talking about a practice a condition or or a doctrine so for example some words I'd say some people believe in socialism socialism again it's just a condition a doctrine a belief about society and then this last one down here which as a teacher I have used all the time if you don't know this word to plagiarize is the verb and it just means to copy copy work that is not yours and we would say especially in American school systems we're say don't plagiarize don't plagiarize if we want to make that a noun with is M plagiarism plagiarism is wrong don't copy use your own words alright so other words that people have yes mention perfect competition criticism go SIA excellent words yow racism feminism there are many many words that use these suffixes and again it is such a great great way to expand and build your vocabulary so now that we've looked at the nouns let's look at some adjectives and changing words into adjectives using certain suffixes so the first set that I have for you these up here and they're very common the double and able suffix and it's talking about capable of being so for example that first example to tolerate to be able to endure something if I want to describe something use adjectives something is tolerable it's capable of being tolerated learning English is tolerable I hope so I understand sometimes it may not be tolerable but I hope learning English is tolerable drinking water okay this is another great one is the water drinkable this this is an adjective so many people know the verb drink everybody knows Oh drink or they know they know the noun a drink but again if you want to expand your vocabulary we can use it as an adjective something is drinkable are you capable of drinking this thing drinkable great way again build your vocabulary grow your vocabulary next one ful I know a lot of you could think of words with this suffix and my example Wes it's true sometimes wes is so forgetful you just saw how forgetful that I was because I forgot to change those other sentences and give you some si Ont IO and examples I'm so forgetful and again I could say I hope this lesson is useful something helps you an adjective useful we use it all the time and if you think that building your vocabulary is useful please hit that like button down below go ahead and hit that like button some other adjectives with this suffix is this one is is interesting ish it's talking about belonging to or like something so for example if we're talking about a group people wes is not British it's being like like you're belonging to Great Britain you're belonging to this group of people wes is not British so many people ask us they're like is this British English or is this American English my pronunciation my accent is American English however this lesson right here suffixes British English American English Australian English Canadian English this is just important for all English varieties and the next word Wes can be childish at times childish childish means acting like a child so again you have this one word child you can change it around childhood childish build your vocabulary it's so useful to build it this way instead of thinking like oh I have to learn a completely different word build on the words that you already know the next adjective suffix le SS

I know we see these a lot as well it means without something don't be careless with your work careless a great example sometimes learning English feels hopeless I know that it feels hopeless there are many rules especially with English there are so many different words and that's why I think people when they think of vocabulary they're like Oh what do I do there's so many different English words and that's what the purpose of this lesson is is to tell you well you don't need to focus on all these new and different words focus on building what you already know other great examples you guys have given yes about a hopeful bassam powerful edible shameless Fitness exactly the one other thing that I want to say with ich which is interesting it's now used kind of like in slang in colloquial if somebody says you know is something like this somebody might just say well you know ich and they just mean like well it's

it's kind of like it alright it's similar to it they would say similar ish so a lot of times people will say a word and they'll just add that ish on it and it's kind of more slang but it's talking about yeah it's it's kind of like something else ish the next set that I have for you is the IOUs or the ous and this again the pronunciation the IOUs is more just like in us us you have that schwa sound the IOUs is all similar but it's almost like it yes alright so for example famous do you want to be famous you have Fame which we can just change that meaning and add the owe us the adjective famous and the next word again the great tion word caution alright show caution if you want to make an adjective I'm cautious when crossing the street cautious alright and you should be cautious when crossing the street and look both ways next we have just the simple just the y at the end and usually we're adding this y at the the end of a noun to make it an adjective so for example it means that is made up of or or characterized by something else so you might be talking about the weather and you say it's a little cloudy outside actually right now it is cloudy outside that's true or if you're talking about food you could say wow this fruit is tasty again you're adding that Y and and changing the meaning excellent so these are some common suffixes that we can use to create adjectives now let's look at some to create verbs and then once we're done with that we are going to practice what we've learned so some verb suffixes and I think some of these are going to be a little easier because when you're studying grammar I think you've seen these before like like this first one for example the IDI it's used with the past tense regular verbs now the IDI

it's it's used to create the past tense but it is still a suffix so for example they walked to the park talking about the past last week I played soccer talking about the past the IDI it's still a suffix we can also use an e n suffix when we want to change either an adjective or a noun and change it into a verb so for example soft something is soft it's an adjective if you want to make it a verb soften alright and now I've used it in the past tense we softened the fall so it says soft now we've just added to suffices to suffixes to it we added the en and then made it the past with the IDI we softened the fall we made something more we made it softer and maybe we used a pillow I don't know we softened the fall the next one for example she strengthens her position she strengthens her position we use that en to to change it to a verb next we can create verbs with the ize or the i SE suffix and this means to to cause or to become for example stores commercialize certain holidays they commercialize they try to to sell more things and the way they do that is that they advertise to customers they advertise to customers these are some common verb suffixes and the other one that I have for you guys right there is the ing again it's the continuous form of the verb but it is still a suffix because we're taking that that base verb and adding an ing to talk about an action that is happening so for example you could say you know tonight yeah I'm eating healthy tonight eating has that ing suffix I am eating then the other one this is a question that is so common if you want to know like what what you know another person is going to do you just say hey what are you doing or maybe you're wondering like what's happening what do you what are you doing alright so these are some common verb suffixes let's look at a few more so we also have this first one the I F Y alright is to make or to cause to B so for example you have the word something is intense its intense that's an adjective we can make it a verb intensify the work intensifies everyday it gets more and more it gets more difficult and more difficult it intensifies all right they will rectify the situation to rectify means to to make something right again to correct something that might have been wrong to rectify the situation we also have the a te suffix to do or become for example dominate again we're gonna use that IDI pass we dominated the match and then you could say if something bothers you irritate to irritate this really irritates me that really irritates some other great ones yes to identify to capsizes great examples simpatico Tricia derive Buda perfect thank you guys for sharing with us so these are a bunch of different suffixes with with nouns verb and adjective so now I want to give you guys a quick vocabulary tip and as I told you from the beginning this is a great way to build and grow your your vocabulary and the tip is this again use the words you already know and then expand on those words by being able to change them to nouns adjectives verbs you learn words in the word family so what I would suggest that you do if you're learning well how do I find out what other words are out there if you look on just about any online English dictionary you could type in the word intense for example type in intense it'll give you the meaning but oftentimes you will see this list of related words and that list of related words will show you how the the word is also used as a noun as an adjective as a verb and and look at the suffix look at the suffix that being is being used and actually see how the word is being changed so that would be my tip you know learn the words in the word family use the words you already know to build your vocabulary instead of drink you can change it to an adjective drink a bowl and use online dictionaries it is a great resource to find out those related words so now that we've gone through all this it is time to practice what we've learned and I have some questions for you and I want you guys to write your answers write them in the chat and even if you're watching this later use the comments use it as it's it's a digital whiteboard that you can practice with us and actually interact with these lessons this is interactive English so I'm gonna ask you a question all I want you to do is write the word write the suffix I have a few for you and I don't think I don't think they're too difficult so the first one giving you all these suffixes it's not all of them but many of them that we discussed today I want you to complete what what were what suffix are you going to use to complete that sentence write it in the chat write it in the comments when you get into the car you should mmm your seatbelt I've given you the the the root word all right which suffix are you going to use to complete that alright when you get in the car you should mmm your seatbelt excellent yes Saunders wanna see some great answers we should use that e n suffix when you get in the car you should fasten fasten your seatbelt again this is a great way en we change it to a verb to fasten something next is again I love this picture that I found alright don't be hmm and get in the water stay in the boat okay how are you going to complete this sentence I've given you the the base word are right the root word fool what suffix are you going to use that that this makes sense all right don't be hmm and get in the water stay in the boat write that suffix in the comments see some great answers yes go see a junior Geraldine Carlos thank you guys for answering you want to use that ish alright ish is like something don't be like a fool don't be foolish and get in the water stay in the boat there's a shark you don't want to go swimming with the shark so now let's make it a little more difficult I'm just going to give you a blank I'm not gonna give you the root word I want you to think of which word best completes the sentence okay and maybe you'll think of another word that I didn't alright so there might be more than one answer to this but the word is going to use one of these suffixes alright when doing important work it's necessary that you alright giving you a little hint with my action right here when doing important work it's necessary that you alright which which suffix completes this is going to complete this sentence what do you think we're talking about important work alright when doing important work it's necessary that you alright there's your hint right there what should you do and again you can kind of think this out part of speech which part of speech would be you what we're talking about you do some action you do something so it is a verb alright many of people again yes yes the word that I was looking for concentrate again focus that's perfect it means the same thing it just doesn't have one of the suffixes that we talked about when doing important work it's necessary that you and trade a te to change it to have a concen to concentrate that is our verb next alright what do you guys think we do these lessons out of the mmm of our hearts alright this is this is kind of an expression to so hopefully that makes it a little easier you do something out of the mmm of your hearts okay what what word is best going to complete that sentence what do you guys think write it in the chat even if you're watching this later whoops oops wrong button write your answers and yes since I just showed you the answer yes what we do these lessons out of the kindness of our hearts that was my mistake I went ahead jumped ahead so kindness again if somebody is kind it's an adjective we can add the ne ss to make it a noun the kindness of our hearts we love doing these lessons for you guys and practicing and helping you guys improve your skills we do these lessons out of the kindness of our hearts so now I have one last announcement for you guys because some people have asked about this previously and that is just to let you know we are now whoops wait this way yes we are now on patreon we if you guys like what we do here if you enjoy our lessons and want to show some love or support you can you can make a donation and there are some different rewards you can check us out on patreon I'll leave a link in the description and now I've just realized it's like it's completely contradictory to what I just said we do this out of the kindness of our hearts we do but still at the same time some of you have asked about this and it's completely up to you you you don't have to do this we're still gonna do a lot of these lessons each week these free lessons but we want to let you know that we are on patreon because again in the future we are going to come out with some online courses the some will be free some will not be free because our goal in the future we would love to make this our job and make this our permanent job so hopefully we we can do that some days but we just want to let you guys know if you're interested in checking that out so thank you guys for joining me today thank you for commenting and participating in this lesson if you enjoyed it I'd appreciate it if you liked it and share it with anybody you know who's trying to practice and improve their English skills right questions to us in the comments you can also join our social media classes those are available but thank you guys I'll walk lil jr. Carlos today Andrews wanna bassam go SIA Val dear leha long thank you for joining us thank you thank you thank you sorry if I miss some names on today Patricia we really love doing these lessons with you guys thank you again hope you have a wonderful day and we will see you next time and use yes--you farhat thank you we'll see you guys later

SUPER-USEFUL ADVERBS | Take the quiz to become an adverb all-star!

hello hey everyone welcome to another english lesson today it's uh we're gonna be talking about adverbs so this is a grammar lesson and we're going to be doing a quiz that i think is good for well i think intermediate to advanced learners uh i have some questions for you that some of them are a little easier others might be a little more difficult but there are some also some useful phrases that i want to talk about that are adverbs or that contain an adverb so i'm i hope that this lesson has a little bit of something for for everyone whether you're a beginner intermediate advanced uh i just want to introduce myself my name is wes the channel interactive english it's all about trying to help you guys improve your english skills so if that's what you want to do please subscribe turn on notifications also write to me in the comments let tell me your name where you're from i always love hearing from from everyone especially new people and uh as i mentioned today's lesson it's going to be a bit of an adverb quiz all of these questions are related to adverbs so i think you guys as you go through this i think you'll see what i mean because i have different questions for you that are related to adverbs before we start and talking about adverbs i just want to say a quick hello to um some of you you members you patrons uh some of those speak up students uh great to see you lali katrudis uh takayo hello um let's i think when it comes to adverbs the first thing that i want to say well let's just let me just give you the definition the meaning of an adverb because i think that is something that we should know and this this meaning i took right out of wikipedia because i think they really they really cover everything and talk about everything um when referring to adverbs so this is right from wikipedia it says an adverb is a word or an expression that modifies a verb an adjective another adverb determiner clause preposition or sentence so adverbs can modify a variety of different words verbs this is the next part that i think is important adverbs typically express like manner place time frequency degree level of certainty there are many different um categories that you could put adverbs into and they also answer questions like how or in what way or when or where to what extent so the last part of this is when i think about teaching adverbs if you learn adverbs in the classroom say you have a teacher i think sometimes they will either they'll present adverbs by categories and say well we're gonna learn adverbs of manner and talk specifically about those adverbs and then we're going to look at some adverbs of frequency and kind of teach you those i think it makes it easier for learners to kind of well understand well what the adverb is what it means why it's an adverb how it's used when you break it down into those categories like manner place time or teachers may present it to learners like let's talk about adverbs that answer the question of how or let's talk about adverbs that answer the question of when it's very similar but i think that's the best way to learn adverbs and as we go through our little our little quiz i'm going to challenge you guys i'm going gonna break it down into those categories like manner frequency um and go through it that way and hopefully that makes it a little easier for you to grasp what i'm talking about so i hope that you guys are ready i hope that you're feeling smart today uh i just want to say hello anna fidel maria esther mohammed uh eloisa welcome let's begin with uh we're going to start with some adverbs of frequency and i think this is a little hopefully this is a little easier you're familiar with many of these adverbs and all i want you to do and there's more than one i've given you this with some blanks so you see those percentages there so we're talking about frequency which word would you use to talk about something that is 100 of the time and then which word would you use for 75 of the time and then 50 of the time 25 and then 0 saying that okay this i don't want to give the adverb the word away but that is how frequent this is zero percent so these i think when you're learning adverbs of frequency this is pretty common i think you learn this very early on um what these words are because often i think in conversation we talk about how frequently something may happen and that's when you're going to use some of these so what do you think again you guys can participate write your answers in the chat in the comments the first one 100 of course excellent we're talking about always something that you always do i always brush my teeth before i go to bed again very common word i think i'm sure everybody's familiar with it if we're talking about 75 percent of the time and there are there there are more than sometimes there are more than one answer for these but 75 percent i think uh most of the time people are going to use usually usually you could also use the word often i think that's the same it kind of refers to about 75 of the time um i tend to favor i think i always just say usually more than often but that's just me uh excellent x saw some great answers in there yes and 50 of the time sometimes if you're talking about something happens like um you know it sometimes rains in the in spring it's something that happens maybe 50 percent of the time sometimes i think another word um well i'm going to actually come back to a couple of phrases when it comes to sometimes so uh we will come back to that in just a moment 25 of the time rarely i think this one is commonly used i would even say rarely i think you could go less than 25 um i was kind of just trying to keep it in order rarely i think could even go like as low as like 10 percent it's it's something that does not happen often i just use that one um but rarely could be 25 there are some other ones you could use like hardly ever if a very that's a very low percent two um seldom is another word that you could use for that one and then i think zero percent at the at the end uh many of you had written that in there never yes so um if you say i never do something then you're really zero percent that this is something that has never happened so these are very useful words um that i again i think you learn these early on because we use them um a lot i think you will always use these words in conversation talking about how frequently you do something now let's move into some um well some other things that i think are kind of well similar different ways you could say this so here is an expression if i say we like to eat sushi and it equals it's the same as sometimes so i'm talking about like 50 what is an expression that i can use that means the same as sometimes so i'm talking about an expression it's more than one word so this is a you could say expression or a phrase it means the same as sometimes and i would say we like to eat sushi what do you what do you think let me know in the chat in the comments if you're watching this later i always love it if you guys participate in these lessons i think that's what it that's what it's all about that's what interactive english is all about now there are uh there are more than one uh there's more than one answer and that's why again i think for some of these it's giving you guys a chance to think of some different ones because maybe um you're gonna think of one that i didn't put down but what i was going for was this one every now and then so every now and then means kind of the same as sometimes i've also put another one down there from time to time is another phrase expression that you could use i saw somebody um takaya you put once in a while once in a while that's another one that you could say like i like to eat sushi once in a while i told you there's more than than one answer um uh vicky gustav yes half the time if you want to say oh i like to eat sushi about half the time like that's something that you would do 50 means sometimes so again there there's more than one answer for this these are just a couple of phrases that i think you will hear um people talk about how often how frequently something happens they may use every now and then from time to time um somebody put occasionally yes there are many different adverbs of frequency this this next one is an idiom and i've given you a hint down here so and this is kind of true um especially we live in hungary it's a landlocked country we eat seafood what what would uh what would i complete that with it's the same as rarely actually i would even go like like lower than that and say it's probably closer to like hardly ever probably maybe about 10 if i want to give you a percentage so i tried to give you a little bit of a hint to tell you what this idiom is um i don't want to to give it away but this is an idiom in english which is talking about well how often something happens like an adverb uh a frequency so instead of um using rarely could use this idiom uh excellence i saw some of you have it perfect the answer is once in a blue moon i told i put two moons down there with a calendar because that is a blue moon a blue moon is when you have two full moons in the same month they call that a blue moon and it is something that happens rarely it does not happen that often which is where this came from this expression that oh you do something once in a blue moon you just you do it rarely you don't often do it so those are some adverbs of frequency and that's what i mean when i talk about like how often something happens and teachers may present it and say all right let's learn some adverbs of frequency but now i want to switch to kind of another group and talk about some adverbs we're going to switch to another group we're going to switch to adverbs of degree and talk about some of those so the first question that i have for you thinking about like a degree like to the extent of something this uh this is a question and i'm gonna kind of come back to this um and explain a little bit more of it once i give you the answer this is a question that somebody would ask kind of like jokingly trying to be humorous if it's like very hot outside and you're talking to somebody else and you know that that person feels like wow it is hot you know this person thinks it's very hot outside you could ask this question jokingly is it hot um for you is it hot for you all right what what adverb would go in there and it's you're trying to um move something and it's very heavy and you're both you're lifting it and maybe your friend is having a difficult time they think it's very heavy you could say yeah is it heavy enough for you so this is a question that you could ask um jokingly and you could depending on the situation and the context you can change hot and use a variety of words instead i chose hot because i think this is this is one that i think is probably it's commonly used it's summertime for many of you um who are in the northern hemisphere right now so it's very hot this is a question that uh you could ask if on a very hot day and you say that jokingly yeah you know is it hot enough for you so that's a good phrase to know as well this is more like vocabulary so now i've given you the adverb these are all adverbs talking about like a degree and i i want you to think of which word may follow that there's no wrong answer because there are there are different words that might often follow these adverbs and i just want you to think of some right now this is a great way for um you know to build your vocabulary collocations are when you have two words that are frequently used together so if you were to think of the adverb like fully what's the next word that just comes to mind all right and there there are more that there's more than one answer what would you use fully um what is a phrase that you would think of or deeply or utterly all right i feel like utterly there's quite a few words that you could follow with that again there's no wrong answer i'm gonna show you some of my uh suggestions or what i thought of when i thought of this but again this is a different way to kind of well present this for me to present this to you as kind of like a quiz not really a quiz question but really trying to get you to think of different words so i have some uh answers uh somebody will fully understand yes excellent fully aware fully conscious that's a good one i like it um fully grown excellent perfect i told you guys there are many different uh different phrases i hope you guys read the chat see what each other's saying again learning collocations is a great way to build your vocabulary so uh the ones that i was that i chose and again there's no right or wrong answer fully aware yes you are fully aware of something that you know that something is happening but as uh lolly mentioned fully conscious that's a good one uh you talk about somebody who's fully grown deeply deeply sorry about something i think deeply uh anna mentioned deeply regret that's awesome that's another one i think when you talking about something that maybe um is maybe a situation like sorry or regret deeply is one that you would that you would use you're deeply sorry about something or you deeply regret something uh be happy deeply disappointed uh excellent i thought there's many and then utterly i i think this one because utterly kind of means the same as extremely there are many different words that you could use um utterly insane is just the first one that came to my mind uh but you could say something is utterly ridiculous i think is another common collocation uh i see some other great collocations that you guys are writing in the chat that's what i wanted for all of you to share it's a good way to build your vocabulary because you see what other people are saying excellent um just to point out a few another ones uh lolly mentioned you're deeply involved that's another collocation um to really again express that degree maggie mentioned you fully understand something perfect um pamela mentioned fully vaccinated that is another uh common i think especially collocation you would hear nowadays talking about people getting vaccines and you may hear whether or not uh somebody is fully vaccinated uh vicky utterly annoyed that's another great collocation absolutely um remy utterly confused perfect so you guys get the idea this is just a good way to build your vocabulary learn some of these different collocations and these are adverbs of degree that you can do that so let's switch gears uh once again and now uh so we talked about some adverbs of frequency some adverbs of degree um now i want to look at some adverbs of manner and the first question i think is i i think you guys will know it i think it's not too difficult uh is this one it's just to fill in the blank i think you speak english very what word would uh what word would you use which adverb would you use to complete that sentence we're talking about manner an adverb a manner which really describes like well how is kind of the question that would uh somebody would ask so adverb a manner which word would you use to complete that sentence um again there are many there are many words that you could actually use depending on what what somebody's trying to say i see that now what i what i was going for um is well i think you speak english very well the one thing that i want to point out with this is because i think often um people will talk about well how well somebody does something and they use good instead so good is i would say it's more informal that's probably informal english it's common i think in spoken english to say wow you do this uh you're good um you do this really good and i think people who are very strict with like the trying to be like oh no no you should use well um i'm just trying to point this out i think well uh is you know well you could say again good good is just a word that's commonly used informally which means the same thing as an adverb but again some b people said fluently slowly clearly i told you there are many adverbs of uh adverbs of manner that you could use to complete this i think uh you you guys are already catching on when i said like uh these adverbs of manner i think they often end with that l-y so right now that says i think he's very badly i guess i think instead of badly i'd say probably poorly uh might be a little more common but yeah that's uh michelangelo awfully okay i want you to do a sentence transformation so sentence transformation is when you're you're saying the same thing but you're just using another sentence so right here i give you the original sentence i want you to be careful when you take the test what i want you to do change one of those words to an adverb of manner and just rewrite the sentence what would you say you're you're transforming the sentence you're saying the same thing but you're just saying it in a different way that is basically in short what a sentence transformation is so take one of those words change it into an adverb and then how how would you write that sentence what would you guys say i want you to be careful when you take the test all right so the word that you well would choose careful you're changing it into an adverb of a manner i told you those adverbs of manners those are typically those l-y adverbs so in this case we're changing it to carefully and in that case you would say i want you to take the test carefully um or you could say so uh that's what he said i want you to take the test very carefully sure you can add very in there if you want um but we're just we're saying it's the same thing it has the same meaning um except we've just transformed this sentence using that adverb of degree and as i mentioned when you're talking about um no adverb a manner sorry i misspoke if we're talking about those adverbs of manner it's it's often it's those l-y adverbs not all of them end in an l-y but many of them do slowly quickly uh differently carefully happily those are adverbs of manner now i want to kind of combine degree and manner with this uh this is a question and the reason why i'm giving you this question it's kind of a play on words and i will explain that when i give you the answer this is something that uh as a teacher i would say this to students sometimes kind of just joking around being funny i told you it's a play on words are you working or um working so notice uh what do you what do you guys think try and fill that out again it's a phrase that it's a question that i think is probably fairly well known it's not a secret but i think it's a good uh example if you're talking about a play on words and it uses those adverbs uh all right yes ana got it perfect um excellent hard and hardly so are you working hard or hardly working and it's a play on words because we're using that that adverb you have hard as an adverb and then hardly as an adverb and the reason why it's funny it's a play on words because working hard and hardly working are opposites if somebody is working hard in that case we're talking about um that adverb of degree like you're working with a lot of intensity and you're you're really um you're you're putting in a lot of effort and you'd say you're working hard hardly as an adverb of uh manner means kind of like well uh slightly very little and you're talking about or like not much hardly working is just you're working very little so that's why i said it's kind of a play on words working hard hardly working they're opposites and this is a good example of that using these adverbs are you working hard or hardly working good phrase fun question to to ask somebody all right so let's look at um some adverbs of time now all right so we talked about adverbs of frequency some manner some degree these are all uh some adverbs of time which again i think many of these are very very common adverbs and this is one that i don't think i don't think it's too difficult the reason why i'm putting this up there maybe it's challenging because i do often hear people make mistakes when it comes to using this adverb of time the package arrived and then what how would you complete that sentence which which adverb which which time adverb would you use and i've given you the calendar down there to kind of really put it in context i know that calendar it does not have seven days that's okay just pretend like it's a it's a four day week so you see that the blue that's when the package that's today um and then then you can count backwards the days when the package arrived so some of you guys are writing yes the package would arrive in time yes that's true uh the package would arrive early sure that's fine um but what would you say if you wanted to be exactly specific and tell somebody that the package arrived um and you wanted to specifically say this is when it arrived uh this is what what you would say and again i think uh you guys will be like oh yes of course what uh the answer i was looking for you could say yes earlier not not yesterday again because again count backwards all right it said not yesterday not not two days ago but three days ago is what i was looking for and the reason why i chose like three days ago this is uh sometimes i hear learners make mistakes and they'll say things like two days before or three days before um or like five days before instead of using like five days ago or one week ago or three years ago so this is a it's a good phrase to know if you're talking about that time and you want to to say well yeah something it didn't happen yesterday it happened two days ago or three days ago or four days ago so in that case that's what i meant like try to be a little more specific uh even though even though that is not a calendar with a full week on it uh this is all right this is an idiom and i want you to complete

it now um i arrived that is an adverb clause and that's when i said like that's that's your adverb right there that whole thing um i arrived everyone had already eaten so that first phrase that first part of that adverb clause a clause um group of words it has a subject and a verb in this case i arrive that's your subject and verb it is a clause it is a dependent clause because it can't be its own sentence but the phrase before it is kind of a it's an idiom and i want you to think of what it is so i'm saying phrase so remember phrase has more than one word so i know some of you are like throwing you could say when but i'm not looking for one word when is not really an idiom uh which which phrase am i and you guys might not even think of it as an idiom i even before didn't really think of it much as an idiom until i was kind of putting this together and looked it up uh excellent yes maria the the phrase that i'm looking for the idiom by the time by the time i arrived everyone had already eaten so by the time is an idiom that phrase it means it refers to something that had already happened at that point in time so at once at this point in time something had already happened before so by the time i arrived everyone had already eaten by the time i arrived that is your adverb clause so again we're talking about adverbs that is your adverb clause you could again just use the word if you wanted to say when some of you said you know when i arrived everyone had already eaten that also makes sense that that's perfect but i kind of wanted to talk about that idiom it's a great phrase by the time i arrived everyone had already eaten if you're pointing out that context like at this point in time something else happened uh before so these were again um touching on different type of adverbs this was the quiz thank you guys for participating i told you that it was going to be a little bit of a mix of different groups of adverbs we talked about adverbs of frequency degree manner time there are other groups that i i didn't get to i kind of wanted just to go over a few and hopefully you guys learned something new because we talked about some different expressions uh as well uh it was great seeing so many patrons so many members and yes just to let you guys know if you want to support uh sponsor us if you enjoy what we do check out the links you can become a youtube member a patron helps make uh make all of this possible so that's really that's wrapping it up that's it for our adverb quiz again i think these are very useful words to know so this was kind of a little bit of grammar but i think also some vocabulary as well we talked about collocations there are many different um adverb verb collocations adverb noun collocations so hopefully you guys hopefully that's my hope for every lesson that you learn at least one thing new um so thank you uh adair anna lolly be happy rosa linda um gayathi eduardo gatrudest thank you guys lollygatis great to see you all again um angela takayo i hope that you all enjoy um well the rest of your weekend and of course i will be back next time for another live lesson oh yeah if you enjoy these live lessons if you enjoy like kind of these interactive quizzes that we do please hit hit that like button it helps the the algorithm gods i guess kind of help spread the word about interactive english so yes be sure hit that like button before heading out uh i would really appreciate it so thank you just give a couple more shout outs hun maria kaio great to see you um remy sheddin pamela enjoy the rest of your weekend and i will see you next time juliana hello all right all right i gotta head out

SUPER ADVANCED VOCABULARY | Descriptive words to be more precise

let's build your vocabulary and by the end of the lesson I promise you will learn something new and I I say that confidently because we are going to talk about some Advanced vocabulary I I say super Advanced because these are nouns verbs adjectives adverbs that are at a C2 level and Beyond now you may be wondering are these words often used is it absolutely necessary that I learn such words and the answer is really it depends now of course these are words that you're not going to hear all the time but it is going to help you be more descriptive and more precise if you are someone who uses English often every day or would like to be able to engage in a variety of topics and express yourself easily naturally and really add some flavor to your English vocabulary of course this is a quiz lesson so I want you to participate in the lessons and if you'd like to get the lesson notes click on the link Down Below in the description you can join our email community and you can access these notes that you see next to me right here if you are already a part of our community check your inbox I have sent them to you so we're going to start out with some Advanced verbs and I I'm going to give you a question this is going to be a fill in the blank and I want you to write your answers in the chat or in the comments even if you're watching this later use that comment section and participate in the lesson that that's what this is all about uh that is what interactive English is all about and I'll go ahead and tell you my name my name is Wes I didn't even do the introduction uh if you if you are someone who wants to build your vocabulary subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher so you you can see me right here in this first picture and the sentence my daughter m me she told me she had not eaten ice cream today but she had some earlier so just based on this context you know that she tricked me she had some ice cream and then told me oh I didn't have any ice cream this actually happens quite often and then afterwards I could say oh you m me now I've given you a word already that is like a synonym for this she tricked me she deceived me and again with when it comes to kids I don't think it's necessary necessary to use such strong words and in this case it this is a fun word this is why I think this verb is great in this situation and I think this is a challenging one I haven't seen any answers you could say she Bamboozled me to bamboozle someone is to trick or deceive someone in uh different way and in this case again we can use it playfully so it means to trick or deceive someone Often by confusing them and you could bamboozle someone or in this case I could say I was Bamboozled she Bamboozled me and I wanted to teach you this verb mostly because I just like saying the word bamboozle you can give it a try it's a fun verb to say but to give you a little more context because I want to give you some examples with these words here are some news headlines so that you can kind of get a better understanding as to how this verb is used so I'll just read through these quickly why smartphones bamboozle politicians they don't know again I don't know if it's like how to use them or how to create legislation around smartphones or the second one holiday firms try to bamboozle customers with long tnc's tnc's in this case refers to refers to terms and conditions and they try to bamboozle customers uh with certain words and phrases and then finally watch GAA star bamboozle Australian foe with gay football skill that leaves AFL crowd stunned and you would trick or deceive someone you will bamboozle this person the next one because I have quite a few I have quite a few words that I want to cover today after the controversy his chances of winning the election started to what what verb would you use I this in this case I'm using the infinitive started to so you could kind of start to put two and two together there's a some type of controversy that's not a good thing so what's going to happen to your chances of winning they're going to go down or they are going to I'm giving you the first two letters of this verb hopefully that is a little bit more of a hint so that you can kind of Guess The Word uh excellent nice sir law Ruben uh Mr casu Patricio are uh not dwell but dwindle so to dwindle after the controversy his chances of winning the winning uh chances of winning the election sorry that's a small typo there it should be the article the after chance his chances of winning the election started to dwindle so if something starts to dwindle or is dwindling it's becoming smaller in size or amount or just fewer in number so for this time I wanted to I'm going to try to switch it up as far as these examples go I you know checked out the the sorus you can see it right there and these are some other synonyms for dwindle now some of these other synonyms are even verb that you might hear uh great job excellent um yes perfect jeopardize good job Julia romelia I'll try to give some shout outs as we go along Loi excellent good to see you his his injury could jeopardize the team's chances of winning so if this happens to be a new verb for you what does it mean it means to put someone or something in a situation in which there is a danger of loss harm or failure so you're going to jeopardize something and and I wanted to this time give you some common collocations with this verb now of course this is just a sample there are actually several different variations they go through this is uh they give you quite a lot so you might jeopardize the chances jeopardize the safety of something you could jeopardize your relations or jeopardize the passengers workers follow it with any noun group of people jeopardize your chances of something happening like winning or suc ceeding uh jeopardized the health of something jeopardized the mission the operation jeopardized his life career position or saying something could May will jeopardize everything and talking about in risk or at risk of jeopardizing there are many different ways as you can see that people will use this verb so I think this one is very useful and a nice descriptive verb how about uh this next question he refused my offer immediately and said that he would not even M such a low offer this is a verb that you have definitely heard perhaps not in this context because this verb that starts with an E has uh m a multiple meaning so we're refusing an offer because it's so low and this person says I am not even going to such a low offer what verb could we use that starts with an E you're refusing it I'm not even I'm just going to give you the meaning not even going to think about it I'm not even going to consider this I'm not even going to entertain such a low offer so in this context we're talking about the verb to entertain not to make someone feel happy with some type of performance but in this case we're talking about giving attention or consideration to some idea feeling perhaps a suggestion and in this case somebody offers something you're like yeah I'm not even going to entertain this offer or I'm not even going to entertain your suggestion and the one thing that I'd point out with this verb and this is not a fixed rule is often people may use this in the negative to say that you are not going to consider something or think about it or give attention um to this idea so I've given you some example sentences right there refu like the first one we just said he refused my offer immediately said he would not even entertain such a low offer or I will not begin to entertain such accusations or she wouldn't entertain his outlandish suggestions in each of those sentences I am using it more with that negative to not give attention to not entertain excellent job uh some right answers uh evany s good to entertain an idea or thought how about this verb he was able to effectively the new company policy this verb starts with an A and once again I think this is one that you have probably heard of when it comes to a lot of vocabulary I think many of you may have uh you know passive understanding of these words that you hear them or you read them and you think okay I I know what they mean or I can put put it in uh context but when you're having a conversation maybe you don't actively use it and that's why it's good to get review learn these relearn them in this case uh if you already know it I have not uh seen any correct answers but let's uh let me let me give you the answer he was not uh he was able to effectively articulate the new company policy now of course there are other verbs that start with a I saw some answers in there like adapt adopt uh that that would work it would work in this situation I don't want to say that you're wrong but the word in this case that I was wanting to teach you is the word articulate to articulate something which means to express yourself readily clearly and effectively so some of you that you put in those other verbs with a uh adopt adapt accept again they would work but the verb that I want to teach you is to articulate which uh means you're if you're trying to articulate something perhaps your ideas or your suggestions that you just want to express yourself clearly and effectively the one thing that I want to point out with this verb is that you can use it as a verb to articulate something the stresses on the second syllable or you could use it as an adjective if I well we're just looking at this picture and saying well this this gentleman is very articulate again I'm stressing the second syllable the difference between the two the verb and the adjective is that final and fourth syllable so with the verb you have that long a sound to articulate whereas with the the adjective now we have that I articulate articulate to articulate or saying someone is articulate something keep in mind but the the these it's part of the same word family same meaning but different pronunciation how about some well speaking of adjectives like articulate uh let's look at some other Advanced adjectives and as we I'm going to switch it up a little bit and quiz you in a different way so what I want to do this time is really provide you with some different synonyms again I'm giving you the part of the word well the first letter as a little bit of a hint again this is these are all adjectives and then some synonyms below to see if uh you can kind of come up with the missing word so this is an adjective that begins with the letter s it is one that is definitely probably not as commonly used it is a certainly more advanced but some synonyms would be self-righteous insincere hypocritic critical Pious smug these are all synonyms for starts with an S again let me show you because this is a little more challenging if you want to say someone is sanctimonious sanctimonious means that yeah that just self-righteous you think you're better than everyone else here's an example sentence he gave a self-serving and sanctimonious speech a lot of times people will use this adjective and then follow it with a well derogatory noun like oh this sanctimonious jerk or this sanctimonious then you can put in the word that is negative and you're just emphasizing yeah how much you just don't like this person and saying they're sanctimonious this is another fun word starts with a P an adjective that has a similar meaning to ridiculous strange bizarre foolish and excessive a lot of these synonyms uh have been taken from the thesaurus.com and in this case you would often hear this adjective in a certain statement that I will show you in just a bit you can use that picture which is ridiculous it's a little strange and I would say wow look at this picture that's what thinking about this situation that could possibly happen I'd say that's what not peculiar kind of close but there's another word that we're looking for excellent uh Ahmad we're talking about Preposterous that is the adjective that I wanted to teach you so in this sentence the cow the cow won't be able to climb over the the style that's preposterous the cow won't be able to do that that's just Preposterous and that is the sentence I was talking about you have some situation and you want to say well instead of saying that's ridiculous that's crazy that's foolish you could say that's preposterous fun word another one again maybe it's like Bamboozled I just like saying Preposterous how about this one and I think you could use the picture as a little bit of a hint this is an adjective that you would use to describe of person and some synonyms include practical balanced composed reasonable cool-headed and I feel like this is a good adjective you could use when talking about someone in a work environment and you want to give this person a compliment talking about your colleague or maybe your boss that they are very practical they can remain calm Cal in difficult situations and you could say this person is excellent thong too I I thought thought some I thought you might get that one levelheaded so if somebody's levelheaded I feel again this is a compliment it's it's a good thing if somebody says you're level-headed and it just means all of those things you're balanced reasonable you you can stay calm in these challenging situations and I gave you an example sentence my colleague works well under pressure she's very levelheaded how about this next adjective right here again I feel like this one's a little tricky perhaps there is another word that you might come up with but some synonyms for this word include alarming awful dire disheartening Dreadful so it's not a good situation in and instead of saying that well this is awful uh or this is alarming this is what and I feel like sometimes you may use this more as an attributive adjective before the noun talking about in this case perhaps a task that you have to do and like oh this is such a m task and the word that we're looking for well done uh romelia Julia daunting saying something is daunting you is similar to saying alarming or awful or disheartening for example he faces the daunting Prospect of up to three different exams in one day that is Dreadful that is daunting and then we have this uh this adjective right here I feel like maybe uh maybe you'll be able to get this one and some synonyms include atrocious deplorable extreme flagrant glaring what uh what word am I talking about what do you think write your answers in the comments in the chat just want to hear from you and again this is I think one that you may use with the noun mistake that somebody makes instead of a a deplorable mistake or an atrocious mistake and what starts with an E you're really emphasizing just how bad something is and you could describe it as being hopefully well maybe you're thinking of the word egregious all right great job Alex uh yuchen perfect uh Julia l so if you say something is egregious these are some synonyms and I told you might use it with the word mistake he made an egregious mistake and you're really adding emphasis to just how bad or concerning that the mistake is to to put some of this into like context you could go to if you want to know how frequently some of these words are used whether it's these adjectives or any word or phrase and you would like to compare them this is a great resource you can go to Google engram viewer and it basically puts it on a graph and shows you the frequency and it's really based on written English and not spoken English but it's a good way to get a snapshot and I put these adjectives in there and you could see just looking at this that words like daunting egregious are more commonly used than the other ones that we talked about sanctimonious levelheaded and Preposterous I was surprised to see that at the bottom and I I guess maybe I shouldn't say I'm that surprise because I do feel like that is a word that you would hear more in spoken English as opposed to written English so in that case I I think it may make sense because again this is taken from like all of written English and graphing it for you all right now we're moving into some nouns right there's a lot lot to cover today and let's look look at some Advanced nouns this time I want to give you some common cations these are words that are frequently used together so I'm not just giving you the noun but some other words that are often used with this noun again it's a fill in the blank but I've highlighted the collocation he boasted about his accomplishments and walked around the stage with an air of what what noun could you use that you might use it with this collocation an air of what this is describing someone that again you you're not happy you could probably describe this person as a sanctimonious prick and you don't like this person because they're just they're strutting around with an air of yes superiority nice Manuel Julia so if somebody is again moving going around with the their acting like as though they just you know they have this air of superiority it's uh not a good thing so superiority refers to the fact that one person or thing is better stronger um than another if we're talking about people it's really it really has a negative connotation if someone is acting like they're better but if you're comparing things like two different things like phones or something and saying well this phone is just you know it is uh you know this it has superiority over this other thing right then you're just saying it's better which in that case it's not necessarily negative but here are some common collocations with this noun and air of superiority technological superiority that would probably be better if I said the phone exhibits you know just technological superiority over this other phone you could talk about military superiority or moral superiority these are other collocations that are used with this noun how about this one and I feel like I think uh many of you may be able to to get this noun because it's probably a little more often used you watch TV shows movies I I imagine this is a word you have probably come across the court awarded to the mother pretty simple sentence we're talking about the the court the judicial system and this is another word that you might hear in that context and I'm using it with the verb awarded so that is the collocation this is ver a verb noun collocation with this Advanced noun so we're talking about the court is going to award what to the mother and the noun is custody to award custody the meaning of custody in case you are you whoops sorry you are unfamiliar with it it is just referring to the legal right or duty to care for someone or something especially a child a lot of times when people talk about custody children are part of this discussion and some common cations with this noun again these are all verb noun collocations to award custody to get custody to share custody to Grant custody or even to gain or lose custody these are all verbs that are frequently used with the noun custody you guys rock that one I think many many of you knew it which is great always good to get a little little review here is the next question I still love scuba diving but after several Dives the M started to wear off I realize now that I I give you this example I said I would highlight the actual collocation and the collocation with this noun would be what follows started to wear off the M started to wear off that is the collocation so we're talking about don't worry too much about the activity scuba diving but think about the situation you go scuba diving this person still loves it but you know the more they do it you become accustomed to it you be you get used to it it's not as big of a deal and you could say the M started to wear off and that is the allation we're going to use that noun and follow it with started to wear off there are I'd say possibly there might be other nouns that you could use but I feel like there's one definitely that is often used in this context good job Alex the novelty the novelty started to wear off I don't necessarily I wouldn't really say the you know the passion or the enthusiasm started to wear off grammatically there's nothing wrong with that it's just not of used in this context uh you could say the novelty started to wear off I think that would be more suitable to this situation because novelty it just refers to well technically speaking the quality of being new and unusual so the more you do something especially if at the beginning it's very exciting it's new it's different but over time yeah I think it's this is going to happen the novelty is start is going to wear off and there are are different ways that you could say it even though all of these collocations have a similar meaning saying the novelty is wearing off and using it in the continuous tense or the novelty is starting to wear off or the novelty has worn off and using that past perfect but really just thinking of saying that well you become used to something it's not new or exciting oh yeah you know the novelty has started to wear off and it's not as uh as strange or different or unusual good phrase good phrase to know I I included this this is a little joke uh from like the y e cards uh just to give you another like example with this saying the novelty of your lazy eye has yet to wear off it's a very strange statement to say that which is why it's supposed to be funny and ridiculous and absurd I know what you're thinking that's preposterous nobody would say that to another person and you're right the next next uh my wife uh she yeah she doesn't like to be seen with me if I'm wearing socks and sandals but I could say socks and sandals are making a what and again I apologize I forgot to highlight the the collocation I don't think it would be too much of a hint but making a m this is a verb noun collocation to make a what I know that the whole socks and sandals thing is not giving you too much of a hint but if I wanted to help you out a little a little bit and say that uh maybe this is something that people did a long time ago and now it's starting to become trendy again what what would you say it's becoming trendy again it's making a what I I I would say I would like to think that this is true but I don't think it is the answer is to make a comeback and a comeback would refer to a situation in which someone or something becomes popular famous successful after a period of being M much less popular so I think uh people would talk about maybe actors or in this regard that someone was very famous and then they go through this period of time in which they have not been working and starring in movies or TV shows and then you see them again and you'd say well this person has made a comeback or is making a comeback you could also use it to refer to companies as well that you have this period where in which they're not very popular even though they're known and then they make a comeback here are some other verb noun collocations to make a comeback to mount a comeback or even to Stage a comeback all three of those are somewhat interchangeable when talking about this noun a comeback and this is a little more current events for you we're just talking about actors please don't raise your voice you are making a comeback once again I meant to include this verb noun collocation to make a what noun are you going to follow this with and I think this is a this is a good phrase to know because I probably you might be in this situation and it's not something that occurs all the time it's very specific but I think it's useful and I'm just trying to I gave you that uh that picture there of uh Ben Affleck and Jennifer Lopez I don't think things are going well but it was part of this news headline so instead of giving you the news headline I just want to show the picture with you and then give a sentence and I feel like many of you know it we're talking about making a scene great job uh uh what you Julia Natasha cherton good job excellent so if someone is making a scene this would refer to an expression of anger or some similar feelings to being angry between two people and you're referring to like this an occasion when this happens so I said it's useful because you may be in a situation in public with another person who is upset they start speaking loudly and it's a little embarrassing and you could tell look you're making a scene there's no need to make a scene and you would use it with that verb to make a scene or you could say someone is causing a scene and they're people are looking because they're acting really uh you know they're they're really frustrated they're angry and they're showing this or you could refer to this and say well that was quite a scene or saying something is quite a scene great uh noun to know again it's it is more advanced it's more specific but I think it's useful because it applies to a situation that I'm sure if I asked you can you think of a time when you saw someone making a scene I'm sure that you can think of an instance when that was happening so let's look at some Advanced adverbs we're not done yet I have a lot of words I told you that I want to look at today so I I'm giving I'm making this multiple choice this may be a little easier than some of the other questions they follow order blind that or okay I'm gonna I'm going to start over they follow orders without questioning Authority I'm laughing because I started to say the answer I was getting ahead of myself they M follow orders without questioning Authority what uh what what adverb these

ly words are we going to use I think uh I don't maybe you all know this because I think this was a little easier even though I started to say yes the word be blindly so if you say someone is blindly doing something it means they're just not thinking about or understanding like what they are doing you're not questioning anything and we were just talking about uh collocations I think that is a collocation as well to blindly follow orders and you're not questioning and you are just blindly following orders how about uh this question right here what adverb would you use to complete this sentence the town is remote and M populated a sparsely B resoundingly or C decrepit which word completes that sentence the town is remote and M populated so we're talking about if you know the what the meaning of the word remote is it'll make it easier it means that it's well they're not it's kind of isolated it's not close to anything and therefore it would make lead you to believe that there is not much of a PO population and I I'm just keep talking but you guys got the answer sparsely saying something is sparsely populated meaning that there is a small number or amount of people or things you could say it's sparsely populated again another this in this case uh an adverb uh adjective collocation saying something is sparsely populated now uh maybe I keep thinking maybe this is going to get a little more difficult but I think you guys are going to uh get most of these with the multiple choice they worked in order to fix the mistake before the deadline how were these people working so just putting it you know in a context there's a deadline there's a mistake we need to fix it so of course I think you probably are trying to imagine well how these people are working in this case there is only one adverb that would appropriately complete this sentence they're not going to work lethargically because that means that they're moving slowly there's a deadline freely it doesn't really apply so it just leaves us with an expeditiously if somebody is working expeditiously they are working with speed and efficiency perfect how about the next one which maybe a little more uh challenging our vacation didn't start M the flight was delayed for 12 hours what do you think goes in that blank a tacitly B profoundly or C auspiciously WR your answers in the comment in the chat I think this one is going to be a little more challenging what do you think our vacation didn't start the flight was delayed for 12 hours so in this case we're talking about a situation in which uh it well it's not a really means uh like something is the way somebody's communicating and saying something directly once again it really doesn't fit uh in in this uh context and then uh how about this one they ignored any evidence that did not support their Theory which of these adverbs completes this sentence they ignored any evidence that did not support their theory if you know the meaning of some of these other ones again I think you could use process of elimination because the meaning is really not going to fit in with what the sentence is trying to convey so in this case meticulously if somebody is working meticulously they're paying close attention to detail you wouldn't really use it with the verb ignore you wouldn't meticulously ignore something um ardently also does not fit really well so we're going to go with blyly b and if somebody does something blyly and this is another com cocation to blight ly ignore something you are you know happy without worry and it's like this cheerful indifference so cheerful is a keyword if somebody you know in this case Bly ignored you are cheerful you're not going to pay any attention to evidence that goes against what you want to prove so you are cheerfully ignoring this thing that you should be paying attention to and that is another collocation I know gave you all a lot of words in this lesson here is a little bit of review you can see all these words if you want to get access to these lesson notes remember click on that link down in the description join our email Community if you are already a part of the community again check your check your inbox I I've already sent them to you now for the Moment of Truth my question my poll how did you do on the quiz let me know in the comments comments in the chat how you did I'm going to give you a poll um I'll do like great maybe 100% um not bad 75% and then we'll do okay 50% and then uh I learned a lot of new words we'll say is maybe 25% because I'm sure with all of these questions I bet there there were definitely some that you got and you can let me know right now right at this very moment how you did on the quiz if you enjoy lessons like this and you like building your vocabulary especially with some very Advanced words that I told you are specific in certain situations like I just gave you that example of somebody making a scene and you could use that collocation hit that like button tells me that I should do more lessons like this I do want to thank all of you for participating in the lesson I want to give a shout out again for Cinderella Essence for the that super chat I really appreciate it uh great to see so many members in here today Loi good to see you uh as well as people that have participated in my speakup course too glad you were here and other people that I always see each week Angela tal Manuel um Ken Natasha Nova sir uh thank you so much for joining me being a part of the lesson and let me see where where we're at I think again for the most part seems like uh many of you learned a lot of new words couple people wow I'm impressed some of you saying uh you you got 100% on this quiz that that's that's awesome excellent but with all of these lessons my goal is that you learn something new and hopefully even if you knew some of the words maybe you learn some new collocations or ways in which these words are used used thank you so much hope you have a wonderful rest of your day and I

SUPER CONFUSING WORDS | 1-Hour Vocabulary Lesson

if you sometimes find English words confusing by the end of the lesson I promise you there will be no more confusion because I am going to teach you over 50 different words and phrases talk about why they are commonly confused give you a variety of examples and ultimately this is going to improve your overall fluency so let's begin with some super confusing words and because it's a nice day let's go outside for this part of the lesson English is full of confusing words like these first two words that I have for you between and among they're both prepositions but you're going to use between when you're talking about well two things or two people there there's a one-on-one relationship use among when you're talking about well more than two and and it's not really distinct so I I could say you know the information in this lesson let let's keep that between you and me talking about a one-on-one relationship between you and me or there there's an idiom that is between a rock and a hard place this is talking about uh a difficult situation a rock a hard place you're between it it's it's not a good place to be it's a difficult situation now with a m i I know I told you to keep this information between you and me but i' I'd rather you share it among all of your friends so in that case I'm I'm talking about that group and you you may also hear people use amongst instead of among and they they mean the same thing I think it's more common to use among especially in the United States amongst it's a little bit of an older word but there are still some phrases statements in which people are likely to use a monst if you are in front of a group of people and maybe you're talking to them and you have to leave the room you could say Talk Amongst yourselves that is that is a statement that you may hear in which people may use amongst now between you and me if you truly want to build your vocabulary learn the difference between these confusing words I suggest you subscribe turn on notifications so that you learn about future lessons and I can become your English teacher my name is Wes the Channel interactive English that's what it's all about trying to help you improve and reach your fluency goals the next two confusing words that I have for you reluctant and reticent they're both adjectives but you're going to use reluctant to to refer to something that maybe you are hesitant to do or you're unwilling to do this thing use reticent when you're you're really talking about somebody's manner that they're shy or reserved so in that case I I think it's more common that you're going to hear people use reluctant when when talking about things they're unwilling to do in general reticent going it's going to allow you to be more specific so maybe if we're talking about somebody shy to speak and they don't want to speak they're reluctant to speak then you could describe them as being a bit reticent because we know that they're a little shy um if I were talking about maybe a a team that had to do a presentation and I could say well well she was reluctant to put together the presentation she was unwilling to do it maybe it was very difficult but then he was reticent to give the presentation so in that case I'm talking about well his his willingness to speak he was reticent he was shy he didn't really want to do it here are another couple of confusing words achieve and accomplish and these are great words to know so you're going to use achieve when talking about well you want to succeed in something if you use accomplish then that means well you you finish something often successfully so if I were to say like I want to achieve my goal it means that I I I want to reach this point and I want to do it successfully that's a little different than if I say I accomplished my goal well then it's finished and well perhaps I I was successful think of it this way I I always talk about trying to achieve English fluency that you want to be successful in in learning English and it's not something that you're probably ever going to finish so in that case I'm not going to use accomplish but if I'm talking about like a mission or a task well then I could say that I I want to accomplish this Mission or maybe I already accomplished this Mission it's done it's complete and I did what I needed to do then we have customers and clients so customers refer to people who who are buying a product or service and clients refer to people who need some type of professional support or help from another person or a company so I am going to to tell you I'm going to give you a situation uh talking about some people and I want you to think whether I'm talking about customers or clients I'll give you a moment and then I'll I'll tell you the answer so if I am talking about well shopping at the mall those are customers if I need to hire a lawyer and I need to use their services then I am the client if a company uses services from another company then they would be this is a little tricky because you they could be either clients or customers so in some instances they may be used interchangeably it really just depends on the relationship maybe between these companies but that's another reason why they can be a bit confusing and finally if I were to talk about well people at a restaurant those are customers yes those are customers here are another another couple of confusing words figuratively and literally they're they're adverbs we use figuratively to refer to well using words or phrases in an imaginative way talking about something that that is not realistic you would use literally to talk about something that will is realistic something that happened so there's a phrase that people might use with figuratively and they may say figuratively speaking at the beginning of their statement and then go on to say something that is not realistic figuratively speaking people were kicking down the doors to buy the new iPhone so it's not realistic it's just an example and people would would do this really kind of to emphasize their statement if I want to use literally and this does happen maybe you're you're talking with a friend about another friend and that person shows up and you said hey we were literally just talking about you so this was realistic it happened the reason why these were may be confusing is because people use literally instead of figuratively and I know that may seem a little strange because their meaning is it's pretty much the opposite and I there are people who say this is incorrect this should not happen but you should be aware that this this is something that occurs in spoken English somebody might say something like I I literally have not slept in weeks of course that's not true it's not realistic but they they may use literally just to try and emphasize the fact that they have not been sleeping at all or I could say people have literally been kicking down the doors to buy the new iPhone so once again I'm I'm talking about something that's not realistic but I'm using literally instead of figuratively this is something that happens quite often in spoken English and I I'm even guilty of doing this from time to time then we have these confusing abbreviations EG versus IE and it's something that people will often confuse in writing they may even confuse it in spoken English if people say these abbreviations but you're going to use EG in order to mean for example you're going to use iie it's it's like saying that is to say or it's even interchangeable with specifically so let me try to make it a little easier for you to understand if I were to say something like I've been trying to eat more foods that are high in protein EG tuna brocc chicken I'm really just giving an example of some of the things that I'm eating if I if I were to say well the hotels downtown they raise their price during the high season I. E May to August now I'm specifically talking about that time period May to August let me give you a couple of statements and you tell me if we should use EG or iie if I were to say the restaurant is closed once a week m on Mondays all right in that case you should use IE because we're talking specifically about Mondays how about um there are many chores that I have to do during the week take out the trash mop the floor uh clean the living room okay you should have said EG because once again I I'm giving just examples of some of the chores that I have to do so just just really keep that in mind EG is used to just give uh some examples IE is much more specific you were talking about something that is specifically happening or some specific information and then we have these two confusing words consecutive and concurrent and I I think they may be confused mostly because of well the spelling and they kind of sound like they might be the same word but they have different meanings you're going to use consecutive to talk about well something that happens one after the other without interruption and you use concurrent to talk about well things that are happening at the same time so I could say that the city experienced consecutive heat waves there was a heat wave and once it ended without interruption another one started or uh if I were to use concurrent I could say well the country is experiencing concurrent heat waves that there are different heat waves happening across the country at the same time it's concurrent so just remember there are two different meanings consecutive one after the other without interruption concurrent it means happening at the same time now that we're back inside I want to talk about some phrases that can be really confusing and I'm talking about phrasal verbs because quite often people tell me that this is one of the most challenging Parts when it comes to building their vocabulary and people often make mistakes because there are many phras verbs many of them have multiple meanings so I understand that this can cause some confusion but right now I want to take a look at some phrasal verbs that are especially tricky we need to have a talk about phrasal verbs okay so phrasal verbs can be very confusing they can be very annoying but they're very important to learn because we use them quite often especially when speaking I want to look at some phrasal verbs that well the these can be very confusing using because their meaning is similar nevertheless there are some slight differences which I want to teach you and this is really going to help with your comprehension and your overall English fluency so let's just go ahead and start with these two phrasal verbs right here burn up and burn down now when I first started teaching English and uh you know I was having to learn a lot about the English language and one of the things that I came across was just trying to show how crazy the English language could be and somebody was asking a question and they said how is it possible that a house can burn down at the same time it's burning up that just doesn't make any sense but it's true that can happen because if we have this sentence and somebody says oh my God my house is burning down all right it means the same thing and somebody could say oh my God my house is burning up so both of these phrasal verbs mean that something is destroyed by fire and in the example that I just gave you you could use either phrasal verb you could say my house is burning down or my house is burning up either one of them it's okay they mean the same thing but there is a slight difference between these two phrasal verbs because if you say that something is burning down what that makes me think of is some type of structure like uh a home or a building or a bridge and when it burns down that structure is just destroyed and often it may just collapse if we're talking about something that burns up it makes me think of something that is perhaps smaller like an individual item not always because you could say that a home is burning up but I think uh you will typically use this with smaller individual items paper a book or perhaps photo albums let's use that as an example so if you have this home and your home is burning down inside the home maybe you have some photo albums it's a smaller item and if it's destroyed by the fire then you would say my photo albums burned up in the fire they were destroyed by the fire but another word that I want to give you to help you probably better understand it would be that it was consumed by this fire I think that that word may help you make a distinction between burn down and burn up so if something burns up it's really consumed you could also use the phrasal verb when you get rid of energy when you consume energy you can burn up calories and the other thing that I would say about burn up I think there is a level of intensity that this is happening uh right in front of you it's intense it's really hot it's getting hotter and hotter and in that case think of the same way if somebody has a fever they might say wow your forehead is burning up you're really burning up it's intense it's getting hot and that is another way in which you could use this phrasal verb so in my original example of saying that my house is burning down or my house is burning up I think they are interchangeable you could use either one but I think it's because you are talking about something that is happening right at that moment you are watching this structure getting destroyed by the fire my house is burning down you are watching the home getting consumed and it's very intense my house is burning up if we are going to talk about this in the past and it's already happened I think in that case most people would use burn down and you could say last year my home burned down all right you're probably not going to use burn up if you're talking about something that's larger like a home you may use it if you are looking at it at that moment and you see that the fire is consuming it it's very intense you could say oh no my house is burning up so again even though these phrasal verbs have a very similar meaning there are some slight differences between the two now let's look at the phrasal verbs walk up and walk down so let me give you an example perhaps you are looking for a restaurant and you ask somebody on the street hey do you know where this restaurant is and they say oh it's just right over there just walk down the street and you'll see it or maybe they say just walk up the street and you'll see it in this case the both are correct you can use either one because walk down and walk up it means that you are just walking to some place I would say that there can be some subtle differences because you can take geography into consideration so for example if a person is going to be walking uphill then I'm more likely to use walk up just walk up the street and you'll see it if the person's going to be walking downhill then I'm probably going to use down just walk down the street and you'll see it and if it's flat well then you can use either one I would say that I think that in spoken English people are more likely going to use walk down now one way we can check this is using a great resource like Google's engram viewer which pretty much shows you how common different words and phrases are and you can compare the two so I can compare walk up and walk down and when I looked it up lo and behold I saw that their usage is very similar one is not that much more common than the other and then I was thinking wait maybe Am I Wrong is it just me that I would use walk down and a lot of other people would use walk up perhaps that is the case but we can look at it uh a little closer in depth because if you use walk up it can also mean something that's a little different so walk up can mean to uh to walk to a person or place with a level of confidence that you are feeling very confident you have something you want to say and you might walk right up to some person or you walk up to some place let me give you some examples I could say she walked up to her boss and said I quit all right she walked up to her boss she was very confident and really had something important to say another example uh would be he walked up to her and asked her out on a date again in that situation you are walking to someone but it really uh there really is a level of confidence that you have when you are going to this person or or this place so when I went back to Google engram viewer I was a little more specific with my uh with my phrase and I put in walk down the street and walk up the street and yes in that case uh you can see that walk down the street is more more common than walk up the street and this also applies to drive if you want to say drive up or drive down perhaps you're looking for a grocery store and you ask somebody and they say oh it's it's just just drive down the road and you'll see it in about 10 minutes or just drive up the road and you'll see it in 10 minutes again they're interchangeable they mean the same thing you are driving to some place but I I think it also applies if somebody's going to be driving uphill you could use drive up if they're driving downhill drive down and if it's flat either one but once again again I think drive down is going to be used uh more often in spoken English now let's look at these phrasal verbs take off and liftoff so I could say the helicopter is taking off or the helicopter is lifting off both of them are correct and both of them kind of mean the same thing in this case but these phrasal verbs do have uh a bit of a difference so for example take off refers to to an aircraft or a bird or an insect that leaves the ground and begins to fly liftoff refers to the action of some aircraft or spacecraft that is leaving the ground and typically with liftoff I I kind of think of going straight up you are going straight up from a particular point so I could you could say that a rocket could lift off the ground or a helicopter could lift off the ground uh a hot air balloon could lift off the ground a drone could lift off the ground so if we're talking about takeoff I could use takeoff with all of those as well I could say the rocket took off the helicopter took off the hot air balloon it also took off even the Drone it took off because I can use takeoff with with all of those as well as many more if we're talking about well like birds insects and planes takeoff is used much more often than lift off the reason why I think somebody would use liftoff would be if they they just want to be a little more specific uh and precise when whenever they're speaking or perhaps writing and they want to say that that this aircraft is leaving the ground and it's kind of moving straight up so you think of a a rocket a helicopter a hide air balloon a drone those are things that can lift off but they could also take off as well I hope that you have a little bit of a better understanding about the differences between these phrasal verbs even though in certain instances they are interchangeable and you could use either one you're doing great so let's keep moving forward so that you can achieve your goal of understanding these confusing words and then at the end of the lesson you can say mission accomplished because it's finished so let's switch gears and I want to do a deep dive into two different phrases that are commonly confused used to and used to and in doing so we need to cover a little bit of grammar again it's a nice day so let's go back outside used to and used to now they they can be a little confusing not not necessarily when speaking but when trying to determine well which one you should use in writing and I say they're not really they're not really confused when speaking because the pronunciation is the same and I will come back to that a little bit later on but but for right now let's uh let's focus on used to because this is definitely the most common one that you are going to use when speaking or writing and I think well used to alone can be confusing because well dictionaries may look at it different ways Cambridge has used to as a modal verb Merriam Webster says that used to is an adjective as well as a verb McMillan dictionary has used to as a modal verb Oxford Learners dictionary also says that used to is a modal verb and dictionary.com has it as an adjective as well as a verb let's first make a distinction between used to as a modal verb or verb and used to as an adjective now the the grammar is different the part of speech but also the meaning is different so right now let's let's get rid of the adjective forget about the adjective let's just focus on used to as a verb or modal verb and I keep saying verb modal verb as you saw some of the dictionaries uh have it listed differently and that is because in some ways used to acts like a modal verb and in other ways it it really doesn't but whether or not used to uh is considered a verb or a modal verb the meaning is the same and let's talk about the meaning because that is very important and what this means means is it's talking about something that was repeatedly done in the past or or even a situation that existed in the past but the the thing is not done anymore or the situation does not exist anymore today in the present so I could will give you some examples talking about myself I could say I used to live in South Korea that that is true that is a situation that existed in the past and when I lived in South Korea I used to run uh around this Lake twice a a week bum Moon Lake I used to run around it twice a week and that is something that I had done repeatedly except for the winter uh in the winter it was a bit too cold so during those months uh I used to sit on my ass I could say that sometimes not always in those sentences used to is a modal verb it is a helping verb and I already told you that it has some similarities to modal verbs like it has one form it's not conjugated so I said I used to live in South Korea if I change the subject to he it it's not going to change he used to live in South Korea but used to it it can act you're if you're trying to think about it I think it's best to consider used to as just one phrase try to think about it together as one phrase used to questions and negative statements also make used to different from other modal verbs because if well if we're talking about questions typically we can just use the modal verb to create a question can he swim will it rain and if we're talking about negative statements then you're you're just going to use not with with a typical modal verb uh he cannot swim or it won't rain but this is not the case with used to of course used to it just has to be different than all the other modal verbs and I think this is also when people might say okay it acts more like a verb because if we're talking about questions used to it refers to the past so with questions you're going to use did and if you're going to make a negative statement then you're going to use did not so if we're going to use it uh as a question I could ask you did you use to study English and if I want to say a negative statement then I could say well I didn't used to have hair like this um and that's because I used to shave my head but more importantly than my shaved head is that you now see that used to has changed the spelling has changed to used to and this is what I want you to remember if we're talking about questions and negative statements you are going to use used to and you're going to spell it us I told you that the only distinction is in writing because well the pronunciation is the same whether you're saying used to or used to it's the same pronunciation the D and the T they blend together to create one sound so yeah the pronunciation it's really the same nobody's going to know if if you end up making a mistake because you're still just going to say used to or used to and now that you have a perfect understanding of used to being used as a modal verb SL verb let's now talk about used to being used as an adjective so the the first thing that I want to tell you is the meaning I told you that the meaning is different and what this means is that well it's referring to something that you are familiar with or that you are accustomed to and it often follows the verb to be so I could say well I am used to hot weather all right I'm just it's just something that I'm used to I'm not used to cold weather it's just something I'm not that familiar with and in this case because because used to is an adjective it's not going to change whether we're talking about questions or negative statements you are always going to spell used to like this used d uh another thing that I want to tell you about used to as an adjective just giving you another example I do not think any of us were used to staying inside for so long during the pandemic and I think that's true I think we can all relate to that sentence and the thing the thing that I want to point out with this sentence is that you you may often follow used to with a Jaren and you're used to doing something like I'm used to taking the bus in the morning or I'm not used to working late but even though we were not used to staying inside during the pandemic we had to get used to it and I just gave you an example right there of it being used with another verb that is not the verb to be and that I think is also it's a common usage to get used to doing something or even people using it as an imperative statement giving a command and you're telling somebody get used to it but just remember used to as an adjective has a different meaning than used to as a modal verb or verb that's the one thing that I really want you to remember from this lesson and I yes it's confusing but I think over time the more you listen the more you practice you're just going to get used to it I just went into great detail about the differences between used to and used to and the fact that these phrases are pronounced the same is another reason why they are confusing they're homonyms and I want to follow up on that right now and have a look at more homonyms words that are pronounced the same this vocabulary is especially confusing when it comes to spoken English you really just need to put the words into context text now I'm sure that you're probably familiar with many of them but I do think this is important for your pronunciation as well as just understanding that there may be another word with a different meaning that has the same pronunciation so let's begin listen carefully there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't if you are confused right now then that is because of homonyms and I promise that that by the end of this lesson you will not be confused anymore so let's talk about homonyms like these two words right here flower and flower so homonyms are words that that are pronounced the same or maybe they're spelled the same as another word but they have a different meaning and flower and flower you can hear that they are pronounced the same but you can see that they are not spelled the same and they do not have the same meaning all of the words that I'm going to teach you in this lesson are like this to be exact they are called homophones but homophones th those are a type of homonym I'm also giving you the phonetic spelling and the IPA so that you can actually see the pronunciation I think that'll make it a little bit easier for you and I'll tell you the different meanings as well and if we're talking about this flower well then that is one that you might find in a garden or in a park it has a very pleasant smell and this other flower well that is referring to the Fine powder that that you might use for cooking like if you're baking a cake then we have these two words right here it has that k sound but it's referring to a small exclusive group of people and what I would say is maybe think about like high school that's how I think it's commonly used talking about young people they have their exclusive group of friends and you might refer to it as a clique I don't think this word is often used to reference or talk about adults then we have these two homonyms right here patience and patience these words have two syllables the stress is on that first syllable and notice both words they have that t i e which is pronounced sh with that schah sound patience and in this word patience the t is going to be silent and this refers to well a person who is under medical care or getting some type of medical treatment and this patience refers to the ability to wait and not be annoyed by something especially if there is a delay and you could say somebody has patience moose and and you guessed it moose all right these words are homonyms and you may be familiar with uh this moose that large mammal that's part of the deer family and this other moose is talking about that that creamy and foamy dessert and it's actually a French word because the dessert it comes from France and in French it means like like froth or Foy which is what gives it its second meaning in English because you could talk about moose referring to a foamy substance that somebody could use for for styling their hair like right now um I actually I did not use any moose I did use a little bit of gel but but not moose the next set of homonyms metal and metal so both of these words it's going to end with that dark L that L you're not going to release it at the end but but these words are homonyms in in American English most because if we're talking about that t in metal it's going to be a flap T which is going to sound more like a soft D sound and the reason that we're going to use a flap T is because it comes between two vowel sounds so um I'm from the United States so I would pronounce it as metal which then means it's also it's a homonym with the verb to metal so metal the noun which is the one with the t is talking about an element like like gold or silver that is gener hard and strong and metal the verb to metal it means that you are getting involved in a situation in which um well you have not been asked to be involved and to share your opinion and you could hear somebody talk about meddling in somebody else's business or meddling in someone else's personal affairs to meddle then we have horse and horse so this horse very well known uh the animal that people can ride around on I don't know if you have ever ridden on a horse but this next horse I it's a good this is a good word hopefully you're building your vocabulary it allows you to be a little more specific because it's talking about this the sound of a person's voice so if somebody sounds horse it means that that their voice sounds a bit rough possibly because they have a cold so you could hear somebody inquire and say your voice it sounds a little horar do you have a cold are you feeling okay then we have principle and principle these two words I think are commonly confused so hopefully we'll we'll clear this up right now of course

both words sound the same so they have three syllables the stress is on the first syllable that second and third syllable you'll hear that schwa sound principle principle so these words are confusing because they have multiple meanings and I think this is especially important in your writing because of course you you want to make sure that you are using the correct one so if we're talking about this Principle as a noun it refers to a person who is the leader of a school a school has a principle if we're going to use this word as an adjective well then it just means that something that is very important I could talk about the principal reason for for doing something if we're talking about this Principle as a noun it could refer to like a basis of conduct and you say that someone has principles or it could be used to refer to like um uh a set of rules that that explain how we should do something or or what's happening that you want to follow these principles then we have Gorilla and gorilla these words have three syllables that that first and third syllable you'll hear that schwas sound and the stress is on the second syllable gorilla gorilla and this gorilla refers to that that giant ape perhaps you have seen a gorilla at the zoo and this other gorilla it's a noun it's talking about a like a member of an unofficial military group and the the group of people together you would say they are gorillas the next set of homonyms core and core and I'm sure that one word you're thinking what wait a second that sounds nothing like the way it's spelled well the reason for that it's it's like you have that that pns you don't even hear it the other thing I would say about this word is that it is singular you see that S I think people might think that it is a plural noun but it's singular so let me let me explain why this is pronounced core so the origin of this word it comes from Latin Corpus which means body now this word was borrowed from French as well as the pronunciation core which is why you don't hear the p and the S so if we're talking about the this core it refers to the central part of something like the Earth's core and this core refers to a a milit AR organization kind of like that that body that organization that body the Army Core then we have sweet and Sweet I'm sure you may like this one word like I do sweet it it is talking about a flavor something that's sugary I really enjoy foods that are sweet and this other sweet that sui it is pronounced like sweet sweet and that is because it's now that you have a much better understanding of homonyms let's go back to that riddle I told you at the beginning of the lesson there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't think about which word is a homonym there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens okay the word eight eight is a homonym we could be talking about well the number eight or the verb to eat in the past tense which is eight and that that was the word I was saying all along there are 30 cows in a field and 28 chickens how many didn't the answer of course is 10 I I know you're probably thinking well wait a second cows don't eat chickens of course they don't it's just a riddle but it's it's a fun little way to to introduce and talk about homonyms let's now turn our attention back to grammar because often when I hear people make speaking mistakes it's because of prepositions and some very common and confusing prepositions are in on at so let's have a look at when to use and how to use these useful prepositions when it comes to talking about place and once you understand this there will be no more confusion which preposition should we use to complete this sentence in on or at actually you could use any of them all of them are correct it really just depends on the context and that's what I want to do in today's lesson I want to break it down for you so that you easily understand how to use each of these prepositions when talking about place and I'm also going to give you a little bit of a mini quiz at the end to see how much you've learned so let's begin with in and when you're thinking about in think about an enclosed space that you are surrounded on all sides and I want to give you some more General ideas as to when you would use this preposition so you will use in to talk about locations within a larger area how many people live in this town you'll use in with a car taxi or van if I were to say hey we're waiting in the car it's used to talk about workplaces or Industries if someone asks where do you work I work in human resources or I work in fashion and if if you've seen many of my video lessons you you know I absolutely do not work in fashion it's my yeah my fashion is pretty bad you would use in with water let's all get in the pool or the expression there's plenty of fish in the sea so again we're talking about the sea we're talking about water and you would use this expression to say that well if somebody's single and they're looking to have a relationship and find a partner you're saying this to to encourage them to keep looking that there's somebody out there for them don't give up hope there's plenty of fish in the SE we use this preposition with class I'm having trouble paying attention in class I'm enclosed in this space and we also use it with printed materials if you don't know the meaning of a word can look it up in the dictionary and you can think about it that well that word it's surrounded by other pages so it's in the dictionary so just keep these in mind when you're thinking about in and now let's talk about on and when you will use this preposition and when it comes to on I want you to think about a a surface that something is attached to or touching something else so we use on to refer to the position of something on any surface your coffee is on the table I found some money on the sidewalk it's used to talk about a floor in a building I work on the seventh floor it also describes the position along a road or river or or by the sea or a lake I could say the car is on the road the boat is on the river again it's on that surface or or I could even say I grew up on the East Coast so I'm talking about the coast where I grew up on that surface and I would say on the East Coast so when you're talking about the coast East West use on now the next few are technically not on the surface but I I still want you to use on so we're going to use it when talking about being on public transit like a bus or a plane I'm on a bus heading downtown or I'm on a plane to Chicago and I I know this can be a little tricky because we use in with a car like you're you're surrounded you're enclosed so one way to think about it is that you're going to use in with with smaller vehicles and you'll use on with larger modes of transportation but again there's always exceptions because you're still going to use on with a bike or motorcycle on a bike or on a motorcycle we use the preposition on with left or right my house is on the left oh no no no sorry it's on the right and we'll use this preposition with media as well did you see the new show on Netflix or you may be watching this lesson on YouTube so just just keep all of this in mind when it comes to using on so now let's talk about at and when to use this preposition and when you think about at I want you to think of a point a specific location or position so of course we're going to use at when we're referring to the position or location as a point I I could say there's a package at the front door we use it to refer to an address I live at 44 Main Street and and this can be a little confusing because if we're just talking about the street then we'll use on I live on Main Street on that surface but if I give the specific location 44 Main Street well now we're talking about a point so we're going to use at we use this preposition to refer to most shops or public places and and in this case I want you to think about a larger point so I I could say I'm shopping at the mall and you would use at even if you are in the mall because if somebody were to ask you like hey where are you they're they're typically asking about your location so that's why you would use at and say I'm shopping at the mall we use it to refer to group activities I could ask you how many people were at your party we also use it with school or university I studied at a topnotch university and that's not really true I studied at a party school but you get the point with either of those we're going to use at and we use this preposition with work or home I could really say that right now I'm working at home so this should give you a better idea as to when you would use at now let's go back to our original sentence and I told you that all three prepositions are correct it really just depends on the context so if I say I'm in the lake well that just means that I'm physically in the water I'm surrounded by the water if I were to say I'm on the lake well now I'm talking about the surface so it really implies that I'm probably on a boat and I'm out on the water and I'm on on the lake and if I were to say I'm at the lake well now I'm talking about a specific location even though it's a larger area if somebody were to ask where are you then I would say I'm at the lake because we're talking about location and right now I want to test your knowledge I have a little mini quiz for you I'm going to give you a sentence and I want you to think well which preposition best completes it in on or at I'll give you a moment to think about it and then I'll tell you the answer so so your first sentence is I found a mistake the first page which preposition would you use the answer is on so in this case we're talking about the surface of the page on the first page I found a mistake on the first page so so just keep this in mind if we're talking about a page we're going to use on and that is a little tricky because remember we're going to use in when talking about printed materials like a book so something is on a page but in a book here's your next sentence she felt proud the end of her month-long Journey what do you think the correct answer is at she felt proud at the end of her month-long Journey because we're talking about that that point that location she's at the end of her journey and these are really common phrases with at if we're talking about well at the beginning of something or at the end of something then there's this sentence there are no public toilets the city center the correct answer is in there are no public toilets in the city center we're going to use in because we're talking about a location within a larger area here's a question for you do you have anything your pockets I I think you know this the correct answer is in do you have anything in your pockets we're talking about an enclosed area here's another one we wanted to sit the front of the plane I'm trying to trick you a little bit but the the correct answer is at we wanted to sit at the front of the plane I I told you that with public transit you're going to use on on a plane but in this case we're talking about a specific location on a plane so in that case we're going to use at at the front of the plane how about this one please refer to the graph the slide the correct answer is on please refer to the graph on the slide so once again we're talking about the surface of something on a page on a slide so how'd you do on the quiz I I want you to be honest let me know down in the comments because I just love hearing from you it's always good to get a little grammar and cover a variety of topics because there are many reasons why someone may find English confusing throughout the lesson we've talked about vocabulary grammar pronunciation with those homonyms and I want to go back to vocabulary and do another Deep dive and really have a look at the differences between some very common verbs ones that you should know and I'm sure you use them all the time I'm talking about the verbs say and tell I'm going to tell you a secret well it's not really a secret but you should listen carefully to what I'm about to say because I'm going to tell you the difference between these two words and these two words confuse English Learners mostly because their meaning is pretty similar so let's get right to it first let's look at the verb say now we use this verb when we want to say something to someone now we don't necessarily have to identify the person or people that we are saying something to but we're just saying something in general and that something might be general information the weather report says it's going to rain today in this example the weather report is saying something we don't really know specifically who they're saying it to but they're just saying it in general another example is that you might be saying your opinion about something the kids said West teacher is crazy or perhaps you're reading what the instructions say instructions say if we finish the game it'll all go away so in each of these examples we were saying something to someone now this is different from the verb tell which is when we tell someone something in this case we usually identify the person or people that we are talking to which is why tell is often followed by a direct object take a look at these examples Yana told Wes to take out the garbage in this example Yana is telling Wes me she's telling me something she's telling me to take out the garbage wh can you please take out the trash yeah yeah I'll do it we tell our students to join our social media classes this of course is something that we tell you all the time we tell you to join our social media classes so join them here are a few more examples using tell and keep in mind the object that follows the verb she told me to sit in this chair the teacher tells us to do our homework my mom told me to take a bath I told you not to wake me up now keep in mind that there are a few exceptions when it comes to using tell I I know English and all the exceptions it it sucks but you don't always have to tell someone sometimes you can just tell something for example you can tell a secret you can tell a lie you can tell the truth you can tell a joke and you can also tell a story these are several exceptions when it comes to using tell and you just have to memorize them use them and you will eventually remember them I'm telling you the truth okay let's practice what we've learned and this is a listening comprehension activity I am going to tell you a sentence and that sentence is missing a word which is either say or tell after listening to each sentence I want you to say your answers out loud you'll be saying this to me and I'm going to be listening I'll give you a moment to say your answer and then after I will tell you the correct answer so let's begin I don't want you to any more lies I don't want you to any more lies the answer is tell this is one of those exceptions you tell a lie I don't want you to tell any more lies I I can't hear you can you please say your answer again I want you to your answer I can't hear you could you please your answer again I want you to your answer the answer is say because I want you to say something which is the answer I want you to say your answer out loud that was so rude I I can't believe he didn't hello that was so rude I can't believe he didn't hello the answer is say because we were talking about something that the person didn't say I can't believe he didn't say hello um I can't remember what what did you me I should do um I I can't remember what did you me I should do the answer is tell because we're talking about telling someone something what did you tell me I should do perhaps it's a little easy when I do the activity now let's see if you can listen for these words when other people say them be careful what you be careful what you be careful what you say now tell the truth now the truth now tell the truth just the first thing that pops into your mind just say the first thing that pops into your mind just say the first thing that pops into your mind don't his name don't is name don't say his name what what and what did you tell her something I'm giving up you say something I know that we have covered a lot this past hour and I hope that I have cleared up some confusion if I have succeeded you can let me know know by hitting that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

SUPER CONFUSING WORDS | Learn slight nuances to improve your vocabulary

Hello and welcome to today's lesson. I have a vocabulary lesson for you in which we are going to talk about some confusing words and what I want to do is look at these different word sets, talk about what they mean and learn some of the slight nuances between them so that you have a clearer understanding as to when you could use these words. And all of this is really just going to help you build your vocabulary. Now, I really I want to say that if you would like a copy of the lesson notes, these slides that I have right here next to me, click on the link down in the description. You can join our email community, if you want to access them. If you are already a part of our community, then check your email. I'll send them to I've already sent them to you. As well as if you're a member, Patreon, I I will post them for you as well. So, this is interactive English. I want you to participate in these lessons. So, I'm going to start out with a question. This is just a fill in the blank. Which word do you think best completes the sentence? So, we're going to start out with these two words right here, persuade, convince, and thinking about the difference between these two words. Which word would you use to complete this sentence right here? He m that it was a bad idea. And that that looks painful. That cat is getting ready to take a bite out of that cactus. So, what do you think? He m me that this was a bad idea. Persuade. Convince. They're both verbs and sometimes they can be a little confusing. There is a slight difference between the two of them. Excellent. As we go through, I'll give some shout outs. Great job. Uh, Lai, Kareem, uh, Tyle, Vidya, Fernando, the the answer is convince. So, in this case, he convinced me that this was a bad idea. And if you're wondering why, why not persuade instead of convince? Because in a situation like this, it's really like changing your mind. Think about the mind. So let's look at these two words persuade versus convince. So one difference would be persuade is more closely associated with an action and convince is more associated with your mind and and changing your mind in some way. This is information that I've gotten uh from Encyclopedia Britannica. I I've included the source down there and the meaning. Okay, as you can see, it starts out usually because sometimes these words are interchangeable and and that's okay. They're not uh always going to be used specific in specific situations, but sometimes it's better to use one word over the other. So, persuade is usually to cause someone to do something by asking, arguing, or giving reasons. So the example I gave you, she persuaded me to give her a ride home from work and she's giving reasons and persuading someone to take this action to give her a ride. Convince, on the other hand, again starting with usually usually to cause someone to believe that something is true. Again, changing their mind. The lawyer convinced the jury of his innocence. Now, in both of these sentences, I would say that each of these words is probably the best word to complete the sentence. I could say, "Yeah, she convinced me to give her a ride home from work." Again, you may use them interchangeably, but in this situation, because we're talking about an action, I I would go with persuade. But I would say that often pers convince is more interchangeable with persuade. So most of the time instead of using persuade people may use convinced in convince instead and not the other way around.

And to demonstrate this you can check out engram viewer and this is a great way to compare different words and phrases and you could see which is more common. And as you can see convince is a word that you're more likely to hear and use than the word persuade. The next set that I have for you right here. Okay, fast versus quick. Okay, [laughter and gasps] we have a long drive. In an hour, we'll stop for a m snack and then keep going. And I would say with this sentence, there is definitely one word that I think is much more appropriate than the other one. So, how would you complete this sentence? would you use fast or quick? And I think with some of these, you're probably going to be able to to answer them, which is good. Again, this is all about practice. But as always, I hope I'm just going to give you a little information and you'll learn something new. So, we have uh a long drive. In an hour, we'll stop for a quick snack and then keep going. Nice. Uh, Rafella, Lai, Jonatel, Talal, uh, Bianca, Fernando, uh, Yao, Ammani, excellent. Good to see you. Uh, I'll try to keep giving different shoutouts. I think you guys knew that one. Now, my question would be, well, why why is it more appropriate to use quick instead of fast? So let's talk about the difference because both fast and quick they are adjectives or they could also be adverbs as well. So the part of speech is similar. Both of them refer to moving with great speed, but once again there's a subtle difference. And this I've taken from Cambridge University Press down here.

We're starting out the meaning with usually because again sometimes they may be interchangeable. When talking about fast, it usually refers to things that happen or go at high speed. So, train, a car, a person running. That example sentence, he is fast. I'm talking about the speed that he's moving. Quick usually refers to something happening in a short time. That was the example that we just looked at. We're going to stop for a quick snack. In this case, we're talking about time, but it could also mean occurring with rapidity. And this one, I think occurring with rapidity may get inter maybe interchangeable with fast, but also it's slightly different. It's slightly different.

Look at the picture there of the basketball player and I said he is quick. Now, I could say a basketball player is fast and they're moving at a high speed. But in this context, I'm talking about more of a sudden fast movement and it's occurring with rapidity. It's sudden. They'll move over here and then move over here and say, "Wow, this person is quick." So, there's a difference between somebody's fast and they're moving at a high speed or saying they're quick and it's like that sudden movement. To give you another, I guess, example, maybe a weird one would be let's say you're you're trying to catch an animal and uh we'll say like a baby pig, okay? A little small pig. [snorts] And in general, you are faster than the pig. If you're running in a straight line, maybe you are faster. But if you're trying to catch this pig and it's gonna move here and move over here and move over here and you could say, "Wow, that pig is really quick." So again, there's a small difference between quick and fast in that regard when talking about occurring in rapidity, that sudden movement or just that speed. Fast versus quick. Hopefully that makes sense even with my weird example with the pig. And we have these two words right here. Again, I want you to choose which word best completes the sentence. We're talking about emiable versus amicable. My friends broke up, but there was an MN to the relationship. And with this one, there's there's definitely one word that you would want to use. My friends broke up, but there was an MN to the relationship. Would you use emiable or amicable? Both of these words are they're not the most common words and I think sometimes they're confused because of the the spelling in general as well as the meaning and we'll talk about that. But the correct answer, great job.

Uh, let's see. Teaya, Lai, Rafella. Yes, Vidya, Kareem. We're talking about amicable. My friends broke up, but there was an amicable end to the relationship. So, these two words I got this information. This was provided by Grammarly down there. Amiable, amicable. The first thing that I want to mention is the difference in pronunciation. Both words have four syllables. The stress is on the first syllable but that beginning vowel sound is different. So we have emiable or amicable. So the difference is that e and e vowel sound. Emiable amicable. The meaning is friendly and pleasant. So the meaning is similar but the main difference would be amiable is used to describe a person and saying well this person uh you know he's really friendly she's really friendly she is emiable.

Amicable is going to describe a situation such as ending a relationship. That's a situation. So we're going to use amicable to give you some more context. I've given you some well news headlines. It's a great way to just quickly see how some of these words are used in context. It gives you a better feel for usage and meaning. If you can't see them, it's it's okay. I'll I'll read them. I'm having trouble reading them right now. But looking at the ones that with emiable, it says an was emiable with Harry at the coronation as it wasn't the place to discuss royal rift. It's talking about uh you know the the royals and you said and was emiable. The next one Noel Coward was just an emiable jester but a scathing social satist um satirist. And the final one inept AI and creativity strange bedfellows or emiable allies when referring to those two things AI and creativity are they emiable allies? Now the headlines with amicable again we're talking about a situation avoil Lavine and Taigga are still friends after mutual amicable split says source again relationship Chelsea reject Chelsea reject uh sorry wait third mount okay Chelsea reject third mount bid as uh counter offer hopes to help Man United reach amicable solution a situ situation, a solution. And then that final one, EXO and SM, contract dispute ends in amicable settlement. So those are hopefully some useful collocations talking about an amicable uh end to a relationship, an amicable split or an amicable solution or an amicable settlement. So oh, seeing some hearts in the chat. That's cool. I've never [laughter] I've never seen that before. Uh maybe that's something new. Excellent. Thank you. Then I want to look at these two words right here. Eavesdrop and over here. Which word would you use to complete this sentence? I m [clears throat] a funny conversation on the bus this morning.

You're riding the bus. Sometimes people are talking loudly and you could say this situation I a funny conversation on the bus this morning. Are you going to use eavesdrop or over here? You guys are rocking uh rocking these as well. Excellent. So in this context, you're riding the bus, you're in close proximity with others, you really have no choice sometimes if a person is speaking loudly. And in that case, you would say, "I overheard a funny conversation on the bus this morning." Great job, Jessica, Joanna, Rafella, Lilly, um, Manuel, Julia. The difference would be really eavesdrop is intentional over here is unintentional. So thinking about riding the bus, you could eaves drop if it's really intentional. Of course, that situation may occur, but in general, I think often if somebody's speaking loudly and you're in a um enclosed environment, you would then overhear someone. you're not really trying to listen to it or maybe you're not really interested in what they're saying, but you would overhear this person. So, eavesdrop, it's intentional to listen to someone's private conversation without them knowing. And you may often follow this verb with the preposition on, to eavesdrop on someone or to eavesdrop on a conversation. And that picture hopefully it it makes a little more sense. Again, that person is putting that up there. They're intentionally trying to listen to someone's conversation. When you overhear, it's you hear what other people are saying without intending to or without their knowledge. So, you overhear somebody talking. I don't know if you can see that picture, but someone is in the room. These other people are outside. They're talking, and the person in the room overhears the conversation. And yes, I hear I mi intentional. That is a typo. Misspelling. Uh you could see unintentional. I missed that O in there.

Uh but it it should be intentional. Thank you. Good. Good eye. Good eye. Uh Milo. Then we have uh two words that I think you know the difference especially if you see a sentence. But often what I what what happens is when people are in a conversation and they're talking about this I I hear people misuse these words sometimes borrow versus lend. So I'm giving you this question. Could you please m me a piece of paper? Which word are you going to use? Are you going to use borrow or lend? And when it comes to improving your speaking fluency and just using the right word th this is what helps this just practice seeing the sentence the situation choosing the right answer and then you start to internalize that because again mostly I hear mistakes in a conversation. Could you please m me a piece of paper? The answer lend. Excellent. Uh Lai Takayo um Vija, Julia, Sami, Jessica, Kareem, lend. So I want to ask Rafella. So does eavesdrop have a negative meaning? Yeah, I would say if we're talking about a connotation, eavesdrop in generally it's probably not a good thing. you're you're listening on, you know, it could be an invasion of privacy. So, I feel like often eavesdrop may have a little bit of a negative connotation if you're eavesdropping on someone. So, that is definitely more negative than just overhearing in which case it's unintentional. Good, good question. Then, so the way that I would say to think about borrow and lend is simple. Borrow your taking. Lend you're giving. And to be more specific, I took again this is from Encyclopedia Britannica.

Borrow you. You get or receive something from someone with the intention of giving it back. So you're taking something, you're getting it, you're borrowing it. Last week I borrowed her car. Now lend on the other hand is when you give something to someone for a short period of time and you expect to get it back. And I took that quote from Shakespeare. Believe it's from uh Julius Caesar. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears. A famous line uh Shakespearean line. So hopefully again that makes sense. Borrow, lend. I think most of the time I hear small mistakes in just conversation in spoken English. The next one is right here. Revenge versus vengeance.

How which one would you use to complete this sentence? You can see the Joker. Um Heath Ledger did an amazing acting job uh as the Joker. You may have foiled my plan, Batman, but I will get my what am I going to get my revenge or am I going to get my vengeance? The words have somewhat of a similar meaning, but I would say they're, you know, definitely distinct and different. And one is certainly more commonly used than the other. You may have foiled my plan, Batman, but I will get my revenge. So, you're going to get your revenge. Excellent. Uh, nice Fernando. Um, Talal Lai Rafella. Good, good, good. Ymani Steve.

So, think of it this way. Revenge, it's more personal and it's harm done to someone as punishment for harm that they have done to someone else. So, one distinction I would make is if you are a good guy and somebody harms you, you want to get revenge. Okay? If you're a bad guy and you're you feel like you're harmed, you could also get revenge like this. The Joker is a bad guy, but Joker could also still get revenge and they want to harm the other person. vengeance. Think about righteousness. And this one I took from gosh, I can't even see the source down there that I was using. It's from where is it? It's just from this uh like the talking about like like a wiki difference page, the difference between um a descriptive analysis and comparisons. But vengeance, think of righteousness, the punishment of someone for harming you or your friends or family or you're wishing for such punishment to happen.

Generally, I would think somebody who is the protagonist, the the good guy would uh you know want vengeance and you have that it's more righteous. If you're talking about like the bad guy, in that case it would be revenge because it's not really the punishment that they would be wanting it. It you wouldn't really use vengeance in that context. I wanted to include some collocations down here. Some of them are used with both, but you could get revenge and you may follow that with on get revenge uh on someone or get revenge for something. You could exact revenge or plot revenge or plan revenge. And some then some common collocations with vengeance, take vengeance. You could exact vengeance. Both of those uh you can use exact with both either word. You could swear vengeance on someone. Or that idiom, it's not a verb noun collocation. It's an idiom with a vengeance. And if you do something with a vengeance, you do it with a lot of uh a lot of energy and force with a vengeance. I mentioned already and this is just to reinforce that point that I was making at the beginning. One of these words is definitely more commonly used. You are probably going to use or hear the word revenge more often than you would come across the word vengeance. and you're getting revenge as opposed to swearing vengeance.

The next set that I have for you is imply versus infer. These are commonly confused and I'm not sure why the the spelling's different, the meanings are are different, but again these are just words that are commonly confused even uh among native speakers. I've hear people confuse these words. I had this uh these are again news headlines and I've just blanked out the the word. So this is from uh it says report Africa relations with China, Russia do not support for new world order. Which word would complete that headline? Africa relations with China, Russia do not support for new world order. Are you going to use imply or infer to complete that headline?

So I think good job. Excellent. The the answer is imply Africa relations with China, Russia do not imply support for new world order. Excellent. Uh Juliet Takaya Jessica Rafella. Good. We're talking about two different meanings. So when you imply, you state something. When you infer, you conclude something. So, we're talking about implying to, again, this is this is from Grammarly, to suggest or say something in an indirect way. So, you're suggesting it. You're stating something, but not directly. You're implying it. She implied that I again, I'm missing a verb there. I apologize. I go through these lessons like three times and I still the like typos and some misspellings and in this case I'm missing the verb to be. She implied that I am not very attractive. She implied that I'm not very attractive. Didn't state it directly but just implied it.

When we conclude when we infer, we conclude something. You're coming to a conclusion based on the information you have. So continuing that from that previous sentence, I I then concluded I inferred that she was not interested in a relationship. So she implied that I'm not very attractive. So I inferred that she's not interested in a relationship. And that was the conclusion that uh I came to. So I have another one. Let's keep going. Hopefully that makes sense. And these I think are useful words, but again I hear I've heard even native speakers misuse these words from time to time.

Now we have um a couple of homonyms. Compliment versus complement sound the same. The only difference is the spelling as well. Well well not the only difference the difference is the spelling and the meaning. The meaning is different. She added photographs to the text. Of course, you know the answer is complement because they're homonyms. But which one are you going to use? Are you going to use compliment with an I or complement with an E? And this one, because they're homonyms, this is probably this is more for your writing to make sure that you know the difference between these two words because if you're having a conversation, you say compliment, either one would work in that case. But if you're writing, spelling then becomes important. You want to make sure you're using the right word. The answer I said is complement, but we're talking about compliment with an e. Very nice. Well done, Taka, Lai, Fernando, uh, Daud Bag, Julia, trying to give some new shout outs. Uh, Sami, Yamamani, excellent, Gordon. So, the difference, a compliment with an I is a remark that expresses approval, admiration. He gave me a wonderful compliment on my outfit. And they said, "Wow, that looks really nice. I I love that shirt. Those are really nice shoes that you have. And giving you a compliment. Complement with an e refers to something that completes something else. So you might have two things that really they go well together and it just makes it much better. And I gave you a sentence that is distinctly American. Peanut butter and jelly complement each other perfectly. A peanut butter and jelly sandwich very common in the United States states among children. [snorts] This uh information was from uh Miriam Webster. But just keep in mind homonym different spelling different meaning and uh it's it's important to know especially when it comes to writing.

The next one, deny versus refuse. This one can be a little tricky. There may be trying to think of some instances in which they may be interchangeable. I feel like once again there's probably a more appropriate word that you would use. But let's just look at the sentence. My request for more vacation time was which which of these words would you use to complete this sentence? My request for more vacation time was What do you think? [laughter] I'm laughing because I think this is the this is maybe I I got you. You guys have been rocking this the whole time. This is the first one. Maybe it it um tripped you up a little bit and the again this is this is confusing.

Refuse is when you say that you will not accept or you won't accept something. One way to think about this would be I I didn't put them on the slide because I thought it might be a little more confusing is to think about their antonyms. So if you deny something, the opposite of that would be to um admit or allow. And you are admitting yes, something is true or you're allowing someone to do something. The opposite of refuse would be to accept. So sometimes they could be a little confusing depending on the situation. If you're talking about um I I understand why many of people would put refuse like my my request was refused and that's why it wanted to include some more common collocations with these words. So often if we're talking about some type of request, the answer is like yes or no, it's going to be okay. It's either um allowed or it's denied. So you might deny a request, you could deny an application, you could deny the facts, deny the allegations, or deny a rumor and you're saying it's not true. If we're talking about refuse, you might refuse an offer, refuse help, refuse treatment, refuse, you could follow it with to refuse to believe something or even refuse to pay. So those are some common collocations uh with this word. But deny or refuse. Once again, I would say sometimes they may be used interchangeably, but there is that slight little difference between the two of them. And then we have say versus tell. And I've given you two blanks for for this one. Okay. She m me not to anything.

What do you think? Which Uh you're going to put one word in each of those blanks. She m me not to m anything. And then we'll talk about the difference and talk about why because I think when you see it, this is similar to what I was saying with borrow and lend. I think when you see something in writing and I give you like a fill-in- thelank, it's okay. I I I get that. But sometimes when somebody's having a conversation, I may hear somebody say, "Use tell instead of say or vice versa." So, good job. I think you guys rock this one. She told me not to say anything. So, to say, think of this, you would say something, but you would tell something to someone. And that's really how we're going to use it. So when you're saying something, you're expressing a thought, opinion, suggestion, stating a fact. She said that she doesn't drink coffee. Okay? I'm just making I'm just saying that this was a statement. She said something. Now, when you're telling again, you it it involves like another person to say something to someone often giving them information or instructions. So looking at that, taking that same sentence and we're just changing it around using tell. She told me that she doesn't drink coffee. So that's really the distinction. You would say something, but you would tell something to someone or you could switch it around. You could tell someone something. But when you're talking about tell there that that that other that person is involved in that and once again this was taken from encyclopedia bratannica. So this is I I went over 20 words right here. Again if you want the lesson notes um check out that link down in the description. If you're part of the community I'll send them to you as well as patrons uh members. I'll put them up there. But the

these are the words from today that we just looked at. I think some are more common than others and you probably know and use many of them already, but it's really just trying to fine-tune your vocabulary and understanding maybe some of these slight nuances when it comes to the English language. So, if you enjoyed the lesson, if you learned something new, I'd appreciate love seeing those hearts. Hit that like button. It let me It lets me know that, okay, this information is useful. Maybe in the future I I can do another lesson on confusing words because there are many of them. English has so many different vocabulary words, many with the same meaning, but the usage might be a little different and that's when those slight nuances come into play. But I want to say thank you for joining me, Vicky Gustav. It's good to see you. Thanks for being here.

Lai, good to see you. Takaya, um, trying to get to like our members, patrons. Uh, Raphaela, uh, Yao Ammani, thanks for being here. Fernando, Ursula, Tanvi, uh, Takayo, I don't know, maybe I already said your name, but anyway, good. Thanks for joining. I hope that you all have a wonderful rest of the day and of course I will be back in the near future with another lesson to help you continue Uh in

SUPER IMPORTANT EXPRESSIONS | Clichés in Spoken English

vocabulary that you need to know and the reason why I say that is because I want to teach you different clichés in English and the very fact that we're talking about clichés means that these expressions are often used which is why I said they're important to know you'll hear them in just casual conversation and again you can even use them depending on the situation that you're in and I have quite a few that I want to go over so I said that the very fact that talking about clichés means that this vocabulary is commonly used so what is a cliché in case you're unfamiliar with it it is a phrase remark or opinion that has very often been expressed before and is therefore not original or not interesting now generally when people think of cliché maybe they have a negative association because they oh it's not very creative but like I said this is all about building your vocabulary teaching you different words and phrases that you are likely to come across and that's why I think clichés are important and by the way if you want to get these lesson notes you can click on the link Down Below in the description join my email community and you can access the lesson notes if you're already a part of the community then I have sent them to you so this is a quiz lesson I want you to participate and let's see how much you already know when it comes to these different clichés to begin with I'm giving you the context in which it's used down below so this cliché is used to justify delays or tardiness and you could say this statement I've blanked out most of it but I've given you the word never that is the last and final word of this cliché so so there's some situation I'm late or tardy and I just want to justify it and I could use this expression which is one that I imagine once you hear it you'll okay yes I've heard that before so the cliché that I'm talking about excellent see some great answers better late than never so as an example if I were to say sorry I submitted my report right after the deadline but better late than never so you did not do something on time and it's like you're trying to say well this is actually a positive because it's better than never getting something at all or never doing something better late than never so this is a fun expression that you can definitely use I feel like often I am late to do something I don't do something on time and I you know better late than never all right excellent um great uh great response I'll try and give some shoutouts as we go through this now I wanted to uh share I'm going to share some memes and quotes just to kind of mix it up to give you some more context but I thought this was just funny when I saw it this plane you know crashed and he's hey he's he's ejecting uh at the last minute and yeah better late than never uh it's it's true it's true um what do you think about this one uh I think this is one that I you could probably go out and use this cliché tomorrow and this would be used when you want to say that well someone is in a bad mood and you're basically commenting that this person is in a bad mood now you could say it directly to that person or maybe you make a comment to someone else saying oh you know look this person's really in a bad mood I'm giving you three words which are part of the cliché this is a sentence again that you will often hear and I feel once I show you be like oh yes I've heard this before on the wrong how would you complete this sentence so if I am in a bad mood and you uh you know want to acknowledge that and comment about it what would you say so all right all right excellent so not we're not talking about the like getting off on the wrong foot uh because if you get off on the wrong foot that means kind of like okay you didn't you know get along really well at the beginning if you just want to say someone's in a bad mood and I'm giving you these pictures to kind of give you a little bit of a hint to wake up on the wrong side of the bed now the sentence that I wrote someone like someone woke up on the wrong side of the bed generally when you use this you're going to use it in the past woke up because you're talking about someone who is already awake and you're referring to this morning that wow okay this person you know someone woke up on the wrong side of the bed keep that in mind that you're often going to use this in the past woke up so for example I say well he's been in a bad mood all day someone must have woken up on the wrong side of the bed now I'm using it um with that modal in the past participle must have woken up on the wrong side of the bed but just keep that in mind you're you're talking about someone who is already awake and you want to say that they're in a bad mood and yeah you know this person uh woke up next statement that you might hear this one I don't think is as often used as the um others that we just talked about but this is used to emphasize solidarity and support within a group and you could say one and you can use that picture and probably guess when you okay I recognize what's going on here this is a very well-known statement that well I don't want to give it away but if you want to emphasize you know that hey we're working together we're part of this group you could say this state but keep in mind again this was it is not original because it comes from this story movie uh you know I'm kind of trying to give it away a little bit um but what we're saying are the cliché that we're talking about is all for one one for all so the picture here is from the well the movie The Three

Musketeers which was the Disney movie which again is based off the book uh the Musketeers years and this is like what they would say cuz they're always you know working together um you know all for one one for all and you know it's important to work together as an example it's important we we work together all for one one for all like kind of you know cheering that on all right excellent all right well excellent hi Heidi Christina thanks for joining the team love it love it uh also love those hearts that you guys uh keep them coming what do you think this is I would be willing to Guess that this is a sentence you have definitely heard even if you can't think of the answer right now I know that you've heard this before and you well I don't want to tell you but you would use this when referring to people who will spend the rest of one's life in happiness and just looking at the context perhaps you know you're going to be able to uh figure out the cliché but the final word is after so think about uh a story I'll go ahead and start giving you some hints you read this story and how are you going to end the story especially if it's like this maybe you know romantic story and they finally get together in the end and you would say what so I told you that this is a cliché that I know that you've heard and they lived happily ever after the famous ending to uh many different stories in the end she married The Prince and they lived happily ever after excellent I think a lot of you got that because like I said I feel like you've heard it Well Done uh Heidi diligent learning Miranda Julia excellent here is another little comment I I like to try to bring some humor to these lessons because it just makes learning that much more enjoyable so this person says and they lived happily ever after except for that age thing as though of course people they're going to get older uh and then at some point pass away so it's not like uh you're just going to live forever what do you think about the next one and this is another one that I I I do think is pretty common so you would use this what is the context we're going to use this to say that the truth or a result will only be known in the future after events have happened I know that that is a little bit more to take in that you're going to know the result or you know the outcome at some point in the future you know once you know these events have occurred and what could you say the last word is tell now I think again this is I I told you these are common because I feel like you you know some of them which is great because the idea is hopefully that it's not just a part of your passive vocabulary but even a part of your active vocabulary and you can go out and use these phrases when you are commenting on this situation this context right here like many of you said only time will tell so only time will tell whether or not you decide to hit the like button that is true all right maybe maybe some of you hit it already and I really appreciate that the others maybe I'm trying to earn it with this uh lesson but only time will tell uh whether or not you will decide to ultimately hit that like button I hope you I hope you decide to do that so this is again it's a common expression which is why it is a cliché and I know that You' say well it's unoriginal it's not and this is why I feel like in writing you're you're people would say and I would even say this too try to avoid using clichés in writing because that is a time where you want to be a little more descriptive and express yourself but as far as spoken English goes they're very common and I think they're actually pretty useful you're wanting to comment on the situation like you know what's going to happen in the future like well you know time will tell we'll see what happens only time will tell if it was well spent now I don't know if this was really a quote from Jimmy Buffett who is a you know well-known singer but uh I think it is a great little um quote only time will tell if you know the time that you have on this Earth is well spent and we'll see so I hit the thumbs up excellent I appreciate it uh love it love hearing that here is another one that before I even came up with this lesson talking about clichés in spoken English this is kind of what made me think about it because I I said this like a couple of times in the same day and I started thinking like gosh why am I I'm saying the same thing I should you know think of other ways to say stuff because it's not very original and then I thought wait you know I've never done a lesson on clichés and the context would be like to say that uh a little planning can make the the tasks of daily life or even your I don't want to give it away the tasks of daily life much easier to manage so if you plan well and you really think try to find ways to do a better job and and not have it take up a lot more time so in the example I say you seem like you're struggling with several different projects I'm giving advice to someone I think you can be more efficient if you work smarter not harder so a good one to keep in mind I have a great uh a great meme for this which really really does uh I think capture this sentiment and I I you know this turtle is absolutely working smarter instead of crawling they find a way use that skateboard you just go much faster on a skateboard so once again I think this is one you've probably heard it before maybe you even use it which I think is great because as far as spoken English goes clichés I think can be very useful and very helpful and I hope that some of these maybe you're coming across one or two that are new that's always um that's always great here's the next one i' I'm switching it up a little bit so this time I'm just giving you a sentence and I want you to try to put it into context you know what they say m is the best medicine as we go through this part I'm going to make it a little more challenging because right here there's just one word missing and what word completes this sentence and I've giving you this picture of this cute little cat with with glasses on and you could say m is the best medicine the other thing I would would like to point out is anytime you hear somebody start out and they say you know what they say basically you know that a cliché is coming you know what they say and then they follow it with a cliché and I did this on purpose because I wanted to make that known if you ever were planning to use a cliché you could introduce it with that sentence hey hey you know what they say because everybody says these things all the time and they're not very original but m is the best medicine so we're we're not talking about like uh I see some time not time is the best med sleep well I feel like I feel like sleep in time would be great uh as far as medicine goes but if this one's new for you that's awesome laughter laughter is the best medicine so you would use this sentence when you want to say Hey you know it's good to laugh it's good for your mental health and uh even especially if somebody is going through a rough time and they're a little sad maybe a little depressed you want to cheer them up you're like look come on you know laughter is the best medicine it's going to help you uh you know get over things it's beneficial to your health laughter is the best medicine here is a funny little comic that I found laughter is the best medicine and then down below it says unless you're seriously ill then you maybe should go see a doctor which is true if uh laughter of course is good medicine but yeah if you're you're injured you're hurt uh or something else is wrong then definitely definitely go see a doctor here is the next sentence he will get over the breakup time M all I feel like because I'm giving you that first word hopefully it kind of rings some bells and you know using that idiom to ring a bell like kind of you know make you think oh okay now I know the answer so the situation of course you're saying somebody's going to get over the a breakup and it's just going to take time because this person right here is hurt he's he's hurt he's sad and you could say time M all wounds so I want to say you you're close instead of cures because again that is more of a synonym but you're not really going to use it the cliché excellent uh well done Manuel Heidi um Time Heals all wounds now I will say because of course there there are always differences between among different English varieties I don't know if been British English maybe people would say time cures all wounds you will still hear that but I I would venture to Guess that if I were to go on engram viewer to see which of these sentences is more commonly used I feel like more often you would hear heals Time Heals all wounds uh instead but I'm not sure perhaps this is uh more common in British English it to use the word cures but you're going to use this to say that feelings of sadness disappointment it they just gradually go away over as time passes Time Heals all wounds another one that's super common that I think many of you um have heard before I thought this was this was also very true Time Heals all wounds but desserts heals them faster that sometimes that is how I feel if I'm a little sad or depressed and you know nothing beats a good dessert I I like to indulge in some chocolate and it kind of lifts my spirits so in this case I guess you could say dessert dessert heals all wounds as well how about this one I hope I get the job your now I'm not giving you a I'm giving you the word your which is not which is not that much of a hint but think about the the first sentence you're saying hey I hope I get the job I hope this happen happens um you know you want this to happen for me and I tell you this sentence I hope this happens and what it's like I'm giving you this command so that you're kind of wishing someone good luck your there are what how would you try we try to guess which cliché which unoriginal s statement would best complete this sentence and once again I I think this is one that uh you you've definitely heard of and you I think you probably use this uh phrase as well so if we're talking about hey I hope that somebody you know gets the job and I'm telling you um you know keep your fingers crossed you know fingers crossed I hope it happens you're expressing this hope that something will happen keep your fingers crossed again very common statement you could just say fingers crossed that works as well but you may hear somebody say you into context based on the first part of the sentence so we haven't closed the business yet and the fact that I'm saying yet is trying to imply that this is going to happen in the future and if something is going to happen in the future then you could say all right I see well maybe you guys maybe this was easier than I thought say excellent uh fatty acid mushak dwit Manuel tal Julia um the writing is on the wall so you could use this expression this cliché to say that there are signs that something will fail or no longer exist typically again you're saying that it's going to happen but it does have a negative connotation you're expressing something that is your you're upset about you're disappointed you're like yeah it's going to happen the writing is on the wall you're not going to use this in a positive uh situation if I say I know that I'm going to get the job promotion this is great the writing's on the wall that that sounds a little weird and that is why you're going to use this when talking about you know something that's going to fail or in this case if a business is closing it's no longer going to exist the writing is on the wall and I I don't know if you I think this is um a well-known I don't know if it's Barnes and Nobles or Borders like a bookstore in the US that you know they just went out of business and they couldn't stay open and they were closing them down and yeah you could say the writing is on the wall how about this another one that that you know you know this one I know you said that you refused to eat I I know you said that you refused to eat uh

Thai food again but say I I I don't know if the beginnings awkwardly worded because I if I had given you one word then it would have just been way too easy so I tried to rephrase this in another way like oh hey I know you said you refuse to eat Thai food again but what what two words go uh go on each side the word say and this is another phrase that you could use very often in casual conversation because people they tend to say I I know I say never from time to time like I'm never GNA do this I'm never going to do that and then you could reply and say hey never say never you never you never know so Never Say Never is used to say that a person you know should not say that he or she will never do something because you know we always change our mind and you could use this this cliché like just never say never this Standalone statement once again I would say avoid using this in writing because it just doesn't go as well this is much more conversational English and that's why I said clichés in spoken English because that is how you're you're often going to come across them Never Say Never this is uh this is not necessarily using the cliché but kind of a play on words soon as you say my child would never here they come nevering like they've never nevered before so it's like you say as soon as you say my child would never um you know cheat and it's like well here they come cheating like they've never cheated before this is an

another expression that you could use to emphasize that somebody is doing something excessively so this is a fun way of using the word never my child would never do this and then here they come nevering like they've never nevered before that they were just doing a lot of this thing what do you think and by the way I there are so many this is this is just a small sample of clichés there are so many clichés in spoken English you hear them all the time like I said I feel like you're you use them as well which is fine this is great vocabulary to know because because we often use these phrases our vacation was over in the blink of an eye this is an idiom if you say something happens in the blink of an eye it happens very quickly and uh kind of like suddenly our vacation was over in the blink of the eye I guess it's true what they say there's that you know let me introduce my cliché M when you're M so which cliché is going to appropriately end this uh you know this this statement our vacation was over in the blink of an eye I guess it's true what they say what and I yeah I feel like I'm it is very unoriginal but I guess I I'm guilty of using this cliché as well as some of the other ones and it's okay it is okay to use them in spoken English so well done uh Heidi Ava Leonardo uh dwit just give a few shout outs time flies when you're having having fun so you would use this to say that yeah time seems to pass more quickly when one is enjoying oneself I sure that you thought wow it's been you know it's been 30 minutes already that's crazy it feels like it's just been five minutes we've been learning these clichés yeah it's true what they say time flies when you're having fun you're having fun building your vocabulary learning these different Expressions so that now you can go out and use them and I hope you are able to use them this is a fun little cartoon this is how I feel if I every time I've run a couple of different marathons and both times I felt the same way it takes a long time because I don't feel like I'm having fun and they're saying like are we having fun yet as though okay this is you this is not fun it's it feels like it's taking forever but if something goes quickly like vacation or these lessons when you watch them uh you think wow time flies time flies when you're having fun and of course you could just say um you know like time flies so these are the the clichés that we were talking about remember remember remember remember what I showed you at the very beginning uh just as a little bit of review that a cliché is a phrase or remark that you people use them so often that it is just it's it's unoriginal and they say not interesting but I still think in my opinion they are incredibly useful in spoken

English because we use them quite often and and hopefully you can now go out and use some of these as well I hope you enjoyed the lesson as always I hope you learned something new if you did then yeah I I would appreciate it if you hit the like button um you know again only time will tell if it happens but I feel like you know we are are in this together I want to help you out we're you're you're not alone all for one one for all and if you don't hit the like button today you can come back tomorrow and do it better late than never and I won't I won't feel that sad and of course you know time heals all wounds and I trying to just use them randomly right now but I do have to end the lesson it's going to happen the you know the writing is on the wall all right we got to we got to wrap things up so uh I hope you enjoyed it um you know click that link if you want to join the community get these lesson notes uh and

SUPER USEFUL IDIOMS | Talk about Friends & Family

hey everyone today i have a very fun idiom lesson for you about friends and family and idioms are great because we use them quite often just in everyday conversation they're very casual they're very informal as you are learning these idioms i want you to think about your family i want you to think about your friends and your experiences because that's going to help you better remember the meaning so the first idiom that i have for you is a spitting image and you would say that someone is a spitting image of someone else and what this means is that a person closely resembles this other person so when you're talking about a family and i i think often you're talking about either the the father and the son or the father and the daughter or the mother in the son or the mother and the daughter you would say that that this person the child is a spitting image of their parent that is how it's most commonly used he's a spitting image of his father isn't he perfect you're the spinning image of your future son his blood runs in my veins this is a spitting image of old bootstrap bill the next idiom is runs in the family and this is talking about inheriting traits from other people in your family your your parents your grandparents and you would say that that this trait this characteristic it runs in the family for example i i have blue eyes and i can say well you know blue eyes it runs in the family or perhaps you're talking about somebody's hair color maybe they have red hair and you say well you know it runs in the family that this characteristic this trait is inherited from other family members it runs in the family it doesn't always have to be referring to a physical characteristic you could talk about somebody's behavior or their mannerisms as well perhaps maybe something that's not good perhaps somebody's a criminal and you'd say well yeah that that runs in the family the parents the grandparents they were also criminals so maybe it runs in the family don't get mad at her it's a couple little strokes runs in the family you have pandazma you that running family i guess stubbornness runs in the family then we have an idiom that i i think has become more popular in recent times and that is describing someone as a helicopter parrot and if somebody is a helicopter parent it means that they are giving way too much attention to the child and not attention i think in a good way it's think about it it's like they're hovering over the child everything that they do they are not leaving the child side even as the the child gets older and becomes a teenager and they're still kind of controlling their lives you could refer to this parent as a helicopter parent it's not a it's not a compliment if somebody is being called a helicopter parent it may be to me it means they're a little overbearing they're too controlling they're too involved in their child's life a helicopter parent you have to hover over your kid's shoulder to force them to succeed it's called helicopter parenting gave me space kids love that didn't want to be a helicopter parent i think we should let the kids just work it out i'm not really into helicopter parenting like you are then you may hear somebody say a chip off the old block and i think this is more this is more of an older idiom so it's good for your comprehension you may hear it in a tv show or a movie but if you hear someone say a chip off the old block they're they're referring to the child is much like either the father or the mother in some way you would say they're they're a chip off the old block often i think a parent would be talking about their children to some other person and they say you know my son he's a he's a chip off the old block he's just like me or my daughter you know she is a chip off the old block she is just like uh her mother she likes to eat a variety of food just like her mother she's a chip off the old block she's by stick i love that she's a chip off the old block elroy you're a genius i am a regular chip off the old block the next idiom is like taking candy from a baby and this is just a simile you're comparing two things and you're saying that something is easy something is very easy it's like taking candy from a baby because if a baby had some candy well it would not be very difficult just to reach out and grab it and take it from them and you could say well this is easy it's like taking candy from a baby often i think it's used to describe some some situation in which you have to accomplish some kind of goal and you have to complete some tasks and you're like well you know it's gonna be easy it's gonna be like taking candy from a baby and that is how it's done like taking candy from a baby what do you think jackie i mean we got a case like taking candy from a baby speaking of candy the next idiom is like a kid in a candy store and this idiom is referring to the way that somebody is acting and it just means that they are very excited about something they're almost acting in a bit of a childish way they're so excited and usually i think people are describing themselves when they say this and they're like you know i i visited this place and i was like a kid in a candy store i was so excited i was running all around i couldn't believe my eyes i was like a kid in a candy store what corpse should we unearth i feel like a kid in a candy store it's college basketball and i'm like a kid in the cabin then we have to sleep like a baby this is again a simile comparing pro mostly yourself to a baby because when you sleep like a baby it just means that you are in some deep sleep and you are getting a lot of rest and you'd say you know well last night i i was so comfortable i slept like a baby i think generally people use this when somebody would ask and they'd say you know oh how did you sleep how did you sleep last night you could say you know i slept like a baby i slept very well just like a baby would sleep so i slept like a baby yeah it's done i'm gonna sleep like a baby i've come a very long way to see you i couldn't sleep tonight usually i sleep like a baby he's probably sleeping like a baby right now i'm sure he's wide awake full of guilt do you ever feel that way no when i go home at night i sleep like a baby then we have to pop the question and this is an idiom that i think is very common many of you may already be familiar with it because to pop the question means to propose to someone to ask someone's hand in marriage and you in that case you are popping the question will you marry me you popped the question carl is about to pop the question you mean like marriage i cannot believe my son is gonna pop the question where did he bob the question what did you say said no can we drop it now it wasn't a real proposal the next idiom is breadwinner and you would say that someone is the breadwinner and this is referring to a person in the family who earns the money and and earns the money to support the family so you could be talking about the either the man or the woman and you could say well you know he he has a very good job he's the breadwinner or maybe she has a much better job and you say well well she's the breadwinner in the case that both the man and the woman work then typically you would be referring to the person who earns the most money who is supporting the family more financially that person is the breadwinner oh and i want to thank you for putting me under the added pressure of being the sole breadwinner now lindsay the bead business taken off is it actually i am the breadwinner michael as it turns out i am the sole breadwinner in my house there's no other source of income the next idiom which i i think is a great idiom even though the meaning is not that great and that is black sheep and if you're talking about a family and you say that someone is the black sheep it just means they are different than everybody else but typically different in a way that is that's not good perhaps they're even disrespected by the other family members and you say well that person you know they're a bit of a black sheep i i think it doesn't always have to be something bad but more just different perhaps even a little unusual that the way they're acting the way they're behaving the way they're conducting their life they're they're just different from the rest of the family someone is a black sheep everybody thinks i'm the black sheep i'll show them what a black sheep can do since before the dawn of time i have been designated the black sheep of miami this label is permanent i can't erase it and i can't trade it in for a new one do you know what's a black sheep no it's like when you're different to everyone else like me i look different so those were all idioms that were related to the family now i want to talk to you about idioms that deal with friends and talking about friends and the first one that i want to talk to you about is like two peas in a pod and if you say that two people two friends are like two peas in a pod it just means that they are very close they always do things together you you never find them apart and you would say well you know they're like two peas in a pod we should commemorate this one with a selfie oh look at us two peas in a pod he's awesome he's always up he's always happy i mean he and i are best buds we're like two peas in a pod next is the idiom to have friends in high places and when you say that you have friends in high places it just means that you have friends who are influential or friends who are powerful they have some kind of position in which they can wield influence or power you can say you know i have friends in high places i personally don't have friends in high places that's okay it's not very important to me but yeah i don't know anybody who's powerful or really influential so yeah i don't have any friends in high places waste of time deputy we have friends in very high places oh it's hurt me i'm not liked in washington i know that but i do have friends in high places i've made a lot of friends in high place in this case the costa rican government then we have the idiom a shoulder to cry on and this is just talking about a friend who is willing to listen to someone else's problem we often use it with the verb have or need you could say that hey you know tell your friend you know you have a shoulder to cry on if you need to talk to me i will listen to your problems or perhaps you want somebody else to listen and you say well i just need a shoulder to cry on i need someone to listen to my problems i need a shoulder to cry on you deserve better lizzy lizzy someone you can talk to a shoulder to cry on and starting to realize that she has to settle for less the moment she needs a shoulder to cry on bam i say you tell alex your heart belongs to penny i provide her a shoulder to cry on and then roughly half a year later i give it to her good then there's the idiom to bury the hatchet and when two people bury the hatchet it just means that they are ending some sort of conflict often i think of perhaps their two friends they get into an argument they're fighting each other and they need to make up they need to bury the hatchet they need to end this conflict you can use it when talking about friends but you could also use it when talking about maybe colleagues at work or even with your boss or somebody else that you know that there's some kind of conflict that exists and you need to end that conflict you need to bury the hatchet what the hell are you doing on my property look it's time we bury the hatchet seriously ari what about us would you like to talk about i'd like to bury the hatchet the animosity between the two of us has run its course you can pass that on to spencer too can you please bear the hatchet with her i'm sick of taking sides next is the idiom to hit it off and if you say that that two people hit it off it just means that they become friends quickly and they really get along with each other and it's kind of like a sudden friendship and say wow you know they really hit it off you can use it to talk about friends or even perhaps if you're dating someone you go out on a date and you had a very nice connection you could say yeah we we really hit it off you and her hit it off define hit us off did she continue talking to you once you'd fixed her computer the whole night was amazing we totally hit it off and your mother she's been calling me all week she wants to go to a spinning class with me what is up with that i thought you two hit it off next is the idiom to build bridges and when you're talking about building bridges you're talking about trying to make a friendly relationship between two people or even groups of people that you need to build some bridges and have friendly relationships with with this person or with these people maybe you don't get along with your boss and it's just a problem and you need someone's shoulder to cry on and you're telling your friend about this problem and they give you some advice and they say you know you really need to build some bridges you need to build bridges with your boss so that so that you guys have a friendly relationship you can get along because you work together it's important to build bridges in times of crisis wise build bridges the foolish build barriers then we have to strike up a friendship and this is an idiom that just means to form a friendship to have a friendship so if two people become friends you could say yeah you know they they struck up a friendship or maybe you are going into some place where you want to meet new friends you say you know i really hope to strike up some new friendships i want to make friends with other people come on i spent five hours together maybe they struck up a friendship whatever you struck up she should be sick of it by now then there's the idiom to know someone inside out and if you say that you know someone inside out then it means that you know this person very well so you may be talking about your friend you say yeah you know i know my best friend inside out i know everything they like i know everything they dislike you could also use it when talking about a family member you're very close with your family you could say yeah i know my brother i know my sister i know them inside out we can also use this idiom when not just talking about a person but perhaps even a topic a subject and you know something inside out so for example you could say i've been working on this presentation really hard i know it inside out or maybe if we're talking about traveling and say well i've been to this place a dozen times i know it inside out i know it really well actually going to go ahead and give her a call to views to date so i know we're inside now i think i can handle being a candidate's wife i know all the issues inside and out you know the product inside and out you are the horse that i would bet on so i just want you to know that if you have any problems learning english and trying to build your vocabulary let me know you always have a shoulder to cry on because you and me we're like two peas in a pod and especially let me know if you are a powerful and influential person because i would love to have some friends in high places all right so i i hope that you're now able to go out and and use some of these idioms in your everyday conversations especially when you're talking about friends and family they are so common they are so useful that's all for right now i hope you learned some new idioms and i will see you next time

SUPER USEFUL PHRASAL VERBS w/ FALL | Build Your Vocabulary

let's talk about fall phrasal verbs and i'm not really talking about the fall season i'm talking about phrasal verbs that all have the word fall and phrasal verbs can be confusing for a couple of different reasons you have the verb followed by a preposition and when that preposition changes well the meaning is likely going to change and phrasal verbs many of them have multiple meanings as well and as we go through the lesson i will talk to you about that and the one thing that i will really try to do as i teach you these different phrasal verbs is to give you some context and talk about well how you might often hear people use these phrasal verbs or how you can use them if you're having a conversation with someone else let me quickly introduce myself in case this is your first time here my name is wes the channel is interactive english it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals if that is what you would like to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that you will learn about future lessons let's start with our first phrasal verb our first fall phrasal verb which is to fall apart and if you say that something falls apart it's really it just means it's breaking into many pieces or you could use it to refer to something that's that's breaking in general so maybe you you build something it breaks into many pieces you could say well it fell apart or if i have something like maybe a table somebody could say well yeah this table it's really old it's falling apart it's not literally breaking into all these different pieces you're really just saying it's kind of breaking down in general it's not it's not working very well you need a new table because this one is falling apart well we could use the extra money and this house is falling apart then we have fall behind and this means that you you fail to do something fast enough or on time or even that you're you're just able to maintain some level so i think people often use this with work and maybe they have a project and they have other things that they need to do and you could say yeah i'm falling behind with my work or in in the context of education especially when you're talking about trying to maintain a certain level if you're having difficulty in a class and you feel like all the other students are getting ahead of you then you could say well the class is so difficult i i think i'm starting to fall behind and i'm not able to maintain a certain level fall behind spring session you'd be expected to tutor so it doesn't fall behind in that respect your classroom experience may actually be of use fall through this phrasal verb means that something is just not going to happen and i think quite often we use this to talk about plans we have things that we want to do we hope that they happen but if they don't then you could say this weekend my plans just fell through and it's not going to happen that was great what are you doing here something fell through so i was able to come back a few days early then i have a three-word phrasal verb for you which is to fall back on and what this means is that you use something especially in the form of financial support when everything else has failed and you might say that well i'm i'm i can't find a job right now and that's okay because i can always fall back on my savings and i have that financial support that i can fall back on uh what's your financial situation like do you have savings to fall back on do you come from wealth or no no no and then i have a very common phrasal verb which is fall down it means to well just fall to the ground or floor and you could use this to talk about a person or a thing now it is a little similar but also different than fall over which really means in that case that something is well falling on its side that when it was vertical so if i were to use them maybe interchangeably i could say i i tripped and fell down it's the same as like well i tripped and fell over because i'm no longer standing and i'm on my side if i were to say something like i hung a painting and yesterday it fell down because it's probably falling to the ground or floor you're not going to use fall over in that case and because of that i think it's so much more common to use fall down fall down an elevator shaft what the hell does this mean i fall down an elevator shaft i don't know i just bring the scripts still it's good to be a little more specific depending on the context if you want to say something is on its side it's not vertical anymore it fell over what you doing down there i fell over what you fell over i don't do it on purpose and then we have fall off which has a couple of different meanings so the first one is that something becomes detached or separated from something else i hung a painting and then the next day it fell off the wall and often i think people will say what what this thing is second meaning of fallout is to become loose and separate from your head or mouth so think about it this way you could say that somebody's hair is falling out or maybe you have a tooth it's a little loose and then it falls out so in this case when talking about well like hair or teeth you're not going to use fall off you will use fall out mrs simpson there's no physical reason why your hair should be falling out then we have fall for also two meanings the first one is that well you you develop romantic feelings for someone and you could say if somebody were saying well i'm falling for him or i'm falling for her they're talking about developing those romantic feelings oh my god you're falling for him i am not the second meaning is to be tricked or fooled by something and a very i think a common expression you might hear in a tv show or movie is like oh i fell for the oldest trick in the book and that just means that you were tricked or deceived by something that you should have known better because it happens quite often the ring i can't believe you fell for the oldest trick in the book and then there's fall into also a couple of different meanings the first one is that well you go into something like somebody falls into the pool or you could also say that you suddenly have a condition and you might fall into a coma hey michael did you fall into a koi pond uh i can't really hear you i i think we sort of have a bad connection jim did michael fall into a koi pond look like the cabin depressurized and fell into a coma or something oh i'm fine sit sit and then there are some useful idioms that have this phrasal verb you could say that something falls into place that things happen in a satisfactory way without any problems and things just fall into place doing this mall tour and he came here to our mall it was like everything was finally falling into place you know like it was um fate you could also use the idiom to fall in someone's lap and when something falls into your lap it really refers to well something happens in an unexpected way that you were not planning for you weren't trying to get this it just it just falls into your lap and you're often referring to something that's positive something desirable maybe you could say well i wasn't looking for a new job but this opportunity just fell into my lap it's up to you to make the best of it and it's not like opportunity is just going to fall into your lap i hope that you found this lesson useful i hope you learned something new and that you can well now go out there and try to use some of these phrasal verbs in everyday conversation they are pretty common they are very useful and i hope that it you understand it a bit better talking about some of the context in which we use these different phrasal verbs if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

SUPER USEFUL PHRASAL VERBS w/ SPRING | Build Your Vocabulary

spring is upon us and you may not know that just looking at those trees in the background but today i don't want to teach you about the spring season i want to teach you some advanced phrasal verbs that all have the verb spring in it and if you enjoy learning phrasal verbs please subscribe turn on notifications so that i can become your english teacher my name is wes and that's what interactive english is all about just trying to help you practice and improve your english skills so i am going to teach you the meaning of the phrasal verb i'm also going to give you a little more context as to how people will use the phrasal verb and then i'll also show you some clips from tv shows and movies because well they're just fun to watch so let's begin with our first phrasal verb which is to spring for something and it what it means if somebody springs for something it means that they pay for something often unexpectedly and typically generously for for someone else and the one thing i'll say about this phrasal verb is that you're you're likely to hear people use it in the past tense to refer to something that they bought so i could say surprisingly the boss sprang for everyone's lunch that it was unexpected and it was also generous or maybe i go travel with a friend and i could say my friend sprang for the flights the hotel and all the food it was very generous of them to to pay for this to spring for something no i think she's going to want to do these together you know she's praying for some champagne more importantly this is a fancy outfit all right i sprang for the three button jacket it was eight dollars extra the next phrasal verb is to spring on and the way that you would use this is you're going to spring something on someone and what this phrasal verb means is to suddenly ask or tell someone something that they just do not expect and you may often hear people apologize and then use this phrasal verb and they may say something like hey sorry to spring this on you but and then they would suddenly tell you something that you just don't expect like sorry to spring this on you but can you work over the weekend and it's probably not something you want to do and then you could respond and say hey how could you spring this on me at the last minute and you you may hear people use it with that question as well or say how could you spring this on me at the last second and suddenly ask or tell me this thing

i'm i'm very sorry to spring this on you but um it's incredibly urgent are these divorce papers sorry to spring this on you but i didn't think it would be a problem and i'm going to spring something on you right now and maybe you expect it maybe you don't but it's it's good news so i'm not going to apologize and what i'm going to spring on you is that you can now join my speaking course if you'd like to practice and improve your speaking skills speak directly with me and just click on the link down below and when you do there is a special discount just for you the course is all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally to help you speak confidently each week there is a different speaking topic we do engaging activities help you build your vocabulary and all of it is just to give you a little more confidence when you're having a conversation to help you speak clearly each lesson we warm up with something related to pronunciation or connected speech and there are also pronunciation video lessons included in the course and it's not just gonna help you speak clearly but i think it will really help your listening comprehension as well and when it comes to speaking naturally we're going to talk about some of the language nuances when to use certain words and phrases practice using idioms as well as using a variety of different ways to express some common ideas so click on the link down below in the description if you'd like to join or learn more about the course and i just hope to speak to you soon so now let's get back to our spring phrasal verb lesson and the next phrasal verb that i have for you is spring up and what this means is to appear or exist suddenly and people might use this to talk about like the land uh maybe i could say weeds are springing up all over the lawn or people may also use this to refer to businesses if i were to say new cafes have sprung up all over town these past couple of years so to spring up is to appear suddenly this just sprang up you know what i think it is it's the mark of buddha why didn't you stay at the elvis tent city that sprang up on my lawn the next phrasal verb is spring from and this one actually has two meanings so the first meaning is to come from or appear suddenly i could say that the cat sprang from behind the bushes and then clocks are getting ready to spring forward not yet but i think in a couple of weeks they're going to spring forward and i will have to set it one hour ahead so spring forward spring ahead they mean the same thing you could use either one i miss you when i close my eyes during a sneeze i miss you when the clock springs ahead an hour we'll never get that time back times i get confused too especially during daylight savings time spring forward fall back we even have calendars in the wizards realm then we have spring back and this means to return to the original position after being bent forced or when pressure is removed and i think often an actual spring is involved in this that curved piece of metal maybe you're putting force and pressure down on something and then when you let go it just springs back to the original position so think of a diving board after someone dives into the pool the diving board will spring back to the original position and i told you that this this phrasal verb it's not it's very specific so it's not common and i actually could not find a video clip using this phrasal verb so let's just move on and right now i want to teach you some useful phrases with the word spring some bonus phrases and the first one that i have is spring to life and if you say that a person or group of people springs to life it means that they become active and lively again and think of it that people might use it when you're talking about somebody who is maybe a little sleepy or they're just not fully aware and then something happens and they suddenly spring to life maybe at um a football match the the team is losing and then the crowd sprang to life when they scored a goal and you could even use this with the the word back and say that someone springs back to life and in that case you could think of it like they're returning to that position of being active and lively and they spring back to life the creature sprang back to life so i plunged the sword back into the hag's chest then we have spring into action and this one's a little similar to spring to life but it means to suddenly become active start moving or start working and someone springs into action and i think people may often use this phrase when perhaps telling a story and describing what happens and they say that someone sprang into action and it really captures that suddenness and they said they needed 20 cc's of george michael stack so just wham i sprang into action you know me then we have the phrase a spring in one step and this means that someone is walking energetically and in a way that shows that they're happy and confident and often i think you might hear people use this phrase to well describe someone else and maybe you're wondering why they are happy and walking the way they are and you could say that you notice that someone has a spring in their step and you're wondering what's going on pete's having an affair what lipstick the spring in his step you look marvelous you've got quite the spring in your step has your leg going back so i hope you learned some new phrasal verbs in this lesson and if you did please hit that like button and if you want to spring into action and and join my speaking course and speak directly with me just click on that link down below and yeah you could you could spring for this course which is going to be a generous treat for yourself so that that's all i'm going to say about that thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

SUPER USEFUL PHRASES | Binomial Pair Quiz

i read you um and clear which word completes that sentence i read you um and clear and and really i want you to focus on the last part of the sentence um and clear because that is a binomial pair which is what we're going to talk about in today's lesson so i hope that after just listening to me say this that you know that the answer is loud i read you loud and clear so loud and clear is a phrase that means that something is easy to understand and follow so instead of telling somebody yes i understand what you're saying you could say hey i read you loud and clear i understand exactly what you're talking about so binomial pairs are very common in spoken english these are informal phrases that have two words that are connected by a conjunction and the conjunction is often and or or but not always and these phrases are typically fixed as well you're not going to change around the the word order very often so as i mentioned these words are very common in just casual conversation like this next one right here first and um i want you to subscribe to the channel and turn on notifications and yes this is something that i would love it if you would do that first and um so this is another binomial pair and the answer is foremost first and foremost so it's really an introductory phrase that you may hear somebody use this if they're giving a presentation and what it means is most importantly so i could say most importantly or first and foremost i would love it if you subscribe to the channel turn on notifications so that i can become your teacher my name is wes and that's what interactive english is all about just trying to help you practice and improve your english skills and today i want to help you build your vocabulary with some of these binomial pairs the next one that i have for you i just want to relax and calm down i really need some um and quiet okay how would you complete that sentence and quiet this i think is a pretty well-known binomial pair and i'm guessing you probably knew the answer which is peace peace and quiet i just want to relax and calm down i really need some peace and quiet peace and quiet means that you just need freedom from just noise or or activity and just kind of want to get away from a lot of things that are loud and stressful and you want some peace and quiet here is the next one i really enjoy the um and bustle of big cities i really enjoy the um and bustle of big cities think about a big city it's it's very active it's loud and the answer is hustle hustle and bustle i really enjoy the hustle and bustle of big cities so if you're talking about the the hustle and bustle it refers to a lot of activity usually in a noisy surrounding the hustle and bustle it's kind of the opposite of peace and quiet and then i have a question for you how old do you think i am give or um okay how old do you think i am give or um so the last part is the binomial pair give or um and this this is a pretty common phrase i hope that you said the answer is take give or take give or take you would use this when you're talking about numbers like in this case my age and all it means is approximately how old do you think i am give or take and if you have any guesses you can let me know down below in the comments and if you really want to know how old i am i will tell you in person but you just need to join my speaking course and yes that is a sneaky little segue into letting you know that you can sign up for my speaking course if if you are someone who would like to practice and improve their speaking skills just click on the link down in the description if you'd like to join and when you click on that link there is a special discount just for you so the course is all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally to help you speak confidently each week there are different speaking topics we do engaging speaking activities i'll help you build your vocabulary and all of this is just to give you more confidence when you're having a conversation to help you speak clearly each lesson we warm up with pronunciation connected speech there are also pronunciation video lessons and i not only is this going to help you speak clearly but i also think it's great for your listening comprehension and when it comes to speaking naturally we'll talk about some of the language nuances when to use certain words and phrases practice using idioms as well as look at different ways that you can express a variety of ideas so just click on the link down in the description if you'd like to sign up and improve your speaking fluency and i just hope to speak to you soon now let's get back to our binomial pair quiz which i'm sure you've gotten all of them correct so far and i want to change things up a little bit this time i am going to give you the meaning and i want you to tell me well what binomial pair am i talking about and to give you a little bit of a hint i am going to give you the first letter all right of each of the two words in the phrase and i'm i'm just going to give you five seconds to think of the answer and then i will tell you so the this one right here it refers to the

going back and forth because i couldn't make a final decision so it does not always have to refer to actually moving in one direction or the other as i just mentioned you could use it when talking about well changing your mind and you keep going back and forth and back and forth i can be rather indecisive so i tend to go back and forth the next one when you entertain someone typically taking them out to a fine meal what are you doing so the answer is whine and dine when you whine and dine someone you are taking them out trying to entertain them and generally you're taking them to a nice restaurant but it doesn't have to be you're really just trying to show them a good evening and you're trying to whine and dine someone then we have this next phrase damage or depreciation resulting from ordinary use and the answer is wear and tear so if you're talking about just using something just ordinary use then over time there's going to be a little bit of wear and tear and typically you would use this talking about like some item that's that's used so you might have uh some furniture that has some wear and tear or maybe you're trying to sell something like a bicycle and you tell them yeah the bicycle has some minor wear and tear but it's in good condition and then there's this binomial pair having no legal force or validity what do you think so the answer is null and void this is a phrase that you might hear people use when they're talking about some kind of agreement perhaps a contract and they say look it has no no legal force whatsoever it's null and void now i want to switch things up again because just to just show you how common these phrases are i'm going to give you some examples of binomial pairs being used in movies music and tv shows and i just want you to guess the the binomial pair so well before i show you these first videos i i want you to think about well the tone in which these people are speaking and and how they feel all right trying to give you a little bit of a hint here we go i'm excited i have nobody seen injustices i'm um of it i'm um of having nobody i'm um of seeing injustices so i i told you to keep in mind like the tone and feeling because these people were clearly upset and the missing binomial pair is sick and tired you're sick and tired of something i'm sick and tired of it i'm sick and tired of having nobody i'm sick and tired of seeing injustices this means that you are extremely annoyed with someone or some situation and you just cannot tolerate it anymore and you're going to follow this binomial pair with the preposition of you're sick and tired of someone or you're sick and tired of something and then in 1971 the grass roots came out with this very popular song that uses the binomial pair well a lot in the song and i'm not i can't play you the song because of copyright so uh i'm you'll i'm gonna hum it as well as uh sing it and i apologize for for my singing love is gonna get you [Music] okay i apologize for my singing i told you if anything it would just make things more challenging to have to listen to that but the missing binomial pair is sooner or later sooner or later love is gonna get you so like i said this is a popular song one that you would still hear today you would hear it in tv shows and movies and sooner or later it means that something is definitely going to happen you just you're just not exactly sure when it's going to happen and you could use this binomial pair sooner or later and then i have another set of videos for you so see if you can identify the missing binomial pair dr evil over the last 30 years virtucon has grown by you're just progressing by his insubordination is growing so for this one the key word is by has grown by is progressing by is growing by and the answer is leaps and bounds dr evil over the last 30 years birchikon has grown by leaps and bounds you're just progressing by leaps and bounds his insubordination is growing by leaps and bounds and really you're going to use buy before saying leaps and bounds buy leaps and bounds it just means that something is well growing very fast and very quickly and i could say that i hope that your vocabulary is growing by leaps and bounds when you watch these video lessons i have another song for you because in 1981 joan jett in the black hearts came out with this hit song i love um it's just not the same when you you cut it off like that so i love so put another dime in the jukebox baby i love so come and take your time and dance with me so it's a very it's a very famous and well-known song and the phrase that's missing is rock and roll i love rock and roll now in the song they're talking about rock and roll like the music genre using this as a binomial pair the meaning is different okay it's still you're saying rock and roll but i it was a creative way of introducing this so rock and roll is a music genre but you can use it as a binomial pair to mean well let's start something let's begin so if somebody were to say hey let's rock and roll what they're really saying is well let's begin let's start and they're typically excited to start this thing let's rock and roll and here are a few more videos for you it is over i won congratulations you won congratulations you won notice that they're talking about some type of competition they said congratulations you won and perhaps they're telling the other person that they won honestly and fairly which is a big hint because fair is part of this binomial pair fair and square that is the answer congratulations you won fair and square it is over i won fair and square congratulations you won fair and square congratulations you won fair and square and if you tell someone that they won fair and square you're just saying that they won honestly and according to the rules so to get a little review i could tell you i hope that you enjoyed taking the quiz and that you did not go ahead and look up all the answers beforehand i hope that you that you played fair and square and i'm sure that right now perhaps you're you're going back and forth between uh watching another video lesson or clicking on the link to sign up for my speaking course but i would say that well you can you don't have to go back and forth you can do both and if you do both then your english skills will improve by leaps and bounds and if this lesson if it was easy to understand and follow just let me know you can write to me in the comments and say loud and clear because that'll tell me that it was easy for you to understand these different phrases and their meaning and i'm sure right now you're probably sick and tired of my rambling and that's why i am going to just wrap things up and ask you once again to hit that like button if you enjoyed the lesson and tell you thank you so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

in today's lesson i want to talk to you about different ways that you can say that something is coming up that something is about to happen it could be a birthday or a festival or maybe even your favorite season and i'm also going to try and give you a little bit more information as to when you might use these different phrases and i will show you some videos so that you can see how these phrases are used in context let me take a quick moment introduce myself my name is wes the channel is interactive english which is all about trying to help you practice and improve your english skills so if that's what you want to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that you will learn about future lessons let's begin with the our first phrase which is right around the corner and you could also say just around the corner or even round the corner so either one of these i probably say that something uh is right around the corner it's going to happen soon and often i think you're referring to something that you look forward to perhaps you're you're excited about this and i say wow the vacation it's right around the corner or just around the corner or around the corner christmas is right around the corner thanksgiving breaks right around the corner love is just around the corner bonus time is just around the corner another common phrase is coming up and if you say that something is coming up it just well it means it's going to happen soon and and often i think you're talking about like uh a specific date and some maybe event that's going to occur on that date and you know it's going to happen perhaps like a birthday i think people often use this when talking about birthdays and you say this to someone you know your birthday is coming up kind of as a reminder that okay you know this is going to happen and maybe you're you're just stating it as a matter of fact you know marge and i have an anniversary coming up hi sheldon what's up well i'm calling because thanksgiving is coming up and i wanted to offer you the aquarium tickets a phrase very similar to that is to say that something is approaching that it's it's getting closer again you could refer to a specific date like a birthday and if you want to even be more specific if it's going to happen very soon then you could say well something is fast approaching graduation is fast approaching and it's time to award the title of senior class valedictorian right now i want to tell you something that is right around the corner it's coming up and that is the next speak up course it is my speaking course that is all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally it is fast approaching if you would like to enroll each week we talk about different topics uh we do different speaking activities so you will be learning with me speaking with me as well as your other classmates so if you are interested in signing up check out that link down below in the description to learn more about the course as well as the class times that it is offered it is coming up it's fast approaching so please check that out we now return you to our regularly scheduled program you can also use the phrase and say that something will be here before you know it and in this case i think you're saying that you're referring to something that you really anticipate that you're really looking forward to you're excited about

is upon us and it's probably not a phrase that you are going to use very often but it is something that you may hear in tv shows and movies but if you're going to refer to something like a season that lasts over a longer period of time perhaps it's going to bring about great change like winter and then you could say winter is upon us war is upon us the apocalypse is upon us winter is almost upon us kill the boy and let the man be born on the horizon so this it's another phrase that you are probably not just going to use all the time but it's a good one to know because if you say that something is on the horizon it means that you know it's something's going to happen soon but perhaps you don't know exactly when it's going to happen and you could say well it's just it's just on the horizon it's like you can see it but you don't know exactly when it's going to happen it's going to be soon maybe that job promotion it's it's on really like them yet either but i think i'm gonna there's a stormer brewing down there on its way so this is a phrase that i think is actually a lot more common and you would use this to refer to something that will arrive soon something physical probably something that you may have sent if you're talking about like the mail like a box you send a box to someone and then you let them know hey it's on its way it's going to arrive soon it's on its way transport's already on its way the ac is on its way where's the fight on its way then we have the phrase in the cards this is uh an informal phrase i think it's even a bit of an idiom and that you say that it's a way of saying that something will likely happen and it's not one that you're probably going to hear very often but you could hear it in the context of somebody trying to like predict the future or something that might happen and you could say that it's in the cards maybe you want to ask somebody out on a date and you're kind of flirting with this person and you're asking them do you think like at some point we could go out and get dinner and then the other person replies well yeah i think it's in the cards i think this is something that will likely happen it's in the cards i'm just saying doesn't look like band camp is in the cards so it's in the cards look at our chance to make history i'm just saying telling the truth is not in the cards right now next is the phrase on the verge of something and you're probably going to use it with the verb to be to be on the verge of something and well that of something is pro it's probably going to refer to some type of discovery some breakthrough that it's getting ready to happen it's so exciting you could say yes you are on the verge of making this new discovery dr cooper is on the verge of a breakthrough on the verge of major discovery now you are on the verge of making an irreversible mistake mr vice president if you enjoyed this lesson and learn some new phrases please hit that like button and of course you can check out one of these other lessons i i think it's in the cards or at least i hope it's in the cards and then an entirely new video lesson will be here before you know it so don't worry thank you guys so much for watching and i will see you next time so long

SUPER USEFUL PHRASES | Expressing Ability vs Inability

hello and welcome to today's lesson this is it's going to be a vocabulary lesson and I want to talk to you about some useful phrases if you want to talk about your abilities and that well maybe you're good at doing something or perhaps your inability some things that maybe you need to work on and you need to practice a little more so hello thank you guys for joining me hello uh Vicky Gustav rafella takayo good to see you let's uh let's move into the first part and again just kind of introducing and talking a little bit about the topic so there are many many different ways that you can say you're either good at something or you're not good at it this is just these are a couple of examples like he is good at teaching English or he sucks at teaching English these are two common ways to express ability or inability the one thing that I want you to keep in mind as we go through and talk about these phrases and I would like you to participate and give me some examples write them in the chat or write to write them in the comments is keeping in mind some of the things like grammar are we talking about an adjective or like good or a verb like to suck at something is it followed by a preposition which preposition are you going to use if the preposition changes does that change the meaning and also small things like well is this a phrase that's going to come at the beginning of a statement or even at the end so these are the things that I'd like to talk to you a little bit about as we go through some of these different phrases so again welcome to today's lesson um we're gonna talk about ability and inability but before we do that I want to make one quick little announcement and that is just letting you know if you would like to join my speaking course check out the link down in the description this is a course for intermediate to Advanced speakers it's all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly speak naturally we do we we have different topics each week we learn vocabulary related to the topic and again even phrases like uh like these phrases today this is some of the stuff we go over learning how to use them practice using them and of course you can use the code speak20 to get 20 off uh the course so let me I'm going to throw that in the chat right there but yeah check out the link Down Below in the description if you're interested in joining so with all of these lessons as you may or may not know I like to to make them more of a quiz lesson it's more interactive that way so all I want you to do is to complete the sentence and we're starting out with phrases to talk about your ability to do something things that you're good at so just keep that in mind so as far as helping you determine which phrase uh we're talking about so the first one she has a um for negotiating I've given you the meaning but because we're talking about being good at something your ability to do something of course they're they're all going to be very similar but this is a skill or natural ability to do something easily and and well so what could you say I've I've kind of highlighted the phrase in general and given you the first letter excellent so you guys are rocking this first one vb7k2 excellent so yes you guys are right she has a knack for negotiating I'm going to give you some examples but right now also if in the chat in the comments tell me practice using these phrases tell me something that you have a knack for a skill or natural ability you do it easily you do it well so here are some examples that um I'm giving you you have a knack for something if I see some good sentences I'll read those out so you could talk about like the first one I have a knack for falling asleep quickly something that you can do easily or if I were commenting on about somebody else's abilities and say oh he has a knack for telling stories he's just naturally good at doing this and then the last one there's one little slight change that I wanted to make you aware of uh she has

The Knack of being at the wrong place at the wrong time so you'll notice two things instead of anak and using that article I'm using the definite article the and following it with the preposition of I think more often than not more commonly you're going to hear the phrase used a knack for something however and I was trying to find like if it wasn't like a solid rule because you can follow Knack with the preposition of and often when I was looking at example sentences it comes after the definite article thus so it's like you're talking about a specific thing The Knack of something happening so keep that in mind a knack for something or the neck of I wanted to to point that out but I think more often than not you're going to use a knack for something um so let's see so he said I have a and again the word starts with a P I haven't seen it just yet but I'll give you a moment and then I'll tell you the answer and this is a phrase that again you're not going to use it all the time or probably hear it all the time but like I said it's just getting a little bit of that variety uh building your vocabulary that's what it's all about so the word that we're looking for he is extremely proficient you're proficient at coding and that's why I said I think a key word is experience like you have some experience you're proficient at doing this thing all right now I see some good answer excellent Rafaela Julia um promise nice excellent so yeah we're talking about being proficient at something now with this one let me give you some examples and again feel free write some example sentences in the chat in the comments the idea is just to practice using them in context so the one thing which you can see right here is that proficient you may follow it with different prepositions you could be proficient at something proficient in something or proficient with something and I've given you some examples right here trying to let you know well when you would use which preposition so the the first one I'm proficient at setting up a tent okay this is something that yes I have experience with I love camping so I could say oh I'm yeah I'm pretty proficient at setting up a tent and and that's referring to specific things okay the before in the example proficient at coding it's a specific thing the next sentence she is proficient in two languages so proficient in something is often used with subjects uh you might hear somebody oh I'm you know proficient in well you might be proficient in English or proficient in math and you're referring more to a subject if you want to say you're proficient with something he's proficient with knives uh and I forgot to put a full stop at the end there I apologize but in that case we're talking about tools that you may use and you're proficient with this tool in this case somebody is proficient with knives so again this is why prepositions can cause some confusion you could be proficient at proficient in proficient with once again in my opinion I would say that probably proficient at is used more often because you're talking about a specific thing that you are skilled at doing or that you have experience with this thing so somebody says I'm proficient with computers perfect nice uh my I'm proficient at math excellent he is proficient at cooking a plethora of foods my dad is proficient at gardening excellent so again it's all about getting that practice that's what well interactive English is all about especially these lessons right here so the next one she is at problem solving this word starts with an A and again the blanks those are missing letters so I'm telling you right now that this word has one two three four five letters she is at problem solving I would even say again this phrase is more advanced it's probably less commonly used than proficient at but still something you may hear from time to time and again I try to give you some of this more advanced vocabulary hoping that maybe you'll you'll learn something new and it refers to having a natural ability to do something that needs skill so you're talking about something where skill is needed and you have this this ability starts with an A does anybody any any ideas uh which word I'm talking about which adjective and yes excellent the answer is adept so I want to one answer in there perfect she she is adept at problem solving and she has this a skill that's a skill that people need and you have this natural ability you are Adept at this once again once again please write some sentences practice using this phrase in case it's new I see all these answers now I don't know if it's because of the delay or just like oh yeah Adept uh people writing it down perfect so the way that I wanted to present this a little differently instead of me just sharing some sentences with you uh to really show you how it's used in context I just put this in quotes went to news and took some screenshots of some news headlines using this phrase to once again just to show you that yeah you you may come across this if you're reading a book or reading a news article so the first one it says Montreal companies are Adept at meeting employee needs and in this case they're they're doing a good job they have this ability to meet the employee needs uh this is February Creature Feature it says Foxes are surprisingly Adept at and I'll tell you what the rest of the article title was they didn't write it down right there but it was saying that foxes are surprisingly Adept at living among uh human beings so basically where where our environment where people build homes and apartments and they live that foxes are Adept uh surprisingly Adept at living among us and basically with us and close by uh and yes that's something that they're able to do and then that final example I believe this is somebody who plays Cricket they're talking about an athlete Barat Adept at making a challenging task look easy so once again this is a phrase that you're talking about your ability to do something to do it well you are Adept at uh this thing so the let's let's keep moving on um right here again this one I think is a a common one my oh I didn't see sentences I'm not to Adept at writing on the chat okay that's fair fair enough um but it keep keep writing some of these sentences practice using them that's that's that's what I like to see like sorry I didn't get to too many sentences there but I want to look at this one because there are other phrases I need to get through my friend is a um at riding a horse or you could say it riding horses either one and this is to have an inherent or instinctive ability uh in something we're talking about this activity my friend is a um at riding a horse and I see some quick answers with this one sentence that I wanted to say is that if you're not going to use the preposition it is common just to say somebody is a natural but in that case typically you would talk about that something beforehand and we already know what the topic is like oh I've never seen someone play um so well at chess he's a natural and you're making that statement you don't have to follow it every time with that preposition with this one I think it's common to say that somebody is a natural another way of using this phrase would be to use the adjective Natural Born she's a natural born swimmer so Natural Born you would find this phrase before the noun and you would say somebody is a Natural Born something so the different ways that you can use this word and phrase which I think is useful it's helpful to understand some people writing some sentences I'm a natural at helping people okay good I'm a natural at learning English glad to hear that Wally uh she's a natural at acting on stage nice rafella he wants to be a natural at swimming nice then let me see I have I think one more with these abilities and then we'll talk about inability so this is well you see that hyphen in there they are um in the art of deception we're talking about knowing a lot of something and I think this does have to do it's a key word knowledge so I've there are two words I've given you the first letter of each word and once again each of those blanks that is a letter what do you think they are in the art of deception they know a lot about this thing and I hopefully that I'm giving you the first letter of both of those words it makes it a little easier to try to think of the phrase and with this one we are going to follow it with the preposition in you are in something good job um Gabriel Julia Mina promisec sorry if I mispronounce names we're talking about the phrase well versed you're well versed in something you know a lot about this thing and it does make me think a well-versed you have knowledge so it's not necessarily like talking about like a physical ability but knowledge and information nice uh Vicky Gustav Lawley Rafaela perfect so

I'm not going to be I'm not going to read these I know it's small really the point that I wanted to make with this was just highlighting one of the dictionaries that I like to use Cambridge in order to get you know meanings I think they give simple explanations but if you were to scroll down uh not just look at the meaning often they give these examples using the word and they're really citing it from other online articles and what I've done I've just highlighted where they have used the word the only thing I would say is if you're I think reading these sentences it does give you a better idea of like the context and how people use it the grammatical structure which is all very important sometimes I feel like the sentences they provide because it is a news article it may seem a little bit more formal but this is a useful resource not just learning the meaning but then trying to look at some sentences and get a feel for how these phrases are used is also very very important so now we're going to switch gears and we just talked about ways phrases that you can use to express your ability that you're saying you're you're good at something now I want to talk about your well inability if there is something that you well it's you need to work on this thing and you need more maybe you need more practice but you're expressing that and you're talking about either yourself or maybe you're saying like well this other person maybe needs to work on this thing they're not very good um let's look at some of those phrases so the first one and I think I've given you a lot of words so hope maybe this will make this part a little bit easier public speaking is not my um there's two words missing both of them begin with an S and this is a phrase that I really like if you're talking about well a particular skill or ability that a person does not have or in this case not necessarily that they don't have it but they just need more practice they need to work on this thing in order to improve uh perhaps that's a little strong saying that you just don't have uh this ability and I know some of you who have taken my my speak up course we've I think we've talked about this phrase before excellent takayao um rafella Julia Gabrielle we're telling the phrase is strong suit and if you say that something is not your strong suit it's just you're just letting somebody know that okay this is the thing I'm not the best at this thing you could use this in the affirmative

but I I put this under the category of an inability because often I think people will use this phrase in the negative and they're talking about something that they're not good at doing and you could say well it's not really my strong suit so just because I have it here uh talking about inability you could hear people use this in the affirmative and say wow this is you know this is really your strong suit like you're really good at this but often I think people will use this phrase um talking about something they're not good at I've given you some examples here all related to learning English just to follow up and the one other thing I point out is this notice where it is it's often it's going to come uh really at the end of a statement so talking about English like somebody said well English grammar is not my strong suit and it's just something they need to work on and improve or phrasal verbs are not my strong suit I I've I feel like a lot of people will tell me this again they can be very confusing they have multiple meanings and you can say well yeah phrasal verbs they're not my strong suit or making small talk in English is not my strong suit so you're referring to this skill that you just need more practice you need to work on it you need to get better you could say it's not my strong suit strong point I would say point is not really often used if you wanted to refer to in this sentence like you wouldn't really uh put point at the end there um typically I think point would be like an argument if somebody's like well that's not a very strong point like I'm not a strong argument or Reason these idioms are not my strong suit calculus is not my strong suit geometry is definitely not my strong suit

um lodging a complaint is not uh my strong suit uh all right excellent you guys those are some great examples thank you for sharing some sentences let's let's keep sharing some more now well let me just read the sentence and then I'll talk about it American football is not my um I've only given you one letter at the beginning there are three words that are missing and the that first word that's missing it's the begins with the letter c now I will say what I wanted to mention about this because in general we're talking about ability and inability this is not this phrase is not necessarily related to your inability to do something it's more closely associated with your talking about likes and dislikes so in this case something that you just don't really care for that you don't like I wanted to let you know that at the beginning and I think I've probably just given away much of it there seeing all these answers so when something is not like the type of thing that you like uh yes Lolly Rafaela Victor Takaya Ashraf Oleg um we're talking about you know it's not your cup of tea and I'm sure American football is very popular in the United States uh which is where I am from and I really enjoy it but I know for other people who are not from the US they would say yeah it's not really my cup of tea it's not the thing that I enjoy or like the most so keep in mind this is not really associated with the ability or inability but more likes and dislikes something you just don't really care for so here are some examples uh and these are actually personal examples I was trying to think of other things I was like why not write some things that are just not my cup of tea so I would say that horror movies yeah they're just not my cup of tea not thing the types of movies that I like to watch the most early morning flights are not my cup of tea I'm not a morning person I don't like getting up early going to the airport checking in going through all that it's definitely not my cup of tea and Loud bars and restaurants are not my cup of tea I think at one point maybe they were and maybe I feel like I'm I'm getting older or something it just it's just today it's not my cup of tea um yeah if it's just too loud you can't talk you can't have a conversation not my cup of tea uh we have some sentences summer uh is not my cup of tea because most of the time sweltering hot yeah uh cooking is not my cup of tea watching TV is honestly not my cup of tea swimming's not my cup of tea great excellent and I hope I imagine you guys are sharing your your personal feelings about this and I think that's the easiest way to practice think about well what how do you feel what is something that's not your cup of tea or in this case using this other phrase in which case we are talking about uh an inability you can see the meaning right there a small problem or weakness in a person what would you say math has always been my um two words the first one begins with an A and the next one begins with an h and you may be looking at this and you see that capital A that is not a mistake that is that's just part of the phrase it is a um it's a capital capital letter so that's not a mistake uh and again I don't know how you may hear this from time to time um the fact that everybody's kind of throwing those answers in there makes me think okay maybe people have heard this before but it is referring to a weakness if you want to say that yeah you're not really um good at this thing so excellent yeah Lolly Leonel um Ashraf we're talking about the phrase Achilles heel and I will point out that you may find achilles at the end there with an apostrophe like because it would be uh you know incense possessive you may find it without it I just I wrote it without it but in general this is a phrase that you're probably going to use more in spoken English and you're probably not going to find yourself writing it that often but you may or may not find it with an apostrophe at the end of the word so I'm sure obviously we all have weaknesses and you can if you want to tell me um what what is your Achilles heel and write it in the chat or write it in the comments and just practice using the phrase in context it says yes thinking about Brad Pitt in the movie Troy he played the role of Achilles so just to give you some context as to where this phrase comes from Achilles um well-known uh well I don't want to say well known but in the the mythology I I think what happened is that Achilles was in the river sticks maybe I'm gonna get this wrong I apologize was put in the river sticks and then basically was thought to be kind of invincible um except for uh his heel that was the one weakness that he had and eventually I think as The Story Goes he was killed by an arrow that hit his heel and you feel free to correct me if that is an inaccurate interpretation but again it comes from the the story and say something is your Achilles heel and you would find this typically at the end of a statement and um these uh these are true examples for me writing legibly is my Achilles heel if you were to see my handwriting not good not very legible uh I'm also not very good at drawing so I could say yeah drawing is my Achilles heel if I had to do this thing uh it is certainly one of uh my weaknesses and I would also say yeah cooking is my Achilles heel so those are just some examples uh coding has always been my Achilles heel

when I was at school physics uh was my Achilles heel math was my Achilles heel yeah I think you use it a lot um with a subject everyone has an

Achilles heel absolutely we all have weaknesses um my Achilles heel is cleaning the house nice so again you could say that well this is uh my weakness this is not my strong suit this is just another way to Express that and say well this is you know it's my Achilles heel this is my weakness here's another one and I'm kind of curious uh if you guys uh are gonna get this when it comes to dancing I have three missing words and I've given you the first letter of each word maybe I'm giving it away I don't know but this is an informal way of yeah just saying that you are not good at doing this thing and really we're in this context we're talking about inactivity because the meaning is like you're moving in a very awkward way so when it comes to dancing I have what what would you say how would you complete that phrase it's very informal it's casual you may use this in just uh a gen a conversation if you're talking about uh well in this case not being very good at dancing so the answer all right now Lolly Julia nice two left feet so this is a way of expressing think of what it really means if somebody has actually you know two left feet they're not going to be very coordinated when it comes to dancing or moving and you could say you have two left feet I will say more often this phrase is used when talking about dancing but you could use it when referring to any activity in which somebody is really they they really need to use their feet and you could say they have two left feet if you want to say they're not good so here I just give two different examples um because you could say two left feet or two left hands once again giving you my opinion I think it's more common that you you may come across people saying two left feet but if you want to say somebody's not you know there's an activity you need to use your hands you could say oh they have two left hands so the first example he's not very coordinated I think he has two left feet when it comes to playing soccer right and again soccer you need to be coordinated um and if you're not then yeah maybe you'd have two left feet or using the other one two left hands she's unable to catch so when it comes to juggling she has two left hands this is an activity you're using your hands um and you could say that someone has two left hands so it really depends on that the activity that you're talking about two left feet two left hands I would say it's more common to say two left feet and often and people are going to be referring to to dancing um if I were trying my hand at skiing I would surely have two left feet it's a good example skiing you you need to you got to use your feet um so with these lessons my goal is hopefully hopefully um you learn something new today I want to just put a little review slide up here I appreciate you guys again practicing using these phrases in context I added that one down there like to say I used those in the last two examples when it comes to so you could even use that phrase fill in an adjective like to be the best when it comes to this topic or to be terrible when it comes to this activity so that's another phrase that you could use when talking about ability or inability and there are others as well it's not just these but I wanted to highlight some of these and again it's all about building vocabulary getting a little bit of language variety which again is something else we try to do throughout my speaking course check out that description if you're interested in joining and if you did learn something new please hit that like button because I know let me see if I can do a little review I'm I'm pretty sure that that many of you have a knack for learning languages and you are probably fairly proficient in English and I know that some of you may think well you know building vocabulary it's not my strong suit but again as you keep doing it and learning it and not just learning the meaning but learning how these words are used I am confident that you know at the end of the day you will be well versed in these different phrases and you would then go on to tell somebody well look you know English is is definitely my cup of tea using it in the positive and maybe you then talk about something else that you're not good at and then you could say well this is my Achilles heel it's my weakness so if you enjoy the lesson again please hit that like button you can check out the link down in the description if you would like to join my speaking course or learn more about it thank you very much for joining me today Lolly Takaya Vicky Gustav um good to see you Arena Sid uh Sam gidi Theory thanks so much trying to throw out some shout outs Rafaela I will see you in the next speaking course excellent um yeah that's that's about uh that's about all I got I hope you guys uh have a wonderful day and of course I will see you soon for another lesson so long

SUPER USEFUL PHRASES | Ways to Express Ability vs Inability

I am going to teach you many useful phrases that you can use to talk about ability or inability and if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary Please Subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is West the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals now there are many phrases that you can use to talk about ability or inability here are some very common ones if I said he is good at teaching English or inability he sucks at teaching English these are very common phrases but what I would like to do is give you a little bit of variety so that you can use phrases that may be a little more captivating and interesting when talking about these things now before we get started I just want to let you know if you would like to build your vocabulary practice your speaking skills you can check out my speaking course it's for intermediate to Advanced Learners it's it's all about trying to help you speak confidently speak clearly and speak naturally check out the link Down Below in the description if you'd like to sign up or learn more about the course so let's start with ability if you want to say that you're good at something but we don't want to use good at it's very common maybe we want to be a little more precise and in this case you could say you have a knack for something she has a knack for negotiating this means that you have a skill or just a natural ability to do something well and just to give you some more examples uh I could say I have a knack for falling asleep quickly it's something that I can just do naturally or he has a knack for telling stories he does it well and then she has a knack of being at the wrong place at the wrong time one thing that I want to point out is that most of the time you're going to say somebody has a knack for something however ever you may find that it's sometimes followed by the preposition of you have This brilliant Knack of getting your own way now I will say that overwhelmingly I think you're going to say that someone has a knack for doing something I have a knack for Impressions chosen your opponents wise living I have a KN for it the next phrase is proficient at he is extremely proficient at coding this simply means skilled or experienced it's really a way of adding emphasis instead of just saying that someone is good at something you can say they're very proficient at this thing now I would like to point out that you may follow this adjective with either at in or with and I've given you some examples to help you be a little more precise if we're talking about specific things then you're going to follow it with at I'm proficient at setting up a tent I like to go camping so I'm very proficient at doing this if we're talking about General subjects then you can use in she is proficient into two languages I'm sure that you are proficient in English and then finally she's proficient with knives when talking about tools that we use so just something to keep in mind when using this word proficient at proficient in proficient with I think most of the time you're going to use proficient at but I could also use Adept at she is adept at problem solving so this really implies that you have a natural ability to do something that well requires skill and to give you a little more context here are some news headlines using this phrase Montreal companies are Adept at meeting employee needs or February Creature Feature foxes are surprisingly Adept at and then I I forgot what the the rest of the article sorry to to keep you in suspense but they're Adept at something and then finally Barat Adept at making a challenging task look easy the next phrase is masterful at I I don't think this is as commonly used I could say I am masterful at taking selfies this just means you have a lot of skill in a particular job or activity now I I will say I I really did think especially a long time ago that I was masterful at taking selfies I traveled with a disposable camera in the late '90s and basically I would take a lot of selfies and I I never knew what they looked like until I got it developed and then once I got it back I saw like wow I took a lot of decent pictures and I thought yeah I was Adept at taking selfies I'm just going to keep using some of these different phrases I could also say he's masterful at spotting new Talent one thing I want to point out is that you don't always have to use it with the verb to be and then follow it with at I could also use it with nouns and here are some adjective noun collocations with this word a masterful job a masterful performance a masterful game or a masterful tone so again remember that we're talking about skill in a particular activity or or job so it makes sense that you're going to use it with job or performance or game Fred became masterful at leveraging the media to wage his war on J and on Q he masterful performance to give you a point of reference as to how frequently these words are used we can check out engram viewer which allows us to compare how often certain words and phrases are used and they put it on a graph it's very easy to see I was actually surprised when I put in the words proficient Adept and masterful I thought that proficient would probably be more commonly used but as you can see it's a little more common for someone to say you are Adept at something or it is an adjective that you're more likely to come across the next phrase is a natural at my friend is a natural at riding a horse now if you say someone is a natural at something you're really saying that they have an inherent or instinctive ability it's almost like you were born with this ability and you could say someone is a natural he's a natural at playing chess and I could also use it without specifying what it is I could just say someone is a natural I've never seen someone play so well at chess he's a natural and finally to give you another word if you want to use it as an adjective you could say someone is a natural born and then follow it with a noun she's a natural born swimmer the next phrase is well-versed they are well-versed in the art of deception this means that you really just know a lot about something now to give you some examples using this phrase I thought I'd highlight Cambridge as a source and you could put in well versed and they do give you some different example sentences so you get a better idea as to how it's used in context I'm not going to read through all of these I've underlined where well-versed is in the sentence but just to give you one example it says however it will be of limited use to researchers who are already well-versed in these debates and it will not convert any scientific naturalist then I want to teach you the phrase when it comes to now this is not specifically used to talk about ability but we can use it to connect it to a certain topic so I could say he is a natural when it comes to Billiards so again we're using when it comes to to identify a specific topic that is being talked about and really you could then input a variety of different words to talk about your ability and use when it comes to to identify the topic so I could say she is extremely proficient when it comes to coding or the professor is well-versed when it comes to Modern Art so I could use these adjectives then follow it with when it comes to in order to basically introduce the specific topic I could say that you are great when it comes to building your vocabulary right so let's continue building your vocabulary and and talk about different phrases that you can use to talk about your inability and let's start with a phrase that I think is very useful and that is to say that something is not your strong suit public speaking is not my strong suit it's really a phrase that you can use when referring to a particular skill or ability that someone does not have but I personally think it is extremely useful because maybe you don't want to say someone like look I just don't know how to do this maybe you're familiar with the activity or the job and you just want to tell the other person that well you kind of know how to do it but you're not the best at it and that's when you can use this phrase and say that something is just not your strong suit let me give you some more examples in the context of learning English perhaps um you think well English grammar is not my strong suit or phrasal verbs are not my strong suit or even making small talk in English is just not my strong suit so with each of these it's not talking about something you've never done before you you've tried this you've practiced maybe you need to work on it and you want to let the other person know that and therefore you could say well yeah it's just not my strong suit iron is not really my strong suit look yoga is not my strong suit typing is not my strong suit yeah giving things time is not my strong suit the next one is cup of tea American football is not my cup of tea now this does not directly refer to inability it's really more about about your likes and preferences because you would use this when something is not the type of thing that you like however when talking about things that maybe we're we're not very good at often it's because we don't really enjoy it we really don't like this and that is why I wanted to include this phrase and say that something is just not your cup of tea for example and these are really my personal examples because yeah I would say that horror movies are not my cup of tea or early morning flights are not my cup of tea that is definitely true and right now at this point in my life I would also say that loud bars and Loud restaurants are just not my cup of tea it's not something that I like or prefer then I want to teach you the phrase Achilles heel this is probably not as commonly used but still useful it's always just good to get a little variety math has always been my Achilles heel so this means that it's just a small problem or a weakness in a person I would say when you think about Achilles heel I think a good word to think of a synonym would just be weakness something is your weakness it is your Achilles heel and I would also say it's like a real true weakness that someone may have so once again I am going to give you just some personal examples I would tell you that writing legibly is my Achilles heel if you were to see me right You'd be like what I do not understand this I could also say that drawing is my Achilles heel it's just something that I have never been very Adept at doing and finally grammar is my Achilles heel now you may be thinking like wait a second you're an English teacher and yes that is true but there are things that I think we have stronger skills at when it comes to teaching and I enjoy teaching vocabulary pronunciation grammar but if I'm thinking about all the different parts of language I'd probably say yeah for me grammar is probably my Achilles heel got to do a lot more research and think about what's acceptable what's not acceptable and once again to give you another point of reference perhaps I didn't want to use like something so strong and say well you know it's my weakness this would be another time when I could say well grammar is just not my strong suit and you don't want to say that you're well really not good at this thing or it's a weakness but just something that you need to work on that you're not the best at how about this phrase Rusty a bit Rusty I haven't bowled for over a year so I'm a bit Rusty this means that you are are not good at knowing or doing something as you once were because you just have not practiced it in a long time and you could say that you are a bit Rusty or a little rusty I think with this word with the word Rusty people may use those adjectives and say that you're a little rusty or a bit Rusty when talking about different activities to give you a little more context here are some news headlines feeling socially awkward even extroverts are a little rusty so this was published 2020 I think it was during covid after those lockdowns that people who were extroverted yeah they were they were a little rusty and then everybody looked a bit Rusty this article I think was talking about players on a sports team maybe they haven't played in a while so they looked a bit Rusty and finally crelle Strauss was a little rusty in intense acting return post selling Sunset it was a balancing act so this person has not acted in some time so they felt a little rusty I'm just a little rusty well my Russian's a bit Rusty but we got the job done yeah I'm just a little rusty my latin's a little rusty remember we're a bit Rusty so bear with us the next phrase is to have two left feet when it comes to dancing I have two left feet there is that phrase once again when it comes to I can identify the topic and then well talk about my inability when you have two left feet it means that you really move in a very awkward way and I think most of the time when somebody uses this phrase and they talk about having two left feet they're really referring to dancing not always but quite often so I could say that someone has two left feet or even two left hands and it's really referring to one's coordination for example he's not very coordinated I think he has two left feet when it comes to playing soccer yeah you really need to use your feet when playing soccer and if you're not very coordinated you move in an awkward way somebody could say yeah you have two left feet or she is just unable to catch so when it comes to juggling she has two left hands if we're just talking about those phrases two left hands two left feet I I think mostly you're going to hear somebody talk about having two left feet and they're not coordinated they move in an awkward way and and probably they're talking about dancing now for a little review I hope that you feel like you are very proficient in English because you have a knack for building your vocabulary learning new words and then practicing them when you have a conversation but even if you feel that well building your vocabulary is not your strong suit I I hope that you you keep at it because well for me I will be honest I am not a natural when it comes to learning languages I have to really work hard at it because if I stop for even a short period of time then yeah my skills they get they get a bit Rusty and then I have to work harder and try to catch back up but I I think that for some people they're very Adept at um learning other languages and you know I think as long as it's something you enjoy then I think you'll be able to do it if if this were something that you were to say well it's just not my cup of tea then it it would be a little more challenging and I'm sure that there would be different aspects of language learning in which you would feel like well this is just my Achilles heel and uh I don't know I was trying to think about how to work in two left hands two left feet I don't think I'm going to be able to do that so let's just start to wrap things up if you enjoyed the lesson and learned something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you

next time so long

Say this dialogue if you want to speak like a CHAMP

Welcome, welcome, welcome to today's speaking practice. That's right. This is a speaking practice and I want you to actually speak and practice your skills and try to copy and shadow what I'm saying. Now, I say shadow my American accent because I am from the United States and I am going to talk to you a little bit more about what's going on, why I am saying it the way I am and in that case it is more about the American accent. However, I would say again, don't feel like you ever need to speak with any particular accent. There are many varieties out there, many of them are amazing, but of course I know some people in my audience live in the US, you work with people in the US and that's why people may have more of an interest in the American accent. So, we're going to I want you to actually again speak and say these sentences with me and say them after me as well. Here is our conversation.

To just to begin with, I'm just going to say the whole thing and then we're going to look at one part at a time. So, there are three different parts to this conversation. It's actually it's not even a conversation. I will say it's more of a talk and this is one person who's just saying these sentences like they're they're talking to someone else. So, let me go ahead and say it and then we're going to look at one one at a time. Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office and exercise helps me clear my mind. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day.

I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. This is again, these are sentences somebody may say when they're talking to somebody else and I want to practice and we're going to do a deep dive and talk a little bit about what's going on in each of these sentences. Now, if you are somebody who would like to improve your speaking fluency, check out the link down below in the description if you want to join my speaking course. It is all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, and speak naturally. is part of it. We usually warm up with different parts of connected speech. That's like the first 10-15 minutes, and then we dive into our topic, and we learn vocabulary, we do different discussions, uh debates, we practice different speaking frameworks. So, a lot of a lot of good stuff. If you are interested in improving and developing your skills, check out the link down below in the description. Let's look at our first uh Let's look at our first sentence.

I've adding a little vocabulary in here for you just just to keep you on your toes. Uh this the So, let me say, "Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office, and exercise helps me clear my mind." To clear one's mind, it just means I put it down there, "to let go of distracting thoughts or worries." This has a positive connotation, and generally, you would do something in order to clear your mind. And you just want to get rid of those worries, whatever distractions, and you need to clear your mind. I hope that these lessons are, you know, help you get away from your your stress, your distraction, and I hope it helps you clear your mind. So, we're going to practice, and then I want you to let me know in the comments, in the chat, if you were actually speaking. I don't like speaking to myself, so I want you all to let me know. See all these hearts flying? I love it. Love it. Love seeing that. So, this is our first sentence.

Now, here's what's going on. Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office. Let's just start with that. I've put basically what it's going to sound like. Feeling So, the first thing I would say with many of these verbs in the continuous tense, not all Americans, but many people will drop that G. And then we're going to link that consonant sound. So, it's like we're moving it over to that next uh syllable or word. In this case, the article a. Feeling a Feeling a Feeling a little stressed Stressed that ED would typically have a t sound, which again we're going to link and move over to that preposition. Stressed at the office. Now, the the You have two different forms, strong and a weak form. This case, we're going to use the, which would be the strong form, because office begins with the vowel sound, the office.

So, let's just just repeat after me. Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office. It's your turn. Okay. I trust that you're speaking with me. And often this gets gets reduced. It's going to sound a little more like n. These words Some many some words uh uh We'll talk about some of these other ones later. They're not really emphasized. So, and is going to sound like more like an An exercise helps me clear my mind. An exercise helps me clear my mind. Let's Let's say this together. Here comes the shadowing part. I want you to say this with me. I'm going to say it slowly and keep these things in mind.

Let's begin. Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office, and exercise helps me clear my mind. Again. Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office, and exercise helps me clear my mind. Okay. All right. So, that was shadowing. I've We're going to keep doing it. Let's Let's do one more. Let's do this as a listen and the repeat. Now, I'm going to say this faster. And try to, you know, say it after me. I still want you to shadow. Try to say it in the exact same way. If you can, I know reading and speaking are two different things. Of course, you can see the words right there, but maybe close your eyes, just listen to what I'm saying, and then repeat it after me. Try to say it in the the exact same way. So, let's do this two times. I'll say it. I want you to repeat. Ready?

Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office, and exercise helps me clear my mind. Okay. One more time. Again, I know I'm I'm saying this quickly. Uh ready? Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office, and exercise helps me clear my mind. Okay. I'm I'm giving you maybe like 5 seconds, not much time to say it. I like it. Ouch. It's fast. All right. Uh yes. Lolly, great to see you. Love to seeing so many members. Uh hello, everyone. I want you to write in if you're practicing. Let me know. I just love hearing it. Write the word speaking in the chat, in the comments, so that I know you are practicing your skills and working on these different things.

Because I do think this is going to help you well, sound a little more natural, really smooth things out if you're able to use some of these different parts of connected speech. Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office and exercise helps me clear my mind. Let's look at the next one and we're we're going to come back to this. Don't worry. Love these hearts. Love it, love it, love it. All right, here's the next sentence. It's a long one and there is another another phrase that I want to highlight. Ready? Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day. Now, the one expression I want to highlight first thing in the morning. I think you you see this, you know what it means, but this is a useful phrase that you can do anytime you want to emphasize that you're going to do this before anything else. First thing in the morning, whether you're talking about getting up and doing some activity at home first thing in the morning or at work. This is what did you do at work? Well, I had to do something first thing in the morning. This is what I did before anything else. Great expression to know. So, let's look at what's going on. Thank you. Excellent. Cinderella, Alexandro, Shita, perfect. Excellent. Speaking, speaking, speaking, that is what this lesson is all about. There's a lot going on here. Let's unpack it a little at a time. Therefore, I got to is a pretty common reduction, gotta gotta. Now, I I wrote T's there even though you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flat T. It's going to sound like a soft D, gotta. Get up, very common phrasal verb.

I again, I'm going to pronounce that final T in get as a flat T and then link it with the preposition up. Get up. Get up. Got to get up. Let's just say that phrase. Just repeat after me. Got to get up. Got to get up. And we reduce we can reduce that to N and then go to the. Several things going on. So, the first thing is that T in two, it comes between two vowels. You're going to hear me pronounce it as a flat T, which is why I put that D there. The other thing is you're saying, "Wait, why why the?" Two is another word that is not stressed. Often it's going to get reduced. So, instead of two, like the number two, it may sound a little more like a weaker tuh, like it has the schwa sound. And that's why I put go to the. Go to the. And you could practice this phrase. Just say that after me. Go to the. Go to the. One more time, just for fun. Go to the. And then you can add nouns to the end of it. Like, "Well, where are you going?" Go to the gym. Go to the mall. Go to the store. Go to the shop. Go to the park. So, in this case we're going to go to the gym.

First. This is elision because I I was emphasizing when I said first that tuh sound. That T is going to elide because it comes between two consonants. So, it's just going to sound like first thing in the morning. Thing in, we can link that ing sound over. Let's just we're going to bookmark it there for a moment. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning. And I'm saying it a little bit with like a melody, that stressed timing, so that it helps you try to maintain that same speed. Say this with me. Let's make it a little sing-song. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning.

Let's say it together one more time slowly. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning. You're doing amazing. Great job. All right. The last part of that sentence, so that I don't lose motivation, for is another common word. Instead of sounding like the number four, it often gets reduced and it may sound like a softer fur. Fur the rest of the day. Now, I could say rest of. We're going to link that together, but a lot of times when you have of and the next word begins with a consonant sound, it may sound more like a resta. Rest of the day. Rest of the day. For the rest of the day. Just say that last phrase. For the rest of the day.

For the rest of the day. A lot of this, whether I know whatever your preference is for practicing. A lot of it really is just like drill exercise and you say it again and again and again. And then it's going to transfer over into your conversational speech.

So, let's practice this slowly two times. I want you to say it with me because this is the shadowing part. Are you ready? All right. If you're ready, let me know see those hearts, thumbs up. All right. Here we go. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day.

Let's say it again together. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day. All right. Let's keep going and we're going to let's speed things up. I know you guys like that fast. Okay. Well, not too fast. Here I'm I'm putting the words back in there. I'm still labeling like what's going on, whether it's a reduction, linking, the flap T, elision. So, let's let's say this at a normal speed, shadowing still, and I want you to say it with me. Ready? Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day.

Let's say it again. Say it with me. I'm going to keep saying that. Say it with me. Say it with me. Here we go. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day. I think it's great to This is my personal belief. If you are actually trying to shadow and say it with me, and you can kind of get an idea for the speed. Is it Is it fast? Are you able to keep up and say it at the same speed? Especially like right now, trying to say it more at a normal speed. I will speed things up right now just to challenge you because like I said, a lot of this is more like a drill exercise, and you're just practicing, you know, the position of your tongue in your mouth, transitioning from one sound to the next, whether we're using reductions, linking, whatever it may be. So, let's uh let's say this together.

And yes, somebody that said Yeah, you're right, motivation. That's another one. You're With my accent, you're going to hear me say that first T as a flap T, motivation, motivation. That's again, the flap T is a distinct part of the American accent. Let's [snorts] say this uh I want to do a listen and repeat. Okay, so this time just listen to me and then try to repeat it. Again, if you want, you can try to forget about the words. This is about speaking, and I want you to focus on actually speaking in the way that you're saying these different words and phrases. So, if you can, close your eyes, just listen, and then try. I know it's a long sentence, but then try to say it after me. And I'm going to say it faster.

Ready? Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day. Your turn. Okay. All right. Hopefully, you were able to try to get it within that short period of time that I'm giving you before I just start speaking again. If I'm not giving you enough time, I apologize. Let's say it one more time. This is listen and repeat. I'm going to say it at a faster speed, and then I want you to repeat after me. Ready? Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day.

Well done. Let me know, again, in the comments chat, are you are you actually practicing? Just write the word speaking. Let me know. I love hearing from you guys, too. You all know that, as well. Here is the last sentence. And this is Again, it's not a dialogue, but this is like somebody's speaking for, you know, just talking about their situation.

[sighs] I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. The phrase that I wanted to highlight, that work-life balance, I think that you probably are already familiar with this.

It's a phrase that I think has become commonly used nowadays because I think many of us are actually giving this some thought, and we're thinking about the time that we work, we're thinking about the things that we want to do in our free time, our other goals, our passions, and we're trying to manage that. So, a work-life balance is the balance between your professional and personal life. Great phrase to know. Quick uh before we jump into it, just want to give some praise to those of you excellent uh Cinderella, good to see you again. Uh Lolly, um Seka Solovav, Just Ball, Louise. Perfect. Um Donu, excellent. So, again, keep practicing. Let's do this one and then we're going to we're going to put it all together at the end.

And it's it's a lot to take in, but once again, a lot of this is kind of like a drill exercise and you just keep saying it again and again and again and again. Because I think you know these words and you hear me say the sentence, I think it registers and you're like, "Okay, yeah, I understand that." But we're really doing a deep dive and talk about well, what's going on? So, I've been trying to except I'm not going to say trying to. I have already mentioned that people, especially in the US, we like to drop those Gs with verbs in the continuous tense. So, instead of trying, I'm just going to say trying.

Trying, again, that n sound, your tongue is at the top behind your front teeth and you're going to release right into that t sound. To is reduced to that t. Trying to. Trying to. Just say that phrase. Trying to. Trying to. Trying to. When I when I just say it like that, maybe it sounds a little weird, but that is how it sounds. Like, I've been trying to. I've been trying to find a We can link that phrase, move that consonant sound over, find a better work-life balance. The last part in order to. Now, I can link that whole phrase in order, in order, in order. And you can hear me moving that n sound over in order.

Once again, the two is reduced. It sounds a little more like tuh in order tuh in order tuh. So, let's just say that phrase in order tuh in order tuh. That's how it sounds slowly. in order tuh in order tuh And then you can drill a drill. In order to manage my stress. Let's say the whole phrase. In order to manage my stress. I'm going to try to say it like a song so you can hear the stress timing. Makes it easier to keep the pace. In order to manage my stress. Say that after me. In order to manage my stress. In order to manage my stress. Okay, hopefully as I'm identifying this you can actually hear that in order tuh in order tuh and it makes a little more sense. In order to manage my stress. Let's Let's say the whole thing slowly. This is a shadowing so let's say it with me.

Ready? I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. One more time. I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. So, again, I'm basically putting like the phonetic spelling up there, like what it sounds like. Of course, this is not how you would spell these words. Now, I'm going to remove it. I'm still going to include like linking and G dropping, what's happening, but let's say it at a normal speed. Shadow, say it with me. Ready? I've been trying to find a work a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. I apologize. I kind of fumbled through that first one. Let's say it with me again. I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress.

One more time cuz I screwed up that first one. I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. Good. Now, the challenging part. I'm going to say it fast. Don't worry about This is just more drill, practicing, transitioning from one sound to the next. Close your eyes. Don't focus on the words. Focus on the sounds that you hear. All right. I'm going to say it, and I want you to repeat after me this time, and I'll give you a few seconds to try to fit this whole sentence in there. Ready? I've been trying to find a better way to Oh, sorry. [laughter] Let me start over. I apologize. All right, here we go. [gasps] I've been trying to find a better find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress.

I apologize again. I still kind of fumbled that first one. Repeat after me. I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. Let's do it one more time because again I feel like I messed up that first time. I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. Nailed it. Nailed it. You nailed it. Even though I can't hear you, I trust you that you're speaking, practicing your skills. And again, let me know, write speaking down in the comments so I know I know that I'm not talking to myself right now. But it's it it has been known to happen. Here is the entire again a converse It's not really a conversation. Maybe we can assume that somebody is in a conversation and they're telling this other person you know what's going on with their work and stress and trying to go to the gym first thing in the morning and find that work-life balance. Let's uh Let's shadow and I want to let's say this together. Let's It's a little long to do a listen and repeat, but I think that's a good goal when you're shadowing. I know a lot of times we've been doing it with these smaller sentences, but I think it is good to try to shadow and practice something longer, a little more substantial. I always say audiobooks are a great way to practice shadowing because you see the words and you can actually try to say it along with the audio. So, let's say this together. I'm going to say it at a normal speed. I'm not going to try to go too fast. And let's just keep in mind some of those things we were just looking at.

Here we go. Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at work and exercise helps me clear my mind. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day. I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. I hope you didn't think that was too fast. Maybe maybe it was, uh maybe it wasn't for some of you. Let's say it again. Shadow, say the whole thing with me. Ready? Here we go. Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office and exercise helps me clear my mind. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day. I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress.

Well, then let's do it one more time. Just for good measure. Just for fun. Ready? Shadow, say it with me. Here we go. Recently, I've been feeling a little stressed at the office and exercise helps me clear my mind. Therefore, I got to get up and go to the gym first thing in the morning so that I don't lose motivation for the rest of the day. I've been trying to find a better work-life balance in order to manage my stress. If I, you know, I I dropped the microphone and I'd clap for you if I could, but I think that this is useful. It's good for developing your overall speaking fluency. Again, everybody has different goals. I know I was focusing a little bit more on the American accent because I'm from the US. Again, you don't shouldn't feel like you need to speak with any particular accent, but I I really think a lot of this information can be helpful, especially when it comes to your listening comprehension. Very quickly, wow, Cinderella, thank you so much. Uh it's great seeing you. Great uh having you. I love it. Participating and I hope you you know, you're able to practice and improve your skills.

Silent Letters (K & W) | Learn English Pronunciation & Spelling

Shhh...these are silent letters. I'm going to show you how to pronounce them correctly. Or more appropriately, not pronounce them at all. Welcome to our global classroom! Thank you for joining us. Now, before we begin today's lesson, I'd like to remind you to please hit that subscribe button if you would like more videos on how to practice and improve your English skills. A common question that we get is... "Why are some words in English not pronounced the way they are spelled?" Well, there are several reasons for that. Historically, the pronunciation of English words has changed over time, even slightly, as we've gone from Old English to Middle English to the Modern English that we speak today.

Sometimes, the spelling would even change with the pronunciation. But not anymore. In the 15th century, the printing press was invented and that helped standardize spelling. So now, even if pronunciation may change or evolve in some way, shape, or form spelling largely remains the same. Now, one result from all of English's historical changes is the existence of silent letters. And that's what I want to talk to you about today. So in this lesson, we're going to look at two silent letters that we commonly see at the beginning of some words. These are the letters K and W. I say we're going to look at them because that is all we are going to do. We are going to look and not pronounce.

Please keep in mind this is the American pronunciation of these words. Now, silent letters are common across most English varieties. However, the pronunciation may vary slightly depending on where you are. First, let's look at some K words. Now you find a silent K when it is followed by the letter "n". Here are some common words that you've probably seen before. Now, I'll say the words and then you can repeat after me. Notice that I did not pronounce the K in any of those words. The K is silent, and each of those words begins with the N sound.

Now, let's go over the silent W. This is another silent letter that is typically found at the beginning of some words. However, the silent W is usually followed by the letter "r". Here are some examples, so please repeat after me. Notice once again that the W is silent. So when it's followed by an "r" then the word begins with the R sound.

Now you should be aware that there are other words that have a silent W but are not followed by the letter "r". These words include... Good job guys! You sound just like native English speakers. Now let's make it a little more challenging. I'm going to give you some sentences, and I want you to say them out loud. I'll say them, so you can hear my pronunciation. And then I want you to repeat them so you can keep practicing. Here's the first one. Great job saying those sentences! I'd recommend doing this exercise one more time and continue practicing your pronunciation because this is going to help you improve your overall English fluency.

Please "like" the video if you were able to pronounce these words correctly. And remember to follow us on social media for ways to practice and improve your English. Thanks for watching! We hope you enjoyed today's lesson and learned a little more about silent letters and why you should not pronounce them. We'll see you next time.

Similar Spelling, Wildly Different Sounds English Makes NO Sense!

Can you correctly pronounce these four words right here? All of them ending with e a r. Now, you would think that the pronunciation is the same, but it's not. They're all different, which is why English can be a bit crazy when it comes to pronunciation. And this is when people will make small mistakes. So, let's start with fear. And you hear that ear sound. And when you have fear, that that emotion of danger. And there are other words that also have the ear pronunciation such as clear. Here. [snorts] Appear. This is very different than our next word, which is pear. Now, the e a r has an air sound. And pear, we're talking about the fruit. Other words with this pronunciation include bear, wear, swear. Then there's learn. Now, the e a r has an er sound. You're learning something. You are acquiring knowledge.

It is an extremely common verb. Other words with this er pronunciation include earth, pearl, search. And finally, we have heart. Now, the e a r has an ar sound. Heart, like uh that muscle in your body, your heart. I could not think of other words in which the e a r sounds like ar, but as you can see, there are many words that have this e a r spelling and have a different pronunciation. You just got to sort through them so that you can avoid any small and silly mistakes.

Sound Fluent in English - Use These (C1) Phrases Like a Native!

let's learn some Advanced C1 phrases to help you build your vocabulary and all things considered this lesson is going to be helpful and useful and all things considered is the first phrase that I would like to teach you so you would use this phrase when you're trying to say that something is true or good in general when you consider all of its aspects and it like you're saying that a situation is not perfect but in general it's pretty good and often I think you may use this phrase when you're referring to an event like the success of an event so if we're talking about a wedding I could say the wedding was a great success All Things Considered there's a lot of planning that goes into a wedding some things may go wrong but you could say all things considered it was a great success I also want to teach you the pronunciation of these phrases so that you can say them accurately and clearly and with this phrase the only thing that I'd like to point out is that there's a bit of co-articulation calculation going on with that final dark Ellen all and then you move right into that voiceless th in things because the tip of your tongue is going to be behind your top front teeth and it's like we can just connect those two words all things all things considered I guess All Things Considered I was lucky Dwight was there now I am not the perfect teacher no teacher is perfect but all things considered this is the best place for you to practice and improve your English skills and if that's what you'd like to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about helping you reach your fluency goals that's what we're gonna do we're gonna do it bit by bit and bit by bit is the next phrase that I'd like to teach you so this is a binomial pair which is talking about an expression that has two words joined by a conjunction and that conjunction it's often and or or but in this case it's not we're talking about buy bit by bit and what this means is gradually you're going to do something gradually often I think that you would use this when talking about something you're going to grow or develop or even just the opposite something that you're going to destroy or take apart so I could say that I am trying to grow this channel bit by bit I'm doing it gradually and hopefully it'll get bigger and bigger you may be thinking is there really any difference between bit by bit and little by little which is also another binomial pair and they really have a similar meaning I would say that little by little is more commonly used it's actually a B2 phrase but if you know that binomial pair then you should have no trouble using bit by bit and for pronunciation there's not really anything too difficult going on here there's a little bit of alliteration when you have the same sound set again and again bit by bit you hear that sound so in that case it's pretty fun to just say bit by bit bit by bit when I sat back and watched Moriarty destroy my reputation let's just stay with the sound with our next phrase which is before you know it and this just means very soon so when you use this phrase you're emphasizing that something is going to happen quickly and suddenly and before I give you some examples I want to talk about the pronunciation and I really want you to pay attention to the linking that occurs at the end of this phrase so you have that consonant sound in no it's going to get linked with the vowel sound in it that beginning vowel sound no wit and people will generally say this phrase together they'll say it quickly so linking will occur when you use this phrase before you know it first she's texting at work and then she's going to doing our homework and then she's hanging out with the bad kid and before you know it she's pregnant to give you a few more examples I could say I know flying gives you some anxiety but the plane will be on the ground before you know it or perhaps someone's pregnant and you say congratulations I bet the baby will be here before you know it or if you start using Elsa speak before you know it your pronunciation will have improved dramatically and I'd like to thank Elsa speak for sponsoring today's lesson so this is a great app that I actually learned about from many of you but if you're not familiar with it let me show you what it's all about there are many different things that you can do to really help you fine-tune your pronunciation you can practice by skill and there are a lot of them you can also practice by topic and there are many of those as well and something else that's very cool about Elsa speak is that you can practice the words and phrases that you want to learn so we can even practice a phrase from this lesson if I were just to type in before you know it and then you can listen to it before you know it and then practice before you know it all right excellent and then let me show you what it would look like if a mistake is made so instead of no I'll say now before you know it and as you can see this instant feedback allows you to make adjustments and continue to improve and right now when you click on the link below and download the Elsa speak app you can get seven days of the pro membership for free but you can also use my discount to get 85 percent off a lifetime membership or forty percent off a one-year membership so check out the links and discounts in the description if you would like to improve your pronunciation and before you know it you're going to sound just like a native speaker it's going to happen one day out of the blue and that is the next C1 phrase that I want to teach you out of the blue you can use this phrase to say that something happens that is completely unexpected and often you would use this if you're telling a story and then you want to emphasize the thing that was unexpected last week out of the blue she said that we should move in together and I didn't know that our relationship was that serious it just happened out of the blue so I use this adverb phrase once at the beginning of the statement and then at the end you can kind of move it around a little bit and once again this phrase has a similar meaning to another phrase which is out of nowhere except out of nowhere is a B2 phrase but when you're building your vocabulary it's good to get a little variety when you're having a conversation or in this case when you're telling a story and you can use different phrases for pronunciation the one thing that I want you to keep in mind is that final T in out I'm from the United States so with the American accent I'm going to pronounce that t as a flap T it's going to sound like a soft

D and then I will link it with the vowel sound in of it's going to sound like out of out of the blue and because you're emphasizing something that happens people will say this quickly and they will link those words together out of the blue everything was going great until he suddenly reappeared out of the blue but that dum dum ran his mouth the next phrase is at a glance this means to see something immediately or quickly and people may use this phrase with the word quick and say at a quick glance you're just adding a little emphasis to the speed or someone might say at first glance that's another collocation with this phrase saying that you looked at something quickly but then you had to look at it closer or maybe you looked at it again to show you how it's used in context I could say I could tell at a glance that something was wrong everyone looked worried or I recognized her at a glance she was the woman from the party and for pronunciation once again that t and at I'm going to pronounce it with a flap T and then I will link it with the vowel sound in uh that article add a at a glance at a glance we're going to line

the front seat in the back seat in the floorboards we've got some blankets cup stops as it starts sticking his big snout in the car the subterfuge won't last but at a blast the car will appear to be normal then there's the phrase to have something against someone and this just means to dislike someone for a reason and even though the meaning is pretty simple and straightforward the usage of this phrase can be a bit challenging because the something is your reason and let's say you don't like someone because uh they stole something I would not say I have stealing against him that just sounds awkward instead the reason that something it's often well it's not going to exist or it's going to be unknown so let's talk about a reason that just doesn't exist in this case you're basically saying that you have no reason to dislike someone and people may use this with the words nothing or anything so I might say I have nothing against him we just don't have anything in common so I don't have any reason to dislike him the reason it just doesn't exist but maybe you don't have anything in common and therefore you're not friends or using anything I don't have anything against her we just don't get along so once again the reason why I dislike this person just doesn't exist but maybe again with some people you don't end up getting along and you're not friends if we're talking about a reason that is unknown well then people may ask a question and use this phrase like why were you so mean what do you have against her so again it's unknown the reason so that's why I'm asking the question what do you have against her or you could just use this in a statement if I'm asking you like well look I don't know what you have against me but we really need to find a way to work together so again what you have against me is that noun clause but I'm still talking about a reason that is uh that is unknown I don't know what you have against me but I know that's that's just an example you know we're friends we get along I think we work well together but if we're talking about the pronunciation of this phrase I'd like to point out that Elysian may occur if the someone is him or her and illusion is when you remove a certain sound or even syllable so in this case we're talking about that H in him or her and if it gets removed well then we can link that final T in against with the vowel sound so it'll sound like against him or against her what do you have against him what do you have against her and a vision may occur when you're pronouncing this phrase you don't care very much for our community do you Mr Walsh I have nothing against your community Mr Pruitt the next C1

phrase that I have for you is to look on the bright side and this just means to find good things in a bad situation and you would tell someone to look on the bright side so think about it in the context of trying to cheer someone up and there's a bad situation and you tell them look on the bright side and then you would follow it with a reason and that's really important so you're telling them to cheer up try and stay positive and then you got to give them a reason why if you just say look on the bright side and don't say anything else then it's going to seem a little strange so let's say you tear your new shirt and you're really upset about it and I'm trying to cheer you up and I say hey look on the bright side now you get to go shopping for some new clothes and you get to find a new shirt and you can look on the bright side when you're pronouncing this phrase just keep in mind that once again linking will occur we can link that final consonant sound and look with the vowel sound in on look on and remember the article the we're going to pronounce it with a schwa sound because it comes before that consonant B sound in bright look on the bright side look on the bright side this is a deal breaker look on the bright side what's the bright side only nine more months to Comic-Con oh yeah to take issue with so this just means to strongly disagree with someone or something and you could just use this instead of saying I disagree I take issue with that and it just gives it a little bit of emphasis I take issue with teachers who use corporal punishment or we took issue with the changes they made to the contract or you're not going to hit the like button I take issue with that okay I just I disagree with that and of course I'm just kidding you you can do whatever you want but when you are pronouncing this phrase keep in mind that we can link the final consonant sound intake with the beginning vowel sound in issue take issue and you can start to see a theme here that linking commonly occurs in many of these phrases that's not what we already are cool your tongue Airman because I intend to take issue with your performance then we have to keep a low profile and this means to avoid attracting attention to yourself and I think that we can all relate to this phrase right now can you think of a time when you were trying to keep a low profile perhaps you go to some social event maybe a party and you really don't feel like talking to many people so you try to keep a low profile or or perhaps it work maybe you showed up late or you forgot to submit something you don't want to attract attention to yourself so you try to keep a low profile and for pronunciation yes more linking we can link that consonant sound and keep with that schwa sound in the article uh keep uh keep a low profile Vice for me on my new position keep a low profile if I had a gold dragon or every time I heard that joke I'd be richer than you are then we have the phrase in accordance with and this means in a way that agrees with or follows and and typically you're talking about agreeing with or following a rule or a law and because of the meaning that you're following a rule or a law I think it's likely that you may hear this phrase being used in a more formal situation so I could say the justice department acted in accordance with the new law or to be honest I could get banned from YouTube If I am not in accordance with YouTube's terms of service so in both of those examples it's a it's a little more formal because I'm talking about following a rule or a law now when you pronounce this phrase of course we can link those first two words we can link that consonant n and n with the vowel sound in accordance in accordance and keep in mind that final syllable in accordance even though it's spelled d-a-n-c-e you're not going to say dance

it's going to have that schwa sound it's going to sound like dunce in accordance with in accordance with FAA rules the first two people to the front will be upgraded to First Class okay YouTube the next couple of phrases are more related to driving and the first one is back road so a back road refers to a small road that does not have a lot of traffic on it so maybe you're just trying to avoid traffic or avoid those busy streets and you take some back roads and one thing I want to point out is that I think you'll often use this with the plural roads because when you're driving if you're trying to avoid traffic you're probably not just going to stay on one road you may take several different ones and that's why people often talk about back roads I know some back roads that we can take in order to avoid rush hour traffic and the pronunciation of this phrase is pretty simple and straightforward you just say those two words as they are back roads I'm glad we took the back rugs highways are probably a mess right now then there's bare left or Bear right this means to change directions slightly so that you're going in a particular direction in this case left or right and I think these phrases are very useful especially if you're giving directions and you want to be specific because some roads especially some of those back roads they may not always have a full left turn or right turn and I would say hey up ahead you're going to want to Bear left and then after that the road's going to intersect with another one and when that happens you should Bear right all right I'm just trying to be a little more specific and I also want you to keep in mind that the word bear this is a homonym do not think about the animal this is a verb to bear and it means to change directions slightly and again we're just going to provide that extra bit of information to Bear left or bare right and for pronunciation the only thing I want to say about well just one of the phrases Bear right you have that overlapping R sound that final R and bear in the beginning R and right just allows you to move from one word right into the next Bear right or maybe we'll bear left yes I know some of these phrases may be challenging but I want you to look on the bright side as you continue to build your vocabulary bit by bit well then you will continue to develop your overall English fluency you just need to keep reviewing these phrases from time to time and before you know it they'll become a part of your active memory and you'll be able to use them easily and naturally and I hope you agree with me and you don't take issue with what I just said I would love it if you write to me down in the comments unless you're trying to keep a low profile in that case I I understand but if you learn something new I'd really appreciate it if you hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you

next time so long

Sound Fluent with These Advanced English Phrases

Let's take your vocabulary to the next level, because I want to teach you 12 high-level phrases to help you sound incredibly fluent in both professional and personal conversations. And if you are someone who enjoys building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes, the channel is Interactive English. It is all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So, let's go ahead and get started with our first phrase, which is to put your thumb on the scale. This means to unfairly influence the outcome of a situation in order to gain an advantage. Now, to give you a little more nuance, this is often used in a negative context because it implies a lack of fair play or maybe even a hidden bias. And it's typically done by a person or group of authority. So, a business executive might do this or the government in order to unfairly affect the outcome. I could say the business executive put his thumb on the scale by giving his nephew the interview questions in advance. That is not fair. That is not right. That is certainly putting your thumb on the scale. Here are some more examples. This is in no way the Contras and the Sandinistas. We're not putting our thumb on the scale. Don't bother because it won't change a goddamn thing. Why? Because I've got my thumb, boom, on the scale and I don't want you to win. Let me put it this way. Maybe you thought I was going to follow it with something else, but I'm not because this is our next phrase. And you're going to use this phrase whenever you want to introduce a clearer, more direct, or even a more polite explanation of a difficult truth. So, this is kind of like a red flag phrase because someone will then follow this phrase with information that may be very blunt, very critical, and the person is really just trying to be careful with their wording. So, if I make a statement like, well, he's not the hardest worker. Let me put it this way. I wouldn't hire him again. Great introductory phrase. Whenever you're in that situation, you want to be clearer, more direct. Let me put it this way. Let me put it this way. You're going to put on this suit. You're going to come to this party or I swear to God I'll blind you with a hot spoon they did to that little boy in Slumdog Millionaire. Really, Dwight? How fast are you? Let's just put it this way.

Last weekend, I outran a black pepper snake. Then there's to come to terms with. This means to gradually accept a sad or difficult situation. Now, keep in mind this is not necessarily agreeing. It's really an emotional process. So, you're likely going to use this when talking about grief, illness, or even a major life change. So, here are some things that you and well, me as well, that we may have to come to terms with. The loss of a loved one, losing a friend, uh a breakup, a divorce. There are many different things that we really need to process emotionally and it may take time to come to terms with it. He is still coming to terms with the fact that he has to move to a new city.

Here are some more examples. So, a lot of patients need time to come to terms with their diagnosis. The same thing happened to my mother. My father was deep in debt, so I was helping him come to terms with selling our family home. Subject to change. I like this phrase because I use it from time to time. I may throw out a statement uh which is true and say, you know, everything is subject to change. It means dependent on the circumstances, not final. Often you're going to use this with the verb to be and say that something is subject to change and you may come across it in legal documents or more formal announcements. And it's another way of saying that this is the plan for now, but just don't count on it. It's not 100%.

Here's an example. The flight is subject to change due to the incoming storm. Great phrase. Maybe you can use it just like I do. If somebody asks, you know, what's your plan? What are you going to do? Is this final? And then you could say, you know, everything is subject to change. At a new journey time, 3 years to get home. Subject to change.

What? I didn't need to be in there. The next phrase is to pull out all the stops. This means to use every possible resource or effort to make something successful. Now, this is an idiom, and let me tell you where it comes from. This is something I did not know. It comes from playing the pipe organ, and you would pull out the stops in order to get the loudest sound. So, it really implies that you or someone else is going above and beyond in order to make something successful, and it's a great phrase that you can use to add emphasis. I could say the hotel pulled out all the stops for the celebrities wedding, even flying in flowers from Paris. That is really going above and beyond. I try to pull out all the stops for these lessons, provide you with meaningful information, examples, nuances. And if you feel like that I try to pull out all the stops, you can let me know by hitting that like button. And I'm just going to keep saying and using this phrase, pulling out all the stops.

and that is why I want the legal team to weigh in on it. Give us a name, Raymond. Weigh in on this is your job now. No. Use the red metal to replace the damaged drill along the profit-making lines. Now you're talking. Dagny, would you like to weigh in on this? No. Here is our next phrase, to keep someone at arm's length. I'm trying to give you a visual representation. Just keep somebody away because it means to avoid becoming too close or friendly with someone. Like you're trying to maintain a professional relationship. So, this phrase, it could have a neutral connotation as in you're just trying to be professional. You don't want to get too close to your colleagues. Or it could have a slightly negative connotation implying that someone is cold or untrusting. I could say, "Even though they work together, she tries to keep her colleagues at arm's length." Now, this sentence, it doesn't tell us if she would rather just be more professional or is untrusting, but you get the idea. Whenever you want to keep someone at arm's length, yeah, you just don't want to get too close. You need to go make things right with your mother.

Because as long as you keep her at arm's length, you're going to keep looking to us to fill that void. I have loved before. It didn't work out. They either die a dismal death or they dump you with a handwritten letter. I don't know which is worse, but it's why I keep everyone at arm's length. Then we have the phrase in the wake of. This means happening after or often as the result of some event. Now, let me give you another visual. Think about a boat that is passing by in the water. The wake refers to those small little waves that the boat creates. So, the boat passes by and you can still feel the wake. You know that the boat has passed. In this case, the event has passed, but the consequences can still be felt. So, this phrase is similar to as a result of. I think the main difference is that in the wake of often refers to a consequence following something major, disruptive, or negative. Many people lost their homes in the wake of the flood. Now, I could say as a result of, but because this event is disruptive, it's negative, I am going to use in the wake of. In the wake of the flood. In the wake of the infinite future, the only thing that the only thing that remain the only thing that remain It is also the next and perhaps most important step President Kirkman is taking to reestablish our government in the wake of the capital attack. Just half an hour ago, Mexican officials closed the border in the light of so many US refugees who are fleeing south in the wake of the approaching storm.

To call into question. This means to cast doubts about something, to challenge the validity of a fact. So, in short, this is a very professional way of saying, I don't know if this is true or I don't know if this is effective. So, you can use this phrase to sound a lot more objective than just telling someone, "Look, I do not believe you." The new evidence has called his alibi into question. Now, there are doubts, we're a little suspicious, and yeah, we don't know if this is true. Okay, see you, Chris. Peter, this is none of my business, but you're turning your boy into a slacker. How dare you call my parenting into question? Buonasera. That means good evening in Italian. May I say having to explain that to you puts into question the authenticity of your ristorante?

Then there's the phrase to fall by the wayside. This is more of an idiom, and I like to use it from time to time. It means to be pushed aside, forgotten, or fail to be completed. This really implies that something was neglected because other things just became more important. And my example, this is just something that describes, well, me. Maybe you can relate to it, too. New Year's resolutions often fall by the wayside by the middle of February. I I know that I have big plans, I I come up with these New Year's resolutions, and then unfortunately, some of them just fall by the wayside. It happens, life gets in the way, you know, everything is just subject to change. We all know that the economy is bad, and bloated companies like Dunder Mifflin are going to fall by the wayside.

Peter's always been a girlfriend guy. He put all his focus and energy into his relationships, and all his dude friends just fell by the wayside. There you go. I knew it.

a favor, just go. I had a 48-year tooth brushing streak. I couldn't let it fall by the wayside.

Okay. Then there's to bridge the gap.

This means to connect two different things or reduce the distance between two groups. Keep in mind, this has a very positive connotation because we're we're talking about something that is solution-oriented, and therefore it's often used in business and politics. I could say, "The new mentor program is designed to bridge the gap between senior management and new hires. So, you're really trying to reduce the difference or bring people closer together or just connect two things whenever you're trying to bridge the gap. Well, if you want to get closer to him, then maybe you should bridge the gap. I do it all the time. Miss Bell, see what's up. See what's up.

It's not correct. I think it may sound a little similar if you were to say it quickly, but just stick with intense and purposes. For all intents and purposes. So, for all intensive purposes, people in need without a wristband are dead to us. Intensive purposes? Did you mean intense and purposes? Oh, wow. I didn't realize things were that bad. Yes, for all intents and purposes, Adrian has left me destitute. Hi, Howard. Howard? Sheldon. Howard is employing a schoolyard paradigm in which you are for all intents and purposes deceased.

Now, even though the English language is subject to change, I really think that native speakers will continue to use these phrases and you should too. I think that learning this vocabulary is going to help you bridge the gap between your speaking fluency and my own. I really want you to pull out all the stops and keep building your vocabulary. Do not let this fall by the wayside. Let me put it this way. I think it would help if you go ahead and watch another video lesson. And you know, for all intents and purposes, go ahead and hit the like button if you enjoyed this lesson and learn something new. Thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time. So long.

Sound Like a Native: Advanced Idioms You NEED to Know

Let's learn some advanced idioms to help you sound more natural when you're having a conversation more like a native speaker. And if you are someone who enjoys learning new idioms, building your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications, that way I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So let's begin with an idiom that I like to use from time to time and that is to cross that bridge when we come to it or to cross that bridge when we get to it. It means to deal with a problem if and when it arises and really an emphasis on the if and when because basically what you're saying is that you're not going to stress out over a future problem because it might not ever occur.

So, let me give you some situations. And basically, you could respond to these questions using this idiom. do if our flight gets cancelled tomorrow? That's a problem in the future. You don't want to deal with it now. So, you could say, we'll cross that bridge when we come to it. Or perhaps during a negotiation, I ask you, what do we do if they don't accept our offer? We'll cross that bridge when we get to it. Or perhaps we're trying to build something and I say, "What's going to happen if we do not get the building permits?" Well, we'll cross that bridge when we come to it and we're going to deal with these issues in the future if they actually happen. Here is a fun little comic using this idiom saying, "Hi, I'm that bridge you said you'd cross when you came to it." And in this case, yeah, you might want to avoid that bridge if he doesn't have that bullet removed.

I'll cross that bridge when I come to it. That's like step 37 and we're still on step four. Cross that bridge when we get there. We shake hands and forget all this ever happened.

We'll cross that bridge when we get to it. Then there's to get the short end of the stick. This means to be treated unfairly or to get the worst outcome. So let's say that in a group everybody has to do a household chore.

And one of those chores, cleaning the toilet, is not one that anybody really wants to do. So let's say that the person chosen for that task feels like well it was an unfair process they got the worst outcome. got the short end of the stick. So this idiom originates from the practice of drawing straws or drawing sticks. You hold them out, people choose and whoever gets the shortest stick or shortest straw has to do the undesirable task. So, in that case, it really means what it says. Let's have a look at some video examples. You're gonna get the short end of the stick. I don't understand what that means. Are you talking about money? Cuz I don't care about money. No, no, it's not just money. It's time, too. Just makes me sick watching him do his number on my cousin. He's the one getting the short end of the stick, letting somebody like you get away. The truth.

Allison gets the short end of the attention stick around here. In what way? Now, when it comes to improving your fluency, building your vocabulary, and developing your speaking skills, I don't want you to get the short end of the stick. I want you to succeed. And if you want to practice and improve your speaking fluency, you can join my speaking course. It's all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, and speak naturally. Each week, there is a different speaking topic. You will learn vocabulary related to that topic and you're going to practice your speaking skills with a variety of engaging speaking activities. So, click on the link down below if you'd like to join or learn more about the course. And I just hope to speak to you soon. Let's continue with our next idiom, which I think is a fun one, but it's not a good thing. And that is to throw someone under the bus.

It means to blame, betray, or abandon a person for selfish reasons. And I think we can all relate to this idiom. I have a little girl and a baby boy. And let's say we're eating at the dinner table and I find some food on the floor. I might say, "Hey, what happened? You know, why is this food on the floor?" And my little girl, Emmy, she's very quick to throw Luca under the bus. It wasn't me. It was him. He's the one that did it. And she'll throw him under the bus. Now, you could use it in a more playful situation like that, but I think often people will use this in a more serious situation. I got fired from my job because my colleague threw me under the bus.

Or my girlfriend broke up with me because a close friend, they threw me under the bus. Beware. Karma drives the bus you just threw me under. So, in this case, what goes around comes around. I hope the bus you threw me under swerves to hit you on the sidewalk. And you must have excelled at the throw people under the bus course in college. Did anybody find out about this? I'm throwing you under the bus. Are you telling me that if I throw you under the bus, you're going to drag me with you?

You put your interests above mine about just putting mine back up next to yours. Rehired. Husband and wife are supposed to help each other, not throw each other under the bus. Besides, you had a comment for throwing me under the bus like that. It's not my first rodeo. This is our next idiom, and you're going to use this to refer to a situation that someone has been in before. And really, you're going to end up using it as a standalone statement, and you're reassuring the other person that you do have experience. So the context in which you would use this idiom would be if someone's talking to you like you don't know what you're doing. You've never done this before. You don't have experience and you want to let that person know I do have experience. It's not my first rodeo. So generally it implies that you've done this thing several times before or you actually have quite a bit of experience when you say to someone, "It's not my first rodeo." To follow up on the idea that the person actually does have quite a bit of experience, here's a fun joke. Seems like a very low amount of rodeos.

And uh sunscreen. You are organized. Not my first rodeo. I'm running off here. Understood.

Not my first rodeo. Don't forget to support his head. I will. It's not my first rodeo.

Oh, I can't wait to take him to his first rodeo. Let's call a spade a spade. This means to speak honestly and directly about something even if it's unpleasant or embarrassing. So that last part is key when trying to understand how and when to use this idiom. Let's say that there is a topic that people are trying to avoid discussing like criticizing your boss. It could get you in trouble. But you're going to do it anyway and you're going to let people know that you're being honest. I'm just calling a spade a spade. So, you use this idiom to highlight the fact that you're being honest. You're being direct when you call a spade a spade.

I investigate. You dig holes. All right. I dig holes.

Don't just calling the spade a spade, isn't it? I mean, I'm all for living life, but this is the Geller's 35th anniversary. Okay, let's call a spade a spade. This party stinks. You still have too many side effects from the procedure. So, experiments.

Let's call a spade a spade.

To throw down the gauntlet. I love it.

This just means to issue a challenge. So instead of telling someone, I have a challenge for you, you can say, I'm throwing down the gauntlet. In case you're wondering, gauntlet, this is a really a medieval word. It's an armored glove and people would throw it down and then they might start fighting. If you want a more recent example, Thanos had a gauntlet in the Avengers in order to hold the Infinity Stones. Now, I am going to throw down the gauntlet right now because I don't think you're capable of subscribing to the channel. All you have to do is click on that subscribe button, but I don't think you can do it.

I'm throwing down the gauntlet. Let's see if you can do that. And of course, I'm just trying to trick you into subscribing, but still, it's a good example. So, I'm going to write my own story. Yeah. Yeah, that's right.

I'm throwing down the gauntlet, baby.

The training wheels are coming off, people. I'm throwing down the gauntlet today. Pull power shields.

Full power, sir. Well, we've thrown down the gauntlet.

means to do what you're expected to do without upsetting anyone. And this is a great idiom that you can use in a work context because let's say you're supposed to follow a policy or maybe just follow your boss's instructions or maybe even follow what your colleagues are supposed to do. And in that case, you could say you're just trying to tow the line. You don't want to upset anyone. You're towing the line. Here are some news headlines to give you a bit more context. Sneaker loafers, a hot new shoe trend, tow the line between fashionable and geriatric. This is kind of a funny headline because geriatric refers to older people.

Interestingly, this phrase is believed to have originated from people writing notes on their shirt cuffs for a quick reference, typically done by speakers or actors. Sure that you don't have anything to say about me being friends with one. Nothing off the cuff. What I do have is a prepared statement. I had to use my own words. An off-the-cuff emotional speech. Even Lincoln had to write his down. Take a last bow enough. Make it seem more off-the-cuff. Let's talk about the elephant in the room. And when somebody mentions this idiom, the elephant in the room, they're really referring to an obvious problem that everyone ignores. And I think we can all relate to this idiom when thinking about problems that we don't want to talk about, we're trying to ignore. Uh I just thought these pictures were funny if referring to a work situation that is obvious and yeah, nobody wants to talk about the elephant in the room or even a personal relationship. People have problems and they're trying to ignore the obvious and they don't want to address the elephant in the room. The next thing I want to say about this idiom, something that I I kind of just mentioned, is it's often used with specific verbs. To talk about the elephant in the room or to address the elephant in the room. I could say, well, just telling you directly, we need to talk about the elephant in the room. Or no one wants to address the elephant in the room. Here are some more examples. But I think we should probably talk about the elephant in the room. I think it's time we address the elephant in the room. We're all up. You want to talk about the elephant in the room? No, I don't. I don't even know why you brought that thing. I mean, the figurative elephant to go down in flames. This just means to fail spectacularly. And this is a great idiom whenever you want to add emphasis and descriptively say that something failed miserably. He tried to give a presentation off the cuff, but his presentation went down in flames as soon as he started speaking.

And you can use this idiom to talk about relationships that fail, business ventures that fail, pretty much anything. And if you don't believe me, you can just listen to the following songs. Elas down in flames. Three doors down going down in flames. Reliant K down in flames. My point is there are many songs using this idiom to go down in flames. I got to hand it to you, Roy. You go down, go down in flames.

This whole enterprise is going down in flames. If we're going down, at least we're going down in flames. Actually, I saved you. Seriously, man, you were going down in flames. Trust me, I know. Then we have the idiom up in the air.

This just means uncertain or unresolved. And often you're going to hear people use this or you can use this when talking about future plans. I could say, "Our vacation plans are still up in the air because we haven't booked our flights yet." Or, "The future of the project is up in the air until the board makes a final decision." I hope that your plan to hit the like button is not up in the air. This should be certain, definite. Hopefully, you have already done it. I guess my plans are a little up in the air. Who it is and if he's actually an insider at the White House, that's up in the air. I do have some stress with regard to the future of my business. Certain things are still up in the air at this time.

Then there's to move the goalpost. This is to change the rules unfairly during a process. So, let's say that I tell you if you learn five of the idioms in this lesson by the end of the month, I will buy you a plane. I don't know why I just thought of that, but okay, let's say I'm going to buy you a plane. You got to learn five idioms. And the one week goes by and then I tell you, okay, I want you to learn 10 of these idioms and you have to know all 10. And you say, okay, that that's fine. I'm going to get that plane. And then another week goes by and I say, "Okay, now I just want you to know all of the idioms in this lesson." I'm like, "Okay, I'm going to give it a try." And then once we get to the end of the month, I tell you, I want you to learn every single English idiom in existence, which is well, incredibly difficult. So what I keep doing is moving the goalpost and I'm changing the conditions and in that case it's really unfair to you. So I I think again this happens quite often when somebody establishes certain conditions and you're trying to achieve the goal. But as those conditions change that's when you can use this idiom and say that someone is moving the goalpost. This idiom comes from sports, soccer, football. There are goalposts and if somebody's moving them, it becomes more difficult to score. Which is the goal that you want to achieve? To move the goalpost. Time for the final exam. A gentleman's stool. Really feels like you're moving the goalpost. She's big dinner teas. No, I am not. I am not.

Yes. Yes. She keeps moving the goalpost.

Then we have the idiom to jump through hoops. This means to do a complicated or annoying series of things in order to get or achieve something. So, I'm from the US, but I live abroad with my family. And because of that, we always have to do immigration stuff. Like, I have I have to get a residency card. And when I was doing that, I constantly felt like I had to jump through hoops, one hoop after another. And it was very frustrating and annoying. To help you better understand this idiom, here are some more news headlines. You may not have to jump through hoops to cancel subscriptions anymore.

This can be very annoying and something that I think we can all relate to. American Airlines customer says the company made her mom jump through hoops to inherit her late dad's frequent flyer miles. Don't get me started on these airlines.

They constantly make you jump through hoops to do things. And finally, I'm disabled and homeless, yet I'm constantly forced to jump through hoops to prove I need support.

I was on my way jumping through hoops, kissing the proper behinds, tending to all the non-chemistry that one finds oneself occupied by. A lot has changed since y'all left.

Okay, you have to jump through some hoops, and the new foreman is here. You'll forgive us if we're not really in the mood to jump through too many hoops for a cat. The next idiom I have for you is to shoot yourself in the foot. This means to do something that causes your own failure. And basically the idiom means what it says. You hurt yourself. It's often accidental. You don't mean to shoot yourself in the foot. It just happens. Let me share with you times when I have shot myself in the foot. So I have shot myself in the foot when I bought a stock and then it crashed. And unfortunately, I've shot myself in the foot more than once. I have shot myself in the foot when I arrived super late for a job interview. And just so you know, I did not get that job. I have shot myself in the foot when I told my wife that I forgot her birthday. And that that's not true. That's just an example. If that did happen, I would really be shooting myself in the foot.

Don't shoot yourself in the foot like this. your foot and you're holding the gun.

Biker, I'm an idiot.

Boy, you guys just keep shooting yourself in the foot. But you know what? I'm done with all that. I'm not going to shoot myself in the foot anymore. I knew this moment was coming. So, let's talk about the elephant in the room. Are you going to watch another lesson or are you going to leave? Now, if your immediate plans are up in the air, let me try to convince you. I think you should watch another lesson because I don't want you to forget these idioms. You don't want to shoot yourself in the foot. And this is the challenge that I'm going to issue. I'm throwing down the gauntlet. I want you to keep watching more of these lessons. I'm not going to make you jump through hoops. I think you will definitely learn new things because I well I like to think that I'm good at this. It's not my first rodeo. And if you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time. So long.

Sound More American FAST: Master Connected Speech in 45 Minutes!

let's talk about American fast speech and I really want to do a deep dive and help you understand why people speak the way they do so we're going to talk about connected speech and I want you to practice this is a practice lesson and the way that I want you to do that is with shadowing and I am going to say the sentence and I want you to try to say it in the exact same way same intonation emphasis pronunciation as well as the same speed and I think that's one of the more trickier parts of shadowing so the dialogue that we're going to go over right now and I have a few of them that we're going to practice together is this one right here to begin with let me just say the dialogue and then we're going to look at each sentence one at a time and talk about all the different things that are going on so here is how I would say the dialogue is your cold getting any better no I'm going to get an Uber and go home but wait you're going to want to see this sorry I got to get out of here right away it sounds simple enough as you hear me say these sentences and especially because you're able to read it and listen to it at the same time I think it does make it that much easier but to challenge you and have you try to say it just like me can be a little more difficult so let's start with this first question right here is your cold getting any better so what's happening in this sentence the first thing that I want to talk about is a simulation this is when two sounds blend together to create a new sound often you may find this in question construction so in this case is your that final z sound in is is going to blend with that Y and your and it's going to get a j sound it's like we're putting it right between the two words which is what allows us to then connect them together so this is not something that you have to force as you just transition from one word to the next it's going to occur naturally it's also not a fixed rule you may hear people say these words separately is your but often especially if somebody's speaking a little faster this blending will occur and it's going to sound like isure isure I've given you the phonetic spelling uh just to hopefully make it a little easier for you to see the pronunciation and see what's happening is your cold getting there are a few things happening so getting with these verbs in the continuous tense it's very common I think in the United States for people to drop that g so instead of getting I am going to say getting and the other thing you may notice is like wait a second that t change from getting in which case I'm using a flat T it's going to sound like a soft D because it comes between two vowel sounds and it changes to a glottal t a glottal stop getting now with the American accent when you have the T that t sound followed by an N sound you may hear people say this as a glottal T the glottis is closing it's blocking the flow of air and that that's where the sound is coming from your throat think about if I say uhoh that is a glottal stop that uhoh uh oh and the same thing happens with the T in words that follow this pattern t plus an n Sound in words like kitten written button or in this case get get get and then linking can occur I can link that n Sound with the vowel sound in any this is when we link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next I told you I'm giving you giving you a lot of information with just this one simple question so the way it's going to then sound uh is your cold getting any better of course better you're going to hear me pronounce those t's as a flap te this is very common with the American accent and if this is an accent that you are trying to emulate definitely use the flap T so better you'll hear me say it that soft D better it is a yes no question so you really do have that Rising intonation as I ask the question is your cold getting any better is your cold getting any better now I want to practice this and I want you to say it with me I want you to Shadow and say it at the same time I'm going to say it two times slowly and then twice at a normal speed and I want you to say it out loud practice your speaking skills and think about these different things that are going on so let's say it twice slowly together right now ready is your cold getting any better one more time is your cold getting any better now let's speed it up and say it twice at more of a normal speed here we go is your cold getting any better excellent let's look at the next sentence right here I'm going to get an Uber and go home all right it sounds very fast when I say it like that so what's going on the first thing is I'm going to of course going to we can reduce that to gunana that is a very common reduction probably the most common reduction in spoken English one that you may already be actively using right now the one thing that makes this a little trickier and this is something you know if you don't feel comfortable using it do not feel like you have to use this do not feel as though you need to use any accent whatsoever I like working on this but I always tell people that even if maybe you don't feel like using this that's perfectly fine I do think it helps a lot with your listening comprehension because you will hear people speak this way so I'm going to I'm gonna I can reduce it even further and it's going to sound like Amina Amina either one works it's very common to say I'm gonna but just for practicing this to kind of get you outside of your comfort zone a little bit let's use Amina am and you'll hear people say look I'm gonna go to the gym I'm gonna go to the mall I'm gonna go to the store i'mna i'mna Amna in this case I'm going to get an Uber I can link that entire phrase again we're linking the final consonant sound with the beginning vowel sound and then that final T in get you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T so even when we have a phrase and then the final letter is a t if the next word begins with a vowel sound I'm GNA change that to a flap T get in get an Uber I'm gonna get an Uber and go home but I'm not really going to say and go home I'm going to reduce and and and the vowel sounds going to change it's is going to sound like n n and go home so let's practice this sentence twice two times slowly say it with me shadowing say it out loud and then twice at a normal speed so let's say it two times slowly I'm going to get a uber and go home

let's say it again I'm going to get a uber and go home now let's speed it up a little more are you ready I'm going to get an Uber and go home once more I'm going to get an Uber and go home this is not something you'll be able to do perfectly the first time it's just something you need to keep working on because a lot of this is just muscle memory transitioning from one sound to the next and you can repeat repeat say it out loud and eventually it's going to start sounding more and more like this American accent because that is what I'm talking about the next sentence you're going to want to see this except I'm not going to say it like that I'm going to say you're going to want to see this so there are a couple of reductions we've already talked about going to getting reduced to gunana want to is another very common reduction and it's just going to sound like Wana it is a little tricky when you have one reduction right after the other going to want to going to W so you may hear somebody say a sentence like this you're going to want to see this or maybe they say a sentence uh like you're going to want to hear this all right indicating that hey I have some information or something that you either want to see or hear so this other person is telling their friend who wants to go home look wait wait wait wait you're going to want to you're going to want to see this you're going to want to see this don't go just yet however the person says look I got to get out of here right away I got to get out of here right way what is happening here got to is another reduction I can reduce that to G you're going to hear me say those flap T's gotta get out of we can link that phrase together and that t is also a flap T I really want you to think about this phrase get out of get out of because we use it often if you're looking for a great phrase to start with when it comes to linking and practicing that this is a great starting point because we use it to say well uh I'm you know I need to get out of bed or get out of the car or get out of trouble get out of get out of get out of we use it in a variety of different context so I got to get out of here right away I can link that final phrase and that t right instead of a stop te I'm going to pronounce it as a flap T because it comes between those Val sounds and I'm going to link it with away right away right away hopefully you can hear that soft d right away let's look at the whole sentence and practice together two times slowly are you ready I gotta get out of here right away I gotta get out of here right away now let's speed it up a little twice ready I got to get out of here right away I got to get get out of here right away let's go back to our dialogue and practice together so I so to start out I am going to say part A and I want you to say B it's not a long conversation and hopefully it'll it'll syn up a little bit and it'll sound natural as though we're just saying this together and then we're going to switch and I want you to say a and I will'll say B so I to begin with I am a you are B let's begin is your cold getting any better but wait you're going to want to see this all right good good let's switch and now I want you to say a and I am going to say B you can begin right now no I'm going to get an Uber and go home sorry I got to get out of here right away excellent I I I take it that you are practicing saying this out loud with me because th this is the way you kind of work on reducing your accent if that is one of your goals but I told you that you should never feel like you need to speak with any specific accent but I really do believe this will help with your listening comprehension because you will hear people say these simple sentences just like this is your cold getting any better no I'm going to get an Uber and go home but wait you're going to want to see this sorry I got to get out of here right away let's keep practicing because there are several dialogues that I want to go through and just keep digging in to the different various locations in the United States and I'll tell you where it is um but if you want to guess you can write it in the comments he's been in the kitchen cooking up a storm so what's going on in this sentence the first thing is Benin I can link that together and it's almost like I'm moving that final consonant sound over to the next word with that beginning vowel sound Ben in he's been in the kitchen cooking up a storm we've talked about gropping with those verbs in the continuous tense we've talked about gropping with those verbs in the continuous tense so instead of cooking and you hear that in sound it's going to sound like cooking cooking and then I can link that phrase cooking up a cooking UPA cooking up a storm he's been in the kitchen cooking up a storm I do want to point out that the phrase up a storm is used to refer to well doing something with a lot of energy and and often skill so if somebody's in the kitchen cooking up a storm then they're preparing a meal it's probably going to be a good meal and they're working really hard and very you know putting a lot of energy into this so let's practice saying this sentence right here let's say it two times slowly and I want you to say it with me at the same time or try to say it at the same same time and then we'll say it twice at more of a normal speed so let's practice this slowly he's been in the kitchen cooking up a storm one more time he's been in the kitchen cooking up a storm now let's say it again two times at a normal speed ready he's been in the kitchen cooking up a storm once more he's been in the kitchen cooking up a storm great job let's look at the next sentence right here oh also if you're wondering this picture right here is from like the Bean in Chicago so this is uh from the the Windy City of Chicago here's the next uh sentence I don't want to bother him but I really want to bite to eat so what's going on in this sentence right here I don't want to want to I can reduce to Wana very common reduction bother him now alision is when sounds or syllables get removed and there are certain times when this happens in one instance it happens with the H in words like he him her his when it comes in the middle of a sentence or the middle of a clause now I don't want you to think about it as the sound it just completely gets removed in this case think think about it like we're turning the volume down and you don't really hear that H it's not really a strong sound to begin with but once I I turn down the volume on that consonant sound I can then link that final consonant with bother with that hm sound so bother him bother him you don't really hear that H and linking can occur I don't want to bother him but I really want uh so what's going on here when the T follows an n Sound I told you there were different times when elision may occur that t T May alide and instead of want and we're linking that t sound over the T alides and it's just going to sound like Wana to give you another example of that t liing it happens with individual words like instead of center with the American accent you're going to hear me say Center interactive with the American accent interactive internet that talides and I'm just going to say internet so this is something that is quite common with the American accent so I just want to point out this is what's going on with that want uh it's going to sound like Wana and then the word two it actually has two different pronunciations a strong form and a weak form the strong form is going to sound like the number two the weak form it gets reduced the vowel sound changes and it's going to sound a little more like awah sound it is a much softer sound T bite to eat eat bite to eat so let's practice this sentence right here again we'll say it two times slowly and then two times at a normal speed I don't want to bother him but I really want to bite to eat one more time I don't want to bother him but I really want to bite to eat now let's speed it up a little say it at a normal speed here we go I don't want to bother him but I really want to bite to eat one more time I don't want to bother him but I really want to bite to eat and in case you're wondering this is a picture of the uh I believe I don't know the Space Needle from in Seattle so this is uh from Seattle Washington a very famous landmark here is the next sentence don't you want to wait until he's done okay don't you want to wait until he's done what's going on with this question we talked about assimilation two sounds they blend together to create another sound in this case the T and Y blend together and you get a slight CH so instead of don't you don't you don't you it's very slight you don't have to force it it'll just occur naturally don't you want to we can reduce that to wna Don't You Wanna don't you wanna wait until I can link that phrase that final T and wait you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap t wait until instead of he's once again allision may occur we mute that H and then I can link that final consonant in until wait until he wait until he's done and this is a yes no question so you'll hear that Rising intonation don't you want to wait until he's done so let's practice this question two times slowly and then two times at a regular speed so let's you know the two of us say it right now together slowly here we go don't you want to wait until he's done one more time don't you want to wait until he's done and now if I speed it up a little bit at a more of a normal speed say it with me don't you want to wait until he's done once more don't you want to wait until he's done nice this is uh picture I know you can't see it right now I think it is from uh Arches National Park in Utah very uh beautiful state a lot of amazing uh national parks there here's the next one I'm I'm gonna try to stay out of his way I can just really like run right through this sentence I'm gonna try to stay out of his way so what's happening way one more time I'm gonna try to stay out of his way now let's say it again but at more of a normal speed and yeah it can be fast one of the challenges of shadowing is that you you're trying to maintain that same speed so let's say it one time at a faster speed ready here we go I'm going to try to stay out of his way give it another try here we go I'm going to try to stay out of his way nice hopefully you can try to maintain that speed and just transition from one sound to the next so uh before we look at the dialogue this is a picture from Siesta Key Florida a very well-known beach in Florida very pristine very beautiful so let's practice our dialogue and we are going to take turns I want you to say this with me I will start out and say a and I want you to say B and I expect that you're going to say this out loud that's what I want you to do I want you to practice your speaking skills so I will begin and then you can say B and then we will switch are you ready here we go he's been in the kitchen cooking up a storm don't you want to wait until he's done all right excellent let's switch now I want you to say a and I will say B so you can go ahead and begin I don't want to bother him but I really want to bite to eat I'm GNA try to stay out of his way okay so again this is another dialogue using you know different parts of connected speech some of it's view this is very common when we're talking about just casual spoken English and I the other thing I would say is don't think of it as even like formal or informal you're still going to hear people use parts of connected speech when they're giving a presentation at work or in another situation people will still use reductions like gunana and Wana and they will link their phrases together so here is our next dialogue and once again we're going to do a deep dive and talk about everything that's going on but I want you to practice it with me and at the end we'll go through and take turns saying these different sentences but first I just want you to listen to the way I would say these sentences what do you want to do tonight I'm going to go get a bite to eat do you want to go sure could you wait until I finish work it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night so what's happening with this sentence right here again see if you can identify some of these landmarks because we're talking about American English I'm talking a lot about the American accent so I thought I'd throw in some uh nice American landmarks and famous landmarks in the US what do you want to do tonight what do you want to do tonight very you know common question that someone may ask so the first thing is that you do have some overlapping sounds but really the the te is going to alide it goes away because the T and D it's the same position the tongue is up behind your top front teeth kind of touching that aviola Ridge but we're we're putting it in the T but we're not going to release we're going to release into that D sound so that's why I I said like elision really occurs so you don't hear this what do these two separate words it's going to sound like w do W but do is also not a word that gets emphasized and when these words are not emphasized that they may get reduced and that vowel sound changes slightly so it is a weak do which is going to sound like du what what what are you what are you that is another thing I want to point out youu is a word that also has two different pronunciations a strong form U and a weak form in which it's going to sound like it has more of awah sound y y so you could say what are you what are you what are you or what are you what are you what are you you may hear both and I'm not going to encourage you to say one over the other but something I just want you to be aware of because like I've said this is really going to help your listening comprehension so we have Whata I'm just going to use Whata for the sake of this exercise want to I can reduce that to wna what do you want to do what do you want to do tonight what do you want to do tonight so Doe tonight again that t it does come between two vow sounds so you're going to hear me pronounce that flap T do tonight do tonight do tonight what do you want to do tonight so it is very soft and that's why I kind of underline I did want to highlight it but it is soft which is why you you do hear that flap te so let's say this question four times twice slowly and then twice at a normal speed so let's practice this slowly first say it with me ready what do you want to do tonight one more time what do you w to do tonight it sounds a little weird saying it slowly because again that's when I think then you would expect to hear that tonight that that t sound but if somebody is saying this quickly with that American accent it's going to sound like this so let's say it quickly together more at a normal speed are you ready what do you want to do tonight give it another try what do you want to do tonight so let's look at the next sentence but before we do uh you probably know this is a picture of Mount Rushmore all right very well-known uh uh landmark in the US so the next sentence I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go I'm going on to get a bite do you want to go all right and then you can think about where this beautiful lovely place is right here so we notice the theme you see a lot of this I'm G which is perfectly fine but in these sentences you're going to hear me reduce it to that am uh again it's just something if as you practice this I think you will feel a little more comfortable doing it but again don't feel like you have to you can just use I'm gonna if you're more comfortable with that uh phrase but you'll hear me say I'm gonna get a I can link that phrase together and I'm going to say that t as a flap te geta geta I'm going to get a bite to eat so that two is a weaker two so it's going to sound like T and then in that with that last question I could say do you do you wanna because I'm going to reduce want to do you want to go but if I'm saying it quickly it may sound a little more like the schah and don't think of this as like one or the other try to think of it like a spectrum and it could come anywhere between U on one end all the way down to like y on the other do you want to go do you want to go do you want to go it is a much softer sound which is why I say it kind of gets reduced in that vowel sound changes because you're not really emphasizing it so let's practice these uh two sentences two times slowly and then two times at a normal speed so let's say it slowly together ready I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go one more time I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go now a little faster at a normal speed ready I'm going to get a bite do you want to go once more I'm going to get a bite do you want to go okay good and I hope that you notice this uh in the background that is a picture from yosity National Park it is probably one of the most beautiful Parks national parks that I've seen in the us here is the next question could you wait till I finish work could you wait till I finish work so let's talk about what's going on and I bet you'll probably be able to guess where this picture uh was taken so could you ass similation may occur we're going to blend that D and Y and basically we're going to end up with a J sound could you could you it's like we're putting it right between those words and that allows us to connect them could you wait till so you do have overlapping sounds that final T and wait in the beginning T in if they overlap and then basically they end up coming between two vow sounds so together it's going to sound like that flap t wait wait I because then I can link those three words together wait I wait I finish work could you wait till I finish work let's say this together slowly and then at a normal speed so two times slowly say it with me ready could you wait till I finish work once more could you wait till I finish work now let's say it a little faster at a normal speed here we go could you wait till I finish work once more could you wait till I finish work nice and yes this is a you see that kind of Casino down there the neon lights this is Las Vegas the last sentence it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night so what's happening here getting I'm going to drop that g so instead of getting it's going to sound like getting I've talked about that gladle t when you have the T followed by an n Sound the sound's coming from your throat getting getting it's getting late it's getting late I don't W to I can reduce that W to wait around all I can link those three words together and you'll hear that flap te in wait wait around all night wait around all night it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night let's say this together Shadow Say it With Me Slowly two times ready it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night once more it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night now it's going to be a little more challenging as we speed it up I still want you to Shadow say it with me at a normal speed ready it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night one more time it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night you're doing great let's practice this dialogue now and of course I I think you know this is New York City the Big Apple because you can see the Statue of Liberty right there so let's practice this dialogue I am going to start out I will say a and then I want you to say B and hopefully the timing will will work out because I'll give you a moment to say your part and then we'll switch in you can say a and I will say B are you ready here we go what do you want to do tonight sure could you wait till I finish work nice let's switch I want you now to say a and then I will say B so you can go ahead and begin I'm going to get a bite to eat you want to go it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night all right well done give yourself a round of applause but it's not through it's not over just yet I want to do one more dialogue here is the final dialogue that I want to practice with you so once again I'll start out you can just listen to me say these sentences and then we're going to break it down one at a time so this is how I would say this dialogue what did you do last night did you go to the movie yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work I'm going to go see it this weekend if you want to see it again let's do it I'm up for watching it again so let's talk about what's going on and we'll begin with with these two questions right here and just as a little mini quiz you can think about where in the US this is and I think you I think you know but uh the first two questions what did you do last night did you go to the movie simple easy to understand when you hear it but as far as saying it and trying to think about the way people in the US would say this let's let's talk about that right now let's get into the the details so the first thing is assimilation what did you this is a common question construction and that t and D you do have overlapping sounds I've already talked about this you're really you're not really going to hear that t you're moving into that position but then you're releasing into that D sound what did you that D and Y blend together and you get a j sound so th this is very common what did you what did you do last weekend what did you do last night what did you do yesterday what did you what did you what did you now as far as assimilation goes you you hear that as well in other questions where did you thee that is a useful phrase that you'll hear a lot and again if you're interested in imitating the American accent this is a good phrase to keep in mind that go to the go to the go to the because you do hear that flap T and it is a week week two and I I say this and I point this out because we use this phrase a lot you go to the gym go to the mall go to the store go to the movie which is what we're talking about right now so let's practice these two questions we'll say it two times slowly and then two times at a normal or or a faster speed so let's say these two questions slowly I want you to Shadow say them with me right now here we go what did you do last night did you go to the mov movie one more time what did you do last night did you go to the movie now let's say it a little faster again just say it with me try to maintain that same Pace what did you do last night did you go to the movie let's say it one more time what did you do last night did you go to the movie good the next sentence um oh yeah if I I keep forgetting you know I think you know this is Hollywood in Los Angeles the very famous Hollywood sign I I think you see it a lot in movies and TV shows but let's go ahead and look at the well the next picture as well as the next sentence yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work so what's happening here well first off got G I can link that phrase together moving that final consonant sound over and it is going to be a flap t comes between two vowel sounds gotta yes I got a ticket and is often reduced and it's just going to sound like N I got a ticket and then called in now I can link this phrase together and I'm going to move that that e d called would have a D sound because that l sound is a is a voice sound called in and you can hear that D sound as I link it called in sick there's that week to to to work called in sick to work called in sick to work so putting it all together yes I got a ticket and then called and sick to work but let's practice it I want to say it two times slowly and then two times at a normal speed so let's begin with saying it slowly here we go yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work again yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work now let's speed it up a little bit say it with me here we go yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work again yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work keep it up you're doing great and just so you know this is a picture from uh Time Square in New York City it's Broadway so it's uh def definitely I recommend checking out Broadway if you're there this probably looks familiar already but uh I'll I'll still tell you where it is uh in case you forgot so the next sentence I'm going to go this weekend if you want to watch it if you want to see it again I'm going to go this weekend if you want to see it again I'm gonna that's perfectly fine it's very common people say it all the time but you're going to hear me I'll go ahead and reduce it even further with that i'mna i'mna I'm gonna go this weekend I'm gonna do this I'm gonna do that I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to we can reduce that to W to see it again that T I'm going to pronounce it as a flap T and then link it with the vow sound in again it again if you want to see it again if you want to see it again now let's practice this two times slowly and then at a faster speed so let's say this slowly together here we go I'm going to go this weekend if you want to see it again one more time I'm going to go this weekend if you want to see it again let's speed it up it's a little more challenging see if you can maintain that same Pace here we go I'm going to go this weekend if you want to see it again let's say it one more time I'm gonna go this weekend if you want to see it again nice and then the last sentence Oh yes I mentioned this is uh another picture from Seattle Washington you see that uh the giant the Space Needle right there what do you think let's do it I'm up for watching it again what's happening in this picture so not this picture well with this sentence let's do it so intrusion we haven't talked about this yet this is when you add sounds and typically if if you're going to add sounds the reason for this is to link two vowel sounds together and you see that final vowel sound in do with the beginning vowel sound in it and we're going to add a slight W sound again it's very slight but that is what then allows us to link these two words together do it do it do it you can hear you can definitely hear that W sound let's do it I'm up I'm up I can link that together and we're like moving that M sound over and just to point out if you say that you're up for something or you're up for doing uh something it it really just means that you're willing to do it like hey would you like to do this yeah I'm up for it or like Yeah I'm not really up for it all right you're not willing to do it so I'm up for I I can reduce that and once again when it's reduced the vowel sound's going to change slightly and instead of four like the number when it's a strong form it's going to sound a little more like fur it's a much softer weaker sound I'm up for watching because I'm going to drop that g so instead of watching watching and then I can link that together watching it again I'm up for watching it again let's do it I'm up for watching it again let's practice two times slowly ready let's do it I'm up for watching it again let's say it one more time with me let's do it I'm up for watching it again now let's speed it up here we go let's do it I'm up for watching it again one more time let's do it I'm up for watching it again all right you're ready you're ready to put it all together this Al also by the way is a picture I believe gosh I forget it was a while ago when I put this together I think this is the Shennandoah National Park along the East Coast that mostly runs through uh Virginia another beautiful national park on the East Coast so here is our dialogue just you can listen to me say it one more time and then I I want to practice this I will say A you will say B and we'll try to say it in a more natural way and then we'll switch so just to hear it one last time what did you do last night did you go to the movie yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work I'm going to go this weekend if you want to see it again let's do it I'm up for watching it again are you ready I will say A and I just want you to say B here we go what did you do last night did you go to the movie I'm going to go this weekend if you want to see it again good good good now let's switch I want you to say A and then I will say B so you can go ahead and begin yes I got a ticket and then called in sick to work let's do it I'm up for watching it again all right well done I really hope that you were able to get some speaking practice with me this this hour and actually try to work on some of these different parts of connected speech that we've been talking about reductions linking assimilation there there is quite a bit to try to take in but as I mentioned earlier a lot of this I think has to do with like muscle memory these are good exercises trying to just transition from one sound to the next and just practice it repeat it say it again and again and again so that the next time you're in a conversation you're not even going to think about it and you're just going to use a phrase like go to the and go I'm going to go to the gym I'm going to go to the store and maybe if you practice it enough the next time you would say I'm gonna you might hear yourself just saying look yeah I'm GNA do this or I'm gonna do that I'm gonna I'm am if you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Sound Natural, Not Textbook! Advanced English Phrases Explained

advanced phrases that native speakers use to be more precise, descriptive, and persuasive when both speaking and writing in no uncertain terms. This means in a very clear and direct way. This phrase emphasizes a forceful and unambiguous message. And often you're you're going to use it right before that that forceful message that you want to share. She told him in no uncertain terms to leave her alone. and she made it very clear in no uncertain terms that she loves you and she wants to stay in your class. A foregone conclusion. This refers to a result that is obvious to everyone even before it happens. So, you're going to use this when you want to say that the outcome is obvious.

There is no doubt as to the final result. Given the team's poor performance, the loss was a foregone conclusion. Everyone knew this was going to happen. From that point on, the whole game was like a foregone conclusion. I I couldn't fight this feeling that I'd already lost. Our next phrase, which is one that I really like, and that is nip it in the bud. This means to stop something before it gets worse. And when using this phrase, you're often going to use it, which refers to the problem or the issue. And you're going to do this because maybe it's already been mentioned. We need to nip it in the butt.

Tell you what, I'm going to nip this in the bud. You deserve a fighting chance.

today I want to teach you verbs to help you sound more professional and I'm really talking about work but this vocabulary is relevant to you and everyone else because well we use this in just everyday life situations we have to deal with people at work we have to talk to people who are perhaps in a position of authority but in making an association to work it's going to help you better remember the meaning so that you can use these verbs easily and naturally in in everyday conversation it's good to make that word association let me quickly introduce myself my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals if that's what you'd like to do please subscribe turn on notifications so that you will learn about future lessons let's begin with our first verb which is spearhead to spearhead something it refers to well an individual or a group who is going to lead some type of undertaking or movement and I'm really I'm talking about something big and important that's going on so you might say well you have this new program who is going to spearhead the new program who's going to be the leader or who's going to spearhead this this new ad campaign or who's going to spearhead the event so we're talking about leading some type of big undertaking next we have the verb for go to forego means to decide not to have or do something even though you really want to have it or do it you basically you basically just have to give it up which is something that happens in life it also happens in business maybe you have to forego a new business opportunity or you have to forego the promotion I can give you a sentence and say that you had to forego the promotion because the company asked you to spearhead this new project but it required you to move and you couldn't move so you had to forego the promotion and then we have this verb which is one of my favorite verbs because I like to do it every now and then and that is procrastinate to procrastinate means to wait a long time before doing something that you must do so so basically it's like you're just avoiding work and often I think you you may use this verb in the negative and somebody might say hey let's not procrastinate we need to do this now or don't procrastinate or perhaps even somebody like your boss could tell you stop procrastinating and I I do not want to procrastinate either and I want to take a quick moment to tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson which is lingoda so whether you're learning this vocabulary to sound more professional or any vocabulary for that matter you need to practice using it and if you are determined and motivated to improve your English fluency lingoda has an amazing using offer because this fall lingoda is getting ready to hold its very first two-month language Sprint and if you successfully complete it you can get 100 cash back so why why am I always talking about the language Sprint and why it's a great opportunity well there are two main reasons first you you get to improve a lot in a short period of time because this is an intensive language challenge you will take a lot of classes and the second reason is that well this is Affordable and not only that you can have the opportunity to get your money back and I'll tell you how you can do that right now because you have two choices when it comes to the language Sprint you can take the Super Sprint in which you will take 30 classes a month for two months if you successfully complete it you can get 100 cash back or you can take the Sprint in which you'll take 15 classes a month for two months and if you successfully complete that you can get fifty percent cash back you must sign up for the language Sprint by September 3rd because it's going to begin on September 7th and I I can honestly tell you lingoda it's a great school for learning a language I've even studied with them you can see me right there taking a Spanish lesson and I really enjoyed the classes for several reasons lingoda has experienced teachers flexible learning hours these are small group classes there's an interactive curriculum and as I've already mentioned the classes are affordable so if you would like to improve your fluency and join the language Sprint and take classes for 60 days click on the link in the description and when you sign up use the code west20 to get a 20 Euro discount so click on the link Down Below in the description to join the language Sprint be sure to read those terms and conditions and really just end 2021 on a strong note and improve your fluency now let's get back to our lesson teaching you different verbs to sound more professional and the the next verb that I have for for you is overhaul to overhaul something means that you are going to examine and investigate thoroughly in order to repair or revise something so it we could use it in the context of education and maybe a school is going to overhaul their curriculum or perhaps a business might overhaul their training manual you could also use this word as a noun has the same meaning and there are some common collocations you could say that you're going to do a complete overhaul of something or a major overhaul great word to know great verb because it really talks about some change that's going to happen the next verb that I have for you is resolve and the first thing I want to point out with this verb and really talk about is the pronunciation resolve notice that s really has the z sound resolve resolve and what it means is that you are solving some problem or difficulty and you're trying to make it come to an end and we often use it with some of those words that I just mentioned you would try to resolve a problem or resolve a dispute resolve an argument resolve an issue and I could use it in a sentence and say well the team has been procrastinating because they have not been able to resolve their personal issues and this is a problem because we're getting ready to overhaul the entire department then we have the verb strategize and to strategize means to think of a detailed plan in order to achieve success and you could use this in in business in sports in war and really when you strategize it's often done with one other person or perhaps a group of people it's a little similar to brainstorming but brainstorming is really when you you come up with with an idea strategize is when you're kind of taking that idea and you're creating a plan around it because you want it to be successful and once you strategize and you have that plan then you're going to need to implement the plan and to implement something means that you're you're just going to start using something you have some plan and now you're going to put it in action and you can you can Implement a plan a policy an idea and then well once you implement it you want it to succeed you want it to be successful and that's why you really need to execute to execute means to perform or or accomplish something such as a task a plan or an order and I I often think that this verb is kind of

associated with success you want to execute in order to achieve success and hopefully hopefully you will not have to improvise to improvise means that you're having to deliver or invent or or do something without preparation so for example maybe you have to give a presentation and you're not prepared and you're going to improvise the presentation that's not a good idea in business but sometimes uh at work situations may change and people people may need to improvise I could say well we we strategized for weeks and we we came up with this new plan we then implemented the necessary changes we were executing well and then all of a sudden conditions changed and we had to improvise then we have the verb champion and it's it's very different than the noun because to Champion something means that you are going to support defend or even fight for some belief or principle and relating it to work you might Champion maybe a new policy or you could Champion workers rights that's pretty common or maybe just Champion an idea or suggestion and really get behind it and support it next is the verb restructure and to restructure means to organize a company a business or even some system in a way that it operates more effectively and I think in it at work it could be a good or a bad thing because it could be good because restructuring May mean that the the company could have more success in the future it could be a bad thing because when a company restructures it it could mean that some people are going to lose their job to troubleshoot which means I really like this verb to try and solve a problem for a person or organization and usually you you're often finding why maybe a product or service is not working correctly and often I think it may refer refer to something technical or logistical like with computers but uh I think when you troubleshoot something you're really referring to maybe a smaller problem and what I mean by that is if you have an entire system and something's not working when you troubleshoot it you're you're fixing the one thing that's wrong and then everything starts working again that's what I mean when I say a smaller problem and I could I could use it in a sentence and say the business has been losing money and we could not easily troubleshoot our problems so I championed a proposal that would restructure the entire company from the top down then we have a very professional verb which is Network to network means to try and meet people who might be useful to you especially when it comes to work and this this is something that happens at conferences at parties at events and and P people will try to network you want to meet others that might help you get ahead in in business and I there's an expression that goes something like it's not always about what you know it's who you know it's that that who you know when you network that often becomes more important and could even eventually help you become more successful now I want to talk to you about some verbs that you may already know but I think they are also still going to help you sound more professional and use them instead of some more basic common verbs like uh the first one is to attend to attend means that you're going to go to some event or place you're you're just going to be present somewhere and I think it is a little more professional instead of using the verb like go and you're going to go to this place so you're going to attend a meeting or you're going to attend a conference uh the same goes for the verb assist to assist it just means to help and I think often these are they're interchangeable they're basically synonyms but I think it's a little more professional to use assist instead now in my opinion and this is just my opinion I think uh one difference is that I think when you ask for help then it's almost like you're having trouble with this thing maybe you just can't do it on your own I think if you're asking somebody to assist you it's like you're it would be nice if they helped you but it's it's like you've still done the the primary part of the job most of it's done but you just need a little help and you want somebody to assist you that's just my opinion but in general I think you could use them as synonyms but to be more professional use assist then we have the verb submit to submit something it means that you are giving or offering something for a decision to be made by others it's it's a little similar to hand in which I think is more informal it makes me think of high school and you would hand in your homework submit a little more professional all you might submit an application or you could even submit a letter of resignation and then we have the verb commute to commute means to make the the same Journey regularly between home and work and it's very similar to travel but I think commute is definitely more specific we're really talking about work and you may often follow it with a preposition you might commute by something like by train or by bus or you could commute from one place to another place and I could say something like I submitted a request to work from home because it just takes too long to commute from my home to the office all right so I hope that you learned some new verbs in this lesson I hope you can use them at your job at work so that you can sound a bit more professional if you enjoyed the lesson and you did learn something new please hit that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time so long

Sound Smarter Instantly with These B2 Words

Let's learn some B2 vocabulary to help you supercharge your fluency. Now, let's begin with five essential B2 nouns. And the first one is what's one that I really like and I use it quite often and that is nonsense. This refers to words, ideas, or behavior that is foolish, ridiculous, or or just makes no sense. Often, you can use this noun to dismiss something as well, not logical or it's just not true. We have the technology to to build a portal in an alternative universe.

Why, that's absolute nonsense.

Then there's stopover. This is a short stay in a place in the middle of a long journey, usually between flights. And some common prepositions that you may follow this noun with is a stopover in this city or a stopover at some airport.

You want me to go to Paris?

Paris with a quick stopover in London.

But it required a stopover in New York City. Tragedy. I'm trying to say it with more emotion because of the meaning. It refers to an event causing great pain, suffering, or distress. Think about a serious accident or crime. And there are some common collocations with this noun. If somebody's talking about a personal tragedy or a great tragedy or even a national tragedy.

The governor was using national tragedies for their own agenda.

It's a tragedy, a real tragedy.

And the next noun is dose. This refers to a measured amount of medicine that is taken at one time. And figuratively, it can also refer to an experience, usually an unpleasant one. Quite often, this noun is going to be followed by the preposition of a dose of something.

Your mother received a heavy dose of vaccine that wasn't meant for an adult.

Then there's rehearsal. This refers to a practice or trial performance of a play or some other work generally for a public performance that is going to occur later on. And there are some fixed phrases that are very useful with this now. If somebody's talking about a dress rehearsal, then that's really referring to the final practice before the public performance. Or if you hear in rehearsal, it means at that moment then, you know, people are currently practicing. We're in rehearsals. It's a live action musical tribute to the Dark Crystal. I don't believe I've ever heard of a wedding dress rehearsal before.

These are incredibly useful words. Try to listen for them. Preferably, try to actively use them.

Speak English Smoothly: Rhythm, Flow & Fast Speech Tricks

going to work on your rhythm and flow to develop a a smoother way of speaking. And we're really going to combine this with fast speech as well. And when I say fast speech, I'm I'm really talking about using connected speech. So, there are really two parts to this. And I do think it's going to help you not just smooth out your speech, but just sound more natural when you're having a conversation. And if this is something that you would like to do, you want to improve your speaking fluency, please subscribe, uh, turn on notifications, that way I can become your teacher. In case this is your first time here, my name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So, I I have one more quick announcement as well. If you are interested in in practicing and improving your speaking skills, you can join my speaking course. Check out the link down below in the description. It is for intermediate to advanced speakers. And the goal is to help you speak confidently, speak clearly, speak naturally. There's quite a bit of vocabulary and and we warm up with connected speech. Some of the things that we're going to be doing uh right now, so you can check out that link down below. So the first thing that I want you to be aware of is that English is a stresstimed language. I'm going to say that again. All right? It is a stress time language. There are other languages that are syllable uh time languages. So English is stress timing. And what what does that mean? This means that the stress syllables or words are said at approximately regular intervals. And I've given you this example right here with this question. So what did so instead of saying the individual words, what did you do last night? Again, people understand that. I don't want to say that it's in incorrect. There's nothing wrong with it. But as far as developing your fluency, this can be very useful.

You want to use that stress timing. What did you do last night? So the stress is going to come on what, do, and night. Everything else, the other words and syllables that are in between, they're going to get reduced in order to fit that pattern. So I'm going to you're going to hear me talk about this uh as we go through this. We're going to practice saying this that what did you do last night? And I want you to practice with me. What did you do last night? And that that's why I have our word for the day. It is actually it may sound a little more maleifluous. Now this is an adjective. It's not one that you're going to use every day, but when talking about language I think it's very useful.

It's a nice descriptive word because basically when you describe a language as maleifluous. It just means that it's it's pleasant to hear. It sounds musical. And I think you can speak English the way that I'm going to say some of these sentences. And I'm going to emphasize that stress timing and it's going to sound a little musical, which is why I wanted to share this word with you that what did you do last night? So, we're going to practice some of these sentences several times. We're going to go through the different parts of connected speech. We're going to practice saying them using stress timing. And I want you to practice with me. I want you to I don't want to be talking to myself right now. I want you to practice uh wherever you are at home, on the bus, it doesn't matter. So, this is these are the sentences that I want to practice.

And I say it's this is the speech. It's not like a speech like you're behind a podium, but this may be an example of you go to somebody's place and then somebody they say these sentences. So, I'm going to say them right now and then we'll go through each one at a time. If somebody if I, you know, I go over to someone's house and I say, "Look, thanks for having us over for dinner. I brought you a bottle of wine. Where do you want me to put this or should we go ahead and open it?" So, that's how I would say it. It's very easy to understand. Follow along.

I'm sure when you hear that, you understand it. individual sentences. Keeping in mind the stress timing, it's all about that that rhythm and flow. We're going to develop the rhythm and flow. So, the first thing I want to do is I've indicated the what's going on when it comes to connected speech down here. Right here you can see the stress timing and I put I'm showing you the intervals as well as the stressed word or syllable. So let's talk about this first and then we'll we'll put it all together. So the first thing that I want to point out is words when they're when they're function words they may get reduced. Four is a great example because when you learn this in school, you learn it like it's a a homonym like the pronunciation of the number four. And if you say four, again, it's not incorrect. It's fine. It's perfectly normal, but it's something to be aware of that this is a word that often gets reduced. When that happens, that vowel sound's going to change slightly. And this is not something you should feel like you have to do. Uh, again, one thing I will say is I do think a lot of this helps with your listening comprehension because you're going to hear me say sentences like this. You're going to watch a movie or TV show.

You'll hear other people speak like this. And I think often this is why people might tell me, "Oh, I listen to you and I understand everything that you're saying, but then I'm I'm out on the street and it's a lot more challenging to understand what what's going on." So for is going to get reduced. Thanks for it's going to sound more like for having us over. I can link this entire phrase. We're going to link the final consonant of each of those words with the beginning vowel sound of the next word. The other thing I want to point out is that the word having when you have these verbs in the continuous tense, I do this a lot. This is not a rule. It's not something you have to do, but often the G gets dropped. So instead of having, I'm you're going to hear me say have.

It's just easier to say. So I do think this is common with the American accent in the United States. You'll hear people do this all the time. So instead of having having us over having us over for dinner, once again, we're going to reduce for. So, let's let's practice this and then we'll do the stress timing. Thanks for having us over. I want you to repeat that linked phrase after me. Having us over. Just that one phrase. I'd say, let's say it slowly. Having us over. And we'll speed it up. Having us over. Having us over. So, thanks for having us over for dinner. I'm saying it slowly, but hopefully again you can hear that melody. Again, this is going to help with your listening comprehension, and I hope that as I'm doing this, you can hear the melody. So, the stress here are the intervals. The stress is going to come on. Thanks. The first syllable and have having first syllable and over and the first syllable in dinner. If I want to be specific, if you want to think about the clapping, thanks for having us over for dinner. That is going to help you really try to keep your words within those intervals. So, I mentioned that you have the stressed word or syllable. The words or syllables in between get reduced to fit that pattern, which is why words like for then get reduced. Thanks for having us over for dinner. So, let's say it slowly and then we'll speed it up. Thanks for having us over for dinner. And I again, I know I'm emphasizing it. Thanks for having us over for dinner.

Let's let's speed it up a little bit. Again, I trust that you're saying this out loud. Thanks for having us over for dinner. One more time. Thanks for having us over for dinner. If you can try to shadow and say it with me and just say it out loud. Now, let me add that emphasis and let's make it a little sing song. And again, just shadow. Say it with me. I'm really going to emphasize it now. Thanks for having us over for dinner. And I'm I'm really stressing those syllables. Thanks for having us over for dinner. And you can hear that melody. Of course, you're not going to speak like this in general conversation. That might sound a little weird. you go over and say, "Hey, thanks for having us over for dinner." People would be like, "Wait, was this a mistake? Like, why are you speaking like this?" What I really want to do is get you thinking about that rhythm and flow. And if you can try to capture it, then I think that's a positive step because even if I say this like at a normal speed, I'm still using that stress timing, that rhythm and throw that flow. Thanks for having us over for dinner. Thanks for having us over for dinner. Let's say it three times. Shadow. Say it with me. All right. Ready? Let's do it. Thanks for having us over for dinner. Again. Thanks for having us over for dinner. Thanks for having us over for dinner. All right, let's look at the next one. We'll we'll come back to this. If you are actually practicing with me right now, I love I I just want to know. Let me know. You can hit the like button. write the word speaking in the comment or chats. You can hit a heart. It doesn't matter what what kind of engagement, but as long as you just just do something and let me know, okay, you are participating because that's what this lesson is all about and just practicing your speaking skills. So the next sentence, we brought if I were to say the individual words, we brought you a bottle of wine. Okay, I'm not going to say this sentence and pronounce the individual words. Instead, I'm going to use different parts of connected speech and then we'll put it down here and we'll we'll practice that rhythm and flow. We brought you. So, assimilation is when you have two sounds and they basically it's like they're blending together and one sound really takes over. So the T and Y may blend together and you get this slight ch sound. So brought you may sound like brought you. Brought you. Hopefully you can hear that ch sound. brought you. Brought you. This is not a fixed rule. It's not something you have to do. But generally as you're transitioning from one sound to the next. It it will just occur naturally.

You do not need to force this. But we're going to blend those two sounds. brought you a bottle. That T that it comes before a dark L. So with the American accent, uh, which I'm from the US, you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T. It's going to sound like a soft D. Bottle. Bottle. Just say that word with me right now. Bottle. That is the American accent. And then I can link it with of. Bottle of wine. Bottle of wine. Now, I could say bottle of, but because the next word, wine, begins with a consonant sound, you could just reduce it bottle. Bottle of wine. We brought you a bottle of wine. We brought you a bottle of wine. All right. So, let's look at this right here. Okay.

And it's like, okay, yeah, somebody brought some wine. So we brought you a bottle of wine. We brought you a bottle of wine. You can hear that melody and really hear that rhythm and flow when I say we brought you a bottle of wine. And now again, I'm emphasizing that melody. So, let's let's practice shadow. Say it with me. We'll say it slowly. I'm going to really emphasize that stress timing. We brought you a bottle of wine. We brought you a bottle of wine.

Now I'm going to speed it up. Shadow, say it with me. We brought you a bottle of wine. We brought you a bottle of wine. One more time. We brought you a bottle of wine. All right. Excellent. Excellent. All right. Again, let me know. Saw so many people in there uh speaking, practicing. Excellent. Uh Lily, Ike, Takayo. Perfect. Uh so again let me know uh any way whether it hearts likes whatever just uh that you're participating in in the lesson that is what it's all about. So the next sentence this is a question where do you want me to put this? We'll we'll get to the rhythm and flow in just a moment. Let's talk about the connected speech parts of what's going on. So where do you do is another word that in in questions it's not you know really emphasized and this is another one that may get reduced. I I do this all the time. Sometimes I say do other times it may sound a little more like duh and you hear that schwa sound and the vowel sound changes. Where do you where do you where do you where do you where do you?

Now again that's not a rule. It's just something that occurs, especially if somebody's speaking a little faster. So, where do you want me? Elision. And I realize maybe that might be a typo. That should say elision. This is the omission of sounds or syllables. So, we have the N or the T follows an N. And in this case, it's going to elide. It comes between two consonant sounds. This is something else that happens a lot especially with the American accent uh with words like internet or even interactive. You don't hear me pronounce that true t when I say that. So the t is going to elide and want me is just going to sound like want me. Want me. Want me.

To is another word another common function word that often gets reduced. Instead of saying the number two, once again, it's going to sound like it has that schwa sound. To to put this, I just want you to say those final three words that to put this. To put this, to put this. So hopefully you can hear the difference. If I were to stress it and say to put this versus to put this, it's a much softer sound. And hopefully it's easier to say as well because you don't have to worry about stressing it. just a very soft to put this to put this. All right. So, let's look at uh the the phonetic spelling and then we'll practice uh the stress timing right here. So, where do you want me to put this? I just want you to repeat after me. I'm saying it slowly. Where do you want me to put this?

Again, you can kind of hear that melody. Where do you want me to put this? Let's speed it up. Shadow. Say it with me. More at a normal speed. Where do you want me to put this? Where do you want me to put this? Now you can see the stress timing. It's going to come where, want, put. If I remove all those words, you can kind of get the idea as to what somebody's saying. Where, want, put. So, where do you want me to put this? If it helps you, try to clap as you're saying the the question. Where do you want me to put this? Where do you want me to put this? Where do you want me to put this?

So, let's say it together, and I'm going to go ahead and clap and see if you can maintain that same speed. Pacing is also very important. Developing that rhythm and flow, just smoothing out your speech. Ready? Say it with me. Where do you want me to put this? One more time. Where do you want me to put this? Where do you want me to put this? Okay, I'm talking about that bottle of wine.

Now, again, maybe if you're walking and I don't know if somebody would ask, "Hey, where do you want me to put this?" You could. Uh, but I wanted to go over some of those different parts of connected speech. Now, the last one is another question, and there are some things going on, and then we'll we'll break it down. uh down below with the the melody the stress timing. So or should we go ahead and open it? Go ahead. So ahead and we can link that together and is going to get reduced and often sounds like n. I've talked about three of the main function words. Uh you well and is a coordinating conjunction, but it's not a word that you're going to often stress. So words like for to and are often going to get reduced like for to.

So go ahead and open it. Open it. We can link that together linking that final consonant sound with the vowel sound at it. Or should we go ahead and open it? Or should we go ahead and open it? Now down below I'm putting the stress on or should a head open. I'm separating or as almost like a different thought group. So there's going to be a short pause in between. Or should we go ahead and open it? Or should we go ahead and open it?

Now this is not something you have to do. Somebody may still, you know, they they may still maintain that same or say, or should we go ahead and open it or should we go ahead and open it? But I'm just going ahead separating it into two different thought groups and emphasizing and stressing that or or should we go ahead and open it? Or should we go ahead and open it? So, I want you to repeat after me again. Say this sentence out loud and we're going to follow that that rhythm down below that stress timing. Uh let me go ahead and move to this slide so you can see what's going on with a head n and then open it and we're going to link that phrase. So just repeat after me. Or should we go ahead and open it?

Or should we go ahead and open it? Now let me speed it up a little again. Shadow. Let's say it together. Ready? Or should we go ahead and open it? Trying to capture that melody. Or should we go ahead and open it one more time? Or should we go ahead and open it? Okay. So, now we've we've practiced all of these sentences. I want to I want to go back through them and uh I want you to once again keep in mind those different things that we were talking about and try to say it using that stress timing. Maintain the same speed. Use those different parts of connected speech. So I'll I'll go ahead and say I'll say the sentence and I want you to repeat after me and then we'll practice saying all of it together. So let's just start with this first one up here. Repeat after me. Thanks for having us over for dinner.

The next one, we brought you a bottle of wine. This question, where do you want me to put this? And then finally, or should we go ahead and open it? Okay, now let's do it again. And I want you to shadow and and say it with me. I'm going to go ahead and say all of the sentences. And I you're gonna hear me emphasize that stress timing a little bit just so it's easy for you to hear that melody, that rhythm and flow. So, let's say this together. Ready? Let's begin. Thanks for having us over for dinner. We brought you a bottle of wine. Where do you want me to put this? Or should we go ahead and open it? All right. Let me know again if you're practicing. Write the word speaking. Hit the like button. A heart. doesn't matter. Let me know that you're you're engaged in the lesson. That's the whole idea. I want to practice it again. The one thing that I want to challenge you with is see if you can maintain the same speed as as I'm saying this. I think that is the one of probably maybe the most challenging part of shadowing apart from uh the reductions and linking is just trying to maintain that same speed. So, let's we'll practice this a couple more times.

Excellent. All right. Great. Cinderella. Uh yoyo Pete's coffee. Uh love it. Pete's coffee. I miss I miss Pete's coffee. Uh when I was living back in California. Anyway, uh getting off topic. So, I want you to try to maintain that same pace. That's the challenge that I want to issue to you right now. Let's practice it again. I'm going to say all four sentences. Say it with me. Right. Ready? Let's begin. Thanks for having us over for dinner. We brought you a bottle of wine. Where do you want me to put this or should we go ahead and open it one more time? All right, you guys are excellent. All right, Li Raphaela, great to see you. Um, Yelson, everybody, people are participating. That's what it's all about. Let's say it again.

Ready? Begin. Thanks for having us over for dinner. We brought you a bottle of wine. Where do you want me to put this? Or should we go ahead and open it one more time? Thanks for having us over for dinner. We brought you a bottle of wine. Where do you want me to put this? Or should we go ahead and open it? So this these are simple sentences. You hear me say them. Even if you don't see the words, it's easy to follow along. It's easy to understand. But as far as your own speaking fluency goes, rhythm and flow using connected speech, I think it is going to help you smooth out your speech. It's going to help you sound more natural. And I I ultimately it should be easier for you to say. Part of the reasons why some of these words get reduced is because it's just easier to say than saying four or two and having to pronounce all of those vowel sounds. So, this is what I wanted to focus on in this lesson. really combine both rhythm and flow along with connected speech or sometimes fast speech is what I like to call it because it does allow you to speak much faster even though that should not be the goal is just to speak very fast. The most important thing is that people understand what you're trying to say. But when it comes to other parts, if you are giving a presentation or you're in another situation in which delivery is important and that is where this can certainly help you as far as delivering the message that you're trying to convey.

Once again, if you are interested in Oh, one before before I tell you about that, just keep in mind the stress timing. English is a stress time language. You have those regular intervals. There is a stressed word or syllable and everything else is going to get reduced in order to fit that pattern. And you can almost hear it when I say in order to fit that pattern. And you can hear that rhythm and flow. if I wanted to create it with basically any sentence. I can just create that melody. So, if you're interested in practicing and improving your speaking skills, again, you can check out that link down below if you want to join my speaking course.

So, I hope that you found this lesson useful. If you did, you can let me know by hitting that like button. I try to mix it up from time to time with different lessons, whether it's vocabulary, grammar. In this case, it is more about just speaking, not necessarily pronunciation, but just your general speaking skills, your speaking fluency, and talking about two things that I think are incredibly important as far as communicating with others, rhythm and flow, and then fast speech. Really talking about those different parts of connected speech. So, I appreciate all of you being here. Thank you, Lai, great to see you. Pete's Cafe, so many members. Raphaela, Taya, uh, great to see you. Uh, Manuel, I saw you in here.

Talal, so many familiar faces. As Tuli, Julia, thank you guys so much for being here. I hope that you learned something new. And I will see you soon for another lesson in the future. Marcia, Cinderella, there's just so many so many. Francisco, love it. Thank you guys. Have a good one. I will see you next time.

Speak FAST (and naturally) like an American

hello and welcome to today's lesson in which we are going to talk about well American fast speech I am from the United States so just keep that in mind most of the things that we're going to be talking about some of them are very specific to the American accent and I will point that out the other thing I want to say is that just because you hear people speaking fast maybe if you're watching a TV show or movie that does not mean that you have to speak fast the most important thing is that everyone understand each other so again if anything I think this can help your listening comprehension I know that when it comes to speaking everybody has different learning goals but I really want to break down why people sound the way they do why are words and phrases sound the way they do and we're going to be looking at Connected speech reductions intonation emphasis a little bit of everything and of course because this is interactive English I want you to participate I would like you to say these sentences with me say them after me you can practice shadowing if you like and then we're going to practice reading a dialogue and saying a dialogue at the end so I definitely want you to say this out loud practice your speaking skills and and take advantage of this opportunity so let's let's begin with the dialogue and right now all I want you to do is just listen to the way that I am saying this dialogue it's a very short conversation between let's say person A and person B so let's just listen to me uh say this dialogue is your cold getting any better no I'm gonna get an Uber and go home but wait you're going to want to see this sorry I gotta get out of here right away so you just heard me say this dialogue I you said it I don't think I said it too fast but it sounds it sounded natural again that's another thing that I want to talk about is just that natural Rhythm and flow of the English language especially the the American accent and what we're going to do right now is just look at these sentences practice saying them and then we will read this we will say this dialogue together one more time I'll let you listen to me say it again is your cold getting any better no I'm gonna get an Uber and go home but wait you're going to want to see this sorry I got to get out of here right away so again think of a situation I don't know maybe this is that happening at a party and these two people are talking and saying this so let's look at this first one and all of the images that I've included again just referencing the United States because that is where I'm from and we're really talking about the American accent you will find some of this some of the things we're going to discuss it's pretty common among all different English varieties but some of it some of it's specific to the US so the first question is your cold getting any better the first thing that I want to look at are those first two words right there is your and what I want to show you is that assimilation may be taking place so assimilation is when you have two sounds they blend together to create a new sound in this case we have that z sound in is and the beginning ye sound in your it can blend together and you get a j sound like in the word pleasure and I've given you the the IPA symbol right there all right I'm kind of emphasizing it a little bit right now is your try and say it with me azure one thing I'd like to point out again trying to say this naturally if you're just saying is your and you're saying it quickly you'll end up doing this naturally you'll those sounds will blend together and you're going to hear that slight je sound and it's like we're inserting that sound between those two words is your okay is your is your cold the next thing that I want to look at so I've included the IPA or the phonetic spelling up there is your above it looking at the next line getting any so getting if I were to pronounce that that ing that ing ing would be with the American accent a flap T it's going to sound like a soft D however sometimes when people are speaking and they're using the continuous tense and I think this is a little more common with the uh American accent people may drop that g and when they drop the G it's going to change that t sound so get in get in that T it's going to now become a glottal T because you have the t comes uh before a vowels in between two vowel sounds and then it's followed by an n Sound getting getting so it comes the t comes between two vowels and Then followed by an N getting so repeat after me getting Mountain kitten okay those are also words where you have that t which is followed by a vowel followed by an n Sound get in any the other thing linking may occur linking is when you have one word it ends with a consonant sound it may get linked with it with me right now out loud I'll say it slowly is your cold getting any better is your cold getting any better now let's say it quicker is your cold getting any better is your cold getting any better some of you who well I know who have taken my speaking course uh Giuseppe takayo we've practiced this especially uh specifically this sentence is your cold getting any better so this is the first one and what I'd like to know I'm curious I you know hopefully I want you practicing this and saying it with me I want to know how difficult how difficult was this to say um so I'm gonna put this down in the chat I'd like to hear so how difficult is this for you let's say let me put this down here real quickly [Music] um okay so I've put down this this poll how difficult do you think this question is to say it the same way that I was is your cold getting any better do you find it easy if it's easy one if you find it difficult for you to say it just like I am then five would be difficult so let me know what do you think um again well it's actually only given me two choices they're only easy or difficult and and you can tell me what you think uh so the next one that I want to look at but before we do I'd like to mention that if you're interested I have a speaking course that's going to start this is a course for intermediate to Advanced speakers and it's all about helping you speak confidently speak clearly speak naturally we start each lesson with activities like we're doing today uh talking about connected speech pronunciation and then we go into our topic learn new vocabulary have discussion uh some of you uh that I see who are in here have taken the course before Takaya Giuseppe I do want to give a shout out uh hello Vicki Gustav good to see you um but you can check out the link in the description down below I'll also uh include it in the chat and you can use the code speak20 to get 20 off the the course fee so check that out if you're interested in prac in practicing and improving your speaking skills the next uh sentence that we're looking at is this one if I were to say each individual word I'm going to get an Uber and go home so I I'm not going to say it like that I would say I'm going to get an Uber and go home so let's look at what's going on the first thing that I want to point out would be reductions reductions is when you basically end up removing some sounds and this allows us to say things well in a shorter amount of time we can just say things faster now I'm sure that you've probably heard uh going to getting reduced to gonna so you could say I'm gonna it's perfectly fine or if you want to reduce this even further I'm going to it may sound like Amina Amina and I want you this this may feel a little strange if you're saying this out loud I'm gonna I'm gonna I'm gonna give it a try but definitely listen for it if you're watching a TV show or movie you'll hear this instead of somebody saying I'm gonna it's gonna just sound like Amina and you don't even hear that g sound in going to or gonna I'm gonna Amina so when I practice this and when we do this I just you know give it a try see how comfortable uh it feels really reducing I'm going to and we'll we'll just try and say Amina Amina all right so let's look at the next part Amina and more linking can occur but one thing I'd like to point out get and that t and get it with the American accent it comes between two vowels it'll turn into a flap T and then linking can occur we can link that flap t with the vowel sound in an and then we can link that final um sound with the vowel sound in Uber get an Uber get an Uber get an Uber say it with me get an Uber one more time get an Uber here's what it looks like right here so I I gave you the the phonetic spelling up here get an Uber and it's almost like we're moving that consonant sound over to the next syllable get an Uber get an Uber the there's also uh more another reduction and is often reduced to just n and this is quite common in spoken

English instead of saying and you would hear people just say n and once we do that all right we're left with this so I'll say it slowly I want you to say it with me it's good to practice speaking out loud I'm gonna get an Uber and go home one more time I'm gonna get an Uber and go home and then if we're to say this a little faster I'm gonna get an Uber and go home try and say it with me and try to keep that same Pace I'm gonna get an Uber and go home and I tried to break it down in three different parts that first one I'm gonna get an Uber and go home I'm gonna get an Uber and go home I'm gonna get an Uber and go home one more time I'm gonna get an Uber and go home okay so what do you think uh what do you what do you think of this one again easy or difficult uh I'm not really giving you too many options here but uh again I'd like to to to hear from you and let me know what you think um whether or not it's easy or difficult so most of you I think had an easier time with um that first one you can see I think many of you thought it was easy so let's let me pull you for this next one too um while we're here I'm gonna get an Uber and go home all right keep keep practicing um that and like I said I everybody has different goals I when I've talked to a lot of Learners some people do not feel comfortable with that I'm gonna it feels strange and once again if you find something like okay this doesn't you know this doesn't work for me then yeah don't you should never feel like you have to speak a certain way let me let me put this poll together um okay so hopefully again you were practicing this which what do you think about this one I'm gonna get an Uber and go home do you find this sentence easier or or difficult again I'm kind of curious and we're going to put all of this together at the end once we go through and we're going to practice that dialogue that I read uh that I said at the very beginning so let's look at the next part the next sentence and there's the again all these images of the United States we're talking uh more about the American accent you're going to want to see this there is really one thing happening uh but it's happening one after the other and we're talking about more reductions so this one I think is a little more straightforward but once again it may feel uh a little awkward so going to will reduce that to gonna want to we can reduce that to wanna Gonna Wanna the thing that may well what makes this sentence perhaps a little more challenging is that you have one reduction right after the other Gonna Wanna You're Gonna Wanna See this and when we reduce these phrases these are not stressed sounds these are weaker uh weaker sounds which is why again they're getting reduced you're going to want to see this you're going to want to see this let's practice this one uh together so we have that Gonna Wanna I'll say it slowly just say it with me You're Gonna Wanna See this one more time you're gonna wanna see this you have that Gonna Wanna now let's speed it up a little bit you're going to want to see this you're going to want to see this if we just said it like naturally oh hey you're going to want to see this you're going to want to see this so I think again the going gonna and wanna two very common reductions in spoken English I I'm sure you've heard these perhaps many of you already use these reductions as part of your your speaking fluency right now I don't know how often you may use one after the other but that's what I wanted to practice if somebody were to say oh you're going to want to see this or you're going to want to hear this so what do you think uh about this one easy or difficult let me know I I think that this one maybe a little more uh maybe a little easier for for all of you that we're just talking about these reductions the last one uh okay everybody had well still a little bit more of a difficult time with that one uh but let me ask you about this one so once again I'm gonna let you guys let you tell me what you thought of this right here uh let's see oh is it um so again you're going to want to see this you're going to want to see this you can just practice it with me as I'm inputting this information okay let me ask you so what do you think about this sentence right here one reduction right after the other you're going to want to see this you're going to want to see this and once again just to reiterate this is not something that you have to use I do think this is useful for your listening comprehension because if you're watching a movie or TV show or listening to somebody on the street if you're visiting or living in the United States

you're gonna there it is you're gonna hear people using these reductions so let's look at the next one right here so this was uh the the other sentence that if I were to say this slowly I got to get out of here right away I got to get out of here right away and I'm in that case I'm trying to pronounce the individual words and for me it sounds a little uh it's a little difficult to do that to say it eat pronouncing each individual word so let's look at what's going on because what I would say is I gotta get out of here right away and the first thing that I'm going to do is reduce got to another common reduction in spoken English and it's going to sound like gotta I gotta I gotta say it with me I gotta I gotta and you hear that schwa sound God gotta it's also uh even though I spelled it with a t it is still more of a flap T you hear that soft D gotta gotta and then the next phrase get out of out of is a you hear this phrase in many different sentences and this is another good example of linking and we can actually link this whole phrase together and the final T in get and out with the American accent it's going to be a flap T get out of and then we can link all of this together get out of say it with me get out of get out of put it right here so you can see that phonetic spelling hopefully it makes it a little easier if you're practicing get out of get out of get out of and then right away so this once again flap T you you notice how common the flap T is in the United States it's very very often used and we could link we can link that flap t with the vowel sound in a way right away right away I gotta get out of here right away so say it uh say it with me I will say it slowly I gotta get out of here right away I gotta get out of here right away and then if we were to say it faster I gotta get out of here right away I gotta get out of here right away you have that sense of urgency I gotta get out of here right away I can't stay I gotta get out of here right away Okay so uh there's that other phonetic smell right away I gotta get out of here right away all right once again let me know what you think of this sentence uh and just kind of polling you guys so that that last one when we talked about those reductions that definitely seemed like uh it was a bit easier with that Gonna Wanna so let me know this one has a few more things going on in it if we're talking about reductions as well as linking and those flap T's so let's see I gotta get out of here right away what do you think about this sentence easy to say or a little more difficult you can let me know your thoughts right now and what I would like to do is we're going to put all of this together and practice the dialogue that we were that we I showed you at the very beginning so notice each each one we went over each of these sentences I did add a couple like no or but wait or sorry so before we practice we're going to do this together I just want you to listen to me say it one more time I'll say it slowly and then faster and then we will practice so slowly just listen for those things we talked about is your cold getting any better no I'm gonna get an Uber and go home but wait you're gonna wanna see this sorry I gotta get out of here right away now let me say it at full speed okay and then we'll practice is your cold getting any better no I'm gonna get an Uber and go home but wait you're going to want to see this sorry I gotta get out of here right away all right now let's practice I am going to read a I want you to say B and I want you to say this out loud and like we're we're just reading saying this dialogue together so I will be a u b b and we'll practice ready here we go is your cold getting any better but wait you're going to want to see this okay good now let's switch I want you to say you're going to be a and I will say B and we'll practice this again so ready you can begin one two three go no I'm gonna get an Uber and go home sorry I gotta get out of here right away okay all right so this whole lesson is just about giving you an opportunity to practice some of your speaking skills and work on some of the different things that are going on like I said if you don't feel comfortable using assimilation or linking or reductions that's perfectly okay it's not something you have to do I do think it's good to to get a feel for it and understand it and listen to it because it will help your overall listening comprehension because you're going to hear this when you're watching a TV show or movie and people are going to use Azure and they're going to blend those two sounds together or they're gonna link get an Uber and you'll hear that linking so if you participated in the lesson I just want you to let me know just write speaking down in the comments that that tells me that you were practicing you were saying these sentences out loud which is really what I want so write speaking if you were participating and actually practicing your skills uh let's see the last results of the last one uh sentence well maybe it was a little more challenging again I think when you have some of these different things going on it becomes a little more difficult uh like that last sentence I gotta get out of and Link that phrase together I gotta get out of here right away I gotta get out of here right away it can be a little uh a little trickier but once again it's all about getting that practice not just about speaking fast but just speaking naturally because you will this is how you're gonna hear other people speak if you are in the United States so I just want to say thank you for participating great job um eloisa Galia Shima Diaz um abdurahman uh gosuran Alexander excellent I'm always happy when people are practicing and again just this is an opportunity to actually work a little bit on your speaking skills and just as a quick reminder again um if you're interested where is it maybe right here nope uh you can check out my speaking course link is down in the description um if you want to check out class times availability use that code speak20 to get uh 20 off the course fee so if you enjoyed the lesson please hit that like button that tells me that maybe I should do more of these lessons in the future and again thank you guys so much for joining me Sal odia uh takayo great to see you I will see you soon in the upcoming course sorry if I mispronounce some names but I hope that you have a wonderful day and I will see you

Speak FAST (and smooth) like an American

hello and welcome to today's lesson in which we are going to talk about American super fast speech now before we continue I'd like to clarify what I mean when I say super fast speech what we're going to discuss in today's lesson mostly revolves around connected speech we're going to talk about assimilation reductions and this really allows people to move quickly through different words and phrases now that does not mean that everybody is going to speak super fast you can still use connected speech and speak at a slower Pace that's perfectly fine but understanding these different concepts I think will give you an understanding of why people speak the way they do which is going to help your listening comprehension if you do hear someone in a TV show or movie really just fly right through the sentence I think you'll be able to get a better idea as to what they're talking about so we're just going to look at some I think pretty basic simple sentences and we're going to explore this dialogue right here so just to start out I am just going to read it I'm going to say it out loud I just want you to listen and then we're going to go through these sentences one at a time and as we go through them I want you to practice your speaking skills and I want you to say these sentences out loud and practice with me so just to listen to the sentences listen to this dialogue uh I would say it like this what do you want to do tonight I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go sure could you wait till I finish work it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night so just listening to me say this dialogue out loud you can see the words and I imagine that you're a to then listen to it and think okay yes I understand that even if I didn't have the dialogue maybe I could pick out most of those words but let's have a look at what's going on with each of these sentences so let's start at the beginning and then we're going to come back to this at the end because I want to practice with you and again I want you to say this out loud so I've included pictures from the US because I am from the the United States so much of what we're going to talk about today it does revolve somewhat around the American accent and I'll try to point some of that out as I go through the lesson but let's just begin with that first question instead of saying like what do you want to do tonight and you hear each of those individual words the way I was pronouncing it I was just saying what do you want to do tonight what do you want to do tonight okay so let's look at what's going on and I'm going to break it down one at a time the first thing I want to talk about are those first two words what do so you have some overlapping sounds with the T and the D because what you have that stop T your tongue is coming up to the front part of your mouth to the the roof of your mouth and you're releasing right into the DU sound in do what do now when you say this quickly because the D sound is pronounced the same way your tongue's going to come up to the roof of your mouth and then you release it really is like that t then goes away like it alides and elision is when sounds are dropped and often this happens with the T or the D they alide in certain words and phrases and they just get dropped and you don't hear them so instead of what do what a what a you can hear it's like your tongue's just flapping against the roof of your mouth when you're saying that du d what a now I'm saying do is a weaker sound and this is a form of a reduction because there are certain words that I would say have two different pronunciations and I would also say that this is something that's more common in uh with American English so when you take some of these vow sounds and you don't stress them and it's a weaker sound often that vowel turns into a schwas sound which is an unstressed sound sound unstressed vowel sound so in that case instead of do it may sound more like du the same with u you can you hear people say you all the time which is more stressed when it's weaker when it's unstressed it may sound more like Y and that does not mean I think there's a little misspelling instead of J should say yeah that does not mean that people are always just going to say one or the other there is a spectrum between U and Y but basically that first those first three words it's going to sound like what you what you what you at least that's what I was saying when uh I said that dialogue what do you want to we can reduce that reductions or when we remove or change some sounds there are some very common phrases in which uh when I say reduction you probably think about W gonna have to so want to we can reduce to W and then the T in tonight and this is definitely part of the American accent when it comes between two vowel sounds often it's going to get become a flap T and it's going to sound like a soft D so even though that t is at the beginning of the word well you know the word before that do it still is going to come between those two vowel sounds what do you want to do tonight do tonight so do to T night it's very soft it's very subtle but I end up saying it with a flap t now something else uh you may be wondering I'm just going to take us over here and then we're going to practice this so I've given you the phonetic spelling up above these words and phrases to make it a little easier to follow what do you want to do tonight what do you want to do tonight hopefully you can hear that that flap t in tonight what do you want to do tonight the other thing you may be thinking is wait there are two words in there two *do*s why is one of them like and the other one you hear do what do you want to do and that is because that second do it is it is a Content word so you are going to emphasize that what do you want to do tonight what do you want to do tonight and basically in this question the three main words that are highlighted I would say are what do tonight and in that case even if you remove the other words you kind of understand well what somebody's trying to say what do you want to do tonight so let's practice this I want you to say this I want you to repeat it right after me let's say it slowly and then we'll say it faster what do you want to do tonight and now I'll say it faster what do you want to do tonight and then again if I were to say it very quickly super fast what do you want to do tonight now let's slow thing I just want you to say it with me this is shadowing all right try to keep that same pace and I'm going to say it like this what do you want to do tonight are you ready let's say it together what do you want to do tonight one more time what do you want to do tonight okay so that is that question very simple straightforward but really really doing a deep dive into what's going on here the next thing that I want to tell you oh very quickly I do want to mention that if you would like to practice an improve your speaking you can check out my speaking course enrollment is open you can also use the code speak 20 to get $20 off and I'll throw that in the chat if you guys want to check that out click on that link the link is also down in the description if you'd like to find more information but this is this is some of the stuff we do we warm up with something related to pronunciation connected speech and we work on some of this and I would always say that you should never feel like you have to speak a certain way that you have to use connected speech the the the main reason why I highlight this is to help you understand well why people speak the way they do understanding what's going on with these words and phrases and the sounds people are making which ultimately is going to help your overall comprehension your listening comprehension but it's fun to practice when you're speaking the next sentence uh that we have in there uh or two sentences I should say I'll say it each individual word I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go so when I was saying that dialogue I said it uh like this I'm gonna sorry I'm gonna get a bite to eat do you want to go I'm gonna get a bite to eat do you want to go I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go so let's look at what's going on with this one okay and again if you guys are practicing with me let me know let me know in the comments in the chat just write the word speaking so I know okay you are working on that uh and you're practicing because that's what this lesson is all about it is a practice lesson so let's see the first uh first part is I'm going to now we just talked about the reduction want to becomes Wana going to another very common reduction you could reduce that to Gunna now sometimes you may hear people reduce this even more when the statement begins with the word I'm I'm going to you may hear people reduce that to Amina Amina am for those of you who've taken my my speaking class you know you hear me say this quite often throughout the course I would say yeah I'm going to do this Amna Amna Amna Amna so it is something that you will you will hear I know that when I've practiced this with people sometimes it may feel a little awkward trying to say that I'm gonna but just so you know again it's very common to say I'm gonna as well so I I put both of them down there you could say I'm gonna or if you want to reduce it even further I'm gonna the next part is get uh all right that article uh and this is a great example of linking linking is when one word ends with a final consonant sound and the next word begins with a vowel sound so we can link these words together it's almost like we're taking that uh that t which is ultimately a flap T because it comes between those two vowel sounds and we're just moving it over and it becomes a part of the the article get get and I'm GNA geta I'm GNA geta I'm GNA geta and you can really move through that first part of the sentence really quickly I'm going to get a and the last part that I would say I'm going to get a bite to eat once again I talked about weaker and stronger sounds with certain words like to youu even for you might hear people say F now that doesn't that doesn't always mean people are going to say that weaker sound with the schah but I'm I'm putting it there just so you're aware of it so you know it and try to practice see again how it feels I'm going to get a bite to eat to eat it's a very soft sound too bite to eat bite to eat bite to eat I'm gonna get a bite to eat I'm gonna get a bite to eat I'm gonna get a bite to eat all right I'm gonna get a bite to eat and then do you if I wanted to say that uh again with a little weaker more with that schw sound do you do you want to we already reduced that to want do you want to go do you want to go I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go all right I want you to say it after me I'm G to get a bite to eat do you want to go notice with those yes no questions do you want to go that Rising intonation as we we go to the end of that question do you want to go so say it after me again I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go one more time I'm going to get a B te do you want to go now let's let's Shadow say it with me try to keep that same Pace I'll say it at this speed I'm going to get a bite te do you want to go so ready let's say it together here we go I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go let's do it again ready I'm going to get a bite to e do you want to go and I think when it comes to shadowing that's one of the more difficult Parts would be you're trying to say things in the exact same way intonation emphasis using reductions linking but trying to keep that pace I think is a bit more challenging especially when we're talking about using connected speech and practicing that way all right so that was the second uh part the next sentence that we're going to look at all right again if you guys are speaking let me know uh excellent uh VI Superman Gustav great job takayo again it's good to practice this great for your comprehension never feel like oh you need to start doing this but it's good to understand like what's going on here so the next question that we're looking at again I'll say each individual word so you can hear me could you wait till I finish work but the way

I was saying it could you wait till I finish work could you wait till I finish work and even listening to to me maybe you can kind of pick out some of the things that are going on could you wait till I finish work could you wait till I finish work so the first part that could you assimilation this is another part of connected speech this is when you have two sounds they blend together to create a new sound in this case that final D in could and the beginning Y in U they blend together and you get this J sound it's very subtle it's almost like we're putting that J sound between the two words and then that allows us to connect them together so instead of could could you could you could you could you could you do this could you do that could you do this could you do that it's not something I would say that you should try to force as you say these two words and you just say one right after the other I think you're naturally going to blend these sounds together and and you'll hear it again it's slight so instead of could you could you could you now notice that in that case could you I'm actually saying the stressed you even in this question you could you know unstress it say the weaker y could you could you could you but just for the example I have let's just say that it's a stronger sound and we're going to say could you could you even though I just wanted you to know it may may be weaker from time to time wait till so we have two overlapping T sounds wait till wait till and you could hear somebody say it and they pronounce that T it's very clear with the American accent often when that t comes between two vowel sounds it may get changed into a flap te wait wait so hopefully you can hear that soft D wait could you wait could you wait and then we could link we already talked about linking that final consonant l sound until with the vowel sound in the with the pronoun I till Li could you wait a lie could you wait a lie and finish work uh no nothing really I wanted to point out there but just those first five words in this question let's just practice ice that first part could you wait a lie could you wait a lie say it say it say it after me could you wait a I could you wait till I finish work say it one more time could you wait till I finish work and now Shadow say it with me same time try to keep that pace ready could you wait till I finish work once again could you wait till I finish work okay so now you hopefully you can kind of hear these different things going on let me know WR speaking in the chat in the comments if if you're practicing your skills and you're saying these sentences out loud all right that's what it's all about just getting a little little speaking practice today I know I know that I'm not there but trust me I can hear you I think you're doing great I can hear you the next uh two sentences again I'll say each in individual word and then we'll break it down it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night but the way I was saying it it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night again if somebody's really going to say this much faster it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night and you can really fly right through the sentence so let's see what's going on let's start with it's getting so this is something that I think is pretty interesting at least I find it interesting when it comes to not only the American accent but just English in general so get you hear that stop T at the end if I'm using it in the continuous tense like um in this case it is getting that t comes between two vow now have the T followed by a vowel sound followed by the n Sound in that case it's going to be pronounced as a glottal t think about the word Mountain you have a t followed by a vowel sound followed by the N sound so that t in Mountain it's pronounced as a glottal te the best way I can describe the glottal te it's almost like you're swallowing it Mountain getting getting so just say that word say it after me getting getting it's getting late it's getting late and we're dropping that g using a glottal T instead there's nothing again there's nothing wrong very common you could say it's getting late it's getting late you hear people say that all the time in the in the US they're going to use that flap te but if I wanted to drop the G it's getting late and the next part a couple things going on I don't want to we're going to reduce that to Wana and this is again we're going to move right through that final part of the sentence because we can link the phrase wait around all and we're going to link all of those final consonant sounds with the beginning vowel sound of the next word and that final T in waight you're going to hear me say it with a flap t wait around all wait around all I don't want to wait around all night so this is the way I would phonetically spell spell it so you can see it it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night so I want you to say it after me again let's let's say it slowly to begin with it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night now let's speed it up a little bit it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night and now let's say it faster it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night and then because I talked about well super fast speech Let's try and say it well super fast it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night and and now again just to get that shadowing too let's try and say it at the same time I'm not going to say it too fast I'll say it like it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night and I want you to say it with me ready here we go it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night one more time it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night okay so we just did a thorough Deep dive into all of those sentences and and great job uh Jillian Gustav uh VI again keep speaking that's what this is all about I want you to speak out loud and I want you to do that again because I want you to say this dialogue with me so before we say it and we take turns like I'll be a you will be B and then we're going to switch I'll let you listen to it uh again I'll say all of them right now and hopefully it's a little easier now that we've gone through and talked about each of these sentences so I'll just read the whole thing right now what do you want to do tonight I'm gonna get a B I'm GNA get a bite te do you want to go sure could you wait till I finish work it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night okay so let's begin with uh I'll be a and I just want you to read or say B I want you to say it out loud again let's we're having a conversation all right you ready what do you want to do tonight sure could you wait till I finish work all right now let's switch I want you to say a out loud and I will say B okay ready you can begin I'm going to get a bite to eat do you want to go it's getting late I don't want to wait around all night all right excellent let me know in the chat all right if you were practicing your skills that's what uh that's what this is all about um I I I just want to really help you understand the what's happening with some of these words and phrases and I know that it's a lot it's a lot to take in because there are so many different things going on when talking about well some of the different parts of connected speech elision assimilation and then we have reductions tried to mention about the rising intonation at the end of yes no questions so let me see uh I'm going to I'm going to give you a quick little poll were you practicing um with me and I just want you to answer the question because what I think I'll do in the future this is just a yes no were you practicing with me were you practicing your speaking skills in the future I I'd like to do some more lessons like this and really break down analyze some sentences to help give you a better understanding of what's happening again this is not something you should feel like you have to do it depends on your own speaking goals with your speaking fluency I do think that when you're using reductions connected speech it's going to give your speech a more natural sound and this is not just something that you would do informally on the streets even when you're giving a presentation in a formal situation people are still going to use reductions linking this is really common and again I would say that you can choose what what you want to do if something doesn't feel comfortable like reducing I'm gonna to I'ma don't feel like you need to do it but it is something you may hear which is always good for for your listening comprehension so all right it seems like most of you 3% of you were not practicing that's okay as long as you were listening then you're still getting some value out of this at least I hope so so I really appreciate you guys being with me today I hope that you enjoyed the lesson I hope that you learned something new if you did I would love it if you hit that like button I would really appreciate it so I could tell you say well right now I'm going to get going okay and there's that Amina I told you I don't know why I use it a lot I'm gonna I'm gonna I'm gonna get going right now I'm gonna get going so I'm gonna have to say goodbye thank you guys for joining me thank you Vicky gusta thank you too you're doing great uh know too get to get to hear you practice uh in class which is good and yes just as a reminder if you guys want to check out the course uh click on that link below something that I continue to run throughout the year Loi thanks for joining us being here super monk uh sen alash VI tal just give some quick shout outs at the end Laura Camille again all right I'm I'm gonna sign off there's that I'm gonna I'm gonna keep saying that I'm gonna I'm Inna I'm Inna anyway hope you learned something new if you

Speak Fluent Office English: Advanced Idioms for the Workplace

let's learn some advanced work idioms to help you build your vocabulary I'm going to talk about the meaning of each phrase how it's used as well as go over the pronunciation so that you can say them just like me and I know that you probably work hard when it comes to learning idioms and I'm sure that you are willing to go the extra mile and let's begin with that idiom right there to go the extra mile this is commonly used when talking about work because it means to do more than what is expected of you I like to think that I try to go the extra mile when putting together these lessons I'm sure when it comes to your job you also try to go the extra mile there are two things that I want to point out when it comes to using this idiom because I often hear mistakes just keep in mind that this is a fixed expression to go the extra mile sometimes people see go and they want to just add two after it to go to the extra mile no no no no no go the extra mile the other thing is that you're always going to use the definite article the so just remember it's a fixed phrase to go the extra mile way to go the extra mile your mimo would be proud I go the extra mile now I've been thinking about it all day and I have a plan to go the extra mile for pronunciation I just want you to keep in mind that the definite article the' has two different pronunciations a strong form and a weak form we're going to use the strong form the when the next word begins with a vowel sound and the weak form the' when the next word begins with a consonant sound this is more of a general rule you may not always hear people follow this but it is something to keep in mind to go the extra mile and if you would like to continue going the extra mile please subscribe to the channel turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher my name is Wes the channel is interactive English it's all about trying to help you reach your fluency goals and you know learning these idioms will certainly help you improve your overall fluency and sound more natural especially at work now it is going to be a little difficult to learn idioms I'm not going to lie you definitely have your work cut out for you and I want to continue with that idiom right there to have your work cut out for you this means means to have something very difficult to do and it's really a way of adding emphasis so instead of saying well that's going to be difficult for you I can just use this idiom you have your work cut out for you and you don't always have to use for someone I could say you have your work cut out to learn these work idioms and the other thing I want you to think about is the grammar because you have a subject pronoun a possessive adjective as well as an object pronoun he has his work cut out for him she has her work cut out for her they have their work cut out for them when pronouncing this idiom there are two things that I want to mention the first is that the final T in Cut you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap T it's going to sound more like a soft D this is very common when talking about the American accent and yes I am from the United States and often people are going to use a flap te when it comes between two vowel sounds the next thing is that linking may occur and this is when we link the final consonant sound of one word with the beginning vowel sound of the next word so let's think about that phrase cut out I can link that flap t with the vowel sound in out cut out to have your work cut out for you just listen for it they've got their work cut out for them Hey listen just so you know you might have your work cut out for you well we have our work cut out for it Santa's got his work cut out for him now improving your speaking and pronunciation takes time I could certainly say that you have your work cut out for you but if you're willing to go the extra mile there's an app that can help you so let me quickly tell you about the sponsor of today's lesson Elsa speak this is an app that I originally heard about from many of you so let's check it out and it's really easy you download the app and you can start exploring and I'm amazed at all the different things that you can do you can have AI conversations practice daily lessons improve pronunciation let's say that there's a specific topic that you're interested in like work just go to study by topic work and career and there are so many different lessons to choose from but I think one of the coolest parts of the app is to practice words and phrases that you want to learn so I can just put in I plan to go the extra mile and then listen to it I plan to go the extra mile and then practice saying it I plan to go the extra mile group to pull your weight in order to meet the deadline everyone on the team has to pull their own weight now you may hear people use the word own in between the possessive adjective and the noun to pull your own weight to pull his own weight to pull her own weight or I could say Wes is just not working hard right now he's not pulling his weight often you may hear people use this with the negative to say someone is not doing their fair share of work Wes is not pulling his weight when pronouncing this idiom I think it's pretty simple and straightforward to pull your weight we haven't done that in years thank you you've really been pulling your weight around here seven a winner way to go blanders the Bible's finally pulling its weight then we have to pick up the slack this is another great idiom when talking about working with a group because it means to improve a situation by doing something that someone has not done or completed so if some work has not been completed maybe you have to pick up the slack with this idiom I often get asked like where does it come from and if we do a quick search we learn that the origin comes from sailing when a sailor is pulling a line a rope there's likely to be some amount of slack in the line he's putting down another sailor is needed to pick up the slack and ensure the line doesn't get tangled so if you are working in a group you may need to pick up the slack if someone calls in sick you may need to pick up the slack if a member of your team goes on vacation or you may need to pick up the slack if someone is just being a slacker and a slacker is an informal noun for someone who is lazy and does not work very hard and if you are working with someone else who is a slacker then yes you may need to pick up the slack when pronouncing this idiom more linking may occur we can link the final consonant sound in pick with the beginning vowel sound in up pick up to pick up the slack we're all going to have to dig deep and band together to pick up the slack while your mother recovers and with Roy going we got a smaller crew and I'm picking up all of his slack so I think I should be compensated fairly by getting a raise on the same page this means agreeing about something really about how something should be done so if people are on the same page then they just really understand each other and in order for us to be on the same page when it comes to using this idiom I have some funny memes that I want to share with you we may not be on the same page but we can at least try to be on the same chapter I'm glad we're on the same page and that both of our minds are in the gutter and if you say that your mind is in the gutter it just means that you're you're thinking about inappropriate things we may have been on the same page but I think we were actually in different books so in this case yeah they just they really don't understand each other when pronouncing this idiom again I think it's pretty simple and straightforward one thing I want to mention because I talked about the strong and weak the' in this case I'm going to use the weak form the' because the next word begins with a consonant sound on the same page only way that I could get back to a normal life he I get it we're on the same page what do you mean I mean em and us we get it we're all in the same page what page is that the next idiom is up to par this means to be at the usual or expected standard I hope that you think this lesson is up to par it is at the expected standard now I included not because often people are going to use this with the negative to say that something is not up to par it is not at the expected standard I might say well his presid presentation was not up to par or I went to the new restaurant and yeah I just didn't think the the food was up to par when pronouncing this idiom again you're going to hear me pronounce the final T and not as a flap

T and then I'm going to link it with the vow sound in up not up not up to par the other thing I want you to keep in mind is that the word to has a strong and weak form as well and most of the time you're going to hear that weak form because it's unstressed and it's going to sound more like it has awah sound T it's much softer not up to par not up to par just listen for those two things so if I'm not up to a par performance-wise Jim this isn't exactly a Turn on there's a thing called proposition 48 says that if your grades aren't up to par you can take the SAT if you score 700 or more you can get into college see this is perfect I wanted to head over to the street and do a walking tour of ethnic foods it can't be moving here if the schwarm is not up next is learn the ropes this means to learn or know how to do a job or activity so whenever you start a new job this is just something you have to do you have to learn the ropes when I began making these video lessons I was learning the ropes there were many things that well they weren't necessarily related to teaching editing creating thumbnails and it took me some time to learn the ropes keep in mind that you may follow this idiom with the preposition of to learn the ropes of something to give you a better idea as to how it's used in context I have some news headlines for you sharing ties to Ukraine students learn the ropes of tennis pupils and staff learn the ropes firefighters learn the ropes during rescue course when pronouncing this idiom I think it's pretty straightforward but once again we're going to use that weekthe because the next word begins with a consonant sound to learn the ropes it's his first week on the job so he's still learning the ropes he's been very patient I've been learning the ropes around here then there's hit the ground running this means to immediately work hard and successfully at a new activity and I I just want you to keep in mind we're talking about a new activity and that is the context in which you would use this idiom and you really just want to emphasize that you're going to work hard and you're going to hit the ground running I could say the new project starts on Monday and we're going to hit the ground running or when I started my new job I didn't get much of an orientation I just had to hit the ground running for pronunciation keep in mind that a lesion may occur this is when sounds or syllables get removed and it sometimes happens with the T and D sounds when they come between two consonants so that final D in the word ground it comes between two consonant so it alides you don't really hear it to hit the ground running to hit the ground running well we need somebody who can hit the ground running right now I just don't have the time for it I have to hit the ground running how was your day superb this morning I made a palindrome with my alphabets that nice hat Bob to hen sounds like you hit the ground running next is burn the Midnight Oil I like this idiom because I think I can kind of relate to it it means to work really late at night and you could use this instead of saying like oh you're working late tonight I could say you're burning the midnight oil keep in mind that I think often people will use this in the continuous tense because they're they're talking about right now you see someone at the office and you say wow you're burning the midnight oil burning the midnight oil it's only 11:45 take a break wow Bing burning the midnight oil you know me sir for pronunciation I I just want to focus on the word oil because it can be a little tricky you have that vowel sound which is a diff thong oi followed by that dark L oil oil and when you put it all together it's still one syllable so let's practice repeat after me oil burning the midnight oil excellent the next idiom up to speed this is when you have all the latest information about a subject or activity then yeah you are up to speed I could say I didn't go to the meeting could someone please get me up to speed or maybe she didn't attend class yesterday perhaps one of the other students will help bring her up to speed and I really just want to point out that you may often use this idiom with those verbs they're really collocations to get someone up to speed or to bring someone up to speed when pronouncing this idiom you hear me say hit with that week two which sounds more like T up to speed just listen for it let me bring up to speed just want to bring everyone up to speed okay let's get the crew up to speed so get me up to speed then we have cut corners and yeah I think we've all cut Corners before this means to save money or time when doing something by not including Parts actions or details so the final result is really not as good as it could be so you may use this idiom when commenting on someone else's work perhaps they you know they didn't really do a good job they were trying to save time the quality is not that great you could say yeah they really cut Corners to give you some more context here are some funny jokes think quality don't cut corners and as you can see the corner of the sign is cut or I had to cut a few Corners this big radar looking thing is a walk clock and most of the buttons are glued on so the quality is probably not that great and then don't work hard work intelligent cut Corners because it's easier to roll a ball than push a box and you just got to cut those Corners when pronouncing this idiom it's pretty straightforward you do have some alliteration with that c sound when saying cut Corners to cut Corners you can't cut Corners in life you know who cut Corners Kennedy was when he was running the Bay of Pigs know what we're talking about oh let me guess cutting corners and stupid getrich quick scheme wow it must be expensive to produce all these cartoons well we cut Corners sometimes to save money our animators will reuse the same background then there's to have something on your plate this means to have something usually a large amount of important work to deal with and most of the time people are going to say a lot instead of something and it really implies that you're talking about work or just important things that you have to do to have a lot on your plate I could say I know that you probably have a lot on your plate but after this lesson I'd love it if you write to me in the comments because I just I just like hearing from you when pronouncing this phrase if I'm going to use a lot a lot on your plate a lot on my plate the final TN lot I'm going to pronounce it as a flap T and then we can link it with the vowel sound in on a lot on your plate a lot on my plate and she's she's doing her best you know she's got a lot on her plate she's got school she's got work give me some time okay I have a lot on my plate no problem I get it stay at the office cookie I just got a lot on my plate it's not easy being in the spotlight it's the difficult Road I've chosen now for a little review I know there is a lot to take in with these vocabulary lessons and that's why I don't like to waste time time when the lesson begins we just hit the ground running because my goal is to try to bring you up to speed with all the latest information as to how these idioms are used but you're still going to need to work hard and it may require you to burn the midnight oil from time to time I don't know maybe it's really late at night right now as you're watching this but even if you have a lot on your plate and you're busy at work or at home or with other activities don't cut corners you may miss something important and nobody's going to be around to pick up the slack building your vocabulary this is all on you and you certainly have your work cut out for you now if you still feel like your vocabulary skills are not up to par then I would recommend that you watch another video Lesson and I'm sure you will because you seem like someone who who always goes the extra mile but I'm going to leave it there so if you enjoyed the lesson and learn something new let me know by hitting that like button as always thank you so much for watching and I will see you next time So

Speak Like a Leader: Advanced Phrases Every Professional Must Know

I want to teach you how to speak and communicate just like a leader and with some useful phrases that every working professional must know just like it says right there. And if you would like to get these lesson notes right next to me, join my email community, click on the link down below in the description and you can access them so you can just more easily remember them and make this vocabulary a part of your active memory. If you're already a part of the community, check your inbox because I've I've already sent them to you. So, this is a quiz lesson. I like doing these because I want you to actually think as we're going through this about the word phrase and participate and I want you to write your answers in the chat or in the comments. After all, this is interactive English and I might as well introduce myself as I lead into that. My name is Wes. Uh the channel's interactive English. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. So, I told you that this is going to be a quiz lesson. So, let's just go ahead and jump into it with our first question. She had to m down when the manager was on leave. So I've g I'm giving you the meaning take responsibility for a situation while another person is temporarily absent. This is a more informal phrase but still one that another person you might ask your colleague or especially your subordinate if you are the leader you may ask somebody this. You're going to say this if you are going to be absent for a little while and I want you to down. So, I've kind of highlighted the expression. There's a missing word and then down and then two more missing words. Think about the the meaning, but also I I'm trying to think about how I can give you a little bit of a hint without giving the answer away. So, we're not talking about like take down.

All right. She had to m down when the manager was on leave. So the person who in this case the manager was on leave now she was in charge while this person was gone and she had to what the first word it [laughter] is not I see a lot of takes the first down is not take the first word is actually hold. So I'm going to go ahead and give you that she had to hold down what when the manager was on leave. I mentioned this is more of an idiomatic expression. It's more informal but definitely one that you could come across in a work context. And if you are the leader or you are the manager, the boss, you are going to go away and you might ask someone else to hold down the fort. So if you say hold down the fort, you're asking another person to be responsible, take charge, lead while you're away, and then you're going to come back. But in the meantime, somebody else is going to hold down the fort. So if this expression was new, that's awesome. I love it when you learn new things. If it was, you can let me know by hitting that like button. So the sentence, she had to hold down the fort when the manager was on leave. to give you a to give you a visual that I again it's humorous. This is a little bit of a joke. Uh someone's got to hold down the fort and this is quite literally the cat of course is holding down the fort in this case. So think about that situation. It's very specific. Somebody leaves and another person might hold down the fort while that other person is away and then they they are in charge.

They would be the leader.

[snorts] What do you think? This is more of a collocation. The project leader's calm and competent approach serve to m confidence in a stress team. Now the meaning of this this phrase in general is to create or establish a feeling of trust, self assurance or certainty in others. There are many well there could there could be more than one answer. There is one specific verb that I'm thinking of and which I'll tell you in just a moment, but the there are other verbs that you could use in this case and we will we will get into it in just a moment. So, this is a good way to really think about some of the different verbs that you know when we're talking about confidence. The project leader calm and competent approach serve to confidence in a stress team.

a common collocation somebody mentioned u build confidence boost confidence I yeah those would work that's not the verb that I'm thinking of but that's okay as I just mentioned there there could there can be certainly be more than one answer for this question but we're talking about establishing that feeling of trust self assurance certainty in others [snorts] so I see a lot of build and boost which is good the verb that I was thinking of. This is another common collocation. Collocations are words that are frequently used together to instill confidence. The project leader calm and competent approach serve to instill confidence in a stress team. And that is what you're doing. You're creating that trust and that certainty. Now, I've mentioned the word collocation several times and commented on using build or boost saying that would work. And that's kind of what I wanted to lead into and share with you some common collocations when using the noun confidence. So, essentially, I think a lot of these would work in this context. Build confidence, instill confidence, boost confidence, increase confidence. I think those three would be fine in that sentence that I just showed you. But some other collocations, you might try to maintain confidence or to restore confidence or in maybe a negative context to shatter confidence. And in that case, it has a negative connotation. It's not a good thing.

Another thing that I wanted to point out which you probably noticed is that often you're going to follow this collocation with the preposition in to instill confidence in someone or a group. The same with to build confidence in someone or a group. I even think I followed it with this uh to instill confidence in a stress team. So there, this is a great way to build your vocabulary, but also in this case, I just want to get you thinking about some of those verbs that you might use with the word confidence. What do you think as the team leader the M here? Now, there's more than one word. There's basically the entire phrase is missing, but success or failure is mine to own.

So the phrase the meaning of it is when one person accepts the ultimate responsibility for something that will not try to they they won't try to pass the blame on to someone else. This I would say is more of an American uh expression. It is also an idiom. But I think whenever you're talking about somebody who is a leader, whether at work or in government or in any capacity whatsoever on a sports team, if someone's a leader, I think this phrase applies to this person. A lot of times it might be used as a standalone sentence and you're saying, "Look, I'm not going to pass blame on to anybody else that I am the one who's in charge. I am the leader.

It's my responsibility. The what? All right, I see a great answer. Excellent. Uh Joanna, the buck stops here. So once again, you're going to use this when you want to convey that look, you're you're the one who's responsible. Don't try to blame somebody else for the failure of the business or whatever project that you might be doing. The buck stops here. I mentioned that I feel like this is more of an American idiom because we're we're using the the word buck. I forget where the the exact origin of this phrase, but it's a great one to know when referring to the person who is the leader, like you're the leader, you should be responsible. The buck stops here.

Her leadership style made her a tough m to so I've I tried to highlight the phrase a tough m to so let me let me start over and read the whole sentence to give you context her leadership style made her a tough m to for the incoming manager and that is a key part of this sentence for the incoming manager. So, we're we're talking about someone who has been so successful that it will be very difficult for the person who comes next to be as good. And um we're we're this really again it basically means what it says and I'll explain that in just a moment. So, we're not uh we're not talking about a tough cookie or like a tough nut to crack. No th those are other those are other expressions but they don't apply to this situation when you have somebody who is new. They're coming in to a position and the person before them was so amazing that somebody may tell the incoming person like, "Oh wow, you know, this person is a tough m to you are new. The other person did an amazing job." And because of that, it makes it a what I feel like some of these phrases, even though I don't see the answer. I think once I show you, you're going to think, okay, I've I've heard this before. I've I know this expression, and I find I got a I got the right answer. Yes. Uh, good job. Deep value. A tough act to follow. So, I mentioned that it's specific to this context because you're following someone else. you're the the incoming manager, you're new to a position and the person before you did such a good job, you're like, "Oh, wow. This is a tough act to follow because now the expectations are really high and I have to really perform well and do a good job, be a strong leader because her leadership style made her a tough act to follow for the incoming manager." I told you that it really means what it says. Think about the situation. If there is a performance or if there are going to be several performances in a competition, if I am going to perform, I would in some way at some level I might hope that the people or the performance before mine is not that good because then I go on and it oh, it's going to make me look really much better if the person before me just bombed and they did a horrible job. If the person or group before me did a really good job, well then that's a tough act to follow. I have to follow that act and it's going to be very difficult. It's going to be hard. And I'm mentioning those words hard and difficult because you may use those adjectives as well. You could say something is a tough act to follow or a hard act to follow or even a difficult act to follow. To be honest, I was really surprised. In my opinion, I felt like uh using tough act to follow would be the most commonly used, but apparently when I put this into engram viewer, which is I know I've shown you this before, if you ever want to check the frequency to get an idea, okay, what do most people use and say, uh it's actually more common to say a hard act to follow. But really, any of those phrases would work. It's a hard act to follow. a tough act to follow or even a difficult act to follow even though that one is not as commonly used.

So, good idiom, good expression, very specific again because we're talking about somebody replacing another that did a really good job. Uh those are I somebody mentioned like shoes to fill that it's a ve it's pretty much the same. you know those are you have some big shoes to fill that you have a to do a really good job work hard because the the person before you also so that expression uh is is very similar to a tough act to follow [sighs and gasps] the next one I'm not giving you any hints in this case I just noticed that I just blanked everything out effective managers know when to m rather than micromanaging every minor task task. There are two words missing.

The the meaning of this phrase is the process of assigning sask you know decision-making power responsibility uh to another person usually a subordinate. So you're not going to micromanage every little small thing. you trust this other person and because of that you are going to rather than micromanaging every minor task. See the word delegate and I applaud you that is the first word and and delegate on its own uh would work. You could say would know when to delegate rather than micromanaging. However, I'm I'm thinking of more of a phrase. What phrase? What other word could I use with delegate? What are you delegating in this context? This is another common collocation with the verb delegate. I told you delegate on its own it would be okay. But we're talking about different phrases when it comes to leadership. So in this case I'm talking about delegating authority. to delegate authority. You're assigning decision-making power, responsibility to a subordinate, a team. You trust these people. You're not going to micromanage them and you will delegate authority.

Effective managers know when to delegate authority rather than micromanaging every minor task. So there are once again many great phrases, many common collocations with the word authority. So, I wanted to share some of those with you. I've already mentioned and I'm going to say it again and again and again even in the future. This is a great way to build your vocabulary. To delegate authority, you might hear somebody use it with the the verb respect to respect authority. A great leader probably commands authority. U this person also people that are born leaders may assume authority. Uh you could demonstrate authority or exert authority. And the last one, of course, not a good one. More of a negative connotation. I like to switch it up every now and then. To abuse authority, not a good thing in that case. But these are some common collocations with the noun authority.

Let's move on to our next question. The new director is steering toward digital transformation. I'm giving you the word steering and what what what's the phrase this is really it's it's a it is an idiomatic expression but at the same time it it really means what what it says we're talking about overseeing directing you're guiding a project or organization essentially setting the course and when I say the phrase setting the course it's a little bit of a hint because when you set the course, what do you I don't know what do you think of when you hear that phrase? I know what I think of. So the new director is steering towards digital transformation.

This is something else that a leader does. If you are the boss, CEO, an executive, manager, you have people below you. You are in charge of a team or a group and you are responsible for steering what? Think about something that you might steer. We're talking about moving in this case and I mentioned the hint as far as setting the course. So not a good guess. Not not steering the the direction steering the wheel. No, in this case the the phrase we're talking about um to steer the ship, steering the ship is when you are going to oversee or guide a project or organization. And you could say the new director is steering the ship toward digital transformation.

And I mentioned the word like setting the course. When I think of when I think of that phrase, I don't I think of like submarines or ships and you might say, "Oh, you know, set the course for this because this is the direction we're going to head in." And that's why I said maybe it's a little bit of a hint to uh come up with this phrase to steer the ship. And you are steering the ship. Here is uh I think another common phrase, very useful phrase. I think they're all useful. A great manager always m by m, not by commands. So this phrase three three words and I I tried to highlight the the one in the middle is by by the meaning of it is to model the behavior you expect from others rather than just giving uh instructions.

So I'm not just going to tell you what to do. I'm also going to do this thing take part in. And I'm going I don't want I was about to say it. I'm going to I'm just going to model it. But this is I think a phrase that you will definitely hear when talking about leadership in some capacity. If somebody's trying to encourage you to become a leader, to be a better leader, then this is a great phrase that you should know and you can use. And I think this is something we all should want to do depending on the situation that we're in. And I see some excellent answers. Um, well done. Uh, Scotty, Julia, uh, Lai, Joanna, just give some shout outs to lead by example.

Here is your next question. Like the I love these quizzes. Get you get you thinking about the vocabulary that you already know. And hopefully some of this is new. Hopefully you're learning some new phrases when it comes to leadership, communicating with others. Again, this is a little bit more of a business English lesson. Employees trust leaders who the not just make promises. So, of course, you could probably put in a bunch of phrases. They they trust leaders who lead by example. Uh but in this case m the okay you're not just making promises but the meaning of this is to back up one's boastful talk with meaningful actions there there's something specific that I want to say about this answer. We'll get into it in just a a moment. But think about the second part. You're not just making promises. You're not just blah blah blah blah blah talking. You're going to back it up.

to back up one's boastful talk with meaningful actions. So I see some uh good there. There are actually there are several different answers that you can give. I see everybody most people putting walk the walk that works uh to to walk the walk. One thing I would say, and I am going to try to make a bit of a distinction here. In this case, I'm talking about somebody's boastful talk. So, they're being boastful. They're bragging like, "Oh, I I'm going to do this. I'm the best. Yes, we're going to accomplish this." But then I'm able to back it up. So, the phrase that I have, and if you said walk the walk, that that works.

That is fine. Uh, I put walk the talk to back up one's boastful talk with meaningful actions. Employees trust leaders who walk the talk, not just make promises. Now, the reason why I said walk the talk because the talk would be that boastful, that bragging that the way that you're talking and communicating is probably getting the other person think, okay, let's see you do this. But then you're able to do it and somebody's like, wow, that's pretty impressive. this person's able to walk the talk. So the three things that I wanted to point out these expression to walk the talk to walk the walk or to talk the talk. So I this again this is how I just would divide this up and try to make a slight distinction between these different expressions. So walk the talk. I mentioned you're backing up your boastful talk. It makes me think that the way that you're talking is very confident, cocky, you're bragging.

Whereas walk the walk, I think, would just more commenting like you're going to do what you say. You say something and then you do it. When you're saying it, it's not necessarily like you're bragging or like we're going to do something amazing, I'm the best, or whatever it is. It's not like you're bragging. You're just saying you're just doing the things that you say and you're walking the walk. So that's the like the slight uh distinction I'd make there. To talk the talk is to talk or act in a confident way so that you seem very good at at what you do. And that is more uh about you know communicating, so you're talking in a confident way so that you seem very good at what you but in general I feel like the three of these you know could be used interchangeably and I don't think anybody's going to say oh wow that sounds awkward if you choose one o over the other but these are I think these are useful phrases to know especially when talking about somebody who is in charge and they they need to take control I you know just out of curiosity I put this into engram viewer thinking about okay which which of these phrases are more commonly used walk the talk walk the walk or talk the talk turns out they're they're you know pretty similar that the frequency of these phrases is roughly about the same so that's why I said whether you know whichever one you feel more comfortable using I I actually felt like probably walk the walk was going to be more commonly used and just barely just barely Here is the next question or the next sentence really. It's not a question but I my question to you is what is the correct phrase? Leaders must on during times of change.

So I've only I'm only giving you that one word on there. It is a longer expression. So there are several words that are missing, but the meaning hopefully gives you an idea of the phrase that I'm talking about. You're you're staying focused and attentive on what is important. So when you are able to prioritize the thing that is important, you're focusing in on it. You are laser focused. What else could What's another way that you could say that? And I think in business or and again leaders in any capacity this is something they must do. They must stay focused especially as things are changing. They're moving fast and you're going to sell tell someone or you're go you know hope you're going to hope that this person is going to keep their eye on the ball. to keep your eye on the ball. This just means to stay focused and attentive on the thing that is important. Leaders um must stay focused I think I there's a little typo down there. Leaders must stay focused and attentive on what is important. Um they must keep uh okay now now I see what I did here. Uh I should say yes. Leaders must keep their eye on the ball during times of change. I see what I did. I wrote I didn't write the example sentence. I just kind of copied uh the meaning. Sometimes, you know, I get tired. I'm working late at night. Uh you just got to just please bear with me. Bear with me. Um Oh, Cinderella, thank you so much. Thank you. Uh I appreciate it. The super chat. Love that you're learning new things. That is the goal with all of these lessons, especially these vocabulary lessons. I always hope that you just learn one thing new. So, I apologize for that little uh mixup with the the sentence down there. Uh

I've I've seen this before and I thought it was funny where uh you get this literal sense of somebody saying that I think in the video you could see it and the father is saying look, you know, telling a son, look, keep your eye on the ball. Keep your eye on the ball. And then the boy walks up and [laughter] just like really stares at the ball. So, I feel like this is a great uh great example of keep your eye on the ball, but it really means what it says. When you're playing a sport, for example, baseball or anything, uh golf, and somebody says, "Look, you got to keep your eye on the ball." That is the thing you need to focus on. So, whether we're talking about sports or business or anything that we want to accomplish, it's important to keep your eye on the ball. Great phrase to know and use and one that I think you can actually go out and use in different circumstances.

[snorts] After the CEO retired, the COO took there are two words that are missing. So the meaning of this phrase is to take control or assume leadership of something such as an organization, government or project. So after the CEO retired the chief executive officer who would be the top uh in the corporate hierarchy, the COO which stands for chief operating officer took what? This is something that I think happens when if you have a CEO uh that retires generally a person there might not be one person directly below them but several that are below them. the C the COO would be one of them and one of those people might take over or they're going to take what this is more of an informal phrase that you can use to basically say that you're going to take control and the phrase that I'm talking about well done um yes Julia Joanna to take the reigns Uh, just keep in mind the the spelling of res I Ns. Because what we're talking about when we're talking about the res, think of the uh like a horse. When you're riding a horse, you're holding on to that that rope or that I it's not really rope uh what it's made of leather, but those are the res. You're going to hold the reins, take the reins if you're riding a horse, and that is what's going to help you control where the horse is going to go. And that's where this comes from, that you're going to take the reins. Now you are steering the ship, to use another phrase that we talked about, and you have control, and you get to decide what we're doing, where we're going when you take the reigns. So this is another way of telling somebody who is maybe going to become a leader uh or just want to express this in another way. Oh, you know the COO took the reigns. They took control of the company. Or maybe if you're going to take charge of a situation and you might say, look, I'm going to take the reigns. I am going to take control of this situation. So think about that if it's an association that makes it easier like horseback riding and you're holding on to the reins and that is what gives you control take the reins she leads again there's several words missing during every project making sure everyone sees her dedication and commitment. So the meaning is to take an active role in what one is urging and directing others to do. She leads. Now, of course, I'm sure maybe the first thing when you when you see that word lead, I I hope that your mind went back to the other expression we talked to, lead by example. In this context, lead by example would work. I want to give you another phrase that really has a similar meaning. I don't I do not think it's as commonly used as lead by example. That is the one that I feel like you should know and really try to learn and I think is uh more common commonly used. But this is another way to say a similar thing. She leads m uh during every project making sure everyone sees her dedication and commitment. You have that active role directing others. Okay, this is what I want you to do. And you could say somebody is going to lead what any guesses.

So another way of putting this uh another way of saying this would be to lead from the front that you are ahead of everybody else. And that's where that whole from the front part comes into play which tells you that if you are in the front then you're the one who is really guiding everybody to use that other phrase. you're the one who's steering the ship. She leads from the front during every project, making sure everyone sees her dedication and commitment. As I said, this is a it's very similar to lead by example, but I think leading by example is is much more commonly used. After months of effort, his contributions finally started to the [snorts] on the company's revenue growth. So I don't think the sentence may give you that much information and trying to figure it out but after put a lot of effort into this and finally it started to the so it finally started to make a noticeable or s significant difference in a process or outcome. So can you think of any phrase that fits this context which has this meaning? It finally started to I look I I think some of you put in um uh pay off that that would work in this context. It finally started to pay off. Uh sure that's not the phrase we're talking about because there's that article 'the' in there. It finally started to move. Oh gosh. I said the first I started to say the first one. I just wanted to do this. I just wanted to do that little motion right there to give you a little bit of a hint, but I said move already. So move the what? What phrase has that meaning? You're making a change. It's finally starting to move the I I think this is maybe a phrase that you've heard of in some context perhaps watching a movie, TV show, listening to the news, or listening to a podcast. Uh it finally started to move the needle. So if something moves the needle, then it's making a noticeable change there. It's affecting or altering the outcome. when something moves the needle. So after months of effort, his contributions finally started uh to move the needle on the company's revenue growth. And hopefully if somebody is the the leader and they are steering the ship and I would hope that they're leading by example that the effort and the work that they are doing is going to move the needle and it's going to make a noticeable change in whatever it is that you're trying to accomplish or achieve. So to give you a little more context using this phrase, sometimes as you know I like to throw in some news headlines. Uh it says green lash how to move the needle on climate change. So it is a little bit of an idiomatic expression but even in like news articles you're going to come across some of these phrases. Apple's latest gaming efforts won't move the needle. So we're using it in the negative this ca in this this case. Decisive actions move the needle.

not symbolic gestures. I think maybe that's true. And then it says, "Weak jobs data expected, but will it move the needle? Will it make some type of noticeable change?" These are the phrases that we just talked about. Hopefully, some of them are new or maybe you've heard it once or twice before and now you get a better understanding as to what it's mean, what it means, and how it's used. So that as you're talking about business or somebody who's a leader or even yourself, if you are uh in some type of leadership position that maybe you can use some of these um and that you are able to instill confidence in others because I believe that you are somebody who just doesn't just talk talk talk. I think that you actually walk the talk when it comes to improving your English skills, building your vocabulary. The only thing I would suggest is that you just remember, keep your eye on the ball. Try to learn a little bit each and every day. Focus on, you know, some of the more common expressions like the ones I said, lead by example, I think, is a great phrase to know. And I you you're it's going I I think in the long term it is going to move the needle and you will see a noticeable change in your level of English. And I'm just kind of yammering on right now trying to get you a little bit of review and just keep using these phrases in context. So I hope that you enjoyed the lesson. If you did, you can let me know by hitting that like button. I always appreciate you participating in the lesson and yeah, I will see you soon for another lesson in the future. So long. Have a good one.

Speak Like a Native Compelling Vocabulary You MUST Know

speak and communicate just like me. And that's why I want to teach you this compelling vocabulary that I think you need to know. And if you are someone who enjoys supercharging your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way, I can become your teacher. My name is Wes. The channel is Interactive English. It is all about helping you reach your fluency goals. Now, this is a quiz lesson, so I want you to participate. That's the first thing that I want to say. And the next thing is that these words are I think they're a little more advanced even though I think you're going to recognize and you're familiar with some of them already because I think they are still often used. Now you can use other words in their place and I'll talk about that.

But I think when it comes to building your vocabulary and just constantly improving, this is incredibly useful and I think it's going to help build your confidence as well as just be more descriptive and precise when you're having a conversation. The next thing that I want to mention, if you would like to practice and improve your speaking skills, you can check out my speaking course. There is a link down below in the description. These are small group classes for intermediate to advanced speakers. And that is one way that you can just speak directly with me and we do a bunch of different engaging speaking activities. and begin. I'm just going to jump right into it. I'm wasting no time this year.

Uh, and I'll give some shoutouts as we go through this. I see some familiar faces, some members. So, let's begin with some compelling verbs. And of course, I'm using a word like compelling just to capture your attention and really emphasize that yeah, I think this vocabulary is useful. These verbs are incredibly useful. So, here is the first question. I am giving you the sentence and the meaning down below. I'm also giving you the first word of the verb. He chose to m his university application for a year. So it begins with a D and the meaning is to put off either an action or an event to a later time.

Essentially you are postponing this this thing that you are doing. Now I think when you're talking about an application this is a verb that you will often use. Of course you could say put off and use that phrasal verb but phrasal verbs are a little more little more informal. Uh you could use postpone. that would work as well. But specifically, we're talking about a word that I think maybe you're familiar with it. We're not talking about delay. That that's another word that you could use, but this word is a little more advanced than delay. Of course, delay is a very common verb which I think definitely you should also know that verb as well. But can you think of any other words? begins with a d to m his application for another year.

So I chose this context because I think it is often used in this context when you are delaying something. I'm going to use the the word that uh I saw down there. Instead of using that, you can use defer. To defer something is when you put it off to a later time. Essentially, you're postponing it. You're delaying it. And when talking about an application, uh, you can do this. So, you can defer an application. You can defer your enrollment. Uh, you may commonly hear this verb when talking about something related to school. Defer an application. Defer enrollment. In this case, he chose to defer his university application for a year. And you're just waiting a year before doing this thing. Uh, excellent.

Uh, monsoon, Bellarosa, Jordan. Uh, good, good, good job. I don't know. Um, I got many more for you guys. And hopefully if this is a new verb, it's one just to to keep in mind to defer something because I I I said that I want to help you supercharge your vocabulary. Not just build your vocabulary, but really supercharge it. I wanted to share with you some common collocations with this verb. These are words that are frequently used together. So you can defer a decision. Once again, you're putting it off. You may often follow this verb with for or until when you want to specify the time. So you may defer a decision for 3 weeks. And I'm using for with that period of time. Or you can defer a a decision until the end of the month. And now I'm really talking about that specific time until the end of the month. And you can really follow any of these phrases with for or until when you want to specify an amount of time. But you can also defer a payment. You can defer work. Something that I [laughter] I like to do uh even though others might say that I am procrastinating and they may use the verb to procrastinate instead, which is one I can relate to. You can also defer a discussion or you can defer entry or even defer responsibility. You're just putting it off to another uh to a later time when you defer something. Uh the

So again, it begins with an e and it's talking about this public statement of support. So the verb that we're talking about, excellent, Manuel, Julia, Manuel, great to see you. You too, Lai, good to see so many members here. Is to endorse. To endorse someone or something is you're just showing your approval support for this thing or this person to endorse something. She refused to endorse a plan that she didn't fully support. But like I said, you may hear this when talking about politics and you might endorse a candidate and you support this person for public office. [gasps] I I for I forgot that I had this up there. Uh I thought it was funny. Um me and the boys after endorsing each other's skills on LinkedIn. I don't know where this picture's from.

this military picture. It's like North Korea or something, but they have all that uh those medals just, hey, yeah, you did a good job. I endorse your skills. Endorse your skills. Uh but speaking of LinkedIn, I'm not too active on LinkedIn. public speaking or they have skills in marketing or public relations or whatever it may be." So that is another context in which you may use or or hear this verb to endorse someone or something. Great verb to know otherwise I wouldn't be teaching it. How about this one? He m his authority during the negotiations. This is a verb that means to state a fact or belief confidently, positively or forcefully.

So this is I I think maybe this is a little trickier. It begins with the letter A. Every time I say that, I feel like people mostly get the right answer. But he his authority during the negotiation. You're communicating in this way that is, you know, confident, positive, forceful, and what verb can you use that really captures those three things? Confidence, positive, and that you that you're right, and you're doing it in a little more of a forceful way. So, as I just mentioned, every time I say, I think it's going to be a little more difficult. I think people start throwing in the the correct answer. Uh, well done, uh, Alana Katarina. Uh, Allan Katarina, we're talking about to assert.

Asserted. He asserted his authority during the negotiations. This is a word that I think is a bit stronger when you assert your authority in this context and you're really displaying a level of confidence. you're displaying a level of even forcefulness. To give you a little more context, or not to give you more context, but to give you some more collocations, as you can tell, I'm a big fan of uh common collocations. Here are some other words that may be frequently used with the verb to assert. You can assert one's rights. Um, you can assert your innocence. You could assert your authority like in our example. You can assert your control or assert your dominance or assert your independence.

So keep in mind how you know the words that are being used. We talk about asserting dominance or authority or control and there really is this element of forcefulness in that context. And on the other end, when you're asserting your independence, your your freedom, your rights, that's also emphasizing it, but really in the other way that has more of a positive connotation. Uh, but great job, Lai Julia. Um, excellent answers. Here we go. The next one. Some analyst that the market will recover quickly. So I'm I'm using I I wanted to use this one after the own because in it has in the meaning you're asserting something as a position and an argument. What verb would has this meaning to assert something as a position and an argument.

And we're using that verb to assert again. What do you think? Any guesses? Write your answers in the chat. After all, this is interactive English. I want you to participate in these lessons. That's what it's all about. So, some analyst starts with the letter C that the market will recover quickly. So, they're asserting this in a way that shows that they're confident and you're going to use this verb. Some analyst. What do you think? Any guesses? Don't be shy. All right? Even if you get it wrong, doesn't matter. Nobody there doesn't really matter in this situation um which you're you know watching this at home or somewhere else on your phone on your computer nobody's going to judge doesn't matter if you write the wrong answer down can you think of a verb that has this meaning that begins with the letter C if not maybe this is a new one for you which is great I love it when uh people learn new things to contend. When you contend something, you are asserting something like they this is my position in this argument. So some analysts contend that the market will recover quickly. So they're trying to make this argument. This is my position. I believe it's going to recover quickly and they contend that the market will recover quickly. If this verb is new, you can let me know. Hit that like button. Hit those smiley buttons. Doesn't matter. I love it when I I see that everybody is maybe coming across a word or two that they're a little they're unfamiliar with and building your vocabulary. You know, it's a marathon, not a sprint. It's always good to get the initial exposure if it's something completely new and then hopefully go back to it in the coming weeks and just slowly move it into your active memory. Let's switch gears now and talk about some compelling nouns. Once again, I want to grab your attention with these nouns. So, the first one right here is this one. Um, maybe people did get contend. The chat took a little time to catch up right now. Uh, let's just move to the next one, though. The committee struggled to build among members with opposing views. The committee struggled to build among members with opposing views. I would say maybe I I think I maybe missed an article in there. Not a big thing, but to build a something uh begins with the letter C and the meaning is we're talking about a generally accepted opinion among a group. I think this is a word that is one that you've heard, you've come across, maybe even you use it actively, actively. And if this is a noun that you actively use, that is wonderful. I love hearing that. So, what do you think? We're talking about a generally accepted opinion among a group is what? What do you think? In this case, you're trying to build a so well done. Um yes, Julia Manuel uh leentre uh sorry I mispronounce and Vicky Gustaf, good to see you. Welcome. Consensus is the noun that we're looking for. If you're talking about a consensus, then you're referring to this generally uh accepted opinion among a group of people. uh like for example a scientific consensus and trying to understand well what do most people believe when it comes to this thing. What is the common opinion that people have or share and that is the consensus. Sometimes you need to have a consensus in order to make a decision and everybody kind of has to agree. So the committee struggled to build a consensus. I'm going to add that article in there. To build a consensus among members with opposing views.

Once again, you see this theme. I'm just throwing these phrases at you. So, once once again, here are some more common collocations. Hopefully, it helps make it a little more sense, but also understanding how this noun is commonly used. You might hear people these are all different adjective noun collocations. Uh a broad consensus or a general consensus. This is a common one and we need to have a general consensus before we make a final decision. There might be an overwhelming consensus. In that case maybe 95% of the people share the same opinion and it is a overwhelming consensus. There might be a clear consensus, a growing consensus, or I think I already mentioned that last one, a scientific consensus about what people should or should not do as it pertains to their health. Great noun to know, one that I hope that you may already be familiar with and even use actively right now. [snorts] The contracts m led to multiple interpretations. Begins with the letter a. Another noun that I think is uh a good one to know. [snorts] Refers to something that is unclear or confusing or it can be understood in more than one way. This is a word that we're we're talking about the noun, but you may often hear people use this as an adjective as well. Of course, the word's going to change. Part of the same word family, but often it's used as an adjective, but we can still use it as a noun as it is in this example. Refers to something. Look, it's a little unclear. It's confusing. There is some or you can understand it in more than one way. Like in this example, there are multiple interpretations.

Which word very specifically [laughter] follows that meaning? What do you think? So, we're talking about the word ambiguity. Ambiguity refers to something that is unclear or confusing. It can be understood in more than one way. The contracts ambiguity led to multiple interpretations. I said that you may often hear this word used as an adjective and then in that case you're going to say something is ambiguous. Ambiguity the noun, ambiguous the adjective. Two words that I think you definitely should know because this is something I think we come across in our daily lives. And you see something whether it's a contract or you're not sure how to interpret it. You say, "Yeah, there's a there's a bit of ambiguity. So, I'm not really sure what this is trying to say. To give you uh an example related to English learning, I think maybe all of you uh can appreciate this.

Oh, I I I meant to say something for beforehand. I'm sorry. I got ahead of myself. I wanted to give you the sentence and I wanted to ask you which one kind of you were thinking of. So, the sentence is I saw the man with the telescope. And in English, there exists this ambiguity where I can I can say this sentence, but there's more than one way to interpret it. I saw the man with the telescope. Which one do you think of? You can let me know uh in the chat in the comments. Are you thinking when you hear this sentence, are you thinking are you imagining number one and that this boy has the telescope or are you imagining number two that you saw this man and this man is holding a telescope?

I saw the man with the telescope. Which one you hear that sentence do you imagine? But the the whole point is that there is no both of them are correct. You really have to put it into context or depending on the situation, you may have to ask for more information and be like, "Well, wait a second. Did you were you looking through the telescope or did you see somebody walking and they were holding a telescope?" But this is a great example of ambiguity in the English language. And there are other sentences as well. It's a reason why the language can be a little confusing. But I imagine most of the time if you were to use a sentence like this probably you would understand the context and you okay yeah this person uh you know they're looking through the telescope and that is how they they saw the man but either one could be correct just an example of ambiguity. The long rehearsals help build a strong sense of

m among the musicians. The meaning of this noun is mutual trust and friendship among people who spend a lot of time together. And if we're in this situation talking about people who are playing together, they're rehearsing together. And there was a strong sense of what what noun that begins with the letter C are we going to use? And it has this meaning referring to mutual trust or friendship among this group. There is a specific word. I don't see it just yet. So I'll give you another moment to think of all of those words the answer that I'm thinking of. You wouldn't really have a strong sense of coherence. It sounds a little awkward in this context. There is another noun that is certainly more precise when you're talking about a group of people. The other key word would be in the meaning which is friendship. Think about friendship when you're trying to think of this word. So I saw some answers.

Excellent. C HCT Manuel camaraderie. Camaraderie refers to that friendship when you're talking about a group of people and there's real camaraderie among a group. The long rehearsals help build a strong sense of camaraderie among the musicians. So anytime you want to you're talking about a group that's getting along and they're friends and you could say yeah there's a you know a lot of great there's camaraderie among the group of students or the group of musicians or whatever group it may be and there is this strong sense of camaraderie. How about the next one? Once again it's a it's a language learning example. So hopefully you guys you would appreciate it. Learning a new language requires patience and what begins with the letter R. The meaning is the ability to be happy, successful, etc. Again, after something difficult or bad has happened.

Language learning there are, as you know, uh you know, I've tried to learn several languages in my life. There are ups, there are downs, there are times where you feel invincible, like gosh, I'm learning so much. This is great and then other times where you feel like h I feel I forgot you know so many things I feel like I can't communicate or speak uh coherently but in that case it requires patience and what that starts with the letter R it is a great noun especially in this context and well done Alan Katarina Tayo good to see you resilience resilience is the noun that we were looking for. This means the ability to be happy. Uh because it is I mean resilience is more obviously than happiness but it's like you more happy positive successful things are going well especially after a time when you were in a little bit of a slump and you could say that someone is resilient and I'm using it as an adjective now just to point out that you may often use this verb as an adjective. resilient, but as a noun, resilience. Either one works. They're both part of the same word family. And once again, I think it's worth it to know to know both of them. To give you a little more context with this word, here are some news headlines that I think are pretty recent just to help you better understand how the noun is used. Writing builds resilience by changing your brain, helping you face everyday challenges. That's true. I hope you all write a little bit in English. You're writing now, so you're practicing vocabulary, writing skills, your listening skills because you're listening to me. This is a great lesson. King urges kindness and resilience in Christmas message. Uh how 2025 showcased the power and resilience of science. And then finally, Bangladesh's LNG dependence um raises concerns about energy resilience. And we're using that noun resilience in in each of those news headlines. Just another another way that I like to uh introduce and teach these words. All right, we're moving on to a different part of speech. Adjectives. Let's learn some compelling adjectives. Of course, they're compelling. They're important. They're useful. All of the above. He appreciated her m feedback even though it was difficult to hear. [sighs] Of course, you could probably just take that adjective out and just say feedback. But if I want to be a little more precise, a little more descriptive and describe the type of feedback which does give you more information, I could then use this word which means honest and telling the truth, especially about something that is difficult, painful, or maybe you struggle telling this other person.

But in that case, you you're going to say it anyway. you think this person should know and you just want to be what the sincere works sincere feedback I think that is a a common collocation but I think to try to hone in a little bit more on this word it's not with the it's not sincere think of the word honest this is another synonym for honest and in that case instead of saying somebody is honest You could say that they are very what? Well done. Um, Rosie, uh, Julia, we're talking about candid candid feedback. There are other collocations with as well when talking about sincere feedback or constructive feedback.

That's another common adjective that's used when talking about feedback. But in this case, when wanting to really hone in on that being honest and truthful when trying to share something with somebody else, he appreciated her candid feedback even though it was difficult to hear. And you could say that somebody is candid. They are being honest about something that maybe is a little difficult to share with someone else. This is an uh I say this with all the words I was about to say. It's great adjective to know. It is all right. All of these are are great words. Here is a this is a maybe an example more from uh even before my childhood, but part of it it kind of goes back to uh the 80s. So this is uh an advertisement. Pick it up and smile. You may be on candid camera.

So this was a TV show a long time ago. I even even before my time, but even when I was a child, there was a an a show it kind of evolved over time and it was called Candid Camera. And basically, they would put people in situations to see how they would react. And they're calling it Candid Camera because you're getting the way people honestly behave in this situation.

Like they see trash on the street and they're showing people walking along. Who's going to pick it up? who's going to walk on by. And finally, they they it's it's like kind of a prank channel. Uh well, they have YouTube channels nowadays, but it's like a prank TV show seeing how people would react and then they tell, "Oh, you're on camera. You're on candid camera." Uh it is like a like a hidden camera to see how people honestly behave in certain situations. Another example, a long a long explanation of me trying to tie in the word candid right there. His m preparation contributed to the project success. This adjective, and I'm not giving you any the first letter anymore, making it a little more challenging. I think you guys uh uh know many of these words anyway, which is great. Means showing great attention to detail. you're very careful and precise and in that case you could say someone is what now there may be more than one adjective that kind of fits this description but I told you this is a little bit more of an advanced word at least I think it is even though it's one that does get used especially in a work context because you want people that pay close attention to detail and you want somebody to be very wet.

His m preparation contributed to the project's success. And the key phrase in there is that attention to detail. Excellent. Loi, uh, Tayo, uh, Monica, meticulous is the adjective that we're looking for. I think this is a useful one, especially when talking about work and you want someone to really pay close attention. like look, you really need to be meticulous. Or you want to describe a colleague and give this person a compliment because this is a good thing if someone is meticulous and say he or she is very meticulous. They always get it right and all of the information is accurate because they pay close attention and he or she is very meticulous.

I've provided a lot of language learning sentences in uh this this lesson today which is relevant. I don't know why sometimes these random things just uh tend to come out. She has a mappet for learning languages. The meaning is very eager for something especially a lot of food. So this is a I'm going to share some I think I'm going to share some other collocations with this. This is a common collocation a mappetite. Now you could use it in the context of literally you know eating food. However, I'm using it in the context of like for learning something new for learning new languages. [snorts] Of course you could say yeah a strong appetite that works but that's not the word I'm looking for. This is a word that is descriptive. It is not an everyday adjective that you're going to come across all the time. But if you really want to emphasize just how strong or eager it is that somebody wants to in this case learn new language languages and you could say that she has a voracious ver voracious sorry voracious appetite. Uh well done. Saw a correct answer in there somewhere. Uh J. Roger. Excellent. So, you could say somebody has a voracious appetite when talking about eating, but you could use it in other context as well. Like I said, we're talking about somebody who's eager to learn and they just want to learn so many different languages. And you could say they have a voracious appetite. It does have a positive connotation in this context. So, more phrases with this adjective. One thing I want you to keep in mind, you may often follow it with the preposition for, not just for this first one, but but all of these as well. So, you have a voracious appetite for something if you want to actually say what the thing is. But you could also describe someone as a voracious reader or a voracious consumer or a voracious eater which would specifically be referring to food or a voracious predator. Those are some common collocations with this word. Again, this one is not as common as some of the others that we talked about. If we're comparing adjectives, I think you're much more likely to come across the word meticulous than you are voracious.

That's just my opinion. I'd have to double check with engram viewer but still this lesson I mentioned it at the very beginning is all about supercharging supercharging your vocabulary. Here is the next one. While the idea was ambitious, a m plan was needed to make it work. The meaning of this word is you're you're dealing with issues in a reasonable, logical and realistic way. essentially the word that I'm highlighting here uh which I'm going to teach you in just a moment. It's really it's kind of a synonym for all of those reasonable, logical, realistic. There are even other adjectives that I think you could use in this context. Uh so this is a good way of just getting the vocabulary juices flowing. What word would uh accurately fit in there? While the idea was ambitious, a m plan was needed to make it work.

I just want to see see what see how creative we can be as a as a group collectively. And uh with the adjectives um the I don't see the answer in there just yet. This is a word I told you. It's really like a sense uh meaning reasonable, logical, realistic, uh sensible works. Uh grounded, you could say that. I don't think that's as commonly used. Effective. Um and the word that I wanted to that I'm trying to teach you right there. More in a work context. Well done, Julia. Uh htt pragmatic. I would also one word that comes to mind um practical is another one that you could use. I think if somebody is pragmatic they are also practical. So really the these are all loosely synonyms. Pragmatic, practical, realistic, reasonable, logical. If you're describing as someone as very pragmatic, the only thing that I would say is that I do think this adjective is adverb, but I feel like this word as part of the word family is one that you may come across um as an adjective as well. So, write your answers in the comments, in the chat, even if you're watching this later. I just love it when when people are participating in these lessons. That is what makes this that is what that is what makes this interactive. That is the essence of interactive English. The team won what? Any guesses? We got to the We get to these adverbs and then everybody's just mums the word uh right now. So, the adverb I'll go ahead and give it to you. Uh perhaps maybe the the feed is slowed down a little bit. Resoundingly is the adverb that uh talking about the team won resoundingly leaving no doubt about their dominance. In this case, if something is done resounding resoundingly, completely in a very definite way. I mentioned you may use this as an adjective. Um, it was a resounding victory. In that case, I'm kind of saying the same thing that it was just a complete victory, but I'm using it as an adjective. The next uh oh to give you a little more context with this uh adverb in case this is new uh I always love it when you learn new words or get exposure to some new words. Here are some more news headlines using this adverb. Um yinians resoundingly approve a new constitution paving uh pave way for elections. That is a collocation with this adverb to resoundingly approve of something. So, let's say that you have a an overwhelming consensus and everybody has the sha same opinion and then you resoundingly approve some measure uh that paves the way for these elections.

The next uh headline, Air Canada cabin crew union resoundingly rejects pay package. Kind of using the opposite. So, that's another collocation you may use with this adverb. resoundingly approve, resoundingly reject. Conservative wins resoundingly in Chile's presidential election. And then finally, Epstein file bill passes resoundingly in the House with only one no vote. These are all fairly recent uh news headlines. Okay, some of the the news, the information looks familiar to you. I try to take things that uh are are pretty recent. He defended his position throughout the debate. What adverb could we use? This is a little trickier when it comes to these adverbs, but the meaning of it is doing something in a way that is strong, steady, and determined without changing, hesitating, or becoming weaker. So, you have this determination.

You're not going to change. You're not going to hesitate and you're going to do something. What? Just as a reminder, this is an LY adverb. Write your answers in the comments in the chat if you happen to have any uh guesses as to the word that I'm talking about. He defended his position. I think things did freeze up a little bit there which is why uh the chat kind of delayed. Sorry about that. Uh saw some answers in there. So the word uh that we're talking about he defended his position. You have that determination. You're not going to change. And in that case you do something unwaveringly. Unwaveringly. I saw a couple answers.

Well done if you uh wrote unwaveringly. He unwaveringly defended his position throughout the debate. You can use this when talking about how somebody is doing something and you're really want to capture that the the idea that you're doing it and with a lot of determination. You're not going to change. You're not going to hesitate. And in this case, this person unwaveringly defended his position. Great adverb, [laughter] right? She spoke m to ensure everyone understood her message. What do you think? She spoke m to ensure everyone understood her message. This is a this is an adverb that I think is commonly used more common than unwaveringly or resoundingly. You're going to come across this. It just means carefully thought out in advanced. It was planned, studied, it was intentional. and you do something what? All right, welcome Sherry. All right, new member. Love it.

Love it. Love it. Thank you for joining the community. Uh love seeing that. Love seeing members in here right now like Manuel, Lai, uh Gustav. So what? Don't don't overthink this because this is a a pretty common adverb. And yeah, there there are more there's probably more than one that you could use. Sorry, I see like the the sun is setting and it's it's kind of casting this shadow uh right now. She spoke m to ensure everyone understood her message. Of course, I think confidently works, clearly works. Uh you could use those adverbs succinctly. Sure, that's a good one. This is one that I I think is is pretty common. And I'm talking about the word deliberately. She spoke deliberately to ensure everyone understood her message. If you do something deliberately, it is planned.

It is intentional. You gave it a lot of thought. And I feel like now that you see the the adverb that I'm talking about, you're like, "Yes, I know this word. I use it. That's perfect." Uh try to mix it up a little bit between some very common more common words and others that are are a bit more precise. So, here are some common collocations with this adverb. You might deliberately ignore someone or deliberately avoid or deliberately refuse, deliberately withhold, deliberately deceive, deliberately mislead or say that something um is deliberately vague. And if something is deliberately vague, it could very well be uh ambiguous and there might be some ambiguity in that case. This is just the tip of the iceberg with an adverb like this. There are a lot more collocations that you could use with this adverb. I just wanted to share some phrases that you may certainly come across when we're talking about the word deliberately.

So, I apologize. I think Okay, I thought the it froze. The chat froze. So, I'll just go ahead. I'll give you my uh answer in just a moment. Uh but words that you could use that I think are good that it's not the one that I was thinking of. Meticulously. I like that. Yeah, we can use that as an adverb. Precisely. Skillfully, you might skillfully negotiate something. Another great adverb we could use in this context, um, I don't know if I would use like, uh, vividly in this case. Um, shrewdly is another adverb that you could use. Surely, I don't know if I would use that when talking about negotiating. But let me go ahead and give you the the word that I was thinking of uh, because I did see it up there. Somebody did mention it. I think it was you, Katarina. Astutely. Astutely. The manager astutely negotiated better terms for the contract means accurately assessing situations or people perceptively. But as I just said, there are other words that I think you could use in this context. My personal opinion, the one that uh somebody used, I do like uh when some we're talking about negotiations and saying somebody is a shrewd negotiator or shrewdly negotiating. In that case, it makes me think they are a very tough negotiator and you're really trying to to get what it is to get what you want.

Here are the all of the words that we talked about in today's lesson. All of the verbs, the nouns, the adjectives, the adverbs. I hope that you were familiar with some of them. I hope that maybe one, two, three, or even more were new and you're just getting that exposure because that is the first step when it comes to supercharging your vocabulary. which is which is something that I absolutely want to help you do this year. If you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching and I will see you soon for another lesson in the future.

Speak Like a Native Powerful Vocabulary You MUST Know

I want to teach you some powerful vocabulary that I think you must know. And I say it's going to help you speak like a native. What I really mean is that these are words that are more advanced, but they are they are descriptive. They are precise, especially in certain situations. So I I do think this is going to help you become a more proficient speaker, but at the same time, it's going to help with your listening comprehension as well as your reading comprehension. So, this is this is just good vocabulary to know. And I'd like to point out if you want to access these lesson notes that are next to me, click on the link down in the description. Join our email community if you're already a part of it. Check your inbox. I have sent them to you. So, of course, this is a this is a it's an interactive lesson. I want you to participate. I see people participating with those hearts and smileys right now in the chat. I love it. So, I want you to write your answers either in the chat or the comments and and actually actively participate in the lesson. So, we're going to begin with some powerful verbs and I'm breaking this down by part of speech. Here is the first question and I I will read it to you. I'm giving you the meaning of the verb down below as well as the first letter. So, going to start out a little easier and then it may get a little more challenging as we go through this. I told you these are advanced words so they are a little more specific but still I tried to choose ones that I think are more commonly used ones that you might come across if you're listening to a podcast or a news report. So I I in that regard I think they're incredibly useful especially in a professional context. So during the presentation the speaker briefly m to the company's past mistakes without going into detail. The verb begins with the letter A and the the meaning is just to make an indirect reference and it's like you're kind of hinting at something. So, it really fits in well with the sentence because you're talking about it in an indirect way. You're hinting at it, but you're not going to go into detail because we're talking about a mistake and maybe this person does not want to talk about the company's past mistakes and therefore they will m to the mistakes and not go into detail. All right, I see some excellent answers in the chat. The the word the verb that we're talking about is elude. And I think many of you got it because we're talking about eluded to the company's past mistakes. So that is perfect. Uh it just means to make an indirect reference when you allude to something. And again

there's there's a reason that somebody might do this. They don't want to speak about it directly. They don't want to spend a lot of time talking about it and therefore they may acknowledge it and just move on and they allude to something. So let's just move on to the next one. Some of them I'm going to give you a little more information on with some collocations and I I think it'll be very useful. Constant delays and poor communication only serve to m the team's frustration. This means to make a problem or a situation or just some negative feeling. You're just making it worse. So think about the situation. Again, I'm kind of giving you more like of a work context in this case, as well as the previous example, delays, poor communication. What would that do to the team's frustration? It's going to make it worse, but we can use this specific verb that's going to capture that sentiment. It's going to add a little emphasis instead of just saying, "Oh, it just it made our frustration much worse." I mean, you could say that. It's very it's it's perfectly fine to say that, but you could really capture that by using this verb. So, we're talking about the verb exacerbate. Perfect. Well done, Dwit. Katarina Manuel. Uh, it just means to make a problem, a bad situation, or a negative feeling worse.

Now, I want you to think about the meaning right there. to exacerbate a problem or exacerbate a situation because these are actually common collocations. These are words that are frequently used together. And when talking specifically about this verb, this is how you you may use it. and talking about exacerbating a problem and making it worse or exacerbating a situation. You could exacerbate uh a decline, exacerbate poverty, exacerbate a shortage, and exacerbate a symptom.

Now, of course, there are many other ways that you can use this verb. I just wanted to give you a a quick little sample as to other phrases with this verb that are commonly used and that I think are very useful. It's a great way to keep building your vocabulary, which is what this is all about. So, you guys are are are rocking this so far. All right, I'm I'm I'm impressed. Now, maybe this one might be a little easier. Let me my main point. We must act immediately if we want to meet the deadline. Again, I'm trying to put it into more of a work context, but in this case, the verb starts with the letter R. It means to say something again. a number of times t typically for emphasis or clarity. So I do think this is definitely useful in a work situation because people do this all the time.

understands. And therefore I might say look we need to reiterate the policy so that all the employees are on the same page or look let me reiterate uh you know the main point of the presentation and you're going to reiterate something. So it is really in a sense it is a synonym for the word to repeat which is a very common verb but you're just adding that emphasis or clarity when you reiterate something. So, this is that's a great business verb. How about this one? Spreading false rumors can seriously someone's credibility in the workplace. This mean starts with the letter U and we're talking about to lessen the effectiveness, power, or ability of, especially gradually or insidiously. So, you might see that adverb insidiously.

If you do, if something is insidious, it has a negative connotation. It just means kind of bad, evil, more in in a very intentional way and you're doing this purposefully and and not a good way if you're doing something insidiously. But this verb I think is one that you've I'm sure you've heard before even if it is probably maybe it's a part of your passive vocabulary and you don't actively use it but therefore it is a useful one if we're talking about lessening the effectiveness and this is actually a a collocation to someone's credibility. So the verb that we're looking for is to undermine. To undermine something or someone is you're just lessening whether it's the effectiveness of something, power, ability and you are undermining maybe what this person is saying or you're undermining this person and in their ability to do something. So, another one that I think you will certainly hear in a more professional context because this happens I think in business when talking about colleagues, your supervisor and or other companies and people may undermine someone else and it does become a little bit of a problem or an issue. So, I hope that uh you know you're familiar especially after you see some of these verbs that you're you recognize them and over time the idea is then to make it a part of your active vocabulary so that you can use them. And to give you a little more reference, I thought it's always fun to throw some of these comics in here. It says, "Your power nap is uh somewhat undermined by Mr. Cuddles." This person's trying to take a power nap uh and using their teddy bear and it just kind of undermines the word power as far as having a power nap or taking a power nap. So now let's switch gears and I said I told you that I'm kind of dividing this into parts of speech. Now I want to take a look at some powerful adjectives. And these are words that I think are very descriptive, very useful whether in business or school or just in your daily conversations depending on what you're talking about. What do you think? And this is actually true, right? My wife loves the opera, but I feel about it. So once again, for this one to, you know, make it a little easier, kind of giving you a little bit of a hint, uh, I'm trying to trying to allude to the correct answer by giving you that first letter begins with the letter A. And the meaning of this is to have mixed feelings or contradictory ideas about something or someone. And you could say that I feel about something. And this is I guess how I feel. Yeah. About the opera. My wife loves it. She would like to go. And I'm kind of like, you know, I guess we can go, but I don't know. Sometimes I may not really feel like it. It has its pros, its cons. And therefore, you could say that I am what?

So, think about this. I I feel like once again this is a word that once I tell you the answer or show you because I'm not seeing any guesses just yet. I think oh yeah I've heard this word before. Um maybe it's new for you which is perfect. So the adjective that I'm talking about excellent well done. Ambivalent. If you are ambivalent about something then yeah you have mixed feelings as far as it's okay it's not bad. that's not good. Or it could refer to contradictory ideas uh that someone or uh may have. And in that case, you could say you're ambivalent. So this is a good descriptive word. And I'm sure that you could think of something right now like if I said for me it's the opera. And maybe for you it's something else that it's not like you love it or you hate it. You could then say, well, I'm just kind of ambivalent. I, you know, I don't like it. I don't hate it. and maybe I'm just a bit ambivalent. So, a good good good adjective to know. To give you a little more context, here are some news headlines uh as far as uh you know, trying to make it a little easier to understand. So, these are actually headlines that I took yesterday. Uh autocracy or democracy more and more people are ambivalent. Not a positive trend. I would say not a good thing. But in this case, yeah, you could say people are ambivalent. Like they just they don't really care one way or the other. Uh the next one, the best leaders aren't decisive, they're ambivalent. This is I don't this is the headline of the title. Again, I didn't read the article, so I can't really uh talk about it. Most times I think people would think leaders are oh very decisive, make quick decisions, but uh the article is trying to say they're ambivalent. Then the la last one, teachers are happy uh with cell phone bans. Students are more ambivalent. And I would I I would be someone who is very happy with a ban on cell phones. And I guess yeah, some students maybe it's important to them, but for many of them maybe they don't care like they don't have to use it at school and therefore they are ambivalent.

What do you think? And maybe this one might be a little more difficult. I feel like I always say that and then everybody everybody writes the answer down there in the chat. She has m taste in clothes. So it starts with the letter I and the meaning is in accordance with the highest standards. You heard me emphasize highest standards. Perfect. And with no problems. So in that case you could say something is and immaculate is a good guess but that is not the word that uh are talking about what do you any other think about try to run through all of those I adjectives that uh are are can be very descriptive and this is a common collocation. Uh you you could use immaculate when talking about someone's taste, but I think this is perhaps even a little more common to say somebody has m taste in clothes.

So the word the adjective that we're looking for insane. No, that's uh close. Uh good job. I see a couple answers. Impeccable. So if something is impeccable, then you're you're really talking about I'm going to emphasize it again, the highest standards. And in this case, yes, she has impeccable taste in clothes. So, here are some other collocations with this adjective that uh I think are very useful if you want to use them and it gives you a sense as to how the adjective is used. You could say someone has impeccable manners or impeccable taste. I mentioned this was a collocation, impeccable style or impeccable service. perhaps talking about a restaurant or a hotel. Uh an impeccable record if you're referring to maybe a politician. And then impeccable credentials if talking about perhaps a job applicant. And their credentials are impeccable. Great word to add emphasis when referring to those very high standards in saying that something or even someone is impeccable. All right. I love that you love this word. Thank you. Thank you for the Thank you for showing the love. How about this one? I feel like many of you are going to get it, but we'll see. Uh I've I've been surprised before. I do think this is uh a fairly, you know, commonly used, but I would still say it's an advanced word. My brother presented me with a very m business opportunity. So this adjective begins with the letter L and the the meaning is producing a great deal of profit. So it's very I I mean I'd say rather specific. We're talking about a great deal of profit and therefore you could say something is there's a L sound and then how would you finish it? This is another the the example sentence is another collocation.

a m opportunity. So, I'm going to go ahead and say it. Yes. Uh saw a lot of uh answers in there. Angela, uh Ibraim, uh Julia, lucrative. Something is lucrative. And I I know that many of you got this and you might some of you you you know this word. You're very familiar with it. You might think, I don't know if that's really advanced. I'd say just because if a word is advanced, it really doesn't mean that it's like never used, but this is certainly a word that you'll come across if you if you're interested or reading a lot about uh especially business and you might hear people talk about a business that is very lucrative or a lucrative opportunity. I just mentioned that is a common collocation.

So, if something is lucrative, if I tell you, wow, I have a very lucrative offer for you, then I'm basically saying that there's a lot of money involved in this. It's a great way to make profit. But this is also one of these words that you need to be careful of in English because I would say people that are maybe trying to take advantage of others or you talk people scamming others, this is a word that people will use. Oh, this is very lucrative. It's easy money, very easy way to get rich, and it is extremely lucrative. So, it's descriptive, but be careful if somebody is, you know, trying to sell you some lucrative opportunity.

Just take it take it with a grain of salt. That's my uh that is my my uh unsolicited advice with with regards to that. How about this? His mbehavior is one of the reasons why he lost his job. So this adjective refers to moving or behaving in a way that is not key word not regular not certain or not expected and therefore you could say that someone or something is what again I've tried to as I've gone through and given you these example sentences I've intentionally tried to use some common collocations when talking about behavior. If the behavior is a little unexpected, you'd be like, "Wow, I I didn't expect that." Or it's irregular, you might say someone's behavior is m or they have m behavior.

This word does have a negative connotation, especially when talking about someone's behavior. It is not egregious. That's another adjective, another advanced descriptive adjective that really just means horrible. Uh, that would work. You could say somebody's behavior is egregious. However, the meaning doesn't really line up with egregious, which is more like horrible, bad. Whereas, this is talking about, again, think about moving or behaving. In this case, behaving in a way that's just not expected. It's irregular. You're a little surprised. You're like, "Oh, wow. This this is this person's behavior is erratic. All right. Well done. Excellent. Lai uh Yana. Well, well played. So erratic behavior is a collocation. If you want to talk about the way that someone's behaving, it does have more of a negative connotation. If you say that someone's behavior is erratic, that one moment they're very happy and then they're very angry. uh and they kind of just change quickly from one mood to the next. And you might describe someone's behavior is erratic.

But it could also refer to movement. Maybe someone is driving in uh an erratic way and you're just moving in this irregular way and it's probably not very safe. But it could refer to movement as well when you say that something or or is or someone is erratic. Here are some other collocations. I know I'm I guess with these collocations, I'm actually throwing a lot of vocabulary at you, but I think you guys can handle it. I think you can. So, I mentioned erratic behavior already, but maybe you go to the doctor. Again, this would be a negative thing. If they say, well, you know, you have an erratic heartbeat and it's just not regular or erratic movement. You could talk about the weather there. Yeah, the the weather is very erratic. uh or say something is highly erratic and using it that adverb adjective collocation as well as increasingly erratic. So these are some words that you may likely find with the adjective erratic. So let's move on to our next part of speech. Talk about some powerful powerful nouns. All right, everybody loves everybody loves a good noun. So now I'm I'm taking away uh that first letter. I am not going to allude to the the correct answer uh anymore by providing you with the first letter. I'm still going to give you the meaning in an example sentence to try to help you put it into context. So uh I I still think you all will will perform fairly well. The initial test results were viewed as an So we're talking about something that is different. abnormal, peculiar, or not easily classified. There is a there is a hint uh in this and I'll I'll go ahead and tell you the hint. Think about that article, the article that comes before the noun.

So, you could use this as a hint. The initial test results were viewed as an this tells you that the noun is going to start with a verb. Uh not a verb, sorry, with a vowel sound. It's going to begin with a vowel sound and we're talking about yes um saw some answers in there. Uh maverick imperfectionism an anomaly. So if something is an anomaly it is just different from uh something else. I will say that if you're referring to something as an anomaly, typically there are other measurements or there's something that you can compare it to so that you know that oh this one thing is different. This test result is an anomaly. It's different than what would be considered normal. Or if you say something else is an anomaly, it stands out and is different from the rest or from what is uh the expected result when you say something is an anomaly. It's an anomaly.

How about this one? I think this is a good word. I think you can go out and use it because you could probably think of a situation that maybe you are facing right now that uh you you could use this noun. we are faced with an agonizing m and it seems there is no correct choice. So we're talking about a noun that means uh a well that refers to a situation in which a difficult choice has to be made between two or more alternatives especially ones that are equally undesirable. So think about the the specific meaning talking about making a choice. That's even part of the example sentence. And there I think generally there are two but as it says in the meaning there could be more than one. And basically what you're basically what you're alluding to I'm just going to keep using that verb throughout the lesson. Basically what you're alluding to when you use this noun is that well you don't really like any of the choices. So that it's it's a little more specific and as I was rambling on, you all gave a lot of excellent answers. We're talking about a dilemma. So if you are faced with a dilemma, then you really need to make a choice and you may have two cho two options, three options, four options, but really in this situation, nothing is you don't really view any of them as desirable and like oh this is this is a great choice that I have to make. So again, I think this is a a good noun because like I said, I think we can all relate to it and we have all faced a time when we had to uh um when we faced a dilemma.

Once again, that that is a a common verb that you may use with this noun to face a dilemma. I wanted to give you these examples to highlight the fact that a choice needs to be made. So, for example, this first article, news headlines, best of Beth Ashley, not really sure who that is. Uh, the retirement dilemma. What to do now? A lot. So, you retire. Well, what's the dilemma? Should I find something else to do? Work around the home. And maybe this is a dilemma and people, they don't know what to do. And maybe they don't really like any of their choices. The next one, return or stay. The dilemma facing Syrians living in Europe and trying to make this decision. And finally, the family business dilemma. Who is next in line? In this case, you could have well two, three, four children and there are multiple options and it is certainly a dilemma. I think of the show uh succession in that case. If you have not seen it, great show uh talking about a family business and that that's really the main storyline, the dilemma. Who is going to take over the family business? How about this? I feel like this one might be a little more challenging. There are several M for promoting people who don't have formal qualifications. Based on the sentence, I think it may be a little harder to to come up with this noun, but really uh the meaning is any act, decision, or case that serves as a guide or justification for subsequent situations. This is a word that I think is often used and you may encounter it if you're talking about the courts and rulings and the judiciary uh that that you you may but you could use it in other contexts as well like the one I'm giving you is more of a a business context. There are several for promoting people who don't have formal qualifications. So this is a guide for an in and a justification for subsequent situations. What do you think? Do you have any guesses what this noun could be? Once again, I think once I show you, many of you are going to, oh yes, I've I've heard of this noun before. Maybe you even actively used it use it from time to time. We'll see. Or perhaps if it's new, then that's that's perfect. Wellplayed, Cindy. We're talking about a precedent. So, I I mentioned that you might hear this more in a judicial context as far as a court ruling and saying, "Oh, there is a precedent already that this was the ruling in the past and it's going to serve as justification for a court ruling in the present and there is a precedent." Now this context I think it does fit in the example sentence saying well there is a precedent for promoting people who don't have formal qualifications. So, it's been done in the past and maybe we're in this situation now and we're looking at some, you know, we're going to promote someone and maybe I tell you, well, this person doesn't really have a lot of formal qualifications. Maybe that should disqualify them. And you tell me, well, look, it's happened in the past. There's a precedent for promoting people without formal qualifications. It works. All right. So, hopefully, again, this word, this noun is new, uh, then that's perfect. How about this? Arranging child care over the school holidays can be a real m for working parents. Well, I'll tell you in just a second what I was about to say. The meaning is a confusing or difficult problem or question. Now, the reason why I was chuckling just a moment ago is because in a previous question, some people had actually put this answer as the answer to a previous question. And I will follow up on that in just a minute. So, we're talking about a confusing or difficult problem or or question. Perhaps it's a puzzle, maybe it's a riddle. We don't know. But in this situation, I think it applies parent and more so this is a situation in the US having to figure out uh child care or pretty much you know all the time but over the school holidays it can be a real m for working parents and I see some right answers. I actually uh I like the answer disaster. That is true. It can be a real disaster for working parents. But the word that we're looking for is a conundrum. It can be a real conundrum for working parents. You know, what do you do in this situation?

This is a difficult problem and we got to figure out how to solve this problem. So, you know me, I like giving you these fun little memes or to to give you an example. I thought this was uh funny as far as the this cat the conundrum. I love this box. Wait, is that a new box? And then of course the cat moves over there and lays down. It's like, you know, I missed that old box. I was just confused. And then they go back and you could say, well, this is quite quite the conundrum, the problem that this cat is trying to solve. Now, one thing you may be thinking, or if you're not thinking of it, I want you to think about it right now. What is the difference between a conundrum and a dilemma?

Because they they are similar. I'd say the similarity mostly is because there are situations in which you could use either one. So that's why I also use this because I could say well that you know that's quite a conundrum. This cat is trying to solve this problem. Okay, which box should I use? I could also use dilemma to describe this situation. This cat is faced with a dilemma. You know what box is the best one to relax in? and maybe they don't like either choice because they feel like well I'm always going to regret and I wish I were in the other box. So I could describe something and say well somebody's facing a dilemma or that's quite the conundrum but just to highlight the difference between them and of course you know I'm trying to make a use of AI as much as I can just like everybody else and nowadays when you do a Google search I just wanted to highlight this. I did think that the AI overview gave a nice description highlighting that nuance because if you can't see it, I'll just read it there. It says, "A dilemma demands a choice. You have to make a decision when you're talking about a dilemma. Do I do this or do I do that?" When talking about a conundrum, you're really just referring to this challenge and it's talking about a challenge of somebody's thought process or understanding. kind of like a puzzle. So you could refer to the situation as a conundrum. It's a difficult problem to solve. That difficult problem could be a choice that you have to make. And that's why there is some overlap with dilemma and conundrum. But when you're talking about dilemma, there is a decision that must be made.

So really think about a choice when you're talking about dilemma. So, here are some powerful adverbs. Right, let's we're moving through all the parts of speech today. What do you think? So, this is actually a longer uh you know vocabulary list um and I'll show you all of them at the end. Each song was integrated into the film. What adverb can we use that's that means smoothly without any breaks, interruptions or noticeable changes or in a way that is perfectly integrated and uninterrupted. I feel like this this meaning really captures this adverb. It is one that I think you I think you're familiar with it. I imagine that you if you read articles, you've come across this word, you've heard it before. if you listen to um a lot of English movies, TV shows, news, what have you. So, in this case, I'm trying to say that it really went in smoothly with the film and it is kind of a common collocation with integrated. I could say that the songs were seamlessly integrated and many of you rock that one. Uh just keep in mind seamlessly is spelled s e a uh instead of two e. Sometimes this word is commonly misspelled. So if something is done seamlessly there it's very smooth. No breaks no interruptions and you try to do something seamlessly. I try to do these lessons. They are not always seamlessly. They are not always done seamlessly because depending on my internet connection there could be a break a drop. you know thing things happen that are beyond my control and therefore unfortunately I cannot say that they are done seamlessly here are some useful collocations and just want to point out that I'm talking about verb adverb collocations all of these are verbs that you might use with this adverb in saying that something fits seamlessly or it flows seamlessly

or moves seamlessly blends seem seamlessly, to merge seamlessly, or to connect seamlessly. Of course, there are other verbs that you can use with this adverb. I just wanted to give you a sample because I do think it helps you get a better understanding of the word and how it's used when you see these collocations. How about this one? He had given away their secret. We're talking about an adverb that means without intention, accidentally. And really, it's it is interchangeable with accidentally because I could say he had accidentally given away their secret. That works. But I don't want to use that word. Everybody knows the word accidentally. I want to use another more flavorful, powerful adverb. I could use this word instead. he had given away their secret. There are other now now that everybody's writing them down there. Yes, there of course there are others that would fit unintentionally that would work. Uh half-hazardly that also works, but that is not the word that I'm thinking of. The one that I wanted to point out is another one that everybody's uh people have been writing.

Uh Julia Davit uh well done inadvertently. If you do something inadvertently, it just means you didn't mean to do it. It was accidental or it was unintentional. So these are words that you know are rather interchangeable. Now, one thing I will say about the pronunciation in British English, you are going to hear that true T inadvertently. You may even hear it in the US. Some Americans may say it like that as well, inadvertently. But if I were to say this inadvertently, you hear that glottle t, that glottle stop inadvertently. So it does make it a little more challenging to say uh with the American accent if you're going to use that glottle stop inadvertently. Inadvertently. You can give it a try. Inadvertently.

How about uh how about this next one? The professor stated the rules for the assignment. Once again, I think now you get the meaning. I think you'll be able to pick out the adverb. So stated the rules for assignment in a clear detailed manner leaving no room for confusion or doubt. And in that case, somebody is doing something how I can give it away. All of these are ly adverbs because we're talking about how in this case. So the professor stated the rules for the assignment. So they gave them in a clear and detailed manner leaving no room for confusion. Precisely I it would work but precisely is more I I feel about like accuracy and it's just really done in an accurate way but again it would fit concisely is more makes me think more about the the time that it's done in in a short uh manner if something is concise. The word that uh that I'm talking about or that I'm looking for in this case is explicitly. When something is done explicitly. And a lot of times you might use this when explaining something or talking about it. So I'm using it with the verb stated. They explicitly stated or explicitly said not to do something. So in this case if the professor explicitly explains the details the rules for the assignment then they are providing the information in a very clear and detailed way so that there is no confusion no doubt and something is done or in this case said explicitly and that's another phrase you might hear if somebody says oh I explicitly said not to do this thing and they were trying to say that oh they told you this information in a clear uh and detailed way.

It is 10:00. So, my roommates are still at the pub. This is just a madeup example. I don't have any roommates and I am certainly not at the pub at 10:00. I I try to be in bed at that time. At this point, it is 10:00. So, my roommates are still at the pub. But if we want to just think about the context, we're talking about an adverb that is used to convey what is a certain it's very likely though it's not known for certain. So we're going to use this when we want to highlight that well I think this is likely what's happening but you know it could be wrong that that it may not be the case. It is 10:00 so my roommates are still at the pub.

The word that we're looking for, ex slash er. Well done. Well played. We're we're talking about presumably. Presumably is used to convey that. Well, I I think this is probably true. It's likely true, but you know, it may it may be wrong. Presumably, it is 10:00, so presumably my roommates are still at the pub. I have uh I I thought this was funny. Presumably good at helping people stay alive. And it is a a picture uh right there. You can see the the name on the sign Dr. Beg. And for those of you who uh may be a little older, perhaps you'll get this joke. Uh the Beeges, if you're familiar with the movie, gosh, I'm drawing a blank. Saturday Night Fever won a long time ago with John Travolta. That was the song in the movie by the the song by the beeges that uh uh uh uh Staying Alive Staying Alive. Again, I'm not going to sing it for you. My singing is horrible. But that's that's the joke that Dr. BG thinking the music group the BeeGees. You know, presumably this person's really good at helping people stay alive. Here are all of the words that we just looked at. So, there are there are 16 of them that we went through. I know I gave you a lot of vocabulary today, especially with those collocations, but hopefully it gives you a better understanding as to how the word is used in context. So I right now just to review very quickly, um I know that when it comes to building your vocabulary, you are not ambivalent. You are somebody who is passionate about learning new words and phrases. And therefore, I think that you are faced with a dilemma right now. you can either uh watch another video lesson or maybe you're you're just going to go. I hope that you are going to choose to watch uh another video lesson. And if you do, then the the transition is it's you can seamlessly transition from this video to another video, continue building your vocabulary. And I just want to reiterate that one more time. I think you should watch another lesson so that you can continue learning new things. Uh because I think I I like to think these lessons are just impeccable. All right? Even though you might have to deal with my erratic behavior from time to time. Okay? So that's all the review that I'm going to give you. I hope that you enjoyed the lesson and that you learn something new. Again, if you want to get these lesson notes, check out the link down below in the description. Go out, try to use these words, make them a part of your active vocabulary, and just keep developing your overall English fluency.

Speak Like a Native Powerful Vocabulary You Should Know

Let's learn some powerful words. I'm talking about some powerful nouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs that are really going to help you build your vocabulary. And I think this This is, of course, vocabulary you need to know. It's going to help both your listening comprehension as well as your speaking fluency. And if you are someone who would like to build your vocabulary, please subscribe, turn on notifications. That way I can become your teacher. My name is West. The channel is Interactive English. It is all about helping you reach your fluency goal. So, let's go ahead and jump into it, and we're going to start out with some powerful verbs, such as allude. To allude just means to make an indirect reference or just hint at something. I'm giving you an example sentence down below. During the presentation, the speaker briefly alluded to the company's past mistakes without going into details. So, whenever you want to avoid going into details, but still talk about something, you may allude to it. The next verb is to exacerbate. To exacerbate something means to make something worse. Really, we're talking about a problem, a bad situation, a negative feeling. So, this It really does have more of a negative connotation. Uh here's an example. Constant delays and poor communication only serve to exacerbate the team's frustration. So, great verb whenever you want to emphasize that, well, something is becoming worse, and you are exacerbating a problem or situation.

Now, to really help you jump-start your vocabulary, I want to share with you some common collocations with this verb. This is These are some verb-noun collocations. I've already mentioned to exacerbate a problem, to exacerbate a situation, you could also exacerbate a decline, or exacerbate poverty, exacerbate a shortage, or even exacerbate a symptom. But, in all of these instances, again, it really does have more of a negative connotation. Then, there's the verb to reiterate. This is a verb that I really like, mostly because I do this quite often, but it just means to say something again, or a number of times, typically for emphasis or clarity. Let me reiterate my main point. We must act immediately if we want to meet the deadline. So, I said I like it because I think quite often, as a as a teacher, I constantly want to either will emphasize something, make something clear, so I am going to reiterate and say it again, and bring it back up, because that is one of the best ways to learn is just constantly review, get exposure, and as we go through the lesson, I am going to try to reiterate many of these words, just so you can just hear how they're used in context. This is something that I think every teacher should constantly do and just reiterate the information that they would like others to learn. Then, there's to undermine. This means to lessen the effectiveness, power, or ability of uh especially gradually or insidiously. And if you're unfamiliar with insidiously, it means that you really are just doing this in a more real like negative and spiteful way. You are undermining someone. So, this is not good. It has a negative connotation. Spreading false rumors can seriously undermine someone's credibility in the workplace, and that is true. It is not good if somebody is undermining you, and it's also not good if you are undermining another person. I just thought this was humorous. You know I like to share it with you from time to time. Your power nap is somewhat undermined by Mr. Cuddles. So, yeah, you had that stuffed animal. It really doesn't feel like a power nap, unlike unlike these powerful words that I'm teaching you right now. Then there's to concede. Whenever you concede, it just means you admit or agree that something is true after first denying or resisting it. And you are conceding that well, you were wrong or that you made a mistake and really it is true after all. The manager conceded that mistakes were made during the project. So, I I feel like this is a good thing whenever someone is willing to concede something and you admit that you're wrong or that the other person is right. It's a great way to work towards compromise if people are willing to concede, especially if they're wrong. To mitigate.

This means to make well, to make something bad less severe, less serious, less painful and you are trying to mitigate something. Taking breaks throughout the day can help mitigate stress. That is a great collocation because of course there are many things in our lives that we would like to mitigate and you want to make it less severe or less painful. Once again, here are some useful collocations with this verb. Mitigate stress, mitigate damage, mitigate a threat, maybe you want to mitigate the impact of something or mitigate the consequences or even mitigate a loss. Great verb to know. This is another great verb to know, to compel. When you try to compel someone, probably to do something, you are forcing or just strongly persuading someone to do something. The evidence was so strong that it compelled the jury to reach a quick verdict. And they were well, they were compelled to come up with a verdict quickly because yeah, you just really had strong evidence.

Just wash your hand after touching your own. Okay, let's let's continue. To differ. This means to put off to a later time. So you're probably putting off some action or event. In general, it just means to postpone something. He chose to defer his university application for a year. Here are some more collocations. These are words that are frequently used together that you're going to hear whenever we're talking about the verb differ. You might defer a decision and then follow that with either for or until. So you may defer a decision for a period of time. We're going to defer that decision for a couple of weeks. Or you're going to defer a decision until like a point in time. We're going to defer that until tomorrow.

You could also defer payment, or defer work, defer a discussion, defer entry, as well as defer responsibility. How about endorse? This is another useful verb to add to your passive vocabulary and then hopefully start using it over time, make it a part of your active vocabulary. When you endorse someone or something, you make a public statement of your approval or support for something or someone. She refused to endorse a plan she didn't fully support. And in this case, she did not endorse it and come out publicly and say, "Yes, I am for this thing." So, you could endorse someone or something. Here is an example because on LinkedIn, I don't know if they still do it nowadays and you could endorse someone's credentials, somebody you know and say, "Yes, they have this skill, whether it's programming or presenting." Here is me and the boys after endorsing each other's skills on LinkedIn. I don't know if this is uh from play beat maybe North Korea. They have all this these badges on in the military, but yes, they really really did endorse each other's skills in this case. How about assert? This means to state a fact or belief confidently, positively, or forcefully, and you assert something. He asserted his authority during the negotiations. So, whenever you assert something, you're you're really stating it in a confident way. Here are some other collocations. You could assert your rights, assert your innocence, assert your authority, like in our example sentence, assert your control, assert your dominance, or even assert your independence. These are some phrases that you will likely come across whenever we're talking about the verb assert. Now, here is another verb that is somewhat similar, but still a little different. There's a slight nuance. To contend. To contend means, well, here it is, to assert something as a position in an argument. And that's the distinction that I want to make.

Here's an example. Some analysts contend that the market will recover quickly. So, whenever you contend something, think of it more as possibly a debate, an argument, and you contend some position. Whenever you assert something, you're really just stating it in a confident way. So, they're not always interchangeable, just something that I want you to keep in mind. And right now, I would like to assert that if you want to improve your speaking skills, you should check out my speaking course. I contend that there is no better way to improve your speaking fluency. So, this is a course for intermediate to advanced speakers. It is all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, and speak naturally.

Check out the link down below in the description if you'd like to learn more about the course. But, generally, we start out each week warming up with pronunciation, connected speech, and then we move into our speaking topic, learning new vocabulary that we practice with a range of engaging speaking activities. And I'm just trying to use some of that vocabulary, like assert and contend. I told you that I'm going to reiterate these words as we go through the lesson. But, let's just Let's just move on. The next set of powerful words that I want to share with you are some powerful adjectives. These are very descriptive words, like this first one, ambivalent.

If you are ambivalent, it just means you have mixed feelings or even contradictory ideas about something or someone. I could say my wife loves the opera, but I feel ambivalent about it. And yeah, this is true. Not like I don't I don't hate it. I don't love it. I'm rather ambivalent. So, this is a great word whenever you want to show that you're kind of neutral and you don't really you're not really excited or you don't really dislike something and you could just say that you are ambivalent. Here are some news headlines to give you some context as to how this word is used. Autocracy or democracy, more and more people are ambivalent.

It's not a good thing. The next one, the best leaders aren't decisive, they're ambivalent. I had no idea. And finally, teachers are happy with cell phone bans, students are more ambivalent. And yeah, I can imagine teachers might be happy with a cell phone ban because cell phones, they could undermine learning in the classroom. You like how I slipped undermine back in there? Here is the next adjective, resilient. It just means that you are able to recover quickly from setbacks. Here is an example that I think is a common association, at least in my mind. Maybe it's because I I have kids. Children are often remarkably resilient after major changes. Now, of course, this is not true for for all children, but as just to reiterate that I think this is a common association, say, "Oh, you know, children, they can deal with the changes. They're they're incredibly resilient." And I think that more adults deal of profit. If there is some opportunity that a person describes as lucrative. My brother presented me with a very lucrative business opportunity. I've used the word opportunity twice now because that is another time when you will come across this adjective. If somebody is describing some lucrative opportunity. How about erratic? This just means that someone or something is moving or behaving in a way that is not regular, certain, or expected. His erratic behavior is one of the reasons why he lost his job. So, if you are using this word to describe a person, I think it does have more of a negative connotation. As far as describing other things as erratic, then maybe it's just more descriptive, not really positive or negative, but really just precisely describing what has happened. Here are some common phrases. Somebody has erratic behavior or erratic heartbeat.

It's not a good thing, but again, that is very descriptive. Erratic movement, maybe the way somebody is driving. Erratic weather. You could also use it with some adverbs and say that something is highly erratic or increasingly erratic. And then you could put all of them together in describing someone as having increasingly erratic behavior. And we could use that adverb, adjective, noun collocation. This is great way to just keep building your vocabulary, especially in a natural way, because these are the phrases that that native speakers use, which is why I said this is going to help you speak like a native. Tentative. This is a very common, useful word. It just means not fully worked out or developed. I could give you an example here and say, "We set a tentative date for the meeting, but it may change depending on everyone's schedule. Right now, the meeting it's just it's tentative." Here are some phrases with this adjective. A tentative schedule, tentative plan, I think is very commonly used, as well as a tentative date, a tentative agreement, as well as tentative arrangements. So, this is a word that I think I think you should know all of them if possible, but definitely uh definitely bookmark this one because you will certainly hear it if you are getting exposure to the language. And I people often talk about plans or their schedules or a date and they may use it and descriptively say that, "Well, let's just say it's tentative, all right? We're it's not fixed. We'll see if it happens cuz it's just tentative." Formidable. If something or someone is formidable, it just really means that it's inspiring fear or respect through being impressively large, powerful, intense, or capable. Climbing the mountain was a formidable challenge even for experienced hikers. So, if you're talking about a formidable challenge, you're just emphasizing the fact that it's really difficult. That it was something that's very impressive.

Not many people can do it if you want to describe a challenge as being formidable. Here are some news headlines using this word. And these are also collocations as well. The first one, Argentina coach Morocco is a formidable opponent. That is a common phrase, formidable opponent. Strategy consultant Jerico Lugo says AI is your most formidable ally as a new consultant. Again, another collocation, a formidable ally. New medieval books, the formidable women who shaped medieval Europe. And in this case, we're talking about a person, well, women, a group of people, and saying that they are formidable. I really think it does have more of a positive connotation, especially in this context. And then finally, comeback kid inside Shawn Mendes's formidable return.

Here is the next word, tedious. Just means too long, slow, or dull, tiresome, or monotonous. Filling out all the paperwork was a tedious process. I feel like this is a word that you may commonly use, or you'll hear somebody use it when they're talking about work. Because there may be some type of work, whether it's paperwork or something else, that you don't really care about doing. It's slow, it's time-consuming, and you could describe it as as very tedious. I hope that you don't think this lesson is tedious, and dull, and boring. I hope that you're excited to learn some of these words, and I even hope that you are compelled to watch another video lesson after this and keep building your vocabulary. Maybe even Maybe even you are compelled to hit the like button simply because you find the quality of these lessons to be impeccable. Just going to keep using these words.

The next adjective, ubiquitous. So, keep in mind the pronunciation, ubiquitous. It just means present, appearing, or found everywhere. Now, in my opinion, I think it's a great word, but it is probably not ubiquitous and you are going to come across it every day. However, I think you should know it. It is a great word to know because it's descriptive if you want to describe Well, let's just look at the example. Smartphones have become ubiquitous in modern society. That is true. And this is a great adjective you can use to describe the fact that Well, smartphones, they're everywhere. You know, wherever you go, people are on their phones, and they are ubiquitous.

Here is This is kind of uh um the opposite of what I just said. It's just a little funny. Notice how you hear the word ubiquitous being used everywhere. It's just supposed to be funny, but again, I don't think that you're going to come across this word all the time. It's not ubiquitous, but still a great word to know, and a fun word to pronounce as well.

The next word, candid. It just means honest and telling the truth, especially about something difficult or painful. So, it's a synonym for honest. Uh you know, thank you for being honest. Thank you for being candid. He appreciated her candid feedback even though it was difficult to hear. Overwhelmingly, I think you're going to hear people use an adjective like honest, but it's always great to keep building your vocabulary. Learning synonyms is an excellent way to do that. And instead of using a word honest, especially if you want to describe something that is just more difficult to talk about, then you could use this word and say, "Oh, yeah, you've been very candid. I appreciate that. Thank you for opening up and being so candid."

Meticulous. This is an excellent adjective as far as work is concerned. It just means showing great attention to detail, very careful and precise. His meticulous preparation contributed to the project's success. Has a positive connotation if you were describing a friend, a colleague, family member as someone who is meticulous. But often, I think you may more likely use this in some sort of work context. I know some people have jobs out there in which it is incredibly important to be meticulous. I try to be meticulous when I put these lessons together. However, as you may have noticed, I do make mistakes every now and then. Sometimes typos seem to slip their way in there. Maybe we're going to come across one in this lesson, but I still try. I try to be meticulous because it is a good thing. Voracious. This means very eager for something, especially a lot of food.

She has a voracious appetite for learning new languages. So, a voracious appetite, you would think it's related to food, but I'm using it in a different context as far as saying an appetite for learning something. I think that you have a voracious appetite for building your vocabulary. Otherwise, you wouldn't be watching this lesson. But here are some other collocations with this word. So, I mentioned that you could have a voracious appetite for doing something. But you could also say someone is a voracious reader, a voracious consumer, voracious eater, or even a voracious predator. In that case, I think probably you're more likely describing an animal if we're talking about a voracious predator.

Here is the next word, pragmatic. This means dealing with issues in a reasonable, logical, and realistic way. It has a positive connotation if you are going to describe someone as pragmatic. While the idea was ambitious, a pragmatic plan was needed to make it work. There are a number of other words that really have a similar meaning. Again, all with a positive connotation. If you're describing somebody as pragmatic or practical or sensible or reasonable. I like to think that I am very pragmatic. Basically, any word with a positive connotation, I'm going to try to use it to describe myself. I am pragmatic. I am meticulous. I am resilient. But I'll be honest. I have exacerbated problems from time to time. I mean, I have made things worse. That that is true. Okay, let's keep going. This time with some powerful nouns. And the first one that I want to teach you is consensus. This refers to a generally accepted opinion among a group of people. If you are talking about, well, hey, what is the consensus? The committee struggled to build consensus among members with opposing view. I think anytime you are working in a group or having to make decisions and there are many people involved, it you know, it may not be unanimous and you just need to get a consensus. What do most people think about this situation? What is the consensus? Here are some useful phrases with this noun if we're talking about a broad consensus or a general consensus, maybe an overwhelming consensus. Perhaps you just have a clear consensus, a growing consensus or even a scientific consensus. Great phrases to know.

Ambiguity. This refers to something that is unclear or confusing or it can be understood in more than one way. The contract's ambiguity led to multiple interpretations. And generally ambiguity can refer to that that something is open to more than one interpretation. I will say that often you may hear people use this word as the adjective and just describe something as ambiguous. So whether we're talking about ambiguous or ambiguity, both of them are useful and great words to know. Here is an example of ambiguity in English. So I know you can see the pictures, but if I were just to say this sentence, I saw the man with the telescope.

In your mind, if you were going to picture this, I saw the man with a telescope. It can be interpreted either one, number one, number two. Based on the sentence, we really don't know. So this is an example of ambiguity in English. And there are others as well when people may say something like a statement like this, and you're really not sure, and you need clarification to know exactly what this person is saying. Comradery. This refers to mutual trust and friendship among people who spend a lot of time together. Long rehearsals helped build a strong sense of comradery among the musicians. This has a positive connotation if we're talking about comradery among the students or the employees, and you have that trust and friendship.

Resilience. This refers to the ability to be happy, successful again after something difficult or bad has happened. And you could talk about resilience. It has a positive connotation. Learning a new language requires patience and resilience. That is true because you're going to have good times, and then you may go into a slump and feel like, "Well, I'm not learning much." But you got to keep going. All right? That is resilience. Now, you may notice that this word kind of looks familiar because now we're talking about the noun resilience when we've already talked about the adjective resilient. And if somebody's resilient, then they're just able to recover quickly after some type of hardship. So, the meaning is really the same. The only thing that's going to change is the part of speech. The noun resilience versus the adjective and describing someone as resilient.

Here are some news headlines just to give you a better idea as to how this noun is used in context. Writing builds resilience by changing your brain, helping you face everyday challenges. Or King urges kindness and resilience in Christmas message. How 2025 showcased the power and resilience of science. I guess so. And then finally, Bangladesh's LNG dependence raises concerns about energy resilience. Then there's epiphany. This refers to a moment when you suddenly feel that you understand or suddenly become conscious of something that is very important to you. During the meeting, she had an epiphany about how to solve the company's communication problem. And that is a common phrase that you would use. You're going to use it with the verb have. To have an epiphany. And you just have this sudden realization. And you really, instead of saying a sudden realization, you're kind of adding emphasis whenever you say, "Well, I had an epiphany." It just came to me all of a sudden and it was a great idea.

Then there's anomaly. If we're talking about an anomaly, then we're talking about something different, abnormal, peculiar, or not easily classified. The initial test results were viewed as an anomaly. Now, just be mindful of the context that I'm using it in when talking about some type of test results or you're measuring something and uh you're you're getting these different and then you have this one that's whoa, wait, this is different than everything else. That's when you can refer to it as an anomaly. It is different from the others that have been tested or observed and you could refer to it as an anomaly. Great noun. Disposition. This refers to a person's natural character or temperament. Her cheerful disposition made her a natural team leader. And there are other adjectives that are often used with this noun. And here they are. I tried to put them in order as those having a positive connotation and then kind of moving into some more negative ones.

So, let's start out with the positives. If you're describing someone as having a cheerful disposition or a friendly disposition or even a sunny disposition. And then a phrase that's more neutral, maybe a little negative, if you describe someone as having a nervous disposition. And then the other two have a negative connotation, an aggressive disposition or even a gloomy disposition. The next noun is precedent. act, decision, or case that serves as a guide or justification for subsequent situations. There are several precedents for promoting people who don't have formal qualifications. I'm giving you like a work situation with this noun, but for the most part, and this is my opinion, I feel like often you may hear this when people are talking about the the justice system and possibly referring to a legal precedent or judges are trying to make decisions and they're confronted with a case and maybe they look and say, "Well, what you know, what was what was the precedent because this has happened before." And trying to determine what should be done now and just using that as a guide. So, keep that in mind. I feel like if you watch any courtroom dramas, this is probably a noun that you will certainly come across, precedent.

Then we have dilemma. This is a situation in which a difficult choice has to be made between two or more alternatives, especially ones that are equally undesirable. So, if you have two choices, you don't really like either one of them, then that is a dilemma. We are faced with an agonizing dilemma and it seems there is no correct choice. It's not a good situation to be in whenever you are faced with a dilemma. Here are some news headlines to give you more context. Best of Beth Ashley, the retirement dilemma. What to do now? A lot. Return or stay? The dilemma facing Syrians living in Europe. And those are the two choices. Return, stay, that is the dilemma. And finally, the family business dilemma. Who is next in line?

There may be two, three, four kids, we don't know. But that can be a difficult situation, and that is a dilemma. Then there's conundrum, a confusing or difficult problem or question. Here's an example. Arranging child care over the school holidays can be a real conundrum for working parents. You know, it's hard to solve this problem. What do we do? And you are faced with a conundrum. Here's an example of a conundrum. Uh just thought this was funny with the cat. I love this box. Wait. Oh, is that a new box? And then the cat moves over. Oh, I miss the old box. Uh I was just confused. And this is an example of a conundrum that this cat has. You know, which box to choose. Now, as I was talking about the word conundrum, you may have been wondering, wait, what is the difference between dilemma and conundrum? I am so glad. I'm so glad that you've asked that question. And we can even use a little AI in this and and check out the difference between dilemma and conundrum. So, simply put, a dilemma demands a choice, whereas a conundrum is primarily a challenge to a person's thought process or understanding. Now, sometimes either one could be used to talk about the same situation, but they they may be referring to different things. When I use the word dilemma, then I'm referring to the choice. Conundrum is just talking about the the situation. And saying, "Wow, that's that's a problem." So, let's say that you Maybe you don't like your job. Should I stay in this job or look for a new job? Both of them are are you know, it's a tough decision. I say, "Wow, that is a dilemma." You know, in that case I'm referring to the choices.

in themselves, but they really express themselves in a way that is annoying. So, this is a great example of a nuance when you have words that have a similar meaning, but one is positive, one is negative if we're talking about these two adjectives. So, again, as we go through this, I I always try to share with you some of the slight nuances between words. I I just talked about conundrum and dilemma and trying to describe the nuance between those nouns. Here are some common collocations with this noun. You might talk about a slight nuance or a subtle nuance, full of nuance, or even saying something lacks nuance. Repercussion. This refers to an unintended consequence of an event or action, especially an unwelcome one. The company's decision to cut costs had serious repercussions for its employees.

So, this word, it does have a negative connotation if we're talking about some action, and then there are some negative consequences, and that is the repercussion. And in that case, then you are in a situation where you need to mitigate the damage and make it so it's less severe. Now, there's another noun that is similar, you know, speaking of slight nuance, and and that is the word ramification. So, again, if we're talking about the difference between repercussion and ramification, we can go back to our AI overview, a ramification is a complex, often unintended result of an action or event, which can be positive or negative, while a repercussion is an unintended, usually negative consequence. They are very similar.

You probably could use them interchangeably in a variety of situations, but that slight nuance would be that a repercussion is generally more negative than a ramification, which could be positive or negative. Then, we have the word catalyst. A catalyst refers to a person or thing that precipitates an event, and it really causes it to happen. It's just like starts things out. The crisis served as a catalyst for innovation in the industry. So, you had this thing happen, the crisis, it precipitates the innovation. And it comes before it and really is the the thing that gets it going. And that is the catalyst. Here is a It's a bad joke, but I'm going to share it with you anyways.

I tried to make a chemistry joke, but I got no reaction. Maybe I needed a catalyst. This is a little bit of a play on words because we're talking about chemistry and reaction and catalyst are words that you will use when talking about that that science. In chemistry, you have different things substances that may cause or start a reaction. But also, you're going to use the word catalyst if you need to get things going and start the initial reaction, then you could say you need a catalyst. So, you of course you can use catalyst when talking about things that are unrelated to chemistry, but yeah, I thought I'd share I thought I'd share this bad joke with you. Let's keep going with some powerful adverbs. I don't know why I owe This is like one of my favorite parts of speech. I love a good adverb like seamlessly.

Smoothly, without any breaks, interruptions, or noticeable changes, or in a way that is perfectly integrated and uninterrupted. Each song was seamlessly integrated into the film. I try to create lessons that seamlessly move from one word to the next. I know that you know, doesn't always happen. I realize that these lessons are not necessarily impeccable, but I always try to seamlessly move from one word to the next. Let's see if I can do it right now because the next adverb I thought I was going to the next one. That was I did not do that seamlessly, but let's just look at some collocations. So, you could say that something fits seamlessly or flows seamlessly, moves seamlessly, blends seamlessly, merges seamlessly, or connects seamlessly. These are some useful verb adverb collocations.

Now, I will try to seamlessly transition to our next adverb, which is inadvertently. This means without intention, accidentally. It's really interchangeable with accidentally. Probably, you're going to come across accidentally more often, but once again, it's always good to get a little bit of variety, learn new words. I could say he had inadvertently given away their secret. So, if you do something inadvertently, it just was not your intention. Then, we have explicitly. This means in a clear and detailed manner, leaving no room for confusion or doubt. The professor explicitly stated the rules for the assignment. Often, I think you're going to use this adverb when talking about communication and saying somebody explicitly told you something or explicitly said something or like in the example, to explicitly state something. So, keep that in mind whenever we're talking about the adverb explicitly.

Then, we have presumably. This is used to convey that what is asserted is very likely, though not known for certain. So, when you assert something, you're just like stating it as though it's a fact, but in this case, we're saying, well, it's likely, but it may not be true, and then you could use the adverb presumably. Here's an example. It is 10:00. So, presumably, my roommates are still at the pub. It's likely, but you know, that may not be the case. Here is a fun example, Dr. BeeGee. Presumably good at helping people stay alive. I don't know if you're familiar with the the music group, The Bee Gees, their famous song Stayin' Alive, Stayin' Alive. Ah ah ah I'm not I'm not going to I'm not going to sing it for you. I concede that I have a terrible voice, and I I imagine that is the consensus if I were to try

The next word is incessantly. It just means without interruption, constantly. She talked incessantly about her new project barely taking a breath. I would say this adverb maybe more often than not has more of a negative connotation because somebody is doing something incessantly, it's too much, and perhaps it can be a little annoying. Here are some common phrases with this adverb, to talk incessantly, or to complain incessantly. Nobody likes that. To worry incessantly, to bark incessantly, in that case we're really talking about a dog, or to chatter incessantly. Great phrases to know with this adverb. Then there's eloquently. This means in a way that gives a strong, clear message. The speaker eloquently explained the challenges facing the education system.

So, if you do something eloquently, that is a good thing. It has a positive connotation. I think everyone would like to do a variety of activities eloquently. So, I mentioned my singing. I do not sing eloquently, which is why I was not going to keep singing that song. Conspicuously. This means in a clearly visible way. He arrived conspicuously late to the meeting, drawing everyone's attention. So, conspicuously means in a clearly visible way. If I want to say the opposite, I can add the prefix in, inconspicuously. And in that case, it's not clearly visible. But if I want to share some more useful collocations with this adverb, I love good adverb collocations.

You could say that someone is conspicuously late, or conspicuously absent, conspicuously lacking, something is conspicuously high or low, conspicuously clean, or conspicuously good or bad at something. I'm going to go back and just give you another example with my singing. As you can tell, I am conspicuously bad at singing. Then there's resoundingly. This means completely or in a definite way. The team won resoundingly, leaving no doubt about their dominance. Here are some more news headlines, so you can get a better idea as to how this adverb is used in context. "Ghanians resoundingly approve new constitution, pave way for elections. Air Canada cabin crew union resoundingly rejects pay package. Those are two collocations to resoundingly approve or resoundingly reject.

Conservative wins resoundingly in Chile's presidential election. And finally, Epstein files bill passes resoundingly in house with only one no vote. So, even though this bill, in case you've been following the whole Epstein saga, this bill passed resoundingly, but the government really hasn't been sharing. They've been somewhat uncooperative, and that's a charitable word, uncooperative, releasing these files. That is their disposition right now. That's the government's disposition, uncooperative. The next word, the next adverb is unwaveringly. This means doing something in a way that is strong, steady, and determined without changing, hesitating, or becoming weaker. He unwaveringly defended his position throughout the debate. Another great adverb, and I really that's what adverbs do. They they add emphasis. They are very descriptive, and they just provide that extra information, which is why I think they're incredibly useful. Then we have deliberately. I think you will certainly come across this word and can definitely use it. If you do something deliberately or somebody else does something deliberately, it just means it was carefully thought out in advanced, planned, studied. It was intentional. She spoke deliberately to ensure everyone understood her message.

As we've gone through the lesson, I've tried to review a lot of these words and bring them back up. This is something that I have done deliberately. Now, a lot of times you may hear this adverb used in more of a negative way. So, here are some collocations to give you a better understanding. So, if somebody deliberately ignores someone, going back to that uh Epstein example that the bill resoundingly passed in the Congress, and now the government, the administration, is really deliberately ignoring everyone when they're saying, "Look, you need to release more information." You could also deliberately avoid something or someone, deliberately refuse, deliberately withhold, deliberately deceive, deliberately mislead, or say that something is deliberately vague.

So, looking at these verbs that I'm using, you can kind of tell that uh if somebody's doing something deliberately, it may not be a good thing, or depends on the verb that you're going to use it with. Then there's astutely. This means accurately assessing situations or people perceptively. That's really a synonym with this adverb. Here's an example, the manager astutely negotiated better terms for the contract. This has a positive connotation if somebody does something astutely. I know that I gave you a lot of words, and I don't expect you to memorize all of them. Hopefully, you knew some already, and it was just a little bit of review. But, if some of them are new, that's great. The goal is just to take your time, make it a part of your passive vocabulary, try to listen for them, and then move them into your active vocabulary over time. I hope that you are compelled to come back and rewatch this lesson just to review because I've given you so many different powerful words right now. And if you did enjoy the lesson and learn something new, you can let me know by hitting that like button. As always, thank you so much for watching, and I will see you next time. So long.

Speak Like a Pro Advanced Phrases ESL Learners Should Know

advanced phrases that native speakers use when both speaking and writing. Hang by a thread. This phrase pretty much means what it says. You are in a dangerous situation or state in which you are unlikely to survive or succeed. You can use this phrase to emphasize the fact that you're in a situation in which you are barely surviving or or getting by. Here is a fun picture to visualize this phrase. I I don't know uh if that's a panda or what, but yeah, that little guy is hanging by a thread.

I don't know how we can possibly beat them. I Glee is hanging by a thread.

Then we have in the grand scheme of things. This means considering everything. So it really refers to the broad perspective, seeing the big picture and and not getting bogged down in the specific details of a moment. In the grand scheme of things, the Earth is just a tiny planet in a vast universe.

In the grand scheme of things, an ex-wife's throw pillows [music] aren't much of a problem.

Then we have the phrase at the heart of the matter. This just refers to the most important or fundamental part of a problem, issue, or situation. If we're talking about a relationship, at the heart of the matter is a lack of trust.

So really, you would use this phrase if you want to highlight the central point and talk about that problem that should be understood or addressed.

Charmaine, being pregnant just changes everything.

Speak Like an American: Accent & Pronunciation Training

Let's talk about the American accent. And the very first thing I want to say is that uh you know when it comes to English in your speaking fluency, you should not feel as though you need to speak with any particular accent, whether it's the US, Australia, the the UK. The most important thing is that people understand what you're saying. Now, that being said, I know there are people who live in the US uh and English is their second language or they're getting ready to visit the US or they just like the American accent. And if that's the case, then this lesson is for you. I I really just want to talk about why the accent sounds the way that it does and really dive deep you talking about connected speech and a variety of things if this is one of your speaking goals. So I want you to well let [laughter] I was going to say something let let's look at the dialogue but if this is something then you enjoy you can uh please subscribe turn on notifications that way I can become your teacher and and teach you more about accent pronunciation vocabulary as well as grammar. My name is Wes the channel is interactive English and that is what it's all about. So, let let's just look. This is the dialogue that we're going to go through and I want to read it right now and then we're going to go through each part and I'm going to talk about what's going on. We're going to practice. I want you to practice and say these sentences with me. Say it out loud and just get some speaking practice today. And afterwards, we're going to say this dialogue together and and we're going to practice it uh together. So, let me go through and I'm just going to say it right now. You can hear my pronunciation and the way that I'm saying these different uh sentences. So, it starts out, "So, what are you going to work on next year?" "I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off." Yeah, it's hard to stay consistent, especially when life gets in the way.

Simple enough. I feel like if you you hear me say this or if you were to hear this dialogue on a TV show, you would understand it. It's not super difficult. There is one phrase that I would like to point out even though I think many of you may already know it. But before as we get into this with each sentence, one thing I want you to keep in mind because when it comes to not even just accent, but just your speaking in general, English is a stress time language. And this is what helps give it that rhythm and flow. So essentially it means that the stressed words or syllables are said at approximately the same length and then the words that come in between often get reduced. And I am going to point this out as we go through this.

And it also is kind of what makes the language sound like a song, a little sing song. So I could even ask this question. What did you do last night? And you can hear the way that I'm talking and it sounds a little like a song. What did you do last night? I could also clap with those stresses. What did you do last night? And the idea is that again those those intervals come at regular those regular intervals. It's going to give that rhythm and flow. And even if you took out everything and you just had what do night you kind of get the same idea of what what somebody is trying to say. So, as we go through this, I want you to keep that in mind.

And as you practice with me, I want you to try to maintain the same pace. That's important. The other thing that's important, which I wanted to point out, is if you would like to join my speaking course, check out the link down below in the description. This is for intermediate to advanced speakers, and it's all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, and speak naturally. At the beginning of each lesson, we talk a little bit about connected speech, different parts of the American accent. That is more the warm-up. And then we dive into the topic, look at vocabulary, do different engaging speaking activities, role plays, debates, little mini presentations. So, if this is something that you're interested in, please check out that link down below. And I would like I look forward to speaking with you soon.

Here is the first question. what are you gonna work on next year? And I'm trying to go ahead and say it with that melody. Let's listen for it. If I were to make it sound a little more like a song. So, what are you going to do next year? But in general, here would be the claps. Like, so what are you going to work on next year? Not what are you going to do next year, what are you going to work on next year? And even if I speed it up, I'm still maintaining that that stress timing. What are you going to work on next year? What are you going to work on next year? So, let's look at what's going on and I want you to to practice with me. Okay? So, really I I trust I trust that you are going to say these sentences with me and shadow try to say them at the same time. The first thing what are looks like there's a lot going on but really what I want to point out is remember that the question what that thou sound is it's more of a schwa sound. I know you may find different uh um uh if you look on it,

What are what are say it with me? It sounds a little weird if I if just I I uh just like we're saying it together like one word, but just give it a try. What are What are What are you going to is often reduced to going to? I think many of you probably are are using this already. Probably the most common reduction in English. What are you going to work on? Again, we're going to move that consonant sound over. At least that's what it sounds like. and work on next year. The other the last thing I want to say and you could see it talking about assimilation next year that T and Y it's like they blend together. Now I know assimilation is when you basically have two sounds and one becomes more like the next. I think in its simplest terms I I just say like they're blending together. So it's like that T and Y gives you a slight ch sound. This is not something that you have to force. It's not something you're always going to hear. People may pronounce those individual words, but as you're transitioning from one sound to the next. You could hear that slight ch next year.

Next year. I'm emphasizing it a little bit right now. put all this together, this is what it's going to sound like. And this is what I want to practice. I've given you the phonetic spelling so you can see the pronunciation. If it's if it's easier for you just to look at the actual words, please go ahead and do that. But let's practice saying it right now. I'll say I'll I'll say it slowly. So, what are you gonna work on next year? What are you gonna work on next year? I want you to say it with me right now. Let's say it three times. One time slowly and then two times at a a more normal speed.

So, slowly. Ready? So, what are you going to work on next year? Now, a little that a normal speed. So, what are you going to work on next year? one more time together. So, what are you going to work on next year? Okay, if you were practicing with me, let me know. Write the word speaking in the comments in the chat. I'm going to do that with each of these lines. So, just let me know down in the chat in the comments if you are participating. And I'm just I'm not talking to myself right now. I want to think that I'm I'm talking to you. Okay, the next sentence. I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off.

So, we talked about stress timing. That comma, think about it. That's a p there's a pause there. So, it's like we're going to reset that that pattern. I'm trying to get in shape or I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off. I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off. I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off. So, let's talk about what's going Excellent. I'm glad. Thank you. Thank you for for speaking with me. Uh, Ike Lai Tayo, uh, great to see you. Manuel Talal, welcome. So, I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off. There's a lot going on here. This may be a little challenging, but I think as we go through this, just one thing at a time, hopefully it makes sense. The other thing I would say when it comes to connected speech and we do these practice lessons, even if this is not one of your goals, and that's perfectly fine. I told you you don't feel like you need to speak with any specific accent. I do think it will help with your listening comprehension and which is also very important because if you're listening to a TV show, a podcast, you may hear this is the way you may hear people speak, especially people from the US just like me. So, I'm trying. A lot of times with verbs in the continuous tense, we're going to drop that G. Just get rid of it. We don't need it. It just makes the It just makes it's easier to say instead of it's easier just to say in. So instead of trying, I'm gonna say trying. I'm trying to. So to is one of those words that is often reduced. It's a function word, which means it's not really going to be stressed. And when it's reduced, that vowel sound may change slightly. So instead of two, like I'm saying the number two, it's going to sound softer. More like it has thatwah sound. T. I'm trying to get in. There's more linking. And that final t that is also a flap t, which is right. Right here, I've written flap t plus linking for both those phrases. Get in as well as but I.

But I. So let's just say those. Get in. One more time. Get in. And then the next phrase. But I, but I, we have that flap T plus linking. And then down at the bottom, this is where maybe it gets a little trickier. So I mentioned G-dropping already. Get rid of that G. So instead of putting, I'm going to say putting. Now, this is where this is where we get into the weeds a little bit. So the T the two T's in pudding, when they come between two vowel sounds, it's going to sound like a flap T. If you want to say pudding and it's easier for you, that's perfect.

There's no problem. That's also the American accent because we're using that flap t. But if we drop that g, it's going to change from a flap t to a glottle stop. And the sound is coming from your throat when you have a t sound followed by an n. And there are many words that I could show you examples. Think of the word kitten. Kitten. You hear that coming from your throat, that glottle stop. And to give you another, if you're trying to think about, well, how do you say this? You know, this glottle t. If you make a mistake and somebody says, uhoh, uhoh. Put your finger down here and say it. Uhoh.

Between the uh and the o, your glauus is closing. It's blocking the flow of air. And that is a glottle stop. So this time it's like we're swallowing the t. Putin. Putin. Putin. All right, give it a try. I know it may seem a little weird. Putting. Putting. Putting. Whether you want to say putting with the flap t or putting with the glottle stop, either one works, but we are going to link that last phrase. It off. Putting it off. Putting it off. That t in it. Once again, you're going to hear me pronounce it as a flap t and we're going to link it with off. Putting it off.

Putting it off. If I That maybe if I say it again and again, you kind of start to register. But you can say it with me. Just try that last final phrase down there. Putting it off. Putting it off. Putting it off. I could probably sit here for an hour and just keep saying putting it off. Putting it off. So, let's let's let's practice this sentence. I know there's a lot going on in here. Um, so you can just listen and say it with me or if it helps to look at that phonetic spelling and you could see the, you know, what I'm actually saying. I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off. So, let me, let's say it slowly three times again. Shadow. Say it with me. And it's like we're we're singing a song. And keep in mind that pacing. So, let's say it slowly. I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off. Now at a more normal speed. Ready? I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off.

Once more time. I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off. All right. I'm sure when you said it down, you sounded it sounded just like me. That was perfect. Okay. Again, if you're practicing, let me know. Write speaking down in the comments, and let's just keep speaking and speaking and speaking all the way through this dialogue. The next uh the next sentence. Yeah, it's hard to stay consistent, especially when life gets in the way.

Now, this is the phrase that I wanted to highlight and talk about when life gets in the way is one that you may come across from time to time. And all that means is that your your daily responsibilities or unexpected events, they just prevent you from doing something that you may want to do or things that you need to do. And it's like, yeah, you know, I I understand life gets in the way. It's another way of saying you're just you're busy. things are coming up and you're not always able to do the things that you want to do. So, let's look at what's happening with this one. I know it's a couple comments not easy. Yes, I I know I know it's not easy. This this is when you look at these simple sentences, we dive deep into what's happening. Uh but once again, it's good to practice, but also I think it does help with your listening comprehension. So this one, this one's a little I think a little more simple, straightforward. Not as much going on here. So yeah, it's hard to stay consistent. There's that reduction. To stay. To stay. To stay. Just try it. Try it. Instead of saying to, try it with that to. To stay. To stay. One more time. To stay. We're just going to keep drill drill drill. To stay. Yeah, it's hard to stay consistent. I I wanted to include the pronunciation of especially because people have told me before this word can be a little tricky and it is a common one. So I I wanted to go ahead and give you both the phonetic spelling as well as the IPA pronunciation. Just keep in mind the stress is on that second syllable. Especially. Especially. And that third syllable has that schwah.

There's that unstressed vowel sound. Especially. Especially when life gets in the way. There we're going to link that phrase again. Moving that consonant sound over to the vowel sound in n. Gets in. Gets in. You can say it again. Just say it after me. Gets in. Gets in. Gets in. One. One thing I will say, a lot of this is a little bit like a drill. Just keep saying it again and again and again. And basically, the next time you're having a conversation, you'll just start linking these phrases. You'll be using these reductions. And over time, you're just going to develop that more natural way of speaking. And you and essentially you'd be developing the American accent because that's what we're talking about. So I told you not not too much going, not as much happening. But let's go ahead and say it one time slowly and then two times at a normal speed. So slowly. Yeah, it's hard to stay consistent, especially when life gets in the way. Let's say it at a normal speed. Say it with me. Yeah, it's hard to stay consistent, especially when life gets in the way. One more time. Yeah, it's hard to stay consistent, especially when life gets in the way. I apologize because I realize I didn't talk about the stress timing, but if I were to clap, hopefully you can hear that melody. The more I talk about it, you can kind of pick up on it. Yeah, it's hard to stay consistent, especially when life gets in the way. And as I say it again, hopefully let your ears do all the work and you can pick up on that melody, on that stress timing. Then we got to we got to we're moving to our final sentence. I got to stick with it if I want this year to be a success. So this is what I meant. I meant to talk about the stress timing at the beginning. Right now I got to stick with it if I want this year to be a success.

So each of those claps, that is my stressed word or syllable. I got to stick with it if I want this year to be a success. I got to stick with it if I want this year to be a success. Any whether I'm saying it slowly or fast, the stress timing doesn't change. I'm just either saying it slowly, moving it farther apart, or condensing it and saying it much faster. What is happening? What is happening with this beautiful sentence right here? So got to we can reduce that to gota. This is another I think fairly common reduction to stick with it. We're going to link that consonant sound over with it.

If I if I we're going to link that phrase as well. Now you may be thinking to yourself, and this is something we haven't really like discussed. You might be thinking, well, why is that t and it not getting linked with the vowel sound in if? This is because it's a separate clause. And basically when when you hear me say it, I'm going to separate it into two different thought groups.

And there's going to be a short pause in between there, which is why I'm not linking it over. So even if I move back here and just listen for that pause, I got to stick with it or I got to stick with it if I want this year to be a success. Can you hear that pause between it and if I got to stick with it if I want this pause to be if I want this pause?

Okay. So basically, if I move the if statement to the front, then you're going to use a comma. If I have it come after um the the main clause, I'm not going to use a comma, but speaking I I still am gonna make that pause. I gotta stick with it if I want this year to be a success. So want one thing to keep in mind with this word that nt a lot of times the t may elide when it follows an n sound think about words like internet or center or interactive you don't hear that t sound want is also similar in and it elides you're really going to remove it if I say I wouldn't say what do you want me to do I would say what do you what do you want me to do what do you want me to do what do you want me to do Again, you don't really hear that T. So this case, it does allide even though the T and the TH the the position is the same in your mouth. So even if you're putting your tongue up behind your top front teeth, one even with the N and the T and the th you're going to release into that, that voiced this sound, it want this year to there's that reduction with to be a success. The last thing that I want to talk about, I I said with assimilation, you don't need to force it. It will just occur naturally. And I think intrusion is the same way. This is when you add a slight sound generally between two vowel sounds. And it's going to be either a Y or a W sound. And that is what allows us to link or connect these vowel sounds together. Bey. So you hear a slight Y sound between them. Be a success. be a success.

Let's practice. I know I'm giving you a lot with this last sentence. Let me say it one time and then you can practice with me. Then I'll say it slowly. I got to stick with it if I want this year to be a success. So let's say it slowly, shadow, say it with me and then you can tell me whether you're actually doing this. So let's say it slowly. I got to stick with it if I want this year to be a success. And when I say it slowly, I think you can hear that melody. Let's say it again. Shadow. Say it with me, but at a normal speed. I got to stick with it if I want this year to be a success.

One more time. I got to stick with it if I want this year to be a success. Perfect. All right. You sound like you're from maybe like um the New York area, somewhere around there. That's what I would say. Okay. Now that we've gone through each sentence and we've dived deep, if you if you've been practicing once again, let me know. I want to write write speaking down in the comments or hit a heart or a like button. That way, I know that you're participating, which is all which is really what all I all I want. Um, and and just keep practicing and practicing and practicing. Here is our dialogue. I will say all of it now and then we're going to say it together. I'll say A, you say B, and and then we'll switch like we're like we're having a conversation, which is true. Well, we're about to. So, let me let me say all of it right now, and then we're going to practice together.

So, what are you going to work on next year? I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off. Yeah, it's hard to stay consistent, especially when life gets in the way. All right, are you ready? Let's begin. I I will say A and I just want you to say B and we're going to have this conversation right now. Are you ready? Let I'll begin and you you say B. Here we go. So, what are you going to work on next year? Yeah. It's hard to stay consistent, especially when life gets in the way. That was perfect. Flawless. Okay. All right. Excellent. That's what I wanted to hear. That's what I wanted to hear.

Now, I want to switch you. I want you to say A. I am going to say B this time, and we're going to have this conversation. So, you can begin with A. Ready, go. I'm trying to get in shape, but I keep putting it off. I gotta stick with it if I want this year to be a success. Well done. All right. We we just rocked it. And I know I've given you a lot and I know that as we've gone through this, like some of you had mentioned, it is uh it is challenging. It can be difficult, but it's not I it's not something that you have to start using all of these different parts at the same time. Start with some of the things that are more common. For example, reductions like going to and using gonna or I mentioned that to often reduced it sounds like to

to like uh to stay to stay consistent or to be a success. And as you just keep repeating some of these phrases using that weaker t, then your brain is going to make that change already when you're having a conversation. So, I I'm giving you a range of different things when it comes to the American accent. And hopefully hopefully if this is one of your goals, it is going to help you feel more comfortable and confident when you are speaking. And even if it's not, I hope that it helps with your listening comprehension. But if you enjoyed this lesson and learned something new or just enjoyed speaking with me, let me know by hitting that like button. And remember, if you want to join my course, check out that link down below in the description.

Thank you for being here. I hope that you have a wonderful day, a merry Christmas if you are celebrating. If not, then uh I just hope you have a great end of the year. I wish all of you a happy new year. And I guess the way it turns out uh no, maybe uh I I might I'll see you before the end of the year. All right, I'm just going to keep keep going. But uh have a great day and I will see

Speak Naturally & Easily Using Contractions

So today I'm going to talk to you about a bunch of different English contractions. I think there's 28 of them. So this lesson is going to be great for your listening, speaking, and pronunciation. So today's lesson is all about contractions. And first let's just talk about well... What are contractions? The word to contract means to squeeze together. And that's what we're doing. We're taking two words, and we're squeezing them together. And where we end up omitting letters, we put an apostrophe instead. And an apostrophe looks like this. You will notice them when I give you a bunch of example sentences. And to be perfectly honest, the reason this lesson is important is because we use contractions all the time, especially when we're speaking.

They're also commonly used in informal writing if you're writing a text message or an email. They're not really appropriate for formal writing. So be aware of that. So today I'm going to talk to you about contractions with subject pronouns. And those pronouns are... And I'm going to show you how they can be contracted with different verbs. We're going to go through this quickly. I'm going to say the words I will then say the contracted forms, so you can hear my pronunciation. Then I will give you an example sentence. And I will say it twice. I'll say it once without the contracted form. And then again with the contracted form. So let's begin.

The first set of contractions I want to talk to you about are those with the verb (to be). I'm not going to keep the subject pronouns in the same order. I'm basically going to put them in order of their conjugation. I'll let you know what I mean by that in just a second. I'll also throw in some other examples, so that you can hear the contracted forms in some different contexts.

Let's start with (I). I'm a doctor. I'm a criminal. I'm a real-estate agent. Which sounds just like the possessive form of "your." Now, let's look at he/she/it because the conjugation with the verb (to be) is different. It's a sunny day today. It's a busy day. It's been a crazy day here today. Now when you just heard those sentences, you may even be thinking to yourself, you know... It sounds a little strange without the contracted form. And this might be because we use the contracted form so often. That if you were watching a TV show, or a movie, or listening to music you're going to hear it in the contracted form the vast majority of the time.

Not many people are going to say, "It is a cloudy day." They're just going to say, "It's a cloudy day." So again, that is why this is so important. Now, let's talk about contractions with (will). We use WILL + BASE VERB when we want to talk about things that will happen in the future. But we can contract the word WILL with our subject pronouns. Which is something that's it always good to hear somebody else say. I'll pay my share. I'll pay for it, okay. Sure, I'll pay for it. I'll pay whatever they want. You are going to pay. Oh, I'll pay. Hint. Hint. And this, especially in American English, the T is going to have that Flap T sound, which is more like a D.

I forgot to say...what was my sentence? Now let's look at contractions with the helping verb (have). So we're going to contract the subject pronoun with "have" when it's a helping verb. That's the key word right there. And "have" is a helping verb when we're talking about the present perfect tense. Again, just pay close attention to those examples, and you'll see what I mean. It's true. We were there last year. You've already lost. Yes, you've already made history. But you've already begun.

Now we'll look at he/she/it because again the conjugation with "have" is different. And in case you didn't know, this expression means to kind of go a little crazy. To lose it right here. He has gone off the deep end. They have completely gone off the deep end. Everybody's going off the deep end. Also notice the spelling "He has" is the same as the contraction "He is." The only way you'll tell the difference is based on the context. Because again, we use "He has" when "have" is a helping verb. Which means we're talking about the present perfect. This spelling similarity also applies to "She has" and "It has" as well. It's been a pleasure. Jack. Mr. Dawson. It's been a pleasure.

It's been a real pleasure. So that's something to keep in mind when we're talking about He/She/It. The spelling of the contraction as well as the pronunciation is the same. He's. She's. It's. Let's look at some contractions with the modal verb "would." I'd love it. I'd appreciate it. I'd be your best friend. You'd help me do that. You'd love each other. If we do it your way Kingslayer, you'd win. I can't emphasize this enough. It is so important that you learn and understand and can identify these different contractions. Because we use them so often when we are speaking. And now you can use them too. If you found this lesson useful, we'd appreciate it if you'd hit that like button.

And if you really enjoy what we do and want to show us some love, check out our Patreon page. Link is in the description. Thanks so much for watching, and I will see you next time. See, it just doesn't sound natural. It's so much better to say... Thanks for watching, and I'll see you next time.

Speak Quickly & Naturally by LINKING These Common Words

Today, I'm going to teach you five common English reductions. Which is something many, many, many English learners really want to learn. So I will talk about that with you coming right up. Welcome to today's lesson, which is a pronunciation lesson because I am going to talk to you about five common reductions in English. And I think a lot of people would like to learn more about reductions. Or they're interested in learning about them because it helps people reduce their accent. And it's not only good for speaking, but it's also very important for listening as well. Often times, learners want to try and identify each and every single word. And it makes the task more challenging.

Instead of just trying to comprehend the main idea. So this is not only good for speaking, but it's also important for listening so that you have a better understanding of the conversation and what the other person is talking about. And the reason that I think people use reductions is... it's just something that comes naturally. I think this is common in all languages when people are speaking fast and the words kind of just run together.

Now, the one thing that I want to tell you about reductions, and this is a pet peeve of mine. This is only for speaking. Alright. Please, please, please, please please do not write these reductions. I know that you see this done all the time. You get text messages using reductions. You see it on Facebook and on the internet. But a good rule of thumb, a good practice, is just not to write these reductions. The reason for this is because I think some learners don't always make the distinction between what is accepted and in informal writing and then their formal writing. So they might end up using and writing these reductions at school, in academic papers.

Or writing them at work in a business email. And it is just not professional. It's not something that you want to get into the habit of doing. So please, please, please do not write these reductions. This is just for speaking. And listening. The first two reductions that I want to go over with you are two that you have probably heard and maybe you even use them as well. And that is /gonna/ and /wanna/. They sound like one word that would have two syllables. And the stress is on the first syllable. That second syllable has the schwa that /uh/ sound, which is a reduced vowel sound. And also notice there is no T sound in "to."

It basically goes from that N sound that /nnn/ straight into the schwa. First let's talk a little bit more about going to which is reduced as /gonna/. Now we use this when we're talking about something that we are going to do, and it's used with the verb (to be). So we have our subject, and then the verb (to be), plus going to, plus the base verb. So for example, I could say... I am going to give this video a thumbs up. I am going to give this video a thumbs up. So remember going to, when it's reduced, is followed by a base verb. Going to play... Going to dance... Going to go... Be aware that if "going to" is followed by a noun, as in we're talking about a place that we are going to go, then it is not reduced.

So for example... "Going to" is followed by the noun school, so we are not going to reduce that. We do not say... No. In order for it to be reduced it has to be followed by a base verb. I don't know what I'm going to do later. I really don't know. Don't know what I'm going to do. So let's practice saying some sentences. Ioana is going to say the sentence with the reduction, and you can just repeat after her. This is good practice. Here are some other examples of "going to" getting reduced to /gonna/. So see if you can listen for it.

Let's have a look at "want to" /wanna/. Now, we use this and reduce "want to" when the verb want is followed by the infinitive. Which is TO + the base verb. For example... Sure you do. Want to... Do something... What do you want to do? Now keep in mind, we can't reduce "want to" if the subject is in the third person, and we're using he, she, or it. This is because when our subject is he, she, or it we have to put an -s on the end of "want" so that it becomes "wants." So the subject and the verb agree.

Now "wants to" we cannot reduce that. You just have to say "wants to". Let's practice a few more sentences using this reduction. Once again Ioana is going to say the sentence, and you can repeat it after her out loud. Now here are a few more examples using this reduction in different contexts and situations. The next two reductions I want to talk to you about are "has to" /hasta/ and "have to" /hafta/.

Now these reductions also sound like they may be one word with two syllables. And again, the stress is on the first syllable and the second syllable is once again reduced with that schwa sound. That /uh/ sound. In these reductions you do hear that T sound. That /tuh/ at the end. So you're going to say... You're going to use your tongue and press it to the top part of your mouth. And that's going to stop the air flowing out. Once you stop it, then you just make that /tuh/ T sound. The same with "have to." You're making that F sound and you are blocking the flow of air with your tongue.

Push it up against the top part of your mouth. Now when you say the reduction, it all happens very fast. But you should feel your tongue touching the top of your mouth and blocking that flow of air as you make that /tuh/ sound. Now, we use these reductions "has to" and "have to" when they are modal verbs, and we're talking about an obligation. Something that you have to do. And when the subject is I, you, we, they you're going to use "have." For example... Why? Because... These are obligations. These are things that I have to do. "Has to" /hasta/ is the same. Except we're going to use it with the subjects he, she, or it.

So for example. I could say that... Maybe he has to study because his parents think that... But he didn't study, and because of that... Here are some more example sentences using "has to" and "have to". Again, have fun. Say them out loud. You don't have to say them, but I think you should. And now I want you to listen how these reductions "has to" and "have to" are being used in these examples. The final English reduction I want to tell you about is "got to" /gotta/. This also would have two syllables with the stress on the first syllable. And the second syllable would have the schwa.

Now the T, and this is especially important in American English. The way Americans talk. It has that Flap T sound, which is like a light D. And this is what happens when the T falls in the middle of the word. So for example, look at these words. The T is in the middle, which will sound more like a D sound. And "got to" is no different. The T is in the middle, so Americans would tend to use the flap T. Which makes it sound like /gotta/. This is reduced, "got to," when it is a modal verb used with "have." So have got to... It's again talking about an obligation. And it's definitely reduced when "have" is contracted with the subject.

This is also true with "has" if the subject is he, she, it. We could also drop "have" and say /gotta/. And this is definitely more informal and commonly used in more colloquial speech when you're just having a conversation with somebody. Talking about something that you /gotta/ do or I /gotta/ do. So for example, here are a few things that you've got to do.

First, you got to keep practicing your English skills. Second, you got to watch these lessons. Finally, you got to join our social media classes. It's just a lot of fun. And it's a great way to keep practicing. And for your practicing pleasure, here are some more sentences using this reduction. So you've got to repeat these sentences, and you've got to say them out loud. And now let's listen to "got to" being used in different contexts. I hope you guys have a better understanding about how to use these reductions, and also maybe it'll help you when you are listening for them as well. Remember don't write them. This is only for speaking.

So now we want to hear from you. And what you got to do is write to us in the comments. And let us know what kind of English lesson you would like. What are you having trouble with? What would you like to see more of? What would you like to learn? We like hearing from you guys, so let us know in the comments. Thanks for watching, and we'll see you next time.

Speak Quickly & Naturally “go to the” | Fast Speech in American English

i want to quickly talk to you about the phrase go to the all right now when i say go to the you're probably listening to that thinking wait what the hell is go to the and really what i'm saying is go to the so if you're going to say that phrase and and reduce it say it quickly and sound natural you could say something like uh i always go to the gym except it's going to sound like i always go to the gym so what's going on is two the preposition is often said with that schwa sounds like ta now that t because i'm from the united states is going to sound more like a flat t that d sound because it comes between two vowels in which case it sounds like go to the go to the i always go to the gym i always go to the movies i always go to the bathroom

St. Patrick's Day English Lesson | Pronunciation + Culture + Vocabulary

Hey everyone, my name is Wes. Welcome to today's lesson. Um, today I think it's a fun lesson. It's a cultural lesson because what we're going to talk about, what I want to teach you about is St. Patrick's Day. So, this is a St. Patrick's Day English lesson um because it's coming up. It's right around the corner. So, I thought this would be uh a good time to to teach you a little bit about St. Patrick's Day while at the same time also kind of teaching you different vocabulary words related to this day. Um, so before we jump into this uh activity, the different activities that I have for you, uh, I just want to say a quick hello, give some shoutouts, and I want to say hello to Lai, good to see you. Uh, Tayo, hi, how are you? Um, Sajad, uh, Lara Farman, Angela Sleepwalker, good to see you. I've been away for about two weeks now. This is the the first live lesson I've done in a few weeks. So, it's good to be back. Um, first off, so today's lesson, it is more interactive. I want you guys to participate. Write your answers in the chat. Even if you're watching this later, throw your answers down in the comments. Use it like it's a piece of paper. make it more of an active learning exercise, which is what which is what I'm all about is just trying to make more make things more active learning because I think that's just I think that's a little more helpful than just passive learning. So, uh hello uh Cath Cathud Cusello Cthusel, nice to see you. All right. Hello. How are you? Um sorry if I mispronounced names. I apologize. Um I'm going to get better at this. So, as we go through, I will give more shoutouts uh later on. So, let's This is kind of what's on the agenda. First, I'll say happy St. Patrick's Day. Even though even though today is not St.

Patrick Patrick's Day, I'm just throwing it out there. Um, and we're going to do a little pronunciation practice to begin with. And then it is a I guess you could say it's a cultural quiz plus vocabulary. I'm going to really be doing those at the same time. So, as we go through this again, I want you guys to participate, write your answers in the chat, and I hope that all of you learned something new from today's lesson. So, let's begin with pronunciation. And I think a fun way to well, I think to practice pronunciation is with a tongue twister. So, when you think of St. [snorts] Patrick's Day. I think many of you think of well you should you would think of Ireland. So this is a tongue twister.

And the the goal of this one I think is just to say it several times as quickly as you can. And this is actually really difficult because Irish it ends with that sh sound. And you it's kind of like if you're trying to think about this sound like you're telling somebody to be quiet like sh. And then the next sound, wristwatch, that is a silent W. So it begins with R. And going from that sh to an R sound is pretty difficult. So that's why I think saying these two words, at least for me, it's really challenging. Um, it's a it's a good this is a good tongue twister. Irish. Irish.

Wristwatch. So Irish. Irish. And then switch to that R sound. It's like you're have to pull your jaw back. Wristwatch. Um, Irish wristwatch. Irish wristwatch. So, let me let's try to say it. Say it with me. Try to say it a few times. And again, I think with this, the goal is to say it quickly because you're going to make a mistake. So, I'm just going to say it three times quickly and you can listen to how poor my pronunciation is with this. Irish wristwatch. Irish wristwatch. Irish wristwatch. Okay. Irish wristwatch. Irish wristwatch. Irish wristwatch. Irish wristw. So it almost I think ends up saying Irish rishwatch. It's hard to transition from that sh sound that shh to an.

And I again one way to do it would be thinking like you're saying sh telling somebody to be quiet to a smile. Wristwatch. Irish wristwatch. Irish. I'll try it three more times quickly. Irish wristwatch. Irish wristwatch. Irish wristwatch. [laughter] Okay. All right. I hope that you um are able to do this pro possibly a little more accurately than I can. Um is just to to say it quickly. So, this I think is a good good tongue twister to start out because we're talking about St. Patrick's Day. Um you might think of Ireland and if you are well somebody um from Ireland they would say they are Irish. Um so somebody think yes it's not easy. Wow. Uh but we got a piece of cake. Excellent. All right. So, I think it's interesting because I think where um depending on where you're from, maybe some certain sounds that you might found find difficult. Some tongue twisters uh may be very difficult and then others may be pretty easy. I think and that's the same uh I think that's the same for native speakers. Even native English speakers might have um find some tongue

Patrick the foremost saint uh patron saint of Ireland. So we're talking about the death of St. Patrick the patron saint of Ireland. Uh so that day St. Patrick's Day this year is on March what what is uh the answer. What do you guys think? Um so I told you you know that today today is not St. Patrick's Day. I told you that it's coming up and St. Patrick's Day. Yes. Excellent. Uh kasides uh 10 kitka. Um what you're off by one day. Uh Abd Rashad the the answer is the 17th. All right. March 17 is St. Patrick's Day. So this is when St. Patrick's Day is always celebrated. It's the traditional death of St. Patrick. I was trying to look up. I think people believe this was the day um in which St.

Patrick died. I don't know if people are absolutely positive about that, but that's what they believe. So therefore, uh, St. Patrick's Day is on March 17th, which this year is going to be this coming Wednesday. This coming Wednesday is St. Patrick's Day. Excellent. Uh, the next question that I have for you is this one. And again, this is kind of well learning about the the this cultural holiday as well as some vocabulary. The M is a symbol of Ireland. The name comes from Irish. I'm not even going to try to pronounce it because I think maybe I'll be giving the answer away. Um, but I'll skip over that. Which is um the dimminionative of the Irish word and I'll I'll skip over that. My probably I'm sure my pronunciation would be horrible. And it simply means young clover.

So what word are we talking about? which the the word this this is a symbol of Ireland. Told you where the name comes from. It's the dimminionative. The dimminionative of something means kind of like the shorten the shortened form um of this other word. So this word is the dimminionative of this other word. And and really what it means is young clover. That's what it means. Uh what what do you think is the symbol of Ireland? I gave you those pictures down there and then we're I'm gonna follow up and kind of give you a little bit more information about this. So, think about it. This is the symbol of Ireland. What do you call those uh well those pictures down there? Um, excellent. Yes. Uh, critique uh critika loi. Uh, perfect.

The answer is a shamrock. So the shamrock is a symbol of Ireland and it comes from that Irish uh shamrock. I don't know if it would be pronounced shamrog which is the dimminionative of the Irish word shamrog which means young clover. So shamrock means young clover. Excellent. Uh great job. I think somebody got that. Excellent. Gustav perfect. Um Luke English addict. All right. Katie Katie Deio. Nice. So, I'm gonna follow up on this because some of you were were thinking about uh another word. So, shamrock is really it means young clover. It is a type of uh well there are different types of clovers. So, basically those uh those two these two pictures right here those are shamrocks.

They are also they're clovers but they are different clovers. Now, one of them it says the m clover is very rare. According to traditional sayings, such clovers bring good luck. So, this one I'm giving you the multiple choice. There are only two choices um because those are two different uh they're both shamrocks, but they're two different clovers. One is a threeleaf clover. The other one is a fourleaf clover. So, which of those clovers is the rare one that people would believe, oh, this this brings good luck? I believe um that this would be good luck. What do you guys think? Let me know. Write your answers again in the comments. Uh even if you're watching this later.

Excellent. Uh Tayo, Suana, Laura, Alpha, uh Aan, Athanasios. Excellent. Angela, yes. The answer, Tatiana, the answer is B. We're talking about the four-leaf clover. Um is the rare one. Uh the the threeleaf clover is much more common. So according to the tradition, if you find a fourleaf clover, it it brings good luck. Then we have some other questions. This is kind of a little more of a story which we'll kind of walk through or not not a story before we get to that. This this right here. So my question about this first I'll just read it and then you can listen to it. There was an old man from Peru who dreamed he was eating his shoe. He awoke one night with a terrible fright and found out that it was quite true. All right, this just listening to me read it, you can tell this is a poem. But what kind of poem is it? That's the question that I wanted to ask you. And I'll this may be a little more challenging. I don't know how familiar many of you are with different types of poems. Um, but what do you think? What is this poem called in in English? There was an old man from Peru who dreamed he was eating his shoe. He awoke one night with a terrible fright and found out that it was quite true. These poems are I don't I don't know if you would say I would say they're common. It really just depends. They're very short poems. They're humorous poems. That's the they they follow a certain pattern. And you would call this poem what? And I tried to find a picture and made that old man like look like he's eating a shoe. So I if you just read it, you can tell like, okay, it is supposed to be funny. It's supposed to be a funny, humorous poem. Um what would you call it? Uh a nightmare? No. Uh it's not a nightmare. Uh even though yes, that would be horrible to wake up and you're eating a shoe. Not a stanza. These are good guesses. Again, these are um stanza is related. Stanza is more like uh kind of a paragraph. The same way um essays would have different paragraphs, poems would have different stanzas. Excellent. Uh Vicky Gustav, yes, this is a limrich. So a limrich I told you they're humorous poems and they have that rhyme pattern a a bba.

So a abba let's look at this you can see that those words rhyme peru shoe true um this the first second and fifth line and then the third and fourth line are also going to rhyme night and fright. There was an old man from Peru who dreamed he was eating his shoe. He awoke one night with a terrible fright and found out that it was quite true. So this is uh this is an example of a limrich. And the reason why I put this in there related to Ireland many I think some people believe that the name of this comes after the the city in Ireland, the city of Limrich. Even though when I was trying to read a little bit more about it, some people believe that some of the first the styles of this poem actually came from the UK. So I'm not really positive uh exactly where the name come came from, but many people believe that the name of this poem, this type of poem comes from Limrich, Ireland, the name of the city. So I told you that I did have some vocabulary words that are related to the culture uh are related to St. Patrick's Day. So this will I think this first question is a little easier and then maybe it'll get a little more difficult.

We'll see. Many of you may be familiar with this, especially if you celebrate St. Patrick's Day. So, on St. Patrick's Day, you're supposed to wear what? All right. What are you supposed to wear on St. Patrick's Day? Write your answers in the chat. The reason also why you might be wondering while I'm why I'm doing this, I am from the United States. I'm not from Ireland, but St. Patrick's Day is coming up in the US. It is still um it is like it's still a holiday that many people will celebrate. And I would say that you you don't have to be Irish to participate and celebrate in St. Patrick's Day. I think this is a day that many people in the United States, they will get together with their friends, they'll go out, they'll have some drinks. Um and yeah, I think many people will celebrate St. Patrick's Day similar to the way people many people will celebrate Cinco de Mayo in the United States. Excellent. So, uh, you're supposed to wear green. Perfect. So, green is the answer. I've even tried, I don't know if you guys can tell just watching this video. Um, this is very, very dark green. A very hunter green uh, sweatshirt that I'm wearing. So, excellent. Um, Laura, Esther, uh, Caddy, Sleepwalker, uh, Angela, German. Perfect. So, you're you're supposed to wear green on St. Patrick's Day. And let's add to this. On St. Patrick's Day, you're supposed to wear green. This tradition is tied to folklore that says wearing green will make you invisible to what? All right. So, this is part of the folklore of St. Patrick's Day as to why you should wear green. If you wear green, then you will you will be invisible. So, think about why why would you want to be invisible on St. Patrick's Day? Who do you who do you not want to see you? So, basically, you are invisible to someone. I'll go ahead and tell you that. So, what do you guys think? Uh, you're the folklore says that when you wear green, you are invisible to to whom? All right. And I think again this is another this well this group of people uh associated with St. Patrick's Day. Perfect. Uh yes, Oleg uh Lai you guys got it. The answer is leprechauns. So the tradition uh that is tied to folklore that when you wear green you are invisible to leprechauns. The leprechauns, they cannot see you. And well, one of the reasons why you don't want them to see you is, let's continue. This is because leprechauns like to anyone they can see. Okay, so I told you that we we kind of started up here reading through um part of this uh holiday. On St. Patrick's Day, you're supposed to wear green. The tradition is tied to folklore that says wearing green will make you invisible to leprechauns. And this is because leprechauns like to m anyone they can see. So what do if it's St. Patrick's Day, this is the folklore. Uh if leprechauns can you're not wearing green, leprechauns can see you. What will they do? That's the question. So that they lolly bother. Yes, they do bother you. But how how do they bother you? Um what do they what would a leprechaun do? And again, think about I would tell you to think about St. Patrick's Day. What happens? Of course, if uh if many of you if you're not familiar with St. Patrick's Day, that might be this may be a little difficult um a little more challenging. Uh excellent. Uh well, Tatiana, close maybe. Um Laura, you got it. Perfect.

So, [laughter] kidnap or steal. Uh, so we're talking about um, yes, perfect. Gustav, nice. They would pinch anyone that they can see because that is at least I think of when when I was well, when I was younger, especially at school, uh, St. Patrick's Day, you'd show up to school, many people would wear green, and if they didn't, maybe your friends would come around um, and pinch you. Typically in high school, maybe your friends might punch you in the shoulder or something like that, but uh the the folklore would go that the leprechauns would if if you are not invisible because you're not wearing green, the leprechauns would uh pinch anyone that they could see. So I mean maybe I don't some of you put like play tricks to kind of maybe that that might also be it. Uh this is the information that I found mostly mostly thanks to

Wikipedia. I will uh I will credit that even though that's not the most solid of sources. So the next one the next question that I have for you speaking continuing talking about leprechauns and of course you can find a leprechaun's pot of gold at the what where might you go uh to find a leprechaun's pot of gold. This is again based on the folklore, the tradition where people would say that um leprechauns would guard their pot of gold. Where would it be? Where what how would you best complete that sentence? All right, you can try to find a leprechaun's pot of gold at the what? All right, I think many of you may maybe you're a little familiar with this part of the folklore. for the tradition especially if some of the other questions had been a little more difficult. Um, perfect. Yes. Uh, Lai uh, Angela per Sylvia perfect. Yes, that is exactly that is the specific part. Um, Lucon excellent. Uh, Elon Laura we're talking about it. It is the rainbow specifically. you would finish that and say the end of the rainbow. That at the end of the rainbow is where you will find uh a leprechaun's pot of gold. All right. So, these are again uh it was kind of a mix between teaching you a little bit about St. Patrick's Day, the history, some of the folklore behind it, as well as some of that vocabulary related to it. Of course, you know, the color green. Um, but, uh, leprechauns, they would pinch people. And of course, you might think of like those a clover. You have a four-leaf clover. Good luck. A three-leaf clover. And those are shamrocks, which is the symbol of Ireland. So, I hope you learned something new from this lesson. I know it was a little bit short and sweet, but I hope maybe you learned some new words or phrases or even just learned something in general about St. Patrick's Day, which remember is on March 17th, which is this Wednesday. Uh, I really appreciate you guys being here with me today. Uh if you guys enjoy these lessons, if you like what we do at Interactive English, uh and want to uh join our community and become a member, a Patreon, links uh to that are down below in the description. Start READING to Start Improve Your English | Reading Comprehension Quiz (La Tomatina)

today we are going to practice and improve your reading skills that's coming up [Music] what's up everyone my name's Wes this is Interactive English which is all about helping you guys practice and improve your English today's lesson it's not your normal lesson because this is more of an activity we are going to do a reading activity to help you practice and improve your reading skills so the way we're going to do this is I am going to give you a reading selection and you are going to have to read it and afterwards I'm going to ask you some questions to see how well you can remember and recall the information this is what we call an active reading exercise because you need to interact and answer the questions that I give you okay so you really need to focus you need to concentrate the reading is not gonna be super difficult it's only gonna be about a minute but it is a very fun topic it is about La Tomatina so I will give you some time to read it and then afterwards I'm going to ask you a few questions and give you a moment to answer those questions but before we begin I want to talk about a few vocabulary words that you are going to find in the story the first one is takes place and when something takes place we're just talking about when this thing occurs and often we're talking about an event when does this event happen when does it occur when does it take place the next word is foodfight so this word means exactly what it sounds like you're having a fight and you were using food I don't know if you've ever been in a food fight they can be kind of fun to have so this reading is about a food fight another word that you will find is avoid to avoid something this means to to keep oneself from doing it you want to stay away from this thing or maybe stay away from this activity you want to avoid doing it then we have spectacular this is an adjective that means great amazing incredible those are all synonyms for spectacular so it's it's a wonderful way to describe an event to describe an activity and we can say it's spectacular so now that you know those words let's begin I we'll show you the reading and it is going to scroll across the screen so as you're reading it again try try to focus on what you're reading try to put a picture in your mind that's going to help you remember the information and afterwards I'll have a few questions for you alright let's begin you now that you're done reading I have a few questions for you and I'll give you five seconds to think of the answer and then I'll tell you what it is and if you don't remember that's okay just try to do the best that you can here's your first question what is La Tomatina famous for the answer is B tomato fight remember in the reading it said the most popular event is on the final day which is when they have the world's largest tomato fight here's your next question the tomato fight is on the Wednesday in August the answer is C last the tomato fight is on the last Wednesday in August this was some very specific information that you had to try and remember here's another question why must tomatoes be squashed for the event the answer is B so people don't get hurt in the reading it said that the tomatoes must be squashed by hand in order to avoid injury we don't want anybody getting hurt at La Tomatina so they squashed the tomatoes by hand how did you do did you get all of those questions correct if you did I want to know and write to me in the comments and just write the words tomato fight that way I know that you did the activity you got those questions right and you understood everything about La Tomatina I hope you enjoyed this reading activity and if you did please hit that like button thank you guys so much for watching and I will see you next time

Stop Confusing These Words | Advanced Vocabulary + Quiz

If you are looking to build, develop, and grow your vocabulary, then today's lesson is for you because I am going to talk to you about some confusing English words. Words that are commonly confused by not only just native English speakers, but also English learners. So, I just want to say what's up? My name is Wes. If this is your first time here, Interactive English, we are all about helping you practice and improve your English skills, especially in classes like today where it's all about interaction. I have some questions that I want to go over with you and ask you, and I want you to write the answers in the chat or even in the comments later on whenever you're watching this.

We just want you to participate. That's what it's all about, practicing your English skills. So, I just want to give a shout-out to some of those people who are with me now. Sarah, Gundrun, Olivia, what's up? Uh Room, Bahar, Anna, uh Abdirashid, uh you know who I am. Yes, I do know who you are, Phyllis. Uh welcome, welcome, welcome. Uh hope you guys are having a great day. I hope you're feeling exceptionally smart today because I'm going to ask you some questions about words that are commonly confused, and then I'm going to tell you what they mean and give you some more examples, okay? So, before we jump into it, I just want to give a quick shout-out to quick shout-out to us.

Check out the link in the description, and check out our Patreon page, and I'm just going to throw it up right there in the chat, and there it is. Boom. Okay, you guys can check that out whenever you feel like it, all right? So, let's let's just jump into the lesson. What we're going to do is I am going to do this a little differently because we've talked about confusing words in English before, and when we've done this before, I would go over the words with you, and then I would ask you some questions at the end. I'm going to do the opposite this time. I'm going to give you the question, all right? I want you to try and think of the answer, do the best that you can, and then we will talk about the answer and talk about the words and why is it that these words are commonly confused. Okay, so, the first question that I have for you is this, all right? So, it's it's just a fill-in-the-blank. I've given you the sentence, I've given you two options at the bottom. Which word would you choose? He is incredibly bright, and his skills go much mm than the basketball court. Okay? The answers you would either say A, further, or B, farther. These are commonly confused words. Further, farther, because they are both comparative adjectives. So, which one would best complete this sentence? What do you think? Further or farther? Write your answers, write them in the chat, or again, if you're watching this later, write them in the comments. We just want to hear from you. All right, so, getting some good answers. Excellent.

Uh Anna, Ira, Saravada, Sarah, Olivia, perfect. Osia, hello, hello. Um Bassam, Sahuna, I'll try and give as many shout-outs as I can. Yes, the answer is A, further. He's incredibly bright, and his skills go much further than the basketball court. Remember, I told you um these are well, they're both adverbs, all right? So, again, when you're talking about further, you're talking about a metaphorical or figurative distance. And what I mean by that, we're talking about a distance in which the there there there isn't really a number that we can associate with it. So, I could say he's very bright, his skills go much further than the basketball court. So, maybe somebody has a lot of basketball, they're they have a lot of basketball skills, but then they have skills in other areas as well as well, maybe math, languages. So, again, they it goes further than just the basketball court. In this case down here, farther, we're talking about a physical distance. That is the main difference between these two, and you might could say something like, oh, it was farther than I expected. You're traveling to a place, and you expected it to be 10 km, it ended up being 15 km, and you could say, wow, it was farther than I expected. Now, I will say that sometimes further is also used to talk about physical distances as well, so that one can be interchangeable, but for the most part, those are the big differences between these two words. Further, metaphorical distances, farther, actual physical distances. All right, excellent, perfect, all right? I thought we'd start out. I'm going to it'll get a little harder as we go on, all right? The next one, all right? Cuz these are, you know, these are kind of advanced words, all right? So, this this is my I just I had to throw something in there, you know, personally about myself, even though I look a bit ridiculous in this picture. So, I I love it when I mm a smile from baby Emmy. So, again, if this is your first time here, we just had my wife and I just had a little girl. She is now almost 4 months old, incredible. So, this is a picture of or actually she likes to look in the mirror, and I think it's funny. I said I look a bit goofy in this, but I love to mm a smile from baby Emmy, okay? Baby Amelia. Is it A, elicit, or B, illicit? Again, these are pretty much homonyms, so they can they're they're commonly confused, they're spelled differently, but they're pronounced the same, especially in American English. In British English, I think there is a slight pronunciation difference, so it's easier to tell between these two words, but yes, okay. Wow, look at you guys rocking it. Anna, Liza, uh Sarah, Emil, perfect. August, Ivan, Lynn. Oh, Olivia, you guys are rocking it out today. So, the answer, yes, is A, elicit, all right? We're talking that this is a verb, and it means to you're provoking a response, some kind of response from another person. So, I could say, you know, I love it when I elicit a smile from baby Emmy. I'm smiling at her, and I get her to smile back at me. I elicit a response.

Illicit, the adjective, is talking about something that is illegal, forbidden, and often you find it before certain nouns, maybe illicit behavior, illicit activities. Um and and it's referring to things that are illegal. So, I could say, oh, she was worried about his illicit behavior, okay? So, again, these are homonyms, they sound the same, but they have very different meanings and a different spelling, okay? All right, excellent. All right, I'm going to see hopefully like challenge you guys a little more. So, what do you think about this one? Okay. Here's my question. We may encounter mm weather conditions, okay? Which word would best complete that sentence? Which word best completes that sentence?

We may encounter mm weather conditions. Is it A, averse, B, adverse? So, again, these words are they're not quite homonyms. There's just one little letter difference between them, but they are also commonly confused. It's easy to confuse these two words. So, what what do you think? What How it what what word best completes this one? And again, if you're just joining us, we are doing a a kind of a vocabulary quiz on words that learners, as well as native speakers, commonly confuse, all right? Excellent. All right, wow, all right, excellent responses. Give a few shout-outs to to Sava, Maria, um Issatal, I'm trying to say different names if I can. Kennedy, yes. Uh Phyllis, Paula, Mahesh, yes, the answer is B, adverse. We may encounter adverse weather conditions, okay? So, again, the part their parts of speech are different. So, if we're talking about averse, it's an adjective that you have a strong dislike to something, okay? You do you don't really like it, you have an opposition to it. So, I could say, again, just cuz I I like using myself uh for examples, it's a little self-deprecating. Wes is absolutely averse to eating broccoli for breakfast. Yes, I am opposed to eating broccoli for breakfast, I don't want to do it. Actually, to to be honest, I am averse to eating broccoli for for lunch and dinner as well. I just don't like broccoli, okay? So, I'll just throw that out there. I am averse to eating broccoli. I'm opposed to it. I have a dislike for it. Adverse, okay? I don't know if you hear the pronunciation difference, averse, adverse. All right, averse, you have that schwa at the beginning.

Adverse is a verb, um you're talking about preventing you know, preventing something that is preventing harmful um So, we may encounter adverse Again, actually, this was a mistake. Adverse is actually an adjective. As I was going through these, some of these uh didn't get changed, but again, they're both adjectives, all right? We may encounter adverse weather conditions, all right, adverse is an adjective. It's talking about harmful weather conditions. It's not something good adverse conditions. Again, it's an adjective that was a typo. All right. The next question. Okay, here's a good one for you guys. What do you think? All right. So the sentence that I have for you is I can't show mm because I don't know what it's like.

I can't show A sympathy or I can't show B empathy. All right, these are words that are that are commonly confused. Sympathy and empathy. What do you think is the correct answer? Even if you don't know, I encourage you. Try give you know, give it a guess. All right, what do you think is the the correct answer? All right, I I don't worry about getting it wrong. Again, that that's the last thing I want you to worry about. What do you think? The the key here is that second part of the sentence. I don't know what it's like. All right, that I'll give you a hint there. All right. So what do you think? All right. Write your answer in the chat.

Even if you're watching this later, just write to me in the comments. We just want to hear from you guys. Okay, so this one maybe a little more challenging. Okay, but I'm seeing some good answers. Yes. Lynn, Sassy, Hian Tran, Misbah are wait some Samwad. Emil, again sorry if I mispronounced names. Olivia, the the correct answer is B. Empathy. All right, I can't show empathy because I don't know what it's like. I told you the key words there was I don't know what it's like. So these are both nouns. So let's look at sympathy first. Sympathy is it's a feeling of pity. It's a feeling of sorrow because somebody has misfortune or they are suffering in some way and you feel bad for them and you show sympathy. You could express sympathy. So for example, I said they expressed their heartfelt sympathy. You can show sympathy to another person and you feel for that person because they're struggling with something.

Empathy. The difference is the empathy is you're able to understand and share the same feelings because you you know what it's like. You've had the same hardships. You've had similar problems and you know what that person is going through because you have experienced it and you can show empathy. Also again, you can use it um as a verb to sympathize with someone or to empathize with someone. So again, the big difference is in that that's question I said in the sentence I said because I don't know what it's like. All right. So if you don't know what it's like, then you can't express empathy. And that was the that was our question. I can't show empathy because I don't know what it's like. I have not had the experience. So then you could only show sympathy. So that is the difference between empathy and sympathy. All right.

So again, remember if sympathy, you just feel bad for somebody. Okay, maybe for example, um somebody lost their pet. Okay, that is a problem. It's something that's sad. I can feel sympathy for that person. All right. I can't feel empathy because I don't know what it's like. I have never lost a pet. So I don't know exactly what that person is going through. So again, sympathy is sorrow, empathy is you've had that same experience. Let's look at the next question. Again, this is another these are two words again that are commonly confused. I'll read it for you in case you can't see it very well. He couldn't look me in the eye, so I mm that he wasn't telling the truth.

Okay. Is it A imply, B infer? And again, I I I didn't the word won't go directly in there. I I'll I'll talk about that in the second, but which which word has the correct meaning? He couldn't look me in the eye, so I mm that he wasn't telling the truth. All right. So those are two words that are commonly confused, imply and infer. Which one which one do you think? This is these are commonly confused words. So uh All right, getting again some some different answers here. All right. And one thing I would say, this was kind of a trick because I know I put it down there, but I I didn't put down the correct form of the word. All right. So the answer. All right, let me say let's say we got some good answers. Yes.

Misbah, Miriam. Lai Lamai. Thank you guys for answering. Abdul Rashid. Perfect. All right. The answer is B infer. And I would say that that's the answer, but what it should be is this was in the past tense inferred. Okay. So let's look at these. All right, again this one is confusing even for native English speakers. So to imply they're both verbs. All right, to imply is to indicate the truth by suggesting something. Okay. So the way I would explain it is this. Imply and infer they are they are think of them as opposite of each other. So for example, think of somebody speaking and somebody listening. All right. The person who is speaking might imply something. They are suggesting something. The person who is listening would infer something. They're they're hearing the information and they would draw some conclusion. So to imply is to suggest something. To infer is the person is then they're receiving some information and they're coming to some conclusion based on what they see or based on what they hear. So in that regard, these two words are complete opposites. And I'll I'll try to hopefully it makes a little more sense with these sentences. So think of that sentence before. Somebody is looking away. There's two people having a conversation. One person is looking away and they're talking to the other person and I could say, you know, he kept looking away which implied he wasn't telling the truth. So the person looking away was doing this action. They weren't looking at them. That suggested that implied that that he wasn't telling the truth. The person who was listening. All right, he couldn't look me in the eye. So then I inferred I drew conclusion because of that. I inferred that he wasn't telling the truth. So again, these words are are opposites, imply and infer. Imply is to suggest. Infer is to make some kind of conclusion about some information. Okay. So again, think of it. If somebody is speaking and somebody is move it over here speaking and listening. The person who's speaking, giving the information might imply something. They may suggest something. The person who is receiving the information is going to infer something because of the information that they see. Okay. So again, commonly confused words. I know I know it's difficult. Probably spend a whole lesson on these two words. Let's look at the next question. Are you guys ready? All right. Next one. I was working more often because it was the summer season. All right, we're talking about A than or B then. Which one best which one which one completes that sentence? There's only one answer for this one. But than and then are commonly confused words. Okay.

Um so what what would you say? All right. Which word completes that sentence? I was working more often mm because it was the summer season. All right, what what do you guys think? Than or then? Write your answer in the chat. Write them in the comments. Okay. All right, getting some good answers. Yes. Some quick shout-outs. Lynn, Liza. Perfect. Um Who else? Bahar, I can. Yes, excellent. Um Room, Olivia. Perfect. The answer is B then. I was working more often then because it was the summer season. So if we're talking about than or then, than is a preposition. It's used to join two parts of a comparison. Think about a comparative sentence. If somebody were to say, oh your English is better than mine. All right.

A cheetah is faster than a lion. It's comparing two things. It's a comparative statement. Then is an adverb. You're saying like at that time. Okay, it's talking about in the past or maybe in the future. So for example, this was talking about a time in the past. I was working more often then at that time because it was the summer season. So maybe it was the summer season. There were many tourists there. So somebody had to work more. They were working more then. All right. The next one. I think this one might be a little easier for you, but it is three words. Okay, not um Oh no, no, no. This one's this one's a two word one. So the question is different. All right.

It's another homonym, cereal and serial. Which one which word goes in which place, all right? What's the number on that box? I think this one is a little easier. I hope you guys I think you guys should be able to get this, all right? So, what what is the order of those words? You see that A B? They're homonyms, cereal and cereal. What What How would you complete that that question? What's the number on that box? All right? What do you think? What would you say? Again, you're going to use both of them for this one, all right? Is it going to be A B or B A? What do you guys think? What's the number on that box?

All right, so I'm only seeing Some people are just putting one answer. Wait a second. What's going on? All right, it's You You need to use both of them, okay? And maybe I I apologize, perhaps this one didn't make as much sense. I should have made it a little clearer. You're going to use both of them, all right? So, it's either going to be A B or B A, all right? So, the answer would be Again, they're homonyms. What's the serial B number, serial s e r i a l, on that A serial box, c e r e a l, okay? So, let's look at it. Again, they're homonyms, which is why they're commonly confused. They're spelled differently, but I think most people know cereal c e r e a l, the noun, is a breakfast food.

Many people will eat it for breakfast with milk, and I would say yes, Cocoa Puffs. That is my favorite cereal, all right? What is your favorite cereal? Let me know in the chat. Um and serial s e r i a l, that is just the adjective, and you're talking about taking place in a a sequence. So, for example, in that last example, a serial number, all right? It is a sequence of numbers. Or you could be talking about it It has a It has a multiple meaning committing the the same offense. So, for example, my sentence, don't be a serial killer. Yes, if you're talking about a a serial killer, if you've ever seen maybe a crime show or a horror movie, it's talking about somebody who ends up killing many people. They would refer to them as a serial killer. So, again, it has multiple meanings. I've used both of them, a sequence like a serial serial number, um or again, committing a the same offense. You could have a serial criminal, all right? They're doing the same thing over and over again. All right, excellent. Ah, Misbah, cornflakes, my favorite cereal, all right? And in I have an Indonesia, not much cereal. Oh, okay. I don't eat a ton of cereal, but sure. I I definitely will eat it for breakfast sometimes. Now, this one, okay. This is the three-word one. It's a three-word homonym. Again, I I apologize if it's not clear. You are going to use each word, all right? Which word goes in which blank, all right? You're going to use A, B, and C. You just need to put them in the right place. This is a homonym, site, site, and sight.

All right? So, in his report, he an obscure um talking about people who unexpectedly lose their um All right? What What would you say, all right? Which words go where? Again, you're going to use all of these words, all right? And again, bonus points if you write out the words. I did not conjugate the verb, all right? I didn't conjugate the verb in the answer because then I thought it would be too easy. All right, so what do you guys think? Write your answers in the Write your answers in the chat or in the comments later on, all right? This one maybe Maybe it's a little more difficult. Um but let me know what you think, all right? So, excellent. All right, get some good answers. Yes, uh Louise, perfect.

Uh Mahesh, excellent. Um What else we have? Paulo, perf- uh yes. Uh Olivia, yes. The answer is it's B C A, okay? In his report, he cited, all right? Or you could say sites, either one. It could be the past or the present. You B, he sites an obscure site, C, talking about like a website, talking about people who unexpectedly lose their A sight, your vision, all right? So, let's look at those words, just so you know a little It's a little more clear as what they mean. So, so site, c i t e, is a verb. You're referring to something as evidence, okay? Often, when you're writing an essay or a research paper, your instructor or professor might say, "You need to cite your sources. You need to say where you got the information from and make a reference to it. You need to cite, c i t e, cite your sources." Now, a site, a noun, s i t e, is just talking about either one of two things. You're talking about an area where you could build something like a construction site or a campsite, or it could be like a webpage, all right? You're You're You're talking about a website. Often times, people might just say a site, and depending on the context, they know that you're talking about a webpage as in my example right here. And then, the last one, another noun, s i g h t, sight, is just talking about your ability to see, all right? The power of sight. So, in his report, he sites an obscure site, like a webpage, talking about people who unexpectedly lose their sight, all right? Sight, sight, sight. Now, I have a couple more questions for you, okay?

Now, these Now, it's it's going to be a little bit of a mix, okay? I want you to write your answers. How would you best complete this, all right? So, I was um to the idea of eating um for dinner. What would you say? Write your answers in the the chat. Write your answers in the comments if you're watching this later. It's all about practice. Practice, practice, practice, practice.

So, let me know what you think, all right? Don't worry about getting it wrong. What would you say? I was um to the idea of eating um for dinner. Okay? We talked about these words before, and now we're doing a more bit of practice, all right?

All right, so Okay, I'm getting some good answers. I'm thinking I'm falling in love with you. Well, thank you. I'm I'm flattered, all right? So, yes, all right. Um Shin- Shinbashi, Isatao, Phyllis, Bassam, perfect. All right. I would say I was averse, a v a v e r s e. I was opposed to the idea of eating cereal for dinner, c e r e a l, all right? So, you can see the answer up here. I was averse. If you are averse to something, remember, you are opposed to it. You dislike this. So, I was averse to the idea of eating cereal for dinner. This isn't true. I am not I'm actually Truthfully, I am not averse to the idea.

I have eaten for cereal for dinner before. I'm averse to eating broccoli for dinner, like I mentioned before, okay? So, excellent. All right, great job. Next one, all right? Another question for you guys. All right. So, this one is three different words. It's a longer statement, so I would say, "Their strict behavior okay? Um that the policeman didn't have much um for the drug dealers is um activities." Okay, so, "Their strict behavior either implied or inferred that the policeman didn't have much what? Empathy or sympathy for the drug dealers' is illicit or illicit beha- activities, all right? So, this one, again, I'll give you a little more time. It's a bit more I think it's more of a thinking question because there are, you know, some challenges in here, all right? What What do you think? Okay?

You're talking about their behavior, remember. Think of it again as implied infer. If you are implying, then you are the one kind of doing the talking. You were doing the the action. You were producing this this information. If you're inferred, you're kind of on the receiving end, and you're making a conclusion about something. All right, so Okay, perfect. All right, I think we got a lot of good good answers. Yes, um Mahesh, Bassam, perfect. Louise, uh Ludmilla, uh uh excellent, excellent. Let's see. It's It's just moving way too fast. Okay, so let me let me tell you the answer. So, the strict behavior implied, all right? So, again, the police are acting strict.

They're the ones doing this this action, all right? They have their behavior. It implied that the policeman didn't have much sympathy, all right? They didn't feel bad for the drug dealers' illicit activities. It's illegal activities. Now, the reason, again, the the strict behavior implied cuz again, the police are the ones It's like Think of it again, if you're speaking or listening. They're the ones kind of doing the action. This implied that they didn't have much sympathy. The reason I say it's sympathy instead of empathy is because they're police officers. You would think that most police officers, they don't know what it's like to deal drugs. They don't know what it's like to go to jail. So, they can't show empathy. They would have to show sympathy.

They would show sympathy. So, this was a little more challenging. Again, these are some commonly confused words. Just to review them for you guys if you join us a little late and for you guys who have been with me and are watching this, it's always good to review. So, we talked about further and farther. The difference is further is a metaphorical distance, no numbers. Farther is an actual physical different distance when you're talking about uh traveling somewhere, okay? Now, also, elicit and illicit, I said when Americans are pronouncing us, they sound more like homonyms. Elicit is a verb to provoke a response. Like I said, I like to elicit a smile from little baby Emmy.

Illicit is an adjective meaning illegal. Illegal activities like drug dealer's illicit activities. We talked about averse versus adverse. Um averse uh averse is an adjective talking about you dislike something, all right? I'm averse to eating broccoli for breakfast, lunch, or dinner. Let's just throw all of those out there. Or adverse, again, that is also an adjective. That was a typo. Um talking about something that is unfavorable or harmful. Um you know, something is adverse uh to your health or adverse weather conditions. We talked about empathy and sympathy, both nouns. Sympathy is you're feeling sorry for somebody because of some difficulty or misfortune. Empathy is you you you're able to you're kind of feeling sorry for them, too, and you're able to understand because you know what that feeling is like. You have experienced it before, so you can show empathy.

of them verbs. To imply something, all right, is to make a suggestion. To infer something is to draw a conclusion. So, again, they're kind of opposites. Imply is like a suggestion. Infer is to draw a conclusion about some information. We talked about than versus then. Then is a preposition, a comparative sentence. You're joining two parts. Then is an adverb talking about at that time. And then we talked about this Whoops, where is it? Uh no, right here. These Oh, two different ones. Yes, homonyms. Cereal and serial. The cereal c e r e a l, the breakfast food. You eat it for breakfast. Serial s e r i a l is talking about a sequence of numbers or committing the same offense over and over again. And then the last set, which again are homonyms. Site c i t e is to give reference to something. Cite your sources. Site, a noun, is like an area where you build something, construction site, campsite, or it could be like a webpage. And sight is talking about the power to see. All right. So, again, these are commonly confused words in English and they're a bit more advanced vocabulary words.

So, I hope you guys learned something new. I hope that when you come when you need to use these words that you will be able to use them uh correctly the next time you are having a conversation or maybe chatting with somebody online, all right? One thing Last thing I want to say, if you guys want to join our community, be a stronger part of a community, you can join our email list. You will get access to the secret fluency lesson.

Only people that join the list get access to the secret fluency lesson. I will throw a link to that right there in the chat, so you can check that out. Thank you, thank you, thank you.

Afrin. Um Ira, Virginia. Sorry if I missed some names. I will always try and keep giving as many shout-outs as I can during these lessons, but we will be back next time for another live lesson. I hope to see you then. So long.

Stop Putting Adjectives in the Wrong Order

what's up everyone welcome to interactive English my name is Wes and what this channel is all about is just helping you guys practice and improve your English skills that's why you're here and that's what we're going to help you do and today we have a special grammar lesson for you I'm going to talk about something and we are going to practice it as well and that is adjectives word order this is something that is very useful and it's very important because we use adjectives all the time when we're speaking when we're writing and you're also going to hear them quite often when you're listening or reading so I want to take a moment so to give a quick shout out to those who are with me right now hello dr. daya Israel lolly lots of Ryan welcome go see ya good to see you dr. Ahn Didem Sabah thank you thank you for joining me and get ready because what I want you guys to do I want you guys to practice using adjectives today if you're with me now or even if you're watching this later I want you to use the comments section as though it's a piece of paper and practice using these adjectives so first off let's start with the benefits okay what what is the reason for even having this lesson and and doing this discussion what are benefits of learning adjectives word order as I said we use adjectives when we want to be descriptive alright it's going to help you use more precise language so that you can put a picture in your mind or if you're speaking you're going to help that other person put a picture in their mind so they will know exactly what you're saying and and again if you're using more than one adjective if you're using two adjectives three adjectives even four adjectives they need to be in the right order and again if you know that order and you can use those adjectives then you're really going to be able to say exactly what you want to say and and again these are colorful words and this is what makes you know speaking this is what makes people so effective when they're speaking if they can use adjectives correctly and they can use them effectively or even in writing when you're reading a story and you just think to yourself oh my gosh this person said this so incredibly well and and they just use the right words and they use the right adjectives to really express a feeling or express an event or a situation so it is so useful to be able to use adjectives and you need to use them in the correct order the other reason the other benefit is that you will eliminate the risk of sounding awkward because for example I could just tell you okay I have a new I have a new blue shirt okay you understand what I'm saying if I say well I have a blue new shirt I'm also going to understand that but it just sounds a little awkward and this goes back to your fluency level if you want to be fluent in English then this is what you need to do you need to get this order down and you need to get it correct so that you don't sound awkward when you're having a conversation and you're using adjectives to describe something so then the next logical question these are the reasons why you should be aware of an adjective word order if you're using more than one adjective the best now you're probably wondering okay well how should we learn this order how do we go about learning this so that we can improve our fluency skills the number one way to do that right there the number one way the best way the absolute best way is with reading and listening I'm also going to throw in I didn't put it up there but I would also say practicing as well and that's what we're going to do in today's lesson we're going to talk about it but we are going to practice writing some sentences using different adjectives but the best way to learn it is is just by more reading if you're reading an article if you're reading a book or just listening you might be listening to a podcast

you might be listening to another conversation or a song and people will just start using these adjectives and it's just going to seep into your brain and then when you go to make produce the language when you start speaking or you start writing you will naturally begin to use these adjectives in the correct order now well I'll show you what I get to in just a moment all right we're gonna get to the rules and kind of talk about that but the best way to learn it is just more reading more listening it's good to be aware of the order and the rules but reading listening and practicing those are just the best way best ways to really feel comfortable with the adjective word order so that you can use as many adjectives as you want when you are speaking or writing the next advice that I would give you is this and I rarely say this to English learners or students in general is if you're having a conversation and you want to use different adjectives but you know you're you're unsure I mean again go ahead and use them and just think about what feels right do what feels right because again we're going to talk about the order today but if you're having a conversation or even if you're writing an email you're not going to stop and think about okay you know which adjective comes first blue new like what what's going on you're just going to say them and and that's what I would encourage you to do is just keep practicing and the more you listen the more you read you're automatically going to correct that order on your own so in that case because of that I would always encourage you just do what feels right you know what what what sounds right when you say the sentence to yourself what sounds right because most of the time that is going to be correct because you've already been exposed to the correct order through reading and through listening all right so let's go ahead and look at the rules somebody had asked about mentioning the rules for adjectives word order so down below me you can see I've put them based on category and I've got this there basically it's it's pretty much accepted I was using can bridge I looked at what they said Oxford word English and I've included quite a few of them most of the time they'll just put down like maybe six or eight topics and try to learn I put down quite a few and I will go through them quickly but again this this chart right here is not some thing I think it does a lot of good to sit at home and try to study the best way again is just reading listening and what we're going to do today is practice so again the first one right down here we're gonna start right yes on this side right here alright the first adjective that you would find if you're talking would be quantity if you're talking about for example some alright some shirts many shirts or even if you're talking about a number one two three two three four five six seven alright that is going to be the first adjective that you're going to use in order the next one would be an opinion and I've put down below some examples so that you can see for example if you're talking about opinion something is delicious something is maybe amazing alright it's whatever your opinion is that would be the next order then we're talking about size big little small shape again these are no quality would be next the way something for example if something is thin if something is thick maybe something is rough we're talking about the physical quality of a noun because that's what adjectives are typically describing after quality after physical quality you talk about shape round square oval and then condition is something clean is it dirty is it messy then after that age you could say something is old something is new something is ancient if it's very old color again you guys know this blue green red blue yellow the colors would come next origin origin is talking about like a country like where was something made if something is American or Brazilian or French or Chinese that would come next finally we're talking about the material for example a shirt might be a cotton shirt a plaid shirt a silk shirt and then finally the purpose what is the purpose of this noun so I gave you this order right there I said so in that natural order a delicious big round wedding cake that would be the correct order of those adjectives now most of the time I think it's good to use it's it's always good to use adjectives I think it's great to use too tibs oftentimes it's you'll find it's very common to use three the more adjectives you start to throw on there it could sound a little awkward so there's not really a situation that you would say delicious big round wedding cake that that's a little too much this was just as a reference for all of you guys so that is the word order you have opinion size shape and purpose delicious big round wedding cake the next one okay two dirty old blue cotton shirts so again this time we're using five adjectives to dirty old blue cotton shirts we're using quantity condition age color material and then our noun okay so this is the word order it's something it's just for your reference it's not something I would recommend okay take a lot of time and study this this is just for you to refer to especially maybe if you're writing you could take some time and look okay what is the order what is the correct order but again reading listening those are the best ways to learn this order and really know it and understand it so let's look at before we jump into the practice I wanted to let you guys know again if you really want to connect with us I recommend you join our email list there's a lot of cool benefits you can access the secret fluency lesson we will send you some useful and free resources and you'll get the latest updates about what is happening here at interactive English because we got a lot planned for the future like our online courses and we might throw some discounts for those who aren't you who are on our email list so a link is in the description below check that out and join the list and connect with us because we want to connect with all of you so the way we're going to do this is we're going to start with an easy practice and it's going to be a more controlled practice and I'm gonna give you the adjectives and I just want you to put it in order and then as we go through this it's going to work towards a more freer practice in which I want you guys to write sentences in the cop in the chat all right and even if you're home at home I want you guys to write some and let me know what you think and this is a great way to practice using adjectives so the first question that I have for you is right here okay so think of this like again this is like a sentence think of it as somebody's having this conversation and they're saying ah it's a mmm turtle I'm giving you the two adjectives down there little cute okay which one comes first what order are you going to put those adjectives in if you're using those two words little and cute we're just starting out with two I want you to write your answer in the chat or write it in the comments if you're watching this later okay what do you guys think it's it's always good to practice and don't worry about making mistakes it doesn't matter this is just about practicing this is for your benefit so if I say oh it's a mm-hmm turtle all right those are the two adjectives I see some great answers yes go see on a sim da da l a la ratta Leah excellent yes so if we're talking about I say ah it's a cute little turtle it's it cute I'm giving my opinion okay it's a cute little turtle you go with opinion first and then sighs if I wanted to say another opinion like I don't know why maybe it's because I'm hungry I'm thinking of the word delicious but again that would be another opinion I saw it's a delicious little turtle or again if I'm using color that would also come later all right it's a cute green turtle or again color would come after size I would say oh it's a little green turtle so again that is how you would use it in this case we're using opinion over size so the next one all right let's look at this one this is a little more challenging because now we have three look at my mmm box okay those are the three adjectives that I want you to use brown big and square okay Brown big and square look at my mm-hmm box okay what do you guys think I want you guys to write your answers down okay so just to let you know we're talking about Brown okay color big size square is shape alright I'm giving you I'm giving you those items that they're listed under what do you guys think alright look at my mm box alright so this one okay I was going to say this one's a little a little trickier especially because of it's a little trickier especially because the shape and the color and I can understand how these would be confused alright but remember if we're looking back on our list right here alright we're talking about color size and shape okay so we're going to use size first shape and then color which means you're going to say look at my big square brown box alright what I would say about this one because I think this is a lot more challenging because I think like I said size is a given look at the look at the big square box look at my big brown box okay but shape and color those could be a little more challenging and confusing and I would say just is just to me my personal opinion if you used color before shape to me that's not going to sound as awkward I'm not going to listen to that and be like hmm that sounds strange I think that one is one that you could get away with alright so I know many of you put big brown square box so if you put that one to me again I'm giving you my personal view as well I think that that one is acceptable and is not going to sound as awkward as some of the other ones all right but if we're following that order that order of adjectives look at my big square Brown box alright the next one alright I am going to give you a sentence and I want you to complete it with two adjectives choose any adjectives you want just try to put them in the correct order what do you guys think all right my mmm-hmm car is parked out front and then I'll give you the sentence that I came up with it I just chose one all right so what do you think how would you complete this sentence if you're going to use two adjectives to describe that car my mmm-hmm car is parked out front what do you think right right you're right your answer right write it in the chat again even if you're writing this later just right right use the comment section it's like a piece of paper okay we have on a sim yes my beautiful red car is parked out front perfect all right real hon my expensive red car is parked out front yes you're talking about the condition okay kdj my big red car is parked out front what else do we have yes Carla my new red car is parked out front we have a lot of excellent my fast red car perfect Alice on photo yes those are some great examples and again when you guys are able to see each other's examples like I said the more you read the more you listen that's just going to help you continuously put these adjectives in the correct order that's what it's all about reading listening practicing so I just said my my shiny new car is parked out front okay shiny I'm talking kind of about the the the physical quality of it new is the condition okay my shiny new car is parked out front the next one

let's look at this one give me some more sentences here we go these mm-hmm shoes are my favorite and those are the shoes down below those really those are not my shoes this is just a picture of shoes that I found but you know what what adjectives would you use to describe those shoes again I'm just asking for two because most of the time I think you're going when you use adjectives it's great to use one adjective gives it more gives it a description you can describe it even more with two adjectives and I think it's very common for people to use two adjectives to describe nouns whether you're talking about shoes cars basically anything so what what would you guys say all right to describe those shoes let me know ok all right Aviano said my old black shoes are my favorite exactly you're talking about age and then color um kdj my smart black shoes are my favorite excellent that's good I like that and that's for British English too saying something is smart in the way it looks but that is perfect all right that's about my casual if there's casual sneakers sneakers and shoes are pretty much synonyms but I guess sneaker shoes this is maybe sneaker is a type of shoe so you could say that my clip my casual sneaker shoes are my favorite because sneaker would be more of kind of like I guess a purpose not a purpose maybe kind of the the type of something Jane my dirty old shoes are my favorite I guess sure um my lovely black shoes are my favorite I guess they do look a little dirty they're they're kind of scuffed up you pointed that out I just said my classic walking shoes are my favorite often I don't know why when I think of shoes I think companies like to describe these are classic these are classic shoes and I just gave them a purpose as in walking shoes even though I don't know they don't really look like walking shoes but you could walk in them so I said these classic walking shoes are my favorite all right now we are going to completely open this up all right and you guys are going to be able to throw a lot of different examples out there and I would just encourage you try to write you're gonna have to write a full sentence in this case to describe something because I am going to show you a picture and the picture is going to have a lot of different things on it I want you to use some adjectives to describe what you see alright try to use more than one try to use to try to use three if you can and then I will give you some examples okay so I've put myself very small down there in the corner but this is the picture all right there's a lot of things that you can describe a lot of different nouns in this picture that you can describe so can you I want you to write a sentence in the chat write a sentence in the comments if you're watching this later and give some examples and use some adjectives and try to make sure that you are using them in the correct order all right so what do you guys think what what what's a good sentence with that adjective word order okay so and and if you're unsure again follow them follow my advice at the very beginning just do what feels right what feels right what sounds right when you're thinking about adjectives word order if you're not sure just go ahead and put it down don't worry about making mistakes okay what what are some sentence is that you could put together all right that to describe this picture somebody said Roberto American walking yeah that would work American walking shoes origin purpose so we have there's a luxurious new rectangular laptop perfect exactly all right I like this new t-shirt perfect it is a new shirt my Italian leather bag you have origin and then material okay the Italian leather bag perfect my favorite Blackwatch excellent you're giving your opinion my favorite black watch I have a brown leather bag excellence of a great great example okay brown leather bag my old my old black broken watch in this case I would say again broken is often used as a participle adjectives which means it follows the verb to be so oftentimes you you would use its it say like my my old black watch is broken so in that case you still have three adjectives in the sentence but they wouldn't all come before the noun I hate that little black phone sure yes size and then color alright what else do we have alright do you guys have any more sentences I see a big white cotton shirt perfect size color material a big white cotton shirt great example lovely so here are some examples that I put down again these are just four I say you know I just bought this sleek thin mobile phone so again I'm talking about something is sleek that's my opinion oftentimes we talk about electronics they use the word sleek it looks cool it looks sharp thin is the physical the physical quality sleek thin mobile phone even though mobile phones consider it now mobile is an adjective it is the purpose so that one has three I said there are also there are two round black camera cases on the table and I tried to think of sentences that are going to sound a little more natural even though there are a lot of adjectives there so two round black camera those are all adjectives alright I Stoke want a t shape color purpose alright to round black camera cases on the table the next one my trusty oh my trusty old brown travel bag never lets me down my trusty old brown travel bag never lets me down okay trusty old brown travel bag travel bag is purpose so again I think it's very when you include a purpose it's very easy to throw some other adjectives on there because oftentimes that purpose and that now they really kind of meld together alright a travel black camera case actually those are camera now I'm just noticing those aren't camera cases those are camera lenses alright I know some people probably say some stuff in the chat later on camera lenses and then that last one this is a new limited edition men's magazine okay these are different examples of some adjectives adjectives used in sentences let's practice let's do another one alright here is your picture I tried to put myself out of the way there there's a lot going on in this picture so again I want you to write some sentences all right try to use two or more adjectives use as many as you can but again just just don't try to force it try to think of a sentence that would come naturally to you when you're looking at this picture and you see something and like okay I want to describe this thing you have a lot of looks like there's a lot of candy in there there's some bottles up above me there's some lighters over here you have some chewing gum and other candy there's some beer and the fridge looks like there's some nuts on the table so what what kind of sentences would you use what adjectives could you use to describe this picture all right what do you guys think write those in the chat write those in the comments it's all good practice all right uh yeah all right you could save right you have there is a cold black bottle sure exactly perfect a cold black bottle of beer so what are what are some sentences that we could use and then I will share some of my sentences so you can see there's some sentences that I came up with when looking at this picture again just just write what feels natural don't don't worry too much about okay okay just just write what comes natural all right so we got some sentences um I got a chilled beer bottle okay chilled all right it's describing the condition it is a beer bottle all right beer would be the purpose all right it is a chilled beer bottle um yummy yellow candy your opinion the color and then the noun perfect I see a cold dark beer yes I see a cold dark beer too delicious fresh beer all right a lot of a lot of beer stuff I guess that is the more that is the clearest part of this picture for big icy bottles of beer excellent

Gaby thanks for sharing with us everything seems so delicious and fresh perfect uh so you some wonderful delicious candies all right so again that is perfect usually buy some spicy snacks all right disguising the snacks so excellent that's yeah you're giving the quantity some spicy they're your opinion and then snacks spicy snacks on the weekends come at a small store near my house perfect let's see there is a cold bottle there is a plethora of ancient round white peanuts I like it yes perfect all right I like that word ancient used to describe the age so let's look at here's some examples that I just put down okay so we'll start above these smooth cuddler lighters are on sale okay smooth colored lighters smooth I'm talking about that physical quality and then the color down below me there are several unhealthy snacks behind the counter alright two adjectives several and unhealthy several unhealthy snacks my sentence about the beer try a smooth ice-cold Brazilian beer so again smooth I think people might use it to try and describe a cold beverage ice-cold Brazilian beer I think that's I think that's a brama unless you guys want to it can correct me I think Brahma is a Brazilian beer I think so so and then that bottom one the store is trying to sell these old dirty Canadian peanuts again I wanted to throw an origin in there I have no idea if those peanuts are from Canada but it really doesn't matter it's all about practicing all right practice practice practice practice the store is trying to sell these old dirty Canadian peanuts alright so again with adjectives word order it is good to use things as a reference like this and I showed you before that you have this order of quality quantity opinion size quality shape condition age color origin material purpose alright this is the order that you're going to follow but again the absolute best way to learn this order or is to learn it naturally and the way that you're going to learn it naturally is with reading and listening because if you were to ask most native English speakers about making a list in trying to order the adjectives in order people are gonna find it difficult because as native English speakers you know we don't think about this we grew up with this information and we were exposed to it reading and listening and then as we got older the rules just become natural alright we don't sit there and study these lists of like okay this is the order it's all about reading it's all about listening and getting that exposure that is the best way to learn information like this and again that's why I say if you're unsure of what to do just do what feels right okay do what you think comes naturally so I hope that you guys enjoyed this lesson and enjoyed practicing this adjective word order if you did please like hit that like button smash that like button actually share this lesson with your friends anybody else you know who is trying to practice and improve their English skills we want them to become a part of our community and you guys can always write to us in the comments we love hearing from you guys so please hit us up down there and you could check us out on social media that is a lot those are a lot of call to actions that I just gave you so thank you for joining me thank you go see a shaquille hit on Carla honest um thank you thank you thank you Lally it's great to see so many people here today and we will be back next time with another lesson thanks for joining us and I will see you next

Stop Saying Everything Is INTERESTING | Build Your Vocabulary with Advanced Synonyms

- Do you find yourself constantly describing things as, 'interesting?' Wouldn't it be better if you found some more precise words to describe the things you're into? Stick around to learn some new vocabulary words that are synonyms with interesting. So, today we are talking about all things interesting. I've actually noticed that many English language learners and students in general, when they want to tell me about something wonderful, something interesting that they've seen or watched or know about, they always use this word. Interesting. How was the movie? Interesting. How was the book you read? Interesting! How was the show? So interesting. It's a good word to use but it only describes so much.

It's not very precise and today I want to teach you how you can really talk about something using more precise vocabulary. So the words I'm talking about today, they're all synonyms for interesting. But they have slightly different meanings. So, let's get to it! Our first word is 'fascinating.' And this is already better than interesting because it means extremely interesting. So, when somebody tells you about something that's fascinating, you're not just interested. You're completely into it. You're so interested that you find it like, "Wow!" - Fascinating! - That's what's so fascinating! - Dad loves muggles, thinks they're fascinating. - It's not just like, "Yeah, yeah it was interesting, blah, blah blah." You're like, "Wow! This has got my attention completely.

It is fascinating." The next word is, 'intriguing' and this one I really like. Because I'm a very curious person by nature and the definition is that, something intriguing is, you know it arouses your curiosity and it peaks your interest. Really it has a little bit of a mystery to it. If something's intriguing, it just gets your attention and you really want to find out more about it. That's intriguing.

The next word is, 'thought-provoking.' And just like I mentioned before, if you're looking for a word to describe something that makes you think, if you're maybe describing a book or a movie that's really caused you to think and maybe even caused you to think about something that you've never thought before, this is a good word to use. Thought-provoking. - Okay, what we're going for is serious, insightful, thought-provoking radio journalism. - Admit, it's thought-provoking. - It's so much better than interesting, honestly. Because it says so much more. If it's thought-provoking it really makes you think. Thought-provoking. Such a good word. Can you guys see how excited I get? Almost sounded like I'm sexually attracted to these words.

I'm not! I'm not insane. The next one is, 'captivating.' Captivating, another good word. And this kind of means two things. Attracting is one of them and then, holding interest is another. So, when something is captivating, first it attracts you. 'Cause to captivate means to grab your attention. You can look at things that are captivating. You see somebody, somebody's eyes, somebody's look may be captivating. But it really just means that something that kind of grabs on and holds your attention. Captivating. (cat meows) Yes? (cat meows) What? (cat meows) Yes?

The next word is, 'enthraling.' Thr-thr-thralling. If you're having a hard time pronouncing this word, don't worry it is a little bit difficult because of the 'th' sound. So, just keep practicing. Enthraling. But what it means is that, if something's enthraling it holds your attention completely. You are so focused on this thing, it is enthraling. So, the next word is another good one. In fact, I think all of the words in this lesson are really, really, really good. It's wonderful because it has more meanings into one. So, it is 'compelling.' And if something is compelling it is, it evokes your attention but also admiration and interest kind of all into one. - Silence, is more compelling.

- Great, story. Compelling. And rich. - Sounds compelling. - We use compelling for arguments, like a compelling argument, maybe will make you change your mind if somebody has a compelling argument. Something that is so powerful, that it convinces you that something is true. Or that something should be done. - You made a compelling argument, yo! - You call that compelling?! - Compelling is kind of a call to action. It makes you want to do something. 'Stimulating' is our next word. And, it means that it's inspiring new ideas, there's new enthusiasm, just something that makes you feel more creative and more refreshed. That's stimulating, it's bringing all of these things to your mind that are making you think about something and it's making you really, really look at something in a new and different way.

Our next word is 'gripping.' And if you know what gripping means, it is to hold onto something tightly. And that's what happens to your attention when you are describing something as gripping. Something is gripping, you're really into it. So, what do you guys think? Do you love these words as much as I do? Let's find out because now, it's time to practice. Okay, so because we're always looking for recommendations in the comments I want you to tell us about a movie that you saw that you found very interesting. But, of course, of course, don't use interesting. Use one of the words from this lesson. Really looking for new things to watch all the time and also, our other viewers are probably going to want to see your recommendations as well.

Make sure to use the vocabulary words. The more you use them the better your chances of remembering will be. I hope you found this lesson fascinating, captivating, compelling, if you did please give it a thumbs up! If you like what we do and want to show us some love, please check out our Patreon page. It's awesome. The link is in the description. Thanks for watching, I'll see you next time. I forgot how to say, check out our Patreon. Mew? (cat meows) Yeah. (cat meows) Meow. Okay, let's say (speaks in a foreign language).

Let's see that again, Georgie. And what? (cat meows) (laughs) She's so chatty right now!

Stop Translating! Learn This B1 Vocabulary to Speak with Confidence

The lesson that I have for you today is very very I'm going to add one more very important because we're talking about B1 vocabulary and this vocabulary is commonly used. So it's more at an intermediate level but I think these phrases are word phrases that you should definitely know and really be able to actively use when you're having a conversation. And that is why I say these are B1. This is B1 vocabulary you need to know so that it'll allow you to just speak more confidently. And also I wanted to let you know if you're interested in joining my speaking course, check out the link down below in the description. The course is all about helping you speak confidently, speak clearly, speak naturally. Check out the links down below and you can use the discount code if you wish to enroll. So let's go ahead and jump into it. This is a quiz lesson. I want you to participate. Even if you're a little shy, it's okay. Write your answers in the chat in the comments. I just love hearing from you. And the first one, the first question is says, "Come on, lighten up. It was just a joke. Where's your I've kind of highlighted the portion that's missing and I've given you the meaning down below. So there are three words in this B1 phrase and it refers to your ability to understand funny things and this is like a somebody would say this. Oh, come on. Lighten up. It was just a joke. Where's your what? Very useful phrase, very common especially in this context because well people use this phrase in different ways. I will say probably a more difficult phrase is that first one, somebody saying lighten up. Lighten up just means like relax, calm down. It's not a big deal. It was just a joke. Where's your sense of humor? Well done, Lai Julia Katarina. So, if you're talking about someone's sense of humor, it refers to the ability that someone has to say, "Okay, yes, this is funny," or, "I understand the joke." And you could say, "Somebody has a great sense of humor or a fun sense of humor." There are a lot of different collocations that you could use with this phrase or even somebody asking that question, "Where's your sense of humor? Come on, lighten up. Where's your sense of humor?" Let's look at the next one, right? Oh, actually, I wanted to point out one quick thing because of course, and I forgot to introduce myself.

I'm sorry if this is your first time here. My name is Wes. It's all about helping you reach your fluency goals. Uh, so I am from the US and that's kind of what I wanted to introduce myself. There are some differences in spelling as many of you may know with a variety of words. Humor is one of those. So in the US we'd spell it h u m o r and in the UK and British English h u m o r. And there are other words for example color is a similar word that has a spelling difference. So just something to keep in mind. Let's go ahead look at the next one. Any furniture you buy must be cheap, attractive, and all practical.

the meaning of this phrase and maybe you can't see it. Uh I have one I blanked out one word m a l l means most importantly. So I'm listing these different things and then of course I get to that last one most importantly practical. Now what phrase could we use that means most importantly and it's going to have the word all in it. Any furniture you buy must be cheap, attractive, and m practical. This is like something I would say probably uh because I'm I'm a bit frugal. And of course, my wife would say that I'm more cheap. And I would say yes, we're looking at furniture. It's I should be cheap, attractive, and all practical. So again, this is B1 vocabulary. I think you should definitely know it. I see some great answers. Excellent. uh Manuel or Lali Teao above all. So if you're talking about these different things and then you want to say well most importantly you can use this phrase above all any furniture you buy must be cheap attractive and above all practical. This is again what I would say probably. I don't know if I would include attractive because I just I don't know I don't really care. I would just say it must be cheap and above all practical or probably I would say it must be practical and above all cheap. All right. So the next one again very very important phrases and I'm going to keep stressing that as we go through this because this is B1. These are phrases that you are going to actively come across when you're having a conversation, you're listening to a podcast, you're watching a TV show or movie.

What do you think? Our little girl didn't go to school because she m there are three words. I'm not giving you much apart from the indefinite article. Uh there I think you're going to be able to put this together. We're referring to uh when something when when the measured amount of heat in the body is higher than normal, often indicating an illness. I had to play around with the meaning because when I was putting it together basically the phrase was in the meaning as okay this is I think this is probably I don't want to say too easy but it is commonly used I I think you you know it our little girl didn't go to school why would somebody maybe not go to school because she right the measured amount of heat in the body is higher than normal there are a few there there are a couple a few different ways that you could say this.

So, of course, somebody says, "Well, somebody has a fever. That's perfect. Yes, that works." Or somebody's running a temperature. That also works. In this case, though, the phrase that I think is often used uh but all of them, I think, are very common because we can all relate to this. Have a temperature. So, if somebody has a temperature, that's basically what it means. The amount of heat in the body. When I was putting this together, it kept saying the temperature of your body is higher than normal, indicating an illness. And you could say, I have a temperature.

Now, going back to my point of there are different ways to say this. So, it's not like there's only one answer. I want to talk about a few different ways you can talk about this. All of them, I think, are commonly used. And just to show you that as far as getting a better understanding is which one's more common, that's when we can use engram viewer to check out the frequency of words and phrases. of these down below. They mean the same thing. To have a temperature, to have a fever, running a temperature, or running a fever. And just looking at this list right here, I was, you know, to be honest, I was a little surprised. Uh, have a fever is the most commonly used.

I I'm I guess I shouldn't say I'm that surprised. I guess I'm surprised at how much more frequently used it is. So, have a fever and then running a fever. So, I think the main takeaway is that it is more common for people to use the word fever instead of temperature. But either one, they mean the same thing. One thing I want to point out when talking about these phrases is that when you're saying like you have a temperature versus you are running a temperature, you're going to use running a temperature in the continuous tense as well as running a fever. So just keep that in mind. We're going to use that ing. If I said, well, right now I have a temperature versus right now I'm running a temperature or I'm running a fever.

So, just that distinction with the verb, the running within the continuous tense. Let's look at the next one. This is true. I'm always uh I'm always fishing for these uh calls to these different call to actions. I would hit the like button. So, this is used when you give someone advice. So, it's like I'm giving you advice and I would say something. I would hit the like button. I I think there are probably multiple phrases that you could use to give you a little bit of a hint to kind of take you where I'm going. Think about the grammar, especially in the the independent clause. Think about the grammar and the meaning of that first part. It is it is used when you give someone advice.

I would hit the like button. What phrase can we use? Whenever you want to give someone advice, this is commonly used. I've done uh a number of lessons talking about this, mostly grammar lessons. And we're going to use this phrase. So, I told you to think about the grammar that would hit the like button using would plus the base verb and the phrase is drum roll. Actually, no drum roll necessary if I were you. Well done, uh, Julia Tayo Manuel. Um, Cinderella, yes, you made it. Uh, magical one. Thanks for joining our community, becoming a member. I love it. And Lai, good job. So, if I were you, I would hit the like button. This is me kind of, you know, giving you advice, kind of asking you to go ahead and hit the like button.

Uh, in this case, somebody mentioned press. I would say hit the like button, but I feel like it's more I don't know if it's cooler to say smash the like button. That is something I think a lot of the the younger content creators are using, smash that like button. I don't think I would use a word like press is is not commonly used in this context. So let's go back and talk about this structure. If I were you, I would. This is the second conditional. It which refers to an unlikely or hypothetical condition and its probable result. So we have those two parts condition result. In the condition uh we're going to use the past simple and in the result would plus the base verb. So, here are some examples down here. If I were you, I would hit the like button. That was the sentence we just had. If I were you, I would keep building your vocabulary. And finally, I would click the link in the description. If I were you, I'm moving it to the back. So, the result can come before the condition. And then we just remove that comma. The other thing I wanted to say, which I didn't put up here, and I don't know why, this is an example of the subjunctive. So if I were you, if uh he were you, she were you. And we are going to use that subjunctive. You may hear people in colloquial speech like if I was you and they say if I was. However, I I don't think I I my I would recommend I would encourage you just to use the subjunctive in this case. I think it is more accurate if I were you. I say accurate grammatically speaking. So, let's go ahead and look at the next one.

you're talking about like some academic, you know, you're you're doing some testing or something. Well, I was in the process of doing this. Just casually speaking, I would say, I was in the middle of eating dinner when I got your message. One thing to keep in mind, in the middle of and then you're going to follow that with the gerund. Sometimes this is when people will make slight speaking mistakes and the infinitive will slip in there and they'll say in the middle of to do something. Just keep in mind you're going to use the gerund in the middle of doing something. In the middle of. How about this next question for you? My next B1 challenge for you is you should review new vocabulary every so often. It means usually or in most situations in and then follow it with this word.

This is in I would say an introductory phrase when you're getting ready to say well in most situations you should do this or you need to do this or it would be wise to do that. [laughter] I almost used it right now. And that is something I wanted to say about this phrase and the the correct answer. Excellent. Um, Lai Julia, in general. In general. And I think you should do this. You should review new vocabulary every so often. It's part of spaced repetition. I'm a big believer in that. Learn something new, go back, review it uh a couple of days later, go back the following week, review it, and then the following month, and you're really making it a part of your active memory, and then you can over time, you'll make it a part of your long-term memory, and you won't even need to think about it. You're having a conversation, and you'll just use these phrases, well, in general, blah blah blah blah. Now, I I told you I was about to say it because I've noticed, and this is something I think I I use it too often because when I go back and I look at some of these videos, these live lessons, or I'm editing another filmed video, I use this phrase quite often. I think I I overuse it because I catch myself, gosh, I keep saying in general, in general, in general. I think it's because as an instructor, I'm constantly trying to well teach and share information. And that's why I would say, well, in most situations, this is how you would use this word or this is the context in which you're going to find this phrase being used, which is why you may hear me say in general too much. All right, I'm going to go ahead and put that out there. It's not something that only second language learners do. Native speakers often overuse different words and phrases. It is something that happens and you just try to avoid it.

You understand that and then you can avoid it. Um, wow, Cinderella, thank you so much. Uh, I truly appreciate it. That is uh amazing. I I glad that these lessons are useful and you all are learning new things and you can actually go out and try to use this vocabulary or the grammar or the pronunciation whatever it is that I try to teach you in order to help you improve your fluency goals because in general [laughter] that is what that is what these lessons are all about. It is about helping you achieve your goals, move to that next step towards fluency and uh yeah so that you feel more comfortable and confident speaking English. I see people answering the question. I haven't even I haven't even read the sentence. I'm kind of rambling.

When she received news of her acceptance such a happy moment she managed to suddenly start crying. This is a phrase. It is I I guess you could say a common collocation because this verb is not one that is often used. So if somebody starts crying well done um well Katarina Tayo uh she burst into tears. Some when somebody burst into tears that just means they they suddenly start crying. In this example it's more of a joyous it is a happy cry. It's not something sad, but if somebody's sad, of course, sure, they can burst into tears. And what I wanted to say is the verb burst. To burst is not the most commonly used verb, but there are some phrases such as this one in which I think it is more common to use and say, well, somebody burst into tears, they suddenly start crying.

I thought this was humorous. And as you if you've watched some of these lessons, you know that I put these little different u memes or whatever in here from time to time, do warning, due to influence of hormones, I could burst into tears or kill you in the next five minutes. There's a wide range uh uh in when it comes to those emotions and those hormones. What do you think B? This is the first B1 vocabulary lesson that I have ever done. Amazing. But it is true. I've done so many vocabulary lessons. In general, I do No, I'm I'm I'm adding emphasis. In general, I typically will do these more advanced vocabulary lessons, C1, C2, or even beyond that and really get specific and precise. So, this is the first B1 vocabulary lesson that I've ever done.

If you enjoy it or you like it, please you can let me know by hitting that like button. And this has this phrase has three words. Once again, it is more of an introductory phrase that you're going to use at the beginning of a statement when you're admitting something is true. We use this all the time. This phrase is just casual conversation. So, I see a lot of answers. The the phrase that I'm talking about is to be honest, as many of you know, to be honest. This is the first B1 vocabulary lesson that I have ever done. So, you will often hear this phrase listening to a podcast, YouTube video, watching a movie, TV show to be honest. another word in there. We need another preposition. I deleted the picture by accident or by mistake. If you wanted to use an adverb, I see some of those you could say, "Yeah, I deleted the picture uh inadvertently. I deleted the picture accidentally. I deleted the picture unintentionally." Those all work. I think those adverbs are a little beyond a B1 level, but they're still very useful and they would work in that context. So, there are different ways that you could express this sentiment, this thought that I didn't mean to do it. I deleted the picture by accident or I deleted the picture by mistake or I deleted the picture accidentally or I deleted it inadvertently. I love that word, inadvertently.

So, if I want to give you a little more context, if you're just curious, like I sometimes am about which one which phrase is more commonly used, it's a little more common to to come across by accident. However, you're still going to hear somebody say by mistake quite often, and you could use either one. Both of them are really interchangeable in this context. By accident, by mistake. I saw him stick out his foot. He tripped me. What? To do something intentionally and not by accident. So, this is the the opposite of of what we just talking about. It's not by accident. Somebody did something. What phrase could we use? What B? Which B1 phrase could we use to say that something was done intentionally? I saw him stick out his foot. He tripped me.

You mean to do this thing. And in that case, you could say that you do it. What? Two words. I I You guys You guys are You guys are rocking this quiz. This is why I think I need to make them a little more challenging, but I thought we'd have some fun and just do some B1 phrases. Kind of mix things up a little bit. So, the phrase that I'm referring to is on purpose. Well done, Lai, Julia, Rachel, Katarina, Manuel, Monica, Tayo, everybody. Everybody rock that one. You're doing something intentionally. It's not by accident. It's on purpose. I saw him stick out his foot. He tripped me on purpose.

Phrase that you should absolutely put up here, be able to use. You're having a conversation. And if you want to say something was not done by accident, just say, "Well, this was done on purpose. It happened on purpose. I did it on purpose. I meant to do this." Take your seat. the show just start to be doing to be going to do something very soon. We're missing a verb, of course, and it's really part of the phrase. And then what? Well, what other word is missing is m start.

Another I mean all of these phrases, but this is another one that I think you should be able to use casually when you're talking to someone and really not have to give this much thought. And this is this is these are the these are the building blocks to achieving English fluency. So if you know these that is awesome. That is perfect. The phrase that I'm talking about, take your seat. The show is just about to start. Just about to do something. Now, you do not have to include the word just. You could say the show is about to start or I am about to ask you another question and you are about to answer that next question and you're going to do it on purpose because you mean to do this. You could include just. It's just the more of a colloquial way of speaking. Just about to do something, but you don't have to. Take your seat. The show is just about to start. Well done.

Here are some news headlines just to give you a little context. I just want to switch things up a little bit so that you this is just easier to kind of grasp on to these phrases. So, I'll just read through these quickly. The world's most luxurious surfing event is just about to kick off. In this context, if something kicks off, it means it begins. It starts. The next one, Ed Sharon reveals he is just about to move to America. I did not know that. And finally, the I'm going to mispronounce this. The Etaqid meteor shower is just about to peak. For any of you who are interested in astronomy out there, you can correct my pronunciation of this meteor shower, but you get the idea. It's just about to peak. So, just about to do something.

The students close to the teacher. I hope this is something that you are doing right now. Even though if you're not, I'll I'll never know. I just trust I trust you though. But the meaning of this phrase to watch, listen to or think about something or someone carefully or with interest. I think in the context of students, teachers, you will hear this phrase being used. Parents, children, people are going to use this phrase. Your boss talking to other or even among your colleagues. And you should do this if somebody's up there, they're giving a presentation and you should listen to this person. Listen carefully as to what this person is saying and therefore you should what the phrase we're talking about is to pay attention to pay attention to someone. I didn't I probably should have put the to because that's what you're going to follow it with. I could just give you a sent uh like a command and say I want you to pay attention or pay attention. But generally you would say pay attention to this person or to this thing. The students paid close attention to the teacher. Now I gave you that close in there because that is a collocation with this phrase. Collocations something that I talk about a lot on this channel. These are words frequently used together. So if we're just talking about the phrase pay attention, there are other words that are often used with it. To pay close attention to, to pay special attention to something, to pay enough attention uh to someone or something, to pay no attention to anyone that's I I hope that's not what you're doing. And or to pay particular attention to this person or this thing. These are just some common collocations. It is another excellent way to build your vocabulary. So instead of me saying I want right now I want you to pay close attention or I was going to say

I want you to pay attention. I can add a little emphasis using the word close. I want you to pay close attention to what I'm about to tell you when it comes to these collocations because that's just going to help you be a little more precise and continue to build your vocabulary so that you can speak naturally when you're having a conversation.

I didn't need my old couch. So, I decided to get it. Get is a part of this phrase. I don't know if you can see it's highlighted. The meaning is to remove or throw away something unwanted. You have something you don't want it. I could say I'm going to throw it away. I don't know if I would say I'm going to remove it. That sounds maybe a little formal, but this is a more casual way of saying that you're going to we'll do this. You're going to remove something. You're going to throw something uh away that is unwanted. You're going to well done. Get rid of it. So, you could get rid of something in which case you are throwing it away. Something you don't need. I didn't need my old couch.

So, I decided to get rid of it. And a lot of times that something may be it because you've already mentioned the thing in the sentence before or and the listener knows that and that's why you might be talking about your couch and then you're going to get rid of it and you would use it often with this phrase to get rid of it. Everyone please and walk to the nearest exit. Once again, there are, I think, a couple of different phrases that you could say uh and use to continue to be quiet, peaceful, not worried, especially in a difficult or frightening situation. Oh, Vicky Gustaf, thank you. Thank you so much. Uh I like I love the the the little coffee because Yeah, that is that's perfect. That is perfect for a morning coffee. Uh well actually I will absolutely use that. I love it. Thank you so much. I this is a phrase that in this context you I think you know you hear it. I don't know if you're going to use it all the time. I I would hope not because it's like really this maybe sense of uh urgency. Maybe something's wrong. But you might, if you're addressing a group of people, everyone please and walk to the nearest exit. You want everybody to be peaceful. You want them to be quiet. You don't want them to worry. You want everyone to Let's look at all the different ways we could say this. To keep calm, stay calm, remain calm. Either one of those verbs you can use with calm. And that really fits this context. Everyone, please remain calm and walk to the nearest exit. So, I mentioned it may not be one that you're going to use often, at least. I mean, I I would hope not because that is a troublesome situation. If you're having to tell everybody, look, everybody remain calm or stay calm. There's something wrong. And in that situation, if there is something wrong, you obviously want everybody to keep calm or remain calm. Again, you can use any of those verbs. The meaning is the same. This is I don't know. I [laughter] don't know why I thought this was humorous. Maybe I thought like a I have a little bit of a darker sense of humor. Of course, the sign should say keep calm and then they're like that blood setters. And down below it says sometimes it's best to panic. So [laughter] I of course I this is not this is not uh any type of advice at all. It's always good to keep calm, stay calm, remain calm. Uh, no need to worry. I have another question for you right here. I could believe when I saw the garden in full bloom.

The meaning of this phrase to be very surprised. This is a way of basically emphasizing that you are really surprised. And really you're talking about surprised by something that you you're you see in in the case of our sentence. We're talking about a garden. It's so beautiful. I was so surprised and I could believe when I saw the garden in full bloom. So the phrase that we're talking about, I could not believe my eyes or believe your eyes or believe one's eyes. I could not believe my eyes when I saw the garden in full bloom. To not believe your eyes just means to be very surprised. So you might use it with could like I could not believe my eyes when what did you see? I could not believe my eyes when I saw this famous celebrity or I could not believe my eyes when I watched my favorite team win the championship.

You don't have to use that could not that construction. You might tell somebody like I'm telling you, you will not believe your eyes when you see my next video lesson. All right? You're going to be so surprised. You will not believe your eyes. So, just keep in mind we're just using this phrase to mix it up a little bit. Of course, it's very common to say, "Oh, you're going to be so surprised. You won't believe it." Uh, but we're going to add a little emphasis and say, "Not believe your eyes in this case." So, I just went over, we just talked about 15 B1 phrases. If you knew them, if you knew got most of them correct, let me know. Hit that like button. If you learned something new, once again, hit that like button. Just hit the like button just for the heck of it or smash the like button. Doesn't really matter. It just tells me that you enjoy these vocabulary lessons. I should continue doing them because I do think this is essential building your vocabulary for achieving a level of proficiency so that you can communicate clearly, effectively with other people's. Uh these are phrases that I mentioned already are kind of the building blocks. So you absolutely need to know these phrases. And yes, remember click on that link down below if you would like to join my speaking course. And uh yeah, that's all I have for you. I want to thank you for joining me today. Thank you for participating in the lesson. I love it. And I will see you all soon for another lesson. and so long.

Stop Translating in Your Head | Start Thinking in English

when you're learning English I think it's natural to translate from your native language to English but this is something that that you should really try to avoid As you move from a beginner to intermediate to an advanced learner and really it just comes down to developing positive learning habits so I want to talk to you about five things that I want you to start doing today so that you can stop translating and start thinking in English the first thing that I want you to do is to create an English bubble after that I want you to keep your learning routines in English and then we're going to change the way that you learn new vocabulary we're also going to start automating some of your responses and then we're going to turn thinking into Active Learning and I I know what you may be thinking right now I should subscribe to this channel turn on notifications and then that way I can become your new English teacher my name is Wes the Channel interactive English that that's what it's all about it's all about helping you improve your English skills so the first thing that I want you to do and I want you to do this today and really we start doing it is to create an English bubble and what I'm talking about is just surrounding yourself with the English language and getting as much exposure as you possibly can so take a moment right now and think about well how much exposure do you normally get to the English language each day and what whatever you come up with I want you to try to double that and make that bubble even stronger because when you do this it's like you're building the foundation you're creating an atmosphere that's going to allow you to translate less and start thinking more so this is why many people think well I I need to go live in an English-speaking country and that's going to help me learn the language faster and it's going to be easier as well because they think well I'm going to be surrounded by the language thankfully today it's not necessary because of Technology because of computers we can surround ourself with any language no matter where we are in the world and I think it's especially easy with English so in in general what am I talking about I'm talking about getting more daily practice with the primary language skills more reading speaking listening writing to be specific what are some things that you can do that maybe maybe you're not doing them right now when you wake up in the morning instead of waking up to an annoying alarm sound wake up listening to music in English before you go to bed at night if you're like me I tend to look at my phone and I may read an article online you can read an article in English you're watching YouTube videos if you turn on those subtitles turn them on in English if you're taking a class online the whole lesson should be in English and again you do not have to go to an English-speaking country for this to happen you can do this no matter where you are in the world before we continue I'd like to take a moment to thank the sponsor of today's lesson which is lingoda and this really ties in to what I'm talking about with that English bubble and getting that daily practice because lingoda is getting ready to start another language Sprint so the language Sprint is a great opportunity for you to really challenge yourself and practice each day for 3 months and and really move the needle when it comes to achieving your fluency goals and the the one thing that I really love about the language print is that if you attend all your classes you can get up to 100% cash back and there have been many people who have achieved this success and really taken their English to the next level and I think you can be one of those people as well now when it comes to the language Sprint you have two choices you can take the Super Sprint in which you'll take 30 classes a month for three months if you success F complete that then you can get 100% cash back or you can take the Sprint in which you'll take 15 classes a month for 3 months if you successfully complete that you can get 50% cash back both plans require a 49 deposit and then you will pay for the classes in thre monthly installments now you must sign up for the language print by October 15th because it's going to begin on October 31st I can honestly tell you lingoda is a great place for learning a language I have even studied with them you can see me there taking a lesson in Spanish and I had a great experience because well these are small group classes they have professional teachers they have flexible learning hours and an interactive curriculum so if you are motivated and you're ready to surround yourself with English as well as become the next language Sprint Champion then click on the link in the description and when you sign up you can use the voucher code champ 7 to get a 20 discount so click on that link down in the description if you would like to join the language Sprint or learn more about it always be sure to read those terms and conditions don't forget to use that voucher code champ 7 to get your 20 discount and then and then really just surround yourself with English which is going to help you reach your fluency goals now let's get back to the lesson to help you stop translating and start thinking in English and I want to talk to you about a few more things that I want you to do today and the next thing that I want you to do is to keep your learning routines in English I understand if you're a beginner that it's normal to learn English using your native language it it maybe builds a little more confidence it helps you more easily comprehend what you're learning but as you become intermediate Advanced and you try to work your way toward fluency your learning should be entirely in English because well well when you're learning it's it's natural for your brain to switch back and forth between English and your native language the goal is for this to happen less often and when you keep your learning routines in English that's the result so once again it comes back to developing those positive learning habits if you're learning grammar rules then you should learn those rules in English if you are taking an online class the entire lesson should be in English and then there's one thing that I definitely want you to do starting today from now on when you look up a new word or phrase new vocabulary I want you to use an English dictionary there are many online dictionaries that when you look up the meaning it uses simple easy words they make it very easy for you to understand I like to use Cambridge you could also uh read example sentences so that you can better understand the context in which these words are used you can also see if there are other words in the word family how is the word used as an adjective as a noun so that's something that I definitely want you to do if you're not doing it already when you learn new vocabulary Look up the meaning using an English dictionary now speaking of vocabulary that that is an excellent segue into the next thing that I want you to do which is we are going to change the way you are learning new
